

REDUCE VALUATION OF VILLAGE OVER MILLION DOLLARS TAX RATE IS LOWEST IN 10 YEARS

Budget For Present Year Over $22,000 Under Year Ago—How Reduction Has Been Made

Announcement has been made by Village President Robert Mimmack and the commission of a valuation reduction in Plymouth amounting to $1,100,000 important that of last year. With this important news comes also the statement from village officials that the village tax rate for the present year will be only $12.50 as compared to $13.20 per thousand valuation for the preceding year.

The valuation for 1931 is $4,100,000 as compared to $7,208,000 for 1930. President Mimmack states that the valuation reduction was made first by the general equalization of property in Plymouth, then a flat out of 15 per cent on all property within the village. In the equalization, he states, there were some few raises but quite a number of reductions.

The tax rate for 1929 was $15 per thousand, and the rate of $12.50 per thousand for the present year is the lowest the taxpayers of the village have enjoyed since 1922.

President Mimmack in connection with the announcement of the reduction in the valuation of Plymouth property as well as the reduced tax rate, also states that a substantial cut has been made in the village budget for the year. In 1929 the budget was $108,765.52. Last year it was $97,308.11. The budget for this year has been fixed at $75,000, a reduction of village expense for a year of over $23,000.

This slash has been made by the elimination of several village employees and the reduction in salaries of others. The former village manager was paid $3600 a year. The present manager is paid $3,000 a year. The total reduction made in the village payroll amounts to $9,131 a year. The work of some employees has been doubled up as well.

"For there will be no curtailment of any public service. We are giving the community 24-hour police protection. Formerly it was for 18 hours out of the day. An effort will be made to keep up all public work and carry on such improvements as might be needed. We are purchasing new pumps for the water system and we have installed a police signal system that we believe will be of benefit to the town. New uniforms have been purchased for our police officers. Park seats have all been painted. Graveled streets will be treated to calcium as usual, and unless we meet with some unexpected emergency we will live within the budget that has been fixed for the year," stated the village president.

Plymouth enjoys one of the lowest tax rates of any community within the metropolitan district of Detroit. In fact its tax rate is considerably lower than that of many out-state communities of a similar size.

START WORK ON BRIDGE IN NEW PARK PROJECT

Construction has been started during the present week on another one of the beautiful concrete bridges that will cross the Rouge river in the parkway system being built almost entirely around Plymouth on the east and north sides of the city. The new bridge will be located just west of the present Plymouth-Northville road about 1,000 feet to the west and northwest of the junction of Mill and Starkweather streets.

Paved Road To Be Built As Far As Phoenix During Present Year

It is the plan of the Wayne county park commission to pave the new parkway from the Northville road just north of the village limits to a point near the Ford dam at Phoenix park during the present summer. During the time that the bridge started this week, will be under construction, grading and paving will be busy putting this portion of the road in shape for paving.

CHILDREN'S FUND TO PROVIDE DENTIST FOR PLYMOUTH VICINITY

Dr. E. J. Murphy sent here to cooperate with local health workers.

Dr. K. K. Gibson, director of the dental division of the Children's Fund of Michigan, has stationed Dr. E. J. Murphy at Plymouth for the summer months. The dental clinic is located at the Starkweather school in this city.

This organization was established by Senator James Cavanaugh to promote the health and welfare of children. It is the earnest desire of the director that every child shall achieve 100 per cent in dental health. However, the dentist is not allowed to place fillings or do any work except the cleaning of teeth for children whose parents are financially able to have the work done by their family dentist. No work of any kind is done for adults.

A committee composed of citizens of this city will determine what fillings are entitled to send their children to the clinic for free dental work. No appointments will be made by Dr. Murphy at the clinic as he is not in a position to determine whether a family is or is not able to have the work done by the family dentist.

The community nurse, Mrs. Strasen, is in charge of this work and no appointments will be made without her sanction and that of the committee.

Children will be notified when the fillings are to present themselves at the clinic. The patient will receive a certain amount of time at each visit, and in no case will a patient be completed in one visit, where operative procedures, such as fillings or extractions are involved. Failure to keep an appointment unless notification is sent beforehand will mean that no work will be done at any time. Co-operation is necessary to insure success in this work and the director is certain that every parent realizes such an opportunity does not present itself of itself.

Parents or adults who may accompany children to the clinic are not allowed in the children's operating room. No exceptions are made in any case. The presence of any person besides the dentist and nurse is distracting to all concerned, and of no help at all to the little patient who may be inclined to nervousness. You are assured that Dr. Murphy will treat each and every child with courtesy and gentleness, and that he will make allowances for the nervous type of patient. As a matter of fact, not one patient out of one hundred is nervous when once the work has begun.

From time to time, short articles concerning dental health will appear in this newspaper. If you have any question concerning your children's teeth send them to Dr. E. J. Murphy, Starkweather School, Plymouth. They will be answered in this column in the order received. Your initials only will be used in replying to questions.

Dr. Gibson wishes to express his thanks to George Smith, Mrs. Strasen, Doctors Olsaver, Thoms, Hoyer and Champe and others who have shown a wonderful spirit of cooperation in this work.

Those from out of town who attended the funeral of Mrs. Charles Ebert, were: Mr. and Mrs. John Grassia and William Jones of Monroe; Mrs. Catherine Clauer, Mrs. George Clauer, Mrs. Elizabeth Grassia, Mrs. Belle Clauer and Mrs. Dan Clauer of Springfield, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ashing of Detroit.

Plymouth Girl Becomes Bride

Among the June brides of 1931 is Miss Sarah Jane White whose marriage last Friday to Kenneth Gyde, was one of the prettiest affairs of the season. The wedding, which took place at Northville was solemnized by Rev. Wm. Richards, pastor of the Northville M. E. Church.

Mrs. Sam Freshney attended her sister as bridesmaid, while Sam Freshney attended as best man. The bride was crowned in a stunning frock of pink tulle, while the bridesmaid wore a gown of green.

The bride and groom will make their home at 614 Deer St.

PLYMOUTH MAIL TRADING DOLLAR STARTS TOUR OF LOCAL STORES TOMORROW

How much will a dollar buy in Plymouth? The Plymouth Mail has decided to find out, and tomorrow morning it is going to put into circulation in Plymouth, a brand new dollar bill direct from the government printing offices in Washington.

This new dollar bill will be attached to a sheet of paper.

When you get it, if the dollar should happen to come your way, sign your name to the sheet of paper, write after it what you bought with it and where you bought it.

Spend it right here in Plymouth, for something you need. Keep it moving, the faster the better.

If that one dollar bill should be spent a dozen times in one day, that would be good news.

The Plymouth Chamber of Commerce, the Plymouth Mail and local business men believe that there is no better place in the state to trade than here in town.

Let's see just how much one dollar will buy during the course of a week or so. If no one delays the test by holding the dollar out of circulation, it will be interesting to know just how fast it travels and how much it will buy.

Spend it for groceries, for clothing, jewelry, shoes, flowers, drugs, furniture, go to the show on it—do whatever you like with it, but keep it moving.

Local business men are requested to put the dollar back into circulation just the minute it comes into their possession.

With for it—it will go into circulation Saturday morning. Keep it moving and be sure and spend it for something you need immediately.

This special dollar is going to be called the "Plymouth Mail Trading Dollar." It will be attached to a sheet of paper folded in such a way that it can be carried until you exchange it for something you need at a Plymouth store or business house.

Do not use it outside of Plymouth. Keep it moving right here. Next week the Mail will publish a list of those who have had the dollar, where they spent it and what the dollar purchased.

One last word—KEEP the Plymouth Mail Trading Dollar moving, and when you spend it, be sure and write your name on the list, the place you spent it and what it was spent for.

HIGH SCHOOL 1931 CLASS IS THE LARGEST

Seventy-five Students Will Receive Diplomas Next Thursday

Plymouth's high school this year graduates the largest class in its history. 75 students having successfully completed the course of the school.

Supr. George Smith and faculty members have completed all arrangements for the various events in connection with the graduation exercises.

The baccalaureate service will take place Monday evening at the high school auditorium. Rev. Richard Neale delivering the sermon.

The class night program takes place at 8:00 o'clock Tuesday evening at the same place, and the commencement program will be on Thursday, June 18, at the high school.

The names of the successful students, the programs for all of the various commencement events and other information pertaining to the closing of this successful school year will be found on other pages of this issue of the Mail.

It will be interesting to Plymouth Mail readers to know that in two nearby communities that are nearest the size of Plymouth, Howell and Birmingham, there are fewer graduates than from the local schools. Birmingham, with a population almost double that of Plymouth, has a graduating class of 71, and Howell, of 69. There are 78 in the Northville class, which is larger than the one of last year.

Dies While Being Taken to Doctor

Matthew J. Snyder, about 50 years of age, died Tuesday, just as he was being carried into the office of Dr. H. B. Brisbois on North Main street. Snyder, whose home was at 3565 Harding avenue in Detroit, was stricken with a heart attack when he stopped at the Lively garage at Phoenix. He complained of having seriously ill, and was placed in the car and rushed to Dr. Brisbois' office by Barney Alverson, but was dead before medical aid could be given.

The body was removed to the Scherer funeral home, and later in the day his daughter, Mrs. George Champlin, 334 Grande Pointe Blvd., had the remains brought to Detroit for burial. The funeral takes place today, from the Snyder home in Detroit.

Ford Owners to Test Mileage

The Plymouth Motor Sales is inviting all model-A Ford owners to test the mileage of their cars. Prizes will be given three drivers showing the greatest mileage on a quart of gasoline which will be provided at the Plymouth Motor Sales garage anytime today (Friday), according to an announcement made in their ad in this week's issue of the Mail. Look over the ad so that you may be fully advised as to all of the arrangements. The test is in keeping with a nationwide plan arranged by Ford dealers for the benefit of interested Ford owners. Although the ad says the closing hour is at 6:00 p. m., Mr. Wiedman states that anyone who is at the garage will be eligible for the test.

Body Sent to Old Home for Burial

Robert Q. King, who resided at Rosedale Gardens, died Friday, June 5th, 1931, at the Osteopathic Hospital in Highland Park, Michigan, at the age of 44 years. He was the husband of Esther. The body was taken to the Schrader Brothers funeral home, and later shipped to Matland, Mo., his old home, for interment.

TELLS OF WAYS TO BEAUTIFY A COMMUNITY

Zoning Committee Provides Information of Local Interest

This week's statement from the City's Planning and Zoning Committee follows:

"In going over information on this subject which we are gathering together from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the United States Department of Commerce, and other sources, we ran across a pamphlet containing a speech made by John Hilder, former Manager of the Civic Development Department of the United States Chamber. The subject of this speech or article is 'A Standard of Community Excellence or The Kind of a Town We Would Like To Live In,' and Mr. Hilder, starting on the premise that the existence of a town of a city depends upon business, proceeds to outline a standard of community excellence by grading an ideal community on a basis of sixteen items. Some of his comments would have a more direct bearing on a larger community. Others might be considered as having little bearing because Plymouth can already claim a high rating under some of the items covered.

"The speech or article in its entirety, however, is so broad and comprehensive and has so much food for thought that we felt that it was too interesting to pass virtually unnoticed in our chamber of commerce files, and it fits into our study of the value of planning and zoning because Mr. Hilder stresses these two steps in community advancement in his general outline.

"The title assigned me seems to call for a kind of score card or a system of marking like that inflicted upon school children as a rough and ready means of deciding whether they have absorbed enough to justify promotion. Being half convinced of the superior value of mental testing, I am not an ardent advocate of the old system of marks. The excellence of a town depends so much upon the ability and the spirit of its people that those may quite upset any comparative rating based on actual, tangible accomplishments. Though of course, achieving and the right spirit the people of any given community are bound to secure a lot of accomplishments.

"The trouble is that we have to mark them on what they have done to date and can not take into account, what may be the fact, that they have been overcoming some great natural handicap which absorbed most of their energy without showing much positive result, or what result may be a fact, that they have only recently learned how to work together effectively. In other cases the marks given their town are likely to be low, and yet, because of the spirit they have developed, the things they are now doing, the accomplishments they are sure to have to their credit in the near future, they may have a town that we would find very inspiring to live in.

"It is where nature is achieving and where they have achieved and are now sitting back admiring the past, that we would want to live.

"On the other hand, there is no limit to achievement except the limit imposed by our personal limitations. So where we find a community that has done a lot and is still going ahead with the same vision and enthusiasm and energy to fresh achievement, there we probably shall find the people with whom life would be best worth living.

"So, having carefully explained how unobscisive my proposition is I shall put it before you as a mark to shoot at, and if some of you don't disagree with me I shall be disappointed. But having invited an argument I am going to ask you, for the sake of the argument, to start off at the same place I do. Most arguments get nowhere because the arguers begin in the middle and having no common starting point reach an end. The common starting point I ask you to accept is this: That the existence of a town or a city depends upon business.

"Now I at once admit that there are exceptions to this rule as there are to all rules. There is a group of California realtors at present touring the country. In each city they visit they ask seventeen questions. Question number 12 is 'Is there a career for your children?' and the answer to this question is whether Natural Beauty, Climate, Health, Recreation, Agriculture, Mining, Forest, Wealth, Fisheries, Commerce, Manufacture. Notice how they start off 'Natural Beauty, Climate, Health' and how they end 'Commerce, Manufacture.' It is just possible that unless they visit Asheville or Miami they will report to the home folks that all eastern towns have an appreciation of natural beauty or climate or health, that they are content to bring up the tail of the procession by depending upon such sort of things as commerce and industry.

"Admitting that some favored localities have built towns for people to get well in or for people to play in—I shall not raise the question whether running a saw mill or a paper mill and a resort hotel is or is not business—it still remains true that nearly all of our towns and cities exist because of business. Consequently if they are to continue to exist, and even more if they are to grow and prosper, the first test of community excellence is, what kind of a place is it for business? And the answer to that question goes a long way toward answering the other question, Is it the kind of a town we—son and I—would like to live in? For I assume that you as well as I have to earn the living that we are going to live. I shall go into this a little more in detail later.

Re-Elect Buzzard To School Board; Hamill Takes Pierce's Place

The school election in School District Number 1 fractional, between the hours of 8:00 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Monday, brought out a larger vote than usual.

The results of the election were:

Mr. Hamill takes the place of Frank Pierce, who did not seek another term on the board.

REV. WALTER NICHOL BACK FROM GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF CHURCH

Rev. Walter Nichol, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Plymouth, who has been in attendance at the Presbyterian General Assembly in Pittsburgh, Pa., reports that some of its important business was as follows:

Spiritual emphasis was the supreme issue of the Assembly, and the great annual congress representing 2,000,000 communicant members sounded as the keynote for the coming year the spiritual quickening of the entire church. The dominating spirit of the business of the Assembly was toward a great renewal of faith and a great revival of Christian work throughout the United States and in the countries where Presbyterian missions are conducted.

