Fall school bond issue vote unlikely

It looks like voters won't be asked to approve a $5 million bond issue in this fall's school election, after all.

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education Monday night shied away from the plan after trustee Tom Yack said he doubted whether there was adequate time to "certify to the community" the district's need for the money.

A final decision — expected to delay the ballot issue until a January or June election — will be made Monday.

Board members had tentatively agreed July 10 to place the bond issue, earmarked for "equipment needs," on the ballot Oct. 2 along with an additional 1.74 operational millage request. Voters rejected by 500 votes the district's additional millage request in the June election.

"I've been poking around to see where we stood on this particular item, and I haven't even talked to anyone else about this," Yack said, after school finance official Ray Hoedel outlined the tightly-scheduled series of steps necessary to place the proposal on the ballot.

"I wonder — given the amount of energy needed . . . and considering the limited time available — whether it wouldn't be better to slow down a bit and get more involved on a building level," said Yack.

Examining, analyzing and showing the need for each of the items on the schools' "wish lists" might be advisable, added Yack, who took no exception to the 1.74 mill request.

With the ice broken, other trustees chimed in.

"I arrived at the same point," said Trustee David Artley, board vice president. "I think the time is really short.

To do the job people in this district expect us to do . . . we might be better off waiting. We probably are biting off more than we can chew."

Said trustee Elaine Kirchgatter: "My understanding is that we had more input from the building level (from school employees) than at any time since I've been on the board."

Teachers and administrators did give board members an exhaustive list of building, equipment and supply needs, including: furniture; renovations at Hulsing, Field and Erickson schools; computers; buses; and a management information system.

Up to $300,000 to $400,000 worth of the "wish list" items would not qualify for purchase with bond issue revenue.

Dr. E.J. McClendon, trustee, said the bond issue is needed and appropriate, but that placing it on the October ballot would force the district to do "something of a rush job."

Given the fact that school is out and will be in session for only a month preceding the election, "there isn't much time to let the staff help generate support" for the measure, added McClendon.

"I would like to feel that the staff is giving us its unqualified support. There's a broad spectrum of possible support, but if we pass them a fastball, I'm afraid we're going to miss out."

New board member Lester Walker said, "My reaction to what I saw . . . is that I don't think they are tight lists. I'm concerned that we do it with the right list — the right way at the right time. I'm concerned that the current time frame really doesn't allow us to do that."

Hoedel pressed for the original plan.

"There is a great, great need for the bond issue . . . and we do have the basic raw materials from the schools to go ahead with it," he said.

Board president Roland Thomas suggested that a final determination be made Monday. Yack summed up:

"Some may see this as indecisiveness but the administration presents things, and the board reacts to the administration."

IN OTHER action, the board unanimously approved ratification of one-year contract extensions granting 5 percent increases for three employee groups: cafeteria workers, maintenance and custodial employees, and educational aides. There were no language or fringe benefit changes.

Also, a $24,387 one-year contract extension for rubbish removal was awarded to Livonia's AARO Disposal, Inc. At a cost 28 percent higher than last year's, AARO will continue to empty more than 3,600 dumpsters per year for the district. AARO under-bid two other firms by about $8,000.

Trustees approved the payment of $1.4 million in bills and authorized the purchase of $78,573 worth of computers and related equipment; $9,000 for one year's typewriter repair service; $9,960 for a bus radio maintenance contract extension; $109,000 for one year's supply of bus fuel; $14,885 for heating system work, and $5,985 for 15 electronic, programmable cash registers for food service departments.

School officials reported a total of 75 student suspensions (61 boys and 14 girls) in 1983-84, a 38 percent drop from the previous year.

Employees, customers bid farewell as Kroger closes

By M.B. Dillon Ward
staff writer

All's quiet near the papered storefronts of Kroger stores in Plymouth and Canton. The Ohio-based grocery store chain padlocked its doors Saturday after employees rejected, 2,304-496, a new contract asking concessions.

But last Friday the stores were abuzz with emotional employees, upset shoppers and distraught managers.

About 4,000 employees from 70 Detroit-area stores and the Livonia meat packing plant lost their jobs after Kroger made good on threats to close. Employees had turned thumbs down to cutbacks in wages, seniority, benefits, sick and personal days translating to $65 million over three years of the proposed agreement.

While the stores likely will reopen under new ownership and are expected to be supplied by Kroger, neither managers nor employees are assured of being rehired.

Said Canton's Carol Bennett after picking up her paycheck at Kroger's Plymouth store Friday, "I'm real upset."

"People don't want to hire you when you're 46 or 47. I voted for the contract. I'd rather work than be on the street. I think people (Kroger employees who voted against the contract) are going to be sorry when they wake up and see what happened."

A 12-year Kroger veteran who'd been earning $10.90 hourly, Bennett would have made 90 cents less and forfeited nine paid days off under the new contract. After three years, she'd be back up to $10.75, she said.

AGNES WEST of Plymouth who's "almost 90" and walked to Kroger, was pushing a shopping cart there for the last time.

The store closing is "going to be a problem for me. I'm going to miss Kroger. I got wonderful service here," said West.

Plymouth's Fred and June Hadley said they'd "hate to say how many years we've been coming here."

The two, who live nearby, agreed the store closing "is terrible. We're dependent upon this store."

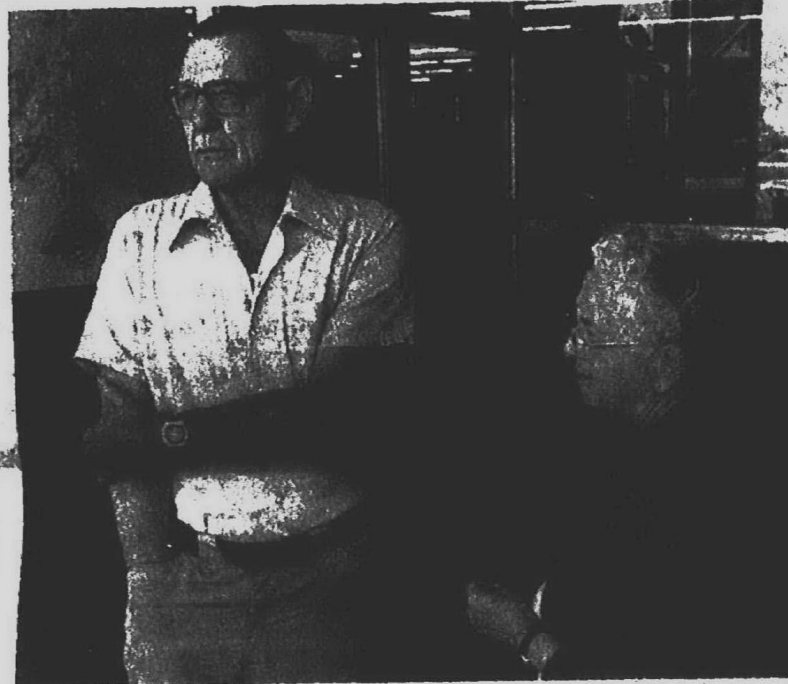

Canton's Diane Feldkamp, who worked for five years at the Canton store's restaurant, voted against the contract.

"I'm angry. The contract was ridiculous. Everything was lowered. Personal days were lowered from eight to two, and sick days from eight to three. They wanted us to give up seniority and our union."

"I guess I have to find a job and collect unemployment. I have two young children," said Feldkamp as Eric, 7, and Carrie, 6, played in the shade outside the store.

A SALESMAN from Saline stopping by the Canton Kroger store couldn't figure out what all the moaning was about.

Plymouth's Fred and June Hadley, who've been "very dependent" on their neighborhood grocery store, remember that "heads rolled when Kroger opened in Plymouth." They said because Kroger was located so close to a school, it was prohibited from selling alcoholic beverages. Of its closing, they said, "we think it's terrible."

Canton's Carol Bennett is bitter about losing her job after 12 years with Kroger. "I'm real upset," she said. "People don't want to hire you when you're 46 or 47."

Tax abatement applications ready for hearing

By Dennis Coffman
staff writer

The city of Plymouth is nearing the final steps needed to make it easier for existing businesses to improve their properties and for new businesses to locate here.

A public hearing has been set for Aug. 6 on proposed wording of applications for tax abatement under Michigan Acts 198 and 255.

Act 198, the Plant Rehabilitation and Industrial Development Districts Act, was adopted as a means of providing a stimulus, through tax incentives, to industries that want to upgrade their facilities.

Act 198 also provides tax abatement for new plants that seek to locate in Michigan.

The tax breaks are substantial: an obsolete plant, when replaced or restored, can have its assessed value frozen at the level prior to the improvement for a maximum period of 12 years. New plants receive a 50-percent exemption from property tax on the taxable value of new real and personal properties for a maximum of 12 years.

Act 198, passed under Public Acts of 1974, was aimed at creating and maintaining jobs.

Plymouth can establish "plant rehabilitation districts" and "industrial development districts" and can approve or deny the granting of tax-exemption certificates.

THE CITY CAN grant the certificates and establish the districts, so long as they don't impede "the operation of the local government unit or impair the financial soundness of a taxing unit," according to the act.

In a guidelines booklet issued by the Plymouth city manager's office, the city sets forth the goals of the tax abatement. "The Plymouth City Commission is desirous of continuing to provide the opportunity for industrial development and expansion and additional jobs for its residents. The commission also recognizes its responsibility to the community to maintain service and uphold the quality of life."

To carry out the provisions of Act 198, the city has set up a Tax Abatement Review Group, composed of the administrative staff, one commission member and the city attorney.

The review group will evaluate all Act 198 applications "for the impact the proposed project will have on the city's services."

Although the city would lose a portion of the taxes that normally would be forthcoming from the new or expanded business, the overall effect is expected to be an increase in the number of companies locating here and an eventually larger tax base with resulting larger revenue.

IN ADDITION to expanding the city tax base and employment, goals of the tax abatement include:

- Diversification of Plymouth's present industrial base.
- Upgrade the city's current labor force by promoting more skilled or technical-oriented jobs or provide opportunities for young adults.

an area of declining commercial activity.

The Act 255 Review Group will be composed of the city administrative staff, a City Commission member and a representative of the community.

Act 255 Commercial Tax Exemption Certificates will be considered only if the project could not take place otherwise. If the project entails restoration, then the restoration must total at least 10 percent of the true cash value of the property.

Tax Exemption Certificates can be issued for: up to 12 years, for projects that require an expenditure of more than $500,000; up to 10 years, for projects that require $300,000-$500,000; five years, for projects requiring $100,000-$300,000; and up to three years, for projects requiring $50,000-$100,000.

To qualify under Act 255, the applicant must not begin construction until the Commercial Redevelopment District has been established.

The property must be obsolete or in

Supersewer action delayed

Unanswered questions, lawsuit snarl project

By Dennis Coffman
staff writer

The Plymouth Township Board of Trustees Tuesday put off a decision on whether to join in the North Huron Valley-Rouge Valley Wastewater Control System Service Area (also called Son of Supersewer), until it obtains more information about the proposed sewage-treatment facility.

Although the deadline for applying for federal funds (up to 75 percent) to finance the project is Aug. 1, 1984, C. Brian James, township attorney, said the deadline is "real soft," meaning the township probably can postpone a decision until its next regularly scheduled board meeting Aug. 14.

However, James indicated that a special meeting before Aug. 14 may be necessary.

COMPLICATING THE situation is a lawsuit filed by Plymouth and Canton townships, seeking repayment for money they invested in the original Supersewer plan. The lawsuit could scuttle the entire Supersewer project.

James was scheduled to appear this week before Wayne Circuit Court Judge Richard Dunn. Defendants in the case, including several downriver communities, Wayne County and the state of Michigan, are asking that the case be brought to trial. James insists it is not ready for trial.

He also will appear before the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Friday and meet with the Governor's Task Force in an effort to resolve the situation.

James will attempt to clarify some of the areas the Plymouth Township Board finds murky.

These include:

- How much more money will be needed to complete the project and if the township will be able to get additional federal funding later on, or will have to come up with money on its own at a later date.

- If the Detroit wastewater treatment plant will be able to handle the additional sewage generated by the increased flow from participants in the project, including Plymouth and Canton townships, Livonia, Northville, city of Plymouth, Dearborn Heights, Westland, Romulus, Wayne, Inkster, Garden City, Redford Township, Northville Township and Van Buren Township.

TOTAL ESTIMATED cost of the project is $110 million. It would provide an additional 28.10 cubic feet per second (cfs) capacity for Canton Township and an additional 13.33 cfs for Plymouth Township.

Existing capacities are 9.6 for Plymouth Township and 14.57 for Canton Township.

When completed, the system would provide Plymouth Township with a total community capacity, including wet weather capacity, of 28.65 cfs, and Canton Township with a total community capacity of 55 cfs.

New students must sign up

New residents of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools are urged to register their children in school as soon as possible.

The registration will help the district establish class enrollments, speed up pupil accounting, and avoid lines for new students waiting to be registered the first day of school.

Elementary and middle school students can register directly at the building where they will be attending classes. Personnel are available in buildings to register new students on any weekday. A call to any building will permit a registration appointment to be made.

New students in grades 10-12 are assigned to Plymouth Canton or Plymouth Salem high school by a random drawing at the Board of Education office at 454 S. Harvey, Plymouth. For an appointment for high school assignment, parents can call Ginnie Murdoch, coordinator of pupil accounting, at 451-6421.

After assignment, high school students must contact the high school counseling department at Canton High at 451-6322 or at Salem High at 451-6219 for an appointment to register and schedule courses.

New residents who are not sure which school their children will attend also can call Mrs. Murdoch at the Board of Education office, 451-6421.

County candidates address election issues

AS PART of its voter service program, the Livonia League of Women Voters has requested candidates for the Wayne County Board of Commissioners to provide background information and answer questions relating to the duties of office.

The league is a non-partisan organization which promotes political responsibility through informed and active participation in government. It does not endorse candidates.

Following are answers and biographical information supplied by candidates for county commission in the 10th District which includes Livonia, Plymouth, and Northville. Three candidates — Mary Dumas, Hugh Patrick O'Neill, Elaine Tuttle — are seeking the Republican nomination. Laura Toy is unopposed on the Democratic side. The GOP nominee will face Toy in the November election.

County commissioners serve for two years and are paid $27,000 plus expenses.

The questions were composed by the League of Women Voters and presented here in an effort to inform the electorate.

The candidates for county commission will appear at a question and answer session at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 1, at St. Kenneth Catholic Church near Haggerty and 5 Mile in Plymouth Township. County Commission candidates also will appear at a forum tonight at 8 p.m. in Livonia City Hall auditorium, 39000 Civic Center Dr., Livonia, sponsored by the League and co-sponsored by the Livonia Observer.

