

The Plymouth Mail Will Be Located Monday, November 19, in its New Building at 271 South Main Street. We Have Done What we Have Advised Editorially.

We Have Complied With the Government's Advice to The Nation and Erected A Badly Needed New Building For Our Business.

It is with pleasure that The Plymouth Mail announces to this community and vicinity that beginning Monday morning, November 19, this newspaper will be located in its new building at 271 South Main Street. While the building is not yet entirely completed and there is much to be done and some things left to be finished in the future, sufficient progress has been made so that all of the equipment can be moved before the end of the present week. The office will be open in its present location until Saturday night, Monday morning it will be with the greatest of satisfaction that The Mail will be able to greet its many friends and patrons in a new building that has been planned and constructed strictly for printing and publication purposes.

It is needless to tell any one at all familiar with the newspaper publishing and printing business as to the necessity for the move that The Mail has made at this time. Through precautions that have been taken in the construction of the new building, The Mail has been able to secure the lowest fire insurance rate in Plymouth. Up to the present time, this newspaper has paid next to the highest fire insurance rate in Plymouth. Once having seen a former newspaper plant owned by the present publisher of The Mail go up in smoke, there has been since that time a constant fear of fire and the irreparable damage it does to a newspaper plant.

Many advise one in middle life not to take on new liabilities and new responsibilities, but if every one who has passed the half century mark should stop doing the things that help communities to grow, stop taking the chances that one must accept in the business world, there would be little indeed to look forward to.

The Plymouth Mail does not in the least look with concern into the future. While the Mail has been independent in politics, its publisher in the past has been a sort of Progressive-Republican. But that does not prevent the statement from being made that this newspaper has the greatest of faith in the efforts of President Franklin D. Roosevelt to set this country aright. Every right thinking person wants to see his government succeed, whether under a Democratic or Republican administration. It makes no difference. If our government fails, then everyone fails.

One of the reasons too why The Mail looks so securely to the future is the fact that during the past year and a half there has been a constant increase in the circulation of the paper. Not a large number, it is true, but without the slightest effort to build circulation, it has grown week by week. Nothing demonstrates better than this fact the satisfaction of the newspaper readers of the community with the kind of a newspaper The Mail has been issuing. We hope, and we will, make it better as time goes on. Our new plant will provide this opportunity.

The Mail has been enthusiastic over the government's plan to help the building business. It is our belief that this proposal of the government will do more to help business and to set things aright than any one other thing so far recommended by the administration. During the few past weeks that The Plymouth Mail building has been under construction, one of the greatest satisfactions in connection with the venture has been the ability to provide local lumber and supply dealers and Plymouth tradesmen and workers with business and employment.

In this connection The Plymouth Mail wishes to emphasize the fact that every dollar that has been spent for material and supplies has been spent with Plymouth dealers and business men, except in two or three cases where there were no local dealers handling the product desired. In fact in order to carry out its desire to secure everything that has entered into the construction of The Plymouth Mail building in Plymouth, The Mail has arranged in one or two cases to have supplies handled through local tradesmen.

Every dollar that has been spent for labor in the new building has been spent with Plymouth artisans and workmen. An effort has been made to divide up the business as far as possible among local dealers. The same rule has been applied in hiring labor. As many men have been employed as could conveniently work at one time. And let it be said in this connection, that while the new Plymouth Mail building is not in any way an elaborate or expensively constructed one, it is as well and as substantially constructed as any building in Plymouth.

It is the belief of the publisher of The Mail that he has done his part in carrying out the desires of the government in its effort to aid the building industry of the nation. While in doing so we have encumbered the years to come, still we cannot help but believe and think that it will all turn out right in the long run. We know that it is going to give our business as nearly a fire-proof home as our limited funds made it possible to construct. We know that it is a tremendous improvement over what we have had in the past. We know too that Plymouth can rightly boast in the future of having one of the best, if not the best, modern country weekly newspaper plants in all of Michigan. No claim is made that it is the largest, but through the cooperation and assistance of those long experienced in newspaper publishing and the graphic arts industries, our plant has been so arranged and constructed that the work can be most efficiently handled.

As another bit of temporary economy, the publisher during the erection of the newspaper plant, had constructed a small apartment on the second floor. This will be finished in the next few weeks and upon completion, it will be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Elton R. Eaton.

At this time it is the desire of The Plymouth Mail to express to every one who has in any way contributed to the rapid progress in which the building has been brought to a completion, our sincere appreciation for their good will and aid.

