OUR CIRCUIT JUDGES

Wayne county voters will in the near future be required to nominate candidates of the various political parties for the circuit bench of Wayne county. They must check over a list of more than one hundred names to find men they believe suitable for services in these important positions. All the present judges, with one exception, are rightly seeking re-election. One judge who has served long and faithfully has decided that he desires to retire from public service, therefore there is one vacancy on the bench that must be filled.

Wayne county has long been noted for the high type of men it has selected for services in the courts. Our judges have been outstanding in their professions. Never once has there ever been the slightest insinuation against a circuit judge of Wayne county. They have served with honor and distinction. They have never permitted the Wayne bench to become the object of suspicion or mistrust. They have safeguarded the interests of rich and poor alike.

Now in order to retain their places in the judiciary system they have honored by long years of diligent and unselfish public service, they are forced to enter into a political scramble with dozens and dozens of unknowns, many of them lawyers who have had little practical training. There are some who might make good on the bench. And there is one or two outstanding candidates in the group of new aspirants, one being Attorney Wm. Donnelly. Mr. Donnelly as a member of the legislature two years ago made an outstanding record for himself, but he was defeated for re-election last fall by a political unknown in just the sort of a political scramble all of the judges now find themselves in.

We have but one recommendation to make—and that is that all of the present judges be re-elected and that for the place to be made vacant by the retirement of Judge Hunt, that a candidate of the high standing of Mr. Donnelly or someone just as well and as favorably known, be selected. Of course among the vast number of aspirants there are some other good men, some who if elected would be just as competent and just as fair as any of the present judges. But the confusing problem we have under our primary system in such a big county is to pick out the right candidates from the hundred or more who are on the ticket.

The forthcoming election is just as important, if not more so than the last fall's election because in the hands of our judges lies the power to administer the laws under which we live.

See to it that ALL of the judges who have served you with credit to themselves and the state are retained to continue the good work they have been doing.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Today the nation is celebrating the birthday of George Washington. It is well that once during each year we have occasion to give thought to one who has meant so much to our nation.

There is no finer example in American history of faith and pluck than that which was made at Valley Forge by the Continental army under its commander in chief, George Washington, in the winter of 1777-1778.

It is doubtful whether the sacrifice of the continental army was adequately realized. Half-starved, ill-clad, poorly sheltered and in great peril, not only from the pangs of hunger and cold, but also from enemy attacks, they huddled about their campfires while the British under Lord Howe, at the "rebel" capital of Philadelphia, celebrated the taking of it with dances and other gala events.

In Marshall's Washington we find that after the period of the war had the American army been reduced to a situation of greater peril than during the winter at Valley Forge. More than once they were absolutely without food. What hardships were undergone from the time that only 5,000 out of the 17,000 who encamped there in December for that winter were fit for active duty. Clothing, no less than food, was scarce. Men wore each other's uniforms in order that the naked could be clad and take their turn at active duties.

One account tells of Washington, one cold morning, meeting his sentinel as the commander left headquarters, the Potts house. The sentinel was making vigorous movements with his hands and legs in order to keep warm. Noting this, Washington asked him if he had had his breakfast. Upon receiving a negative reply, Washington hurried the sentinel inside the house, and while he was being served a breakfast by Mrs. Washington, George Washington, with the sentinel's gun, stood guard outside his own house until the soldier's return.

Illustrative also of the conditions in the camp at beautiful yet tragic, Valley Forge, so close to Philadelphia, so near the British, is the account of Washington's visit to a detachment of his own men. He had been keeping his eyes on the ground, apparently noting something interesting there on the snowy slopes. Upon drawing near to the chief officer of the detachment, Washington quietly returned the salute, then abruptly asked:

"How comes it, sir, that I have tracked the march of your troops by the bloodstains of their feet upon the frozen ground? Were there no shoes in the commissary's stores?"

To this the officer replied that his detachment was one of the last to receive shoes, also that the supply shortly after his detachment was reached had been exhausted.

Washington listened in silence, but his deep sigh showed with what emotion he heard this report. Turning to his men he said, his voice trembling, "Poor fellows!" Then he gave rein to his charger and rode rapidly away.

Valley Forge is more than a beautiful state park today. It is symbolic of something more than forced privations. It is a shrine that instills in all true Americans a deeper appreciation of the manhood and the sacrifice of those who were quartered there during the darkest hour of the Revolution. It is symbolic of a never-dying devotion to a cause and to a great commander that kept hope alive.

WORTH

When you think of a man you seldom think of the knowledge he has of books.

You seldom think of the clothes he wears his habits, or ways, or looks.

You seldom think of the car he drives or the bonds his gold has bought.

When you think of a man you mostly think of some kindness he has wrought.

You judge him not by his blocks of stocks Nor his power of name or pen;

You judge a man by the place he's made in the hearts of his fellow men.

You judge him more by the fight he's made by the way he has faced the strife.

And not by the amount of the bank account He's managed to get in life.

You think of the friend he's been to man and the good that he has done.

And you judge the sort of man he is By the friends that he has won.

NOT A "FIASCO"

The Detroit Free Press Monday morning referred in its headlines to the recent attempt made to steal an election in Wayne county as a "fiasco." We disagree entirely with the Free Press in the use of such word for such a crime. True it was a failure, as the word "fiasco" suggests—but in addition it was one of the most brazen crimes in the history of the state. It was not only a crime, but it was an insult to the citizens of Detroit and Michigan. We would like to ask the Free Press how such a crime committed with such open contempt for all the laws of decency and respectability could possibly be regarded as a "fiasco" even though it was a failure?

A GOOD APPOINTMENT

Newspapers have recently published a Lansing item which told of the selection of Clark Brown, a veteran employe of the secretary of state's office, as secretary of the public utilities commission. Mr. Brown has long been in state service. From a minor clerkship he advanced to deputy secretary of state, and then upon the resignation of Governor Frank Fitzgerald after his election to the governorship, he was honored by being made secretary of state to fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Fitzgerald. Mr. Brown has long been regarded as one of the most efficient and courteous employes in state service and it is a credit to the administration to have retained him in such an important place. If more attention was paid to the selection of important department heads in Lansing of Mr. Brown's calibre and less to politics, Michigan would not be in the mess and turmoil it has been in during the past half dozen or more years.

Windstorm Company Makes Fine Record Says Hastings Paper

The fiftieth annual meeting of the Michigan Mutual Windstorm Insurance Company of Hastings was held at the home office last month. Directors were elected and other general business was transacted.

The secretary's annual report shows the company to be in splendid position and the volume of business for the year well in advance of that of 1933.

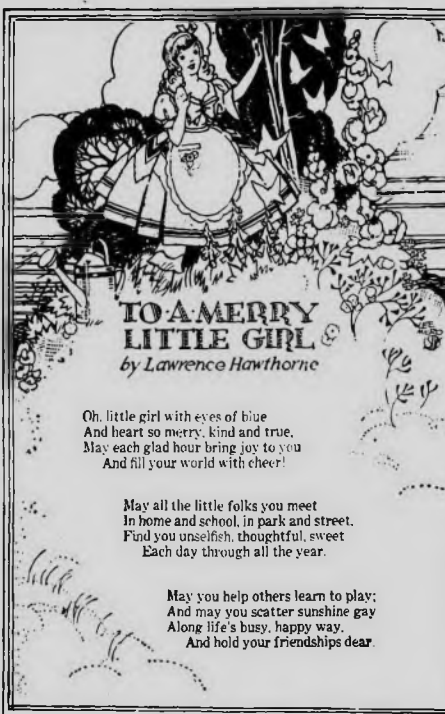

In spite of the fact that storms in 1934 brought unusually heavy losses to this company, nearly a half million dollars, all payments were easily met without borrowing. This shows the wisdom of this company's policy of always keeping on hand a fine cash reserve. In this way every policy holder is sure of receiving the full amount of his loss in case of a severe windstorm.

This is the largest company of its kind operating in Michigan, with 101,000 members and $372,658,409.00 insurance in force. Since its organization 50 years ago, this company has paid $4,534,306.87 to its policy holders for losses sustained. It has built up an enviable reputation for satisfactory dealings with policy holders.