Many Present at Record Banquet

Nearly 200 were present Monday night at the banquet given in Northville by Richard T. Baldwin, in honor of the opening of the new Neal building, a structure erected on the site of the old Record building that was destroyed by fire last winter. The Neal building will be occupied by the Record office, and a formal opening of the new plant takes place Saturday.

Mr. Baldwin has purchased all new equipment for the plant. The Record, which has been published in the Plymouth Mail office since the fire in Northville last December, is now being printed in the new plant.

At the banquet Monday night held in the Methodist church house, Mr. Baldwin had as guests a number of newspaper men from about the state. Among the speakers were George Akerill, president of the Michigan Press Association and publisher of the Birmingham Eclectic; Joseph Sturgeon, secretary-manager of the Michigan Press Association; Tom I. Starr of the publicity department of the Michigan Bell Telephone company of Detroit; Harry German, village president of Northville; Malcolm Binney of the Detroit Free Press staff; Mrs. Bertha Neal, owner of the new building; and Elton R. ## THE STATE JESTER

Years and years ago the kings of ancient lands maintained jesters. These clowns were supposed to make the crowned heads laugh. And if the crowned heads saw anything funny in what the jesters were doing, then all the subjects of the kings were supposed to be gleeful.

Up until recently we thought the kingly jesters were a thing of the past. But not so. Michigan has one.

He is the legislator who proposes to give the great state of Michigan absolute control over the finances of the various municipalities. Plymouth couldn't do anything it wanted to in the line of development without first going over to Lansing and getting consent if the proposed measure should be enacted into law.

The bill has been advocated upon the grounds that the state is a better administrator of public funds than the various municipalities of the state.

That's the place where the state jester enters.

Of all the absurd statements ever made, that's it. Rarely once in a life time has the state of Michigan ever produced an administration that handled state funds as they should be. In other words, Michigan's state government has made an absolute failure in the handling of its own finances. Deficits of millions are passed from one administration to another. Jobs and business are handed-out in the payment of political support. Favored institutions are given big appropriations. Needy ones are neglected. The work of one administration is belittled and torn down by another. New forms of state taxation are constantly being enacted with no reductions ever made. And now this big financial blunderer with the conceit of all state jesters would take unto itself the handling of the finances of the various cities and villages of the state.

Such a proposal could only be made by a zany. Not until the state government over a long period of years has demonstrated its ability to rightly handle its own affairs should such a plan be even considered.

THE LONGEST DAY

The longest day in the year is June 21st. Coming, as it does, when all nature is in its richest fullness, it marks the division between the first and the last half of the year; between the sowing and the reaping time. The early plantings of the farmer will have begun to ripen and the first crops will have been gathered, and before many more weeks have passed the latest will have been harvested; the summer will have run its course and autumn will follow.

Like the year, the life of every man has its turning point—what we may call its longest day—when he may look forward to the harvest of his early sowings, and see the plans of his younger years bearing consummation. It marks the time when the efforts of many years' labor may be expected to begin to bear fruit, and when long-cherished hopes may be realized.

With a greater optimism prevailing, with bountiful rains, with the future looking brighter and brighter each day, the longest day of the year, like the first day of the year, should be a time to renew our efforts and revive our hopes so that when the year is ended we can look back upon the past and rejoice over the good we have done and the gain we have made.

IT'S TEAM WORK THAT COUNTS

(A Worthwhile Editorial Selected by the National Editorial Association)

That one Saturday afternoon all sports loving Kansas rose up and cheered when Jim Bausch, of the K. U. football team, grabbed the kick-off on the field at Manhattan and ran with it 95 yards for a touchdown. It was magnificent. Perhaps nothing like it was ever seen in Kansas before.

But have you stopped to think that it wasn't Jim Bausch that did it? It was TEAM WORK! Probably any other man on the Kansas team could have made the same run under the same conditions. Jim Bausch caught the ball all right, and tucked it under his arm and ran all right. But it was the TEAM that made the touchdown. There were eleven men in that marvelous play, one of them running and the other ten seeing that he had a chance to run. Bausch was the shaft, the other ten were the head of the arrow. And so he ran, ("not an unfriendly hand touched him," said an account) because his team mates made an impenetrable wall around him. They wanted him to make that touchdown as much as he wanted to make it. In the eleven bodies there was one mind. That was what won.

And it is that spirit that will win victories for any community. In every community there are men who have vision and capability and the will to do great things for the neighborhood or the town in which they live. The thing for the people in any such community to do is to run "interference" for these men, to clear the field and give them a fair chance. Team work counts in business as in football, in cities and in country neighborhoods as in college.—Charles F. Scott, Editor Register, Iola, Kansas.

WHAT A STATE

The Michigan Bell is a monthly publication issued by the Michigan Bell Telephone company for its employees. Colen W. Hungerford is its editor. The publication is by far one of the best so-called "house organs" published in the country. In its June issue is an editorial of more than usual merit. It follows: "Michigan is a great state! Great in extent and in scenic beauty. Great in its natural resources and its industries. Great in its history, its traditions, and the character and spirit of its citizens.

"Consider its mines and forests; its fertile fields and its productive orchards and vineyards; think of its beautiful lakes and streams; its diversified industries and its splendid educational institutions.

"Michigan is a good place in which to live! Here Nature is kind. We are not visited with flood, drought or other disasters to any degree. Nowhere else can people work more profitably nor under better conditions than in Michigan.

"And no state has more to offer to the tourist, whether from outside or within the state, than has Michigan. Our Company, through the advertising columns of the Michigan press, has steadily called attention to the advantages of Michigan as a vacation land.

"We hold that it is in the interest of every concern and every individual in Michigan, first, to contemplate and appreciate the privileges and advantages of working and playing in Michigan and, second, to call the attention of others, both in and out of the state, to those facts, continuously and by every proper means that will contribute to the pleasure and profit of every individual, every business and every community.

"Michigan is a great state to live in and a great state to visit!"

LONELINESS INSURANCE

We can buy insurance policies to protect ourselves against loss by fire, theft, tornado and other causes of human distress, but money will not buy an escape from that most poignant of all miseries, a lonely old age. Friendship is the one and only insurance in the world against the tragedy of loneliness.

Loneliness is terrible. If you want to see how terrible loneliness can be, walk down a forgotten city street and look into the swimming eyes of the gray old men as they go from door to door seeking employment. Visit a dowdy park at twilight or any of the rendezvous of desolate men whose feet have slipped. If you think they aren't lonely, win their confidence with a good cigar and talk to them of "home."

Wise old Sam Johnson was never wiser than when he told Boswell:

"If a man does not make new acquaintances as he passes through life he will soon find himself alone. A man should keep his friendships in constant repair."

Napoleon did not follow Johnson's advice. The secret of his life is not in his utterances on great occasions nor in his studied letters. It is found in a chance remark, made when for a moment his cloak of glamor slipped from him.

"After all," he said, "I care only for people who are useful to me, and so long as they are useful." And again, "I have made courtiers, I have never pretended to make friends."

If Napoleon had so cared, he might have made many friends and had he kept his friendships in repair he would not have died in a crazy old shanty, alone.

One does not purchase devotion except with the stuff of fellowship—that extra word of appreciation, a visit to the hospital, the assurance of loyalty when the horizon is overcast.

It pays to keep friendships in repair. And the only way ever discovered to have a friend is to be one.

Rambling Around with Michigan Editors

State Salaries Paid

For its misdeeds and its mistakes, modern society pays great sums of money. These expenditures, after all, largely represent society's evaluation of the worth of lives less fortunate than the ones able to provide for themselves. As an instance, consider a small fraction of the money that Michigan pays to some of its department heads in the various institutions it operates: president Ypsilanti normal, $9,000; president Mt. Pleasant normal, $8,000; president Kalamazoo normal, $9,000; president Marquette normal, $8,000; president Michigan Mining college (Houghton) $12,000; president school for deaf, $4,500; president school for blind, $4,500; warden Jackson prison, $7,500; warden Ionia, $5,000; warden Marquette, $5,000; medical superintendent (new hospital) T. B. Ypsilanti, $6,000; same head Kalamazoo, insane asylum, $6,000; same head, Pontiac asylum, same figure; same head, Traverse City asylum, same figure, and same head and assistant for Newberry asylum, $6,000; same head, Ionia criminal insane hospital, $6,000; Epileptic farm head at Wahkiakoka, $6,000; Michigan Home and Training school, $6,000; state Psychopathic hospital, $4,000; boys' vocational school superintendent, $5,000; girls' training school superintendent, $4,000; state public school head, $4,500; Michigan Employment Institution for Blind, $3,500; Michigan Soldiers' Home commandant, $4,000; Michigan state sanatorium, $5,000; commissioner pardons and paroles, $5,000; administrative

Mr. Parre's Plight

This week a federal court acquitted Jerry Parre on a charge of selling denatured alcohol, after nine minutes' deliberation. Mr. Parre is the operator of his own gasoline station and the selling of denatured alcohol is part of his stock in trade. Yet, without an apparent investigation, Mr. Parre was dragged into the toils of the law and subjected to indignities befitting a criminal, and as a result his business and social standing was irreparably damaged. The same federal officers who arrested Mr. Parre must have passed several notorious bootleg joints that hulked no pretence of hiding their nefarious business on their way to get to Mr. Parre's gasoline station to place him under arrest.

Asile from the gross mis-carriage of justice so far as Mr. Parre was concerned, what general impressions are the people of Wayne to get from such idiotic actions on the part of these agents whose duty it is to enforce prohibition, and not to interfere with a legitimate business enterprise. The casual observer finds himself in a dense and impenetrable fog, which is also exactly and precisely where the people of the village, even those most familiar with prohibition enforcement are themselves located.

We fail to see how these agents can separate themselves so completely from the system which they so thoroughly denounce. If there is blame for general incapacity—and who will deny that there isn't—why are these agents exempt? They are connected with federal government and certainly they are a part of it. They live on taxation funds and they are in the system up to their necks. They can't try to stabilize the government in its fight against prohibition violators. They don't try to stabilize anything—not even themselves—and they would be the last to submit to the same automatic control which they themselves practice.—Mrs. Lois Hisey in The Wayne Dispatch.

For the loss of two teeth broken while eating baked beans in a lunch room, Harold E. Anderson of Springfield, Mass., was awarded $114 damages in his suit against the establishment.

Mrs. James Mason of Adrian, N. D., stabbed a tramp in the arm when he tried to steal a pie she had baked for her husband.

A "flaming" courtship came to a close recently at Iowa City, Ia., when Margaret Smoke was married to David Ash.

BUSINESS IS SHOWING SLIGHT UPWARD TREND THROUGHOUT MICHIGAN

NATIONAL CONDITION NOT SO GOOD AS DURING MONTH OF APRIL

As a rule, there is little change in May industrial operations in Michigan as contrasted with April, but, on the basis of data available, May, 1931, industrial output in this state may be expected to show a gain well in excess of the normal seasonal increase, according to Dr. Ralph E. Badger, executive vice-president, and Carl F. Behrens, economist, of the Union Guardian Trust Company, Detroit, a unit of the Guardian Detroit Union Group, Inc. Automobile output is currently estimated at 370,000 units for May which compares with 348,000 in April, a gain of more than 6 per cent. Replies to the May 15 questionnaire received from business leaders throughout the State indicate that other manufacturers may have experienced gains in business somewhat similar to those of the automobile group, a fact which might naturally be expected, however, since so many of their supply parts and accessories are to the motor manufacturers.

The fact that business in Michigan has held up and is holding up so well is of even greater significance in view of recent developments in the national business situation. In the first place, although nearly all monthly indexes of business activity in the country as a whole showed substantial gains during each of the first four months of 1931, the current weekly indexes have shown substantial decreases in activity from April levels. The Analyst weekly index of business activity, for example, dropped from its high level of 80.2 per cent of normal in the week ended April 4 to 77.4 for the week ended May 16. Secondly, building activity, which many people had hoped might point the way to sustained business recovery, dropped off substantially in April and has continued this decline during the first half of May. A third factor which has added to the gloom of the business outlook from a national point of view has been the continued decline in both commodity and security prices. The Standard Statistics Company's average of 50 industrial stocks has declined more than 11 per cent from the already low levels of a month ago. Rail equities have been even weaker than the industrials, the rail averages having declined by more than 13 per cent in the monthly period ended May 26.

In the light of these developments, it is difficult to account for the strength evidenced in the automobile industry. An answer which has been advanced is that part of the billion dollars which has been loaned to war veterans has found its way into the automobile market. With such an artificial stimulus discontinued, the outlook for this industry would appear to be somewhat clouded. Another suggestion which has been made is that, all other statements to the contrary, stocks of new cars have been built up, and in terms of present sales, are equal to two months' potential demand. This same source indicates that dealer stocks of used cars still are substantially what they were on January 1, namely 500,000 units valued at nearly a quarter of a billion dollars. A third explanation of the ability of the automobile industry to continue at the present juncture to make greater than seasonal gains in output is found in the possible change in the seasonal character of the industry because of the early introduction of models. The plan adopted by a number of manufacturers of introducing new models earlier in the year may cause the seasonal drop to be delayed, but on the other hand, may result in greater dullness during the summer months than was usual under the old plan of introducing new models at the New York Auto Show early in January. There probably is a measure of truth in each of these ideas. A continued gain in automobile output, even after allowance is made for seasonal tendencies, however, is not to be expected.

The reduction of the rediscount rate at the New York Federal Reserve Bank on May 8 to 1 1/2 per cent, the lowest rate in the history of central banking in this country, is a determined effort on the part of the Reserve System to force money into productive use. Short term money rates are now so low that institutions with substantial holdings of cash must push money out even at some risk.

strengthening of second grade bonds may be one result, and most certainly the funding and refunding operations of the Treasury will be facilitated. Easy money rates may even find reflection in an improvement of the foreign situation, although the monetary phase of European affairs is probably only a superficial aspect of their difficulties.

Industrial activity in the southeastern section of Michigan, including such cities as Saginaw, Lansing, Jackson and Detroit, continues to give greater evidence of recovery than do the other sections of the State. Employment in the middle of May is reported to be increasing in eight out of thirteen cities in this area from which replies to the trust company's questionnaire have been received, and in only two cities, Lansing and Alma, is employment decreasing. As to the trend of manufacturing during the next month, it is of interest to note that only one report (that from Lansing) out of twelve on this phase of business indicates a possible recession during the last half of May and the first two weeks of June. The building situation in the southeastern area is still very unsatisfactory, and unfortunately, no hope is held out for an early improvement in this field of activity. Agricultural conditions in this part of Michigan are reported good in a large proportion of the returns. On the basis of the condition report of the State Department of Agriculture, the leading crops, winter wheat, rye, hay and pasture, are better in this area than in any other part of the State. A slight increase in retail trade is evident but collections still remain only fair.

