Cost Of Event Paid For Out Of Pockets Of Members Of Post—Program Of Merriment

Over three hundred delicious Christmas dinners were served at the Christmas party given for children of Plymouth and Plymouth township by the Myron E. Beals Post of the American Legion last Friday evening in their Newburg home.

Following the dinner which had to be served in relays, Melvin Guthrie, Post Commander, introduced Mr. D. Bevan, an official of the Kelvinator Corporation, as master of ceremonies. The children responded to Mr. Bevan immediately as he led them in coming to the singing.

This was followed by a minstrel show presented by A. Collins, W. McClain, and W. Smith, members of the Post. Their black-faced antics brought howls of merriment from the children. Then a reading was enjoyed rendered by Miss Loretta Bringham. She also brought down the house.

Miss Shirley Galin and Miss Dorothy Wolf presented youngsters and grown-ups alike by Miss Galin's clever dancing, and Miss Wolf's gifted piano recital.

While waiting for the film to be installed for motion pictures, Mr. Bevan presented the youngsters pep it up again in song.

The motion pictures were another howling success. They were furnished through the courtesy of the Kelvinator Corp.

It was growing late. The crowd of children had been exceptionally well behaved throughout the evening, but they were growing restless. After all the most popular chap at any Christmas party had failed, or had he? No! There was a jingling of bells, a roar of sound, and when Santa Claus came rolling through the room, a shout of welcome went up from every corner. The lusty peeps of lungs that shook the very rafters.

Santa Claus, inspired by the presence of Raymond Grimm, first presented Commander Guthrie with a Christmas gift from his grateful comrades in the form of a list of recently signed new members. In expressing his deep appreciation, Mr. Guthrie extended his thanks to everyone who helped make the party a pleasant memory for months to come.

Santa Claus then presented every child there with a nice box of candy, and the party was declared over until next year.

"It would be hard indeed to tell Mr. Guthrie laughingly exclaimed, "who enjoyed the party most, the children or the adults. Seriously, I can assure you detected suspicious looking moisture in the eyes of more than one grown-up while these happy youngsters were singing "Jingle Bells" and "Silent Night."

According to Dave Galin, director of publicity for the Post, every cent of the money spent for the party was contributed by Legionaires.

Believe it or not—here is one that beats anything that Ripley ever had in his Believe it Or Not feature!
Cometh the other day Howard Shipley, 239 Fair street, one of the best known poultry fanciers in this part of Michigan, to The Plymouth Mail office with a hen's egg within a hen's egg!
The editor had to agree that he had seen many, many strange things, that he had even seen Ripley's big show over at the Century of Progress, but there was nothing in the whole array to equal the unusual thing that Mr. Shipley had found in a hen's nest that morning.

There it was, a perfectly formed hard-shelled hen's egg within another soft shell. The yolk could plainly be seen outside the other hard shelled egg, but within the soft shelled enclosure.

"I have poked up many odd looking eggs in all the years I have raised poultry, but this is the first time that I have ever found anything like this," declared Mr. Shipley.

He has had the egg on display for several days and dozens and dozens who have seen it, say that they have never heard of such a thing—and Mr. Ripley will have to go some in order to equal it.

Blizzard Hits This Locality—Delays Traffic

Heaviest Snow And The Coldest Weather Of Winter Prevails

Sweeping out of the northwest with all the fury of a mid-January blizzard, the winter's severest snow storm broke over Plymouth early Wednesday morning. A heavy snowfall driven by a stiff wind, quickly drifted and made some roads almost impassible. It was the morning after Christmas and fortunately traffic was not heavy on most thoroughfares as Christmas day visitors had in most cases returned home on the evening preceding the storm.

Already this part of Michigan has had plenty of winter. There has been considerable snow fall up to the present time then there was a year ago. In fact little snow fell last year until late in the winter, although there was plenty of ice and sleet.

The stalwart men of Plymouth seemed to be the only happy ones—it was early in the morning after the storm broke when phones began to jingle in the coal offices. The severe weather having made a greater demand on the coal piles than had been anticipated.

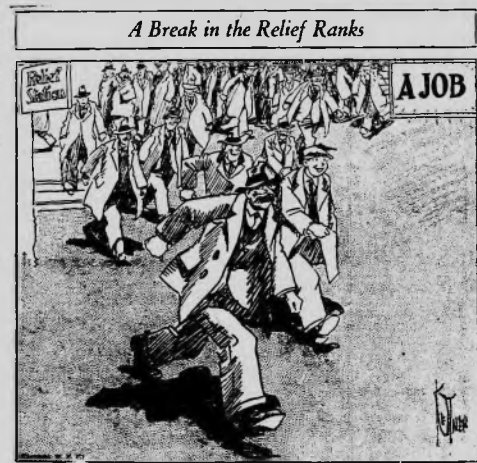

The weather man declared that the storm which followed so quickly on the heels of Christmas originated in the Canadian Rockies where below zero weather, high winds and heavy snow has prevailed for a number of days. Some Minnesota and Dakota cities reported temperatures 10 to 20 below zero. Such colder weather is predicted for Plymouth and vicinity.

Children Present A Christmas Play To Delight Of Parents

On December 19th the Central Grade School presented the play, "In Old Nuremberg" before a highly enthusiastic audience composed of members of the PTA and friends. The setting for the play was in a Nuremberg toy shop, the center of attraction being the large shop window at the base of the stage.

The members of the cast displayed a surprising amount of talent. The play was written and directed by Elizabeth DeWaele with the assistance of Wanita Franz, Marguerite Henry, furnished the music.

Wild & Co. Win First Honors In Store Contest

Christmas Decorations Are Lauded By The Committee

To Wild & Co., Plymouth's new men's furnishings store, was awarded the special Plymouth Chamber of Commerce trophy for the most attractive window and store front decorations during the Christmas holiday season.

The committee, composed of Mayor George Robinson, Supt. George Smith and Miss Alice Safford, had no easy task in selecting the winner as several who entered the contest had almost as equally as attractive windows as the Wild & Co. store.

Manager Carl Caplan of the store and his assistants were delighted when Secretary Berg Moore of the Chamber of Commerce took to them the special trophy that they had won by providing the city with the best Christmas decorations of any business place in Plymouth.

Other contenders for first honors were Blunk Bros., and the Wilson hardware. Special mention of the Dodge Drug store, the Plymouth United Savings bank and the Mayflower hotel was made by the committee of judges.

The decision of the judges has met with general approval among the business men who took part in the contest as well as those who offered the trophy. The sponsors of the plan declare that this year is just a starter and that next year will have a general Christmas decoration plan that will rival anything ever attempted here.

Cheerbringers Appreciate Aid Given Efforts

Excellent Results Of Paper Sale Provides Food For Many

The Cheerbringers Paper Sale in spite of the inclement weather which undoubtedly kept many contributors housebound was a success according to the report of the Cheerbringers secretary. The Mail received the following letter from the committee secretary, Editor, Plymouth Mail:

"We have been directed by the chairman of the Cheerbringers Committee and the Commanding Officer of the Ex-Service Men's club to thank The Plymouth Mail personally for their interest in and their whole hearted support of the Cheerbringers Paper Sale recently conducted. The splendid financial aid of the citizens of Plymouth made it possible for the Cheerbringers to collect over $165.00 from the sale and consequently to aid materially the Central Welfare Committee made up of the contributors and workers from the Salvation Army, the Plymouth Branch of the American Red Cross, the Ladies Auxiliary of the Presbyterian church, the Business and Professional Women's club, the Lutheran Ladies' Aid Society, the Women's Club of Plymouth, the League of Women voters and the Ex-Service Men's Club Ladies' Auxiliary, who on Christmas Eve prepared and distributed over 140 bags of food, nuts, candies, cookies and articles of clothing to the needy of Plymouth.

In addition to this, the committee has been directed to thank to the children of these families, this portion of the undertaking being the chief object of the Ex-Service Men's club in conducting the Cheerbringers paper sale.

We believe that no child in Plymouth was overlooked by Santa on Christmas day and the Ex-Service men and the Cheerbringers committee are indeed thankful to the citizens of Plymouth for their most generous and whole-hearted support.

Added impetus was given to Federal Housing Administration activities in Plymouth by Mayor George H. "While the general factors which at this time prohibit me from making any definite promises or official statements," said Mayor Robinson, "I am of the opinion that home owners should fear no rise in their property valuation following improvements which they might undertake by the terms of the Federal Housing Act."

Phoenix Road Is Now Open Under Railroad Bridge

Dangerous Traffic Hazard On Northville Road Is Removed

Traffic under the new Phoenix road which had been planned for early in the new year, came several weeks ahead of schedule. While the turn onto the Five mile road at the north side of the excavation has not yet been finished, there is but a slight amount of work remaining to be done when weather conditions are more favorable before this connecting link will be opened.

The opening of this new traffic subway does away with one of the most dangerous grade crossings in Wayne county. It not only abolishes a dangerous spot, but it ends for all time a crossing where traffic delays have at times been most annoying. Switching of long freights have frequently delayed automobile travel from 10 to 15 and occasionally as long as 20 minutes.

In working out the plans for the improved county engineers relocated the new road so that for several hundreds of feet it skirts alongside of Phoenix lake. Because of the big fill that was necessary at this point, the roadway has only been graded for winter travel, and the concrete top will not be laid until spring.

With the Plymouth road open to the east and the Northville road open to the north, there are no longer any detours necessary out of Plymouth.

Consumers Company Workers, Families Have Christmas Party

Sixty-eight mothers, fathers and children, all members of the Consumers company family of Plymouth, last Thursday evening enjoyed a Christmas dinner and party at the offices of the company on South Main street. The big turkey dinner, with all the trimmings that a turkey dinner should have, started the entertainment of the evening. Manager L. J. Price presiding just as naturally as any "father" of 68 or more might do the job.