Plymouth is one of Michigan's ideal communities. Its industries are substantial and are bound to grow. Because of its ideal location, this city will go forward in the years to come, just as it has prospered and grown in the past. We have staked our all upon it. We have placed our entire faith in the intentions of our national administration and in its ability to accomplish for America all that it hopes to do. We believe we have done our part in demonstrating to the community, state and nation our belief in the good that the future holds. Come in, at any time, the latch-string is out for every one. Nothing will delight us more than to show you through the new plant at your convenience.

Local Builders Unite In Plan To Start Activity

Plymouth Up To Present Has Had Little Benefit From House Act

Chamber Of Commerce Sponsors Move To Encourage House Repairing and Building

Twenty building supply dealers, contractors, and skilled workers in the building trades attended a meeting last Monday evening at the Chamber of Commerce office for a preliminary discussion of Title No. 1 and Title No. 2 of the Federal Housing Act. It was decided at this meeting to make a thorough study of the FHA literature distributed by Secretary Moore and to hold a follow-up meeting the following Monday evening.

They were turned over to a nominating committee consisting of Russell Roe, chairman, Stanley Corbett, L. E. Wilson, Roy Jewell and Irving Blunk who will make their recommendations next Monday night.

One sub-committee to work under the permanent chairman and executive committee was appointed to serve as a publicity and advertising committee. This committee consists of Floyd Eckles, chairman, Sterling Eaton, Carl Shear, Charles Mather and Berg Moore.

Plans for a house to house canvass were discussed, and a decision as to whether or not to ask for the help of FERA workers or to use local men interested in the building trades was held over until Monday's meeting.

The men present last Monday night were not unmindful of the fact that the women of the community must become interested in the Federal Housing Act or very little can be accomplished. They merely want to get some of the preliminary work out of the way before setting up an advisory committee made up of representatives from all civic groups to serve under the general chairman.

Plymouth High Debaters Hope To Win Honors

First Debate Of Series To Take Place Here On November 22

Plymouth high school is one of the six schools consisting of Dearborn, Ecorse, Lincoln Park, Ypsilanti and River Rouge in the preliminary debates of the Twin Valley Association. The question to be debated by the School Debating League is the subject, "Federal Grant For School Equalization."

On Thursday evening, November 22, at 7:30 Plymouth high school and River Rouge high school, the two contenders for first place in the Association, will debate at Plymouth high school in Plymouth and at River Rouge high school in River Rouge.

To date, River Rouge has won both sides of the question from Lincoln Park and Dearborn. Plymouth high school has won on both sides of the question from Lincoln Park and Ypsilanti. The debates on the twenty-second will probably be therefore the determining factor in the championship in the Twin Valley Association.

The question of federal grant for education is very timely and of much importance in Michigan because of financial difficulties which the schools are facing. The coming debate will probably be the outstanding event of the year at Plymouth, and many people will probably avail themselves of the opportunity of enjoying the results of hours of hard work which the competing teams have done. River Rouge won from Plymouth in football this fall, and the debating team is going to attempt to square accounts in the coming debate.

Night School Is Visited By Large Number

Parents Get First Hand Information On Work Of Children

By a member of the Pilgrim Prints Staff.

The holding of classes in Plymouth high school last Wednesday evening, November 7 in celebration of National Education week was a great success. There were 371 parents and friends who visited during the period between seven-thirty and nine o'clock. These thirty-minute classes were held the sixth, seventh, and eighth hours. Some classes had as high as twenty-seven parents in at one time. The classes were conducted just as they are in the regular sessions and the parents could see how the students are taught. Special interest was taken in the shop and the course which it holds open for students this year, the chemistry laboratory, cooking laboratory, and also in the new agriculture department that has been added this year. This year was carried out a few years ago and was quite a success at that time, but with the program this year the total of 371 was much larger than that of former years. There was also an unusually large student attendance, with only thirty-one absent, and these were gone because of sickness or because of lack of transportation from out of town homes.

The American Legion held a very interesting Armistice Day program with Dr. Swayer as speaker, Thursday in assembly. They held these assemblies each year in all the schools of the country where it is at all possible as one of the programs of National Education week. This plan originated in New York many years ago. The school election, which was held Tuesday of the same week was also in celebration of this week because teaching the students how to vote and the necessity of voting is a great help to the improvement of the country and government and is National Education.