Second only to the industrial southeastern section of Michigan in respect to the outlook for manufacturing activity during the next month is the area including such cities as Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, South Haven, Grand Rapids, and Muskegon. A third of the reports received from the southwestern district indicate improvement ahead in the next four weeks. While none of the reports suggest the possibility of a falling off of manufacturing activity, little change in the employment situation is expected. A slight improvement in the building situation is expected at Holland, Ionia and South Haven. Crop prospects are exceptionally good and a substantial increase in retail trade is expected soon. Collections remain poor to fair in nearly all cities.

The tourist season will soon add to the income of residents of Northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula. Such cities as Cheboygan, Grayling, Traverse City, Marquette, and Menominee, each of them located in delightful summer resort areas, are among the cities which expect increases in retail trade in the near future. Crop conditions in Northern Michigan are good. In the Upper Peninsula they are only fair, due to relatively severe frosts which have occurred recently. The drop of copper prices to levels obviously below production costs of the Upper Peninsula mines casts a shadow over business prospects in the Keweenaw peninsula area.

Our Flag Is 154 Years Old This Year-June 14 Is Banner's Birthday

June 14, Flag Day, will this year direct the thoughts of every good American to the future as well as to the past. The patriotic citizens will be reminded that June 14, 1931, marks the 154th anniversary of the day when the Continental Congress passed the resolution officially establishing, as the emblem of the United States, a flag of thirteen stripes alternate red and white, and that the union be 13 stars white in a blue field representing a new constellation.

But every patriot will also look forward to next year, when Flag Day will take on a still deeper meaning as one of the key days in ten months' nationwide celebration of the Birth of George Washington. According to the plans of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission, every American, in every state and city of the country, will then be encouraged to honor the flag with appropriate ceremonies and with a new devotion, linked as it is with the life and labors of George Washington.

Historians may regard as unsurpassed by fact the story of Betsy Ross stitching the first American Flag, but no one disputes the fact that the legend has become part and parcel of American folklore. In any case it is known that Washington had an intense personal interest in the creation of a national flag, and may have had a part in its design. And no one disputes the fact that he accomplished more than any other American in giving that flag a meaning and in unfurling it over a strong and united nation. In 1932 it will be the country's privilege to render new honors to George Washington's memory, and new loyalty to this immortal symbol of his greatness.

Meanwhile, this year, it is well to recall some of the great dates in the flag's history. Its first display by the Continental Army was on August 3, 1777, at Fort Mifflin, the present city of Rome, N. Y., during an attack on the British. It was first carried into battle by George Washington's troops at Brandywine on September 11, 1777. It was first saluted by the British at the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga on October 17, 1777.

For the Navy, John Paul Jones took the first salute to the Stars and Stripes on February 14, 1778, when he sailed his ship "Ranger" into the harbor of Quiberon, France. In the same ship he forced the first striking of colors to our flag by the British ship "Drake" on April 24, 1778. The ship "Boston" of Massachusetts, carried the first American flag into a British port on February 3, 1783. It was first carried round the world by the ship "Columbian" sailing from Boston in September, 1792. Captain John Greene, in the "Empress of China," had previously taken it to China in 1784. It was first flown in battle in the Pacific by the U. S. Frigate "Essex" in 1813. The next year Francis Scott Key wrote the "Star Spangled Banner." In 1818 Congress decreed that henceforth a new star should be added on the admission of each new State of the Union; but, before that, on January 13, 1794, after Vermont and Kentucky had been admitted to the Union, the stars and stripes were increased to fifteen. The 1818 Act reduced the stripes to thirteen and decreed a new star for each new State, which made a jump at once to twenty stars.

On April 6, 1860, Admiral Peary planted the first American flag at the North Pole. Within the last decade, Admiral Byrd has carried it to both the Poles.

Wherever it has gone it has meant achievement and new honors to our nation. But next year Old Glory will float over the achievements of the greatest American of all, the man who made both the flag and the nation that flies it—George Washington.

To Improve Road To Walled Lake

Work to treat the Walled Lake road with asphaltum from the railroad to Nowl, and from the village west to the cemetery, will begin soon, probably next week. The Commission is awaiting the result of bids to determine whether the work will be done by contractors or by the County. If the cost exceeds $28,000 the project will be undertaken by County employees. That the road will be treated is a certainty, however.

The method, now being used in Ingham, Gratiot and some other counties, will be entirely experimental in this County, and consists of covering the unpaved road with three inches of fine gravel, mixed with a special asphaltic oil. This will be gone over with a road grader. Traffic jacks this mixture into a smooth hard surface which it is thought will wear for three years. Special treatment for dust is eliminated by oil.

Conclusive evidence that the road around Walled Lake is in dire need of improvement was furnished last week by the heavy rains. The roads were left full of holes, which made progress over them almost impossible for the heavy holiday traffic.

The road was scraped by Albert Riley early Sunday, following the heavy rains Saturday, and put into fair shape for the afternoon traffic.

A preacher of Elgin, Ill., trying to increase attendance at his services, hung out this sign: "A horse is a poor vehicle to come to church in. Why wait?"

Triplets, two boys and a girl, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Levi Deaton at Wick, Ky., and were promptly named Amos, Andy and Madam Queen.

John Driscoll of San Francisco, was awarded $383 damages when he fell off his wagon and broke his wooden leg.

CRANBERRY JELLY.

Wash four cupsful of berries and cook covered, with two cupsful of water until they burst their skins. Press through a strainer, removing all the skins, then add two cupsful of sugar and stir until well dissolved. Cook ten minutes or until the mixture jells when a bit is dropped on a cold dish. Skin and pour into molds.

CHERRY CRANBERRIES.

Take one quart of cranberries, one-fourth of a cupful of water and soak until their skins burst. Cover with two cupsful of sugar and place in a slow oven to bake until the cranberries are thick like candied cherries.

DATE DREAMS.

Cream one-fourth of a cupful each of butter and any sweet fat, add one cupful of brown sugar and mix until creamy, add one well-beaten egg and one-fourth of a cupful of rolled oats which have been lightly browned in a hot pan, add one and three-fourths cupsful of flour, one teaspoonful each of salt and cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful of nutmeg, one-third of a cupful of milk, beat well and add two-thirds of a cupful of chopped dates. Drop by small spoonfuls on buttered baking sheets and bake about fifteen minutes. This makes about three dozen cakes.

TREASURE ISLAND

THERE came, one day, plodding to the door of the Admiral Benbow Inn, an old brown seaman. He was a tall, strong, heavy, but brown man, his tarry pigtail falling over the shoulders of his solid blue coat. He whistled the song, "Fifteen men on a dead man's chest, Yo-ho-ho and a bottle of rum."
 In the attic of this old inn was a sea chest, the property of the seaman. He brought it with him on the day he arrived at the inn. The chest contained, among other things, an important packet which contained instructions for finding a long-lost treasure buried many years ago. This oldskin packet was captured and surrendered to a Doctor Livesey who fitted out a ship in Bristol, and taking with him two-trusted friends and a large crew to care for the ship, set out in search of the lost treasure. The crew on board the ship determined upon making plans for which were overboard by Jim Hawkins, one of the trusted friends, as he listened to a conversation on a moonlit night when he was safely hidden in an old apple barrel.
 The searching party at last arrived upon the island where was buried the long-lost treasure. Of the twenty-five men on board, however, they were able to rely only on seven for loyalty and support. Thus handicapped, Jim Hawkins began his explorations. His eyes instinctively turned in the direction of a noise. Here he saw "a figure lean with great rapidity behind the trunk of a tree. What it was, whether bear, or man or monkey, I could in no wise tell. It seemed dark and shaggy more I knew not." The mysterious figure was Ben Gunn, who had not spoken with a Christian for three years. He had been marooned on the island for these three years and had lived on goats, berries and oysters.
 It was Ben Gunn who was with the captain of an old ship when he had buried the treasure many years ago. This Ben Gunn became a member of the searching party. It was not difficult for him to lead the group to the lost treasure, for he himself had discovered it and hid it in a cave two months before the arrival of the party upon the island. The cave was at last entered and there by great heaps of coin and bars of pure gold. The cruise homeward was successful, only five men, however, of the original crew returned. All had an ample share of the treasure. Searching for hidden treasures is an interesting sport... The treasures of the heart are hidden in our friends. They must be searched for. Gold in the heart is better than gold in the hand.

COMFORTABLE CHAIRS

COMFORTABLE chairs are an accidental invention and the desire to sit comfortably seems to be more a thing of West than the East. Persians, Turks, Moors, Egyptians—all the people of the past or present whom we consider Oriental—we picture as reclining in luxury but of sitting in discomfort.
 Comfortable living room chairs are more than a luxury. They conserve strength and relieve physical and nervous fatigue. At the end of a busy day it is far better to sit reading or talking in an easy chair for an hour or two before retiring than to stretch full length on a lounge and take a cat nap that will make it difficult to drop off to sleep promptly on going to bed. By means of a comfortable chair in which our bodies may be relaxed we can rest at times when even a brief nap would be out of the question.
 Children of the family are sometimes denied the privilege of sitting in the easy chairs. Of course they should not be encouraged to occupy soft seats while their elders sit on hard ones, but they should be allowed, even encouraged, to sit in relaxed attitudes in comfortable chairs from time to time during the course of their busy days.

Ford Taps Win One, and Lose One

The Ford Taps defeated Ford Motor team of Northville on Wednesday evening, June 3rd, by a score of 7 to 3. The game produced a prodigy in a twelve-year-old boy, who caught and fielded all the balls coming in his direction, besides doing very well at bat. He is the son of John Munk, and we predict a good future for him in baseball. The Ford Taps played their usual good game in winning this game.

One of the best games of the year, we believe, was played on Monday evening, June 8th, when the Coffee Cups defeated Ford Taps, 5 to 2. The score was tied 2 and 2 until the first half of the 13th inning when Coffee Cups scored three runs and held the Ford Taps to no score in the last half of the 13th inning. The game was featured by very fine playing by both sides. We are sorry that Bob Todd will have to get a soft cleaned and pressed, but he shouldn't come to ball games in his Sunday best. Henry Heidrop gave the boys some fielding practice before the game. Thank you, Hank.

These games have been attended by large crowds and in future Ford Taps will play every Monday evening at 6:30, on Ford Athletic Field. Ford Taps will play Pureling Dept. of Ford Motor, River House, on Monday, June 15th, at 6:30 p. m. Everybody welcome.

"Haymakers" Form A New Plymouth Lodge

A new organization called "The Ottawa Haymakers Association No. 12," which is a branch of The Improved Order of Redmen, has been started in Plymouth, and monthly meetings are held in the Redmen Hall over Boyer's Drug Store. To join this organization a person must be a member of good standing in the Redmen Lodge.

Thirteen members of this new organization, dressed in straw hats and overalls, which is the regular Haymaker's garb, and armed with rakes and pitch forks, drove around town on Saturday evening in a truck and made quite a unique parade, also getting quite a few laughs from the bystanders.

After this parade, three new candidates were taken into the organization: Mr. Jackson and Mr. Interfield of Lansing, also Charles Anderson of Plymouth.

Members of this organization are quite optimistic and believe a lot of fun will be made in Plymouth before the summer is over.

Confessing he had four wives, each one of them a nurse, William W. Henry of Chicago, was sent to prison for two years.

THE UNITED STATES SECRET SERVICE DURING THE CIVIL WAR

When war broke out between the States in 1861, the Federal Government was without any organized secret service. As there was no organized secret service, Secretary Seward engaged a force of detectives to intercept all communications between Canada and the Confederacy. This force worked very efficiently and captured several spies and much contraband which was originally destined for the South, but which never arrived. Seward also engaged special agents to stop the sale of shoes and other supplies to the confederacy by northern concerns.

In 1862 a Federal military secret service known as the Military Information Bureau was organized, which involved no complicated machinery. In every military department the Commander appointed a Chief Detective who gathered a number of soldiers and civilians to pursue the work of espionage and investigation. These detectives were responsible to the heads of their respective departments. Besides the regular secret service the War Department employed special agents who reported directly to the Secretary of War.

Constant watch was maintained for the interception of mail carriers, for the detection of Confederate spies, and the discovery of contraband goods. All spies, deserters, refugees and prisoners of war found in or brought into Federal territory were searched and subjected to cross-examinations, and copies of their testimony were sent to various authorities. In the secret service at Washington the famous

COST OF PROGRESS TO THE AMERICAN INDIAN

"I still wear the Blackfoot shoe. I have the white man's coat, but I cannot entirely forsake the ways of my fathers, and besides the white man's shoes pinch my toes." In this statement of a Blackfoot chief, friend of Haglind Garland, lies a practical illustration of the tragic cost of progress to the American Indian. Forced by white man-made conditions to set his foot on the progressive path, "the white man's coat," yet led on by his inclinations, his old habits, and above all his contact with our money-mad, vice-ridden civilization, the Indian has clung to and cherished the paths of his ancestors, "the Blackfoot's shoe."

He is in the backward of our swift progress; he who once owned all this vast territory is now practically penniless, in many cases in a still half barbaric state, to precariously exist upon it. The majority of Indians are able neither to enter fully on the high tide of progress, lacking proper training, or experience, nor to continue in the sluggish course of their fathers, owing to white man's domination. He is truly that figure on the old calendar, the Indian sitting stolidly on a pony, watching a train, whose whistle pierces his ears, pass in the distance. So is he sitting in the backwash watching the surge pass by. And why is he content to do this: why is he not swimming bravely with the rest? The answer lies far in the past and in all the years since white man's first appearance.

Almost from the white man's very arrival, his thought has been to push the Indian out of the way. A good deal of the hatred and contempt many pioneers felt for the Indians was a kind of self justification for the wrongs inflicted upon them. The pioneer felt little regard for the red man's rights or possibilities as future citizens.

On the other hand the Indian had little incentive to adopt this progress that was shoving him out of the way. He, on the whole, an honest, trustful, promise-keeping type could feel little reverence for a civilization whose advocates treated him as these did.

Treaty after treaty were made with the Indians guaranteeing them certain rights and lands. And treaty after treaty was abrogated by the United States alone. It is a shameful truth, this defiance of an international law that would have forever publicly dishonored the United States if she had so treated a recognized nation, for it is stated by Gratiot and all international law authorities that a treaty is a pledge of honor to be broken only by mutual agreement.

Justification of harsh treatment of the Indians has been given as a result of their warfare. In a treaty with the Delawares in 1785, they were given the right to punish "anyone" who attempted to settle in their land. This is not the only case of such an authorization. Indian warfare was also directly caused by one type of shameful policy, originated by Arthur St. Clair, governor of territory northwest of Ohio. This plan was to madden the Indians to war and then fall upon them with exterminating punishment. The Indians were rarely regarded as humans but rather as a nuisance to be destroyed or as people to be plundered. Tradesmen charged them exorbitant prices for simple things and, worst crime of all, introduced them to whiskey, that plague of civilization. Small wonder if the Indians seeing only the vice and the avarice of civilization had little desire for the progress it fostered.