Old Santa came to the office and presented each child with a suitable gift as well as fruit and candy. Following the presentation of gifts a number remained until late in the evening enjoying games of five hundred.

The Ladies' Aid of the Lutheran church will meet Wednesday afternoon at the church at 2:30, and at 6 o'clock there will be a co-operative supper.

BUSINESS IS BETTER—Any Plymouth business man will tell you that today. Not only will they tell you that, but most of them will declare that they have just enjoyed the best holiday trade in many years. From one store to the other went the inquiring reporter from The Mail, and in each place it was the same answer, good business, in fact the best business in years, they all said.

"Why we haven't anything left to sell except our staple articles," declared several. "Everything we bought for our Christmas trade has been sold," was the general response. No wonder the Plymouth merchants look to the New Year with so much faith and confidence that 1935 is going to be the best year of all.

Right along in connection with the excellent business Plymouth merchants did this year comes also the interesting fact that the ONLY holiday advertising they did was through The Plymouth Mail. Never before as far back as many of the merchants could remember, had there ever been a Christmas holiday season but what many of the merchants had used circulars and handbills in an effort to bolster up business. But this year NOT ONE merchant was forced to resort to this form of advertising. They secured results through Plymouth Mail advertising and they do not hesitate to say so. And through The Plymouth Mail they extend to every one in Plymouth and surrounding country, their best wishes for a happy and profitable New Year as well as their appreciation for the excellent patronage extended them during the Christmas trading season.

President Bennett thanked the employees for their loyal cooperation that had helped to make the year successful, and at the conclusion announced what proved to be a most surprising fact—the employees in shape of an employees' dividend, representing a percentage of the salary of each employee. The distribution of these checks proved to be a very happy ending to a successful party, and if the faces of the employees when they left the theatre was any indication of their feelings, they will certainly enjoy a Merry Christmas.

The other members of the staff, headed by James Ludwig, Albion editor-in-chief, and Glover Hollister, Chicago, and Ray Becker, Wyandotte, associate editors, are: Virginia Nickerson, Charlevoix, dormitory editor; Margaret Parsons, Albion, sports editor; Ruth Atkin, Petoskey, club editor; Ruby Shelly, Sports Lake, debate and oratory editor; Dorothy Huffman, Albion, women's athletic editor; Floyd Yinger, Three Rivers, religious activities editor; David Starr, Albion, features and humor editor; Jeff Ayers, Pontiac, snapshot editor; Wendell Cole, Albion, cartoonist; and Robert Tuttle, South Lyon, and Virgil Sice, Coldwater, snapshot photographers, and Altha Rowell, Yale, copy editor.

The privilege given the executive committee chosen to take care of the Christmas activities of the Plymouth general welfare committee, has completed its work and did it well. It was the policy of the committee to bring some proof of Christmas to all the families who through misfortune and no fault of their own found this sense of community charity most acceptable. So a basket was sent to all those whose names appeared on revised available lists and to those who had not been turned in to the committee by individuals, with the thought in mind that it was better to express generosity rather than to overlook anyone in need.

The work was centralized at the city hall and this centralization proved to be a great help toward the intelligent collection, grouping, sorting packing and distribution of the many articles given.

In all 150 families were given Christmas baskets and 250 children were provided with gifts. The committee wishes to thank all those who accepted the opportunity to help in anyway, the various churches, clubs, and other groups that aided in this splendid work.

WARNING!
Chief of Police Vaughn R. Smith issued a warning today to Plymouth motorists to avoid parking near or in front of drive ways or fire hydrants in the city limits.

Because of numerous complaints drive ways being blocked and cars being parked directly in front of hydrants, especially those near the post office it has become necessary for me to order tickets for all cars thus breaking the parking rules."

Father Killed In Accidental Gun Discharge
Son Grief Stricken Over Affair Which Cost Life Of His Parent

"See, Papa, I know how to use this gun."
There was a loud report of a discharging shotgun.
Clarence E. Heller, 37 years of age fell dead.
His 13 year old son, Clarence, who wanted to take the shotgun and go hunting but who the father thought too young to handle firearms, had pulled the trigger by accident as he sought to show his father that he knew how to eject a shell.

The frightful tragedy happened Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Heller, 915 Brush street.
The young son had taken the shotgun down from its usual place where the father kept it for safe keeping. He wanted to go out and see if he could not shoot a rabbit, but the father thought the boy's little too young to handle the gun.
Thinking possibly his father might consent to let him use it, if he could show him that he knew how to take a shell out, the boy started to turn the release of the barrel. As he did so, one finger pulled the trigger.
The entire charge entered the father's side, severing the artery at the heart. He fell to the floor and died instantly.
Mrs. Heller summoned neighbors, but there was nothing that could be done. Chief of Police Vaughn Smith was called in to secure the facts in the case. He (Continued on page seven)

Daisy Company's Annual Party Is Happiest Of All

Penniman-Allen Theatre Packed With Workers And Their Families

Dividend Check For Each Employee Came As The Biggest Surprise Of All—Predict Good Year

Hundreds of enthusiastic employees packed the Penniman-Allen Theatre to capacity on Friday afternoon. Following the custom that has prevailed for many years past, the management of the Daisy Manufacturing Company invited all of their employees to attend a Christmas theatre party at Penniman-Allen Theatre. Each employee was permitted to invite one guest and it certainly taxed the capacity of the theatre to hold the crowd.

After the picture show Charles H. Bennett, president of the company, in his usual happy manner told the assembled multitude that the company had enjoyed an unusually successful year, and this had permitted the company to employ a larger number of people throughout the entire year than they had ever done before.

The operation of the Toy Code had to some extent been the reason for the extra employment furnished on account of the change of operation being shortened and thus dividing the work among a greater number of employees. In addition to that, the success of the merchandising plans adopted during the year, coupled with the fact that selling prices of their entire line had been reduced to the lowest point in the history of the business, had brought their various toys within the reach of a greater number of people. The Buck Jones Air Rifle and the Buck Rogers Rocket Pistol have made thousands of both boys and girls happy during the year, and the Company hopes to extend their operations during the coming year.

President Bennett thanked the employees for their loyal cooperation that had helped to make the year successful, and at the conclusion announced what proved to be a most surprising fact—the employees in shape of an employees' dividend, representing a percentage of the salary of each employee. The distribution of these checks proved to be a very happy ending to a successful party, and if the faces of the employees when they left the theatre was any indication of their feelings, they will certainly enjoy a Merry Christmas.

COOL WEATHER IDEAS

NOW that chill winds blow and children's parties must be given, especially on birthdays, a candy pull will be a delightful thing to give if there is enough room for the children to move about and enjoy it. Here is one of the good candies that may be pulled:

Velvet Molasses Candy. Put one cupful of molasses, three cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of boiling water and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar to a saucepan over the heat. As soon as the boiling point is reached, add one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Boil until when tried in cold water the mixture will become brittle. Stir constantly during the last of the cooking. When nearly done, add one-half cupful of melted butter and one-fourth tea spoonful of soda, pour out, and when cold, pull. Flavor to taste.

Party Cheese Salad. Take two packages of cream cheese, roll into small balls, making twelve. Toast—no tint any color desired. Arrange in nests of lettuce and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Apple Sauce Pudding. Season one cupful of apple sauce with cinnamon or nutmeg, divide it among six dessert glasses. Prepare a junket tablet with a pint of lukewarm milk, three tablespoonfuls of sugar (dissolve the tablet in a table spoonful of water), flavoring the junket mixture with a few drops of almond. Pour over the apple sauce and let stand to become firm in a warm room. Chill and serve.

Buttercup. Those of us who have crunched the creamy buttercup will never forget their deliciousness. Shall we make a few at home?

Roll two cupfuls of molasses with one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of boiling water, two table spoonfuls of butter, one-third of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, not stirring until the last few minutes of the cooking. When a firm ball is made when a drop is placed in cold water pour out, cool and pull. Make a long roll of fondant, cover with buttercup mixture, pull in a long strip and cut into small pieces with shears.

Guild Appeals For Clothing

Keep on helping the Needlework Guild with your money. garments and warm bedding—the coldest part of the winter is still ahead. If you have any wearing apparel or bedding that you can spare, and that is clean and in fair condition, please phone Mrs. Beyer, Mrs. Burrows, or Mrs. Chapman and your donation will be called for promptly and passed on to local people who are in need of it.

Many members of this community who would be glad to belong to the Guild and give two new garments a year for the use of some needy person, have probably never been asked to join. With so many little groups working together to build up an organization it is inevitable that many will be asked several times, and many will not be reached at all. It is the aim of the local Guild to enroll every citizen of Plymouth who would like to help, and who is willing to give just two new garments each year. PETER GOSSIPS WITH HONKER

PETER RABBIT could hardly wait for the coming of the Black Shadows, and just as soon as they had crept out over the Green Meadows he started for the Big River. He knew just where to go. He knew that Honker and his friends would remain out in the middle of the Big River until the black Shadows had made it quite safe for them to swim in. He reached the bank of the Big River just as sweet Mistress Moon was beginning to throw

"Hello, Peter," said he. "It is good to have an old friend greet me."

her silvery light over the Great World. At this point there was a sandy bar in the Big River and right where this sandy bar started out from the bank, Peter squatted. It seemed to him that he had sat there half the night, but really it was only a short time, before he heard the low signal out in the Black Shadows which covered the middle of the Big River. It was the voice of Honker. Then Peter saw little silvery lines moving on the water, and presently a dozen great shapes appeared in the moonlight. Slowly they drew near, Honker in the lead. They were a picture of perfect caution.

When they reached the sandy bar they remained quiet for some time, looking and listening. Then, sure that all was safe, Honker gave a low signal, and at once a low, contented gabbling began as the birds relaxed their watchfulness and came out on the sandy bar.

"Oh, Honker!" cried Peter. "I'm so glad you're back here safe and sound."