Hugh Patrick O'Neill
Republican

Hugh Patrick O'Neill

Hugh Patrick O'Neill of Livonia is seeking the Republican nomination to the Wayne County Board of Commissioners from the 10th District.

The district includes Livonia, Plymouth and Northville.

O'Neill is the president of A-Alert Security Services Inc. of Livonia. He has lived in Livonia for 27 years. He was graduated from Catholic Central High School and attended the University of Detroit. For 10 years, he served as director of civil defense and chief of the auxiliary police in Livonia.

O'Neill is president of the Birchwood Farms Civic Association. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, the Livonia Heart Fund, Polish Legion of American Veterans and Holy Trinity Shrine in the Green.

Since the County Charter has been in operation for over a year, what, if any, changes do you think are needed?

The commissioners have an opportunity to help streamline county government by merging the Department of Register of Deeds with the County Clerk, eliminating the County Road Commission and the County Drain Commissioner. The Road Commission and the Drain Commission would be placed under the Department of Public Works where they belong.

What do you think is the proper working relationship between the Board of Commissioners and the Chief Executive Officer?

The charter is explicit in the division of the executive branch and the Legislative Body (Commissioners). Each branch has its powers and duties defined in the charter. The commissioners have been both branches prior to the new charter. The commissioners must understand that Mr. Lucas is the new county executive officer and work with him for the benefit of the people of the county.

What are your priorities for the County Budget?

A joint effort between the county executive officer and the commission to lease or sell the county hospital — the single greatest drain on the county budget. Citizens over 65 who have been tax-paying residents of the county for at least 20 years should be exempt from county taxation.

Mary Dumas
Republican

Mary E. Dumas

Wayne County Commissioner Mary Dumas is seeking re-election of the 10th Commission District, which includes Livonia, Northville and Plymouth.

Dumas, a Republican, was first elected to the county board in 1973 and presently serves as chairwoman of the public safety and judiciary committee. She is a member of the audit committee, and internal affairs committee.

Dumas, a Livonia resident for more than 20 years, has a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Prior to election as county commissioner, she served for two years on the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees. She is a member of the Schoolcraft College Women's Advisory Council, Livonia Chamber of Commerce and Michigan Women's Political Caucus.

Since the County Charter has been in operation for over a year, what if any changes do you think are needed?

Abolish road commission. Make drain commissioner appointive. Place under chief executive officer with commission retaining budgetary authority. Power of approval of appointments and contracts should remain with legislative body as check and balance and to protect the public's interest. Clarification of limits of power of executive and commission will emerge through judicial review.

What do you think is the proper working relationship between the Board of Commissioners and the Chief Executive Officer?

Communication between CEO and commission is essential to assure cooperation instead of confrontation, but legislative and executive branches must remain co-equals to safeguard tax dollars. Executive proposes programs, but charter requires commission set policy through power of budget and ordinance. Improved procedures are being implemented by ordinance to facilitate contract approvals and purchasing.

What are your priorities for the County Budget?

Eliminate county deficit. Lease/sale should end hospital's drain on budget. Double-banking solves jail overcrowding, reduces cost. Centralization and computerization of payroll, purchasing and recording to provide ready access to data for decision making. Improved security, maintenance of county parks, juvenile court, youth home. Program incentives for economic development and job training.

Elaine Tuttle
Republican

Elaine Tuttle

Livonia City Treasurer Elaine Tuttle is seeking the Republican nomination to the Wayne County Board of Commissioners from the 10th District. The district includes Livonia, Plymouth and Northville.

Tuttle has a certificate in accounting and financial administration from Walsh College in Troy. Her background includes more than 20 years in the accounting field.

She was elected as city treasurer in 1979. She is a member of the board of directors of the Livonia Chamber of Commerce. She also serves on the board of the Ann Arbor chapter of the Data Processing Management Association and the National Association of Accountants Western-Wayne Chapter.

Tuttle is a member of the Municipal Treasurers Association and the Institute of Internal Auditors.

Since the county charter has been in operation for over a year, what if any changes do you think are needed?

Do away with the drain commissioner and road commission. Put drain and road maintenance under "public services" handled by the county executive just as sewer and road maintenance in Livonia is under DPS and handled by the mayor. New construction should be approved by the commissioners.

What do you think is the proper working relationship between the board of commissioners and the chief executive officer?

Same as that of city council to mayor or state legislature to the governor. The executive should be allowed to run the county with the appointed people he feels necessary to do the best job within a budget approved by the commissioners.

What are your priorities for the County Budget?

Reduce costs and past deficits. Get wages in line with local business. Update county computers with new cost-efficient systems. Sell Wayne County General Hospital and subcontract service necessary to less-costly hospitals. Our residents do not use this facility.

Laura Toy
Democrat

Laura M. Toy

Laura M. Toy is unopposed for the Democratic nomination for Wayne County Commissioner from the 10th District. The district includes the cities of Livonia, Northville and Plymouth and the townships of Plymouth and Northville.

A Schoolcraft College trustee, Toy presently serves as secretary of that board. She also serves as the board's representative to SEMCOG (Southeast Michigan Council of Governments).

She is co-owner of Cardwell Florist in Livonia.

Toy has been a member of the Schoolcraft College Policy Review Committee and the Schoolcraft College Foundation. She is a council member of the American Association of Women in Community and Junior Colleges. She is a past member of the Schoolcraft College Women's Advisory Board.

She has received several national, state and local honors for her involvement at various levels of government. She has been named one of America's Outstanding Young Women and is the recipient of the Harriet Meyer Achievement Award presented by the Michigan Business and Professional Organization. In 1976 she was named the Livonia Jaycee Auxiliary Woman of the Year.

A 30-year resident of Livonia, Toy was educated in Livonia Public Schools and was graduated from Bentley High School and Schoolcraft College. She earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Michigan and did graduate work at Eastern Michigan University. While at U-M she served as an intern aide to Livonia Mayor Edward H. McNamara and later as a 16th District Court volunteer probation officer.

She serves as financial chair of the Southeast Michigan Women's Political Caucus and a member of the Private Industrial Council of Livonia.

Since the county charter has been in operation for over a year, what if any changes do you think are needed?

I feel it is rather early to start changing the provisions. Many knowledgeable, well-meaning people worked long and hard and came up with a charter they felt was equitable to all. The people confirmed this in the voting booth — now it must have a chance to work.

What do you think is the proper working relationship between the board of commissioners and the chief executive officer?

The same working relationship that exists in any system of government made up of two branches. There must be separation of duties, balance of powers. The potential is there for a good working relationship — with energy, initiative and the ability to reason together we can go forward in a reasonable manner.

What are your priorities for the county budget?

While I have studied the budget as well as attended numerous board meetings and meetings in a capacity for a non-incumbent to speak with great knowledge of in-depth budgetary specifics. My business background naturally leads me to give top priority to a balanced budget and reduction of over-head expenses.

Dearie Days in Village

Old Village streets and shops were packed with thousands of shoppers over the weekend for the annual Dearie Days in the Village. Among the many shoppers were Nancy Charlesworth of Westland who is inspecting porcelain

Theatre Guild to serve ham

The Plymouth Theatre Guild will be serving a ham dinner on the opening day of the Plymouth Fall Festival.

The Fall Festival Board announced this week that the Theatre Guild has agreed to serve the "Main Meal" on Thursday, Sept. 6. The menu will consist of ham, potato salad, pickle, bread and butter, milk or coffee.

The Friday dinner will be the Plymouth Lions Fish Fry featuring fish, French fries, cole slaw and beverage for $3. Saturday morning begins with the Plymouth Kiwanis Pancake breakfast with tickets selling for $3 each in advance or $3.50 at the door with children age 13 and younger being charged 50 cents per foot in height.

Saturday night will see the Plymouth Jaycees manning the stoves to serve up a spaghetti dinner.

Sunday is the biggest day for the Fall Festival as members of Plymouth Rotary serve more than 13,000 barbecued chicken dinners.

All of the main meals this year will be cooked and served at The Plymouth Gathering located on the Penniman Avenue side of Kellogg Park.

In addition to the main meals there will be entertainment and many booths where visitors can browse. So far more than 40 local non-profit groups have signed up to participate in the Festival to be held Sept. 6, 7, 8, 9.

IF YOU DIDN'T PLANT THIS SPRING, DON'T THROW IN THE TROWEL.

Somewhere along the way, someone told you that when spring is over, so is your chance to plant. Well, that's an old myth. And it's about to be uprooted. Because early summer is a wonderful time for planting. You'll find lots of flowers, shrubs and trees shoot up green as ever in warmer weather. And they'll give you a beautiful yard. With a budding value. So if you've had a cold, wet spring, or if you've just been beating around the bush, dig in now. You'll see. Planting in summer can really grow on you.

Day-care having open house

Academic Gardens, a new day care learning center and kindergarten at 104 N. Main in Plymouth is having an open house this weekend.

Beverly Corp of Plymouth, operator of the new business, announces that the open house will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, July 28, 29. Refreshments will be served.

The school is located in the Bennett Professional Village directly across the street from Central Middle School. The site is conveniently located near Plymouth's central business district and offers a drive-through and pick up area right in front of the building.

"Academic Gardens will offer preparation for the child's readiness in school," says Corp. "There also will be offered a tutoring service for those children already in school who need additional help. There also is a speech therapist on staff."

Mrs. Corp attended Eastern Michigan University where she earned a degree in special education. She has taught sixth grade in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools. She grew up in Plymouth and graduated from Plymouth High School in 1969. She is a past Rotary Ann secretary and board member.

Her husband, Mike Corp, also is involved in community affairs as a member of Plymouth Rotary and as a past member of the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors.

The program at Academic Gardens is designed to totally prepare the child for school readiness.

Kroger closing stirs memories

"It's a very smart move by Kroger. They can't make any money with the help problem and all the overhead. The store will reopen under a new independent owner. It'll still be supplied by Kroger. That's why I can't understand why the news media is making such a big deal out of this," he said.

"Everyone thinks profit is a dirty word, but it's not. They've made a lot of mistakes and they're just cutting costs."

It's doubtful the bubbly salesman had spoken with Ann Arbor's Jack Romeo, store manager at the Canton Kroger store. Thirty-one years with the company put him in no better stead than his staff. Romeo said he has no idea where his career might take him.

Canton neighbors Rose Trimble and Katherine Graves stood outside the store waxing nostalgic.

Both have handicapped relatives for whom Kroger made shopping convenient by supplying special equipment.

Brain-damaged woman dies

By Margaret Neubacher
staff writer

A 32-year-old woman who was found by her husband bound and unconscious in the couple's Canton home July 15 died Friday. The woman's family decided to cut off the life support system after it became apparent her brain was dead and her body was only mechanically alive, police said.

Police officers say Ella Marie Murcado-Fisher was murdered. They have interviewed a number of people who knew Fisher, including her husband, Charles, but have listed no one as a suspect.

Charles Fisher, 44, a Ph.D. microbiologist who teaches at Ross University in the West Indies, told police he was knocked out by a blow on the head early July 15 and awoke to find his wife tied to his own bed.

Upon freeing himself, he said, he found his wife lying face down in the living room.

POLICE SAID her head had been wrapped with duct tape. They are uncertain how long she was without oxygen. She was unconscious until her death and had been kept alive in St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor by a respirator.

Murcado-Fisher was buried Monday in Lexington, Kentucky.

She apparently had planned to take a trip to West Germany but her husband cancelled the trip a few days before the scheduled July 20 departure date. "We are making progress in the case, but it is taking an exceptional amount of work to find out about her background," said Canton Lt. Larry Stewart.

The Fishers, who were married five years, lived in several places in the United States and overseas before moving to Canton within the last year. Murcado-Fisher had reportedly come to Michigan to enroll in a masters program in "trans-cultural nursing" at Wayne State University.

FISHER TOLD police he was home in bed when he thought he heard his wife returning her job at Chelsea Community Hospital shortly before midnight Sunday, July 15. He went downstairs to investigate and was hit on the head from behind, he said.

When Fisher awoke bound to the bed, he freed himself and went down to the living room where he found his wife, he said.

Fisher told police his truck, which was parked in the driveway, was missing. Detroit police officers recovered the truck, which is being checked for fingerprints.

One of Murcado-Fisher's classmates, who wished to remain anonymous, described her as "goal-orientated" and "very interested in the nursing program."

THE CLASSMATE, who has been interviewed twice by police, said she was with Murcado-Fisher the night before her murder.

Plymouth Travel Agency, on Main Street in Plymouth, said Murcado-Fisher had been arranging a trip to West Germany through their office. Staff members said Murcado-Fisher called more than once to inquire about the penalty for canceling the trip at the last minute.

The departure date was set for the weekend of July 20. Fisher called to cancel the trip for his wife just days before her anticipated departure, according to Plymouth Travel.

Murcado-Fisher's father, who has worked for the U.S. government as an engineer, and his wife live in Maryland. They stayed around-the-clock in St. Joseph's Hospital during the time their daughter was being kept alive.

City earns safety honor

The city of Plymouth has won a pedestrian safety citation for its outstanding pedestrian protection plan from the American Automobile Association.

Plymouth won the award in the 10,000 to 25,000 population group by going one year without a pedestrian fatality.

The highest honors for the year went to Grosse Pointe Woods which has had no traffic fatalities since 1957.

A total of 41 Michigan communities and the state were honored by AAA for their 1983 pedestrian safety achievements.

Blow your horn

Do you know how to blow your own horn?

You'd better if you are a boater with a vessel longer than 16 feet. Federal regulations require owners of such boats to carry a horn or whistle audible for at least a half mile, and the skipper must know and use the proper signals for passing overtaking another boat.

Questions, suit put sewer at impasse

The system will expand capacity of all the 17 communities involved, $24.50 cfs to 627.87 cfs.

The additional capacity is expected to meet Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) requirements to the year 2020.

With 75-percent federal funding, Plymouth Township would be required to pay $1.93 million into the project (Canton's share would be $8.9 million).

If the townships do not take action before the first deadline, they would receive only 55 percent of their share in federal EPA funds.

That would increase Plymouth Township's share to $2.89 million. However if the township, because it is embroiled in a lawsuit or for other reasons, does not take the federal funds it would be required to obtain its entire local share of $6.43 million from Plymouth Township residents.

This works out to $207.70 per Plymouth Township household without the federal funding; $156.30 with 80-percent federal funding; and $143 with 75-percent federal funding.