But even then, after so many promises had been broken, they were still peaceful and desirous of taking up white man's ways. They begged for teachers, for agricultural tools, for mills, and for blacksmiths, but Congress, busied with the white men's ever increasing problems had no time to listen to these faint far-off pleas.

However in the case of the Delawares in Kansas, a large share of them became industrious and prosperous through their own efforts, for many of their wise ones realized that the "old order changeth, yielding places to new." But the ever rising tide of progress soon reached them and the bitter froth of it, the blackbirds and scoundrels, cheated and despoiled them for the sake of a few dollars. The uncivilized were kept in a worse than savage state by the debaucheries and vices of civilization forced upon them; while those farther advanced and disposed to honest industry were discouraged by outrages for which they had no comeback but war which was against the promise that they kept religiously. The Delawares discouraged and sickened were glad to move on and then on again. Even with their innate desire to take up the new ways, little chance was given them of becoming civilized in the confusion and turmoil of always having to move on. The growth of industrial progress in the East and the discovery of gold in the West increased and ever increased the pressure against the Indian. His food was destroyed, his land was taken. The white man, himself impelled by the forces of progress, pushed back the Indian farther and farther. "Kill! Destroy him! Anything to get rid of him! If he can't keep up with the times, let him get out of the way." Little thought was given as to why, lack of education and opportunity, the forgotten promises of schools and farm aid, he could not keep up with the times. When his conditions became more intolerable, he carving, ignorant, bewildered, flared up in brief wars for which he was heavily punished.

As a war measure, in order to keep a better account of the Indians, the reservation system was begun with its consequent rationing and often grossly ineffectual politicians in complete power as representatives of absolute government control. This political turpitude meant the slow starvation and terrible wretchedness of an uncared-for, despised people. They had to depend on the government for the means of living; thus beginning the second phase of holding back the red man from progress.

What an opportunity the white man lost in not taking the time and money to incorporate the Indians in our civilization. The Indian who has proved that he is intelligent and desirous of progress. But he learned only the vices of civilization, drunkenness, debauchery, and moral corruption. His physical condition from one of wonderful health was often ruined by the civilization fostered diseases, consumption, trachoma, and venereal, for which he was not given proper care by his white guardians. Even today proper medical care is not given him. There are neither enough available hospitals or doctors, although increased efforts are being made.

By the Dawes Act in 1887 a new policy was started by which land allotments were made to Indians who became citizens after a trust period of twenty-five years. The red man needed to pay no taxes on his land and if he did not care to farm it, the government would rent it to white men for him. The rich Indian on whose reservations oil or minerals have been discovered are also under government guardianship with no control of their money. This began the still greater phase of dependence. Getting unearned incomes is a sure way of demoralizing any people especially those used to simple living and unable to adapt themselves to luxuries. The system of protection has made the Indian incapable of earning for himself and ever less desirous of assuming responsibilities. His condition is now an abject dependence on the government fostered by that government itself. At present there are many ways by which an Indian may become a citizen, but there is also a law holding him under guardianship of the government if he is considered incompetent or irresponsible; so even an Indian citizen may still depend and lean on the crutch of Uncle Sam, and a man on crutches never progresses rapidly.

The pendulum has swung to the other degree. From no care at all, the care has become too solicitous. At first, the Indians were given no opportunity to progress. Their treatment was such that they distrusted white man's civilization, and desired to drive it away or flee it. Now they are cared for so thoroughly that they get no experience in the ways that would teach them to progress in this world. They depend on the government for support and have no desire to work for themselves. As reported by Joseph O'Leary, a member of an investigating Indian commission, the Indian's greatest need is to be taught to work.

It is a sad story but despite the Indian's lack of progress today, a new dawn is breaking for him. More and more Indians have the opportunity to go to school. More and more are becoming prosperous, law-abiding citizens, free of government aid. In time to come we can look back on this Indian problem, his attempt to force the red man on the path of progress, as an ever regretful, but triumphantly concluded task with the Indians taking a proper place in progress and making the world better for their living in it.

RUN-DOWN CARS A MENACE, SAYS LOCAL INSURANCE AGENT

One accident out of every three involves an old run-down car, in the opinion of Mr. Wood, local agent of the Standard Accident Insurance Company.

When behind the wheel of an old rattle-trap car, a driver does not usually exercise the same degree of care in driving as he does when driving one in good condition. The reason for this is obvious, according to Mr. Wood. He has the new, shiny object more at heart than he has the one with the flapping fenders and the boiling radiator. He does not have the added incentive of newness to protect this possession, and accordingly is just that much more careless.

Mr. Wood continued: "Then there is the element of safety devices on the older cars, which makes them objects of danger on the streets. Broken steering wheel, rear view mirrors, and acceleration facilities are usually very faulty. Add to this the more careless attitude, and you have the reason why old, rattle-trap cars are involved in one out of three accidents.

"Perhaps they may not be in the middle of things, but if you will carefully study the report of each accident, you will find that, though they were not actually involved, they were more than likely the cause of two other accidents, one because of their careless driving, and the other because they have been compelled to drive into trees, over ditches, and in the paths of other cars because of the slow and unsteady gait of some out-of-date car ahead of or beside them.

"You cannot point your finger at the drivers of these cars and say that they are absolutely at fault and prove such contentions at law.

"The only thing to do is to have periodical testings under State supervision, and if a car does not come up to specifications, license plates should be taken away."

Church Starts New Branches

Seventy-nine new branches of the Christian Science Church were organized last year. It was announced at the annual meeting of The Mother Church, held in Boston. Six thousand members from many parts of the world, including a large group from Michigan, attended the meeting. There are now 2,539 Christian Science churches and societies, besides forty college and university organizations. Of the new churches organized this year, forty-five are in North America, and twenty-six in Europe. For the first time Poland has a branch church.

Robert E. Buffum of Belmont, Massachusetts, prominent Boston attorney, was elected President of The Mother Church for the ensuing year. It was announced that The Christian Science Journal now has a circulation of 124,000, and the Sentinel of 193,000. Periodicals are issued in six languages besides English, as well as in Braille for the use of the blind. There are more than nine hundred employees in the Boston publishing house.

During the year the church gave funds for relief of hurricane sufferers in Santo Domingo, and for other relief activities in New Zealand, Java, China, Italy and Germany, besides extending aid to drought sufferers in the Mississippi Valley.

The growth of Christian Science depends directly upon spiritual healing in accord with its teachings," declared Duncan Shelton, retiring President. "Principally," he added, "the progress of our movement is determined by the growth of the spiritual understanding of Christian Scientists throughout the world—by their growth in spirituality and their power to heal. In giving Christian Science to the world our beloved Leader, Mary Baker Eddy, has illumined the Word of God as contained in the sacred Scriptures, made practical the teachings and works of the Way-shower, and demonstrated their availability and efficacy in solving all of the problems of the human race."

The Assembly upheld President Hoover in his policy of law observance. It made a strong pronouncement for universal peace, for the entrance of the United States into the World Court, for liberty of conscience, and for obtaining for Presbyterian students in colleges the same exemption from compulsory military training that is granted to members of the Society of Friends, the Assembly considering that a Presbyterian conscience is just as good as a Quaker conscience.

Temperance and prohibition, Sabbath observance and other fundamentals of old-fashioned American Christianity, were held up as essentials in combating the evils of the times. Strong pronouncements were made against the commercialization of the Sabbath by professional sports and motion picture houses, and against intrusion of objectionable amusements into church buildings. The sanctity of marriage, the family and the home were emphasized and greater restrictions against the divorce evil were advocated.

In the adoption of a special report on social and industrial relations, the General Assembly prepared for larger activities for the remedy of unemployment and kindred ills through a permanent organization on social and industrial relationships and for the extension of brotherhood and fraternalism.

Better inter-racial relations were advocated, lynching and mob violence were condemned, and cooperation and union among denominations were advanced.

A greater Christian usefulness of the entire man-power of the church was planned through more rigid requirements for an educated ministry and more intelligent practical evangelism through a system of higher cultivation in church work among the ruling elders.

The Assembly's celebration of the Centennial of its Foreign Missions led to affirmation of a great forward program throughout the world with a renewal of missionary preaching in every pulpit. The Assembly joined other ecclesiastical courts in urging upon President Hoover a national day of prayer and humiliation as a part of the inter-denominational crusade for Christianizing all nations.

Mother's Cook Book

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

WHEN there seems to be nothing for a vegetable that appeals, cook some pork chops and serve with them:

Onions and Apples.
Slice three or four onions and cook them in a little bacon fat until transparent, then add twice as many sliced apples, two tablespoonsful of sugar salt and a few dashes of white pepper. Stir during the cooking and season again before serving. A sour or tart apple is best for this dish.

Salmon Macaroni.
Melt two tablespoonsful of butter and stir in two tablespoonsful of flour; when well mixed add two cupsful of tomato soup and cook two minutes. Add a large can of flaked salmon, one chopped onion and salt and pepper to season; simmer five minutes. Make a border of three cupsful of cooked macaroni on a hot platter, pour inside the salmon mixture and sprinkle the top with one-half cupful of grated cheese and garnish with two sliced hard-cooked eggs. Serve hot.

Chicken Vegetable Loaf.
Beat two eggs, add one cupful of milk, three cupsful of cooked chicken, one and one-half cupsful of small peas, one cupful of diced carrots, one small onion, one teaspoonful of mustard, two teaspoonfuls of salt, pepper to taste and one teaspoonful of minced parsley and two teaspoonfuls of chili sauce. Mix and make into a loaf and bake fifty minutes. Serve with:

Mushroom Sauce.
Melt four tablespoonsful of butter, add four tablespoonsful of flour; after cooking a teaspoonful of onion in the fat simmer with one and one-half cupsful of milk, one can of mushrooms, salt, pepper and minced parsley to taste. Cook five minutes.

My Neighbor Says:

TO WASH a flannel skirt soak it in cold water overnight, so it will not shrink. Then wash it in warm water and put in a very little borax. Rinse in cold water and dry in a good wind. When almost dry, iron on the wrong side.

Left-over bacon, end pieces, etc., are all precious adjuncts in flavoring other food combinations. A plain bread stuffing is much improved by the addition of chopped bacon. Add one-half cup of the bacon to two cups of bread crumbs. Lessen the amount of salt called for in the recipe.

To clean light colored felt hats rub the entire surface with fine sandpaper and dust lightly with a white powder.

A little sugar sprinkled into the water in which potatoes are boiled will make them white and floury.

When it is necessary to iron a rough-dry garment at once, try this method: Dampen it, roll tight, wrap it in a cloth and then in paper, and put into the oven while the irons are heating. Evaporation will cause it to be thoroughly dampened in a very few minutes. But care must be taken that the oven is not hot enough to scorch the garment.

Hominy Pecan Croquettes.
Cook one-half cupful of hominy with a half teaspoonful of salt in two cupsful of water for five minutes, then cook in a double boiler two hours. Add two tablespoonsful of shortening, one-half cupful of chopped pecans and a teaspoonful of scraped onion. Cool and shape in cylinders. Beat one egg slightly, add two tablespoonsful of cold water, roll the croquettes in crumbs and egg, then again in crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Scotch Oat Crackers.
Put two cupsful of rolled oats through the meat grinder, add one-fourth of a cupful each of milk and molasses, one and one-half tablespoonsful of fat, one-fourth teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth of a cupful of raisins or nuts. Mix well, roll very thin and cut into fancy shapes. Bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven.

Treasure Hunt Is Delightful Affair

Mr. and Mrs. Cass Hough were hosts to a large number of their friends last Tuesday evening at a treasure hunt. The cleverly arranged affair started from their home at 8:00 o'clock, and carried their guests from Plymouth to various points around this section, ending at the Meadowbrook Country Club, where a midnight supper was served. Well Known Young People Are Married

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Cherry Hill church by Rev. Ainsworth, June 6, at 4:00 o'clock, at which time Alice Inarri became the bride of John Gustin. The bride was groomed in net lace over silk tulle, and conventional tulle veil with a crown of seed pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white rose buds and lilies of the valley. The matron of honor was Helen Lobbested, sister of the bride, who wore pink organdie, and carried a bouquet of yellow roses. The bridesmaids were Betty Burrell, sister of the bride, who wore green organdie and carried pink roses, and Alice May, who wore yellow organdie and carried pink roses. Betty Lou Arnold was flower girl, and David Lobbested was ring bearer. The bride's mother wore blue chiffon and the groom's mother wore blue crepe.

Charles Gustin, brother of the groom, acted as best man. The ushers were Alex Lobbested and Melvin Curwin.

"Oh Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly" were sung by Mrs. Bert Shurt; Everett Burrell was organist.

Following a reception was held in the church parlor, for relatives and friends who came from Plymouth, Ann Arbor, Detroit, Milan, Dundee, Denison, Ypsilanti, Birmingham and Toledo, Ohio.

They will be at home to their friends in Plymouth.

Elmer Jarvis is A Visitor Here

Elmer Jarvis, who left Plymouth twenty years ago to enter business in Lansing, was a visitor here Tuesday. Mrs. Jessie Nash, mother of Mrs. Jarvis, returned to her home in Plymouth with Mr. Jarvis after spending a week in that city. Mr. Jarvis recently sold his undertaking and furniture business in Lansing, and plans to spend the next two or three years traveling with his family before resuming work. He started his career with Fred Schrader in Plymouth, and while here the other day he had a very pleasant visit with his old tutor, Mr. Jarvis is one of Lansing's best known business men, and takes an active part in the affairs of that city. He has served as president of the Kiwanis club, the largest luncheon club of that place. Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis spent last winter in Florida, and they plan to spend the coming winter in California.

Pythians Rout Fast Outfits

The K of P. ball team is proving the dark horse of the playground league with the sensational game they have displayed recently.

Last week they let the Plymouth Recreation club down with a nest of "sooty eggs," a feat that has not been duplicated since the organization of the league. Two hits was the extent of the liberties taken of the K. of P. battery, while their teammates were pounding out five runs.

Then just to prove that this game was not an accident, they set the league leading Templars down for eight innings with three hits and two runs only to lose the game by a final score of 8 to 5.

Smith at third base and Gebhardt in center field are playing a bang-up ball game, while Kline behind the plate is doing a nifty job of receiving.

GIRL RESERVES SAY FAREWELL

That sad time for graduating Girl Reserves, the "Senior Farewell" was held Tuesday evening at the home of Evelyn Starkweather. As it was the last time that many would meet as Girl Reserves, the enjoyment was rather bitter-sweet. During the lantern ceremony, Velma Petz, a former Girl Reserve, presented each girl with her ribbon for period of membership and services. The ceremonial was concluded by all singing "Follow the Gloom."