Honker gave a little start, but, instantly recognizing Peter, came close to him. As he stood there in the moonlight he was truly handsome. His throat and a large patch on each side of his head were white. The remainder of his head and his long slim neck were black. His short tail was also black. His back, wings, breast, and sides were a soft grayish brown. He was white around the base of his tail, and he also wore a white collar.

"Hello, Peter," said he. "It is good to have an old friend greet me. I certainly am glad to be back safe and sound, for the hunters with terrible guns have been at almost every one of our resting places, and it is hard work to get enough to eat."

"Have you come far?" asked Peter.

"Very far, Peter, very far," replied Honker. "And we still have far to go."

"Will winter soon be here?" Peter asked eagerly.

"It is only a little way behind us," replied Honker. "We shall have to hurry lest it catch us, and that would never do."

THE PEACE OF RIGHTOUSNESS

There can be no nobler cause for which to work than the peace of righteousness; and high honor is due those serene and lofty souls who with wisdom and courage, with high idealism tempered by sane facing of the actual facts of life, have striven to bring nearer the day when armed strife between nation and nation, between class and class, between man and man shall end throughout the world.—Theodore Roosevelt.

THE OLD YEAR—THE NEW

The old year will within a few brief days become another year added to the many that have gone to make up the centuries since the beginning of time. All we can say to it is good-bye. It has been but a brief while seemingly since we first met, all too brief. In the short span of time since last New Year's day, we all have experienced some joy, some sorrow, some accomplishments and many disappointments. Time has carried the year into the past—and it becomes a mere speck recorded in eternity—just another year, that is all. How important it has been to you and to me does not in any way change the importance of the past twelve months in the march of time.

Every one, except the very young, hate to record the passing of another year. It brings one just that much nearer to the earthly end of all things. Time seemingly is flying all too fast for the most of us and as we reflect back over the year we cannot help but think how there have been many hours that could have been spent for better things, many hours that could have been turned to a little more happiness for ourselves and others. But it is all too late to reflect on these things. We have our regrets and our sorrows. We can rejoice over the good things we have done. For our shortcomings all we can do is ask the world to forgive and forget.

With the coming of the New Year there is born a new opportunity and a new hope. What will it be to us? Just exactly what we make it—just as last year might have been a happier and more profitable one if we had worked constantly to make it so. Really there is nothing mysterious about life. As a matter of fact it isn't how long we live—but how well we live during the time that we are here.

Making new resolutions is nothing—but it is something in the way we keep those New Year's resolutions. Some one has said that it is not one drop of water that makes the ocean and its majesty, but millions and millions of drops combined that go to make the ocean. So it is with each one of us—it is the little things we do day after day that bring joy to our hearts and joy to our friends and associates.

May each reader of The Plymouth Mail accept our well wishes for the New Year and may each one of us do the millions and millions of just little things that can bring so much delight and so much pleasure to those round about us. We know if we do, that there will be joy untold in store for ourselves, our friends and our neighbors.

THE RECOUNT

Well the recount of votes cast for two high state officials that the state legislature was supposed to have ordered, didn't amount to much. No one expected it would. Republicans are blaming the Democrats and Democrats are blaming the Republicans. And that is not at all surprising.

Orville Atwood was elected secretary of state by over 10,000 votes. Harry Toy was elected attorney general by something like 60,000 votes. There is not much question in the minds of the average citizen but what these totals are correct. A recount might show up a variation of a few dozen votes, one way or the other. But as all election boards were made up of both Democrats and Republicans, an HONEST recount probably would not have shown a difference of 25 or more votes.

Of course for Elmer O'Hara, the Democratic chief, Patrick O'Brien or any of the other Democrats involved in the recount effort, to deny the fact that they wanted the recount so they could count the Republicans out, would be silly. No one would believe any such statement. They simply wanted control of the ballot boxes and the tally sheets so that they and not the voters could decide who should hold office in Michigan. There is no disputing the fact as to the intent or as to the method they desired to employ to accomplish their purpose.

There is not much question either, but what these Democrats turned back the pages of Michigan election history and noted carefully how Alex J. Grosbeck who had won the Republican nomination some four or five years ago over Wilbur M. Brucker by more than 10,000 votes was counted out in a recount by a state election board that at the time was controlled by former Governor Grosbeck's enemies. The Democrats figured probably that if the Republicans could count out a candidate who had won by over 10,000 votes in a primary election, that they could just as easily count out a couple of Republicans who had won by majorities of 10,000 to 60,000. The only difference in the situation lies within the fact that the Republican recount was against one of their own party and the Democratic recount to "recount" was against the successful candidates of an opposing party.

It is needless to review the calamity and shame that came to Michigan and the Republican party as the result of what the Republicans did to their successful candidate in the 1930 primary election. We are glad that a similar attempted coup by the Democrats failed. Its success would have brought disgrace to the state and discredit to the party that tried to win these two offices illegally. It is pleasing to note that many high in the ranks of the Democratic party have been free to express their condemnation of the thing that a few accidental political upstarts attempted. Judge Arthur Lacy is to be commended for his hands-off attitude in the matter. It places him far and beyond the class of those that took an active part in the scheme.

GOOD LUCK AND GOOD WISHES

Within a few brief days, just plain, ordinary Frank D. Fitzgerald, one of the every-day sort of individuals who has worked like a Trojan all of his life, who has played fair with his neighbors and friends, who has been honest and decent and who during nearly a quarter of a century of public service has typified the kind of public service people desire, will become governor of Michigan. He will assume the highest executive position within the state. He will have control over the affairs of more people than any other man in this commonwealth.

He assumes these responsibilities under a none too favorable a condition. Snapping at his heels already is the disgruntled, self-promoting auditor general who would trip up his best friend in order to gain a point for himself. He is the same auditor general who waylaid and annoyed the man who made it possible for him to be in the position he now occupies, the retiring Governor. Mr. Fitzgerald will have in the legislature a number of men who regard the spoils system as the only system whereby a great state should be operated. He will have lobbyists to contend with, self-starters and self-seekers.

On the other hand he will have to work with hum many men, both Democrats and Republicans, who possess high ideals and who have but one purpose in view, and that is to honestly and faithfully serve the electorate of the state. We are Fitzgerald is not assuming the governorship under the favorable conditions that did Governor William Comstock two years ago. At the time Mr. Comstock had not only the good wishes and support of the people of Michigan, but the legislature as well. He had complete control of the Lansing official family—and within a brief few weeks there was snarling and havoc reigned. It has continued for two long years. Possibly it will be to Mr. Fitzgerald's advantage to assume office with several selfish self-starters doing all they can to annoy him and defeat his high purposes.

We have but one wish—not only for the good of the new governor, but all of Michigan—that his administration is an outstanding success. We know that he has the ability and the brains and we predict for him the continued success he is entitled to.

the town of Fremont, with a few hundred inhabitants, furnished two state officials, Orville T. Atwood, secretary of state, and Theodore I. Fry, state treasurer, and the people stood for it.—Bob Gifford in The Eaton Rapids Review.

SOMETHING NOT TO BE PROUD OF
The writer is in receipt of his annual beautiful Christmas Greetings card from R. Irving L. Overly, lifer and political prisoner, who has served 45 years behind Jackson prison walls for the alleged murder of his mother. The horizon now appears to be clearing for Mr. Latimer, who is always maintained he is innocent. Gov.-elect Fitzgerald has indicated he contemplates pardoning him, soon after assuming office on January 2, which would meet with favor by everyone familiar with the case.—Phas. Seed in The Rochester Clarion.

With the object-lesson of three men just sent up from this county for shop-lifting, the boys who are graduating from the slot machine to pilfering articles from the stores of this village have something to meditate about—and so have their parents.—Emerson Gildart in The Utica Sentinel.

AND NOW THEY COMPLAIN
Now our government is complaining because banks are not more generous and free with their loaning. They have been urged by the chief executive to be more lenient, as "it is necessary" in the program of recovery. That would make one smile, if it were not so serious. The bankers have been held up to public scorn and have been laden with heavy assessments, because they were lenient in their lending. Every effort was made to make the banker look ridiculous and like a crook. Now, that he is found to be so necessary to business, they are trying to make him do what he did before the depression, and for which he has been properly punished by the authorities of this administration.—Frank Bryce in The Grand Lodge Independent.

Garden City Bank

Paying Depositors

Payoff checks totaling approximately $28,000 will be ready for the depositors of the Garden City State Bank at 2:30 Saturday afternoon, it was announced today by Claire A. English, receiver. The amount represents 80 per cent on savings accounts and 40 per cent on commercial accounts. The checks will be distributed from the bank at Ford and Middle Belt Road as a convenience thus saving the depositors the trip to the Dearborn State Corporation in Dearborn. Mr. English said. Since the closing of the bank last June every effort has been made by Mr. English to effect as large a payoff as possible on the total liability to depositors which is $48,708. He also stated that the prospects for 100 per cent payment on all accounts are quite bright.—Dearborn Press.

Michigan Is Indian Word For Land Of Lakes

In the belief of some authorities the name "Michigan" is derived from "mich-sang-ye-gan" of the Ojibwa language, according to the Department of Conservation. "Mich-sang-ye-gan" means Lands of Lakes. There are more than five thousand inland lakes in the state and the waters of four inland seas wash its shorelines.

A WORD ABOUT SAVINGS INTEREST

The recent joint order of the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, requiring all member banks throughout the country temporarily to reduce the rate of interest paid on savings deposits, is a part of the new safe banking policies now being insisted upon.

Under present conditions banks cannot earn 3% on savings deposits; therefore, banks cannot afford to continue to pay 3%, or any rate that is not actually earned.

To the average depositor the difference between 3% and 2% amounts to only a few cents in six months, but it is a small price to pay for absolute safety for his deposits.

