While Michigan Fiddles Along About Straights Bridge, Poor Florida County Builds One Seven Miles Over Ocean

Business Men of Key West Show What Can Be Done When Their Very Existence Depends on Doing Something

Otto Bayer, John Dickson and Stewart Dodge are the three well known and popular druggists of Plymouth. People who know them intimately know that they are among the hardest working business men of the city. Not only do they attend strictly to business, but they work long, long tedious hours. Notwithstanding their long hours, all three of them find time to devote to community affairs. They are members of business organizations, luncheon clubs and other organizations which tend to build up a better city and a better state.

Maybe all of this seems a long way from the thing we are going to write about, but wait and see. A year ago there was much talk across the Keys of Florida in improved highway extending from the city of Miami to Key West, which crosses 16 concrete bridges and 25 wooden bridges. The longest of these bridges is seven miles, a distance over water almost twice as great as it would be necessary to construct a bridge connecting the Lower and Upper Peninsulas of Michigan.

The writer was especially interested in these bridge "projects" because of our advance over the past few years of a bridge across the Straits connecting Mackinaw City and St. Ignace. We wanted to know how Florida had gone about it to erect bridges over the ocean and the Gulf of Mexico for a distance of nearly 50 miles, while we in Michigan apparently can get nothing done about a Straits bridge.

Key West is the jumping place of the United States. When one lands in that city, you are just as far south as a person can go in these United States. It is 154 miles south of Miami and only 90 miles from Havana, Cuba by boat.

At one time a railroad connected Key West with the Florida mainland, but back in 1935 a hurricane washed the tracks and bridges into the ocean. So vast was the damage to the railroad that no effort was ever made to reconstruct it.

Key West, which had at one time been the richest little city in America per capita, became the poorest. Newspaper readers will recall that there were articles published in some of our newspapers three or four years ago in which it was said that nearly everybody in the little city was on welfare or on the higher line of going on welfare. Its residents cut off from all communication with the mainland, year by year by infrequent ferry boats that required seemingly a fortnight time to go from island to island, decided to do something about it.

They realized that the thing they were going to attempt would require substantial effort. They decided that their only hope of survival would be to connect Key West with the mainland of Florida by bridges and approved a highway across the numerous bays to connect the bridges.

What did they do about it? The writer walked into the office of the Key West Chamber of Commerce the other afternoon. The secretary was busy and after being asked a few questions pertaining to how the big project was being done, she apparently thought it would be some time after a handful of mud is thrown at the subject. Unfortunately, he had apparently misunderstood our purpose, but he did give me a lot of data.

But before we get a great public agency started through to success, let us look at the fine of the Key West Chamber of Commerce. It was decided to dig out the additional needed information in Miami, as to how it was accomplished.

But before leaving the bustling, progressive, awakened little city of Key West, the writer found out a different fact to act as a "hook" before starting northward.

This story, too, was a busy place. As the center was paid, someone who appeared to be the mayor stood near.

We turned to him and commented about the wonderful bridge project and what a great thing it was going to prove to Key West.

But as he was, the druggist turned loose a flood of information and data—just the facts that we needed.

Gardner was the name of this druggist and there is not the slightest question but what he had been one of the determined, forceful citizens who had put his shoulder to the wheel with the local newspaper to save Key West from becoming a ghost city.

Druggists are always busy people, but here was one just like our druggists at home, filled with enthusiasm and a determination to help make his city a bigger and better place.

No, sir, the state didn't help us a bit on this project. We did it ourselves. We bonded our county for $3,000,000 to buy the right-of-way of the old railroad. Then we secured a loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation and we didn't until we got the work started," said Druggist Gardner.

This is a county project. Monroe county is the name of our county. Monroe county is made up chiefly of water, the Keys and a portion of the mainland of Florida, with a population no more greater than that of Plymouth and Northville townships combined. Key West is the only city of village in the county. The county built that seven-mile concrete bridge. The county built all the rest of them. The only thing that the state does is to maintain the roadways between the bridges.

We own the concrete abutments of the old railroad and they were over the wooden bridges. We are planning to build more new bridges, using these concrete structures as the foundation. They will eventually replace the remaining wooden bridges, but we couldn't do everything at once.