To cheer up slightly drooping spirits, pencil games followed. The girls who knew most about the appropriate flowers and parts of a car were rewarded with a lolly-pop. After refreshments the last meeting for many was completed.

When a policeman of Norwalk, Conn., stopped a motor car and asked the tiny driver his age, the midjet replied, "I am 25 and married."

Charging that his wife said she "married him just for spite," W. F. Hughes of Memphis filed suit for divorce.

ERNEST FREDERICK WESTFALL

A friend of the community and an active laborer in St. Peter's Lutheran church, passed to his eternal repose in the person of Ernie Westfall.

He was born in the province of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, on the 19th day of June, 1890. At the age of 21, he came to America, living alternately at Farmington, Northville, Canton and Plymouth.

He leaves to mourn him, his wife, two sons, one daughter, 14 grandchildren, one brother and one sister.

He was a man well-loved by the members of his church, one who was ever faithful and conscientious in attendance upon divine worship, and one who with pleasant wit and conversational ability, was made welcome wherever he went.

He was an active member of the Lutheran Men's Club, often entertaining his friends at the meetings with reminiscences from the Old Country. We will miss him, indeed, but still we do not begrudge him his rest and his victory over all his enemies, even over death, for we know that here again the Lord has made true His word: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of Life."

"Little Stories for Bedtime" by Thornton W. Burgess

ABOUT BOB WHITE

THE hunter who had shot one of Bob White's children chuckled gleefully as he went forward to pick up the poor little brown bird. He was having what he called sport. It never entered his head to think of how the Bob Whites must feel. He probably didn't think that they had any feelings. He was pleased that he had made a successful shot and he was pleased to where the hunter was looking for him at all. Of course his dog helped him hunt and with wonderful nose of his he soon found the scent of that little Bob White and eagerly followed it. It just happened that in that field near where the little Bob White fell was an old home of Johnny Chuck's and all around the entrance to it the sand had been spread out. Now sand does not hold scent. The little Bob White knew nothing about that for he had not lived long enough to learn all that a Bob White has to learn, but he did see the open doorway. Across the yellow sand he ran and into the doorway and just a little way down the hall, where he hid under some dry "brown" leaves which had blown in there. He was almost the color of them himself as he squatted close to the ground and drew his feathers as close to his body as possible. In doing this he was doing a very wise thing, though he didn't know it at the time. You see his feathers drawn tightly against his body that way prevented the scent which might have told the keen nose of that dog where he was.

As it was the dog lost the scent at the edge of the sand and neither he nor the hunter once thought to look in that old hole. So while they hunted the little Bob White squatted perfectly still, though his broken wing hurt him dreadfully, and the ache of it made his eyes fill with tears. At last the hunter gave up the search. He was too impatient to kill more.

"Must be I just wounded him," said he, without one thought of how dreadful it must be to be wounded. "Probably a fox will get him. Bet I kill the next one."

With that he sent his dog on to try to find the little Bob White's brothers and sisters, his terrible gun held ready to shoot the instant he should see one of them. He was having great sport, was that hunter, while in the hall of Johnny Chuck's old house lay a little brown Bob White faint with suffering and dreadful fright.

Civil War Romance
Recalled By Faded
Letters Of 1861-1865

There's a market basket, in Plymouth, crammed with faded letters, photographs and other souvenirs which would be of deep interest to historians. They tell an intimate and touching story of the Civil War, as their owner puts it "The Rebellion." But to her, they simply recall the happy but fleeting romance that she lived as a girl.

The basket belongs to Mrs. Ella Roe Nichols. Mrs. Nichols was the bride of one of Michigan's distinguished Civil War officers, Capt. William B. Roe, and lived in Washington during those stirring days.

She's now 88 years old, but her memory of that time is very clear. "I seem to remember the things that happened when I was young better than those that go on now."

"I was engaged to Mr. Roe when war was declared. He volunteered right away and left. I stayed at home and did as much war work as I could."

"Capt. Roe was in Louisiana with the 10th Michigan Regiment for two years. He took part in the capture of Fort Hudson and many of the important battles of the South. Then, in 1864, word came that he was wanted in Washington in the Signal Corps. That doesn't sound very new or exciting nowadays. But it was then. The signal code had just been invented by Gen. Meyer and it was to work with him that Capt. Roe was called to Washington. So, you see, it was quite an honor."

Mrs. Nichols was silent a moment. Then, coming out of her reverie, she continued. "I was a war bride. Capt. Roe got a few days leave before taking up his new post. He came to Detroit and we were married, all in a flurry of hurry and excitement, the way war brides always are, I guess. We left for Washington right away."

"What a grand time I had there!" she exclaimed. "Of course, there was much sorrow all around us and there was worry and responsibility for those in charge of affairs, but we never saw any of that."

The headquarters for the Signal Corps was at Georgetown, with outposts all over the countryside. Men were stationed in trees, on the tops of houses, everywhere, always looking for the messages these little colored flags told of victory, of danger, of defeat.

"Part of my husband's duty," Mrs. Nichols continued, "was to inspect those outposts each night. He and two enlisted men would start out on horseback and ride all around the outskirts of Washington, seeing that all was well. They wouldn't get back until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. It was due to exposure on one of these trips of inspection that he died, two years after the war was over."

"I had a busy, gay time in the capital," Mrs. Nichols went on. "A great many of the officers' wives were there and we used to organize all sorts of parties, especially picnics. We rode horseback everywhere we went and one of my favorite jaunts was to ride out to Signal Camp with my husband. The guard would present arms as we rode in. It was very thrilling, I assure you. Then we would go in and have a picnic with the officers in charge."

As she talked, Mrs. Nichols delved into her treasure basket and brought out one souvenir after another. There was her husband's commission, signed by Gov. Austin Blair and William Robertson, adjutant general. There were pictures of the battles and scenes in the South, of the ironclad ram Essex, of the Mississippi Squadron, a great, ungainly monster; of brother officers. There was a letter, signed simply, "Maj. Gen. G. P. B.," expressing deep regret that Capt. Roe was being called from his post in the South, mentioning his "fine qualities, both as a soldier and a gentleman," and hoping that "The commanding officer of your corps will find it compatible with the interest of the Public Service to return you to my command. Respectfully yours, adj. general." In the box, too, are pictures of Mrs. Nichols as a bride and of her husband in uniform, and the code of the Signal Corps, written by Gen. Meyer himself. "It can do no harm to show it now," she said, "but it was a great secret once." The signal for "all right" was O. K.

"And here," Mrs. Nichols said, "are my two great treasures, my invitation to President Lincoln's second Inaugural Ball, and my supper menu at the ball. This is the envelope that the invitation came in. You see, it's just addressed to Mrs. Capt. William B. Roe, Washington. It didn't come through the mail in the regular way, an aide delivered it."

"The ball was held in the old Patent Building. I wore a brown silk dress, with a white bodice, and my hair was done in the fashionable waterfall. I was awfully proud of that coiffure. Eight of us went together, and we formed our own group for the cotillions and dances that were the order of the evening."

"The President and Mrs. Lincoln sat in a box-draped box and looked on. No, he didn't dance or mingle with the crowd and I didn't meet him that evening. But I did at other times, at receptions at the White House. He looked serious and careworn that night, as though he felt he did not feel in the mood for dancing."

"The big thrill of the evening for me was at supper. We walked in tight behind the Lincolns. She had on a white lace overdress, and was gracious and smiling, just the way she always was. It infuriates me, the way people wrote about her. She was a sweet lady."

Mrs. Nichols was asked if she had gone to the Inauguration, earlier in the day. "No," she answered and smiled. "I did not need to. We were lying on a street, just across from the Capitol, and all I had to do was look out of my window to see the whole thing."

"Then came the peace," Mrs. Nichols continued, "and the tragedy that followed so shortly after it. Washington was decorated gaily when we knew that the war was over. Every public building, most of the houses, were hung with flags. Those flags were taken down before they were supposed to be, in a hurry. And they were replaced with heavy black mourning. Lincoln was gone."

"We heard about his being attacked half an hour after it occurred. About 11:30 my husband's orderly knocked on our door and cried: 'The President has been shot and Secretary Seward's throat cut! The city is in an uproar. Get up, sir!' orders were given immediately that no one was to leave Washington, even with a pass, and my husband went out to see that directions were signalled to the outposts. He didn't get in until the next morning."

Mrs. Nichols still fondled the things in her basket. "Here," she said, "is the letter that his men wrote the captain when he resigned from the army. They presented him with a beautiful, framed engraving of Lincoln and gave me a silver cake basket. And that," she said, putting her precious mementoes away, "was the end of my army experience. My husband had a splendid record. I am very proud of it, and of the country that he served."

In 1899 Mrs. Roe, who had been a widow for many years, married Dr. Harrison Nichols, who has since died.

MILFORD HAS A LOVE TRIANGLE

William Duckering has been made the defendant in a suit instituted by Harry Avey, claiming $50,000 damages, by reason of alienation of his former wife's affections. Mrs. Avey secured a divorce from the plaintiff in July 1930. Mr. Avey is represented by John H. Plancher of Detroit, and H. F. Noble of Milford is Mr. Duckering's attorney. Quoting the Pontiac Daily Press:

"Avey says he was married to Mary Fisher, Nov. 15, 1917 and continued to live with her until October 7, 1921, when he claims she left him and has refused to live with him since. Avey charges Duckering alienated the affections of Mrs. Avey between July 1920, and July 1930, by taking her for automobile rides and to places of amusement and by 'poisoning her mind against him.'"—Milford Times.

Merchants Benefit
By New Postal Law
Says Miss Johnson

The recent amendment to Postal Regulations, enabling merchants and other business men more readily to trace elusive and delinquent accounts, will be discussed at the annual convention of the National Retail Credit Association in St. Louis, June 16-19. Representative Clyde Kelly, of Pittsburgh, who introduced the measure in the last session of Congress will be one of the leaders in the discussion.

Under the title "Return Registry Receipt Address Bill" the measure was passed by the Senate, January 26. Since that time postmasters throughout the country have been informed of the passage of the bill and the machinery set in motion for its operation.

According to Miss Marie Johnson, manager of the Merchants Service Bureau, a merchant sometimes faces a situation where a customer owing a bill moves to another city without informing his creditors of his new location. "Heretofore," Miss Johnson said, "the search for the customer in most instances was both costly and unsatisfactory. Even the registry regulations under the old system did not always reveal the location of the person sought."

"Under the operation of the new law," she said, "a merchant seeking to locate a customer addresses a letter to the last available address and registers it in the usual way. In addition, however, the merchant requests a return receipt together with the address at which the customer accepted the letter. There is the regular registration charge of seven cents and in addition the merchant must pay twenty-three cents for the return service."

"When the delivery of the letter is completed the merchant not only has the signature of the recipient but also his new address."

"It should be remembered," Miss Johnson said, "that Americans rapidly are becoming nomads and with this tendency on the increase plus absolute similarity in large numbers of names there is an increasing advantage in many instances in obtaining the address as well as the signature. At its inception, of course, this service will be used primarily by credit grantors but it also should have distinct value for other lines of business as some have already indicated."

"Public libraries, for instance, operate on a very narrow financial margin. Under the new regulation they will be better able to trace books that have been borrowed but not returned; merchants who send valuable merchandise through the mails will be able to learn just where it was delivered as well as receiving the receipt of the recipient; banks, trust companies and fiduciaries generally, in making distributions of trust funds now have the added advantage of learning exactly to what place their distributions have gone, as well as to whom, and business generally through the medium of this legislation will have an immediate starting point to trace lost, strayed or stolen registered mail matter."

Mr. Hayward, of Hayward's Clothing store and president of the Merchants Service Bureau, estimated that 1700 representatives from twelve hundred bureau communities throughout the United States will attend the convention.

ACROSS YOUR BANKER'S DESK---

Flows the record of the achievements and failings of the men and women of his community. Few of us realize the important part a banker can play in our everyday lives. Here we have an intimate story which shows some of the ways in which he serves us and makes our problems his own. . . .

"Never has there been so great a need for a close and wise human relationship between a banker and his community, never has there been a time when a good banker could do more good, or a bad banker more harm."

That is what one of the greatest bankers in the country told me recently, and then he related this story.

"I know a city of thirty thousand people, in a large agricultural county. They have felt the depression, of course, but there have been few business or farm failures. Even land values have held up. And all because of one wise man. For thirty years, while he has been the town's leading banker, in touch with the heartbeats of its people, he has been dispensing sound business principles. Time and again he has invited groups of high school boys to his private office, just to explain to them what money is, how to make it, and how to keep it. Scores of these boys are now business leaders, and the stability which they gained from him is saving the whole community."

"No town can thrive without the stimulating influence of a public-spirited banker."

ROCKS TRIUMPH OVER HOWELL 10-4

With all seniors off the team, an unorganized Rocks team took the diamond last Tuesday to battle their way to a decisive victory over Howell, who had earlier in the season beaten Plymouth 10-1. Monday night all the seniors turned in their suits, for Coach Matheson had told them that if they wished to remain on the squad, they must not take their "skip day" on the day of a game. Two new freshmen appeared in the line-up on Tuesday, and also two juniors, Warren Bassett, our freshman twirler, pitched his share of the victory fanning six, walking three and allowing only three hits all of which were singles. Rancour, pitching the first five innings for Howell, struck out four, gave three walks and four hits. Jones, pitching the remainder of the game, fanned three, walked three and gave three hits of which one was a circuit drive and the other a triple. The only home-run of the day was hit by Gates of Plymouth, and the triples by Williams and Wagonschutz, both on the Rocks team.

First inning: Howell—Gehring popped out to W. Bassett. Howard was hit by W. Bassett and took his base, and immediately got to third on Wagner's error. Haire popped out to L. Bassett. Jones singled, sending in Howard, and later stole second. Rancour took a walk. Gerkin fled to Levandowski, retiring the side. Hits, 1; runs, 1; errors, 1.

Rocks—Levandowski singled, and then stole second. Wagonschutz waited out a walk. Wagner fanned. Gates singled sending in Levandowski. Wagonschutz went out sliding home. Haire to Lutz. L. Bassett took a walk and Gates was out attempting to steal third. Howard to Gehring. Hits, 0; runs, 0; errors, 0.

Second Inning: Howell—Pelky struck out. Lutz was hit by W. Bassett and took first. He later stole second. W. Gehring fanned. C. Gehring hit to Wagner and was out at first. Hits, 0; runs, 0; errors, 0.

Rocks—Williams hit to Jones and was thrown out at first. W. Bassett waited out a walk. Schroeder struck out. Stevens hit to Haire and was out at first. Hits, 0; runs, 0; errors, 0.

