Court Submits Annual Report

Reviews 450 Cases, Revenue Totals $2600

The first annual report of the newly reorganized municipal court was issued by Judge J. R. Cutler who took over his duties in the municipal bench last July. With the charter amendments passed at the city election April, 1941, the court became a real municipal court under the state laws and every effort has been made to make it one of the best. After the passage of the charter amendments last year, the justice has used the court room provided at the city hall and also a court office with the result that the court has been ready to function at all times. A complete set of Michigan Supreme Court reports has been purchased by the city for the use of the Court and attorneys.

A compilation of the matters which have come before the court includes 157 city ordinance cases, 194 civil suits and 106 state and county cases for a total of 457 cases. Fees, fines and costs collected and turned over to the City Treasurer include $2,125.50 for fines and costs, $363.75 for civil case fees and $199.75 for county case fees for a total of $2,689. This does not include any of the fines collected by the Traffic Violation bureau.

Map Of Wayne County In 1904 Gives Interesting History Of This Area

There is one sure way for a person to know just how remarkable and how rapid has been the growth and development of Plymouth—and that is to look at an old map of the vicinity. Ray L. Hills brought to the office of The Plymouth Mail the other day a map of Wayne county printed nearly 40 years ago. Not only does the map show the roads and location of farms, but it contains a brief history of this locality.

The "Farmer's New Map of Wayne county" in 1904 lists a population of 2,264 in the entire Plymouth township according to the state census of that year. The township included an estimated 11,500 acres at that time. The map also shows the bounds of sections and private land claims, many of which bear familiar family names. The names of Greenlaw, Whitbeck, Wagonschultz, Kate E. Allen, Scharer, Moon, Rattenbury, C. B. Packard, S. L.

Bennett, D. C. Shattuck, Bronson, Ryder and Kincaid are a few of the "pioneer" families of this area. The steam railroad and old "electric" railway lines are shown but the map includes no improved highways.

The "historical sketch" at the bottom of the map relates, "The first township meeting of Plymouth township was held at the house of J. Tibbits on May 4, 1827. On March 7, 1834, the township was divided and the town of Canton created. The village of Plymouth was laid out and recorded in 1837, by Henry B. Holbrook. In 1838, a year after the plat was recorded, the village had a Presbyterian church, five stores, a wild-cat bank, known as the Wayne County Bank, three taverns and a drug store. The settlement which has grown into the Village of Plymouth began in 1825. In that year, William Starkweather made a clearing and erected a log house on the site of the present village, where the residence of John Fuller was afterwards located.

"The village was incorporated by Act of March 15, 1867, and ten days afterward an election was held at the hotel of Thomas Whipple, known as the Adams House. One of the most important and interesting Government institutions located in Michigan is the United States Fish Hatchery located here. It was established by N. W. Clark in 1874, and after his death, in 1876, was conducted by his son, Frank N. Clark.

"Livonia Township was created by law of March 17, 1835, and the first township meeting was held on the first Monday of April, at the Tamarack School House, on John Joslin's farm near the center of the town. The name of the township is doubtless derived from a province in Russia. Canton township, created in 1834, was named after the city of that name in China, the object being to get a name not found elsewhere in the United States. The name of Nankin township, created in October, 1829, was also borrowed from the Empire of China. Nankin's history, however, is closely associated with the American Indians. A stream on the extreme north of the township was formerly well known as Tonquish Creek and was named after the old Pottawattomie Indian chief. After the peace of 1815, the Pottawattomie Indians settled on two sections of land reserved for them. They committed many acts of lawlessness, however, under the leadership of their Chief Tonquish. The death of Tonquish in a skirmish with the white settlers put an end to the Indian forays in that vicinity," relates the history.

Old Friends Greet Ira Wilson

Former Resident Visits Plymouth

Saturday afternoon and evening was sort of a "gala day" for Ira Wilson, former resident of this city and for the past quarter of a century prominent Detroit-er, when he came out to Plymouth to visit the opening of the new Blake Fisher dairy store that will handle products in Plymouth of the Ira Wilson and Sons dairy.

He didn't have much time to see how things were going in the store, because, it seems that every old timer in and about Plymouth was on the streets Saturday afternoon and evening to greet their old friend, Ira.

It was "hello Fred," "hello Harry," "hello Roy" and "hello Bill" from the minute he arrived in Plymouth until he left late in the evening.

As the evening wore on, both Harry C. Robinson and Fred D. Schrader and other friends seemed to join in the "reception" line—and a general "good time was had by all" discussing old times and new times.