We use the WPA help us on construction. So far there has been spent $47,000,000.

"When you paid that toll, you paid that to Monroe county. Traffic across our bridges is increasing at a tremendous rate. There were over 11,000 cars across the bridges in December. Thousands more passed over in January. The increase is bound to continue," he declared. There is no doubt but what he is absolutely right about it.

When a driver takes an automobile across the Key bridges he pays $1.00 for himself and the car. Each extra passenger costs 25 cents. It costs pedestrians 25 cents, a motorcycle rider pays 50 cents and trucks pay from $1.50 to $4.50. These rates are about the same as now charged for ferry service across the Straits of Mackinac.

The average number of cars across the Key bridges right now is something like 650 a day. Sometimes up at the Straits in Michigan there are five and six times as many cars as that waiting in line for ferry service.

While this $47,000,000 investment serves only one little city of some 11,000 people, counting all the whites, colored and Spanish residents, a bridge across the Straits would serve a vast Upper Peninsula empire consisting of hundreds of thousands of residents, with untold resources. In fact, there is no more interesting place in all America for tourists to travel than in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, and the only access to it through Michigan is by an exceedingly unsatisfactory ferry system when tourist travel is at its height.

Of course Key West is an interesting place. Every northern visitor who travels to the South in the winter time is missing one of the most interesting traps south of the Ohio river if he fails to go over that fascinating high-way of bridges between Miami and Key West.

While right now Key West dips its drinking water out of the rain barrel or cistern, the energetic and enthusiastic druggist who poured out so much worthwhile data about Monroe county's bridge system, declared the soon Key West would have a water system second to none in the South. The city has already developed wells about a hundred miles north and soon they propose to construct a pipe line over the bridges and along the highway to bring badly needed fresh water to our furthestmost southern re-born city.

Local mouthed Washington politicians may try to take credit for saving Key West from slowly decaying into oblivion. Florida state officials may do the same. That's an old army game in politics. But take your hats off to the handful of determined, energetic, never-die druggists, business men, newspaper workers and other citizens of Key West who in two or three years have brought about the completion of a bridge project that has cost over $47,000,000.

No one in Florida dipped his sticky hands into the bridge financing plans and pulled out any $100,000 as "fees" to put into his own pocket.

Here was a case where enthusiastic men and women went to work in a life or death community struggle—and they have won the FIGHT TO LIVE.

Meanwhile, Michigan officials waddle along spending tax money and plenty of it, and are getting nowhere in the construction of a badly needed bridge across the Straits of Mackinac, the cost of which would be barely a half that of the Key West bridges. Seemingly, a little southern city about half the size of Cheboygan can do something the great state of Michigan with a population of nearly five million people cannot accomplish.

The amount of United States paper currency so worn that it must be destroyed averages weekly about 18,000,000 bills, having a value of $50,000,000.

Former Manager Visits City

Perry Cookingham, former city manager of Plymouth, now of Saginaw, accompanied by Mrs. Cookingham, spent the week-end in Plymouth, visiting with old friends. Friday evening they attended the dancing assembly held at the Masonic temple and Saturday Mr. Cookingham spent a portion of the day down at the city hall, visiting with his associates of former days. Mr. Cookingham was recently considered by the city commission of Kansas City as manager for that place. The appointment, however, was given to a local resident of that city.

"Advertising Saves Me Time, And Saves Me Money"
"I've heard that someone has said that Russia gets along without advertising. Well, so did Ancient Egypt, but I'd rather live here now, and read the Advertising . . . I'm not trying to be funny. First of all, it isn't true that Russia gets along without advertising because I have seen advertisements of the Russian Government and Russian Travel Agencies in this country. But that's not important . . . Advertising does a lot for me that I couldn't do for myself. It tells me usually which products are good. When I see an ad for a breakfast food, I generally know what that food is and its characteristics are; and I can tell whether the price is right. That is so true and so important to me and other women that even potatoes and onions today are being packaged, branded and advertised—they are of selected quality and size, are clean, and come in accurately measured quantities in standard packages. I have confidence in advertised products because I have found them to be reliable. So, I buy without hesitation, and that saves me time . . . As for price, I have found that advertised goods sell on a quality-price basis. For the price, the advertised product usually offers as much, and sometimes more than the unadvertised product of similar quality. I say, without hesitation, therefore, that Advertising saves me money, too."