The directors and adjusters are well distributed about the state so that immediate adjustment can be given to every loss and prompt settlement made.

The management of the company is in the hands of practical business men of wide experience in the insurance business.—The Hastings Banner.

TO A MERRY LITTLE GIRL

by Lawrence Hawthorne

Oh little girl with eyes of blue
 And heart so merry, kind and true,
 May each glad hour bring joy to you
 And fill your world with cheer!

May all the little folks you meet
 In home and school, in park and street,
 Find you unselfish, thoughtful, sweet
 Each day through all the year.

May you help others learn to play;
 And may you scatter sunshine gay
 Along life's busy, happy way,
 And hold your friendships dear.

Rambing Around With Michigan Editors

ALREADY UNDER IT IN WAYNE COUNTY

Another thing that enters into this problem is the dwindling birth rate among straight three and four generation families. At the present rate the new foreign-American population will soon control our political destinies. We are less than 50 years away from complete foreign control—that is by American citizens with comparatively recent European traditions. We are on our way, at least mathematically, toward a European viewpoint. Why not put pure blood American influence behind this peace movement now instead of going in eventually under different standards of racial thinking which looking ahead would include religion, moral attributes and political freedom?—Muri DeFoe, Charlotte Republican-Tribune.

A VERY DESIRABLE LAW

At the session of the Legislature held recently the State Senate unanimously passed a bill eliminating all State property tax on real and personal property, leaving all property tax for county and local units.

Since the bill is sponsored by the State Administration it is expected to become a law very quickly. The only question remaining is the attitude of the State House of Representatives with its Democratic majority, but it is believed there will be no trouble from that source because of popular demand.

The enactment of this bill will place the property tax problems right into the hands of the county and local authorities, and it will eliminate a large amount of State expense formerly spent on tax equalization over the whole state, a service that will be completely done away with.

It has been an annual diversion for tax mongers to quibble over State tax apportionments among the various counties, and within the several counties among the various local units. This will now be pared down to local quibbling.—Adrian Van Koeveering in The Zeeland Record.

WHITHER GOETH WE?

President Roosevelt's "planned economy" seems destined to go the way of all flesh—in the oblivion of limbo, human nature, which is something akin to chaos. In a day when mankind can make and grow more than he needs for comfort and security, the undisciplined selfishness of human beings brings about widespread famine—want in the midst of plenty. We suggest that the government of the United States set up a department to be known as The Unselfishness Bureau, to give to our people an appropriation large enough to do some educating of our people. No enduring progress can be made toward making people generous through cold legislative methods. That is why the desired "planned economy" is going the way of prohibition, alas! and alack!—George Averill in The Birmingham Eccentric.

Phone Increase Takes Big Jump

Net gain of 21,062 telephones during 1934 required the installation of 130,350, according to the annual report of operations of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company for the past year, which was presented by G. M. Welch, president, at the annual meeting of stockholders in Detroit, Thursday (February 14). Disconnections during the year totalled 109,288. In 1933 there was a loss of 46,476 telephones, the report shows.

On December 31, 1934, the company had 502,329 telephones in service, compared with 690,764 at the peak in May, 1930, or more than 188,000 less than the high mark. Exchange messages increased 47% over 1933, but were 29.3% less than in 1929. Toll messages increased 7.4% over 1933, but the number completed during 1934 was 42.8% less than in 1929.

The report shows that the company continued to furnish a high grade of telephone service which was the best in its history, and that the plant was well maintained. The number of cases of reported trouble per telephone was at the rate of only one every 26 months. On toll calls there was only one report of unsatisfactory conditions for every 2,000 messages completed.

It is stated that the company is cooperating in every way possible with the Federal Communications Commission, with the view of having that body fully informed regarding the company and its operations. It is indicated also that the reduction in rural line rates and the introduction of flat rate residence service in Detroit, as ordered by the Michigan Public Utilities Commission on the premise that such reduction would result in sufficient additional business to offset them, have failed to produce that result.

Ratio of net earnings to the cost of plant and other assets was 3.69% compared with 2.47% in 1933. Dividends of $3 per share (3%) were paid on the company's stock during the year.

The Undiscouraged Washington

Unshaken by defeat, calm before unjust criticism at home, with steady unyielding courage, George Washington faced and conquered every obstacle that stood in the path that led to final triumph and the birth of a great nation.

His life is an inspiration. It shows how inflexible purpose may win for us our lesser victories, if we but carry through to the end every worthy thing begun.

Auto Accident Growth Serious One For Police

Vaughn Smith Points Out Necessity For More Care In Driving

Chief of Police Vaughn Smith yesterday declared that those who are objecting to the efforts of the officers to check speed and reckless driving, should stop for a minute and read something of the terrible harvest that is reaped each year by traffic accidents throughout the United States.

"But we do not have to go outside our own locality," said Chief Smith. "Nearly every accident we have had in and around Plymouth during the past two or three years have been due to fast driving or thoughtlessness on the part of some one else."

The worst automobile accident casualty toll ever experienced in the United States was recorded last year when 36,000 persons were killed and nearly a million injured as a result of 882,000 personal collisions on streets and highways, according to information received by Chief Smith in the last few days.

Although practically two-thirds of the accidents involved driving errors, pedestrians paid the highest price in the loss of life as shown by the death of nearly 16,000 or 44 percent of the total fatalities.

Deaths gained 16 per cent as against an increase of between 5 and 6 per cent in 1934; and 6 per cent in gasoline consumption. In this connection the analysis points out that in 1931, the previous high record in deaths, registrations were 2 per cent greater and gasoline consumption nearly one per cent more than in 1934, while fatalities in 1931 were almost 8 per cent less than last year.

Too much speed for time and place is cited as the dominant factor in the greater seriousness of automobile accidents last year. As an example of the extreme hazard produced by driving too fast, the rate of death per accident because of exceeding the speed limit was 40 per cent worse last year than the average of all accidents involving driving errors.

Available records for the year show that 3.16 per cent of the drivers in accidents were declared to have been under the influence of intoxicants as against 2.43 per cent in 1933, an increase of one-third. The available records also show that 4.1 per cent of the pedestrians in accidents were declared to have been under the influence of intoxicants as against 2.99 per cent in 1933, an increase of 49.5 per cent.

Five out of every eight pedestrians killed according to the statistics, were involved in accidents while crossing streets in the middle of the block, crossing intersections against signals or diagonally, darting out into streets from behind parked cars, or while walking along rural highways. The rate of death per pedestrian accident was 45 per cent worse crossing in the middle of the block than at intersections. The rate of death crossing against signals was 74 per cent worse than crossing with signals.

Nearly 1,500 children under the age of four were killed and 39,000 were injured in automobile accidents during the year, while 3,800 between the ages of five and fourteen met death and 143,000 were injured.

Despite figures indicating that nine out of ten cars involved in accidents were apparently in good condition, three out of every four cars examined in inspections were found to be in poor or bad mechanical condition. According to the inspections, 29 per cent of the cars required brake replacements or adjustments, tires were in only fair or poor condition on 56 per cent, and lamps required replacement or adjustments in 63 per cent of the cars.

The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

Creation of the World.—This is one of a series of Bible pictures made by Matthew Merian, Seventeenth century engraver. It depicts the creation of the world as told in the first chapter of Genesis: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be light: and there was light." The whole story of creation is told in less than 600 words. "Dehidah," the Hebrew word in the accompanying print, takes the literal meaning of "separation" or "setting apart." According to Hebrew scholars the word is not found in the Bible, but occurs in the post-Biblical Hebrew writing, such as the Talmud and the Cabala. In the scene reproduced it doubtless has a mystical significance.

ST. PETER'S EV. LUTHERAN CHURCH
Regular English Services always at 10:30 a.m.

Sunday school at 9:30. The Holy Season of Lent will be observed in our church by special Wednesday evening Lenten Services, beginning at 7:30 p.m. The subject of the sermon series will be "The Christ of the Scriptures."

The series will begin on Ash Wednesday, March 6th, with the sermon on "The Prophetic Christ." The Holy Communion will be celebrated on this occasion. All communicants who are eligible are invited and exhorted to participate in the Sacrament. A splendid practice would be the participation of every communicant in every communion.