In addition to the principal paid on the debt there was also paid in interest charging a total amount collected and paid out the outstanding debt of the city, including both principal and interest, the sum of $366,683.17.

City Pays Over Quarter Million On Bonded Debts

Since January 1, 1930 the bonded debt of the city of Plymouth has been reduced more than a quarter million dollars. This information was given to the City Commission by the city manager last Monday night in a brief statement as to the debt situation of the city.

The manager advised the Commission that on January 1, 1930 the outstanding bonded debt of the city was $558,600.00. This amount consisted of $182,000.00 in water bonds, $177,000.00 in general obligation bonds and $219,600.00 in special assessment bonds. In addition to the above bonded debt, a debt of $22,750.00, consisting of land contracts was also owned by Plymouth Riverside Cemetery. During the five year period covered by the report, the total bonded debt has been reduced to $305,000.00, consisting of $107,000.00 in water bonds, $129,000.00 in general obligation bonds, and $69,000.00 in special assessment bonds. The cemetery debt was reduced from $22,500.00 to $16,000.00, making the total bonded debt, including the cemetery debt, at the present time $321,000.00.

In addition to the principal paid on the debt there was also paid in interest charging a total amount collected and paid out the outstanding debt of the city, including both principal and interest, the sum of $366,683.17.

"In attending the Forty-Second National Convention of the Japanese Red Cross Society today, we are grateful to notice the great progress this institution has made in its enterprises and the improvements which have been in the organization. We are also gratified to note that the First International Red Cross Conference will be held in this country and that you are endeavoring still further to promote the enterprises of the Red Cross Society through international cooperation. Jap Newspaper Tells Of Great Red Cross Work

Chinese Paper Uses List Of Names Registered at Hotels, Including Local Visitors to Far East

Additional copies of Japan and Chinese newspapers have been sent to The Plymouth Mail by Charles H. Bennett who is in Tokyo, Japan attending the world-wide Red Cross convention. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett were among the delegates appointed by the national association to represent the United States at this convention.

One of the newspapers, The Japan Advertiser, is printed entirely in English and it carries in great detail a report of the convention the Bennetts are attending.

As well edited and made up as any American newspaper, The Advertiser is filled with interesting news stories from all parts of the world. It contains numerous pictures of various sessions of the Red Cross convention.

So interesting and so different is the report of the proceedings of the convention due largely to the customs of the Far East nation, that a brief portion of the report in the Japanese paper will be of interest to Plymouth Mail readers.

It follows in part: The Empress entered the open pavilion at 10:45 o'clock as the Imperial Navy Band played the Japanese national anthem. Shouts of banzai from the throng arose as the Empress, beautifully attired in a dark red dress and with a hat of the same shade, and wearing a long string of pearls on a fur neckpiece, proceeded to the white dais in the center of the pavilion, followed by Princess Ochiichu, Princess Takeda, Princess Higashikuni, Princess Ri, Princess Nashimoto and Princess Kuni.

The guests in the pavilion and the vast throng in the garden bowed silently as the Empress stood before a table with a cover of gold and multicolored brocade, behind her a red Imperial chair and a large gold screen. Then the Empress unrolled the Imperial Message and in a soft but clear voice read the brief message to the silent gathering.

The following is an unofficial translation of the Empress' Message:

"In attending the Forty-Second National Convention of the Japanese Red Cross Society today, we are grateful to notice the great progress this institution has made in its enterprises and the improvements which have been in the organization. We are also gratified to note that the First International Red Cross Conference will be held in this country and that you are endeavoring still further to promote the enterprises of the Red Cross Society through international cooperation. We desire the president and the officers of the society unite their efforts, in order that the Red Cross Society may be of more benefit to the world." (Continued on page six)

NAILING A CANARD

Frequently one hears some blatherskite who is seeking public favor at the expense of some one else charge that the editorial opinions of newspapers are largely, and in some cases, wholly dictated by the advertisers in the newspapers. They say that publishers would just as soon say and do by those who find it convenient to aid their business by the use of newspaper advertising space. Michigan has just recently gone through a political campaign and one of the issues pertained to a proposed constitutional amendment. Vast sums of money were spent in newspaper advertising by those sponsoring the proposal. In fact it is doubtful if more advertising has ever been done in any one campaign to win votes than was spent on this one issue.

But did the expenditure of this money have any influence upon the editorial opinions of the weekly newspapers of Michigan?

