Buick to Start New 1942 Models

How good a job America can do will be exemplified in the automobiles designed for 1942 in room, comfort, ability, handling and especially in styling. The cars that replace the 1941 models will stand comparison with previous models in a manner fully expected to astonish many people. Yet they will be made available not only without interference with the national defense program, but in actual furtherance of it.

This was the statement today of Harlow H. Curtice, president and general manager of the Buick division of General Motors, in comment on plans for next year's output in which he gave high praise to the resourcefulness of automobile engineers.

Buick concluded production of its 1941 models this week and as the last car rolled off the assembly line in Flint, plant engineers and maintenance men moved in to ready the factories for resumption of output in 1942 models.

"One thing for which America can be grateful," Curtice said in reference to the engineering of the new cars, "is that there is no bottle neck in brains. There is no limitation on American ingenuity, no ceiling on resourcefulness, fresh imagination or seasoned brain power capable of great accomplishment."

UNITED WE STAND

Americans—all are hand in hand, side by side, united in the great endeavor before us. Every business man in this community, whether he be retailer, manufacturer or dispenser of a necessary service to the public, now has uppermost in his mind full cooperation with our government. Every youth in training faces his new responsibility with pride in contributing to that National Defense by which we can best insure peace. Every woman, be she teacher or mother, is more devotedly than ever instilling in the children who come under her wing, faith in the rock-bed principles on which have been built our democracy: life blood of the American way of government and social order. No one is "out of the picture" in this new portrait of a people united in a common cause!

Upon the working people in every phase of industry rests perhaps the greatest responsibility of all. For they are the human implements of production by which our nation shall grow strong and invulnerable. There shall be no reason for any foreign government, or for any skeptics in our own land to question the sense of one-ness which now pulsates in the heart of all true Americans. United we stand — for all the world to see and respect. United we stand, proud of our heritage and determined to perpetuate it for all time, while the people who are America clasp hands to express their unity.

We must keep everlastingly at the job of creating More Goods for More People at Less Cost, and that is the formula by which we have created, and must continue to create, a richer life for the people of this nation.—Gerrard, Swope.

Historic Relic in Auction Display

Harry Robinson Tells History of Old Stove

A stove, believed to be 150 years old, is on display at Harry Robinson's auction store on Penniman avenue this week. The stove was originally a part of the possessions of William Brown who moved to Detroit in 1816 from his pioneer farm home on the St. Clair river, one-half mile above the village of Courtwright, Ontario, Canada. Mr. Brown was born in Detroit on June 22, 1778, when that place was owned and occupied by the British. After living in Canada for a few years of his childhood, he returned to Detroit which had then become a United States possession in the employ of the U. S. government to build a "stockade fort" there.

On his death, Historian Robinson relates, in 1847, the stove and a pair of Indian weapons of warfare, a tomahawk and skull-budgeon which are still in the possession of another branch of the family, went to his son, James D. Brown, who was born on a farm near Marine City, Michigan in 1813. From him, the stove fell into the possession of "Blood and Hart" general store, then in Marine City, in a merchandise barter about 1880, and after many years' use in the upstairs room of that building, it was stored away in the attic.

The store building was purchased from an estate settlement in 1930 by Charles H. Brown of Flushing, N. Y., who is a grandson of James D. Brown and a great-grandson of William Brown, the original owner. The ornate relic was obtained a year later by William C. Brown, brother of C. H. Brown, of Plymouth.

ELMER H. DANIELS

Sculptor Creates Lincoln Memorial

Artist's Mother Is Plymouth Resident

A former Michigan boy, Elmer H. Daniels, now an Indianapolis sculptor of national fame, has been chosen to create "the largest sculptured, Lincoln memorial in the world." It was announced by the Indiana Department of Conservation and the Indiana Lincoln Union.

Daniels is a nephew of Mrs. E. W. Chaffee, of Plymouth, and his mother, Mrs. Blanche J. Daniels, lives with Mrs. Chaffee at 815 Church street.

The sculptor was born in Owosso, Michigan, in 1905, and lived in Cadillac and Grand Rapids. He was graduated from Central high school and attended Junior college in Grand Rapids. He then attended John Herron Art school in Indianapolis and later studied at Beaux Arts and Columbia University in New York City and in Florence, Italy for several years before returning to Indianapolis.

He went to California for four years where he did portraits of several movie stars including Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery and Dennis Morgan. He returned to Indianapolis in 1938 and immediately began planning and working toward the Indiana Lincoln Memorial which he had conceived while in California.

The Indiana commission calls for carving of five Indiana limestone panels 13 and a half feet wide and eight feet high. The 540 square feet of flat stone surface carving make the work the largest sculptured project in the world dedicated to Lincoln alone.

The panels will depict five phases of Lincoln's life in Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and Washington, D. C., and will be located on the cloister of the new memorial being built in Nancy Hanks Lincoln state park near Lincoln City, Indiana.

At the right end of the cloister will be Nancy Hanks Hall, and at the other, Abe Lincoln Hall. Nancy Hanks Hall will have social rooms and rest rooms for the park, and Abe Lincoln Hall will be an auditorium seating approximately 300 persons. Richard E. Bishop is the architect.

Lincoln Hall will have as its central shrine an Alabama marble Lincoln bust created about two years ago by Daniels and called "Lincoln in 1840." Daniels has located a studio in Jasper, Indiana, 20 miles from the memorial. He expects to finish the work in 1943.

Car Demolished, Driver Injured in Collision

A car driven by Victor Cleaver, 40, of Ann Arbor was demolished and the driver injured in a collision Tuesday afternoon at the "danger" intersection of Penniman and Sheldon road. Cleaver's auto was struck in the middle, turned over on its top and pushed against a tree in the impact by a car driven by Alfred R. White of 14695 Bradner road, Plymouth.

Cleaver claimed that the other car failed to stop at the intersection stop-signs. Driver White pleaded not guilty to a charge of reckless driving and trial was set for next Tuesday evening.

Harold Burley Trains With State Police

Harold Lester Burley, 23-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester F. Burley, of 1324 Sheridan avenue, will begin a six weeks' training course with the Michigan State Police at headquarters in East Lansing next Monday. Young Burley, a graduate of the Plymouth high school in 1935, placed third highest in the state in examinations for State Police work.

Tax Returns Total 90% of Spread

Collections Set Best Record in Many Years

This year's city tax returns set the highest record in many years, 90 per cent of the total summer tax spread, according to a report by City Treasurer Charles Garlett after Monday's deadline for payment without penalty. This report constitutes one of the best barometers of local conditions and reflects the improved employment and earning conditions in Plymouth this year.

The total tax collections amount to $65,257.32, or 90 per cent of the total spread of $72,627. Last year's collections at this same time totaled $59,358.52, or 85 per cent of the tax spread. Late payments will now be assessed at a two percent penalty until September 10.

No more important duty can be urged upon those who are entering the great theatre of life than simple loyalty to their best convictions.—Chapin.

City Issues Warning On Peddlers' Licenses

Housewives in Plymouth are urged to be wary of house-to-house canvassers and peddlers and to request that vendors show permits signed by the local police department. The warning is issued by city officials for the protection of city residents. The police department at the city hall is the only agent in the city authorized to issue such licenses for either inter-state or intra-state commerce.