ACCORDING TO Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen, the township could be forced to take part in the project eventually, or could be banned from construction of additional sewers.

"There is precedent for including us in the total project," said James during the Monday board meeting.

Men cashing in on Gerry and Vanessa

GERALDINE FERRARO finally was pushed off the front pages, but it took another woman to do it. Vanessa Williams, known only to a handful of Trivial Pursuit fans a few days ago, has become momentarily famous as the Miss America who overexposed her body for public consumption.

It has sparked as much, if not more, comment at the local male coffee klatsches as Mondale's choice of Ferraro as his vice presidential running mate on the Democratic ticket.

For the first time, a Miss America was involved in a compromising situation. She had allowed herself to be photographed in her unadorned entirety, and in tandem with a similarly undraped woman. The photos are to be displayed in Penthouse magazine in the September edition, the publication of which was preceded by a firestorm of publicity inspired by sleaze expert Bob Guccione, the Penthouse publisher.

WHILE IT is faulty to generalize on the basis of a limited sampling, I got the feeling from conversations and eavesdroppings that women generally were unhappy that another woman had been stupid enough to pose for such pictures and then run for Miss America, as if there were no skeleton in the closet.

But they were also sympathetic, feeling perhaps that women have long been exploited and here was another case of a woman — coincidentally, a Miss America — being used and consumed by greedy male interests.

The men were more interested in determining whether she wouldn't somehow cash in on the publicity.

It is interesting that there is a factor common to the predicament of Williams and to the emergence of Ferraro as a symbol of women's aspirations — the calculated use of publicity to try to gain advantage.

MONDALE CONSIDERED the advantages and disadvantages of a woman running mate, and it is evident that the paramount concern was not qualifications, but whether a woman candidate would help or hinder his election chances.

The advisers knew that a woman would alleviate the pressure from women's groups for a place on the ticket, that the right woman could draw enough women's votes to give Mondale the edge, and that the right kind of woman candidate would help unite the party. And they knew that such a move would generate reams of favorable publicity at a time when Mondale's presidential quest sorely needed it.

The choice of Ferraro — a woman who worked for everything she got, an immigrant's daughter, a representative of Archie Bunker's neighborhood — was a public relations man's dream.

GUCCIONE, ADEPT at manipulating publicity, cashed in in his own fashion. The differences are also obvious.

The magazine publisher is following a long tradition of coupling men's insatiable desire for fantasy objects with the tradition of exploiting women willing to feed those fantasies.

The male politicians who accepted Ferraro are realizing not only the inevitability but the righteousness of the advancement of women to the pinnacle of power in the U.S.

At the same time, there is a calculating air about both cases — as if the movers and shakers are sure that they must act quickly before the fickle interests of the public and the media zip off to some new hero or heroine, some new tragedy, some new fallen angel, some new superstar who will shoot upward like a skyrocket from the plains of anonymity to the upper strata and then spiral slowly back to earth as the newness wears off and the reporters and television cameras move on.

On a smelly day on I-696

I PUSHED the speedometer a bit past the double-nickel mark as the car moved along I-696. Usually, I stick to the 55 mph speed limit, but there was a stinking blue cloud emanating from the vehicle ahead of me, and I wanted to get ahead of it.

Holding my breath, I glanced at the pretty dog on the seat next to me, eager for whatever adventure I had in mind, and wondered if dogs could hold their breath when they encountered fumes from the tailpipe of a motor vehicle.

As big cities go, metropolitan Detroit is not bad in the air pollution department. I almost went belly-up on the streets of London once, and a TV program Sunday suggested the ruins of ancient Rome and Greece have suffered more from auto fumes in the last century than in the previous 3,000 years.

BUT OUR tri-county region is bad enough that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency had to threaten sanctions to goad the Michigan Legislature into adopting a vehicle emissions program.

Not everyone liked the idea. EPA was threatening sanctions if we failed to begin curbing vehicle emissions. "Sanctions." An abstract, bureaucratic word. It means punishment.

One form of punishment would be for the federal government to hold back aid for highways. Another would be refusal to allow additional smokestack permits, thus keeping existing industries from expanding and prohibiting new industrial firms from building.

I WAS A little perturbed at the reaction of regional officials to this prospect.

One leader called it "an economic development issue." He saw business and jobs suffering if we didn't take at least minimal steps to clean up our air.

A road official practically accused EPA of being a bunch of killers. His notion was that improved roads are safer roads, and that people get killed more quickly on bad roads than on good ones. Thus, his reasoning was that federal refusal to pass out road aid would cost lives on the roads.

Curious reasoning. It was as if dirty air didn't kill. Taken to its logical conclusion, it amounted to saying, "It's OK to let folks get gassed by dirty air but not OK to hold back road money."

The issue is neither industrial expansion nor good roads. The issue is dirty air. It is not an either-or situation.

IT'S EASY to beat up on federal officials stationed in regional offices in Chicago by berating them as "bureaucrats."

In truth, we can have industrial expansion, federal road money and clean air.

It's going to cost a bit. It's going to cost state government $1.5 million to set up the administrative machinery to run the program. Then it's going to cost vehicle owners $10 for an emissions test once a year.

If your car flunks the tailpipe test, most likely it will need a tune-up for up to $50. After that, not only will the air be cleaner, but the car will probably run better.

It will take anywhere from three to 26 months to get the program going, depending on how fast emissions testers can be licensed and trained and owners contacted for checkups.

I passed the smoky vehicle, eased my foot off the gas pedal and stroked the silky ears of the pretty dog next to me. "Daddy's little girl won't have to breathe dirty air much longer," I told her.

She licked my hand.

Political posters prove worthless

WITH THE primary election campaigns moving into their final stages, intersections of many cities and hamlets are cluttered with candidates' signs.

The Stroller often has wondered if this election clutter is worthwhile. So far as he can find out, very few folks pay attention to the signs and placards that crowd over into residents' yards.

Most everyone in the region knows — or should know — who is running for office and when election day is. But for some unknown reason, each election campaign brings out a growing number of these so-called ads.

Who reads them? And who pays any attention to them?

THIS HAS ALWAYS been a puzzle. And it becomes a problem after the election if some are not taken down and become eyesores.

One big reason this type of advertising has become a puzzle is The Stroller's own experience. Some years ago, he was bitten by the political bug and sought a public office.

One of the first things his advisors told him was to get fancy and attractive signs.

After a week or two of viewing designs and putting together wording, an order was placed. In due time, the area was covered with signs which, friends said, were the most eye catching they had ever seen.

With that sort of reaction, The Stroller felt confident that he had been given good advice. Even on election day as he visited the polls, he was told how attractive the signs were.

When he went to dinner that evening he had reason to be confident he would be a winner. This confidence grew when he was called to the phone and asked by a top union official to spare time the next evening to sit in on a meeting and plan for a new office.

What a confidence-builder that was.

the stroller
W.W. Edgar

THEN CAME THE shock.

When the votes were tallied, The Stroller finished last in a field of four. The Stroller couldn't believe it. His signs had been the talk of the area, but evidently they didn't help.

He could have finished last if he hadn't had a single sign cluttering a single intersection.

This puzzled him for days. Finally, he got up enough nerve to ask a successful candidate in another area about the value of colorful billboards.

When he told the late Orville Hubbard about his problem, he was greeted with a laugh.

"Would you believe that I have only one sign that is worth anything during my campaigns, and it isn't in Dearborn?" asked the longtime mayor of Dearborn.

"MY BEST SIGN — and the one that brings results for all to see — hangs in Cadillac Square in Detroit.

"The theory behind this is that people from Dearborn who work downtown look at the sign and wonder why it is displayed in Detroit," he explained.

"It becomes a talking point — one that never has been forgotten on election day. Outside of that sign, the others are worthless."

The Stroller's question was answered. But it is still a puzzle why candidates waste so much money cluttering highways when results have shown through the years that they are worthless.

Michigan made a difference

LAST WEEK'S Democratic nomination of Walter Mondale came closer to home than many may realize.

Remember back to March 17, the date of the Michigan presidential caucus. Mondale came into this state after suffering stunning defeats in several primaries including New Hampshire. Momentum was on the side of Gary Hart and his "new ideas." A few days before the election, the Detroit Free Press urged its readers to support Hart.

But when the polls closed late on March 17, Mondale had won a convincing victory over Hart. Mondale's victory in Michigan rallied his campaign and stalled Hart. After Michigan, Mondale never looked back until he accepted the nomination last week in San Francisco.

The importance of Michigan was not lost on Mondale partisans. Last week his wife, Joan, said to the Michigan delegation, "Your vote for Walter Mondale meant the world to us. We made a profound step forward with the Michigan vote."

On the evening of March 17 Gov. Jim Blanchard said simply, "The Hart snowball has melted."

I REMEMBER WELL the day of the Michigan caucus. It was a Saturday, and I was running several errands. The voting started at 11 a.m. so I checked out my suburban voting site at about noon. I thought it would be early enough to cast my ballot without any wait.

I saw a long line which someone told me would take about 45 minutes. I decided to return later.

I came back about 3 p.m., one hour before the voting site was to close. This time the line was even longer. I was told they were out of ballots and had to run out for more. I waited until about 4:00 p.m. to vote.

My experience was typical. Democratic leaders had expected 125,000 voters to turn out for the Michigan caucus. More than 215,000 showed up, causing long lines and delays because of the shortage of ballots.

Some voting sites in southeastern Michigan did not close until about 7 p.m., three hours later. In terms of number of voters, the Michigan caucus was a success beyond anyone's hopes.

BESIDES THE IMPORTANCE of the Michigan caucus vote, a key issue in the campaign was relevant to us. That is, the Chrysler $3.5-billion loan-guarantee package.

The federal government's loan guarantee to Chrysler helped save the jobs of 600,000 Chrysler workers. They are our friends, relatives and neighbors.

Washington Post national correspondent David Broder described the Chrysler bailout bill as a "litmus test for deciding the Democratic presidential nomination."

When approved in 1979, the bill was supported by the Carter-Mondale administration, but Gary Hart opposed it in the Senate.

The Chrysler bailout became a central part of Mondale's campaign. It responded to his idea of the government as a rescuer — if that be of the old, students, poor or workers.

Hart argued that the bailout was "inconsistent with the principles of competitive free enterprise" including what he called "the freedom to fail."

To Hart's credit, he did not back off his position on the Chrysler bailout when he campaigned in Michigan. His resounding defeat at the polls said much about what Michigan Democrats thought of his platform.

So whatever your position on Walter Mondale, this area played a key role in his nomination for president.

House hikes convention funds

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes before the current summer recess.

HOUSE

PARTIES — By a vote of 226 for and 169 against, the House passed a bill (HR 8950) to spend an additional $4 million in taxpayer subsidies of the 1984 Democratic and Republican presidential nominating conventions. The Senate later approved the bill on a non-record vote.

This brings the subsidy of convention expenses to about $8 million per party. The money is raised through the optional "presidential check-off" box on tax returns that diverts $1 or $2 of many tax payments from the general fund to a presidential election fund.

Supporter Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., said House members as "patriotic Americans" should approve the added subsidy, which is earmarked for security at San Francisco and Dallas.

Opponent Lynn Martin, R-Ill., said San Francisco and Dallas "should be ashamed of themselves" for seeking the money in view of all of the economic benefits the conventions will generate for them.

Members voting yes favored a 25 percent increase in the taxpayer subsidy of this year's GOP and Democratic nominating conventions.

Voting yes: Dennis Hertz, D-Harper Woods, William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield.

Voting no: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

WATER — By a vote of 259 for and 33 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 3478) authorizing $9.2 billion over five years for planning or building more than 300 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers projects throughout the country. This is the first large-scale water resources bill approved by the House since 1976.

In addition to funding projects such as port dredging and navigation to spur commerce and dam construction to control flooding, the bill provides loans for repairing water systems in aging cities. Also, it cancels hundreds of planned but outdated Corps of Engineers projects, and creates a National Board on Water Resources Policy to set national priorities for water-related construction.

Supporter Arian Stangeland, R-Minn., said "we are fast approaching the point where deteriorated or outdated

roll call report

ed (public works) are posing bottlenecks to national economic growth."

Opponent Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., said the National Board on Water Resources Policy revives a bad idea of the Carter Administration and would deprive states of "fundamental control over their own water."

Voting yes: Ford, Levin.
Voting no: Hertz, Broomfield.
Not voting: Pursell.

SHARING — By a vote of 85 for and 213 against, the House rejected an amendment placing a greater financial burden on local interests that directly benefit from federal development of water resources. The amendment, which was backed by President Reagan, was proposed to HR 3478 (above).

Local beneficiaries are required to contribute a small part of the cost of most water projects funded in the bill, on the rationale that those who reap direct profits from the taxpayers' investment should invest some of their own money. This amendment sought to require part of the cost-sharing payment to be made "up front" as a test of whether local beneficiaries are committed to the project.

Sponsor Thomas Petri, R-Wisc., said "a lot of so-called vital projects would become less necessary the moment we ask the beneficiaries . . . to help with the costs."

Members voting no were opposed to requiring up-front payment of part of the local share of water resources projects.

Voting yes: Hertz, Broomfield.
Voting no: Ford, Levin.
Not voting: Pursell.

NEW YORK AIR INTRODUCES "NO IFs, ANDS, OR BUTS" FARES.

On most airlines, you can actually pay several different fares for the very same flight. The regular fare. Or a 7-day advance purchase fare. Or a 14-day advance purchase fare. And so on.

At New York Air, we think this fare game is confusing. And unfair.

That's why we're introducing our new, simple "No Ifs, Ands, Or Buts" fare policy.

Now, no matter when you call for a ticket, you'll pay one, simple fare: either Peak or Off Peak. With no restrictions. No fine print. No strings attached. And even though we're simplifying our fares, it doesn't mean you'll get less for your dollar. Fact is, you'll still get all the amenities New York Air is famous for.

Like our complimentary fresh breakfast snacks on weekday mornings. Along with a complimentary New York Times.

And complimentary mixed drinks, fine wines and real New York-style food all day, every weekday. Not to mention seat selection. Extra leg-room. And 80% window and aisle seating.

And you'll be served by the most accommodating people in the business. People who believe it doesn't cost anything to be friendly.

So there you have it. Simple fares. And simply terrific service.

With all this going for you, we think you'll find New York Air is simply the best airline to fly. No ifs, ands, or buts about it.

