Jack Taylors Move to Country

Things do not look so rosy for Plymouth's ex-mayor Jack Taylor after all.

The well known Ex refused to run again for the city commission a year or so ago because he didn't want to have anything more to do with city politics.

To make the job complete and place himself beyond the reach of all possibility of being "drafted" for the job again, he bought a lot on Ridgewood road outside the city limits towards the setting sun and out where he could look down upon the fair city he bossed around for a couple of years or so.

The Ex and Mrs. Taylor completed their job of removal to their new home this week. Now that they are nicely settled, some folks are beginning to talk about annexing a good portion of Plymouth township in order to bring back in town some of its residents who have scattered out among the hills and dales of the attractive country that surrounds the energetic city of Plymouth, which is beginning to bulge badly at the city limits.

We thought we would pause in this hurried world of ours today and look back to the early days of our business in Plymouth

Pictured above is Henry Ford, the founder of the Ford Motor Car Company and Henry Ford II president of the company today.

It was just 27 years ago when Henry Ford startled the economic world by making possible off-season employment for farmers and farm help in small automobile parts factories built along the Rouge river in this part of Michigan.

His idea brought millions of wage dollars into the pockets of rural residents who looked upon these "winter" jobs as something like a bonanza richer than the gold fields of California.

The first plant in this area, which started the realization of his dream, was the one built 27 years ago at Nankin Mills in 1921. During the same year working plans and construction was started on the Phoenix and the Plymouth plants. In 27 years we have seen the many benefits this program has showered upon this community and we are proud to be a part of an organization with vision Manufacturing processes have changed again, and now, we like our company, not only plan to keep in step with the times, but move far ahead of the procession.

We came to Plymouth 27 years ago too . . . and in that span our business has changed, our garage has grown, and our circle of friends and customers has increased 10 fold — for them, and all the other residents in this area we are herewith starting a series of advertisements, to appear each week, telling the story of our past and our plans for today and tomorrow—

New Tractor Tire Now on Market

A new rear tractor tire, the result of two years of development and testing, has been placed on the market by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, according to West Bros., Inc., local Goodyear dealer.

The new tire, which has six major improvements as compared with previous tractor tires made by the company, has been named the Super-Sure Grip. Company officials believe it to be the greatest improvement in tractor tires since Goodyear pioneered the open-center, balanced-bar tread 11 years ago.

It is the result of field tests with 26 designs and patterns of tires under all types of soil conditions. Tread width has been increased to provide broader contact with ground surfaces, adding up to greater drawbar pull for the tractor. Important too is the new uniform, evenly spaced tread design which means a smoother rolling, uniform operation not obtainable in treads of eccentric pattern.

Longer tread bars with increased bar depth at the shoulder supply full depth bite for the full length of the bar. The new tread bars, which are longer, deeper and wider, will give greater traction, with longer wear since more cubic inches of rubber are available for longer tread service.

MICHIGAN
 BY • ELTON R. EATON

One evening last week some 150 friends of former Governor Chase Osborn were invited to a reception in honor of the 88 year old former chief executive of Michigan on the eve of his departure for his winter home down in Georgia.

The affair took place in the auditorium of the Alexander Blain hospital on East Jefferson. Dr. Blain for more than half a century has been a close personal friend of Governor Osborn and each year before the distinguished citizen of Michigan leaves for the southland he makes it a practice to stop at the hospital for a physical check.

For the past several years Governor Osborn has been blind but a few months ago upon his return from the south he stopped at the hospital and by the removal of cataracts from his eyes, his sight has been restored to a remarkable degree.

Present at the reception were some of the most notable leaders of the United States in conservation efforts, among them being the President of the National Audubon Association.

The gathering of so many notables who are devoting their time and their money to the preservation of the natural beauties, birds and wild life of these United States simply to greet an old friend, brought to the writer's mind a question as to the time when Michigan first began to give consideration to the conservation of the bounteous natural possessions of this great state—a state that for more than half a century was the victim of one of the cruelest and most wanton destruction of forests, birds and animals ever experienced, by any state.

Prisons, asylums, reform schools, taxation, the military, immigration, exposures, prison contract labor systems and (during the administration of Governor Russell Alger) such picaresque questions as the decoration of the interior of the capitol, were chief subjects discussed in messages of the governors to the legislature.

From 1885 down to the administration of Governor Chase S. Osborn, one can find not the slightest reference in any message of any governor recommending steps to protect and develop the natural resources and wild life of the state.

