

Rotarians Perform Miracle—Raise $14,000 for Public School Athletic Field — First Home Game Tonight

Dedication to Take Place Before Game—High School Band to Make First Appearance in New Uniforms

Sunflower Grows in Sidewalk Crack

Plymouth will use its new football field for the first time this evening (Friday) when the Rocks meet Wayne at 8 p.m. The field has been made possible for the community by the efforts of local Rotarians who have raised $14,000 in funds by subscription to pay the costs of its construction.

The $14,000 fund is the highest ever raised locally for a civic project where funds came from individual contributions. The funds have paid for the development of the field itself and the lights and future contributions will be used to pay for the fence and some kind of permanent seating. Bleachers this year have been provided by the Wayne County Road commission.

Seats will be provided for at least 1,500 people this year. Although the local football team has been playing in tough luck so far this season, the new stadium which has a seating capacity of 1,500 people will be ready for use by the time the season opens.

More genteel names for two of Michigan's many lakes became official with the approval of the changes by the U. S. Department of Interior's board on geographic names. Clare county's Snot lake henceforth will be known as Bluff lake, and St. Joseph county's Crotch lake is now Omena lake. The latter change, locally said to be a restoration to an original labelling, was permitted though Michigan already had an Omena lake in Leelanau county.

Injuries Dog Football Team

Old man "Bad Luck" is continuing to play into the hands of the opponents of Plymouth High school's football team. To Coach Eddie Bender and the team, the future is getting blacker and blacker. A fifth player received injuries last weekend, which may prevent him from playing for the remainder of the season.

Bruce Kidston, 210 pound, six foot varsity tackle who was expected to add much strength to this year's eleven, was seriously injured last Saturday when the truck he was driving was struck by the Pere Marquette Streamliner. As Kidston anticipated the train to pass on the second of the double tracks, he waited on the first. The train switched tracks, however, and struck the truck standing directly in its path.

The team's bad luck began when three players were benched, because of injuries, for the Redford game. The number now stands at five, some of whom will be unable to play the next few games, and some who may be out for the entire season. Bender stated that all the injured men are men he had been counting on to hold strong positions on the team. He has had to do considerable juggling to fill the positions vacated by the injured players. In last week's Redford game, three centers were sent in to play backfield defensive positions.

There are still many capable players on the line-up, and in spite of odds, they will play a good spirited game with the 100 percent backing of Plymouth fans.

Packard First With Complete 1948 Line

Packard has just become the first in the automobile industry to put into production a complete and all-new line of 1948 cars.

"Free flow" styled, a fresh approach in automotive design with no bumps or protrusions, these three 1948 Packard Eights are powered by the industry's first brand-new engines to be developed since the war.

Built in 17 different body types mounted respectively on four new chassis, they have no rear fenders. The bodies extend in simple sweeps over the rear wheels.

George T. Christopher, Packard president and general manager, said the shift to 1948 models was made "without losing even one day's production, an industry precedent."

Hours of Services and Notices of Church Organization Meetings

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST, Sunday morning services, 10:30 a.m. Sunday school, 10:30 a.m. for pupils up to 20 years of age. Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 410): "Every trial of our faith in God makes us stronger. The more difficult seems the material condition to be overcome by Spirit, the stronger should be our faith and the purer our love."

Here's valuable information from Michigan State college agricultural specialists on the soft corn problem: don't be in a hurry about picking soft corn. It will dry faster on the stalk than in a crib. The corn can be cut as needed or hogged down.

Catalogs from Colleges Now at Library

A collection of 200 college and university bulletins was placed in the Plymouth branch library last week. Previously Plymouth library patrons had to wait until the catalogs were borrowed from the Wayne branch as they were needed. Full coverage of Michigan schools is included in the collection, as are business colleges. The larger institutions in other states are represented. During the war years libraries were unable to obtain these catalogs because of the limited supply. Our catalogs became out-of-date and useless, and we are happy that once again we can provide this service here. Mrs. Ada Murray, branch librarian, stated. Extensive collections of these catalogs are now available at the branch libraries in Lincoln Park, Wayne, and Plymouth.

Library Gets Improvements

At last! The library, building has a fresh coat of paint. And that is not all. Other improvements completed at the Plymouth library last week include: a light in the parking area back of the building, a light on the back porch, and additional lighting in the adult room. "Still we are not through," sighed Mrs. Ada Murray, branch librarian. "We are looking forward to the day when the sign once again hangs out in front." When finished, it will bear our new name, The Dunning Memorial Public Library.

"A number of people have reported having difficulty finding us while the sign has been down; a member of our library headquarters staff drove by the building twice before finding us; almost miss it myself occasionally," Mrs. Murray admitted.