Sports collectors gather here

Baseball card and other sport collectors gathered in Plymouth recently for the annual show at the Plymouth Hilton Inn. Among the attractions were autograph signing sessions by past and present baseball greats such as Lance Parrish and Jack Morris of the Tigers and lefty Warren Spahn of the old Milwaukee Braves. In the photo above Morris autographs gym shorts of Lisa Forthofer's while in the picture at left below Kim Lebnick of Canton shows her tennis shoes with Morris' autograph. Among the exhibitors were (below, right) Mike Gordon of Randolph, N.J., who is keeping an eye on his display.

I FEEL LIKE a character in a Richard Guindon cartoon. Remember the one he did of the middle-aged folks dressed for all seasons and looking lost? Their weatherman, Sonny Elliot, had just been deposed.

The closing of our local Kroger store has brought about many Guindon situations. Already my food stock is getting low. The panic couldn't be greater if the blizzard of the century were raging outside and we were 20 miles from civilization.

One of these days I'll have to get out there and shop in unknown territory. I did go foraging for coffee and Wisk. It took some time, but I found them in another supermarket. The coffee, a two-pound can of Folger's automatic drip, cost 27 cents more than the last can from Kroger. That evening I ate out, deciding it was a lesser evil than shopping.

It's not just the comfortable feeling of going to a store that you followed to Forest Street and then to Main. It's knowing where everything is and being able to dash in and out in a hurry. It's meeting friends and neighbors there for a little chat.

And it's not seeing Judy or Virginia or Alice, who checked us out for so many years. Judy's children have grown up and are getting married. Virginia's baby is a teen-ager now. How will I keep track of them?

I've heard tales of bewildered shoppers, pushing their carts up and down aisles in foreign territory. They tell me you can spot the dispossessed every time.

I empathize with their trauma. I'm one of them.

LEDAH SCHRADER, a 1979 graduate of Plymouth Canton High School, loves her job. She is doing exactly what she always wanted to do. Ledah is "flying the friendly skies" as a flight attendant for United Airlines. She received her "wings" in graduation ceremonies at the training center in Mt. Pleasant, Ill., and is based at O'Hare in Chicago.

Ledah attended Central Michigan University for 3 1/2 years. And in her early teens, she was an Observer carrier. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ken Schrader of Plymouth.

THE STREET ART Fair opened Wednesday in Ann Arbor for a four-day run. It opens at 9 a.m. each day closes at 9 p.m. every day but Sunday when it closes at 5 p.m. Artist John Krieger of Plymouth and potter Royce Disbrow of Canton seem to be the only local participants in the fair.

There is free parking at Briarwood Mall and Pioneer High School with shuttle bus service ($1) to and from the fair.

MARGARET KIDSTON is following in her family's footsteps. She was elected president of the Plymouth Historical Society for the 1984-85 season.

Her mother, Mildred Burr, was president to the society 1969-71; her father, George Burr, 1971-73; and her brother, Sanford, 1978-80 and 1981-84.

Serving with Margaret are Howard Bloom, vice president; Dorothy Bloom, secretary; Richard Rice, treasurer; and Barbara Peterson, Adina Rice, Bruce Scott, Margaret Dunning and Sanford Burr, directors.

ERNEST KOI of Plymouth Township was elected American Legion state finance officer at last weekend's convention at the Hyatt Regency in Dearborn. Ernest is a 32-year member of Plymouth's Passage-Gayde Post 391. He served in the Second Air Force from 1943-46 and is a life member of both the American Legion and the Disabled American Vets.

Marketplace 29 AD

Bible school turns back the clock

By Elinor Graham
staff writer

The 12 tribes of Israel had gathered in, or in front of, their 12 tents for morning prayer. The marketplace was deserted except for the artisans who were setting up their stands.

It was the second day of vacation Bible school at First United Presbyterian Church of Plymouth and the theme was Marketplace, 29 AD. About 130 children and a large number of adults were beginning another day in the manner of Biblical times.

During the night, a big wind had blown down most of the artisans' tents and broken their tent poles. But the robed craftsmen were unperturbed as they set up shop on the perimeter of the church parking lot.

Members of a tribe, that had sweltered in their tent in close to 100-degree temperatures on Monday, were back there again, with the flap zipped closed.

"They love that tent," said Sandy Shelton, Christian education director at the church. She and Sally Evans, head of the Christian Education Committee, had planned the Bible school program. They pointed to another encampment of three tents on the other side of the church. These were the preschoolers, who had formed two extra tribes.

"I guess we really have 14 tribes altogether," said Shelton.

BEFORE PRAYERS, the bread had to be prepared for the noon meal. It was taken to the church kitchen for baking. Then the children headed for the marketplace to learn a skill or trade. Each carried a small burlap draw-string bag of coins, for they must pay for their apprenticeships to the master craftsmen.

Some went to the brickmaker, George Hudson, where they mixed clay and straw in plastic tubs. When the mixture reached the right consistency, it was packed in square containers (the bottoms of half-gallon milk cartons) for baking in the sun.

David Wood, the carpenter, taught his young proteges to make saws, rulers, hammers and draydels. The latter is a top made of a cube of wood with a pointed dowel inserted through it for spinning. Evans and Shelton had commented on the great cooperation of the church members. "Gene Crosby and Dave Wood cut 150 blocks and dowels for the draydels," said Evans.

KEN SPEARS was the sorcerer, who did not reveal the secret of his magic.

Harold Greanya, the stonecutter, had a group pounding away with mallets and hammers on spikes — making symbols or sometimes their names on stone slabs. Barb Greanya was the jewelry maker. The youngsters left her shop bedecked with pendants, bracelets and rings of their own making.

Bonnie Myhrum, the music maker, showed them how to make tambourines out of paper plates, popcorn and aluminum foil. The instruments were stapled then sewn around the edge with yarn.

Potter Susan Seidel had prepared a mixture of sawdust, flour, sugar, alum and water for her apprentices to mold with their hands. Their creations, when dried in the sun, retained their shape and were quite sturdy.

Therese Gall and Judy Lewis were the belt makers. The rope belts were popular items and many a young tribesman paid to learn the art of making one.

Carolyn Vermeulen, the kitemaker, had a busy stand. Scribe Sue Blake was in great demand as the children carefully lettered their scrolls.

THE ARRIVAL of the tax collector, Bob Motie, caused a commotion. He was jeered by the people in the marketplace as he used dire threats to extract payment from them.

The beggar, a poor, ragged woman with a baby in her arms, wandered around, meekly asking for money to buy food. The children were not exactly enthusiastic about giving her a coin, but they did it — dutifully. Corinne Kee and her 11-month-old son, Andrew, played the roles of beggar and child. She was suitably bedraggled in appearance, but Andrew, with his shining blond hair and rosy cheeks, just looked sleepy.

Two shepherds came "down from the hills" with one of their goats. The goat was a stellar attraction, especially with the pre-schoolers. They were awaiting the return of the donkey that had come to the marketplace the first day of Bible school.

THE PASTOR, Philip Rodgers Margo, said it was a very successful project. He enjoyed looking out his study window and seeing the 12 tribes of Israel encamped.

Shelton and Evans had been planning the vacation Bible school since the first of the year. They attended a special workshop concerning the Marketplace, 29 AD program.

The theme was originated in a Methodist Church in Stevensville, Mich., and has become popular for summer Bible schools.

They credited the success of their effort to the adult membership of the church and the senior high students who helped.

"We have 90 adults involved in this," said Sally Evans.

For the youngsters, who spent three days in the marketplace, it will be a lasting experience.

Kids organize their own amateur olympics

This week I have news of a lot of fun, food for thought, and a great idea.

It all starts with a group of kids who play together every day, either in the house, around the house, in the street, or whatever. Inspired by the Olympics, an idea emerges — why not organize your own games and win some medals of your own?

Even for an amateur Olympics, you need a committee. It consisted of only the finest, bravest, most creative young minds, who gathered and prepared for the coming events.

Actually, it was anyone who could come over that evening.

First, a shopping list for any last-minute items: enough lemonade to cool an army, some fresh felt-tip pens, paper cups, balloons, etc.

Second: signs must be made, registration desk, yardage markers, and separate sign-in sheets for each event. Third: materials must be gathered — whistle, clip board, rope and so on. Fourth: rules and regulations must be argued out, sorted out and set up, age limits for each event, different routes for distance runs for each age group, etc.

Finally, fifth: the date must be set with an optional rain date. And then, the really big problem, can we get a public access camera from our local cable company to record the event for posterity?

After the shopping trip, we need another meeting to complete the plans, fill the water balloons, cut the ribbon to make the awards, prepare containers of lemonade etc. etc.

Naturally, when the day arrives it is raining. This you plan on, and arrange a late start, say 10 a.m. Usually, by then you'll know if the rain is going to stay or play "Michigan Weather" and go away.

WE BEGAN registration at 10:30 a.m. and the ground was fairly dry.

Some swimming events were canceled due to "Michigan Weather" and the little Tornado Watch, but that's nothing to "Michigan Kids." They took shelter in my house, watched the weather channel and ate lunch. No problem. Perhaps getting 16 glasses of lemonade off my carpeting will be a little problem, but I'm a "Michigan Mother" and I can handle that.

The games are off and running. We have officials for each game, helpers, and commentators for the "cable TV." Due to previous injuries, Rick Karpinski and Tammi Preblich will be doing most of the commentaries, ably assisted by many would-be TV stars not participating in every event.

Let me introduce you to the participants in the LOCO (not local) Olympics: Stephanie McGuire, 6½; Danny McGuire, 8½; David Huo, 10; Missy De Craene, 11; Li-Chun Huro, 12; Cathy Alterman, 13; Kim Collins, 13; Jody Talbot, 9; Jeff Byrnes, 15; Alan Preblich, 14; Jeff Talbot, 14; Rick Karpinski, 14; Kristen Karpinski, 11; and Tammi Preblich, 12.

With a 9-year age span, we had to split some of the events into age groups. We kept the number of participants down, since we were taping the games and it would take too long with more.

THROUGHOUT the afternoon we improvised rules now and then.

The well-known, punishable-by-death penalty was instituted for hitting the camera-person with a football, softball, or famous flying Nike. The rule governing crawling in the three-legged race was hotly debated.

Who will ever forget the "What do you do with the leftover, already filled, water balloons question?" "Have a free-for-all" was the popular answer.

Only once, during the very long day, did anyone seem to gloat over a win. It was when a girls team, Kristen Karpin-

Canton chatter

Sandy Preblich

ski and Li Chun Huo, won the three-legged race. In their interview with the TV commentator, they remarked, "It feels great, because we beat the boys royal!" This, of course, brought cheers, and laughter from everyone. Congratulations girls, that was a well-won contest.

SERIOUSLY, the kids were great. There was more sportsmanship in that Olympics than I have seen at ANY adult-organized game.

Even the youngest and smallest, Stephanie McGuire, tried everything. She never quit and nobody made her feel that she should. Nor did the boys lose hope when Kim Collins walked up and tossed the softball nearly 35 yards — against the wind. She shyly giggled, then did it again. Not once but twice! Who knew she could throw?

Even siblings supported each other. All disputes were settled fairly by the official, as when Danny McGuire and Jody Talbot asked for an official ruling on the results of the wheelbarrow race — they tied for first place.

Every child stayed from 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., except Cathy Alterman, who aggravated a previous injury and had to stop competing. Missy De Craene competed all day after being stung by a bee the previous day just because she stepped on it! Kristen Karpinski had broken her toe just three days before. Rick Karpinski had just had a brace removed from his knee.

They were fun, cooperative, fair, and spontaneous, not easy to tape. The kids did it all with one exception, the balloon toss. For this, Judy Karpinski and her eldest daughter, Lori, helped out. All the commentators wanted to participate! Judy and Lori kept score and tabulated final results. The officials' word, with the help of instant replay provided by Omnicom, was final. Tammi and Rick were the officials overall with almost everyone participating as an official during one event or the other.

ANYBODY can do it.

As a matter of fact, the kids are willing to help any other group of kids organize their own Olympics. Don't just sit around gathering dust, get out and kick some up. Either way, your going to end up getting dusty!

It was a great day, and afterwards, we sat and reviewed the tape.

The whole thing seemed even better — David Huo introducing himself and not remembering anything but his name; Alan's pose after he throws and freezing in that position until it lands.

And speaking of landing, how about the lousy camera work as I searched the heavens and earth for a large red Frisbee each time it was thrown.

Then, the famous "crawling three-legged race" by Alan and Jeff Talbot; the soon-to-be-popular song "Stand by your shoe" created after the shoe toss; and Jeff Talbot's newly-acquired title of Tomato Killer, for his Frisbee toss.

A special thank you to Darren Perkowski for coming to our rescue in the softball toss. He came over and retrieved the balls so nobody would get injured. Thanks Darren. To Judy and Lori Karpinski, we couldn't have made it without you! To all the kids, you were all wonderful, you're nice people.

To those of you who are thinking about doing this or something like it for your kids, I'll let one nice boy sum it up for you. "It feels pretty good. You get a real lot of ribbons you know, and you feel so proud of yourself." (Jody Talbot, 9). Have a great summer. Remember the Interdenominational Olympics Aug. 5, now open to junior high students. Call your place of worship, St. John Neumann Parrish, or me to register.

Garage sale benefits Cancer Foundation

A garage sale, planned for 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 4, at 22210 Morley, Dearborn, will benefit the Michigan Cancer Foundation. It will be the third event of this kind planned by friends of MCF.

Each of the two previous sales netted $2,000.

Profits are used to assist more than 750 cancer patients in this area, who are served each year by the foundation. The foundation is seeking donations from the public for the sale. Items such as furniture, sports equipment, garden tools, lamps, records, books and jewelry are tax deductible. Deliveries can be made to the Morley Street address from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, July 20 through Friday, Aug. 3. Shoes and clothing will not be accepted.

For information call 336-4112.

The foundation serves the Plymouth-Canton area. Last year volunteers worked 37,000 hours for MCF. They drove 85 patients 43,300 miles for therapy. Breast and pap clinics benefited 668 clients.

Wed 50 years

Mr. and Mrs. Theron F. Hicks of John Drive, Canton Township celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday, July 8 with a renewal service at Risen Christ Lutheran Church. After the service, their children hosted a dinner reception for the couple in the Terrace Room of the Plymouth Hilton Inn. Friends and relatives, including their 6-month-old great-granddaughter, attended the party.

Bob Deyo and Val Kolin Sexton visit at class reunion.

40-year reunion for Class of '44

Members of the Plymouth High School class of 1944 decided their 40th anniversary deserved a whole weekend of celebration. The big 40-year reunion party was Saturday evening at the Plymouth Elks Club. But they gathered also at the Elks Club Friday night fish fry and again for Sunday brunch at Mr. Steak.