Third Inning: Howell—Howard fanned. Haire took a walk. Rancour fled out to Schroeder. Hits, 0; runs, 0; errors, 0.

Rocks—Levandowski singled, and then stole second. Wagonschutz tripled sending in Levandowski. Wagner struck out. Gates fled to W. Gehring and Wagonschutz beat in the throw. L. Bassett popped out to Jones. Hits, 2; runs, 2; errors, 0.

Fourth Inning: Howell—Gerkin hit to Wagner and was out at first. Pelky singled and later stole second. Lutz hit to Levandowski, and was thrown out at first. Pelky advanced to third. Noble walked and later stole second. Pelky came in on a passed ball. C. Gehring hit to Gates and was out at first. Hits, 1; runs, 1; errors, 0.

Rocks—Williams fanned. W. Bassett hit to Haire and was thrown out at first. Schroeder fled out to Gerkin. Hits, 0; runs, 0; errors, 0.

Fifth Inning: Howell—Howard fled out to Schroeder. Haire hit to Wagner and was out at first. Jones singled and was out at second. W. Bassett to L. Bassett to Gates. Hits, 1; runs, 0; errors, 0.

Rocks—Stevens fanned. Levandowski got on on Haire's error. Wagonschutz got first on Pelky's error, and Levandowski got third. Wagner went to first and Wagonschutz to second on Jones's error sending in Levandowski and advancing Wagonschutz to second. Gates got first on Gehring's error, sending in Wagonschutz and Wagner, then he went to second on Gerkin's error. L. Bassett hit to Hildebrand and was out at first. Williams took a walk and later stole second. W. Bassett fanned. Schroeder and Stevens fanned. Hits, 0; runs, 4; errors, 0.

Sixth Inning: Howell—Rancour fled out to Stevens. Gerkin took first, being hit by W. Bassett; he later stole second. Pelky got to third on Levandowski's error, sending in Gerkin. Rathburn fled out to W. Bassett. Pelky came in on a passed ball. Brogan hit to W. Bassett and was thrown out at first. Hits, 0; runs, 2; errors, 1.

NEWS FROM STARKWEATHER

Miss Stader's second-A children have finished their number land books. Marion Nelson has moved to Kansas.

The children in Mrs. Moles' room had an interesting study about the banana. The United Fruit Company sent each child a booklet about banana raising and after it was read the children drew a Health-a-mobile with a banana body.

The children in the four-A arithmetic class received a score of six. The five-B and A geography classes have started reviews. The five-A class received 100% in spelling last Friday. The five-A and B, and four-A classes had a spell-down last Tuesday. Jone Fleeger spelled down the room. Marion Kien Schmidt spelled down the room last Thursday.

This probably concludes the Starkweather news for this season as the teachers say there will be nothing further except announcements of reviews.

NEW OFFICERS IN VARSITY CLUB

Holding their last official meeting for this year, the Varsity elected new officers for the coming school year. Harlow Wagonschutz, Plymouth's star century man, was given the chair as president. Lester Bassett was elected to the position of secretary and treasurer, while smiling Arthur Amrhein was voted as official issuer of sergeant-at-arms. This was one of the few meetings of the year and it proved to be a great success as any varsity member will tell you. This club was organized about two years ago by Mr. Matheson, for the purpose of getting a fine crowd of fellows together and giving service at all athletic functions at school. In a certain sense it is an exclusive club because only those fellows that have earned a letter in a major or minor sport are eligible for membership. As yet the work of the club has not been very noticeable around the school, but during the football and baseball seasons, the fellows helped to keep the crowds back from the playing field; they ushered at basketball games and at other activities at the school. The club also put out basketball schedules to give to all the fans that were interested in that sport.

The varsity club is not only for service but also for a lot of fun. Last year the fellows took an outing at Island Lake, and it is not without a feeling of joy that they remember the fun on that trip there. This year the club had a grand reunion at Riverside Park. The fellows got together and the new president fixed out a menu for a pot-luck dinner. Clyde Ferguson and Stanley Lanker were appointed to figure out what the initiation for the new fellows would be. Next year the Varsity Club expects to do a great many things in school, and it is their thorough aim to make better athletes and to gain a greater membership in the club. There are about thirty-five fellows that belong to the club now.

CENTRAL GRADE SCHOOL NOTES

In Mrs. Bond's room, group one has a vocabulary of two hundred and twenty words; group two has two hundred words, and group three, one hundred and eighty. Group one is reading Johnnie and Jeanie Rabbit in reading. This room has received six blue stars for having over seventy-five per cent banking during the last semester.

Having finished the Child Library Readers group one in Miss Mitchell's room is reading "Good Times on the Farm." Group two is reading "Child Library Book." In handwork the children have made and cut out farm animals and have a lovely border of them on their blackboard.

The boys and girls in Miss Holt's room had an arithmetic down last Friday. Row B won.

In Mrs. Holiday's room Lord Smith received the highest score in reading. Dorothy O'Leary was the winner in spelling. Lawrence Smith and Betty Mastick have returned to school after having been ill.

The boys and girls in Mrs. Atkinson's room are preparing a debate on "Does the soldier serve his country more truly than the farmer?" Elizabeth Hezze has for her team: John Nash, Arthur Stroll and Patsy McKinnon; Thomas Bronk has with him: Barbara Hubble, Ireda McCloud and Paul Schmidt. Thomas Bronk scored the highest in the achievement test.

HONOR BANQUET WELL ATTENDED

Nearly a hundred and fifty students and their friends gathered in the high school auditorium to help make the third annual Honor Banquet a success. The program selected was a very interesting one and several of the seniors graduating were given prominent places on the program.

Jean Strong and Maurine Dunn opened the program by singing two numbers, and Milton Moe followed them, playing two popular numbers on the violin. Marian Gust then introduced the toastmaster, Mr. Dykhouse. Mr. Cobb gave the toast to the honored guests, and in concluding it gave the school's appreciation of the work of the school board. A response to this toast was given by Viola Luttermoser, the salutatorian of the graduating class. A trombone solo was then played by Lester Daly. Mr. Smith then introduced the featured speaker of the evening, William Blackney, member of the Board of Education, Ellet, and a prominent attorney of that city. His address held all with its interest and excellent advice. In it he advised everyone to form a love of good books. He, himself, has profited from this habit. He is a bibliophile for in his library he has collected nearly four thousand in which are not included his books of law.

TRAVEL CLUB PICNICS AT RIVERSIDE

Although the rain was falling last Thursday noon, the members of the Travel Club piled into cars and drove down to Riverside Park for a picnic which is the last party of this school year. The sun came out finally, and a game of indoor baseball was enjoyed by all those present. This was the senior farewell party, and brings to a close a very successful year under the presidency of Jewell Rengert, whose untiring efforts in behalf of the club have made possible so enjoyable a year. Arthurs Williams, the secretary and treasurer, Delphine James, Elmore Sackett and Oliver Bowers are the other seniors who must leave us. Miss Field, our advisor, also deserves much credit for the club's success. The only remaining function of this year is the reunion which will be held at Elsie Travels' home the Saturday after commencement.

GIRL RESERVES GO CAMPING

Heavily weighted, scuffling figures rushed into the school house between showers last Saturday morning and then out again into waiting cars. Cars that rapidly ate up the distance between Plymouth and Bass Lake, where Mrs. Crumie took a group of thirteen Senior Girl Reserves over Sunday.

Once there, after unpinning mountains of blankets and food enough to last an ordinary army a week, the first excitement arose over choosing beds. Since there were plenty of beds, this problem was settled without any noticeable black eyes or bruises. Dinner followed the important decision, and thought that was an enormous pile of food, it was appreciably decreased after this first meal.

It rained almost continuously, but between storms and sometimes in the middle of them, the girls seized every opportunity to explore and go wading and hunting in the dull, slate gray lake. Such a trip is a failure without exciting accidents, and these Amy started off with a splash by falling in the water. Luckily there was a fire to dry out her soaked clothing. A very few of the girls went into the lake properly, but they did not stay much longer than Amy.

Pink-pong saved the day, for the harder it rained the better the players became until many had enough experience to confidently take on any so-called expert. For the evening, Mrs. Crumie had arranged a program consisting of finishing a poem with doubled letters of the alphabet and progressing tables of pink-pong, bridge and confie. After that came bed time and a supposed trip to slumber land. However, that night almost everything else was done but sleeping. Special reason for the weary eyes and languid appearance of several in school on Monday.

On Sunday as the ever-tearful sky prevented carrying out the intended devotions, the girls gathered around the table and discussed their various religious and moral problems. By this time some of the neighbors had arrived; so the group borrowed boats to row out on the lake. The passengers gained a wonderful view of all sides as the boats generally progressed in wide, swinging circles.

Part of the girls took a long twelve-mile hike, while later in the day the rest climbed up Peach mountain to catch a breath-taking view that memory will treasure for coming years.

GEOMETRY CLASS GOES TO ISLAND LAKE ON PICNIC

Monday night at four o'clock, the Solid Geometry class, accompanied by Miss Wells, their teacher, and Misses Nye and Smith, both teachers, drove to Island Lake on a picnic they had planned to take some time before school closed.

A tennis tournament was drawn up by some of the members of the class and it was played out at the courts at Island Lake. Marshal Purdy being the winner. Those who attended the picnic and were in the tournament were: Edward Arscott, Edwin Ash, Lester Daly, Rupert Hadley, Vincent Herter, William Kirkpatrick, Bruce Miller, Clifford Smith, Marshal Purdy and Casler Stevens.

At 7:45 they ate supper, and after pitching horse-shoes and playing more tennis, they left for home and reached there at 9:30.

Nethem Wins in Fast Contest

The fast going Nethem team won four straight by defeating Grosse Pointe Independents last Sunday.

Gale and Horvath let the boys down with four hits and they got twelve on strikes, besides gathering a hit apiece for themselves. Horvath relieved Gates at the beginning of the eighth inning. He struck out five in a row to finish the game.

Reblitzke was the leading hitter of the day getting three out of four, while Zielasko and Horvath got one hit out of one time at bat, and Pete his daily extra base hit, when he doubled in the third inning.

Horvath was back at second base after resting his sore arm, and Gale was pitching again after having a week off because of a bad case of mumps.

Next Sunday, June 14, at Rousseau Park in Newburg, Nethem will meet South Fort St. Assoc. from Detroit, at 3:00 p. m.

Coming Attractions At Penniman-Allen

"DUDE RANCH"

"Dude Ranch" is a great comedy idea with a great cast of comedians to put it across in a blaze of hilarity, and can be seen at the Penniman-Allen Theatre, Sunday and Monday, June 14 and 15.

It sets its fun-punch over through a series of screamingly uproarious situations and dialog to match.

The manager of a "dude ranch" in the West finds that his patrons are discouraged because there are no promised wild and woolly thrills—and they threaten to leave for their homes in the East. Then comes a one-horse traveling show whose actors suggest that they fake some scenes of blood-spilling Western life to keep the guests interested in staying. The ensuing "melodrama" keeps the ranch in an uproar. But the climax is capped by the appearance of four real bandits who challenge the vaunted bravado of the leader of the actors. Things start to hum, in earnest.

The wind-up comes in a whirlwind of funny action, with the leader of the actors failing to get his man but succeeding in getting his girl.

Jack Oakie is the chief actor in the traveling troupe. He poses as a desperate gun-fighter "bad man" throughout the picture. Sometimes he gets away with the deception, sometimes he doesn't. The girl who sees through his fake bluster and in turn detests him and loves him is June Collyer, one of the prettiest of the younger starlets.

Engine Pallette is Oakie's chief henchman in the troupe and his sworn enemy in the fake wild-West which they put up with the aid of a few costumes and properties salvaged from their broken-down traveling theatre. One day Pallette is "Black Jed," the "most heartless cattle rustler in seven counties"—the next day he is Waboo, dusky and pesky Chief of the local Blanket Indians.

"THE LADY REFUSES"

Betty Compton's followers are going to be delighted with "The Lady Refuses," her latest Radio Picture, appearing at the Penniman-Allen Theatre, Thursday, June 18.

At last she has a role worthy of her greatest histrionic powers, and a plot, a supporting cast and a production of high merit.

"The Lady Refuses" combines every essential quality of fine, thoroughly satisfying screen entertainment with some outstanding features that make it unforgettable.

The story, written by Robert Milton and Guy Bolton and adapted by Wallace Smith, who also wrote the dialogue, puts a truly powerful dramatic touch, enhanced by an air of authenticity. The characters are so human the spectator is aware of having met them, yet so original they are refreshing.

Consider, for example, the fact that both heroine and villainess of the picture are "camps." Novel, isn't it, to find the handsome hero, narrow, somewhat vain, conceited and weak? To have a father hire an adventuress to win his son back to him from another adventuress?

Those are only a few highlights of the plot, which has comedy as well as pathos, physical thrills and plenty of touches of the risque as well as tense drama. The background constitutes a tour of London's most picturesque and colorful elements from the slums to the most aristocratic homes and apartments and cafes.

"GUN SMOKE"

"Gun Smoke," the main feature at the Penniman-Allen Theatre, Saturday, June 20, is the most up-to-date Western picture that has yet been shown on the talking screen. The time of this story is today.

It deals with the mustang-hunting men of the Idaho badlands who round up hundreds of wild horses each year and sell them for handsome sums. In this territory, to escape arrest at the hands of city police, come a gang of racketeers bent on gaining new spoils from the peace-loving people of the West. The result is a number of exciting episodes and adventures in which Westerners and city gangsters have ample chance to show their prowess as marksmen.

Richard Arlen is the hero, the leader of the mustang-hunters who finally triumph over their urban enemies. Mary Brian is the beautiful owner of the ranch about which much of the action centers. William Boyd, who was the villain of Gary Cooper's "The Spoilers" and of Jack Oakie's "The Gang Buster" is the "big shot" of the gun mob.

Engine Pallette is the collecting Roman of the ranch who carries on a laugh-provoking love affair with Louise Fazenda, the ranch cook and servant to Miss Brian.

Pallette has been a favorite comedian of film fans for several years. Since the advent of the talkies he has been seen as the befuddled Sergeant Heath in William Powell's Philo Vance pictures; as the piano mover in "Let's Go Native"; as the fun-maker in "The Santa Fe Trail"; as the irate parent in "It Pays to Advertise."

Miss Fazenda was the leading comedienne in "Gold Diggers of Broadway" and in "The Desert Song."

Farm Cupboard Raided by Police

The Farm Cupboard, Dixon, well known road house on the Plymouth road, is quiet today as the result of a raid perpetrated by members of the sheriff's department on Monday night and the subsequent arrest of Mrs. Coala W. Kramer, 35, proprietor of the place, who is charged with violation of the prohibition law.