"It's been a mighty fine day for me," said Ira as he gathered together members of the family late in the evening and started back to Detroit. The new Wilson store enjoyed a mighty busy day.

Meat supplies in a concentrated form, the highest quality of protein, the element which ranks first as a body-builder. It is a "complete" protein containing all of the necessary amino acids.

Meat is the richest natural source of the B group of vitamins—thiamin, ribo-flavin, nicotinic acid, pyridoxine and pantothenic acid, outstanding in their importance to growth and health. Glandular meats supply vitamin A, liver being especially valuable.

Legion Post Sends Delegates To Boy's State And Girl's State

A group of young delegates from Plymouth attended the Wolverine Girl's State and Boy's State programs sponsored by the state American Legion during the past week. The young ladies who were selected to attend the Ann Arbor meet were: Lois Ridley, Elizabeth Hoheisel, Margaret Jean Nichol, Nancy Simonetti, Beverly Ash and Dorothy Fisher. Plymouth boys sent to the Lansing assembly by the Myron H. Beals post were Jack Anderson, probate judge; Richard Behler, probate clerk; Robert Erdelyi, councilman; Robert Grimm, city engineer; Noel Hoyer, prosecuting attorney; Bill Keefe, assistant prosecutor and George Newton, board of supervisors.

Nine hundred delegates attended the fifth annual Boy's State, a program in model government, and 200 delegates attended the second annual Girl's State, patterned after the original British-American colonies. Both the young men and women were enthusiastic about the programs and their experiences. Miss Lois Ridley, who has worked on the Pilgrim Prints staff at Plymouth high school, won the second highest award for journalism. She was city editor in charge of a group of reporters on the staff of the "Merry-go-Around." Margaret Jean Nichol won a costume award when she and her roommate dressed as a horse, using a paper sack for the horse's head and braided bathrobe cords for a tail. Dorothy Fisher, who was secretary of her colony, also won a costume award for an attractive Hawaiian hula skirt.

Beverly Ash worked as a "printer" on the mimeographed newspaper, "Merry-go-Around." Elizabeth Hoheisel played the flute and piccolo in the swing and concert bands at the girls' assembly. As captain of her baseball team, with two out and two strikes against her, "Betty" hit 13 fouls, broke a baseball bat, and hit a home run.

The girls enjoyed several lectures on domestic science, dietetics and nursing and toured the University hospital. The program for the girls was designed to instruct them in "better ways for living."

Boy's Finger Bitten By A Cub Bear

Kenneth, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Rich, of Lapham Corners, is back home from a vacation trip to Houghton lake with a story that's somewhat different than a "fishing" story.

This is a real story—and a bear story at that. Kenneth was feeding the bears at what is known as the Spike Horn bear den near Harrison, when one of the cub bears, anxious to get a bigger bite than had been offered him, nipped one of the fingers of the Lapham Corners lad, badly gashing it. Doctors saw to it that there was no danger of infection.

Production of Calcium Gluconate Speeded Up

Calcium gluconate, valuable drug in the care of expectant and nursing mothers and of other persons needing quick additions of calcium to their blood, can be produced more rapidly and cheaply as a result of new researches by scientists of the U. S. department of agriculture.

Until a few years ago, calcium gluconate could not be used in medicine because of its excessive cost. Then department chemists discovered that certain strains of mold, fed upon glucose solution, could produce commercial quantities of gluconic acid at very low cost. Added to calcium carbonate, in the form of common chalk, it converted that compound into the valuable calcium gluconate.

The most practicable production procedure is to grow the mold in sheets in slowly rotating drums, through which air is forced, for the respiration of the mold plants. Difficulties were encountered when the gluconic acid concentration piled up, retarding the fermentation process. Chalk added at this stage resulted in the formation of a good deal of undissolved calcium gluconate, clogging up the drum.

The difficulties were resolved when three bureau of agricultural chemistry researchers, A. J. Moyer, E. J. Umberger and J. J. Stubbs, discovered that the addition of a little borax or boric acid to the fermenting liquid keeps the calcium gluconate in solution and lets the molds finish their work. Later, the gluconate may be separated from the solution, free from boron.

Pvt. Harold Davis Is Home On Leave

Takes Aerial Photos In Army Flying Fortress

Private Harold Davis, 21-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Davis of Orangelaan avenue in Stark district, arrived home last Friday for a 15-day furlough. He is stationed at Bangor, Maine as an aerial photographer for the Army Air Force.