BACK TO THE INDIANS
Wolves have been reported roaming among the farms near Milford and a wild deer has been seen near Holly. It is declared by the wise, who understand all these things, that people are abandoning the farm and the small town and trekking to the cities or to Florida. The Perfect Foot

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I am engaged to a young lady and we wanted to get married next July. My employer is an old grouch, and I'm afraid to ask him to give me a week off so I can get married. What shall I do?
Truly yours,
BENNY DICK.

Answer: Go to your boss and tell him you want a week off, but tell him you want that week away from work so you can get married; then he won't think you want it just for a vacation or to have some fun.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
My husband works as a night watchman, so I am home alone and without protection. Last Wednesday a tramp came to my door and to get rid of him I gave him a whole pie I had baked myself. Friday night he showed up again. What do you make of that?
Truly yours,
IMA FRADE.

Answer: Very simple. He probably did not eat the pie.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I read the lives of five of the richest men in the world, and if what I read is true, they all started life as unfortunates boys. Do you believe that?
Yours truly,
IKE ANTREIHEVEIT.

Answer: Sure, it's true. In fact no one is born with shoes on.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
Why is it that traveling salesmen never want to take an upper berth when they're traveling on a train?
Truly yours,
L. M. A. SALTSELLER.

Answer: Very simple. If they did that, they would have to get up before they went to bed.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I hear five policemen had a criminal cornered at a railroad station. Yet he escaped. How did he do it?
Yours truly,
D. TECTIVE.

Answer: He probably jumped on a scale and got a "weighth".

Rotary Guests

President Lynn Felton and members of the Rotary club brought happiness supreme to thirty boys and girls last Friday at the annual Christmas party of the Rotarians. Each year it has been customary for the Plymouth Rotarians to invite as guests of the club some 25 boys and girls to attend the meeting held the week previous to Christmas.

In keeping with this splendid practice, the club members brought to last Friday's meeting a number of boys and girls from homes where old Santa might not be as generous as he is in most places. Following the serving of a delicious dinner old Santa saw to it that there were presents galore for the youthful guests. Candy and fruit for each one, as well as some useful articles, were provided the boys and girls.

It was indeed a happy meeting, one that the Rotarians enjoyed just as much as did the little folks.

Dog Hears Sentence
Of Death, Disappears

Chief Vaughn Smith went out to the dog pound the other morning back of the city hall to look over the collection of canines that were there waiting official action of some kind.

Expecting to find several, he found but one.

"Well, I guess he will have to face the firing squad tomorrow morning. But its too bad. He's a sort of bright looking dog and should not be killed," said the chief as he stood gazing at the canine.

The dog blinked back sort of sorrowful like, says the chief, seemingly understanding what the chief had said.

It turned around, with its tail between its legs and laid down in a corner.

The fateful day then arrived.

of Northville, and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Wood and grandson Kenneth of Northville.

Mrs. George Hallam has returned from the University of Michigan hospital where she has just undergone a second severe operation. She is greatly improved in health and is especially appreciative of the many kind remembrances sent her by her many Plymouth and Newburg friends during the time she was in the hospital.

People who blaze in diamonds seldom set the world on fire.

Out went the chief with his big "gat" to add another notch in the long row that marks the end of numerous canine lives. He opened the door into the dog pound and called for Fido— but there was no Fido. The chief looked in all the corners and nooks, but there was no dog anywhere. A complete investigation into the mystery showed that no sooner had the chief turned back on the dog after having pronounced sentence upon it, than he hurled the fence and disappeared eastward, to live for a while longer.

New Pontiac Here Saturday

A new low-priced Six now joins an improved Eight to form the nineteen-model line of cars presently being produced by the Pontiac Motor Company for 1935. Closely approaching the lowest price field for the first time, Pontiac's two new cars should reap an increase of the total of the industry's business. The new Six will be available in both Standard and Deluxe models.

The wheelbase of the Six is 112 inches as compared with 117 inches for the Eight. In appearance, it duplicates closely the modern streamlining of the Eight.

Five distinctive body styles are offered on the Standard Six, ranging in price from $615 to $745. The models with bodies by Fisher, include: 2-door and 4-door sedans; 2-door and 4-door touring sedans (with built-in trunks) and standard coupe.

Both Pontiac chassis have ample power for the modern mode of high-speed travel. The six-cylinder engines develop 81 horsepower at 65 miles an hour, while the Straight Eight delivers 84 horsepower at 70 miles an hour.

A comparison of the Straight Eight with that of last year, reveals many improvements and refinements that also are included in the new Six.

Briefly, they are: a marked change in appearance; new Fisher solid-steel "Turret-Top" bodies, built-in luggage space; concealed spare tires; "V" type windshield; greater width in both front and rear seats; divided a folding back front seat in 2-door sedans; new instrument panel; package shelf in all models; new lamps, hydraulic brakes with double and triple sealed drums; new action clutch; automatic choke in the Eight; air coil generator with voltage regulator; interchangeable main and connecting rod bearings; silver alloy connecting rod bearings; steel spoked wheels; increased steering gear ratio; (except on Standard six) mounted on rigid tubular cross member; and new radiator and hood grilles.

New features are intended to enhance the economical performance, durability, dependability, speed and riding qualities of the 1935 line. They emphasize the almost unbelievable values of the motor car of 1935.

First glance reveals a marked development in the art of scientific tear-drop streamlining. Streamlining of radiator, hood, lamps, fenders and Fisher solid-steel bodies, has produced an ensemble of clean, flowing lines, with an absence of bumps or projections. Although stylish, it does not cross the borderline of "smart taste."

Outward grace and character are strengthened by the unique manner in which the designers have handled the radiator and hood grille work to give an effect of fitness without awkwardness or misplaced emphasis. The vertical lines of the radiator grilles astonishingly create the impression of narrow sleekness. A further softening of the entire appearance ensemble is brought about by almost eliminating the gap between the front fenders and the hood.

Fisher "Turret-Top" Bodies

From the standpoint of appearance as well as construction, the solid steel Fisher body, used for the first time by Pontiac in 1935, is the major feature of the new Pontiac. It is claimed that Fisher solid steel bodies are superior in the distribution of the steel in the interest of greater safety, as well as the satisfying style, comfort, room and convenience that accompany superior safety.

Top fabric over wood-bows and slats, or wood-bows and chicken-wire, have been superseded by solid steel roof. The steel roof rests on a foundation of steel bows, welded to the steel body panels. Windshields are the "V" windstream type introduced for the first time into the low price field.

Appropriately borrowing a term from the naval architect, this body is called the "Turret-Top." With a hint of ruggedness and dependability, when viewed from the front or rear, it distinctly approaches the design of a torpedo. One of the most finished bits of artistry in the slight taper of the body and rear fenders.

Pontiac engineers say the new bodies are quiet and that in test runs last summer, when the weather was above 100 degrees, the temperature inside the solid steel bodies registered below that in the conventional slat-roof type. Owners of 1935 Pontiac Sixes and Straight Eights will have a choice of seven colors with mouldings, striping and wheels finished to harmonize. Interiors of both Sixes and Eights reveal an all around increase in inside body dimensions and consequently roominess, for which the solid steel body is largely responsible.

The front seat in the 4-door model on both '6 and '8 and in the 2-door on the 2 will accommodate three passengers without crowding.

Two-door sedans on the six cylinder chassis are equipped with bucket front seats, while in the Straight Eight, a full width front seat with a divided back is provided. Both halves of the back are hinged at the lower edges and may be pushed forward to permit easy entrance to the rear seat. Door width in 4-door models have been increased from 42 1/2 to 46 1/2 in., while in the 4-door models, the increase is from 35 to 36 in.

Pontiac and Fisher engineers have introduced another important innovation in the built-in enclosure for spare tire and luggage. Those requiring more luggage space will find it in the 2-door and 4-door touring sedans, with built-in trunks extending beyond the back panel. Coupe seats split and fold forward to reach the luggage compartment. Another appointment which should be appreciated is the package shelf just back of the rear seat of the 2-door and 4-door models.

With all deluxe six and improved eight models except the convertible coupe, two choices of upholstery material and pattern are offered, from excellent grades of mohair, broadcloth and flat finish woolcloth. Genuine leather is used in the seat cushions and back of the convertible coupe.

Interior appointments include arm rests in both front (not standard six) and rear seats with ash receivers built into the rear arm rests of all deluxe six and eight four and five passenger models. All 2-door models are equipped with one assist strap with coat hanger retainers, while 4-door models have two assist straps on 8 only. Assist cords are omitted from the standard six models. All hardware is streamlined and chrome plated, and provided with molded plastic knobs.

The instrument panel is grain-oriented walnut finish, of attractive design with four gauges conveniently grouped around the rim of a large dial which contains the speedometer and is directly in front of the driver. Instruments are provided with radio dial type of lighting. On the right of the instrument panel is a convenient locker for gloves.

Gasoline economies of from 15 to 17 miles per gallon of gasoline for the Eight and 17 to 19 miles to the gallon for the Six are claimed. The six cylinder engine has a 3-3/8 in. bore and 3-7/8 in. stroke with a 208 cubic inch displacement, while the Eight has 3-3/16 in. bore and 4-1/2 in. stroke with 223 cubic in. displacement. The official horsepower rating for license purposes are 27 for the 6 and 32.6 for the 8.

Timely Hints

By HELEN M. SMELTZER

"EFFICIENCY! That's what you women need to learn!" Ben Gardner paced up and down, around little heaps of things not yet picked up from the bedroom floor. "If men ran their offices as carefully as you women run your homes!" he continued. "If you utterly disregarded system the way you housekeepers do, (oh heavens!) what a mess it would be."

"Oh hush up, you make me nervous." Esther shoved back bright curls. "I'm tired of always hearing you rave about masculine efficiency."

Esther surveyed the cluttered room. She did not plan, but there was always something coming up. (One could say, "Dishes, 6 to 8:15; beds, 8:15 to 8:30; and so on. It looked fine on paper. But baby would choose 8:00 to fuss.")