It did not! The weekly newspapers carried probably the largest portion of this advertising—and the weekly newspapers were almost one hundred percent hostile editorially to the plan. In fact it was their tremendous opposition to it that defeated it. Not one cent was spent with a weekly newspaper by those who opposed the amendment, so it can be readily seen that they did not oppose it because of any monetary reason.

This is a pretty emphatic answer to an old canard one hears now and then.

IT IS TRUE, UNFORTUNATELY

There comes from the news dissemination service of the University of Michigan an article which points out the fact that there are thousands of high school graduates who are being cheated out of additional educational advantages because of the poor work that is being done by many high schools. Responsibility for the condition is lifted from the teachers and placed chiefly upon our present system of maintaining too many school districts. It recommends consolidations, the weaker high schools being abolished and students of those communities sent to districts where better high schools are maintained.

Dr. George R. Carrothers, director of the University of Michigan Bureau of Educational Institutions in the report, just made by him in which he discusses this subject, declares that there are scores of small, understaffed, poverty-stricken high schools in Michigan which are failing to give students proper educational opportunities.

No blame can be attached to the superintendents, principals or teachers of such schools, the trouble being that a small four-year modern high school cannot be an efficient financial unit. Small, scattered high schools are economically unsound even in good times. Dr. Carrothers says in commenting on his report:

"While we have some high schools of larger size offering efficiently educational training far superior to any college of a century ago, we also still have the small, inefficient, crowded, poorly equipped, understaffed high school limping along and constantly whistling to keep up the courage of pupils and staff in its attempt to distract attention from its deficiencies and to create an impression that good work is being accomplished."

"This kind of school, whether public or non-public, ought to be consolidated at once with a neighboring school in the name of fair treatment for helpless youth who are being deluded into believing that they are receiving a fair secondary education. Inequalities of opportunity in secondary education are apparently greater today than at any other period in the history of the United States. This situation is not confined to Michigan, by any means, but is found throughout the nation."

ONE WAS A THIEF

Distressed by a distressing tendency, on the part of the public, to condemn the whole electric industry for the offenses of a few individuals, Alex Dow, president of the Detroit Edison Co. recently delivered a characteristically blunt and pungent address before the Pennsylvania Electric Association. Mr. Dow is known and respected throughout the United States as a patriarch among sound electric utility pioneers and leaders. When he speaks, there seldom is any doubt as to just what he means. His Pennsylvania address was no exception as the following excerpts will indicate:

"I could never see the justice in trying to punish a whole industry because of a few individual offenders," said Mr. Dow.

"If we of the electric industry were a church which could require applicants for communion to first prove their good conduct; if we were a club which could refuse to admit all undesirables; if we were the United States Senate, which has been quite finicky at times about the acceptance of some elected members and most illogically indifferent as to the qualifications of others, we might be able to police our own industry. Unfortunately, we have no police power.

"Any skunk with money can go out and buy a few electric properties, organize himself a corporation, 'skin' these properties for a few years and in the meantime unload the ownership on honest investors. In the past, this was too often the history of the 'butting-in' of an undesirable in our industry. I could name a few persons who have thus 'butted in' and whose entrance was most emphatically unwelcome to the rest of us. I can name others who in their way, were creditable members of the industry until they got drunk with power and success and became discredited.

"But, is there any group or organization in business or in politics, or even in religion, in which it cannot be said there are, within the group, a few undesirables?"

"It is written that Christ said to his disciples—there are twelve of you and one of you is a thief. One twelfth is eight and one third percent. Does that portion of undesirables hold good for the electric industry? I believe the percentage is too large. It certainly is too large, judged from my own wide acquaintance in the industry. Suppose we apply it to the most eminent legislative body in the country.

"There are ninety-six United States Senators. One twelfth of ninety-six is eight. Without stretching my intellect at all, I can name at least eight senators with whom I do not care to associate on earth or alongside whom I should hate to be buried. Does anyone think it necessary to denounce the United States Senate because of the manifest faults of, say one-twelfth of its members?"

"I'm probably the privatist citizen you ever saw."

Senator McAdams can say that if war comes Italy will never be the first to bring it on.—Benito Mussolini.

When a business stands still it's dead, whether they've held the funeral or not.—Henry Ford.

Of course we don't want pants. Men are already ugly enough in their without having women wear them.—Elsa Schiaparelli.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau forgets that the government is spending money faster than he is printing it.—Senator Thomas.