The Sunday during Lent sermon series will be on the much used and little-understood "Lord's Prayer." This series will begin on March 3rd with the topic "Our Father, hallowed be Thy Name." Can you afford to miss or neglect this opportunity of becoming more enlightened as to the Model Prayer, the true Prayer Perfect, given to us by the Lord Jesus Christ himself? Then come and hear: you are most heartily welcomed in our church.

The Young People's Bible Class will meet for a sociable evening next Tuesday, Feb. 26th, at 7:30. The following are on the committee for the refreshments: Geraldine Waldecker, Robert Eyster, Marion Kleinschmidt, Thelma Williams and Doris Schultz. All young people are invited.

The Plymouth Mail is now preparing an attractive booklet on order of the congregation for the use of the members of our church during Lent. All services and special services from Ash Wednesday to Homecoming Day, April 28th, are covered. Also a Daily Bible Reading Chart is provided. If you have not received one, please ask for one, and use it.

Lucia M. Stroh, Minister.
Rev. Henry Boyson spoke last Sunday to very appreciative audience at 10:30 a.m. Worship service and also to the Sunday school. There is a possibility that they might speak next Sunday for morning also. These dear missionaries have many interesting stories to relate of their travels through Europe and to the Congo up country to the very heart of French Equatorial Africa. Central Africa is a dense jungle and the pioneers of Christian Faith have penetrated with the Gospel of Hope and Salvation to many who are yet cannibals.

Tuesday evening at 7 p.m. there will be a Red Cross class formed in Home Nursing in the First Aid held in the Salem Union School. These courses are practical and enjoyable. Courses are free. Every woman in our township is invited to join these valuable classes.

Spring On The Way!

First Robin Is Seen Twice In Plymouth

Spring is surely on the way! Maybe its not just around the corner—but it is around the next corner. There is no question about that.

First came Mr. Max Moon last Saturday morning with the first robin story of the year.

"I thought I had heard a robin singing in the morning last Thursday. But I didn't see it. Then I heard it again on Friday morning. Well, Saturday morning on the way to work I looked up in the tree top right there by the corner of Harvey and Penniman and surely enough there was a robin singing away," said Mr. Moon.

Confirming Mr. Moon's first robin story of the year came Mr. Al Morton, he of the Detroit Automobile club. Mr. Morton was two days late with his first robin story. He saw his robin Monday morning so the distinction of having seen the first robin of 1935 falls to Max Moor, stamp collector and general all-around outdoor sports lover.

One-Quarter of her Energy is used in SEEING!

MORE than that, a recent test in a scientifically lighted school showed that the better the lighting, the better her grades will be. Periodic examinations by an eye-sight specialist, too, are vital to protect good vision. And—a most important factor—her eyes should be guarded with good lighting in the home. This means enough light, with correct-size lamp bulbs in every fixture. (In table and floor lamps with three sockets, a 40-watt bulb should be used in each socket; with two sockets, 60-watt bulbs; with one socket, a 100-watt bulb.) It means SHADES on all lamps to prevent GLARE. It means using shades with light-colored linings to get the most light. And it means having at least one-tenth as much light in the rest of the room as you have on your book, newspaper, sewing, etc. Does the present illumination in your home answer these desirable conditions?

Training School Herd Keeps High Test Averages

Records Show Local Herd One of Best in Entire Country

During the past year 225 herds of registered Holstein-Friesians were tested in the Holstein Herd Test and the 4871 cows and heifers of all ages included in these herds averaged 10999 lbs. milk and 380 lbs. fat. Comparing this production with the average for all U. S. dairy cows which is 4500 lbs. milk and 170 lbs. fat per cow yearly, according to government figures, it is found that these purebred Holstein herds produce considerably more than double the national average per cow.

The herd of registered Holsteins owned by the Wayne County Training school near Plymouth has maintained a daily average yield of 1.2 lbs. of fat per cow during the first 312 days of the annual production test. One cow has topped the 500 lb. fat mark and four cows the 400 lb. fat mark for the 312 days. High honors for fat and milk production are held by Wacois June, Marathon with a credit of 555.9 lbs. fat and 17524.1 lbs. milk. Six cows have completed lactation records in Class B ranging from 3870 lbs. fat to 567.9 lbs. fat.

Charlevoix Ormsby Maid is the cow with a record of 567.9 lbs. fat and 18971 lbs. milk. Another cow completing a record of over 500 lbs. fat is Rose Brook Pietertje Sylvia with 548.9 lbs. fat and 17623 lbs. milk. Wacois Lady Lou Ormsby is also included in this group with a record of 520.6 lbs. fat and 14305 lbs. milk. The dairy herd at the Training school was started and has been developed by Dr. Robert Haskell. He also started the famous herd at the Ionia State Hospital where he was located before he took charge of the Training school. The Ionia herd has been almost as famous as the one at the Training school.

How Farmer Readers of the Plymouth Mail Can Secure Funds To Repair Buildings, Improve Water Supplies, Aid Farms.

This View Shows How One Farm House Was Made Into Modern Farm Residence.

Arnold Freydl, Miss Annabelle Cusick Married in Detroit

Miss Annabelle Cusick, Detroit, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Cusick, of LaSalle, Illinois, became the bride of Arnold D. Freydl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Freydl of this city, at a quiet ceremony performed at the Gesu Chapel, Detroit on Saturday, February 16, at ten o'clock with the Rev. J. Foley officiating.

The bride wore a navy alpaca gown trimmed in blue fox with accessories of blue and wore a shoulder corsage of orchids. She was attended by Miss Helen Fisher of Sarma, Ontario, whose gown was brown with accessories of brown and wore a corsage of brown orchids. Mr. Freydl was attended by Sanford Shatuck of this city.

After a month's wedding trip in Florida, the bride and bridegroom will return by way of LaSalle, Illinois, where they will visit at her home before returning to Detroit to make their future home.

Mr. Freydl is assistant cashier of the National Bank of Detroit. He has many friends in Plymouth and vicinity who wish him and Mrs. Freydl the best of health, happiness and a long, contented wedded life.

Mail Want Ads Costs Little

Readers of The Plymouth Mail are well acquainted with the fact that The Mail believes the federal housing administration act is one of the best pieces of "recovery" legislation that has been enacted. It is for that reason that each week something has appeared in The Mail pertaining to the benefits that can be derived from it.

The Mail has received direct from the Federal Housing Administration as well as from Congressman George Dondero additional information as to how the housing act can be used for improvement of farm property. Plymouth is surrounded in every direction by some of the best farming and gardening lands in Michigan. Some of them are small, some rather large, but they are all productive—and all have suffered like every one else as a result of the depression.

But now the door is open to a way to improve and build up farm property.

The government points out that for several years past, farm homes and farm buildings all over America have been steadily "going down hill" for lack of normal care and attention. Many farmers and farm owners have not provided for necessary alterations, repairs and improvements to their buildings, because of hesitation to spend their own funds, or because the sources of farm credit were "frozen."

The National Housing Act was designed to "thaw out" frozen credit. Its purpose is to stimulate better living conditions for American people, to reduce unemployment, and to begin again the creation of "tangible, useful wealth, in a form for which there is a great need." This Act encourages the use of private money to recondition and preserve and renew the Nation's buildings.

A simple and common-sense system of financing enables the farmer to stop further deterioration of his property. It is possible now for the farm owner to put in that much-needed, but long delayed water supply and sewage disposal system, new roofs on his buildings, a protective coat of paint, and anything else that will improve the condition, usefulness and value of the farmstead.

For those who have cash available, cash payment is, of course, the best method, the favorable time is NOW. But if a farmer finds it more convenient to pay for this type of work out of his farm income—as he receives it—now is the opportune time for him to go ahead also. He may borrow money for these needed improvements from any financial institution cooperating with the Federal Housing Administration.

In addition to new buildings or building repairs, there are scores of other improvements the government will provide funds for.

Nothing is more important than an adequate pure water supply. Shallow wells, if favorably located, may furnish good quality water, if protected with tight curb and coping. Increasing the depth of a well will often increase its output.