Sixty-five classmates and their partners attended the Saturday dinner-dance. There were cocktails followed by a prime rib dinner with baked potatoes, vegetables and salad. The class picture was borrowed from the Plymouth Historical Museum. Movies of their four years in high school, still in excellent condition, were shown. The band provided music of the '40s for dancing.

Velma Evans Smith was mistress of ceremonies for the party. Wilma Lounsbury Post chaired the reunion planning committee and was responsible for the trivia game geared to the class of '44.

The questions prompted laughter and much reminiscing. Among them were: How many football games did we win in our senior year? (They lost all eight.) Who was the secretary in the main office? (Irene Roland.)

So they went, with questions about teachers' first names and the commemorative marker in front of the school. And 40 years later, they remembered.

The 20 classmates who had died also were remembered in a hand-lettered list, prepared by a member of the class.

Wilma Lounsbury Post (left), Jean Warren Davis, Esther Mettetal Scheppele, Velma Evans Smith, Marion Oldenburg Owens, Norma Robinson Kenyon, Dora Gruebner Messecar and Evelyn Kurtz Erdelyi are reunion planners.

moral perspectives

Rev. Charles Erickson

When we share destiny, we need some dialogue

Working relationships in the auto industry are changing rapidly to more cooperation and sharing within each plant. These new practices require new attitudes.

Outsiders can't realize how fast industry is changing. Growing corporations achieve levels of productivity and quality by new ways for employees to share with each other. Individuals in industry and all of us around them need to switch over to a non-adversarial approach.

Moral foundations in southeast Michigan center in a bad habit. We assume others are adversaries. One group feels another group is misguided. Individuals meet each other in defensive posturing. Even husbands and wives feel they belong to different teams.

The beginning of change is to question our fascination with winners and losers. Defining success as winning leads to looking around for victims who deserve defeat. The new way is to focus on goals, results and purposes which include those who suspected they were enemies.

directly related to the number aboard at take off." When we share destiny, we need dialogue and shared decisions at the earliest planning stages.

Such change is really a religious issue. The way we define God determines how we view God's children. If God is distant and unchangeable, we think of the image of God in people as acting detached, uninvolved and rigid. If God has absolute power, we think devotion justifies dictatorial behavior in our work or even in our families. Unilateral decisions begin to seem moral.

From beginning to end, the Bible teaches that God is with us. God dwells with people. God cries when people hurt. God is joyful when people fulfill their potential. The sharing God invites people to share with God and with each other.

Our erroneous assumption that we are inevitably adversaries is corrected by a vision of God living at the center of a constantly changing creative process. God is the unity which holds all creation together in a dynamic flow of all energy interweaving with all other energy. Cooperation is the moral way of those who belong to the new day dawning in industry and society.

Newburg, G.R. Baptist get new pastors

Two Livonia churches have new senior pastors.

The Rev. Edward C. Coley earlier this month became the senior pastor at Newburg United Methodist Church, 36500 Ann Arbor Trail, Livonia.

The Rev. Ronald E. Cary was formally installed Sunday as senior pastor at Grand River Baptist Church of Livonia, 34800 Sky Mile.

Coley, who celebrated the 30th anniversary of his ordination last year, comes to Newburg from Faith United Methodist in Trenton, where he had served for six years.

An Arkansas native, Coley has spent the balance of his ministry in Michigan. He served in the U.S. Air Force for five years, three of those years as a chaplain, and currently is retired after having spent 19 years in the Air Force Reserves.

He and his wife, Virginia, have four grown daughters and six grandchildren.

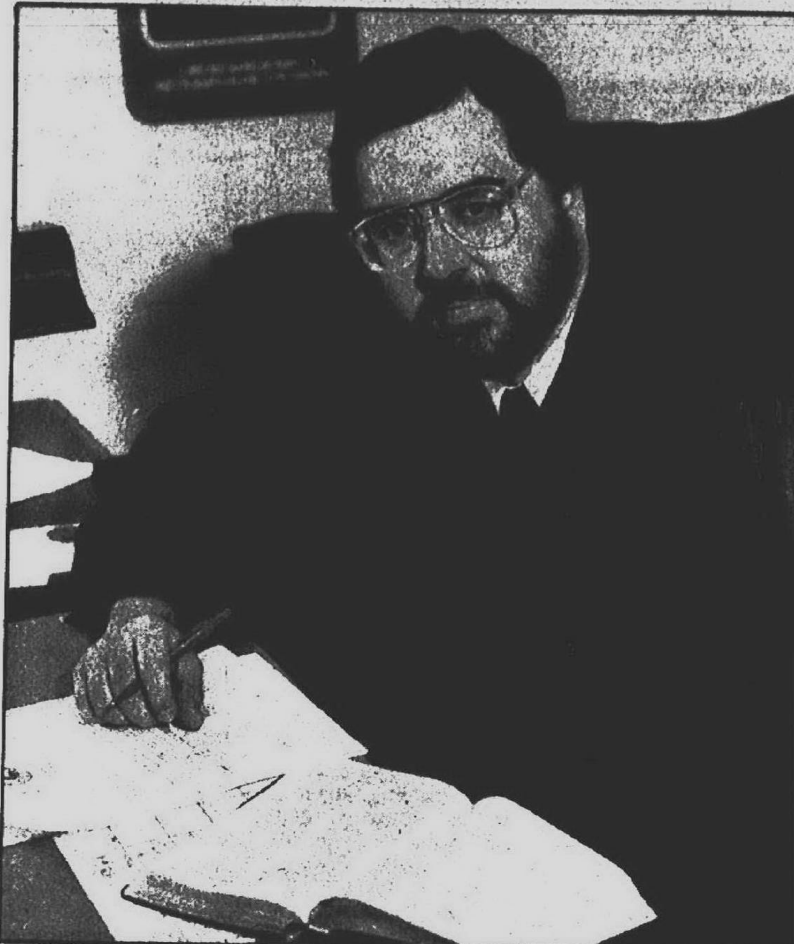

"Newburg has a grand history, and I feel very proud to be a part of that," Coley said.

The church will celebrate its sesquicentennial Sunday, Aug. 19. The church was founded Aug. 20, 1834.

Baptist Church; Dr. William Stahl, pastor, First Baptist of Plymouth; the Rev. and Mrs. Don Yost, former interim pastor, Grand River Baptist; and the Rev. Alfred Gould, associate pastor, West Presbyterian Church.

Participating from Grand River Baptist were moderator James Weaver, Hollis Johnson, chairman of the board of deacons; Frank Craver, chairman of the board of trustees; Emanuel Igrain, chairman of the public committee; Charles Foch, music director; and Mary Bank, organist. The board of deacons presented the installation tea.

The pastor and his wife, Carolyn, and their three sons make their home at the parsonage.

Rev. Ronald Cary native Michigianian returns

A NATIVE Michiganian, Cary comes to Grand River Baptist from Chanute, Kan., where he served as senior pastor at First Baptist Church of Chanute for the past four years.

He was raised in Inkster and attended First Baptist Church of Dearborn. He graduated from Cherry Hill High School, Inkster. He attended Ottawa University's Ottawa, Kan., and received his bachelor's degree from Eastern Michigan University. He then attended the American Baptist Seminary of the West in Berkeley, Calif., where he received his master of divinity degree.

He was campus minister at the University of Michigan and at Fort Hays State University in Kansas. Most recently he has served on the General Board of American Baptist Churches, USA.

Those participating in the installation service were the Rev. Robert Shaw, executive minister of American Baptist Churches of Michigan; Dr. Howard Haworth, retired minister, American Baptist Churches; Dr. Wilbert Gough, pastor, West Highland

Budget cuts whittle guidance clinic services

A cut in funding will force the Northwestern Guidance Clinic to reduce services to Wayne County residents.

The announcement came from the clinic's director Sara VanderVoort.

Clinical and clerical staff will be laid off for two weeks, drastically affecting therapeutic programs at the Main Clinic, 6221 Merriman Road, Garden City.

"This is the second round in service reductions due to funding cutbacks by the Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health Board," said VanderVoort. An earlier casualty of the cutbacks was the closing of Merriman House, a residential program for developmentally disabled children.

VANDERVOORT STATED that 12 children were placed in other settings as a result of the Merriman House closing. Eleven staff members at Merriman House were placed on indefinite layoff.

"The loss of Merriman House and the cutbacks in services to Western Wayne County children and families is tragic," commented VanderVoort, "but we have no other alternatives, given the cuts" from the county mental health board.

White was a top police chief

To the editor:
I would like to comment on your news article of July 19, 1984: "Police union protests chief's resignation."

The reassignment of Lt. Ralph White appears to demonstrate two primary factors: a review of contracted police services and the stress resulting from same.

City Manager Henry Graper said, "A traditional policeman sometimes has trouble managing contracts . . ." I wish to cite the recent completion of the city parking deck as a counter-example. This project, built at a cost of well more than twice the cost of the yearly contracted services between the Plymouth Police and Plymouth Township, was left open-ended with no provision as to how the bill would be paid. It appears from this that the city is incapable of managing a contract that is much larger than the one in question.

Graper also said, "I think anyone who is interested in the job better be willing to live with the concept of public safety . . ." Michael Gardner said, "Ralph White is the named police chief, but has little or no authority." Gardner's statement, whether true or not demonstrates that he understands the difference between concept and reality. If Graper understands this same difference he has yet to admit it.

As to White's performance over the years: We could have been "blessed" with a high-profile braggart who could not decide between politics and making a public fool of himself. Instead, we have been "stuck" with a man who not only has quiet manners and a sense of humor but also education and experience as well and a willingness to commend his officers when a job has been well done. The difference lies in attitude.

If White is to be replaced I would hope that his replacement is at least of equal "caliber." It would be a refreshing footnote. Police officers will never be financial magnates any more than Plymouth will ever be Hollywood. That is the difference between acting and knowing your limits.

Urges an end to 'onion'

To the editor:
(An open letter to the city of Plymouth Beautification Commission.)

I was recently given a copy of your letter and nomination form with regard to the 1984 Plymouth Pride Awards.

As a past and future resident of Plymouth, I am distressed that the city of Plymouth would condone the nomination of candidates for an "award" such as the Onion Award. I cannot help but feel that this type of award serves only to demean its recipients, and that the awarding of such only gives outsiders the impression of snobbery within the city.

Has it occurred to the members of the Beautification Commission that perhaps some of the residences and businesses are in need of a "fix-up" campaign because of strained economic circumstances of the occupants and owners? I find this lack of concern for certain of the city's occupants to be appalling.

Is it not enough that you give a pat on the back to the residents and business owners by giving awards for attractive properties? Must you also demean those residents and business owners who do not have the money and/or the time to spend on items of lesser importance than food or utilities or specifically, in the case of business, keeping a business afloat long enough to show a profit?

I appeal to the consciences of each and every member of the Beautification Commission to use your good judgment and delete the category of "Onion Award" in this and future years.

Opinions are to be shared

Opinions and ideas are most fertile when shared with others.

That's why the Plymouth Observer encourages its readers to share their views with others by making use of the From Our Readers column.

While the Observer expresses its opinions on the editorial page, we always leave space open for our readers to express their ideas.

Submitting a letter to the editor for publication is rather easy. We ask that letters be typewritten or printed legibly, 300 words or less, signed, and include the address of the sender.

Names will be withheld only for the best of reasons and the decision to do so will be made by the editor.

Dems boost national conventions funds

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes before the current summer recess.

HOUSE

PARTIES — By a vote of 226 for and 189 against, the House passed a bill (HR 5950) to spend an additional $4 million in taxpayer subsidies of the 1984 Democratic and Republican presidential nominating conventions. The Senate later approved the bill on a non-record vote.

This brings the subsidy of convention expenses to about $8 million per party. The money is raised through the optional "presidential check-off" box on tax returns that diverts $1 or $2 of many tax payments from the general fund to a presidential election fund.

Supporter Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., said House members as "patriotic Americans" should approve the added subsidy, which is earmarked for security at San Francisco and Dallas.

Opponent Lynn Martin, R-Ill., said San Francisco and Dallas "should be ashamed of themselves" for seeking the money in view of all of the economic benefits the conventions will generate for them.

Members voting yes favored a 25 percent increase in the taxpayer subsidy of this year's GOP and Democratic nominating conventions.

Voting yes: Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield.

Voting no: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

WATER — By a vote of 259 for and 33 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 3678) authorizing $9.2 billion over five years for planning or building more than 300 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers projects throughout the country. This is the first large-scale water resources bill approved by the House since 1976.

In addition to funding projects such as port dredging and navigation to spur

roll call report

commerce and dam construction to control flooding, the bill provides loans for repairing water systems in aging cities. Also, it cancels hundreds of planned but outdated Corps of Engineers projects, and creates a National Board on Water Resources Policy to set national priorities for water-related construction.

Supporter Arlan Stangeland, R-Minn., said "we are fast approaching the point where deteriorated or outdated (public works) are posing bottlenecks to national economic growth."

Opponent Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., said the National Board on Water Resources Policy revives a bad idea of the Carter Administration and would deprive states of "fundamental control over their own water."

Voting yes: Ford, Levin.
Voting no: Hertel, Broomfield.
Not voting: Pursell.

SHARING — By a vote of 85 for and 213 against, the House rejected an amendment placing a greater financial burden on local interests that directly benefit from federal development of water resources. The amendment, which was backed by President Reagan, was proposed to HR 3678 (above).

Local beneficiaries are required to contribute a small part of the cost of most water projects funded in the bill, on the rationale that those who reap direct profits from the taxpayers' investment should invest some of their own money. This amendment sought to require part of the cost-sharing payment to be made "up front" as a test of whether local beneficiaries are committed to the project.

Sponsor Thomas Petri, R-Wisc., said "a lot of so-called vital projects would become less necessary the moment we ask the beneficiaries . . . to help with the costs."

Opponent Virginia Smith, R-Neb., said "we have never provided (public works) money on the basis of the fellow that had the most at home. We have provided it on the basis of need."

Members voting no were opposed to requiring up-front payment of part of the local share of water resources projects.

Voting yes: Hertel, Broomfield.
Voting no: Ford, Levin.
Not voting: Pursell.

SENATE

APPROPRIATIONS — By a vote of 49 for and 44 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to inflict a four percent across-the-board cut in the fiscal 1985 appropriations bill for the Justice, State and Commerce departments and the federal judiciary.

As later passed and sent to conference with the House, the bill (HR 5712) has a $11.45 billion pricetag, $722 million above the House figure and $298 million more than the administration had requested.

Warren Rudman, R-N.H., who voted to kill the proposed cut, said "accusations that the bill is too high should be directed at the White House. These increases, in the main, were requested by the president."