"I could just as readily name out of my years' experience in the electric industry certain people once active in the industry with whom I have been no more willing to associate than I might be with the eight duly elected gentlemen of the Senate whose names I have refrained from listening."

"Does that entitle me to be sour on the whole industry and all the people in it?"

Mr. Dow continued his line of thought with reference to old world ancestors in his own family with whom, he said, "he would not have wished to be caught dead. Such things do happen even in families." He concluded with a story, credited to Dr. Samuel Johnson, to the effect that a lady to whom the doctor paid his addresses, warned him she might not be entirely eligible because one of her relatives had been hung. Mr. Dow said the good Dr. Johnson's response was that "he had never heard of a relative hung, but he had several who ought to be!"

JOB OF THE SCHOOLS

The children trooping into the schoolhouses after their long vacation—what a colorful picture they make in their shiny new clothes and with their bright eager faces. The shouts that split the air, and their irresponsible wrappings and tumblings, how they tell of a tremendous alertness. These children are capable of producing a marvelous advance in our country.

The schools are like a mill that has to take all grades of material. If that mill must utilize defective wool, cotton, and leather, it won't turn out any first class product. The school is forced to take the industrious and the lazy, the willing and the unwilling. It is expected to turn out a uniform first class product of good citizens, which under existing conditions can't always be done.

Many of those growing minds are like young trees bent out of shape, which the good gardener may be able to straighten out. Innumerable children who made a wrong start, are trained, by devoted teachers to stand erect in the garden of life.

America plants ambition in the heart of youth. It points to successful men and women who came from humble and depressing homes. "You can also rise," it says to every youth from a back alley.

Some boys dream that that place of fortune can be found over the slippery ways of the crooked path. If they stick to that belief, the school can do nothing for them. Modern education has a job other than that of teaching facts about verbs and fractions. It has to point out the path of industry, and convince youth that only by toiling up that path, which is sometimes steep, can he win life's prizes.—Citizen, Culver, Ind.

"FREE NEWS"

When Clark McAdams, editor of the editorial page of the Post-Dispatch, talked to the National Editorial association at St. Louis last month about "free news," he wasn't talking about news without cost. He referred to news that was entirely free as regards suppression and as regards coloring. He said:

"Only one thing matters: that the people shall know the truth. If they know the truth they are capable of self-government. It is the theory on which democracy was founded. The press holds the fate of the republic in the hollow of its hand. It can, as it chooses, either make or unmake the republic. It can, as it chooses, either make or destroy itself.

"To win the confidence of the people and to serve them is the cue for the American press. If it will do that, the people will in turn breed the press. Not with their consent will its freedom ever be destroyed.

"What is happening in Washington in these stirring times is of the greatest possible importance to the people. They should know all about it. Yet it is not an exaggeration to say that we must depend to a great extent for Washington news on the syndicated columns which are read and edited through the prejudices of proprietors and news editors. We have a host of newspapers which are industriously coloring the news and so keeping the people from seeing clearly what is happening in truly historical epoch."—Star-News, Medford, Wis.

BILLION DOLLARS—MILLION JOBS

It is estimated that there is in this country $1,000,000,000 of idle capital which would normally be used in the mortgage market for residential building.

If, as is hoped, present efforts loosen these funds and bring building back near normal, close to a million men will find good jobs. They will have regular incomes, after years in which most of them have been finding the going extremely hard. They will have money to spend for necessities and luxuries—and that money will go through a thousand and one industries, buying materials and supplies and services, paying taxes and interest, creating more jobs and building up payrolls for all types of workers.

That is what construction revival will do for the country generally. In its individual application, so far as the property owner is concerned, it will likewise do this—boom building costs. They have been rising slowly but steadily since the low reached last summer. They are still far below normal. As a matter of fact, costs of most materials used in building have lagged behind the general commodity price advance. That means that the millions of citizens who have money with which to build and repair now, before this belated boom starts, can still get a whole lot more than a dollar's worth for every dollar spent. And that condition isn't going to last much longer, unless all present signs point the wrong way.