"Forget it or you'll find your shots." She kept her voice bright—it was still early in the day and she had a lot to do. She had to be cheerful. Baby to bathe, dress, feed, put to sleep; dishes to wash and wipe; kitchen to mop; baby's washing; beds; clean up the living room; lunch—the morning seemed too short. Oh, well, no need for lunch exactly at twelve today. Ben's vacation took care of that.

"Twelve o'clock. Lunch ready?" Ben's booming voice woke the baby. Little Ben had refused to stay on schedule that morning and had started his nap an hour late.

"You quiet the baby. I'll be right down to fix something," Esther called from her bedroom.

"What? Nothing ready for lunch? It's twelve o'clock!" Ben's Sunday peevish.

"No hurry today, dear, you know," Esther called. "You don't have to be anywhere at one."

"You women!" Ben exploded again. "Say, listen here, Esther. This afternoon you and I are going to take an hour off and I'll plan your work for you, since you don't seem able to do it yourself." Ben lost his temper completely and Esther knew that his golf had been bad. But she grew very resentful.

Lunch was quiet, sullen affair. At three o'clock Ben went to sleep—off schedule—Esther joined her husband on the terrace. She carried pencil and paper. Her voice was soft—too soft. If Ben had stopped to notice, it put him off his stride.

"See how easy it is, if you just stop to plan!" he was saying, condescendingly. "Even a nit-wit could follow this scheme and have time to rest besides."

Esther's smile only became sweeter. "You rest now, dear," she said in a concerned voice. "I must catch up on some tag ends so that this schedule can go into effect in the morning without a hitch. I'm sure you'll find that things will run along as smoothly as they do in your office."

Ben's eyes were at six, as usual, and Esther fed him and put him into his kiddie pen to play. She prepared breakfast and put her hat, coat, and suitcase near the front door. The alarm rang at seven. She heard Ben getting up as she slipped out the door.

"Well, how did the time budget work out, dear?" Esther asked, burst into the kitchen at twelve-thirty, three days later. Ben was preparing canned soup. The baby wailed.

"There! You've awakened the baby!" Ben's eyes were pleading. He was a bit embarrassed.

"Not off schedule, surely!" Esther appeared horrified. With a gay laugh she threw her arms around her unhappy husband. "Sorry I ran out on you, Sweet," she cooed. "But I got so tired of working so inefficiently. I knew the baby was safe, and as long as you could run things so much more efficiently—"

"Cut it, Esther," Ben said. "I couldn't work the darn thing even the first day. I had Elsie come in to do some of the things, but even at that—"

"Some one called up, and there were five minutes wasted," Esther said.

"And Mrs. Roberts talked a half hour over the fence while I burned the rubbish. Nosey," Ben confessed.

"And there was always something extra popping up, wasn't there, old dear?" Esther was really sorry for her husband.

"If you hadn't come today, I'd have hired everything done," he said.

"I was wondering if you would."

"Well, I was too stubborn, I guess," Ben admitted. "I just wanted to prove to you that it could be done. But it couldn't."

"Not with an infant around," Esther sympathized, hastening into the kitchen just in time to keep the soup from burning.

"Miss Elsie?"

"Yes, Mr. Gardner?"

"Are those statements ready?"

"Not yet, Mr. Gardner. I'm sorry," Ben looked up from his desk. "Efficiency! That's what you women need," his voice trailed into an awkward silence.

"I beg your pardon?" The secretary's voice was an inquiry.

"Oh, nothing," Ben mumbled.

Old Sam's Advice

By E. L. GILL
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNC Service.

THE flower caught Bill Holland's eye. Blooming there so whitely in the stagnant waters of the swamp. He grasped old Sam Matthias by the shoulder and pointed it out. Old Sam granted in non-committal fashion.

Young Bill had not been a cheerful companion to Old Sam on this last trip and Old Sam was showing his disappointment. Young Bill, for his part, was both dejectedly disappointed and irritated with Old Sam. He had come to the mountain shack of the old guide, seeking sympathy and help in the major crisis of his twenty-two years. But Old Sam was bored.

The old man's attitude deepened Bill's resentment toward the world in general—and Betty in particular. The entire trouble, of course, was Betty. It was an ancient story that Bill told Old Sam—a story of the magnificent love of a boy for a girl; the boy imbued with the idealism of the age of chivalry hopefully, fantasically in love with a fascinating bit of a girl suddenly linked by the restraint of old-fashioned standards and "out to find what life is all about."

It was not, Bill often told him, that he had any desire whatever for the young lady's affection any longer. The maddening thing was that he couldn't rid his heart and mind and soul of her.

"I wouldn't know what to say to that, son," Old Sam condescended once or twice during the day. Nothing more. And when night had settled and they sat on the porch of the mountain shack Old Sam talked of trout.

"I'm going to bed," the youth said.

"Got a little something? It might like to do tonight, been a thinkin' of that flower we saw back there in the swamp today. Something sort of queer about that. Don't hunker much for sleep myself and have a mind to take the lantern and have a look. Better come along, you'll sleep the better for it."

The swamp was little more than a ten minute walk along the trail. Old Sam, boots drawn to his hips, led the way, carrying the lantern. The youth followed, flashlight in hand. At the edge of the water they stopped and, at Old Sam's direction, Bill searched the surface of the swamp until the flashlight caught the white flower.

"I'm a bit curious about that flower, Bill; I'm a-goin' to get it out and take it back to the shack; looks to me like a lily," and Old Sam started into the swamp, sinking knee-deep in the mire.

"It's some sort of a lily, sure as you live, son," he called back.

Back in the shack Ma Matthias rustled an old bucket, grumbling the while at "these consarn fool notions." Bill was dispatched to fill the bucket with clean rich earth and Old Sam set to work to replant his lily, talking the while in quiet, soothing tones, as he might have to a sick wayfarer.

"Brave little lady—had a right tough time of it out there in that swamp, I reckon.

"Can't figure out how you come to be in such a vile smelly place—mighty bad company you was in."

"There she is now, Ma, good as new—and ain't she a beauty! Reckon she feels a lot better, too—suspect if she could talk she would be a-tellin' us that she's mighty happy to get out of that swamp."

But Old Sam got no further with his monologue. Young Bill Holland was dashing out through the open doorway of the shack.

Betty was dancing lightly from table to table, regaling the party with a song. Bill stood, unnoticed, watching. He waited until Betty's solo dance brought her close to where he stood. As she whirled, he caught her unprised arm in a biting grip. A youth rushed forward to resent the indignity. Bill's fist caught the point of his chin.

The merry-makers confronted Bill en masse at the doorway, denouncing him in shrill outbursts. Meanwhile, Bill was delivering eloquent if disjointed references to poisonous weeds and filthy water.

Betty was a subdued young lady. The first flush of fiery indignation passed as quickly as it came. It may have been an expression on Bill Holland's face; it may have been something else.

She was quite ready to go to the car with Bill. Alas, she allowed herself to be led up the steps of the recorder's home. Meekly, too, aided by Bill's gruff promptings, she answered the necessary questions.

When they were again in the roadster and Bill had pocketed the document given him by the recorder, Betty laid her head on Bill's shoulder and woman-like, cried great warm tears. Now, for the first time since he left Old Sam Matthias' shack far up in the hills, Bill's clenched jaw relaxed.

Far up in the hills Ma Matthias was again remodeling old Sam that he had to go to the swamp after breakfast. Ma was a practical soul and saw no sense in paying that florid down in town a dollar and a half for a potted lily and then leaving the pot buried in that dirty swamp.

But old Sam was sleeping peacefully.

The Signal

By GRANT M. SASSAMAN
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNC Service.

WHITE-FACED and angry, they looked at each other over the front door threshold.

"The trouble with you, Don, is that you don't want me to have any pleasure at all," Mary Feldon's hazel eyes snapped fire, but the young man standing stolidly before her saw they were close to tears.

"Listen, Mary," he said quietly. "I want you to have everything it's possible for me to give. But you must remember I'm a railroad man, and there's always a certain amount of danger to face. I can't be running around every night to parties and shows—losing sleep—and then go out on my runs. I'm not the road's president. I'm only a brakeman."

"Perhaps you made a mistake in marrying me, Mary," he said, his voice slightly bitter. "You were accustomed to better things..."

"Don, I'm tired of all of this," Mary broke in. "I'm fed up with packing lunches, staying here alone nights while you're away on a two-day run."

"I'm sorry, Mary. A lump came into Donald Feldon's throat. "I didn't realize it had got you that bad." He turned and regarded his pretty wife searchingly. "But if that's how you feel, maybe we'd better call it quits. If you're not here when I come back tomorrow, I'll understand."

As long as she could see him, Mary watched his broad shoulders moving rhythmically under the blue denim jacket. She exorcised, with her ebbing anger, a pang of remorse.

And it all had begun with a joking remark Don made about her house dress. "It makes you look so domestic, darling," he had said. "They had been out late at a party the night before, and she had just fallen asleep when the callow came hammering at the door. Then, too, she had planned to attend Nellie Robbins' dance tonight."

She had slipped on an old house dress, cooked a hurried breakfast. But all the while anger brought on by disappointment and fatigue was tearing at her. Then Don had unclipped the dress.

"Domestic!" she had flared.

"Slave, you mean! That's all I've been for the past two years!"

"I suppose you won't like it, Don," she said to him, "but I'm going to the dance tonight regardless. I'll call up Bob Ames. He'll take me."

Bob Ames? Of course she had gone around with Bob before she had met Don. She never had cared much for him. She knew, however, that Bob Ames cared for her, and Don knew it, too. From anger and regret, Mary's emotions swung to the other extreme. A gnawing fear took hold of her. Divorce? She didn't want a divorce.

Don would realize she hadn't meant those things, and he'd signal his forgiveness. Several times in the past she had stood here on the porch regretting heated words, and then she had been comforted by Don's signal.