If the water supply is inadequate, a deep well may be necessary. This may be dug, driven or drilled as local conditions may govern. In areas in which adequate wells are not obtainable, large cisterns or reservoirs may serve for the collection of roof water. In such cases, special care should be exercised to safeguard the quality of the water.

A pump and pressure system with water piped into the home, and also the various parts of the farmstead, is an improvement no farmer should deny himself or his family. It saves time and labor and improves living conditions.

Waste, if not properly disposed of, is a constant source of disease and infection. The installation of a septic tank with tile drainage-field will properly dispose of waste from the plumbing system. Care should be taken that the water supply is not polluted or contaminated by this drain as discharged on or near slopes inclining toward a well, spring or other source of water supply.

Work on the farm—both in the home and elsewhere—is made easier, and living more comfortable, by the installation of light and power-generating equipment where these facilities are not readily obtained from public utility companies.

Farm fire loss is relatively quite high. The adoption of fire-prevention safeguards will reduce this loss. The proper construction and repair of chimneys and fire places is essential. Many fires originate in unprotected cellars. Lighting arrestors, used correctly, and properly installed lightning rods decrease the number of fires caused by lightning.

Adequate and well kept walks and drives, and a well drained yard make it easier to perform farm chores.

Roofs should be inspected and loose or missing roofing materials repaired or replaced. An application of roof coating may preserve it from further deterioration.

Plymouth lumber and supply dealers can provide you with everything you need under the government's building plan—and The Mail found out last fall when it erected its new building that supplies can be purchased just as cheap, and in many cases cheaper, right here than they can be secured anywhere else. Whatever you do to build up your place not only helps you but it helps the trading center of our locality.

Shear Showing New Frigidaires

Nineteen thirty-five models of Frigidaire, world's fastest selling electric refrigerators, are being shown for the first time in the retail store of the Plymouth Buick Sales Co. dealer here for the products of this unit of General Motors.

Sensationally new in design, carrying all the efficiency features required for household food protection and preservation and priced for every purse and purpose, the line consists of sixteen models in four series, all featuring the famous Frigidaire super freezer, which, according to Mr. Shear, is a remarkable contribution to economical home refrigeration.

The super freezer, principal feature of an electric refrigerator that has everything," Mr. Shear said, "provides the cold necessary to properly preserve food, to freeze ice cubes and desserts.

"With it on the more popular lifetime porcelain models is the new quick freeze switch that permits a housewife to freeze cubes and desserts quickly, on completion of which, the unit switches back to normal operation and holds a steady low temperature.

"The 1935 Frigidaires are the result of careful analysis of the requirements of housewives based on a house to house survey in various parts of the country which represents the sentiment of 100,000 families who either have electric refrigerators or will buy them in 1935.

"The striking result of this survey was that prospects want, above all, economical and efficient refrigeration, and secondly, various features that broaden the uses of a refrigerator. With the super freezer, we have supplied the new day requirement for extraordinary capacity and with the cold control, quick freeze switch, hydrators, automatic ice tray release, automatic reset defrosting, tall bottle storage space

Attend Meeting of A. & P. Store Workers in Flint Tuesday Eve. 1tp

All of the employees of the Plymouth A. & P. store, including Manager H. W. Stark of the grocery department and B. E. Peabody, manager of the meat department, were in Flint Tuesday night to attend a meeting devoted to Founders' week, one of the important events of the year in the store's business. The clerks, Arthur McGeary, Calvin Stevens, Ernest Esabeth and L. Chase, were also in attendance at the meeting attended by many hundreds of A. & P. workers. 1tp

It was 75 years ago when Geo. Huntington Hanford opened the first A & P store. He was a young man from Maine who came to New York at a time when the smartest business men were those who made the greatest possible profit out of their customer's money. He opened his store on the unique idea that you give people as much as possible for their money, your business will succeed beyond the dreams of less far-sighted merchants. 1tp

He created a sensation when he sold tea, at that time two to three dollars a pound elsewhere, for half those prices—he had bought it direct from a ship. As the business grew he developed his first idea in hundreds of new ways. As he built volume, so he saw increasing the opportunities to reduce costs by intelligently moving goods from their source to the consumer. Agents in the Far East brought and shipped tea direct to him—he planned his stocks carefully to fit his demand, and every additional saving helped him reduce prices. 1tp

To give people the utmost for their money demanded perfect adaptation to conditions. People who couldn't come to his store ordered by mail, and when better roads were built, wagons radiated from his store along routes always carefully planned to transport goods to customers at the minimum cost. 1tp

The country underwent startling changes, railroads opened new territories, made new shipping savings possible, telegraph and telephone lines offered opportunities for quick buying and instant control, and automobiles changed the face of the earth. This was the beginning of the great chain of A & P stores. 1tp

U. of M. Professor Tells Of Russian Progress In Educational Work

The talk on "Education in Soviet Russia" given before the members of the Woman's Club on February 17th by Dr. Howard Y. McClusky, School of Education, University of Michigan, was both interesting and educational. Dr. McClusky's impressions of Russia were based on a personal visit to this country for educational research. 1tp

Something of the vast size of Russia can be gained from the fact that it is as far from Moscow to Pittsburgh as Moscow and there is no country in the world more primitive. 1tp

Since the advent of the Soviet regime there has been a marked emphasis given to the educational trend—all, however, in favor of the Soviet way of thinking. There is a decided bias in favor of working classes and preference is given to children workers and farmers rather than to those of the higher walks in life. 1tp

The conservatories of music, art galleries, and theatres are still of the best and technical schools are improving steadily. Teachers do not have to be Bolsheviks, but must be in sympathy, and are regarded with great respect. Each year they are given two months off with pay for travel and study. Research work is done by the government. Great emphasis is given to Adult Education and the Soviets are most curious about the culture of other nations. English speaking people are encouraged to attend their summer school sessions. 1tp

Not all Russians are Communists—they average about 3,000,000 out of each 10,000,000. Restrictions to become a Communist are very firm, being an atheist is one of the first. When all is summed up, Dr. McClusky concluded, one may hate Russia but they cannot ignore it. There is nothing in Russia which compares with Western Civilization. 1tp

Since the Soviet government took charge in 1917, illiteracy has been reduced from 75 to 80 per cent to 10 per cent. Every factory has its library and workers attend school when not working. The first item on their budget is education and the second is industry. The children are trained to live the life they will have to live and great emphasis is being placed upon health. 1tp

Other enjoyable numbers on the program for the afternoon were two piano solos, Lily of the Valley and Love Song by Cadman, played by Mrs. Crandall; a splendid reading by Mrs. Ella Mabee and three delightful dance numbers, a Ballet by Jean Woodbury, Marion Goodman, and Signe Hegge; a Bowery Dance by Jane Olsaver and Katherine Moon; and a tap dance by Betty Sutton and Audrey Stein of Wayne. The dancers were pupils of Mrs. Harmon and Mr. Howard Culver played their accompaniments. 1tp

Mrs. Ada Murray presided as chairman of the program. The meeting on March first will be the Annual Luncheon at 1 p.m. at Hotel Mayflower, followed by a program in which Mrs. John Pienker, Jr. will talk on "Youth Incorporated" and the Senior Drama Club under the direction of Miss Winifred Ford will give a one act play. This will be Guest Day. 1tp

The weather man may make a mistake now and then but most of the time he hits the nail pretty close to the top. The wastebasket at the post-office had a full day Monday. Do Plymouth Mail Want Ads Pay? . . .

Just ask Mr. E. Rider, who lives at the corner of Ford and Wayne roads.

He ran his first want ad in The Mail some two or three weeks ago, advertising a team of horses for sale.

In the first two days after the paper went to its readers, he had 17 callers at his place—and he sold the team.

The second week he advertised his farm tools for sale. He sold most of them with only a few articles left. The total cost of these sales running into several hundreds of dollars was but 50 cents.

But this story is not unusual. Nearly all the users of this column have the same story to tell as to the success they have with their little 25 cent investments.