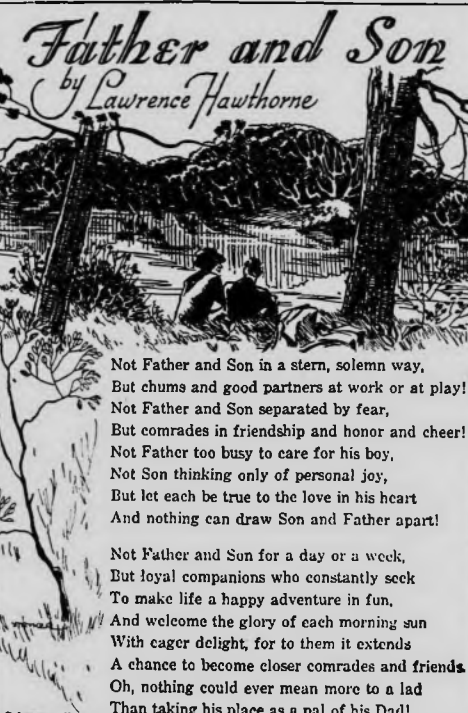

Build now, repair now, renovate now. That motto will aid you in doing your bit toward achieving recovery, and will put money in your pocket.—Enterprise, Berea, Ohio.

A MODERN PRAYER

Here's a modern thought upon the subject of prayer, taken from "The Man of the Hour," a sermon by Frank S. Beard, and appearing in the Christian Herald for August:

"Father in Heaven, give us for this sad hour, men of moral integrity! Give us men who will seek first the Kingdom of God, second the kingdom of man. Give us leaders who understand that religion is not a pastime but an art of life; of all life, every day. The time is gone when we can expect God to hear our prayers on Sunday when we are at bars and blatherers and thieves on Monday, when men can steal millions by unethical, un-Christian business methods and then attempt to bribe their way into heaven by building a church, college or a hospital. This generation will not stand for that. They are insisting, these younger Christians, that we practice in the office and in the world what we preach in the church. If Jesus is locked in the sanctuary and locked out of the office, then there is something wrong with the office, not with Jesus. Never mind Milton's heaven or Dante's hell beyond the grave; what are you doing to rid the earth of its man-made hell, here and now?"

Not Father and Son in a stern, solemn way,
 But chums and good partners at work or at play!
 Not Father and Son separated by fear,
 But comrades in friendship and honor and cheer!
 Not Father too busy to care for his boy,
 Not Son thinking only of personal joy,
 But let each be true to the love in his heart
 And nothing can draw Son and Father apart!

Not Father and Son for a day or a week,
 But loyal companions who constantly seek
 To make life a happy adventure in fun,
 And welcome the glory of each morning sun
 With eager delight, for to them it extends
 A chance to become closer comrades and friends.
 Oh, nothing could ever mean more to a lad
 Than taking his place as a pal of his Dad!

Rambling Around With Michigan Editors

NOW LET'S BE FRIENDS AGAIN

One of the most bitter political campaigns has come to a close. There are the victors and the vanquished. Both sides cannot win. There are those much elated over results, and there are others saddened by the bad news. But it means neither life nor death, so let's all be friends again and forget any unpleasantness that may have arisen during the hot and trying days of the battle just over with.

Two years ago the democrats were elated over the democratic landslide. Republicans were severed from their political positions, and probably democrats will be used likewise after the first of January. It's all in the game and is to be expected, and there is nothing to do about it, except to take events as they come. It's support the Santa Claus that supports the loafer that wouldn't work.—W. H. Berkey, Cassopolis, Michigan.

But anyway, let's all be friends again and resume our places in the family of Eaton Rapids citizens and live together in the friendliest of feeling.—Robert Gifford in The Eaton Rapids Journal.

HAPPINESS

IT PAYS

The kids' Halloween party given by Gaylord business men was a success, and not a window in town was marked up.—Paul McDonald in The Gaylord Times-Advertiser.

DON'T BUY

The gas tax is about the only tax you do not have to pay unless you want to.—Hiram Johnson in the Saranac Advertiser.

WORKLESS DAYS

A man who hired out to a local farmer living near Cassopolis last week for a job that required very little physical effort but assured him a good living and some money, quit at the end of the first day. He did not complain of his job, but said he had thought it all over that first day and inasmuch as he could get three square meals a day and a place to stay over at Niles without working he didn't see any good reason why he should work. Those Santa Claus stations the U. S. Government maintains at the expense of the taxpayers are encouraging just that sort of thing and the sooner they are dispensed with the better it will be. In this case the farmer was very very angry, and we think had a right to be. Naturally the farmer must pay taxes to support the Santa Claus that supports the loafer that wouldn't work.—W. H. Berkey, Cassopolis, Michigan.