Governor Luce did recommend that the commercial fishermen who had started denuding the Great Lakes and the inland streams of fish, should buy a license to pay for the services of some fish wardens. He said he was against making large appropriations for the propagation of fish without providing ample means for the appointment of a fish and game warden.

Back in 1897 Governor John T. Rich told the legislature that he thought some of the denuded forest lands of the state should be utilized in the production of timber in the future as well as for the preservation "to some extent of game and fish."

Hasen Pingree, the "batling" governor who came out of Detroit, was in such a mess most of the time when he was not writing messages to the legislature, that he didn't accomplish much for anything or anybody. He was against everything, and it was not a surprise to find him berating commercial fishermen for their greed, because he was berating everybody. He recommended legislation which would increase the productivity of fish and thereby create more revenue for the state, as well as more fish food for the future.

But not one word in a single one of his numerous messages, which number more and longer than those submitted by any half a dozen other governors, about conservation.

In one message to the legislature he even recommended the abolishing of the closed fishing season during the fall spawning season and recommended that commercial fishing be encouraged at that season of the year—but why quote the words of a screwball.

Governor Arvon T. Bliss was the first chief executive of the state to recommend restraint in the killing of deer. He declared that the slaughter of deer during the fall hunting season of 1900 suggested the advisability of restricting to two deer each hunter might kill. He thought possibly the legislature should pass a law to stop the sale of all game, EXCEPT wild ducks.

He told the legislature that he believed it would cripple the counties by turning denuded lands into state forests when he urged "careful consideration of replanting forests" that had been recommended by the newly created Forestry Commission.

Governor Fred Warner, with an eye always on the economy side of state affairs, said he thought that the problem of reforesting the denuded timber land calls for prompt and intelligent solution. He urged, too, a study of fish and game laws of other states with a view of presenting measures for improvement in Michigan.

But not until you turn the pages of Michigan history down to the administration of Chase S. Osborn can you find a single reference to the establishment of a governmental agency which had for its object the protection and preservation of the natural resources and wild life of the state.

In his first message to the legislature in 1911 Governor Osborn pointed out the importance of the work of the game, fish and forestry warden's department, but he recommended the "establishment of a non-partisan commission that would take over all of the activities of game protection, fire protection, forest conservation and ALL of the work entailed by such a general and COMPLETE policy of CONSERVATION as the people seem eager to undertake. Here can be affected intelligent and practical concentration, insuring greater efficiency at a lessened cost for the work done" said his message. "The end might be obtained by changing the form and amplifying the powers of the Public Domain commission, if necessary, in order to take over the direction of this GREAT WORK."

In these words you find the first reference to a solution of the conservation problem that this state faced then and today—uttered by any Governor.

Governor Osborn has lived to see the creation of the conservation department he had recommended back in 1911 and to note the amazing progress that has been made by that department in the protection and restoration of forests, streams, lakes, birds and wild life. Little wonder that conservation leaders from afar came to pay tribute to one who could so clearly look into the future a half century ago and realize what the problems of today would be.

The President's Labor Day address silhouetted the reasons why this administration has failed in these critical postwar years. He failed when he had a Democrat Congress to work with. He failed when he had a Republican Congress to work with. His complaints remind one of the out-of-step marcher who protests that he is not out of step; all of the rest of the marches are out of step with him. — Harold E. Stassen.

"Land of the Sun" the poetically inclined call Arizona, and from now until late Spring that section will attract thousands who love the thrill of mountain and desert and valley—and chuck wagon suppers out on the trail.