Don Nickles, R-Okla., who sponsored the amendment, chided lawmakers who refuse to cut spending after "all the time running back to the states and districts saying, 'Yes, these deficits are terrible and we need to get them down.'"

Senators voting yes were opposed to the four percent spending cut. Michigan Democrat Carl Levin voted yes and Michigan Democrat Donald Riegle voted no.

CULTURAL EXCHANGE — The Senate rejected, 44 for and 49 against, an amendment to spread America's democratic ideals throughout the world by means of educational and cultural exchanges rather than through the National Endowment for Democracy.

The amendment sought to kill a $21.3 million appropriation for the year-old endowment, while increasing funding of the USIA's Fulbright and Hubert H. Humphrey fellowship programs by $11.9 million. It was proposed to HR 5712 (above). The House earlier deleted all fiscal 1985 funding for the endowment, and whether the project will survive is to be determined in a House-Senate conference.

The Democratic and Republican parties, along with the AFL-CIO and U.S. Chamber of Commerce, operate the National Endowment for Democracy with taxpayers' money, developing various programs to promote democratic ideals overseas.

Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., who supported the amendment, said "I have never seen, in 32 years of public office, such a raucous, outrageous raid on the federal treasury" as the endowment is making.

Opponent Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, called the endowment budget "a pittance compared to what the Russians are spending" worldwide to undermine democracy.

Senators voting yes wanted to kill the National Endowment for Democracy and allocate part of its budget to educational and cultural exchanges. Levin and Riegle voted no.

ANTI-TRUST — The Senate rejected, 36 for and 63 against, an amendment to prevent the Federal Trade Commission from bringing anti-trust actions against local governments. This was a response to FTC suits to end taxicab fare regulation by New Orleans and Minneapolis.

The House voted previously to delete fiscal 1985 FTC funding for such actions. The Senate version of the bill (HR 5712; above) permits FTC suits that seek injunctive relief but not financial damages. The issue will be settled in conference with the House.

Supporter Bennett Johnston, D-La., said the FTC should spend its limited resources on large economic issues such as corporate takeovers rather than on "purely local matters."

Opponent Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said it "may well be a good idea" for the FTC to promote competition in the taxicab industries of various cities.

Senators voting no wanted the FTC to have limited anti-trust authority over certain municipal matters. Levin voted yes and Riegle voted no.

Tougher state landfill rules greeted coolly by industry

By Penny Wright
special writer

Waste industry spokesmen are cool to tighter landfill rules being proposed by the Michigan Toxic Substance Control Commission (TSCC).

"In terms of increased protection to the environment, the improvements are marginal. The expense is enormous," said Jerry Fore of Waste Disposal Co., Dearborn.

Their opposition emerged last week in an otherwise low-key, three-hour public hearing on the Orchard Ridge campus of Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills.

THE TSCC report recommends upgrading regulations in the states Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Acts (PA 441 and 64 of 1978) and rules.

The laws are intended to be crucial instruments for ensuring waste disposal al that is environmentally safe at a time when most communities oppose new and existing landfills.

Dr. Larry Holcomb, TSCC chairman, said Michigan should move away from dependency on landfills for disposal of solid and hazardous wastes. But he said there would always be a need for some landfills.

"The recommended rules changes are preventive medicine," Holcomb said, "and are meant to instill public confidence in landfill disposal."

KEITH HARRISON, TSCC staff member, said the draft report — entitled "Michigan Solid and Hazardous Waste Landfill Design Components" — reached these conclusions:

- Present landfill technology cannot guarantee absolute containment indefinitely.

- Landfill regulations should be regularly revised to keep up with changing technology.

- Landfills should be as moisture-free as possible.

- No single landfill liner type can contain all types of waste. Criteria for selecting liners should include an analysis of leachate (drainage water) compatibility.

- Greater attention should be paid to quality control of liners and cover construction.

- Landfill monitoring programs should be designed to detect early landfill failure and groundwater contamination.

- Attention and more funding should be directed to perpetual monitoring and maintenance of landfills.

FORE, of Dearborn, said the recommendations carried a "more is better mentality" and lacked documented justification.

"I believe that many of the suggested changes in the current standards are unjustified because landfills built to PA 641 and PA 64 regulations have shown no indication of early design failure," Fore said.

He cautioned the committee to avoid connecting the problems of past unregulated landfills with current well-designed landfills.

"You should go out and get data on why certain landfills have leaked to support the recommendations you make," Dragun said.

Dragun and others labeled inflammatory the report's conclusion that all landfills eventually will leak. He suggested it be rewritten. "A lot can be done to minimize the risks," he said.

MARVIN BLACK, of Dundee Cement Co., Dundee, said his biggest concern was that the report hinted that the liner is the biggest problem with landfills.

"Siting and political issues are more important," Black said. "This study does nothing to deal with those issues and implies that, if we design better liners, everything will be fine."

TSCC Chairman Holcomb said the public has until July 27 to submit written reports to the TSCC, at PO Box 30028, Lansing 48909. Copies of the report may be obtained by calling TSCC at 517-379-1091.

Holcomb predicted the final report would be submitted to the state Department of Natural Resources sometime in August. DNR would be expected to hold public hearings before passing its recommendations along to the state Legislature.

ing its recommendations along to the state Legislature.

THE TSCC report is the product of a three-month investigation into the adequacy of current landfill regulations governing design, monitoring, testing and landfill drainage (leachate) collection systems.

Nine consultants participated in the study, including three area firms: Neyer, Tisco & Hinds Ltd. of Farmington Hills, GMC Associates Inc. of Northville, and American Geotechnical and Hydrogeological Engineers of Novi.

4 cousins plan to open restaurant

By W.W. Edgar
staff writer

From the time he was a young lad Sam Pernicano, one of four cousins who will operate the restaurant at N. Main Street and Starkweather has loved competition.

That's why he is all smiles these days as he supervises the remodeling of the restaurant at the gateway to Old Village that has been closed for several months.

Reminded that he was entering a nest of eating places and was taking a gamble in trying to make a success, he just shrugged his shoulders and said, "I just love competition. We had it down in Dearborn where we owned a restaurant near the Big Apple when we were told we couldn't do it. So, why can't we meet the Plymouth competition in the same way?"

As spokesman for the four cousins, Pernicano said this is to be a new type restaurant for Plymouth and for that reason he didn't fear competition.

"This is going to be a family restaurant with family-type food," he said, "We are eliminating the counter and we will have nothing but tables and chairs and it will be decorated in family style."

What did he mean by family style?

"We aren't going to cater to families. You don't get much of that in these other places around here. And we will specialize in such things as barbecued chicken and barbecued ribs.

"Along with the ribs and chicken we will have the type of menu that includes the food a family would get at home. This should be popular."

Enthusiastic over the opportunity to have a business place in Plymouth he said that he plans to have the food available for the working man on his way to his job in the morning and will be open at 6 a.m. No time has been set for closing, but it won't be before 10 p.m.

Pernicano said that while the four cousins will own the place, he and Gary Pernicano, also of Dearborn, will be in charge while two others will have an interest in the business and the welfare of the venture.

He continued that he always had liked Plymouth and its people and was delighted to get the chance to have a business here and hoped to be here a long time.

This restaurant, which is at the entrance to Old Village, has a great background. Its original owner had the business at Northville and Five Mile Road and was familiarly known as "Carl's." When the highway widened he was forced to leave. It was then that the move was made to Main Street in Plymouth and it operated under several names until now.

FORE, of Dearborn, said the recommendations carried a "more is better mentality" and lacked documented justification.

"I believe that many of the suggested changes in the current standards are unjustified because landfills built to PA 641 and PA 64 regulations have shown no indication of early design failure," Fore said.

He cautioned the committee to avoid connecting the problems of past unregulated landfills with current well-designed landfills.

DR. JIM DRAGUN, of E.C. Jordan Co. of Southfield, challenged the TSCC to get more meaningful data about why some landfill liners have failed in Michigan.

Dragun said much data in the report do not apply to the real Michigan environment.

Hines condition called 'worst ever'

Several Wayne County commissioners say Edward Hines Parkway is not only sorry looking but unsafe, pointing at two recent crimes to bolster their case.

"These last two years have seen the worst-ever condition of the park," said Mary Dumas, R-Livonia, at a news conference Monday.

Commissioners Joseph Jurkiewicz, D-Taylor, and Kay Beard, D-Inkster, said park maintenance has been given too low a priority by agencies overseeing the employment of young workers hired under a summer jobs program.

A Ferndale boy, Kenneth Myers, 14, was found strangled July 18, two days after his disappearance, in deep grass near Ann Arbor Trail and Hines Drive in the Westland section of the park. A week earlier, a 30-year-old Livonia woman was assaulted in the Northville Township section of the park by a man armed with a switchblade knife.

HINES PARK, which straddles the Middle Rouge River, stretches from Northville to Dearborn Heights. It is administered by the Wayne County Road Commission.

The road commission is now under the control of County Executive William Lucas. Earlier this year, road commission officials predicted they would restore the park to family usage during the season.

Lucas is currently supporting candidates in Democratic primaries against Beard and Jurkiewicz.

Commissioners agreed that park patrols — under the jurisdiction of Sheriff Robert A. Ficano and local police departments — are reasonably vigilant but said the poor upkeep keeps the public from using it and thereby being a deterrent to crime.

"There is money in the park fund to maintain the park," Jurkiewicz said. "Had the park been maintained properly, hopefully, we would have discovered (Myers' body) much earlier. And perhaps it wouldn't have been left there."

FICANO SAID his department is continuing frequent park patrols and is continuing to investigate the crimes.

"We are also working closely with the road commission to get the areas we consider the most important taken care of," said Ficano. He said he has received good cooperation from local police departments and civic groups.

"I'd urge anyone going to the park at night, especially youngsters, to travel in pairs," the sheriff said. "You should use common sense. If I were a parent, I'd caution youngsters about the problems that have occurred in the park."

Cyclist Pierce gets runaround

IT'S TIME to tie up some loose ends before heading out for the Olympics in L.A. Speaking of the Olympics, what's the status of Livonia cyclist/road racer Jeff Pierce?

As of Friday, Pierce was on the U.S. Olympic squad because of the suspension of Alexi Grewal, who got 30 days for using a banned substance — an herbal tea.

But on Monday, a U.S. Cycling Federation appeals board reinstated the Boulder, Colo., native saying that the urinalysis test was not definitive enough.

Grewal, the No. 1 qualifier on the U.S. Olympic team, was the overall leader in the recently completed 10-day Coors International Bicycle Classic.

Pierce, fourth overall at the Coors Classic, seems to be a victim of USCF's selection process, which kept some riders on edge until last week.

The Livonia Stevenson and Michigan State grad performed well in the Olympic Trials, but had to go through another series of races leading up to Sunday's road race in Mission Viejo, Calif.

It seems the USCF can't tell anybody no, while most of the other U.S. squads were picked over a month ago.

AS FOR ANOTHER Livonia Olympian, hockey player Al Iafate, it's been a rough month.

The 18-year-old, picked fourth overall in the recent NHL draft by Toronto, was charged with careless driving in a single-car accident July 7 near Brighton, Ontario, after falling asleep at the wheel. Meanwhile, one of Iafate's ex-teammates and passenger in the car, Mike Vellucci of Farmington, wound up in the hospital for 1 1/2 weeks with back and chest injuries.

Then on Monday, July 16, Iafate and "three friends" were arrested by Windsor Police for mischievous behavior, breaking street lamps.

The young defenseman, yet to negotiate a contract with Toronto, was fined $128 for the careless driving charge.

In the Windsor incident, Iafate was put on probation for 30 days.

Although I'm confident young Al has finally learned his lesson, I feel sorry for his mother, Mrs. Alice Iafate, who's been in his corner ever since he started playing the game.

I've gotten to know this "classy woman" a little bit during the past six months — always cooperative, appreciative and fair. She deserves better publicity.

WHICH LEADS ME to another Olympic-bound group, the 7-Up National Select basketball team which held its training camp this week at Schoolcraft College.

These young men, who have the potential to make our Olympic basketball team in 1988, have shown nothing but class during their stay.

Not only are these talented basketball players, as the Michigan AAU squad found out, but they're a collection of outstanding individuals.

After spending some time with the group, I found them to be bright, personable, polite and respectful of authority — good ambassadors for our country.

Monday night at Wing Yee's Restaurant, the 7-Up squad was treated to a delicious Chinese meal. During the course of the meal, Keith Pickett, 7-Up's Public Relations man from St. Louis, Mo., saluted Schoolcraft AD Marvin Gans and gave him two tokens of appreciation.

Gans, who spearheaded the drive to bring the 7-Up squad to the area, has surely made the team feel comfortable during their stay.

As Gans received a digital clock and pen and pencil set, the entire team stood up in the restaurant and applauded loudly. I'm sure it made Gans feel good and forget about the long hours he's put in this summer.

AS FOR WHEN I get back, let's hope rhythmic gymnast Michelle Berube of Rochester has a medal in hand, Brother Rice hasn't "attracted" two more 7-footers, Eastern Michigan and Redford Thurston have football, Michigan is ready for the Hurricanes, Mike Machurek is the Lions' quarterback instead of Gerie Hippleson, Perles is really more than "Frank" and that Dave Yarema comes back to show "Notre Dame form."

But the summer has been fruitful — Craig Payne putting Tyrell Biggs on the ropes, Redford Caesars making the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League fun again, Livonia Adray beating the Canadian Olympic team and unheralded Thurston winning the Class B state baseball title.

I'm sure I forgot something. But the thing I really want to see settled is the Western Lakes/Northwest Suburban League mess.

I wish the Western Lakes people would see the light and either include Redford Union or Garden City, or keep the leagues separate with a little jockeying around.

GARDEN CITY has one alternative, join the Wolverine A League with the likes of Dearborn Fordson, Wayne Memorial, etc. . . .

But schools such as Thurston and Redford Union will still have to scramble to find leagues because some of the Western Lakes big wigs, such as Plymouth-Canton's Mike Hobes, don't have a clue about how this affects the area in terms of sports.

Maybe somebody should step forward and become commissioner.

How does Peter Ueberroth sound?

Danny Ferry (white jersey) of the 7-Up National Select Team snares a rebound during Monday night's exhibition game against the Michigan AAU squad at Schoolcraft College. The 6-foot-11 center helped his team to an easy 145-80 victory.

7-Up stars 'hold court'

By Brad Emons
staff writer

It was a cruel lesson in basketball for the Michigan AAU team.