"Each bomber includes a crew of nine men with a pilot, co-pilot, bombardier, navigator, radio man, rear gunner, first engineer, second engineer and photographer," explains Pvt. Davis. "We average three times a week in the air and from these flying fortresses we take photos for mapping purposes and infra-red films to penetrate camouflage efforts below. We photograph each bomb as it is released from the plane and also each explosion."

The aerial photographer is seated in the lower gun turret of the flying fortress where the camera and machine guns are stationed. Private Davis explains. The camera shutter operates at a speed of 150th of a second and 240 pictures, 9x9 inches, may be taken from one roll. The camera operates automatically. If the photographer is pressed into action at the machine gun, in addition to photography training, Pvt. Davis receives practice in aerial machine gunning.

The young man graduated from Plymouth high school in the class of 1940 and worked as a commercial photographer in Lansing before enlisting in the army service last January. He received his preliminary training at Jefferson Barracks, Missouri and was shipped out to his present post in Maine after a month's basic training in the army.

The image shows a reproduction of the Liberty Bell with a large number of signatures and handwritten notes scrawled over it. Some legible names include John Hancock, George Washington, and others. The notes appear to be a collection of pledges or statements related to the War Savings Bonds drive.

ENJOYMENT of the freedoms symbolized by our Declaration of Independence and our Liberty Bell carries with it a deep responsibility! For it is not enough that we are free—we are fighting now that all peoples of the world may be equally free. Whereas in bondage there is degradation, in liberty there is the soaring spirit that leads to achievement... and to a better world. That our four freedoms may be all mankind's four freedoms, we are now engaged in a struggle that must have but one outcome — and that, Victory! On this birth-date of our Independence Day, let us each pledge ourselves toward bringing about that Victory whatever it may entail! Let us pledge ourselves — particularly those of us who can fight no other way — to the regular, payday purchase of United States War Savings Bonds, gladly devoting 10% of our income toward our own and our children's future... toward the future liberty of all children, everywhere!

To our government we pledge all that we have and all that we ever hope to possess—Let's all do our part in this great drive.

JCC Convention Sounds War Needs

John MacLachlan Tells Of Meeting

"The fate of democracy in America is being decided. What part are you willing to play? That was the challenge flung at the delegates to the twenty-third convention of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce held in Dallas, Texas from June 17-20. The war effort and the young men's part in it was the theme of the national JayCee convention to which John R. MacLachlan was Plymouth's delegate.

"Stop all this griping about taxes, sugar and gasoline!" was the advice of Commander James G. Stahlmann, U. S. N. R. of Nashville, Tennessee at the opening day luncheon meeting. "Buy bonds and be glad you can walk on the streets under God's sunshine in comparative safety," he declared.

The young business men from all parts of the country at the convention heard experts from the military, production and civilian fields present a realistic picture of the government's war program and needs. High officials of the government outlined the major problems of the war economy, stressing the necessity for sacrifices on the part of the civilian population, for cooperation between management and labor to speed war production, and for a fighting spirit among the young men of the country.

These officials were Wayne C. Taylor, under secretary of commerce; Brig. Gen. F. J. McSherry, director of operations for the war manpower division, and Capt. Leland P. Lovette, assistant director of public relations for the Navy.

A critical shortage for ideal manpower already exists in the development of a 10,000,000-man fighting Army, declared Major E. M. Culligan, director of information for Selective Service in Washington, D.C. "This army must come from the youngest and healthiest in the nation," he told the JayCees whose ages range from 21 to 36 years. An ex-president of the national JayCee organization, Capt. Roswell Rosenfeld, came from the Army Engineers' service to speak to the group at a huge victory round-up.

Going Back To Old Farm Ways

Fred D. Schrader Buying Wagon Tongue

There is one "farmer" in this part of Wayne county who is going to take no chances when it comes to gas rationing, if and when this part of the country does have gas rationing.

That farmer is Fred D. Schrader, who is right now scouring the countryside buying up wagon tongues, mowing machine tongues—tongues for every piece of farm equipment he has on his farm.

"You know I've got two good teams out at the farm and they are going to be ready to hitch right on to the farm equipment just the minute we can't get gas to run the tractors. I'm not going to worry my head about tires and gas—because old Dobbin and old Susie are "rarin'" to go just the minute they think we are short of gas. Maybe, anyway we'll put the horses to work before we have gas rationing in order to help save gas. The problem right now is in getting the tongues, but you can bet we'll get them," stated Mr. Schrader yesterday.

It might be added that his corn is right now much higher than "knee high" by the Fourth of July. In fact, it's about twice the height it should be at this time of the year.