It had been a sort of game with them. The signal sometimes had been a wave of the hand; at other times, when Don was busy inside the caboose or watching signals from the far side of the engine, it was a handkerchief tied somewhere for her to see.

At the first sound of Don's train Mary was back on the porch. It was a fast freight. She gripped the porch rail with taut fingers, as the engine came abreast of the house. There were three men on the head end. Was that Don leaning against the farther side of the tender? It couldn't be! Don would be on this side, waving to her. It looked like Don, but—

At noon Donald Feldon dropped down from the engine cab and waited for the caboose to come up. Standing there beside the tracks, he swore softly to himself for having been too stubborn to wave to Mary.

With weighted feet he swung aboard the forward steps of the lazy caboose when it came up. The shrewd old eyes of the gray-haired conductor, Lundy, surveyed him.

"I saw Mary on the porch as we came by," he said. "Did you wave from the front and?"

"Why—er—"

"Shut up," said the old man gently. "You didn't, or she wouldn't of been standin' there like that when the train rolled past. You two had some sort of fuss. I saw it on your face as soon's you hit ole roundhouse. I'm an old lousy-body. I see everything."

Don sat down on a bunk while the conductor started for the rear platform muttering loudly: "Well, I guess the dang'd thing oughta be dry by now. It's been hangin' on the rail ever since we left the yards."

Don looked out to see him undo a large handanna from the caboose rail and tuck it in a rear pocket. He heaved up from the bunk. "Was that—on the rail—when the hind end passed the house?"

The conductor chuckled. "It was, son—unless it fell off and ran after the back to tie itself back on."

A lump came up in Don's throat. "Busybody!" he managed to say. "You're a d—n' old angel, Lundy! That's what!"

THROUGH A Woman's Eyes

By JEAN NEWTON

CLINGING TO THEIR BIBLES

DEAR Jean Newton: Did you see the news that six people in an automobile accident clung through the crash to their Bibles and hymnals? Their car was overturned, and when they were extricated from the wreckage they were still clinging to the Bibles. They were all unhurt and went on to the prayer meeting, which was their destination. I suppose they figured out it was holding on to their Bibles that saved them.

"What do you think about it, Jean Newton?"

I think those people are among the world's luckiest—because of their faith which will help them through "tight spots" all along the way. They have something those people who confidently held on to their Bibles when their car turned over and everything spun around them. They have something more important than wealth in the world's goods, something that will carry them over many difficulties that money cannot smooth.

In this day when religious faith is a rarer thing than it used to be, when religion is being challenged outspokenly, when a whole nation and a political creed expresses as one of its tenets the abolition of religion, it is heart-warming to learn of people who still have Faith.

I am sorry to differ with the implication of the reader whose letter is above. But I feel that many who may take very lightly the faith of people who cling to their Bibles in a crash, may well envy them.

What's In a Name?

By GRACE WORTHINGTON
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

SCOTT MORGAN stared at the telegram before him. It was from his assistant, Tom Haddon, dated Washington:

MARRIED THIS MORNING STOP SWELL IDEA STOP WHY DON'T YOU TRY IT STOP NOT INTERFERING WITH MY ASSIGNMENT.

So that was why Haddon had been so anxious for the Washington assignment. He remembered vaguely Tom's girl lived in Washington. There had been a misunderstanding: Tom had gone around scowling for days and smoking countless cigarettes.

Well, thank heavens, that Sylvia Ralston affair had taught him his lesson! His first year in New York, too. He had been mad about her; worshiped her. And all she wanted was his influence as a reporter. Well, he had come through for her. Rotogravures; newspaper and magazine articles glorified her. She got her big break . . . and coldly discarded him. Funny he should be thinking about her now. But how could he help it? Today's papers had chronicled her third marriage.

At least Tom's girl was sincere; she had complained because Tom had taken out another girl when he was engaged to her. It must be wonderful, Scott thought, for a girl to hold an engagement so sacred.

Mary Sanders came back from lunch and hung her hat on the rack just outside his door. He gave her a curt nod; it was almost rude, she thought. She went into her own cubby-hole of an office next to his, hanging the door after her.

"All settled," Scott heard her say. "I'm changing my name."

Leslie Miller stopped her type-writing. "But you weren't at all sure you'd do it this morning?"

"I know, but Doctor Urbanic convinced me at lunch time."

"You seem pretty unenthusiastic," Leslie observed, "for a girl about to change her name and with it the whole destiny of her life. Don't you like the new name, Mary?"

"No!" There was utter distaste in her voice.

"Then, dear, why do it?"

"Oh, the doctor convinced me that for material and financial reasons—" for social success and—"

"So!" Scott Morgan observed. "Even Mary Sanders would barter her soul for material and financial reasons. Who could a fellow depend on?"

Leslie Miller was saying, "But I wouldn't, Mary, dear, unless I was entirely satisfied. Hold on to your own name and wait till something better comes along. You'll get a bright idea one of these days."

"What do you mean wait till I get a bright idea?" Mary almost cried. "That's all I ever get. Doctor Urbanic says so, too! But what do I get out of it? Not even a raise! Here I plan the whole campaign that gets the new cigarette account from every agency in town—"

me, a mere girl! And who gets the plums for my bright ideas? Tom Haddon is sent down to Washington to do the publicity stunt that I planned. He gets a raise, too. Scott Morgan brings in the whole lay-out to the president and probably grabs all the credit."

"Mary! Why I thought you liked Scott Morgan!"

At that moment Scott Morgan entered. He was flushed and furious. His red hair seemed even redder.

"I had no intention of eaves-dropping, Miss Sanders." His voice was like cold steel. "But I assure you I received no bonus on your brilliant ideas. If you had been content to wait until tomorrow, the end of the month, you would have seen I recommended you for a sizeable increase in salary. As for a girl changing her name for financial reasons . . . social success . . ."

"It is no concern of yours why I change my name!"

"It is my affair when you say you're changing your name because I got a bonus on your ideas . . ."

"You're insufferable! I loathe you! I've always loathed you!" But tears were in her eyes; her hands trembled.

"And I do not exactly admire you, myself, Miss Sanders." Now his voice was a white heat. "I trust your doctor has all the virtues I lack—every advantage that—"

Leslie Miller laughed hysterically. "Mary's not getting married! She's just changing her name numerologically to get new vibrations. Doctor Urbanic is a wonderful numerologist. Why, did you know that Mark Twain never had any luck under his own name of Samuel Clemens? All the movie stars—"

"Not getting married?" Scott Morgan gasped.

"Hardly," Mary announced grimly. "Oh, no," Leslie went on. "There's not even a marriage vibration in her name! Nothing but kindness that's not appreciated, virtue that goes unrewarded, brilliant ideas that—"

"Leslie! Mary's face was flushed. "I'm not exactly tongue-tied, and I didn't give you my confidence to broadcast to the whole office force!"

"I'm not the whole office force," said Scott Morgan with commanding authority. "I'm merely a man so in love with you that he almost went crazy when he thought you were going to marry some one else."

Leslie Miller discreetly withdrew.

One Swell Vacation

By G. W. VON BERNUTH
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

SAY, I sure was glad to see those four people again! I'll say! Ten years since I'd spent my vacation at Maple View—you know, a feller that's unmarried likes to go different places an' see the world. On the train I'd begun to wonder if I'd have to spend a couple a days gettin' acquainted. So when I sees them four sittin' there on the porch, just like it was ten years back, I don't contain myself.

"Well, for cryin' out loud!" I hollers.

"Well, for cryin' out loud!" yells Al, suddenly tumblin' to who I was. "It ain't old Herbie back here again!"

"Say, whadda y' know!" says Maybelle. She's Al's wife.

An' Fred an' Myrtle, they was just as surprised as the other two, an' boy! did they give use the glad hand! Maybelle, she's one a them impulsive girls (but no harm in her, y'understand) she up an' threw her arms right around my neck an' kissed me. Say, it was grand.

Just as Maybelle was takin' her arms from around my neck I suddenly remembered that Al usta be awful jealous of Maybelle. But say, he never bats an eyelash. If anything it was Fred that was lookin' sour, an' that struck me funny, too, for all Myrtle done (she's pretty reserved, Myrtle) was shake hands with me. I put it all down to imagination. An' sure enough, I musta been right, because just then, when I happened to notice a sweet-lookin' little June an' says (you know, the way you do) "some baby!" Fred laffed an' dragged me up to her an' says, "Miss Geary, meet Mr. Herbert Dill, Herbie fr short."

"Pleased to meet you, I'm sure, Herbie," says Miss Geary. Say, she was a cute little trick. "You an' me's goin' to get better acquainted before my vacation's over, baby."

Well, ev'rybody laffed, an' I'd see how we was goin' to be a pretty congenial bunch, especially when Al says: "Say, whassa matter with us all goin' over to Laurel Grove tonight?"

"O. K. with me, if Blue Eyes here will come along," says I, not forgettin' my manners.

Well, Blue Eyes says she would, so about eight o'clock Al brings his roadster around, an' we all pile into it. Al, he was drivin', an' he says: "Who's comin' in front with me?"

Maybelle pipes up an' says, "I am." Well ev'rybody laffed at that, but in she gets, an' then Al says: "Fred, just to square things, you got to sit in the rumber."

So of course, that only leaves me to get in with Al an' Maybelle, with Fred in the rumber, sittin' between Myrtle an' Miss Geary.

"Say, this is like old times," I says.

Well, when we get outta the car at Laurel Grove, Fred, he was lookin' sour agin, an' when Maybelle grabbed my arm an' started steerin' me toward the dance hall, he says to me, "I thought you ast Miss Geary to come with you tonight."

He said it kinda nasty-like, an' I started to come back at him but I didn't want to start nothin' so I says:

"Where's my blue-eyed baby?"