Many Present At D. A. R. Meeting

The Daughters of the American Revolution, Sarah Ann Cochran Chapter, held its regular meeting in the home of Mrs. Walter Nichol Monday afternoon with a large attendance. Mrs. Sydney Strong, the vice Regent, presided in the absence of Mrs. Carl Bryan, the Regent. Mrs. Donald P. Yerkes, the chaplain, read from the first chapter of Joshua, and commented on the "Fear Not" of the Bible. Led by the Chaplain the Daughters repeated the Lord's prayer and saluted the Flag.

After the usual business meeting, Miss Mabel Spicer told of two boys gazing at Maine's torn and ragged battle flags. They were heard to say disdainfully: "Nothing, but flags." This inspired Moses Owen to write some beautiful verses that have been engraved on a tablet and placed in the rotunda of State House at Augusta where the flags are displayed.

Miss Spicer read the poem, and we quote a few of the verses: "Nothing but flags—yet they are bathed with tears. They tell of triumphs, of hopes, of fears.

Of a mother's prayers, of a boy's away. Of a serpent crushed, of a coming day. Silent, they speak, and the tear will start. As we stand beneath them with throbbing heart. And think of those who are near forgot. Their flags come home—why come they not?"

Mrs. Robert Reck read very effectively in a brief, but unusually fine review of the life of Lincoln, and Mrs. William Rattenbush presented an interesting article on the six churches which Washington attended. The National Chapter has indicated the days intervening between the birthdays of these two great men as "National Defense Week."

In order to properly observe this, the rest of the program was in charge of Mrs. Frederick Lendrum of Farmington who is the local chapter's chairman on the "committee of National Defense."

Mrs. Lendrum called upon Mrs. George Wilcox to explain the "Land Grant Colleges." This she did very ably, telling of their origin by legislative act in 1862. The government donated for the support of these colleges 30,000 acres for each senator and representative a state had. There are sixty-nine such colleges, whose physical property is valued well over $350,000,000. Military drill at these colleges is compulsory, only as an individual college makes it so. There are 17 Land Grant Colleges for the negroes in the southern states.

Mrs. Sydney Strong presented the Boy Scout movement with great earnestness, telling how the splendid ideals upheld by a Scout results in character which produces a fine citizen. A great church that has stood aloof from the movement is being won by the concrete evidence of the great things scouting has done for boys. Few scouts ever reach prison. However, unprincipled politicians are not keen for the movement, as Scouts never lend themselves to their schemes. Mrs. Strong urged four years work beginning at the age of twelve. "Club Scouts" may be enrolled at nine. The dues are only 50c a year.

Mrs. Lendrum in closing the symposium read the following definition of a Pacifist to which the Daughters subscribe:

"A true Pacifist desires peace and works to remove the causes of war. He faces facts as they are in a practical world and recognizes the imperfections of human nature. He believes that the best way to secure peace is to be strong and to be able to repeat at-

Jonah Had a Sister

By J. T. BARBER

TERRY GELDON dreamed that he could marry Thelma Bland and be a horse writer on the Herald-Sun, he'd be the luckiest man alive, and he believed it until he got that second blowout on the road to Havre de Grace.

It was beginning to look like an even bet that he wouldn't get to the track until after the last race when there wouldn't be a chance of catching Old Man Catherton.

He looked around instinctively for some sign of a jinx. Only a jinx could do things like that to a coluborn child of fortune. His roving eye encountered Miss Bland. Horror chilled him but he faced it resolutely.

"Thelma—do you read your Bible?"

"I've practically been a nunny for the last hour. If that's any good to you, What's the background?"

"Well, take Jonah, I mean—his family."

"No family," replied Thelma promptly.

"No sisters?"

"None. Terry—Thelma Bland suddenly examined him minutely—"that wouldn't be your cowardly way of blaming me for these sundry and minor difficulties, would it?"

"Am I saying?"

"You distinctly am. And if there's any more of the same I'll get right out here and walk home."

It made Terry relent. "You'll stay," he said. But they had to park for ten minutes. Then Thelma said, "That's more like it," and Terry felt lucky again.

He had practically forgotten his suspicions by the time they reached the "Graw" and he wandered about in front of the parliment windows confident that Old Man Catherton would barge up and buy a ticket.

Presently Old Man Catherton barged up. Terry moved with the speed of a clumpion.

"Excuse me, Mr. Catherton. I'd like to be a racing writer on the Herald-Sun."

"Tump!" Old Catherton glowered. "And what makes you think you can be a racing writer on the Herald-Sun?"

"A couple of years on the Harbortown Times-News, and I know horses. Ask us anything."

"Nonsense!" Old Man Catherton fingered his money and looked anxiously toward the windows. "You don't know what you're talking about. Luck is what you need to be a good reporter. Luck, by gad!"

A Lady Short

By WILLIAM DE LISLE

THEY both behaved splendidly. Nobody in the room could guess that the introduction was not that of two strangers.

He wondered as he drank his soup what could have brought her to this house, what she could possibly have in common with fat, vulgar Mrs. Bowman, their hostess. He eyed her askance, and thought of the first time they had been sent to dinner together, fifteen months before. Then she had been friendly; now she scorned him. Well, he would scorn her, too. He would show her how little he cared.

"I heard some one say this morning that you were engaged," he said, turning to her. "May I congratulate you?"

She shot him a hostile glance. "It is not true. Once is enough."

There was a silence. Finally he said reproachfully, "You haven't asked after my aunt Laura?"

"How is Miss Glendon?"

"Very well, thank you. She's never had another attack since that one. Strange, isn't it? If she hadn't been ill we wouldn't have quarreled, and we'd have been married by now."

Aunt Laura lived alone on her beautiful place in Maine in close proximity to some splendid trout fishing and a good golf course. When she heard of the engagement she wrote and asked them down for a visit. They jumped at it. They meant to fish in the morning, play golf in the afternoon, and take long moonlight rides in the evening. But nothing happened as they had expected. It was raining when they arrived, and Aunt Laura, complaining of a chill, went to bed.

But the rain, the confinement, and the prolonged tete-a-tete got on their nerves. What led to the explosion neither could say now, but the engagement terminated at precisely this thirty. Shortly afterwards he had been sent abroad by his firm, had now just returned, and had never seen nor heard of her till Mrs. Bowman introduced them before dinner.

"Perhaps," she said presently, "I ought to congratulate you."

"It would be premature," he confessed. "Though I must admit an announcement is not far off."

Their eyes met. He said hastily, "Have you died her before?"

"No."

"How did Mrs. Bowman manage to rope you in?"

A faint blush dyed her cheeks. "If it comes to that, how did Mr. Bowman rope you in?"

"He's one of our best clients. But I had no idea—"his voice dropped to a whisper—"I would meet a gang like this. I repeat—how did Mrs. Bowman ever get you to come?"

"I happened to have an other engagement."

"Well, of course, it's none of my business. Let's change the subject. How's your austere guardian, Mr. Hopkins?"

She flushed. "He is abroad," she said, turning slightly away.

For a moment neither of them spoke. Then,

"In your know," he said suddenly, "that your Mr. Hopkins had a lot to do with our engagement going on the rocks?"

She said "genuinely surprised."

"How could he?"

"You remember I saw him the day before we went to Aunt Laura's? Well, he implied that I was after your money. That was really what started it. I began the visit in a hot temper."

But she had risen. He watched her going out with the other women—a swan among a brood of waddling geese. And again he wondered what she could be doing in that house. He moved toward Mr. Bowman.

"Mr. Bowman," he began, "the girl I took to—Miss Dodd—"

"Say, I'm sorry about that," Mr. Bowman interrupted. "It's the wife's fault. She got you mixed up with Mr. Goetz and gave him your lady, Miss Miller. Then we were a lady short, so she called in Miss Dodd, our governess."

"Governess! Miss Dodd? Why I used to know Miss Dodd very well. An heiress—"

"Not any more. From what I heard her guardian gambled most of her money away, then shipped to Europe. Left her without a dime."

In the living room she was sitting apart. He went straight up to her.

"I've heard," he added, "I mean about Hopkins. Why didn't you tell me?"

She looked up in surprise. "You didn't know...? But I see now you didn't." She stopped, her lips quivering. Gently, he led her out on the terrace.

"Don't pity me," she cried suddenly, abruptly. "I don't want your pity. I wish I hadn't come out here. Why did you bring me?"