Three persons were arrested for disorderly conduct who were at the place at the time of the raid. They are Charles Sessions, 43, South Ingalls street; Kenneth Clark, 37, Detroit, and Pearl Stark, 36, R. F. D. No. 2, Ann Arbor. They were arraigned before Sheriff Jacob B. Andres, Judge Justice Jay H. Payne yesterday. Cash bonds of $25 were furnished. Mrs. Kramer's bond is $2,500.

Officers making the raid were Deputy Sheriffs William Dailey, George Randel and Clyde Bennett. Five gallons of wine and a quantity of bonded whiskey were found in the yard which indicated that the place had been doing a big business. Officers had a warrant based on purchase of liquor.

Sheriff Jacob B. Andres has been suspicious of this place for many months and for the past three months has been watching it closely.—Wash-tonaw County Tribune.

Chevrolet Goes to New Record

Chevrolet production during the month of May exceeded every month of 1930 and was the largest single month's output since July, 1929. W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, said in announcing the May total production of 113,852 cars and trucks. This information has just been received by Ernest Allison, Plymouth Chevrolet dealer.

The May figure, representing world production, compares with 113,187 last May and with 106,066 in April this year. While the increase over last May is slight, Mr. Knudsen pointed out that dealer stocks of both new and used cars are now in far better shape than a year ago.

An interesting angle of the May output, Mr. Knudsen said, was a heavy increase in the number of cars built for export. This trend was also pronounced in April this year, and in May the export requirements were nearly five times as heavy as in the corresponding month last year.

The heavy May output was the direct result of a decided pickup in sales in certain sections of the country, notably the area along the North Atlantic seaboard. Mr. Knudsen said. He pointed out that this section was the first hit by the industrial slump which followed the stock market crash, and it appears to be, appropriately, the first to recover. Certain other sections are also showing signs of recovery in Chevrolet business, the president said.

During May Chevrolet plants operated at a normal average of five and one-half days a week, and employment went above 36,000 men, the company's normal payroll. Mr. Knudsen declared.

When Mrs. Lella Elam of Humboldt, Tenn., told the judge that a prohibition agent had coaxed her to sell him liquor, the judge fined her one cent and scored the officer.

Bank Settlement Raises Question

A question as to who are liable as stockholders of the former People's Bank of Walled Lake, has been raised and will be heard in circuit court at Pontiac on June 15. The petition for the hearing was filed by Polton & McGee, attorneys for the receiver, the First National Bank and Trust Co. of Pontiac. The question arises from a failure to have stock transfers recorded.

The law requires that when a bank is started a list of its stockholders must be filed with the county clerk and that when any stock transfers are made, the record of such must also be made with that official.

In closing up the affairs of the bank it was discovered that there were a number of sales of the bank stock, which were on record at the bank, but had never been made at the County Clerk's office. Hence the question as to whether the original owners or the purchasers are liable to assessment for the amount due depositors. The sum of $70,000 is required to pay the liabilities and wind up the affairs of the bank.—Milford Times.

PRESBYTERIAN NOTES
The Insey Woman's Class met on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Foulton. The day was perfect and the attendance large. Eight members of the class whose birthdays fall in June and July were congratulated on reaching another milestone. A fine dinner was followed by the business meeting and this in turn by an interesting program.
As these notes are being written the women of the June and July divisions of the Woman's Auxiliary are preparing for a tea to be given in the church dining room Wednesday, June 10th. A large gathering is anticipated and a program including a play, "Way Down East," will be presented.
Next Sunday is Children's Day. The services will be at 10:30 o'clock and this will be the only service in the church for the day. In the evening the congregation will join in the annual baccalaureate services at Plymouth High School.

EPISCOPAL NOTES

Fish supper, Friday evening, June 12, served by the Woman's Guild. Tell your friends about this!
Attention men! On Monday night we are planning to go to St. Mark's church men's club in Detroit, to return the visit they paid us a few weeks ago. Be sure to save this date! The evening will be devoted to various games. Let's show St. Mark's what a good crowd we can get together.
The Junior brotherhood meetings are being continued on Tuesday night. Bible are to be continued in St. Matthew's Gospel.
Worship is a normal part of the human life, just as is food and friendship. A life without contacts with God is not going on balanced ration. It is half-starved. Treat yourself to an hour of spiritual recreation; go to church on Sunday. It will add enjoyment to the rest of the day and the week to come.

Christian Science Notes

"God the Only Cause and Creator" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches on Sunday, June 7.
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens: God himself that formed the earth and made it: he hath established it: he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else" (Isa. 45:18).
The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spiritual causation is the one question to be considered, for more than all others spiritual causation relates to human progress. The age seems ready to approach this subject, to ponder somewhat the supremacy of Spirit, and at least to touch the hem of Truth's garment" (p.170).

TELLS OF WAYS

But having assured ourselves of the excellence of our town from the essential point of its providing us with a living, the next question is: What does it provide beyond mere living? For essential as we feel that mere living is, that alone will not satisfy us; much less will it make others who are already making a living elsewhere look upon our town with desire.

"We Americans are a great people for seeing only one side of a thing at a time. This adds a certain zest to life for it enables us to become equally vehement in advocacy and denunciation of the same thing according to the side of the medal presented for our inspection. There are some successful business men, for example, who plan their factories with the greatest care but who think city planning is tying silk bows on lamp-posts or putting flower boxes in the windows of office buildings. One they therefore are not surprised to find people who scoff at the thought of making a city anything but an unkempt, smoky, dirty treadmill, who rail at the impracticability of those who would put it in order, abate the smoke nuisance and clean the streets, while there are other people of a fastidious disposition and an independent income who would indict the opponents of movies and the critics of automobiles and find it not banish business entirely.

"But some day the hard-boiled man wakes up to find that his associates who have made their pile, have moved to some other place to spend it, and the fellow who is lured by the sight of gold, realizes that it is in the profits of business that he exists. As these two could each other the rest of us wake up to the fact that business is the basis of most of what makes life worth living: beauty, art, music; comfortable homes, a gracious social life; all these come from the profits of business. And at the same time we wake up to the complementary fact that business is not an end in itself, but is a means to an end, that we may live more abundantly."

"So we begin to understand that while business is the first essential to our town, it is not the whole town, and consequently instead of spoiling the rest of the town it must make the rest of the town a better place to live in. I am therefore going to ask you to accept a second proposition as part of the starting point of our argument: While the existence of a town or city depends upon business, that existence is not justified unless the profits of business make life in that town constantly more and more worth living. Assuming that we are agreed upon this double-barreled proposition, we shall proceed with the argument by defining a series of excellences by which to measure our town. First let us take up the business excellences so that we may be sure we are going to have the profits which are necessary to living abundantly.

"From the business point of view towns and cities have been classified as industrial, commercial and governmental or social. Those in the last classification are so few and so distinctive that we shall leave them out of account after saying that the industrial development which is natural and commendable in other communities will there either destroy more than it creates or will submerge their peculiar reason for existence. The other two classes are no longer distinct. A century ago we had distinctively commercial towns. Today, even in the far West, our cities are nearly all partly industrialized and are in process of becoming more so. Consequently we are developing industrial and commercial districts in the same community. That is one reason why zoning is necessary.

"This development seems to many of us a very wholesome one. We wish to see industry decentralized. Industrialization means many smaller cities instead of a few tremendous ones, or large cities made up of groups of distinct communities instead of the giant agglomerations suffering from elephantiasis that now are one of our most difficult problems. Industrial decentralization also means lessened waste in transportation. To haul a raw product clear across the country and then haul the finished product back again is wasteful unless there are compensating advantages, such as those which induced Denver to give up the thought of competing with New England's woolen mills. The United States Steel Corporation realized this when it built Gary at the foot of Lake Michigan and Fairfield near Birmingham.

"There are, of course, a considerable number of small cities and towns which are still predominantly commercial, which are supported by a surrounding agricultural population who do their trading in them. Such towns have some of the character, advantages and disadvantages of a one-industry community; they have a homogeneity, a common purpose, that is pleasant, but they are dependent upon the ups and downs of their single source of business. When that is down, everything is down. Business leaders are depressed and the proprietors who are living in apartment houses and cities are looking for industries, just as most one-industry towns are looking for other kinds of industries.

First Item

"My first item is grading our town then is to assume that it has a variety of industries none of which are mutually harmful. A blast furnace and a silk mill, for example, do not make ideal neighbors.

Second Item

"The industries of our town should be those for which the town offers peculiar advantages. We have passed the stage when any industry will do so long as it maintains a payroll in times of prosperity. That idea belongs back in the days when we offered houses to shaky concerns if they would come and die among us. Today our town and the intelligently managed industry size each other up, ask, 'What have you to offer that I can't get better elsewhere?' When that question has been answered satisfactorily our town has made a real acquisition. Then when business slows up, the advantages it gives its industries will enable them to keep going longer and more profitably than those in competing towns. For, of course, we realize that there is today developing a competition among cities which is just as real as the competition among the business firms within the city.

"In order that we may know what industries to encourage, our town should have an industrial survey. Business firms find stock taking a necessary function. So will the cities of the future. This stock taking is not only for the purpose of finding out what they have on hand, but even more for the purpose of learning what to get. Our industrial survey will take account of all our advantages, natural and man made, will learn how fully they are being utilized and will serve as the basis for a campaign during the coming year. Now I say during the coming year, for the industrial survey contemplated is not a single event to be done once and for all, but is a continuing process. The first survey may give us basic facts of permanent value, but most of the facts have to be kept up to date if they are not to become worse than useless.

Third Item

"Having settled the question of industries satisfactorily, the next item is commerce. This is our third historical development, commerce has come to depend, especially in retail business, somewhat on industry. Again the survey comes in. Is our town a natural jobbing center? What lines can it best supply? Again there is advantage in some diversity so that depression in one line will not unduly affect the whole community. So the next question is, how does our town meet the needs of its tributary territory commercially? Are its merchants developing the trade they should?

Fourth Item

"The three items above are important from the essential point of view of assuring us a living. The next is a sort of bridge between these and the items which make that living worth the living. It is, 'Has our town a plan which will guide its future growth, and regulations which will prevent short-sighted and greedy individuals from handicapping business and spoiling those things upon which we spend the profits of business?'"

"A city plan is a very practical proposition. Its purpose is to enable our town to make the most of all its natural advantages, to plan improvements so that they will give the most for the money, supplement instead of blocking each other. The nearer end of the bridge above referred to is that city planning provides facilities for business. It selects and develops appropriately those areas best fitted for industry, those best fitted for wholesale houses, those best fitted for retail stores. Then it provides for their expansion with the greatest ease and the least possible destruction to other activities. Then it provides for access to them, transit and transportation, for communication between these various business areas and the areas which business supports and which in large measure are the justification of business, the area of homes and schools where a new and, we hope, a better generation is being reared to take over our responsibilities when we drop them. And at the farther end of the bridge we have these home areas which the city plan makes more safe, more comfortable, more attractive than they would be without a plan. Supplementing this city plan our town has a zoning code which regulates the development of private property so that the exploiter may not take much of the value out of his neighbors' holdings, but that all may enjoy a fair field and no favor. And supplementing the zoning code our town has a housing code which prevents the erection of unfit dwellings, and a building code which assures us that our buildings will not fall down or burn up without adequate prevention. These four things we lump together as item four since they all have to do with the proper building of our town.

Fifth Item

"By means of item four we have passed from the business areas, which are the foundation of our town, to the residence areas, which are its superstructure. Here we find a new series of items awaiting our attention. First among these we will mention housing because the house shelters the family and the family has been the cause and the beneficiary of most of man's constructive work.

"Does our town have good housing? By good housing we mean several things. First, of course, in these days of shortage, has it enough housing so that people are not crowded together? Second, is its housing wholesome and sanitary? Is it weather tight and dry; does every room have windows opening on to wide open spaces so that air and light may enter; is there an adequate and convenient water supply for every household and adequate and convenient toilet facilities? Of course some of our housing will meet this test triumphantly, but the question is, does all of our housing meet it?

"Then there is another question on housing. We have all heard the persuasive arguments of owning one's home, while a good many of us have rented an apartment. By all means let us compile our statistics on home ownership, but let us always supplement them by statistics on the proportion of our people who are living in one-family homes and the proportion who are living in apartments. Home living is quite as important a subject for us as home owning. If the proportion of home living in our town is going down, the proportion of apartment living going up, our town will get a poor mark. For apartment living is very poor living for children and if we leave children out of our reckoning business loses most of its justification.

Sixth Item

"The fifth item leads naturally to the sixth, education. Does our town provide enough schools for all its children and are all its schools good? Here again are several points to consider:

Buildings and equipment
An adequate number of teachers
Qualified teachers
Physical education

"This new generation which business is supporting is our most important contribution to the world. It is worth far more than anything else we produce, because it means not one generation, which is all that we adults mean, but all future generations. "But while the education of youth is the most important part of education, it is not all of education. Even we have not finished our education. We are perfecting it day by day in our daily work. But we need tools beside those supplied by our particular business, so our town will have adequate library facilities both for us and for our children.

Seventh Item

"With education, with the labor of our maturity, goes or should go the eighth item, recreation. "It is sometimes said by foreigners that we Americans do not know how to enjoy ourselves in simple, natural ways but must have something specular or expensive. My belief is that this characteristic of ours is not inherent, but is due to conditions. In a town that has no parks or playgrounds, no library, no art, where homes with gardens are being superseded by apartments with the smallest permissible paved courtyards, what shall we do except utilize the roller coaster, the joy wheel and the joy ride? They are all we have to take away from the routine of our labor, the commonplace of mediocrity, the ugliness of a half-finished community. "So our town will have a park system, not just one or two so-called parks; a playground system that will meet the needs of adults as well as of children. It also will provide music and theatricals, both amateur and professional.

"The line between amateur and professional is a watering one and we shall not try to draw it here, for our town encourages both in its recreational program and supports all that is good from bowling alleys, pool rooms and movies to concerts, remembering that the chief pleasure in amateur performances comes from participation and the chief pleasure in professional performance comes from witnessing a worthwhile thing exceedingly well done.

Eighth Item

"If the people of our town are to find life worth living they must be physically well and strong. Typhoid, malaria, hook-worm, tuberculosis and similar words mean, like typhus, a loss of historical interest chiefly. Our town as its eighth excellence will have a low death rate and a low morbidity rate. This involves several items:

"If the site of our town does not have good natural drainage, we shall secure for it good artificial drainage. "If we have an abundant supply of pure water piped into every dwelling.

"It will have a system of sewers that will connect with every dwelling, or pending this connection, privies constructed and maintained according to regulations made by our board of health.

"It will have an effective method of refuse and waste collection and disposal and it will have not only an efficient street cleaning and refuse collecting branch of its government but also a board or department of health with a full time health officer and adequate legal powers, which will see to it that the town gets clean and keeps clean. For whether or not cleanliness is next to godliness, there is no question that it lessens the probability of our premature transfiguration into angels."