Even with All-Staters Eli Parker, Clarence Jones, Jeff Gray and Gary Thompkins missing from the lineup for various reasons, it really wouldn't have mattered Monday as the 7-Up Select Team, made up of the nation's top high school players, destroyed Michigan in an exhibition game at Schoolcraft College, 145-80.

The 300 or so basketball junkies who showed up in the sauna-like gym were treated to "team basketball" at its best by the national squad, which is winding up a six-day training camp at Schoolcraft in preparation for an upcoming tour of Spain and Yugoslavia.

It only took five minutes to determine who was the bigger and better team.

Indiana-bound Delray Brooks, the game's MVP, made a steal and scored a layup to make it 26-18 for 7-Up with 14 minutes to play in the first half.

Then suddenly, 6-foot-10 Andrew Lang dunked one on the Michiganders to give 7-Up a 60-29 cushion with five minutes remaining in the half.

AS THE GAME progressed, the 7-Up squad continued to show its vast skills, unselfish play and muscle. Michigan, meanwhile, relied on unnecessary one-on-one tactics.

Brooks, the 6-4 guard from Michigan City, Ind., was one of eight 7-Up players who scored in double figures. He had 23.

Two other hitters, 6-4 1/2 Troy Lewis (Purdue) and 6-3 Joe Moe (Iowa), netted 24 and 20, respectively. Moe was a perfect 8-of-8 from the floor.

"We got something out of it," said 7-Up coach Bobby Bowman despite the lopsided margin. "We responded even though it was hot. Everybody played hard.

"All the guys played as a team. They're all unselfish and we got a blend of good inside and outside scoring."

The 7-Up team's two big men, 6-11 Danny Ferry of DeMatha H.S. in Washington, D.C. and 6-11 Californian Robert Lock, bound for Kentucky, showed good mobility, scoring 12 and 10, respectively.

THE 7-UP team's smallest player, 5-11 John Johnson of the Bronx, gave the shaky ball-handling Michigan backcourt fits en route to 11 points.

And 6-7 Duke-bound Billy King, who had the task of guarding Michigan's Mr. Basketball Demetrius Gore (25 points to lead Michigan), displayed air-tight defense and added 10 points.

"Gore is a good athlete, with size, and he's powerful," Bowman said. "He played well and seems to be deserving of the honors that have come his way."

Even though the two teams met in another mismatch last night at U-D's Calihan Hall, Bowman said "We want to improve every day in every aspect of the game."

"We have to close down the lane more and we need to protect the baseline," he added. "We have to check out (rebound) better and we want to mix up our defenses."

"We need to do a better job defensively."

TWO ALL-OBSERVER players earned starting nods for the Michigan team Monday night, 6-7 Tom Donaho of Livonia Stevenson and 6-4 John McIntyre of Redford Catholic Central.

Assistant coach Al Johnson called Detroit Henry Ford, scored 10 points, but had his shot rejected three straight times during one sequence in the second half. U-D recruit Archie Tullis, a 6-1 guard from Saginaw Buena Vista, came off the bench to score 12.

basketball Miller MVP as Detroiters down Metro

By Robert McElhane
special writer

In a fast-paced game of breakaway baskets and slam dunks, Ed Wilcox's 30 points proved instrumental in the Detroit AAU team's 98-88 triumph over Metro AAU Monday at Schoolcraft College.

The game was a preliminary to the 7-Up National AAU team's game against the Michigan AAU squad. The nationals won handily, 145-80.

Wilcox, from Oak Park, was one of four Detroit AAU players to score in double figures. Richard Hunter, from Detroit Western, netted 29, and Phillip Miller, a Detroit Southeastern grad headed for Saginaw Valley State, scored 16 while earning the game's Most Valuable Player honors.

Bradley Turner added 12 points and Sam Johnson nine.

"Miller was a key player," said Detroit coach Glen Donahue. "He made some key shots and has a great college future."

As a team, Detroit played a fine game, according to Donahue.

"The kids played hard and had a lot of heart," he said. "They did a good job rebounding."

THREE OBSERVERLAND players made significant contributions for the Metro AAU team. Phil Graczyk, a Livonia Bentley alumnus going to Eastern Michigan, pumped in 11 points, Erich Hartnett, from Plymouth Salem, added 10 and Livonia Churchill's John Gryzbek contributed seven.

Lennard Collins, a Detroit Chadsy grad enrolled at University of Detroit, led all Metro scorers with 27 points. Oak Park's Mike Thornton had 18 and Lynn Hardy of Detroit Cooley finished with 10.

"They all played real good and are a fine group of young men," said Metro coach John Grennan. "It was a very competitive game."

Lang shatters board

Step aside Chocolate Thunder. A small town lad from Pine Bluff, Ark., may have something on New Jersey Nets' center Darryl Dawkins, the master of the gorilla dunk.

Andrew Lang, a 6-foot-10, 230-pound pivot man on the 7-Up National Select basketball team, broke his second backboard in less than three months during a practice session Saturday at the Schoolcraft College gym.

Lang, headed for the University of Arkansas in the fall, shattered another glass board during a 7-Up practice last May in St. Louis, Mo.

Koufax tourney set for Canton

The Plymouth-Canton area always welcomes a baseball tournament.

Even a hastily arranged affair like the American Amateur Baseball Congress' (AABC) Sandy Koufax District Tournament, which starts today at the Canton Parks and Recreation diamonds located behind the township offices on Canton Center Road south of Joy.

Due to cancellations at two other locations, the Plymouth Salem Sandy Koufax squad Monday was given the task of hosting this weekend's tourney. With the help of Jimmy Gee's Canton Hagerman Sporting Goods Koufax team and Canton Township officials, the double-elimination tournament will get underway today with four games slated, starting at 9 a.m. and continuing until dusk.

EIGHT TEAMS will vie for honors: the Plymouth Salem squad and Detroit West-7, both sponsored by Little Caesar's; Hi-White of Highland Lakes; South Seawase of Jackson; and entries from Macomb County, Rochester and Riverside, Ontario. The Canton team accepted an earlier invitation to play in a Southgate tournament this weekend.

Four games are slated each day, with the finals Sunday. The winner will qualify in the AABC regionals Friday-Sunday, Aug. 3-5, in Westland. The regional champion will go to the AABC Sandy Koufax World Series Friday-Sunday, Aug. 10-12 in Knoxville, Tenn.

There is no admission for the district games.

Huskies win title

The Huskies ended the Wildcats four-game winning streak and clinched the Midwest Summer Hockey League (MSHL) Bake's Conference championship with a 7-2 victory Monday at the Plymouth Cultural Center Ice Arena.

Todd Beyer, who played last winter for the Plymouth Royals Junior B team, fired in three goals and added an assist to lead the Huskies to their seventh win in nine games. Jeff Johnson and David Church split the goaltending duties for the winners.

The Wildcats, in second place in the Bake's Conference, fell to 5-4 with the defeat.

In a battle pitting the two top teams from the MSHL's Eagle Conference Monday, the frontrunning Wolverines rallied with two third-period goals to tie the Falcons 4-4.

Darryl Moise poked in the game-tying tally for the Wolverines (now 6-1-2), while Dave Bramble of Livonia picked up four assists. Greg Stedman notched three goals and an assist for the Falcons (3-3-3).

IN SUNDAY'S games at the Plymouth Cultural Center Ice Arena, the Falcons got their first point of the season by scoring two third-period goals to tie the Broncos 2-2. Dean Krispin, a Redford resident who plays at University of Michigan-Dearborn, scored with 2:30 left in the game to forge the tie.

Krispin also assisted on Dan Lambert's goal earlier in the period. Lambert played last winter for Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook. Mike Donnelly of Livonia and Michigan State — the MSHL's leading scorer — and Paul Mitten each scored in the opening period for the Falcons.

In a wild scoring affair, Troy Thrun popped in five goals and earned an assist to trigger a 9-8 Wildcat win over the Spartans. Joe Lockwood also netted two scores for the Wildcats. Dave Kromm of Livonia had five assists and Dennis Smith of Plymouth collected two goals for the Spartans.

A four-goal outburst in the second period propelled the Wolverines to a 6-3 victory over the Bulldogs.

Missouri rules Midwest

By Rich Swenson
staff writer

A pair of Michigan soccer teams made strong bids for championships in last weekend's Midwest Regional Soccer Tournament at Schoolcraft College, but both were forced to settle for second.

The Livonia Hawks, the Michigan state champion girls under 16 team, swept to victories in three of their first four games (tying the other) before losing to the tough Cincinnati Cardinals 4-0 in the finals.

Troy United's boys under 14 team also fell short. After whipping Wisconsin, Ohio North, Indiana and Kansas by a combined score of 14-5, Troy lost a 3-2 heartbreaker to Missouri in the title game.

Seventy teams from 11 different states competed in the tournament, vying for boys and girls under 16, under 14 and under 12 divisional titles.

THE MISSOURI teams, made up of players from the St. Louis area, dominated the tournament, capturing four of the six championships. A fifth team finished second.

"I thought our Michigan kids did real well," tournament director Walt Peterman said. "It proves that our (Michigan) soccer program is growing. We had the opportunity to win in two different brackets."

"It was a very good, competitive tournament. There were no big scores in any of the divisions."

The Hawks beat Iowa (7-0) and Kansas (1-0) before playing Illinois to a 2-2 tie to get into the semifinals.

A late goal by Michelle Cyrol gave the Hawks a 2-1 decision over Minnesota, getting them into the title game.

The Cardinals avenged a 1-0 loss to the Hawks in the quarterfinals of the Wolverine tournament three weeks ago with a solid game Monday.

THE HAWKS, comprised of some of the top high school underclassmen in the area, played the Cardinals tough in the first half.

But they missed several opportunities that could have given them an early lead, and Cincinnati managed to take a 1-0 lead at the break.

The Cardinals broke the game wide open in the second half, scoring three unanswered goals to ice the victory.

Made up primarily of 14 and 15-year olds, the Hawks will get another chance next year.

"The experience factor was the big difference in this game," Hawks coach Paul Dugan said. "But we have one more year at this age level and we'll be back."

ANOTHER LOCAL team, Vardar III, comprised of mostly Livonia players, went undefeated in the boys under 12 division, but didn't have enough points to qualify for the semifinals.

The Vardar team beat Nebraska 7-1 in its opening game and Ohio North in the second round before tying eventual winner Missouri, 2-2.

In other action, the WSSL Stingers, the girls under 14 team, lost its first two games to Illinois and Missouri before salvaging a 1-0 win over Kansas in their final game.

WSSL United's girls under 12 played Illinois to a scoreless tie in their opener, but lost to Minnesota, 2-0 in the second round. The team concluded the tournament with a 3-0 forfeit victory.

Warren's Capathian Kickers, representing Michigan's boys under 16, made it to the semifinals before Missouri eliminated them 2-0. The team then played Ohio North for third place and lost, 3-0.

All-Stars falter in new tourney

Another women's all-star tournament association has reared its head in the Detroit area and major events are scheduled once each month until all major establishments have been visited.

The recent event was held at Luxury Lanes in Ferndale and Mary Mohaci, seven times Detroit bowling queen, was beaten by Julie Zimmerman of Dearborn Heights, 184 to 167. It was the poorest showing Mohaci has made during the entire year. She was not alone in that category as Cora Feibig, another of the top-rated women, lost to Julie 204 to 180. Cora needed a strike in the final frame and didn't get it. But she did roll an all-star game.

CONTRACTS — While the auto manufacturers are meeting with the labor unions on a new contract, the entire bowling industry is involved in the same manner this month. It is contract time and all leagues must be signed before the season opens. There is little dispute except that the late shift starting after 9 p.m. may fall short of other seasons. Because bowling has become a rather slow game, these leagues don't finish until well after midnight and no longer are acceptable. It is thought that the trio leagues may fill the gap as they would finish by the stroke of 12 o'clock.

WONDERLAND — Larry Brandt was top man in the trio league when he linked games of 200, 231, 205 and 225 for 867. In high singles Dennis Seaman had a 234 and Bill Funke a 268.

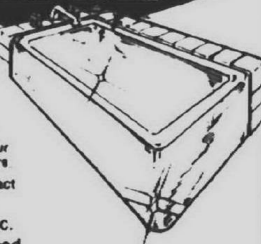

MERRI-BOWL — In the invitational doubles Shirley Wald was high for the women with 598 and John Russell paced the men with 633. In the men's league Bob Zinek was tops with a 668. In the parent and child league Judy Nagle posted a 253 and Justen Medes had a 233.

WESTLAND — In the top mixed league Howard Lawrence showed the way with a 247 in 642. Chuck Ansell was right behind with 539 and in the Confusion loop Donna Taylor posted 534 and Alice Wolfe had a 538.

BEL-AIRE — Jeff Heppner joined the ranks of the winners in the trio league with games of 243, 235, 186 and 207 for 851. In other high games Jerry Lash had a 265 and Tony Lorelein 252.

Michigan squad bounced early at AAU nationals

Michigan's top women cagers went to New Mexico last week to play in the AAU Junior Olympic Nationals, and the biggest thing they learned was that they still have a long way to go if they are to compete on a national level.

Michigan's AAU squad, comprised of the best 18 and under players this state has to offer, lost both games, sending the team to an early exit.

They were beaten by a hometown Clovis, New Mexico squad, 84-76 in the opener before getting bounced out of the tournament by Rocky Mountain (Colo.) 94-78.

It wasn't Michigan's inferiority on the court so much as the Michigan AAU system, according to coach Ed Kavanaugh.

"WE'RE DISAPPOINTED, but it was a good experience for our team," he said. "We went down with a positive attitude — I thought we'd do well. What we learned is that Michigan AAU basketball is about 10 years behind other AAU programs."

Kavanaugh said that most of the team's entered in the tournament have been working since April to prepare, while his team didn't start practicing until June.

"We found that these other teams prepare more in advance and much more seriously," he said. "In other states, the AAU tournament is the epitome of girls basketball. This year, we didn't even have our state tournament until June. Next year, it will be held earlier. It will give us the opportunity to prepare more."

girls basketball

THE MICHIGAN team features a number of local players. They include Farmington's Alyse Fortune and Rhonda Lancaster; Livonia Ladywood's Char Govan, Emily Wagner and Trish White; Farmington Our Lady of Mercy's Sarah Basford (who is headed for the University of Michigan on a basketball scholarship); and Troy Athens junior standout Alana Cummings.

Govan poured in 15 points and Basford 14 to lead Michigan in its opening loss. New Mexico won the game from the foul line, connecting on an impressive 29 of 35 free throws. Kavanaugh said it was like playing a team that had the home court advantage.

"We never recovered after that," he said. "But the competition there was excellent. The players in this tournament will be some of the top freshmen in college next year."