Well, when we went in the dance hall an' danced a couple dances, an' then we straited over to the outdoor cabaret. We set down at one of the tables. Maybelle was next to me, an' after a while she begins makin' passes at me. I see that wouldn't do, so while the others was standin' up watchin' the cabaret show, I grabbed her by the wrist an' says: "You come with me, girlie." We went down by the lake an' I hired a canoe, but we hadn't any more'n got pushed off from shore than I heard a hollerin', an' there was the others. Fred was in the lead, an' he didn't stop for water or nothin', he come right out to where we was.

"Hey, how do you get that way—takin' Maybelle out in a canoe?" he yells, an' I see he was mad clean through.

"What's that t' you?" says I, gettin' mad myself. "If Al don't mind, you should worry. Maybelle's his wife, not yours." An' with that I give Fred a push with the paddle, an' he sits right down to the water.

Well, you never heard such a yell as that feller Al let out. He laffed an' laffed an' laffed. I thought he was laffin' because Fred looked so funny settin' there in the water, but then I heard him gasp, "Oh, boy! Oh, boy! Mabelle! My wife!"

"Well, ain't she?" says I.

"Oh, boy!" says he, laffin' some more. "Oh, boy! you need to get hep all right! Why, Maybelle ain't been my wife fr five years. I'm married to Myrtle now, an' Maybelle's Fred's wife."

Say, I never heard the end of it. Oh, sure, we made it up all right when Fred realized that I thought Maybelle was still Al's wife, he understood everything. Fact is, he apologized to me as much as I apologized to him. Fred's a perfect gentleman. Oh, yes, I had a fine vacation. Nothin' like a congenial bunch to make you have a good vacation. But after that night I stuck to my own girl pretty well.

In fact, here she comes now. Mr. Smith, meet my wife, Mrs. DILL, Miss Geary that was."

Bertie Goes to the Circus

By CHET GRANT
McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

THE Iron Horse, plugging and chugging, achieved the crown of the last steep hill, the one that overlooks Foxboro and came to a momentary halt. George Blake nodded down to his right and barked savagely, "There's your dozyone circus!" Little Bertie, aged six, repressed a shriek of delight and merely grinned. Bertie was psychic. He realized that his cousin George was in no mood for overtures of any kind.

Life was indeed a burning doughnut to George, guiding the Iron Horse down to the circus grounds. Another perfect holiday spoiled; another positive proof that his parents were in league against his happiness; forcing him to take little Bertie to the circus when his whole being yearned to be with one Marcel Foster. His mother's parting shots still rang in his ears. "Don't you dare let anything happen to little Bertie! Don't you dare overload his stomach! Don't you let go of his hand!" Cripes! You'd think the troublesome little hellion was made of solid gold!

"C'mon," George growled, climbing out of the parked Iron Horse. "And no monkey business, feller."

Who can resist a circus? Even George, after an hour in the Big Top, had to admit that he was enjoying himself. But it was at the pink lemonade stand that the world took on its rosiest hue. The lemonade was served by a girl in a crisp gingham dress. She had lots of blond hair and saucer blue eyes. George drank three glasses as slowly as possible, but the girl never so much as smiled at him. And right at that moment Bertie disappeared into thin air!

The three glasses of pink lemonade became a ball of ice in George's stomach. He gazed frantically around and suddenly saw Bertie's suit squeezing through the crowds. With a yelp of rage George set off in pursuit. Coming up behind his unsuspecting victim he scooped him into his arms.

"For two cents I'd belt you one," George rapped out. "What's the idea of running away when . . ."

"You belt me, brother," a deep bass voice rumbled in the squirming bundle George held. "and I'll sock you one myself!" George dropped the midget as if he were a hot coal.

Wiping the perspiration from his brow, George went into the throng again.

Just when he was ready to look for a policeman by some coincidence, he found himself at the pink lemonade stand again.

Wonder of wonders, the blond girl smiled at him! "I'm glad you came back," she greeted him. "Your little cousin has been helping me. He crawled under the table, you know."

Well, she was stunning to George, so he grinned amiably at Bertie, who was attacking empty bottles behind the counter. All was right with the world. George ordered another glass of the cooling beverage. It was like nectar coming from her hands. He wanted to tell her something of the sort, but lost his nerve. Instead he asked for another glass, and another . . .

"You must like that stuff," she observed, frowning.

"It's swell," George enthused. "Like you," he dared to say.

"That's no compliment," she smiled.

"Well, anyhow," George grinned, "a couple of glasses won't hurt me. I . . . uh! . . . excuse me."

"A couple! You've had ten." The girl led Bertie outside the stand. "You'd better get your big cousin started for home," she advised.

Mrs. Blake was wiping the supper dishes when the telephone rang. Its summons startled her and she picked up the instrument with misgiving.

"Hello. Hello, Aunt Frances. This is Bertie!"

"Bertie! Why, my dear child, what . . ."

"I'm standing on a soap box, Aunt Frances. I wanted to call you up."

"Darling, how cute!"

"Yes'm."

"You're all right, Bertie?" Mrs. Blake asked suddenly.

"Oh, yes'm, I'm all right. But, Aunt Frances . . ."

"Yes, dear."

"Aunt Frances, I think you 'n Uncle Charlie'd better come down here to Foxboro and bring us home."

"Bring you home?"

"Yes'm. You see, Aunt Frances, George, he's awful sick."

"Bertie! What's the matter with George?" Mrs. Blake trembled.

"Oh, George's all right, Aunt Frances, only his stomach ain't."

"What's the matter with his stomach?"

"Well, I guess, Aunt Frances, George had too much lemonade 'n . . ."

Father Killed In Accidental Gun Discharge

reported the matter to the coroner, who following an additional inquiry filed an official report on the case as an accident.

Mr. Heller, for many years a resident of Plymouth, had like thousands of others, found it difficult to secure steady work during the past four or five years. Recently he had secured a job at the Plymouth Felt Products company.

When his name went on the payroll it has always been the practice of the Allen Industries, owners of this company, to take out an insurance policy for $1,000.00 it is done just as one of those routine things that take place in a big industry like this so the family knew nothing of it until Manager Elmer Zuckerman advised them that the company had put through a claim for $1,000 and the money will be paid to Mrs. Heller upon its receipt.

There are three children in the family, the oldest son Clarence, another lad James, age 12 and a little girl, Annabelle, age 8 years.

Clarence is heartbroken over the affair and the comforting words of mother and other relatives are of little avail in relieving him of his grief.

The body was removed to the Schrader funeral home, from where the funeral was held Thursday afternoon.

"At the pace we are going," says observing Olivia, "marriage will never more be a success until we can make the license clerk's office and the divorce court in the same trip."

An Encouraging YEAR-END SUMMARY

The second year of progressive effort toward national recovery has come to a close. Important events and sweeping changes have taken place. While it is true that the goal toward which we are striving has not yet been reached, nevertheless, it has been brought definitely nearer.

For the most part, the year-end published reviews of trade activities reveal encouraging improvement. Business leaders express optimism over the New Year outlook.

We believe that there is a real and solid foundation for this growing confidence which is manifest everywhere. We expect business to be better in 1935 than it was in 1934 and we hope that you and your friends may benefit in due measure from the expected improvement.

Improvements Will Not Result In Tax Advances

may continued, "on the fact that Plymouth's property valuation, and consequently the individual tax bills, have been decreasing for the past five years, and at the present time I can see no reason for a sudden increase. The additions and improvements which are being undertaken as a result of the Better Housing Program are, on the whole, of a minor character, and as such should not normally cause a rise in valuation."

"There are several things," he declared, "which prevent me from making an official and binding statement to the citizens of Plymouth that their tax bills will not increase. As affairs stand now, and with the personnel of the commission remaining as it is, it would be possible to do this; but because of a new state administration soon to take command, and a coming change in the city commission members at election time, I cannot go on record as making any promise."

"Plymouth's property valuation," explained Robinson, depends upon the county assessment, which in turn depends upon the State. A change of attitude of either of these groups in regards to expenditures and the public debt might therefore easily necessitate a raise in the valuation of the property of the city of Plymouth regardless of the will of the local commission, but an increase in taxes caused in this manner could not be laid, of course, to activities of the Federal Housing Administration."

"Therefore," stated Mayor Robinson, "I can see no reason why people should hesitate to participate in property improvement in connection with the FHA because of a fear that their individual assessments will be increased."

While Mayor Robinson made no official promises, his explanation of the tax question is expected to be a stimulus to the Better Housing Program which to date has been relatively sluggish in Plymouth. Since no local chairman has as yet been selected to head the work, Berg Moore is conducting the activities in his official capacity of Chamber of Commerce secretary.

"The Better Housing Program is a nation-wide undertaking of the Federal Housing Administration, which body was created by an act of Congress passed last summer, enabling home owners to improve their property at a time when the entire building industry and its subsidiaries would be materially benefited. Under the provisions of the Act, no Federal funds are used, but instead, private funds are made available to borrowers, since the Federal government guarantees to the financial institutions the loans that they will lose nothing as a result of the notes which they accept from individuals."

Home owners can borrow amounts ranging from $100 to $2,000 by giving their personal note, which bears a low rate of interest. The notes may run from one to three years, and require only the signature of the maker.

The program in Plymouth dates only from November 19, at which time Mayor Robinson issued an official proclamation, which inaugurated the project in this city. When a more permanent organization can be drafted to push the work, the economic and social benefits which have been received in other communities will undoubtedly be realized by the merchants, laborers and citizens of Plymouth.

SCHOOL NOTES

Affirmative Team Defeats Dearborn

(By the Pilgrim Prints Staff.)
Winning the last League debate of the season, Plymouth's affirmative team defeated Dearborn's negative and gained entrance into elimination debating in a contest held here Thursday, December 20. River Rouge and Plymouth high schools are now tied for the Twin Valley Association championship.