by the Old AAA Traveler
Down Arizona way the Navajo and Hopis and Paches are smiling wide smiles, and brown little Indians are chattering away for dear life. Vivid rugs and blankets are being brought to town and on display is enough turquoise to pave Woodward avenue.
That's because the Southwest is about to be filled with sun-worshippers and the Indians' pockets are about to be filled with vacationists' money.
And rightly so, my friends, for that Land of the Sun, that Arizona and New Mexico and eastward into Texas is truly the heart's desire in a winter vacation playplace; it's a land filled to the very brim with color and romance and legend, peopled with fantastically picturesque individuals, and, above all, with a climate that makes you glad you're alive, doubly glad that you're able to get away from chill winds and icy streets, and triply glad that we here in America have a spot so beautiful you find yourself wondering if maybe you aren't just dreaming it.
Yes, wherever you go in Arizona or New Mexico you are in a land of enchantment. Indians, of course, are tops in interest with we Americans, for since childhood we have had the red man's picturesque drilled into us. It is in Arizona and New Mexico that you see the Navajo women weaving the blankets and rugs so typical of that section, and it is only the Navajo medicine man who is permitted to make the magnificent paintings.
In those sand paintings you will see vivid powders made from crushed rock used as artists would use his paints in creating the ceremonially significant designs in the sand, and if you watch you will notice that no sand painting is permitted to remain intact after sundown.
It is in this section of the glorious southwest that you see the ancient cliff dwellings—the famed Seven Cities of Cibola. It is in this section that you will see the remaining Apaches, once the most war-like of all American Indians, and if you have time it is probable you will travel the 80 miles of magnificent Apache Trail between Globe and Phoenix, in my way of thinking the most impressive stretch of highway in all the world.
But let's see what we might see on an average swing into Arizona and New Mexico. It is probable we'd enter New Mexico through Raton Pass, 7800 feet up, as we travel southward out of Denver, and, once through that pass, you are in the fair-land you've been seeking. Santa Fe and Albuquerque, Gallup and Chaco Canyon, and then across the line into Arizona, with its Winslow and Flagstaff and the swing northward for a look-see at Grand Canyon and Kaibab Forest.
You'll probably head south into Prescott and on down to Phoenix. It is just east of Phoenix that we pick up Arizona-88—Apache trail—through the Superstition Mountains into Globe and Miami.
It might be, however, that time would make it possible for us to swing southward out of Phoenix for a glimpse of Tucson and, of course, a day in Tombstone, for once you have seen it, you will agree with me that gray little ghost town is America's most enthralling single spot.

Volumes could be written on Tombstone, but here suffice to advise you to stroll old Allen street, see the ancient Bird Cage theater and Oriental saloon and the ancient corrals and—don't miss this!—Boot Hill, the cemetery in which sleep only those who died with their boots on.
You won't need much imagination to people that ancient town with characters out of the past—Wyatt Earp and Tex Howard, Mike Noonan and China Mary, "Doc" Holliday and "Curly Bill" Brosius, all bravos who helped make Tombstone the toughest town in the world back in the '80s.
But we can't spend too much time in Tombstone, for there must be the eastward swing to Las Cruces, down into El Paso, in the edge of Texas, and one to Carlsbad Caverns, for those caverns today rank high among America's wonders. There, hidden beneath the cactus covered foothills of Guadalupe Mountains is the matchless handiwork of the Master Architect, and you may spend hours or days wandering through the maze of subterranean glories, each chamber more magnificent than the one before.
One could spend days or weeks in Arizona and New Mexico and not have scratched the surface, but there is so much more to see in that southwestern country that it might be well to cut corners here and there and head back eastward through Texas for a glimpse of San Antonio.
From now well into next spring Arizona and New Mexico beckon you, waving their charms as the dowager would wave her jeweled fan, inviting you to bask beneath the most glorious sun in all the world and to wander trails hallowed by the blood of priest and soldier, conquistadors and adventurer—truly America's paradise of the golden sun.

Astrology
 Your Weekly Guide
 by G. Cardinal LeGros

In this column we will try to teach a little basic astrology as we go along. This week something happens in the heavens that will affect everybody, and it gives us a chance to tell you something very scientific and interesting. The planet Mercury rules communications, trade, deliveries, contracts, and short journeys. It is the go-between, the co-ordinating factor or principle in experience. When it is retrograde, difficulty arises in bringing such matters to satisfactory conclusions. Agreements made fall through, or work out differently than they were expected to, there are delays and confusion, and it is difficult to bring things to a focus or coordinate them. Therefore, the general rule: get such matters concluded, make important changes, adjustments, contracts, etc. before this planet turns retrograde, or let them hang fire until it "turns direct" — resumes forward motion. During any retrograde period of Mercury, stick to routine, follow familiar patterns and procedure, do the research and preparatory work for any given operation, but make the final decision, the actual move AFTER the planet is once more moving forward. During the current year under study, Mercury is retrograde at the following times: October 9 to 29, January 25 to February 15, May 24 to June 16, and September 22 to October 13. Clip out these dates and watch them. Do as you were advised to above and save yourself serious disappointments.

PTA Meeting
 Attracts 300

A crowd approximating 300 attended the opening fall meeting of the Starkweather PTA, held in the school auditorium on Thursday, September 30.

During the evening's brief program, Mrs. Jewell Bell, principal of the Starkweather school, introduced the administrators and teachers to the group, and Mrs. Nancy Tanger introduced the teachers of the Mill street school.

Members of the PTA executive board were introduced by the president, O. C. Woods.