SUPERFLUOUS WORDS

Last week we ran across a list of phrases which cause copy readers to mumble to themselves. We were interested in the list because we use so many of them ourselves. Read them over. There may be some expressions you'll find familiar.

Here are some of the phrases: Present incumbent, early pioneer, collie dog, canary bird, started to cough, new recruit, stepped into a waiting automobile, past experience, a fine future before him, tears flowed from her eyes.

They sound foolish, don't they? Certainly an incumbent is a present incumbent. We know a canary is a bird without adding "bird." A recruit means a new member. One could hardly step into a speeding automobile. An experience must be past. A fine future could not be behind a man. And where would we expect tears to have their source if not from the eyes?—Vernon Brown, Ingham County News.

The days are dull and dreary, typical of November. Already the trees are taking on their winter beauty of limbs stripped for battle with wind and storm, and there is that purple hue in the forests which means that summer has gone. November is not without its charm, there is Thanksgiving, no doubt snow will begin to whisk past our windows. Christmas seals hint of coming Yuletide, plans are rife for holiday and fun making. November is all right in its place and its place is here and now. Floyd McGiff in the Redford Record.

HOW BANKS Benefit You and Your Community

If this community did not have a bank you and your neighbors and fellow citizens would get together and organize one, because banking service is needed here.

It would be highly inconvenient, if not impossible, to transact the business of the community if actual currency had to change hands every time a sale was made.

Then, too, the community is surprisingly dependent upon the interchange of services and products with other communities. If there were no banks it would take so long to transact business that there would scarcely be any business.

You benefit directly and indirectly because there is a bank in your community.

Store Lighting INSTALLED?

How much chance would you have today if you were forced to sell merchandise ten years old while your competitors were selling up-to-the-minute styles? . . . You'd probably go out of business!

Yet many merchants are trying to sell goods under 10-year-old lighting that is woefully inadequate for present-day standards. You cannot display goods properly without good lighting . . . and poor lighting handicaps sales. Have you ever given any consideration to this important part of your business? How many years ago was your store lighting installed? The last five years have seen great forward steps in the art of lighting to increase sales. Is YOUR store lighting keeping pace with these changes?

Improving your lighting is not necessarily expensive. Often a few dollars will bring your lighting system up-to-date, and your increased sales will more than pay for the cost of alterations. Detroit Edison engineers will gladly check your lighting without charge or obligation, and submit recommendations. This is part of our service. Call any Detroit Edison office.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Adam and Fallen Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, November 11.

Among the Bible citations was this passage (Romans 8:1): "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

Correlative passages read from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, included the following (p. 249): "Let us feel the divine energy of Spirit, bringing us into newness of life and recognizing no mortal nor material power as able to destroy. Let us rejoice that we are subject to the divine powers that be. Such is the true Science of being."

Legion Members Are Most Active

In the opinion of Post members, the Myron H. Beal's Post No. 32 of the American Legion conducted its most interesting and successful week of activities in the history of the local Post last week.

The first big event was local observance of "Americanization Week" held in the Plymouth high school auditorium on Thursday, November 8th. The speaker was Dr. W. Swayer of New York City. He caught the attention of the assembled pupils immediately by asking them to correct this sentence: "There ain't any green apples in this basket." Dr. Swayer found plenty of pupils ready to correct him, but he still insisted that they were wrong, his point being that he did not want any green apples in his basket, nor any half ripe unbacked principles of government to be allowed to enter the minds of American boys and girls.

Dr. Swayer's comments were exceptionally well received by the pupils and the school authorities. The American Legion Armistice Day Dance held in the Legion Hall at Newburg Friday evening, November 9th was attended by a near capacity crowd. The feature of the evening was a "bottle" dance. For some reason the milk bottles appeared to be "red hot" none caring to hold on to one longer than absolutely necessary. The result was a mad scramble for partners which did more to get the large crowd well acquainted than an entire evening of introductions.

The regular Saturday night dance held in the Legion Hall was the best attended of any to date. A conservative estimate placed the crowd at around one hundred seventy-five young people.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ash and Walter were hosts to a number of friends at a shower honoring Ruth Waldo and Leo Pankow who will be married Saturday. The shower was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ash on Plymouth Road. Nearly 50 guests were in attendance.

Jap Newspaper Tells Of Red Cross Work

Cross Society may meet the requirements of the time and contribute to the welfare of mankind.