"I wanted to apologize for my attitude," he told her. "I was lying at dinner when I pretended I didn't care. And, of course, it's all nonsense about Miss Tobin. I want you to give me another chance, Ellen."

For an instant she stood still, while he searched her eyes for an ancient sign. "I found it. Then he took her in his arms.

Bulbs and Bill

By AMY CAMPBELL

"MOTHER," her older daughter said to Harriet after lunch. "Bill and I are going to their cottage to plant bulbs this afternoon."

Harriet marveled her subtlest common sense and blandest his tripartite ability.

"Sounds pleasant to plant bulbs today. Who is Bill, where is the cottage and what kind are you planting?"

Meanwhile she adroitly hid her toward toward. Bettina must not escape her with the wrong boy in the wrong place alone at sixteen for indefinite hours. And Bettina must never suspect that was a really vital decision.

"Bill? Don't say you haven't seen him," found here—Bill Moore. His mother knows him."

"Describe him," suggested Harriet cheerily as if her attention were only slightly captured.

"Oh—impulsively—that's not my line. He's taking the convertible and a load of bulbs in the rumble. We may go to the picture at the Pat tonight if we feel like it when we get back. Bill says gardening is a trifle exhausting at first. I'm to stub in the bulbs while he digs and shows me where. Don't fuss if we're late. Mom, for it may take hours."

"Sorry I didn't pay proper attention to your plans, but this young man is going and where is it? Bulbs and Bill, you said—what else?"

"We're going to their cottage at the beach," Bettina said, with the degree of belated respect for her mother's opinion that Harriet had waited for.

"Who is with you beside Bill, Sweet?" Harriet felt the affection which she allowed to creep into the little man.

"Why, just the two of us, why?" and then, suspiciously—

"Say, Mom, just what is this all about? You're not going out to the cottage and questioning Bill when he comes and say we must have a chaperon or we can't go."

So it had to come to a crisis.

She said, "Dear, don't be so behaved. Quite naturally you can't wish, when you come to think of it, when you want Bill to take his mother or some one else, on such a heavenly afternoon. She'd probably like to oversee her own color scheme anyway. Why not phone and investigate with her first? She would be fattered and value you at the same time."

Harriet hated herself for being officious.

Bettina's voice pierced her with its grave intensity.

"Don't be so jittery. Of course Bill's mother isn't going. She is candid about effort of any kind. Lathes it. The cottage is locked, barred and winter-bound. The distance, twenty miles. Work will take perhaps two hours. We'll tea at the hotel grill which is still open. Be back for dinner and a later show. There's a program. Take it or leave it!"

"Movie stuff, darling. But unconvinced. You can't talk to your hostess like that and remain a popular guest. Plan something else at once and don't waste the day. The other is naturally off. Sorry I can neither take it nor leave it just yet. Not at sixteen, Sweet. Not and be your proper mother."

"Well, if that isn't cool! And heavy. Maternal solicitude indeed." Bettina said this with deadly deliberation.

Harriet hid her anger successfully as she said, "Don't attempt to be horridly clever, darling. And walked with assumed serenity into the sunroom."

Bettina called after her: "Oh, please Daddy, that's what I'm do."

"Anything you like, Bettina," was the smooth accent. "I like your Daddy's judgment about anything and everything."

Then Harriet appeared to become lost in a bit of writing she was doing. In exactly five minutes she heard her daughter's dulcet tones at the telephone.

"Bill, I don't think I want to delve in the soil today and I forgot a date for tonight. I really want to surprise Mom with a tray of afternoon tea today."

Harriet blinked away the sudden moisture from her lashes. Bettina had her father's quick forgetful nature. In a few minutes she would appear promptly penitent and atoning, anxious to show Harriet how she valued her mother's favor, really.

At sixteen, Harriet thought she too had believed her mother a kill-joy. Yes, that was the old significant word they had for it.

At that moment she heard a tumultuous arrival, distinctly male and very young and robust.

"Say, Bill," roared a fine unmodulated British voice, "I've just thought of the hunkiest idea. Let's take your mother planting to the lake and we could all have tea at the grill instead of pottering about here. You ask her for me, will you?"

Harriet thought, "So that's how they manage these things now." Distinctly clever. Or had it just happened?

She would take a book and go far down the cliff and read and let them plant bulbs merrily.

Heroes Are Made

By JACK BLOODHART

WHEN the authorities at the university finally rebelled at Tommy Nash's never-ending infractions of what Tommy considered foolish and tiresome rules, they expelled him. That such an action would make him a national hero they did not know, and it was likewise an unknown quantity to Thomas A. Nash, Sr.

"You," he said frostily to Tommy, "are no good. You waste my money and yours on chorus girls and night clubs. You have no sense, no guts, no—"

"That," said Tommy, "is not only untrue, it is—"

"Say no more about it. And now, young man, you may get out. I'm through with you. You get no more of my money, not one cent, until you've proved you deserved it. That's all. Good day, sir."

A suitcase in each hand, Tommy Nash stood surveying the battered sign of the old frame house, "Mrs. O'Regan's" it read. "Rooms for Rent."

Mrs. O'Regan eyed him suspiciously. She was a lady of ample proportions and a wicked eye.

"Five dollars a week," she said. And as an afterthought, "In advance."

Tommy hastily calculated that to relinquish five dollars would leave him three dollars and seventy-five cents, and the contents of one of the suitcases with which to forest his troubles. He directed Mrs. O'Regan to lead on.

Tommy hastily admitted that he was charmed with the room.

Before she left Mrs. O'Regan said:

"I do not allow any drinking, gambling or playing the radio after midnight. Also no women in single men's rooms."

"Perhaps," Tommy said, half to himself, "I have made a mistake and am in the Martha Washington." Then he hastily drew himself to his full height and thundered, "Madam, I am a gentleman and scholar, and such lascivious pursuits as you just mentioned find no place in my scheme of living."

Startled, Mrs. O'Regan shot him a bewildered look and scurried off down the hall.

Tommy turned into his room, opened one of the suitcases, and from it took several bottles of beer, which he placed in a row on the dresser. Also from the suitcase he produced a flat bottle of colorless liquid which might have been alcohol. It was alcohol.

By nine o'clock that evening Tommy was pleasantly drunk. He opened the door of his room, intending good will toward all men. The hall was vacant and dimly lighted. Tommy whistled a yodeled part of a cowboy lament, and dozed back into his room.

"What now?" he wondered. Then he noticed the empty beer bottles. "I," he said aloud, "shall arrange them art—artish—artistically in the hall."

He picked up two of the bottles and placed them on their sides in the middle of the hall. Weaving heavily back into the room, he turned and surveyed his work.

"That is most beautiful. Most art—artish—pretty. I must put more there."

He retrieved two more bottles and was about to resume his labors when the sound of running steps reached him. He gravely put down the bottles and started to investigate when a racing figure bit one of the bottles in the hall and crashed to the floor.

"You," said the thoroughly annoyed Tommy to the recumbent figure, "have spoiled my arrangement of these bottles. You shall pay for that." So saying he lifted one of the bottles and brought it down gently but firmly on the other's head. With a sigh the man lost consciousness.

Amazed and momentarily stupefied at what he had done, Tommy jumped to his feet, tossed the two dead soldiers back into his room, and was going in himself when a hall stopped him.

"Hey, ouse!"

Tommy halted, by now nearly sober. That was an amazing faculty of his which his father had failed to appreciate when cataloguing Tommy's faults.

Tommy saw, with a shock, that the hall had come from the lungs of a burly policeman.

"Oh, oh," thought Tommy.

The policeman came puffing up, examined the man on the floor and handcuffed him. Tommy watched dazedly.

"What—" he began.

"My boy," interrupted one of the officers, "you've captured one of the toughest mugs in town. How did you do it?" he asked admiringly.

"It was nothing at all," modestly admitted Tommy.

His father eyed Tommy quizzical.

"The papers say you're a hero," he said. "I don't see how you did it, but if you're a hero, you're a hero. I suppose I was wrong, and I'm inclined to add to the reward. But I don't see how you did it. No, I most certainly do not."

"It was nothing at all—nothing at all," Tommy explained lightly.