Preceding the pot luck supper Miss Barbara Joinson presented several vocal solos, accompanied at the piano by Evelyn Woods. Further music was furnished during the evening when Mrs. Virginia Fischer led in group singing.

A brief meeting concluded the evening functions.

October 24 to November 22: You were born in the sign of Scorpio. Your color is dark red and your ruling planet is Mars. This looks like a romantic week for you. Don't let your heart run away with common sense. Avoid borrowing or lending money. Force no issues.

November 23 to December 21: You were born in the sign of Sagittarius. Your color is purple and your ruling planet is Jupiter. Your spirits should be high this week. Start a course of study and widen your scope knowledge. Guard against extravagance.

December 22 to January 19: You were born in the sign of Capricorn. Your colors are dark green and brown and your ruling planet is Saturn. Happiness in marriage, or, if you are single, possible engagement. Excellent week for financial matters.

January 20 to February 18: You were born in the sign of Aquarius. Your color is changeable hues and plaids and your ruling planet is Uranus. Gifts are possible this week for you. Watch nerves and temperament. Relax and rest and be a philosopher for a while.

February 19 to March 20: You were born in the sign of Pisces. Your color is all tints of the ocean and your ruling planet is Neptune. News from afar may come. Partnership matters may require attention. The spirit of romance promises to be in the air.

Oil Progress Day Cited Yesterday

The petroleum industry is an outstanding example of growth and progress under the American free competitive system, according to Plymouth representatives of the oil industry.

Founded in 1859, the industry played an important part in the opening and development of the machine age. It made possible

America's commanding leadership in industrial production, they state in commenting on the observance of Oil Progress day, which is next Thursday.

From a mere handful of companies in Pennsylvania, the industry has grown to more than 34,000 competitive firms. This growth is still in progress. More than 2,200 new companies have entered the industry as oil producers during the last three years and 1,300 firms have entered the marketing end of the business in the last year.

Today the oil industry provides a good business career and a good living for about two million men and women; its record of employment is outstanding among American industries for stability, welfare and benefit plans, and opportunities for advancement.

Competition is keen among oil companies to meet the public's growing needs. Expansion of facilities to serve the public has been rapid. This expansion has been financed entirely by private capital and earnings which have been re-invested in the business.

Since pre-war 1941 the oil industry has increased the volume of its products delivered to consumers at a rate twice the average of all industry.

Commercial oil production began with one well in Pennsylvania in 1859. Since then more than 1,200,000 wells have been drilled in 25 states. Aided by steady improvements in drilling techniques, competitive exploration is continuing in new areas and at deeper levels in the never-ending search to produce more oil.

The first newspaper published in the United States was Benjamin Harris, whose first and only issue in Boston was promptly suppressed because of certain reflections on Governor Bradstreet.

Nine-tenths of Michigan's motor vehicles are owned in 16 of the 83 counties.

THE COOK ALWAYS DIES

ONE of the great handicaps—if not the greatest—under which the perennial politician labors, is the lack of knowledge of political history, and his near-disdain for its lessons. He considers them quite irrelevant to his times and problems, though practically the precise conditions over which he struggles have—in nearly every case did he but know it—had their replicas in the past.

Human nature changes but slowly. Human reactions are always about the same. The fear of the Russian colossus today is almost identical with that of the 18th and 19th centuries. The growing resistance to the imperialism of Stalin and his associates is but a duplicate of former human reactions against so many others with insatiable power appetites.

The great mass of humanity is irresistible. "The People" always have their way. Sometimes it has taken centuries—but it is inevitable. The people of our world have either tasted, or are cognizant of, the superlative flavor of Freedom. To shackle them is like impounding the waters of a great river. Sooner or later it reaches the crest and trickles over the dam. Eventually—though some changes occur—"Ol Man River" is again rolling along. And so with the tide of Freedom.

The slave owners of Moscow are making the same mistakes which eventually brought on the downfall of a man with twice their combined intelligence—though doubtless of equally inferior knowledge—Napoleon Bonaparte. Where he conquered he denationalised, whenever possible, and incorporated his conquests into the body politic of France. The ensuing animosities developed cancers—and the end was assured.

Do these men of Moscow know even this recent history? If so, their actions with regard to Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, etc., etc., do not speak flatteringly of their intelligence. Do they realize that the mess they are brewing is the same old recipe which has been used so often before by different cooks under different slogans? It is ever an unpleasant brew, and it leaves its ulcers in the intestines of the consumer—humanity. But the cook invariably dies from over-indulgence.