Archery Movie Now Available

Archery, a sport which is gaining rapidly in popularity, is brought to the screen in a picture just released by the conservation department.

The picture, "Feathered Shafts," filmed by the department's staff photographer, Walter E. Hastings, is presented with sound accompaniment. The Indian method of fashioning bows and arrows is compared with modern precision methods and the one-reel film shows also Michigan archers in competition and in the woods during the special deer season, November 1 to 15, which has been opened to them.

The new film is on loan from the department's education division to organizations which have 16-millimeter projection equipment.

Plain or Fancy Hot Rolls Easy

Any homemaker who appreciates the appetite response that home baked fresh bread receives on the family table can utilize the suggestion of the home economics staff that bread dough can include a few fresh rolls made from a portion of the bread dough.

It's true, say the food specialists, that some cooks find their work much easier normally by using neighborhood bakery goods.

It's also true, however, that company dinner always looks like a treat if the table contents include some home baked rolls.

With all that philosophy, the usable suggestion the college staff members offer is that plain rolls are on the cook's list of accomplishments, then some fancy rolls are nearly as easy to make.

There are dozens of ways to change the shape of rolls.

Finger rolls are one type. These are made merely by shaping pieces of dough into shapes about the size of a finger and the job is done. Or a type of crusty bread sticks is possible merely by making the dough pieces longer and thinner. Three of the narrow strips can be braided together for a braided roll.

Then there is the clover leaf. Three tiny balls of dough placed in a muffin tin emerge as the clover leaf, or just two in a muffin tin make a twin roll.

More elaborate is the pinwheel roll. The dough is rolled out thin and spread with soft butter and a filling of sugar and cinnamon or sugar with nuts or dried fruit. The rolls then are rolled up like a jelly roll and cut off in one-inch sections.

Euchreites Play Double-Header

In the double header played by the Canton Center Cherry Hill Euchre clubs last week, H. Wagonschutz and R. Waldecker won their tenth straight game from R. Hood and A. Kuster, 9-4, but dropped the eleventh to C. Blackmore and Aldrich, eight games to five. The win increased their lead to eight full games.

C. Finnigan and M. Corwin won from R. Waldecker and Theisen, 8-5, but in return took the worst beating of the year, 11-2, from Freddie and Buckner. H. Gumtow and O. Eichstadt lost to Freddie and Buckner, 7-6, and F. Waldecker and Theisen, 8-5.

R. Hood and A. Kuster also lost two matches; one to the leaders, 9-4, and the other to J. Murdock and P. Gots, 8-5. J. West and B. Yost split on their series winning 8-5 from C. Blackmore and Aldrich, but losing to A. West and J. Losey, 7-6.

J. Murdock and P. Gots won two matches. One was won from A. West and J. Losey, 7-6, and the other from R. Hood and K. Kuster, 8-5.

Thursday night, March 14, the first eight teams in the standings will play a match with the Redford-Livonia players at the Livonia township hall.

Fall From Wagon Kills Wayne Man

Joseph Selawa, 46, of Wayne, was killed instantly when he was thrown from a load of hay on Cherry Hill road, southwest of Plymouth, shortly after noon Sunday. His head was crushed by the wagon wheels.

Selawa was a stable man at the Isaac Cook stables on Cherry Hill road. The accident occurred when he was racing the team out of the driveway of the Joseph Kubiak farm, bound for the stables with a fresh load of hay. It was reported by witnesses that Selawa was thrown to the ground in front of the wagon as it swerved on reaching the highway.

Gives Tips on Preparing Smelt

Michigan housewives who in a few weeks will find smelt abundant on the market may appreciate a few tips on how to prepare the silvery little fish which are supplied by Dr. John Van Oosteren, in charge of Great Lakes fisheries investigations for the United States bureau of fisheries.