Administrative Board Not to Go Lansing Belief

Legislature Not in Favor Of Killing Off This Important Body

By FRANK D. BROWN, Special Correspondent

The ennu which to date characterizes the 1935 session of the legislature promises to hold that body in its grip for at least another two or three weeks. With few practical problems of state to occupy their attention, members of both houses are engaged in a merry whirl of political gyrations which at times causes one to wonder whether the legislature is really a lawmaking assemblage or merely a public employment bureau.

"Jobs, jobs, jobs!" This is the battle cry of the self-seeking legions that have descended upon Lansing since the first of the year. Their presence sends senators and representatives scurrying from one department head to the other in vain attempts to appease the appetites of their job-hungry constituents. The situation closely resembles that of two years ago when it seemed that every person who ever voted the democratic ticket, and many who didn't, was laboring under the idea that he should be handed one of the lucrative berths on the state payroll. The job complex today is rampant among thousands of Michiganders. It was this problem of apportioning jobs that split the democratic party last fall and it was this same problem which contributed in no small degree toward the political downfall of the last governor. Unless I read the signs wrong, Gov. Fitzgerald is going to find himself spending anxious hours in ponderance on this identical subject. A few jobs are being passed out but they are not nearly fast enough to satisfy the waiting line. It is expected the capitol house-cleaning will be gradual and not much in evidence, at least, until after the lawmakers have completed their work and gone home. Gov. Fitzgerald is credited with being too "smart" a politician not to appreciate the dangers of embarking on any program of wholesale dismissals at a time when he is sitting in his midst a recalcitrant legislature to which he must look for the success or failure of his efforts to reorganize the state government.

It is the governor's apparent disregard of patronage matters and his procrastination in passing out jobs to the "faithful" that is at the root of an open revolt which flared forth in the upper house this week. Led by Senators E. Hale Brake of Stanton and Earl W. Munshaw of Grand Rapids, an insurgent bloc of 11 republican senators, aided by several of their democratic colleagues, succeeded in forcing passage of an amendment to the senate rules which increases the membership of the committee on executive business from five to seven, thereby placing the chief executive in the position of having to lend an attentive ear to the patronage demands of the bolting solons.

The committee on executive business is an important one inasmuch as it possesses the power of life or death over all gubernatorial appointments which require senate confirmation. As originally constituted the administration forces under Senator Gordon Van Eenam of Muskegon, the governor's floor leader, held complete control of this committee. Now, however, with Senators Munshaw and Arthur E. Wood of Detroit having been assigned to the committee by Lieut.-Gov. Read, the balance of power shifts to the insurgents.

The results of this insurrection will be interesting to watch. Its effect on legislation cannot be determined this early, but one thing is sure, the administration will have to consult hereafter with this group of 11 republicans before important issues can be decided.

As each day passes it becomes more and more certain that one or other of the major planks in the governor's program will fail of attainment, viz: that for abolishing the state administrative board. Sentiment against this proposal is constantly growing among republicans and democrats alike. Senator Leon Case (D), Water-vliet, has introduced a bill which would make the lieutenant governor a member of the board. Passage of this measure is contemplated in event the act creating the board is not replaced. For some time past there has existed in many quarters a strong belief that the lieutenant governor's office should be permitted to the counsel chamber as a means of his securing a strong working knowledge of state affairs; preparation against the day when he is called upon to assume command.

The belief that the administrative board will not be abolished at the present time is strengthened when cognizance is taken of the political influence involved. Abolition would preclude the three remaining democratic state officers from exercising a voice in state management. State Treasurer Theo. F. Voelker is not expected to sit idly by and allow their prerogatives to be curtailed in such a manner. In support of their cause can be found a democratic majority in the House, which zealously guards the last vestige of its party's influence in state affairs. Although this legislature may be no better or no worse than other legislatures in the past as respects its supervision of the matters before it, nevertheless, nearly two months have passed since the present body began its deliberations and practically nothing has been accomplished to date. Committees are still sitting on important measures refusing for obvious reasons to release them for consideration. In the House there appears to be a deliberate conspiracy to stall the proceedings until after the special elections which will fill the vacancies now existing. Certain republicans feel hopeful that the four representative districts that are to vote next month will retain republican majorities and thus shift the majority in the House. In order to regain control, the republicans will have to carry everyone of the four districts. Even then, they would be in a very slight margin of one vote in the lower house. The senate has given the quietus to the resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to permit the governor and a non-partisan commission to appoint the judges of the state. The resolution was defeated 18 to 10 and by a 21 to 4 vote the senators refused to again consider the proposal during this session.

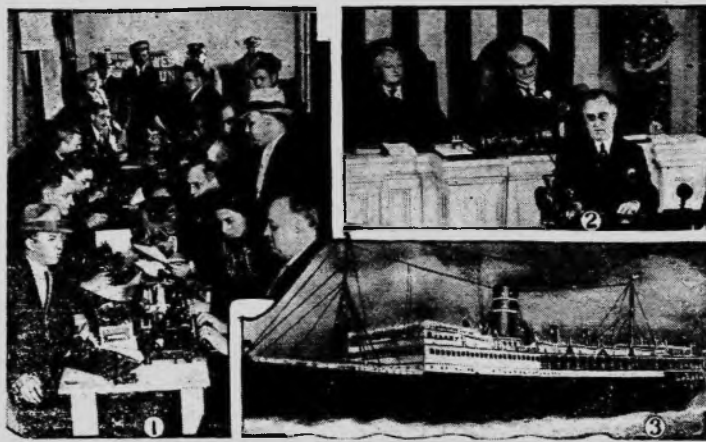

The second bill to be passed so far was sent to the governor for signature last Thursday. This was the Lingeman-Watson bill to enable state banks to make loans under the federal housing act in the same manner as national banks are now permitted. An administration plan for remodeling the state highway department and removing it from politics has been submitted in the form of bills. They provide for a seven-man appointment by the governor on a non-partisan basis, and confer on the commission power to place employment on a civil service basis. A highway engineer would be appointed to direct the technical details of the office. In order to avoid a conflict and prevent democratic opposition, the plan would not be put in effect until the expiration of the present term of Murray D. Van Wagoner, democratic highway chief.

Under the provisions of a bill now on third reading in the senate driving of an automobile while under the influence of liquor would become a felony and the third such offense would cost the driver the loss of his operator's license for all time.

Bills providing for the abolition of the legislative council and the state crime commission have been given approval in their respective houses and, in addition, a measure which would make it illegal to use state-owned automobiles for any purpose other than state business. In connection with this latter bill a resolution has been placed in the senate hopper demanding that all department heads furnish the senate with a detailed statement showing the number of state-owned cars and the cost of maintenance.

Given A Surprise On Anniversary Of Their Golden Wedding

Nearly half a hundred old friends, neighbors and relatives did not forget that Monday was the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Hinkley of Northville. Invited to have dinner with a few friends, they were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Richardson on West Main street where they were given a surprise greeting by the large group that had gathered to help in the celebration.

The Richardson home, beautifully decorated with golden colors, for nearly five hours was a place where there were no idle moments of entertainment. First came the potluck supper with its four tiered wedding cake made especially for the occasion by Mrs. Worthington Chapman. To Mrs. Hinkley went the honor of cutting and serving the cake.

Presentation of honor prizes followed the bride game of the evening and when Mr. and Mrs. Hinkley opened the golden boxes given them, imitation gold coins covered gifts of real currency. But there was one gift of real gold from County Auditor Jack Cowan, an old time friend of the Hinkleys who unfortunately was unable to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinkley were married at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Soop in Belleville, February 18, 1885 by the Rev. H. A. Merrill, pastor of the Methodist church of that place. Mr. Hinkley, who was reared in Milford, had gone to Belleville to work, where he met his bride. Shortly after the wedding they moved to Milan where they lived 12 years, going from there to Northville. It was just 25 years ago when Mr. Hinkley was in business in Plymouth, remaining here for number of years. Except for this brief period they have spent all of their years in Northville.