Mild, calm, hazy weather occurring in autumn. It is popularly regarded as a definite event in the calendar, but weather of this type is really of irregular and intermittent occurrence.

Bob Johnson is Band President

Bob Johnson was elected band president at a regular class September 29, by a secret ballot. After he took the chair, the rest of the officers elected were as follows: vice-president and property manager, David Green; secretary-treasurer, Connie Pascoe; librarian, Beverly Balsey; assistant librarian, Betty Bilow; and attendance, Sid Davison.

Government Class Holds Mock Election

Knowing that experience is the best teacher, James Latture had his students in government go through the whole process of nominating and electing. They had representatives for all three parties, and elected president and vice-president of the United States, governor, attorney general and senator of Michigan. The Democrats made a clean sweep of this election by getting all of their candidates elected.

As in most elections, some of the voters made mistakes and their ballots were torn up. This experience may enable them to be good voters some day.

Principal-Student Leaders Speak at Friday Assembly

By M. Willise Jack Scheel, mayor of Plymouth High school, opened the senior high assembly Wednesday, September 29, at 9:30 a. m. He gave a short talk concerning the reckless way bicycles have been ridden on the school grounds and asked that students be more careful. He also stated that more co-operation was needed in keeping the grounds and school clean.

Jack then introduced Joanne Erb, chief of monitors, who complimented the students and the teachers on the small number of students in the halls without permits. Russell Hasselbach, chief of police, was the third speaker in the assembly. He told the rules that the students should observe in the halls. He also stated that eight boys have been chosen to assist the city police at the football games.

Council Passes Initiation Rules

By Ed Whipple The main topic of discussion at the second student council meeting of the year held last Friday was the rules for the Spanish club initiation, which will be held today. The rules were approved after two small changes had been made. After the minutes from the last meeting and treasurer's report were read, Dorothy Curtis reported on the progress of the assembly committee. Betty Salmon then gave a similar report on the dance committee, and the meeting closed with the appointment of Wilma Latture, Ted Thrasher and Ed Whipple to serve with faculty members on a committee which will choose students for positions on the Annual staff.

Photography Club Earns Money by Selling Photos

Plans are under way in the Photography club for new ways of earning money. The suggestion has been made to take pictures at the J-Hop and sell the photographs to the students. Selling Christmas cards with the students pictures on has also been suggested. The meetings are being planned so that every month a photography contest will be held and all the members will submit a picture to be judged. The other three meetings in the month will be: a social meeting, an outside speaker, and a meeting devoted to learning how to develop pictures, and other things that have to do with photography. The next meeting will be held in the dark room. All the new club members will be shown how to develop their own films. Anyone still wishing to join is invited, but should join this week before too many activities begin.

Class is Writing School News

By Carl Pursell The journalism 1 class of Plymouth High school writes the school news for the Plymouth Mail. These students are learning how a newspaper is put together and how it is written so an average man can understand it easily. They are getting the experience by writing articles of interest for the local paper. Some of the students will probably pick journalism as a course in college and later as an occupation. There are many different jobs in journalism, such as editor, photographer, sports editor, make-up editor and society editor. Miss Elizabeth McDonald is the journalism instructor and also the adviser for the school paper.

Spanish Club Initiates New Student Members

When you see girls walking around without any make-up, with blue-jeans rolled up all the way to the ankles (the new look) and signs on their back which no one can read, don't be too worried—it's just a group of girls who are being initiated into the Spanish club. The initiates will also be asked to carry a "throw rug" around with them and when they see an older member of the club lay it down for him to walk on.

Publication Tells Frostguard Story

A story of the Frostguard, originally developed by Michigan State college and produced by Eyens Products company, appeared in the September issue of Steelways magazine, a publication of the American Iron and Steel Institute.

It forwards the belief that the infrared lamp may materially affect the nation's agricultural system. The magazine pointed out that while farmers will find the new lamp invaluable in saving crops during the first touchings of frost, the growing season may actually be extended as techniques for use of the lamp are developed.

Dr. Arthur W. Farrell of Michigan State college, one of the men responsible for development of the infra-red machine, said in the Steelways article, "On September 2, 1946, to take one example, Michigan had a two hour killing frost. The next frost did not occur until October 1, a month later. Had tomato and melon growers been able to protect their crops for about two hours on the morning of September 2, they would have had four more weeks of favorable growing weather. As it was, they lost everything.

The Frost dispenser, made up of sheet steel and a little ingenuity, will put an end to some of nature's nonsense."