"A gourmet has his smelt-fried crisp and eats bones and all," declares Van Oosteren. "Smelt are considered most palatable when rolled in flour, corn meal or cracker meal and fried in plenty of fat. Some prefer to mix a little brown sugar with the corn meal. Butter or a mixture of one-quarter butter and three-quarters vegetable shortening or bacon grease imparts an excellent flavor. The fish should be fried until golden brown.

"Smelt also may be baked. One method consists of rolling the smelt in flour and placing them in a shallow pan. The fish are covered with slices of bacon, seasoned with salt and pepper, and baked in a moderately hot oven until brown. A second method consists of placing slices of bacon, tomatoes (canned tomatoes should be drained), chopped green peppers and minced onions between layers of smelt in a deep baking dish or casserole. The top should be sprinkled with cracker crumbs and dotted with butter. After the mixture has been baked thoroughly, it should be browned in a very hot oven and served immediately.

"Smoked smelt, while inferior to chubs and whitefish, are quite palatable. After soaking in a moderately strong salt brine for 24 hours the dressed fish are rinsed in fresh water and smoked over a smouldering fire of hardwood for several hours.

"Pickled smelt are reported to make a very palatable appetizer. The pickling method is the standard procedure used for herring. The fish are dressed and soaked in a moderately strong salt solution for several days; then they are soaked in several changes of fresh water for 24 hours. After draining thoroughly, the fish are packed carefully in a stone crock together with slices of raw onion and lemon, bay leaves, whole black pepper, mustard seed and a little salt. For each two pounds of fish heat one and one-eighth quarts of mild vinegar (ordinary cider vinegar diluted with one-third to one-half water) to the boiling point. Pour the hot vinegar over the fish and condiments in the crock and cover securely. Let the fish stand in a cool place for several days before using."

Mrs. Finlan Talks Over Radio

"We like Florida during the winter time—but we like Michigan better. It's pleasant to come down here when it's cold up home and enjoy the sunshine and be able to be outdoors," was, in part, the radio talk Mrs. Charles H. Finlan made at Lakeland, Florida a few nights before Mr. and Mrs. Finlan ended their Florida vacation.

That's correct — Mrs. Finlan was asked to talk over the radio by the Lakeland Chamber of Commerce—that is, she substituted for her husband, who was first asked to express his impressions about Florida winters.

Those who heard the brief remarks by Mrs. Finlan, stated that her first "appearance on the air" was excellent, indeed.

Mr. Finlan, a Tiger baseball fan, declares that the team in its workouts down in Florida, looks fine. In fact, he says the Tigers ought to go places in the forthcoming season.

The Finlans returned to Plymouth a few days ago, after enjoying a few weeks' vacation at Fort Lauderdale and Lakeland, Florida.

Mrs. Rowe Tells of Early Days

"The editor's chair" of the air, an outstanding Saturday night feature of radio station WJR, originated by Commentator Duncan Moore of that station, was occupied Saturday night by Mrs. Carrie Jackson Rowe of Milford, the 73-year-old mother of Mrs. Earl Mastick of this city.

Her talk of country journalism a half century ago, was one of the most interesting of the series that has been heard since it was inaugurated last fall. It was Mrs. Rowe's father who established the Milford Times, something like 75 years ago. The publication has been in the possession of one family for three generations. Mrs. Rowe's son, Robert, is now publisher of the Times, and he is maintaining the excellence that his father and mother and grandfather always put into The Times.

Issue Two Building Permits in February

The issuance of building permits in the city hit a new low during the month of February, according to a report submitted to the city commission at a recent meeting. A permit was given for one house and another was issued for repair work.

At 1007 Harding, a $5,000 house is being constructed by Hugh J. Cash. It will be a one and one-half story structure of brick veneer with five rooms and a bath.

O. Nelson obtained a permit to construct an outside entrance and small porch on his home at 167 Union street.

In view of the fact that home and commercial building in the city last season was by far the most extensive for many years, it is thought by local contractors and real estate men that the construction will again be record-breaking this spring and summer, because of additional employment offered by local business places and factories.

Fruit Men to Meet March 22

(By E. I. BESEMER)
Wayne County Agent

A discussion of fruit problems will be held at the city hall in Northville on March 22 at 1:30 p.m.