Bucking beans to stakes with a sweep rake is easier than carrying beans to field stakes by hand, according to farm labor specialists at Michigan State College.

The world's largest private yacht is the Savarona, which was built in Germany in 1931 at a cost of $4,500,000 for the late Mrs. R. M. Although having only 13 staterooms, this steamship is 408 feet long, weighs 4,700 gross tons, requires a crew of 72 and has an average operating cost of $25,000 a month.

Karl Starkweather Tell of Early Days of Trolley Car in Plymouth

Karl Starkweather in a recent issue of The Hydro Plant News of the Ford Motor Company, told interestingly of the early trolley days of Plymouth. The article was the out-growth of a picture published in the Hydro Plant News sometime ago of an old trolley car. The article follows: Karl Starkweather, Plymouth thread grinder, who proudly added to his signature (my 24th year in the same spot) has cleared up the mystery of the old trolley car pictured in these columns last month.

Karl's letter is published in its entirety as it gives a clear picture of the early operations of the line together with sketches of the lives of the men who first put it in operation.

Space prohibits publication of more letters at this time. Several were received, some amusing, others factual; but all agreeing on the approximate time the picture was taken.

The letter follows:

"The 'How Old Is This Picture?' problem, posed in the August issue of Hydro Plant News, is an easy one. I refer to the old photograph of the Wayne, Plymouth and Northville trolley car. I remember when the picture was new, but credit for the exact year, 1901, goes to Wm. T. Pettigill, who was a conductor on the line at that time.

The location of the picture was almost directly in front of the Phoenix Mills. After many years of successful operation historic Phoenix flour mill burned one night and the site eventually became the point where the Ford Phoenix plant was erected. The picture shows the trolley car on the wooden trestle crossing the Rouge river at the edge of Phoenix dam. This was alongside the regular iron highway bridge which was there at the time. By looking close some of the iron work of the old highway bridge can be seen at the right in the picture.

But in those days no one ever called it a trolley car. It was "the dinky" and the riding public never called it anything else. The days of the dinky covered that period when the road was begun in 1898 until it was finally merged with the big D. U. R. interurban lines about nine years later. Members of the car crew have not been definitely identified, but they could well have been Bill Pettigill and Jess McLeod, conductor and motorman respectively. When shown the picture, however, Bill could not with certainty identify himself. It seems that there had been several photographs of the dinky made at about the same time and he could not recall in which particular picture he appeared. It had been years since he had had one in possession.

The first service of the dinky extended only from the village of Wayne to E. Ann Arbor Trail and the railroad tracks in Plymouth. The road was an independent one and established with outside capital. The owners brought out two men from Detroit, Jim Hardy, conductor and Neil McLaughlin, motorman, to act as first crew. Some time later it came down through the business section of Plymouth but it was not until after the turn of the century that the first dinky came clanging into Northville. I well remember the first car with passengers to come rocking down Mill street in Plymouth on its way to Northville. Fare from Plymouth to Northville was a nickel. Later the fare was stepped up to a dime, or 15 cents for the round trip.

Some other crew members during the days of the dinky were Milo Corwin, Ernie Miller, Lou Root, Nelson Schrader, Harry Passage, Clarence Patterson, Bill Travis and George Rider. Ernie Miller later became connected with the Lapham State Savings Bank in Northville where he acted as cashier for twenty-five years. His only child and son, Wendel Miller, long an accountant for the Ford Motor Co., was recently made general auditor for all Ford assembly plants throughout the nation. For many years Harry Passage has been a tool and die maker for the Ford Motor Co., first at the Highland Park and later at the Rouge. Bill Pettigill is the retired Plymouth grocer. Nelt Schrader became one of the firm of Schrader Brothers, morticians of various people in Plymouth in attempt to get subscriptions for stock in his proposed company. The year this picture of the dinky was made, Main street in Plymouth was a veritable mud hole in moist weather. There were no paved country roads anywhere. Electricity had not yet come to Plymouth. The street corners were still dimly lighted with kerosene lamps. But there was one exception. We had the dinky. And every corner passed by the dinky through town, the line had erected overhead a piece of pine board, about four feet by six inches, and on this board were affixed five incandescent lamps of 16 candle power each.

In 1901 citizens in Plymouth and Northville were beginning to tear up their old wooden sidewalks and replace them with cement ones. Plymouth then had had a water works system for about six years but as yet there were more homes without sanitary plumbing than with. A bath tub was an extreme luxury. Local telephone service had just been installed. All the customers names were printed on a card nailed on the wall alongside the telephone. Eggs and bananas were 12c a dozen. House rent, $10 a month, $12 was high. A few paid $5. Haircuts 25c-15c if you went to Louie's. The factory work week, 10 hours per day for five days and nine hours on Saturday. This gave the worker time to go home and get his Saturday night bath.