The affirmative team included Jewel Starkweather, Jeanette Brown, and Jack Sessions, while the negative speakers from Dearborn were Edith Evans, Joseph Laird and Elizabeth Evans. The debate was judged by Professor McKay of Michigan State Normal College, and Mrs. Humphreys of Plymouth was the chairman. The question, "Resolved, that the federal government should adopt a policy of equalizing educational opportunities throughout the nation by means of substantial annual grants to the several states for public, primary, and secondary education," was disputed in many phases during the contest.

At the conclusion of the debate Professor McKay discussed affirmative and negative points before rendering his decision. He stated that in presentation both teams were equal; then he analyzed the arguments of both sides. The affirmative, he said, answered satisfactorily the four questions asked by Dearborn but did not sufficiently clarify the cost of their program. He was in doubt as to the superiority of conflicting negative and affirmative authorities, and also stated that the negative had not definitely shown the evils of federal control. On the basis he awarded a very close debate to the affirmative.

As a result of this victory Plymouth teams will enter elimination contests for the state championship, having won nine of ten debates. To decide the league championship, this school will meet River Rouge speakers in the near future, the latter school having won an equal number. In the dual debate between their rivals the Plymouth affirmatives won while the negative lost.

Negative Team Defeats Dearborn

(By the Pilgrim Prints Staff.)
Plymouth's negative debate team journeyed to Dearborn high school Thursday, December 20, and defeated that school's affirmative team. The Plymouth speakers were Tom Buck, Russell Kirk and Katherine Schuitz, in that order. The judge was Mr. Forsythe of Ferndale high school. It is interesting to know that Mr. Forsythe was coach of the state championship debate team for last year.

Immediately after the conclusion of the debate, the judge announced his decision in favor of the affirmative team. He based the verdict on the fact that the affirmative's case was in some instances illogical and that the negative proved several important issues of the debate. These, he stated, were the evils of federal control of education and that there was no necessity of federal aid to public schools. Mr. Forsythe praised the six speakers, stating that all had possibilities of becoming fine public speakers. He criticized the affirmative team for being indefinite and for failing to be clear. The negative team was criticized because of allowing important issues and points to go without refutation.

After the decision was explained, the judge talked to the coaches and teams, telling of various ways for improvement in organization and refutation.

By winning this debate Plymouth was assured of entering in the state elimination contests which will begin soon after New Year's. Then, as the Plymouth affirmative also defeated Dearborn, the teams are assured of earlier meetings between the two teams ended in each school winning one and losing one.

It is fitting to say here that it is time for Plymouth to get behind a winning debate team and encourage the debaters by attending the debates. The faculty should take note of this as well as residents and students for all attendances have been far below par this year. This big debate will be held about two weeks after school resumes, but the exact date and sides have not been determined yet.

Students Enjoy Musical Program

(By the Pilgrim Prints Staff.)
The music department of Plymouth high school, under the direction of Miss Henry, presented an impressive Christmas program before a general assembly of the students on Friday, December 21. At the beginning of the assembly, slides showing typical old-fashioned Christmas scenes were thrown on the screen. Led by Miss Henry and accompanied by the high school orchestra, the assembly sang several Christmas favorites. The words to these songs were exhibited on the screen. Among them were "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," "O Come All Ye Faithful," "The First Noel," "O Little Town of Bethlehem," and "Silent Night." The Boys' Glee Club and the Girls' Double Quartet sang "On Bethlehem's Plain." A brilliantly colored picture of the Wise Men was shown on the screen and the students sang "We Three Kings of Orient Are." This picture was replaced by that of an old-fashioned sleigh while the assembly sang "Jingle Bells." The next song was "Santa Claus is coming to Town" and it was accompanied by a picture of this well-known character. The assembly was concluded by the appearance on the stage of Betty McGee representing a French doll and Jack Olsaver and Norman Thorn dressed as tin soldiers. ## Business In 1935! Predict Far Better er company is entering the New Year with more orders on hand than it has ever had at the beginning of a new business period. That the company plans to put forth a big drive for business is indicated by the fact that Manager Paul Nutting has announced two new models of power sprayers that will go on the market at once. One model is of larger capacity than those now produced and the other one is of a smaller type. The company's business is back in its new plant, located on the site of the old one destroyed by fire during the past summer.

"We have every reason to believe that 1935 is going to be a far better year than was 1934," stated Mr. Nutting.
Manager C. B. Stringer of the Plymouth Screw Products company declares that the outlook for his company is better than it has been at any time during the past two years.

"I am basing my opinion entirely upon orders we have already received and inquiries about business that we expect to come to us during 1935. If business comes as we anticipate, we will need considerable more help before the end of 1935," said Mr. Stringer.
"Prospects are far better than they were a year ago at this time," stated Henry Baker, manager of the Plymouth Tube company. "We are now carrying about 20 men on our payroll and if business in the spring comes in as we believe it will, we will be required to add to our force. Business has been getting better gradually for the past three or four months."

The Plymouth Felt Products company, a part of the Allen Industries, is at present busy making some equipment changes in its plant. Manager Elmer Zuckerman states that if present arrangements work out as the company believes, this plant will be in full production within another sixty days.
Fred A. Hubbard of the Penhale-Hubbard company, reported that for the past two or three months this company had enjoyed a consistent increase in business.

"The New Year looks a whole lot better than did 1934 at any time last year. We have been carrying about 15 men on our payroll. In fact I think that the early part of the New Year will be far better than the past two or three months have been."
Managers of other Plymouth industries who were not reached by telephone are not quoted, but they associate with them in business stated that these concerns had exceedingly good prospects for the ensuing twelve months.

Manager L. I. Price of the Consumers Power company, local representative of one of the biggest concerns operating in this part of the state, declared that from information that had come to him from those in a position to know in their big organization, that 1935 is expected to be one of the best business years the company has enjoyed since 1932.
With another plant being erected in this locality by the Ford Motor company which is now employing some thirty Plymouth carpenters, bricklayers and workers, and the prospects of a new postoffice building being constructed here during 1935, surely the New Year does look bright indeed to Plymouth and vicinity.

Weds In Ann Arbor,
Miss Ragnild Moe
To Reside In The East

A wedding of interest to many Plymouth people will be that of Miss Ragnild Moe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Moe of this city and Donald Gale Stillman, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Stillman of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, which took place in the chapel of the Michigan League in Ann Arbor at four o'clock Saturday afternoon. Reverend Edgar Hoenecke of the local Lutheran church was the officiating clergyman and performed the ceremony in the presence of about thirty-five relatives and friends.

A Christmas tree trimmed in silver lighted tapers and poinsettas formed an unusual and beautiful background for the wedding, the bride wearing a formal gown of white lace over white satin with long veil edged with lace which also formed a tiara effect holding the veil in place and carried a colonial bouquet arranged against evergreen and holly while her maid-of-honor, Miss Olga Melby, of Okech, Minnesota, a cousin, wore a dark green chiffon velvet gown and carried a large bouquet of poinsettas tied with a bow of green ribbon of a lighter shade.

Robert B. Everts, Jr. of the University of Tennessee faculty, was best man and the ushers were Lawrence and Gordon Moe, brothers of the bride.

Before and after the ceremony Arthur and Milton Moe, also brothers of the bride, playing clarinet and violin respectively were accompanied on the harp by Miss Ruth Pfohl of Ann Arbor in the theme from the third symphony of Brahms' first symphony.

In the alumni room, which was decorated with mistletoe and holly wreaths a reception took place and a wedding supper served, the guests places being marked with place cards of originality in red and white, having listed the toastmistress, Miss Dorothy Noyes of Ann Arbor and the subjects of the toasts and speakers. The table decorations were in keeping with the occasion having a three-tier wedding cake in the center, which was iced in white with a poinsettia of red on top and lighted red and white tapers.

The bride is a director of music in the Tappan school in Ann Arbor and the groom a member of the faculty of Bucknell College, Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania. They will be at home in Wilkes-Barre after February 1.

Those attending the wedding from out-of-town were the bride's parents and brothers of this city, Mrs. Robert B. Everts of Knoxville, Tennessee, Miss Lutha Fox of Perry, Mrs. Edgar Hoenecke, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Goldsmith, Mr. and Mrs. Neil McLellan, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Jewell, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Beals and Miss Marian Bever of Plymouth.

Miss Marian Perkins
Weds William Nott
On Christmas Day

The home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Perkins was the scene of a very pretty wedding Christmas Day when their daughter, Marian Evelyn, became the bride of William Richard Nott, son of Mrs. Minnie E. Nott of Ann Arbor. The ceremony was read at noon in the presence of only immediate relatives and friends. The Rev. A. T. P. Butt of Romeo, friend of the groom officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white velvet made with a slight train, and with which she carried a sheaf of calla lilies. Miss Evelyn Frye of Saginaw, who was bridesmaid, wore a gown of green matelasse crepe and carried a bouquet of Tallisman roses.

Wesley F. Nott of Royal Oak attended his brother as best man. Before the ceremony, Miss Winifred Ford of Highland Park played "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly," after which the bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March.

At the reception which followed, Miss Irene Walldorf of Fenton presided at the coffee table. Mrs. Perkins, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black velvet, and Mrs. Nott, mother of the groom, chose gray crepe. Both wore corsages of violets. Immediately after the wedding, the bridal couple left for a short motor trip in the East. For going away, the bride chose a dress of peacock green with black accessories.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Nott is the result of a romance which began several years ago while both were attending college.

Guests at the wedding, besides members of the bridal party, were: Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Price of Plymouth; Mrs. D. D. Price of Grand Rapids; Mrs. M. E. Nott, Miss Josephine Nott, and Mr. and Mrs. Ward Jadwin of Ann Arbor; Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Mummery of Hillsdale; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Nott and Mr. and Mrs. Donald C. Parritt of Pontiac; Mr. and Mrs. Perry Nott and Dr. and Mrs.

John C. Nott of Romeo; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley T. Nott of Royal Oak; Douglas Nott a brother of the groom, who is in California to play in the East-West football game was unable to attend.