One son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Hinkley on August 18, 1888, but survived only a short time. Their married life has been spent happily together. Both are in perfect health and both in their advancing years have found delight in contract bridge. Their home is always open to old and new friends and they enjoy immensely their many friendships. Among the guests present Monday evening were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Blackburn, Mr. and Mrs. Worthington Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Richardson, Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Cavell, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ed-

Rotarians Hear Baseball Empire

Members of the Plymouth Rotary club last Friday had the pleasure of hearing the famous American League baseball umpire, George Moriarity, tell scores of his Irish stories and laud the sportsmanship of baseball and its meaning to the young men of America.

"In addition to all of this, they saw the motion picture made under his direction showing the growth and development of baseball as a great American sport as well as slow motion pictures of some of the famed ball players of the country.

For two hours the club members listened to his recital of baseball affairs and they were sorry when it was all over. Manager Harry Lush of the Penniman-Allen theatre operated the motion picture outfit that showed so clearly the baseball pictures.

Mr. Moriarity came to Plymouth as the guest of Dr. Robert Haskell. Following the meeting of the Rotary club, the popular American League umpire went to the training school where he showed the views to the children of that institution.

Badly Injured In An Effort To Prevent Crash

Royal Oak Resident Hurt At Corner of Mill and Ann Arbor

In an effort to avoid hitting another car that was skidding on the ice near the corner of Ann Arbor and Mill streets, James Seabright, 37 years of age of Royal Oak, turned suddenly from the paving, crashed into a tree and a telephone pole and was critically injured last Saturday morning. He was rushed to Plymouth hospital where his injuries were cared for by Dr. Patterson.

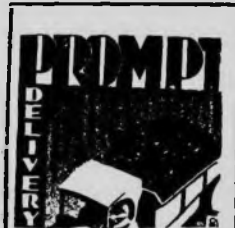

Seabright was on his way to Jackson to attend a meeting of salesmen of the company he is working for. He stated that he was traveling probably around 50 miles an hour when he saw a car approaching from the west begin to slide on an icy stretch in the paving.

As he turned his car quickly to the side of the highway, he also began to skid. His car first hit a tree and then continued on into a telephone pole being partly wrapped around it when it came to a stop.

One of the amazing features of the accident was that the glass in the front door of his Ford car was bent almost in a half circle around the pole, but it was not cracked in any place. Seabright was picked out of the wreckage by Orrin Blackmore of Plymouth, who hurried him to the hospital and then notified the police of the accident. The car was badly wrecked. Late this week reports indicated that Seabright was showing improvement, although his injuries were of a serious nature.

The coming spring will be a good time for those people who have been planning to beautify their premises for the past ten years to make a start.

SCHOOL EMPTIED IN TWO MINUTES

The high school building can be emptied in two minutes of all students and teachers. This was proved by a fire drill last Wednesday. This is excellent time but just a little fast because in case of fires in more than one-story buildings, most of the accidents would occur on the stairs because of pushing and pulling which is the result of haste.

Plymouth Wins First Elimination

Defeating Utica's affirmative team in the first state elimination debate of the season, Plymouth negative debaters met with success in a contest held in the auditorium of the latter school, Thursday, February 14.

During the course of the debate the affirmative asserted that the present educational system is unsound and inefficient, and should be supplanted by one patterned after the federal government.

Rebuttal speeches have been concluded. Professor Scott awarded his decision to Plymouth's negative team. He stated that the affirmative had debated the question of federalization of education, not that of aid to the states, and that they had established no need for such action.

Its main purpose is just to tell you that if you want an evening full of fun, if you want to laugh till your sides ache, if you want to see a popular modern play, if you want to see "It Pays to Advertise," to be presented March 7 and 8 in the high school auditorium.

Them in English

For the past two weeks Miss Wood's English 10 classes have been writing descriptions. One assignment was to write a description appealing principally or entirely to a sense or senses other than sight. Following is one of the best.

As I watched the hands of the clock creep nearer and nearer toward the bottom of the dial, a vague sensation of discomfort began to take form slowly in the pit of my stomach, and my tightly clenched teeth felt as if they were in spite of my rather feeble efforts to convince myself that everything was going to come out all right. Half-heartedly joining in the lively, jocular conversation being carried on by the other two members of the team, I rather listlessly muttered over, through dry lips, parts of my speech, although I was confident that I knew all of it perfectly. Just as I had succeeded in getting under control of my knees through a masterful struggle, my heart gave a wild leap and tore its way into my throat, where it lodged itself firmly and stubbornly refused to move, making itself difficult to swallow or speak calmly. The chairman of the debate had entered the room and in a tone which seemed solemn enough to be announcing our doom, informed us that the time had arrived for the final round, the others down the hall. I was suddenly seized with a frantic desire to turn and run in the opposite direction as swiftly as possible. This impulse, however, I had already followed, the other two on the stage and had stiffly slipped into my seat, speechless.

It is impossible to describe the then seemingly excruciating agony which I suffered as I watched the chairman go forward and give the instructions for a composed air. My anguish reached its height when the first speaker smilingly took her place before the heartless audience and began to speak. I realized in a new pang of fear that I was coming upon soon. The upturned faces of the audience swam before my eyes, my pulses throbbed loudly in my temples, and my ears rang as I realized the importance of the occasion.

Suddenly I was brought back to my senses by the realization of the fact that the audience was clapping and that my name was being announced, as I sat rigidly in my seat, cheeks hot and feet cold. I realized that I was being introduced, and I quickly forgot all of my fears. Soon I was speaking smoothly, and encouraged by the interested faces of my listeners, the miseries of my first experience were thrown aside, and I was gratefully filled with a sense of assurance which remained with me throughout the rest of the evening.

A Deep-Sea Fantasy

Below the mystic depths of the sea, the sea really gets rather Neptune, the king of them all, sits on a pink beautiful, pearl shell. Servants nearby are winking bits of seaweed to keep away annoying little minnows. An anguillid, the sea eel, is lurking little ditties to Neptune's gate of his haired, blue-eyed daughter. Not far away a sunken boat is being decorated for the wedding of the prince and a noble young lady. The sea-bears carry huge loads of flowers to the ship in order to make it presentable. They resplendently wish earth people would make their boats attractive before Swordfish Kelly sinks them. From some hidden source within the sea-bears' ears, little electric creatures or "enters" are being sent to the ship to give them a little electric shock. Visitors to the wedding begin to come from all parts. A mother octopus brings in a family with a child on the way. The whale grins at the guests, and the sea-bears notice the little eel slipping quietly under the fence. Above, float families of sunfish so that the guests will have plenty of light.

Librarians At County Session

Mrs. Murray and Mrs. Pierce from the Plymouth Library attended the February meeting of the Wayne County Library Association.

The subject for the meeting on Tuesday, February 19th, was "Michigan in Literature." Miss Kneeland of the Detroit Public Library spoke on the subject, and especially recommended Hubbard's "Memories of Half a Century," Crowley's "A Daughter of New France," "Dune Land" by Reed. Novels written in late years dealing with Michigan include the following: "Fireweed," by Mildred Walker. The scene of the novel is a small lumbering town in Upper Michigan. The story concerns two young people, children of Scandinavian pioneers—their love and marriage, their hardships and life in the small town and their reasons for staying on when most of the other inhabitants move away. "Stranger on the Island," by Brand Whitlock. Pierre Lenoir, a French Canadian of the roving type, after laying a man low in a tavern brawl, fled for refuge to Beaver Island, located just off the Michigan shore. This island was the domain of the so-called King Gorel, ruler of a strange religious sect, which included polygamy among its tenets. The time is the 1850's.

"Invasion," by Janet Lewis. The story of a northern Michigan settler and his family. Behind the story of a family in the wilderness and on the frontier, is the story of the Indians who witnessed the passing of their lands into the hands of the white invaders, and the transformation of their ancient rituals and beliefs into the material of folklore.

"Once a Wilderness," by Arthur Pound. The central figure of this family chronicle is Captain John Mark whose pioneering parents brought him into Michigan in a prairie schooner. The story itself nearly universal in its appeal, and every American of native stock should read it with deep enjoyment.

Miss Grace Davis, in charge of the work for the Blind in Wayne County, read from a volume which she owns, "Society in America," it was published in 1837 and contains interesting comments in travel in Michigan in the early days.