Ninth Item

"Our town also will deserve a reputation for security both of persons and of property. It will provide adequate means of preventing and checking fire and its police will take pride not in the number of arrests they make, but in the small number of causes for arrest. Incidentally our jail, while it can never be an object of civic pride, for its very existence is an admission of failure, will not be a cause of municipal shame because of its antiquated construction and deplorable condition.

Tenth Item

"Our town presents an appearance of neatness and good repair. From the railroad which enters it to the last cottage on its outskirts, everything in our town gives evidence of a population which is up and doing. Our public and semi-public buildings, our streets and public places, our industrial and business districts, our residence districts show that they are used by people who have self respect and community pride. The dirty, unkempt town provides the same effect as does the man who wears soiled linen. His heart may be pure and good, but there is something important lacking in his character.

Eleventh Item

"If taxes and bonded indebtedness are too high they indicate slackness in administration or worse, indifferent citizenship. Lack of results from expenditures. If too low they indicate an indifferent citizenship and lack of civic pride. Municipal expenditures should be investments which in large measure produce financial results by facilitating business and raising values. Some like expenditures on education, are investments in the future. Expenditures for present improvement, like street paving, should be entirely completed, bonds sold up, and the life of the improvement. If a city has a debt incurred to meet current expenses or to pay for improvements which are already used up it indicates a low standard of citizenship.

Twelfth Item

"Beauty like happiness is best when secured as a by-product. An ugly thing is not made beautiful by putting a useless ornament on it. The same fact comes from having the things we use every day beautiful. And they will be beautiful if they fully meet the needs of use. The present day automobile is becoming a thing of beauty, but the main consideration in its development has been that it shall be the proportion who are living in apartments. Home living is quite as important a subject for us as home owning. If the proportion of home living in our town is going down, the proportion of apartment living going up, our town will get a poor mark. For apartment living is very poor living for children and if we leave children out of our reckoning business loses most of its justification.

Thirteenth Item

"Our town should have individuality, not be a copy of some other place. If it has a good tradition in architecture, follow that tradition, don't build an imitation New York hotel in Charleston. Make use of natural beauties, river valley, hills. They are never quite the same as those in other towns. Use local names for our streets so that they will recall our history or make those who repeat them think of our town. When one says Fifth Avenue he probably thinks of New York, but there are a hundred other fifth avenues. When one says Peachtree Street he does not have to add Atlanta.

Fourteenth Item

"You will notice I have left city government to almost the end. Not because it is unimportant, for it is important, but because it is an inevitable accompaniment. Or, to phrase it differently, it is a tool. If the people of our town want, really want, the items listed above, they will have a good city government. It is putting the cart before the horse to work for a theoretical city government and then assume that all good things will follow. The right order is to decide what good things we want and then we shall develop a city government which will aid in getting them. A good machinist insists on good tools because they will enable him to do a good job.

"Government is a difficult thing to evaluate in any system of marking. Of course we all would like our government to be 100% efficient. But when we stop to think about it, there are some other characteristics we want even more. If efficiency were the only requisite for government we should consider seriously the old Imperial German system. That put control into the hands of specialists who knew how to pave streets and to train an army. But it led the people to catastrophe. We believe the primary function of government is to facilitate the development of the individual citizen and to express his desires. This means lessened efficiency in paving streets perhaps, but it means a more intelligent and a more responsible people. And after all the people are more important than their streets.

"So we won't try to set up a score for the government but will assume that under our democratic system, if the community stands well on the other items listed then it must have a fairly good government because it has a good citizenship.

"Of course we have all begun to realize by this time that there is no way of getting a good government without having a good, active citizenship. Perpetual motion is as much a dream in civic affairs as it is in mechanics. But an active, effective citizenship means effort, constructive effort. So our town has its quota of civic and social agencies which afford opportunity for citizens to choose the subjects in which they are most interested, study them, experiment with them, and then, on the basis of knowledge, put them over. So we have a live chamber of commerce to present the business man's point of view on community problems and we have philanthropic agencies to deal with our social problems.

"We are thoroughly convinced that ours is the best economic and social order which man has yet devised. But we realize that as man himself is imperfect, so are his works imperfect. We have our human misfits, our fellow townsmen who are handicapped physically, mentally, morally. We have conditions that need improving. It is our job to attend to these and we are attending to them. This leads me to the last item, which is the one with which I began this discussion.

"The Spirit of the People—If there is any one thing that makes us want to live in a town it is the spirit of the people. I put this last because it is an intangible and we Americans want something we can get a grip on. But this intangible is so important that it can't be left out. Any one of you who has lived among strangers for awhile knows the joy of again being among his own people. And our own people are those who are friendly, helpful, willing to get in and push. That spirit is not natural always, but it can be cultivated. And where that spirit is there is also a good town, the kind of town we would like to live in."

BOWLING

By Douglas Malloch.

THE good old game of bowling is good enough for me! To start the lignum vitae between the one and three, To shoot the lignum vitae along the maple floor— Well, humble men or mighty, or big or little score, There isn't any better, no finer sport, I claim.

For any real go-getter who likes a he-man's game! It takes a little muscle, that much I will admit; But life is all a tussle, whatever game you hit; And you're a better fighter tomorrow, heart and soul Than if the ball were lighter tonight you have to roll.

The arm that's strong and limber, the bit that's fair and square, You'll find will get the timber, in life and ev'rywhere.

You'll have your little troubles, for life is all alike; You'll get more splits than doubles, a railroad on a strike.

And yet you'll find, my brother, the man who always wins Is one, somehow or other, who gets the single pins— Who, when you yell the loudest, slips by you unawares

And, when you feel the proudest, is cleaning up his spares.

It's exercise, it's training, it's fellowship, it's fun— Both mind and muscle gaining, it's "everything in one."

So, when your courage falls you've lost your ginger, then Try bowling for what ails you, and get it back again!

Some other sport consoling to other men may be— The good, old game of bowling is good enough for me!

FINE MANNERS

ONCE in Japan I saw two heavily loaded coolies collide violently as they met around a corner. Their cargoes were scattered. It was a situation for Nordic recrimination, if not physical violence. These two little men backed away from the wreckage, smiled, bowed repeatedly from the waist, and then set to work to repack each other's loads.

It is appalling to think how many of us in the western hemisphere with far greater advantages of breeding and education and of far higher social position than those coolies—how many of us would not have had those fine manners, would not have displayed such good sense.

It is not only in not damaging their nervous systems by getting excited as many of us might have, that the coolies demonstrated their superiority.

For they made of the incident a thing of beauty. They proved themselves past masters in the most difficult of the arts, the art of living. They proved that fine manners are not a superficial thing of no significance as compared to the deep, solid virtues like generosity, kindness, honesty. Have those coolies answered the charge of those people who call good manners "fuss and frill and artificiality and shallowness and show that doesn't mean a thing?"

THE AFGHANISTAN YOP

THESE docile beasts are raised from the tundra to full-grown yops by the native Afghan tribesmen in the valleys of the Hindu Kush mountains. At forty years of age, when their whiskers are long enough, they are broken in for caravan work and are used for transporting portable shower baths from the bathtub factories in the mountains down to Kabul. The yop is a one-way creature, being able to go down the mountains, but never up, for his short hind legs would cause him to tip over backward when going up a steep hill.

The venerable yop shown here has just arrived in Kabul with his load of shower baths for the dock workers in the Afghan merchant marine. The pean body, fibert head, clove horns, toothpick legs, split almond feet, and coconut husk whiskers all go to make up this curious creature.

The SANDMAN STORY

BOY WHO LOVED TRAINS

DANNY was sitting upon the floor, building a huge house out of blocks when he heard a train whistle. With a jump he was up, the blocks were knocked over, and he rushed across the room, climbed right over his mother's lap and was looking out of the window.

Nothing in this world was so important to Danny as a train. He had been on trains three times, too. Three different times he had taken trips with his mother and his father. And the last two times his little sister Elaine had gone along, too. The first time Elaine had not gone because she had not yet arrived in the world. But even though he had been on trains, he jumped up every time he heard the whistle in the distance. Then he could see from his window the smoke curling up from the engine, and he could hear the noise of the train.

He couldn't see the train from the house, but by going to the window he could see the smoke and he could hear it better, he felt quite sure, by being a little closer to it.

When he had traveled on trains he had gone with his daddy down to look at the big engine when the train was stopping any place for any length of time.

Sometimes it stopped for just a moment or two, and no one got out.

Some people complained of the train and said it made so many stops, but Danny couldn't understand such people.

They had talked to the engine driver. He was sitting up in the engine looking out of the funny little side window—or opening. Danny wasn't quite sure what it should be called, and when he said to the engine driver: "Do you call that a window?" the engine driver had said:

"Call it anything you like, young fellow. You won't be hurting my feelings."

The engine driver had told him about the lights and the signals and what trains they would pass and how the locals stopped along the line to pick up the people who were only going short distances.

The engine driver had told him many things, and Danny felt as though, with a little more help, he could almost run the train himself.

In fact, the engine driver had said: "Why, you're learning in no time at all, all about it. I wouldn't be surprised to hear you were running a train before many years are past."

Danny thought it would be sooner than that.

Elaine hadn't taken the least interest in trains. She had sat inside in her mother's lap and hadn't wanted to go out at all.

But then she was only a little girl. But she loved Elaine. There was that time when his mother and daddy had gone to a party, and a lady had come in to stay with them. Elaine had not liked the strange lady and had cried when she came into the nursery. So Danny had told the lady that he would look after Elaine, and he had promised her just loads of candy and ice cream as soon as he got some money, and he had rocked her a little so she had fallen to sleep.

Still he had cried a little at seeing Elaine cry. He was very, very devoted to Elaine. Only she didn't care much for trains. That he couldn't quite understand. He went back to his blocks when the train had gone by, and somehow he didn't build a house this time. He started in building a freight yard in which he put his trains. That was the best idea he had had yet.

The very, very best.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

MUGWORT

PEOPLE versed in the lore of "roots and yarbs" will tell you that a wreath of mugwort about the head of a child protects the child from malaria; and many say that a bunch of that herb hung up in the house is a general preventive against sickness.

This belief in the magic virtues of mugwort prevails not only in the United States and Canada, but is common all over northern and central Europe, besides being known in China and Japan. But in continental Europe, whence we inherit the superstition, the mugwort, in order to be effective, must be gathered on midsummer eve—the eve of St. John's day. In fact, in France, for this reason, the herb is known as St. John's wort. In some places it is gathered on midsummer day instead of eve—but the idea holds that it must be gathered at midsummer. The midsummer part of the superstition, which is the key to it, appears to have been lost in crossing the Atlantic.

The mugwort superstition is a remnant of sun-worship. Mugwort was one of the plants supposed to become inoculated with the power of the sun-god when he reached his apogee of power and power in the heavens. In Europe bunches of mugwort gathered at midsummer are supposed to be a charm against witchcraft, and German peasants put bunches of the plant among the corn to keep off rats and mice. The old Germans, when they built their midsummer fires in honor of the sun, used to cast offerings of mugwort into them, thus casting away all ill luck.

It is a curious fact that in China bunches of mugwort gathered at the same time as in Europe—midsummer—are hung in the house for the same purpose they are in Germany—to keep the witches away. And in Japan, when a house has been robbed in the night, if they can discover the footprints of the thief they put mugwort on them to "cast a spell" on the culprit—to "make his feet sore," they say. Mugwort, then, is a plant beloved of the sun-god and its superstitious use is a survival of sun-worship.

"THE GAME IS NOT WORTH THE CANDLE"

WE HAVE here a colorful phrase, one which is current on everybody's lips and which is universally used to convey the idea of attempting something, which, either because of the risks involved or the returns in prospect, will not be worth while.

The origin of this expression is quite intriguing. It goes back at least three hundred years to a time when candlelight was still the prevailing method of illumination.

Then, as now, of course, people employed their various gambling pastimes.

However, candles cost money and many a game would be played in which the stakes were so slight as to make the winnings less than the price of the candles used.

So it was that the expression arose. "The game is not worth the candle," which, of course, has broadened in application, though retaining in large part its original significance.

Here is what Race Drivers with Life and Victory at Stake have decided about Tires

FOR twenty-one years the Indianapolis two and a half mile circular brick track, surrounded by a concrete wall to keep the cars from dashing off, has been the crucible where at white heat automobiles and tires have been tested. Thousands of men have risked, and some have sacrificed, their lives, and manufacturers have spent millions of dollars to the end of making better automobiles and better tires.

Leslie Schneider and mechanic on Saturday won this race in a heavy 8 cylinder car. He made an average speed of 96.629 miles per hour—on the straightaways and in passing cars he touched 140 miles and better. He drove on 6.00-20 Firestone High Speed Tires with racing treads. He had no tire trouble.

He used Firestone Tires because Firestone experts and engineers have through twenty-one years taken this race as a challenge to tire making. From this race they have developed these vital improvements which have given to Firestone Tires the world leadership in safety, mileage and endurance.

1. Gum-Dipping. Tires had to be stronger and able to stand the heat of a hot red-brick track at high speed. Firestone met this by developing and perfecting the dipping of cords through a rubber solution to insulate each fiber of every cord to overcome heat and give the cord greater strength—and 58% greater flexibility.

This is the Patented Gum-Dipping Process used in the making of every Firestone Tire.

2. The Balloon Tire was developed by Firestone to permit greater speed with comfort and safety by increasing road grip and absorbing shocks. It was made possible by the added strength and flexibility given by Gum-Dipping. In the 1925 race, some of the drivers tried the then new Firestone Balloons. The others stuck to high-pressure tires. Peter de Paolo on Firestone Balloons made a world's record. All the prize winners came in on Firestone Balloons—Now the balloon tire is everywhere the standard.

3. Double Cord Breaker. The higher-powered cars and the step-up in speed demanded still more tire toughness. At one hundred miles an hour, the circumference of a tire increases by more than 10%, and this, added to the centrifugal force, tends to throw off the tire treads. Firestone met this by developing the Patented Double Cord Breaker which gives a 56% stronger bond between the tread and the tire body and also gives a 26% greater protection against punctures and blowouts.

These are some of the great lessons that Firestone has learned on this racing track. And so the men whose lives and fortunes depend on knowing tires always buy Firestone Patented Gum-Dipped Double Cord Breaker High-Speed Tires.

There were 72 entries. Of these, 40 survived the elimination trials—and every one of them was on Firestone Tires. And every tire was bought and paid for.

We give you the benefit of all the lessons Firestone has learned from these races. You can get from us all the strength and safety in tires that the racing drivers buy.

Take advantage of our liberal trade-in plan. Avoid the risk of blowout, accident or delay. Prices on these World's Record Tires are the lowest in history. Come in Today.