Don Hootman, specialist in horticulture, Michigan State college will be there to discuss with the fruit growers their orchard problems.

All fruit growers are invited to attend this meeting. The 1940 spraying calendar is available from the county agent's office at 303 Calvin Theatre building, Dearborn.

The following paragraph is quoted from the spraying calendar regarding dormant spraying:

"The necessity for the dormant application should be determined by the prevalence of insects that may be controlled at that period. Dormant treatment is recommended for the control of the European red mite and the fruit tree leaf-roller. Treatment for scale insects should be made in the dormant period if oil is used, but lime-sulphur may be used for scale insects in either the dormant or delayed-dormant. If the European red mite is to be controlled, an application of an oil spray, which at the same time will control scale insects, is recommended. The serious prevalence of the fruit tree leaf-roller requires treatment with an oil spray, which of course will satisfactorily control the mites and scale. Each grower should study his conditions in order to know what insects are prevalent in serious numbers and then use the minimum concentration necessary to give satisfactory results. Refer to the succeeding sections for specific recommendations. Growers desiring to control aphids of apples and black cherry aphids on cherry in the dormant period may use a tar, tar and oil, nitro-phenol or nitro-crotylate spray. Tar and oil sprays also control scale and mites but are not recommended for leaf-roller. Nitro phenols when combined with oils control scale and mites when used in sufficient concentration.

Neglected headlamps will lose as much as one-third of their lighting efficiency during the first year.

Collision is the most common form of rural highway accidents while pedestrian accidents occur most often in cities.

Book List for Lenten Reading

An interesting list of books for Lenten reading was released this week by Mrs. Ada Murray, librarian at the Plymouth branch of the Wayne county library. Although a few of the following books are not in the Plymouth library, they may be inter-loaned through branches of the county library:

"Sorrow Built a Bridge," by Katherine Burton, the younger daughter of Nathaniel Hawthorne devoted her life to charity. This biography not only tells the story of one of our foremost American women, but it tells it in such an artless, tender way that the reader cannot resist its continuous charm.

"Meditations on the Holy Spirit," by Toyohiko Kagawa. The translator of these chapters by the Japanese evangelist has known Dr. Kagawa since 1910.

"It Occurred to Me" by Muriel Lester. The author of this autobiography is an English social worker, founder of Kingsley Hall in London's East End. She will be remembered by Albanians as a speaker of the Preaching Mission not long ago.

"Elizabeth Fry," by Janet Whitney, an intimate, sympathetic biography of this beloved Quaker saint, known best for her work of prison reform in the early nineteenth century.

"The Catholic Church in Action" by Michael Williams, a timely book which outlines the organization of the church throughout the world, written by the editor of Commonweal. It is authorized by the highest Catholic authority and Catholics may accept its data with confidence.

"They Wrote on Clay," by Edward Chiera, vividly written and illustrated volume on archaeological research, interpreting civilization of ancient Babylon and Assyria.

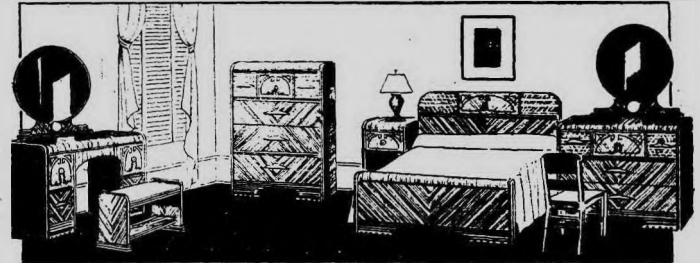

"Preaching and the Mind of Today," by G. G. Atkins, the gap between Christian faith and practice must be bridged. Those who have dared to take this task as their own will find in this wise book not only inspiration, but help.

"Through Lands of the Bible," by H.C. Morton, the story of a recent pilgrimage to the shrines and monasteries and dead cities of the Bible. Rich in religious-historical material; fascinating sidelights on many a passage in the Bible.

"A Guide to Understanding the Bible," by H. E. Fosdick. This book is a brilliant interpretation of the development of the great religious ideas of the Old and New Testaments over a period of 12 centuries.