Along the outer walks of the Memorial Hall were canopies of red and white bunting, each small section being the headquarters of a district represented in the national Red Cross session. Within the memorial grounds also were erected numerous tents for various committees and the press. The impressiveness of the occasion and the great crowd brought active life into the serene landscape of the spacious gardens surrounding the staid and dignified Memorial Hall of Japanese architecture.

The sturdy wooden porte cochere over the entrance of the Memorial Hall was draped in purple cloth bearing the Imperial crest. On each side of the entrance stood officials of the Japanese Red Cross and women notables who were on the reception committee.

The officers of the Japan Red

Cross began to assemble at the memorial grounds at 8 o'clock, while foreign delegates to the Tokyo conference, who were present as special guests to witness the ceremonies, began to arrive from 9 o'clock and were assembled inside of the hall shortly after 9:30. Then followed such dignitaries as General Senjuro Hayashi, the War Minister, and Mr. Fumio Goto, the Home Minister. Preceding the arrival of the Empress came the Princesses of the Blood accompanied by their ladies-in-waiting.

The Empress arrived at the Constitution Memorial Hall shortly after 10 o'clock, a salute signaling her arrival. She was escorted over pure white carpets laid especially for the occasion into a special chamber of the hall, and was received by Prince Kanin and Prince Tokugawa. Annual report of the Japanese Red Cross for the year 1933 as well as the activities of the institution were read to the Empress by Prince Tokugawa, the President of the Japanese Red Cross.

After the foreign delegates, Prince Tokugawa and the three Cabinet Ministers had taken their places in the open pavilion, Prince Kanin entered. Prince Tokugawa then called the meeting to order and reported in a brief address the achievements and the activities of the national Red Cross for the year 1933.

At 10:45 o'clock after the convention business was concluded, the Empress appeared in the pavilion before the convention through, which cheered while the band played Kimigayo, and took her position on the white-carpeted dais. She was followed into the hall by six Princesses of the Blood. After the reading of the Imperial Message, it was received by Prince Kanin, who retraced his steps from the Empress and then returned to respond to the Message.

The meeting was then brought to a close for the day by Prince Tokugawa, and the Empress again with her retinue of Princesses, left the pavilion. The Empress was the first to leave, none else moving until the red limousine with the Imperial Crest had taken her back to the Imperial Palace.

Another copy of the Peiping Chronicle has been sent to The Mail office. It contains a list of visitors to the hotels in that city, which includes the names of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett. The delegates to the Red Cross convention have been given the opportunity by the governments of both Japan and China to visit at their expense many places of interest. The Bennetts are expected home within the next few weeks.

At 10:45 o'clock after the convention business was concluded, the Empress appeared in the pavilion before the convention through, which cheered while the band played Kimigayo, and took her position on the white-carpeted dais. She was followed into the hall by six Princesses of the Blood. After the reading of the Imperial Message, it was received by Prince Kanin, who retraced his steps from the Empress and then returned to respond to the Message.

The meeting was then brought to a close for the day by Prince Tokugawa, and the Empress again with her retinue of Princesses, left the pavilion. The Empress was the first to leave, none else moving until the red limousine with the Imperial Crest had taken her back to the Imperial Palace.

Another copy of the Peiping Chronicle has been sent to The Mail office. It contains a list of visitors to the hotels in that city, which includes the names of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett. The delegates to the Red Cross convention have been given the opportunity by the governments of both Japan and China to visit at their expense many places of interest. The Bennetts are expected home within the next few weeks.

After the foreign delegates, Prince Tokugawa and the three Cabinet Ministers had taken their places in the open pavilion, Prince Kanin entered. Prince Tokugawa then called the meeting to order and reported in a brief address the achievements and the activities of the national Red Cross for the year 1933.

PAY ENOUGH TO GET YOUR MONEY'S WORTH

THIS is the best advice anyone ever gave an automobile owner in the securing of insurance protection.

Insurance is intangible. It cannot be seen, nor tasted, nor felt, it is subject to misunderstanding, misinformation, and misrepresentation. An insurance policy is just a piece of paper only as good as the company and the men behind the company desire it to be.

Secure your insurance as an AAA member at this Exchange and you get good insurance—unquestionable insurance—at cost. You pay enough to get your money's worth—no more—no less. Paying more than this cost is poor business—paying less is risky business.

Phone the Automobile Club of Michigan for a representative to see you—call for safety's sake.