The big event of the year for Plymouth in 1901 was still the old Plymouth Fair. The Northville Fair was as yet undreamed of. And so this was life—or a part of it—during the days of the dinky. Then along came Henry Ford and the days of the dinky were over.

Handicapped Are Asset to Plant

When Clarence Jetter, local office manager of the Michigan State Employment Service, recommended that the Plymouth Coil company utilize handicapped persons, the company officials were doubtful of their ability to do the work, according to Jetter. Now, however, they are 100 per cent in favor of the use of handicapped men.

Employment manager of the company, R. P. Delvo, has stated "the handicapped now comprise 25 per cent of our payroll, and we are completely sold on employing handicapped men."

A special chair had to be made for an amputee in one case, but this man is now far above average in his production. In another instance, a veteran with a bad back was put on work where no lifting was required.

It has been pointed out that everyone is limited vocationally in some way. It may be either lack of training or talent, either by preference of by potentialities. In the same way that the healthy person overcomes his job limitations, the physically handicapped can also overcome his, if he is given the right position.

THE OAKDALE

© HOUSING PLAN SERVICE, Inc. 840 SEPT. 47

1st FLOOR THE OAKDALE
2nd FLOOR THE OAKDALE

THE OAKDALE — The close similarity of English rural cottage architecture to our own beloved Early American is strikingly illustrated in the charming story and a half Oakdale illustrated here. The diamond shaped dormer window panes, English roast beef and Yorkshire pudding, give an old world air to the entire house. Replace the diamond panes with conventional sash and the cottage becomes as Yankee as Paul Revere. The differences are as simple as that!

The Oakdale is for the family that loves good sized rooms. Including a full basement, it cubes about 19,000 cubic feet, by no means the smallest possible house. The living room is really immense, 29 feet long including the dining end. It is 19 1/2 feet wide in the deep "L" out of which the attractive open stairs arise. One bedroom has over 200 square feet, exceeding Federal Housing Administration requirements by 100%. The other has more than 130 square feet. The house features truly luxurious closets.

The living room and the large almost square living porch face the rear. The house may thus be placed near the street line to leave all the space possible in the back yard for garden and family recreation. Even the kitchen entrance is to the front, back of its own service screen.

For the small family that can afford to spend a little extra for the luxury of added spaciousness, The Oakdale is an admirable design. Complete architect's working drawings and specifications that conform to Federal Housing Administration standards and those of National Adequate Wiring Bureau, may be obtained; also, additional information at our office.

A tenth of an acre of beans and another tenth of an acre of cucumbers trampled and eaten by deer were sufficient evidence for conservation department issuance of a deer control permit for a farm near South Haven. But conservation officers still are puzzling over the mathematics of a third complaint against the deer. How many fawns, they are wondering, does it take to account for the 30 quarts less milk produced daily by three cows since the fawns are alleged to have begun stealing it?

Montcalm county is taking the lead in legal lake level determination as a means of stabilizing values in resort property. Conservation department geological survey records show it has five of the 20 lake level cases now pending in the courts.

BABSON SAYS

Babson Discusses Home Building St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 3. Next to specific questions about securities, the people out here, at the present time, seem most interested in problems concerning the residential building outlook.

What About Demand? The years 1939 through 1946 saw a net increase in families of about 9,600,000. During that period, however, there were only 2,600,000 net dwellings added to the total.

Hence, it can be seen that the pressure of demand remains extremely high. This prevents any sharp early decline in the cost of construction.

Should I Buy an Old House? If your need for a house is imminent and pressing, you might consider buying an old house if the location is right.

One Plymouth school bus driver, has reported that on just one trip there were four serious violations of this state law by auto drivers.

More than once some school child has escaped death or injury by the slightest margin due to these traffic failures.

Either the State Police are too lazy or there is a general understanding in the department that this law is to be ignored.

One school official pointed out that when an automobile bearing an Ohio license approaches a school bus that is coming to a stop, the Ohio driver never fails to bring his car to a complete stop.

Unless there is an immediate change on the part of the state police pertaining to the proper enforcement of this law, it is known that some school authorities plan to take the matter direct to Governor Sigler.

pairs are not too extensive as renovation costs are now very expensive. In selecting an old house, be careful to avoid extremes in size and architecture.

Bear in mind that the future value of your house will be governed by the price district in which you buy or build.

Mortgage Outlook During the months ahead, I do not expect any change in the mortgage money situation.

The weather here in the Central West is wonderful; most crops are bountiful and the people are superbly gracious.

Michigan's state police are degenerating into about as useless a branch of state government as Michigan possesses.

It all grows out of the fact that the state law which requires wild-eyed auto drivers to come to a complete stop when school buses have stopped to pick up or discharge school children is not being completely ignored and not enforced by the state police.