Send entry blank with check (not cash) payable to tournament director Gary Whitener, Whispering Willows, 20500 Newburgh, Livonia 48152.

Pairings will be made by the tournament committee. No requests for individual pairings will be taken. No changes will be made.

Open to all residents of Livonia, Plymouth, Canton, Garden City, Westland, Redford Township, Farmington, Farmington Hills, Southfield, Lathrup Village, Birmingham, Beverly Hills, Bingham Farms, Franklin, West Bloomfield, Bloomfield Township, Bloomfield Hills, Troy, Rochester and Avon Township.

It's time for our third lesson. This week I'll concentrate on woods, both fairways and the driver (tee shot).

First, keep in mind that if you are hitting a nine-iron, a five-iron, a five-wood or a driver, the grip does not change. Hold the clubs in the same hand position.

Golfers tend to put much more effort into a wood shot than an iron. This is wrong. No more than 75 percent of the player's strength should be utilized.

● First, stand erect, with a slight flex in the knees and no weight on the toes.

● Second, position the ball left of center, near the left heel or instep.

● Third, favor the left foot with your weight, never the right.

● Fourth, feel as though you are sweeping the ball and tee out to your target.

The target is most important. As you follow through to it, your weight should be shifting onto your left leg and foot. At the finish of all your wood shots, you should have pivoted to, and be facing, your target.

Young mime artist looks to his future

By Tom Panzenhagen
staff writer

TOM JOHNSON has a lot to say.

On stage, as a performing mime, his routines are intended to educate as well as entertain.

Off stage, looking the part of a college senior, he is outspoken about his craft and his future.

"In 10 years, I'd like to be America's first true mime," said Johnson, a 20-year-old Wayne State University senior who recently completed a 15-day workshop with mime great Marcel Marceau at the University of Michigan.

"We have no true mimes because there is no grammar for mime, no school for mime here," said Johnson, who majors in theater at WSU.

"I'd love the American public to wake up to mime, to realize it is an art form, and to support it," he said.

JOHNSON'S LOVE of theater blossomed at an early age.

His mother, Virginia, who appeared in plays at Marygrove College, produced children's shows at St. Hugo of the Hills where Johnson, a Bloomfield Township native, attended elementary school.

"I was put in shows and didn't even think about it at first," Johnson said. "The next year I was begging to go on stage."

Johnson went on to win the "Gifted/Talented" drama award at East Hills Junior High and then studied drama and mime with Tina Kalgais at Lahser High School.

"She really helped me a lot by getting me books, and she had a good eye for it (mime), and she always corrected me," said Johnson, who formed a mime troupe at Lahser.

By the time he entered college, Johnson knew he could say the most as a mime.

on music

James Windell

More than ever this summer, it's take your pick. Which outdoor concert series appeals to you?

If you think only of Pine Knob and Meadow Brook, take a look around. There are Sundays at the Bloomfield Township Library;

Wednesdays at Southfield's Prudential Town Center; Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at the Ponchartrain's P'Jazz series; Thursdays at the New Center Park; and more Friday music at Harmonie Park.

Jazz by the Park at Harmonie Park, just around the corner from the Music Hall in Detroit, is a Friday night outdoor music party followed by a concert at the Music Hall. The amazing Alberta Hunter was the main attraction last Friday.

Hunter was born in 1895 and had a million-selling hit with "Downhearted Blues" in 1921. Since then, she's been a singer, an actress (playing Queenie in "Showboat" with Paul Robeson in London) and a nurse. She resumed her singing career five years ago, captivating fans and critics alike. But she says she's not a blues singer.

Dream realized with Marceau

"Actors have to follow the director's word and the actor's words, and they don't get to put anything extra into it," said Johnson, who creates his own mime routines.

"Mime is self-expressionism. We have a gun piece — we get to reveal our own feelings about war, hunting, killing."

"BEYOND THE WALL," the newest endeavor of Johnson and his colleagues in the Mime Street Mime Company, opened at the Fourth Street Playhouse in Royal Oak this week. The final two shows are next week at 8 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday. For ticket information, call 543-3666.

"When people think of mimes, they think of the wall," Johnson said, pressing his hands against an imaginary wall, "or pulling the rope, or walking against the wind."

"We want to show them there's more to it than that. We have a story about man in his space. It's about territories and protecting your territory. We hope people see it and say, 'Yeah, we do that, we behave that way, don't we.'"

"Beyond the Wall" is pure entertainment, it's fun, but subconsciously they're learning something. We're not saying the audience is dumb and we have to educate them, but a lot of people live 9 to 5 and don't take time to look at the sunset."

THE OTHER MEMBERS of the Mime Street Mime Company are Robert Williams from Muskegon, Ernest McDaniel from Lapeer, and Josh White III, son of folk singer Josh White Jr., from New York City.

All four participated in the workshop presented by Marcel Marceau in Ann Arbor earlier this month.

"We heard rumors about the workshop and instantly said we have to find out about this," said Johnson, who first met his idol three years ago backstage at Ford Auditorium. The mime legend autographed a poster for Johnson, who added it to his collection that includes Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton posters.

"To study with him was a dream come true. Now France — reality is no longer," Johnson said. He referred to Marceau's invitation to all four members of the mime company to participate in a three-year mime school near Paris beginning in September 1985.

Eight of 60 participants in the Ann Arbor workshop were invited to France. According to Johnson, perhaps five of 60 students who participate in the three-year program will receive diplomas.

"Getting a diploma, that means Marceau considers them good enough to teach," Johnson said.

Johnson hopes at least three of the four mime company members will be able to attend the school together. "And then we're going to try to stay together for the next 10 years," he said. "Three mimes from Detroit won't sell, but three mimes from the 15 years or way of Marcel Marceau's school in Paris, that will sell."

MARCEL MARCEAU, at 61, is "stronger than when he was 30," Johnson said.

"He can do things I can't. He's so strong and in such good condition. He says that once you stop performing, then you get older, so he performs 300 out of 365 days."

"Mimes need strong legs," Johnson said. "But you can't body-build. The only way to do it is to do his (Marceau's) exercises."

Johnson stays in shape by working four or five nights per week, two hours per night, as a mime at the Red Parrot, a new nightclub in the Michigan Inn, Southfield.

"Here (at the Red Parrot) it's flashy, technique stuff and improvisation," Johnson said. "But you can work up quite a sweat, working two hours with only about a five-minute break."

"One night I was so hot, working under these lights, that I went under the air conditioner and juggled for about 20 minutes and cooled down."

DINO DIMARTINO, manager of the Red Parrot, explained why the night spot hires mimes as well as dancers:

"You can open a nightclub or a disco, and there's only so much sound and light you can put into it. Then after you go there a few times, it becomes ordinary. People find the mimes and dancers enjoyable. They look for them now."

"They (the entertainers) are programmed to work the whole room. We don't like them to engage people as a prop, and we don't want people to feel obligated to watch them."

DIMARTINO said he's happy with the job his entertainers are doing. "You should see them ad lib," he said. "We had 'Afternoon Detroit' in here one day filming, and the mimes put together something out of the clear blue sky. When you can do that, that's really exceptional."

There is no cover charge at the Red Parrot. The mimes and dancers usually perform from about 6 to 11 p.m. A buffet is available week nights, and patrons are casually, but well dressed. Expect to spend about $20 for two.

JOHNSON ENJOYS entertaining at the Red Parrot and his occasional stints as a street mime, but he sees a more serious side to his craft, too.

"Most street mimes are confusing the art, and San Francisco mimes are particularly bad," Johnson said. "They mix in clowning and juggling, and they talk."

"I want to make mime an art form, and appreciated as an art form like dance."

Before he can do that, though, Johnson must complete his senior year at WSU.

"We're doing 'Romeo and Juliet' at the Bonstelle and I'm going to steal the lead role. I don't care what anyone says — it's my role. If I don't get it, it's because I didn't earn it."

With that kind of determination, Johnson probably will turn up as Romeo in spring 1986. And look for him as America's first true mime in about 10 years, too.

"Champion" (1949), 12:27 tonight on Ch. 9. Originally 90 minutes. TV time slot: last program on Ch. 9 schedule.

The first of three films this week directed by Mark Robson is "Champion," starring Kirk Douglas, Arthur Kennedy, Paul Stewart, Lola Albright, Ruth Roman and Marilyn Maxwell. But "Champion" doesn't belong to Robson. It's the property of producer Stanley Kramer, who has conceded in later years that he made it as an indictment of the boxing game. It's just as much an indictment of ambition and disloyalty, though, as it is an expose of the ruthless characters who populate the fight game. In other words, it works well on a couple of levels.

Rating: $3.15.

"Von Ryan's Express" (1965), 1 p.m. Sunday on Ch. 50. Originally 117 minutes. TV time slot: 180 minutes.

Robson may have been under Kramer's thumb when they made "Champion" together but, one suspects, Robson was his own man when he shot "Von Ryan's Express," starring Frank Sinatra, Trevor Howard, James Brolin, Edward Mulhare and Vito Scotti. It's a taut, high-energy, escape story with POWs commandeering a freight train. "Von Ryan's Express," like "Champion," is well directed with little clutter getting in the way of a good plot.

Rating: $3.

"Valley of the Dolls" (1967), 8 p.m. Wednesday on Ch. 50. Originally 123 minutes. TV time slot: 135 minutes.

Mark Robson, who directed "Champion" (albeit with Stanley Kramer's overview), "Von Ryan's Express," as well as "The Bridges at Toko-Ri" and another powerful, anti-fight film, "The Harder They Fall," also directed "Valley of the Dolls," one of the trashiest, most excessive, most overwrought pot-boilers ever essayed. Robson also directed (and produced) an incredibly bad soap opera, "From the Terrace" (1960), starring Paul Newman. So next time you think a director or producer alone is responsible for a film, think again. Let's credit the writers and other technicians responsible for the success of some films and the downfall of others. Barbara Parkins, Patty Duke, Sharon Tate, Susan Hayward, Paul Burke and Martin Milner (in an unintentionally funny role) co-star in "Valley of the Dolls."

Rating: $1.

"Teacher's Pet" (1958), 1 Wednesday night on Ch. 50. Originally 120 minutes. TV time slot: 138 minutes.

"Teacher's Pet" is not only a wonderfully funny film — with terrific comic turns by Gig Young, Mamie Van Doren and Nick Adams — but a surprisingly tender love story with Clark Gable and Doris Day as the principals. Gable and Day garner their share of laughs, too, but it's their romance that holds this superior film together.

Rating: $3.45.

Lenore Paxton's got a new single

"They call me a blues singer, but I'm not a blues singer," Hunter said. "I'm a singer of songs. I sing pretty songs and old songs; blues is just part of what I do. I'm just Alberta, singer of songs."

ANOTHER SINGER of songs, but one much younger, is Rochester's Sheila Landis. She and a trio will be the featured attraction at Jim Brady's Garden Party at the Prudential Town Center's lush indoor garden area 5-8 p.m., Wednesday, Aug. 1.

The innovative singer and songwriter has recorded three albums and opened a Montreux-Detroit Koel Jazz Festival concert for Dixie Gillespie. She said she feels a certain affinity to Billie Holiday, "especially the intense emotion of her delivery."

Although the Garden Party on Wednesday nights is new, Dennis Horwath, PR consultant for the music series, said the music won't stop at the end of the summer:

"We're perking up the music with more jazz," he said, "and we hope the series continues forever."

WHAT SEEMS LIKE it will continue forever is the consecutive-years string of performances for the Preservation Hall Jazz Band at Meadow Brook Music Festival.

The oldtimers from New Orleans' Preservation Hall returned to Meadow Brook on Tuesday for the 12th or 13th year in a row. Even the folks in the Meadow Brook office have lost track of how many years it has been.

There's only one reason a group keeps coming back year after year. That's because of a big demand for its music.

The New Orleans-style music the septuagenarian musicians play remains as timeless as ever. Musicians aren't immortal, however. Few of the original jazz musicians are left who remember how "Tiger Rag" or "Panama" was played in the early part of the century by street bands in the Crescent City.

You can't really say you've experienced Meadow Brook Music Festival unless you've snaked danced behind Willie Humphrey as the band played "When the Saints Go Marching In." Who knows which year will be the last you can do that.

LENORE PAXTON, who's playing in a guitar-keyboard duo with guitarist Phillip Sladi, has a new single out. Called "Everytime I See You," the single is written by Sladi, Paxton's partner in the group Lightfall.

A pretty pop ballad, "Everytime I See You" is an appealing Top-40 sound. "We're trying to break into the national market with this record," said Paxton, who reveals that Lightfall is working on another recording that will feature the lush and romantic background of a large orchestra.

Lightfall can be heard frequently at Dimitri's Wildflower, a new restaurant on Drake Road in West Bloomfield.

BOUNDING UP some other music class who will be at area concerts. Detroit organist Lyman Woodard comes to the Bloomfield Township Library (Lone Pine east of Telegraph) at 3 p.m. Sunday, July 29.

Troy guitarist Joseph LaDune, who has won NATAS Emmy Awards in music two years in a row, will play at the Palmer Park Jazz Concert Series in Detroit at 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 4. He follows that with a free concert at 3 p.m., Sunday, Aug. 5, at Troy's Somerset Mall.

And then there's Chuck Mangione at Meadow Brook on Saturday, July 28.

He's got a new Columbia release called "Disguise" coming out soon. But Mangione still likes playing live better than recording.

"I believe my purpose in this world is to play music live for people," said Mangione. "That gives me great satisfaction, which is why I'm on tour nine months of the year."

The big ride: 100 years of rocking, rolling

Roller coaster celebration

I HAVE BEEN scared out of my wits on roller coasters, the kind that take you click-click-click to the top of a great precipice and drop you screaming to almost certain death.

I have spun through space at a million miles a minute on electronic marvels that make you swear "Mama mia, if I ever get out of this alive I'll never break the speed limit again."

Last year, I even rode the Loch Ness Monster at Busch Gardens, Williamsburg, although that was only because I was literally kidnapped by friends who are friends no more.

I HAVE done all that, but this is the most courageous decision of all. I've seen the Big Bad Wolf and the screaming Delta Demon, chewing the inside of my cheeks in terror and dismay, and I have obeyed a little voice in my head saying:

"You don't have to go on that terrifying machine if you don't want to."

Heresay. Especially this year, which marks the 100th anniversary of the roller coaster.

I will be disowned by my children and thrown out of those houses where coastermaniacs pop up and down saying "yeah, yeah!" with excitement when they talk about the speed rides. Robert Cartmell, the guru of roller coasters, will never answer my telephone calls again, not even if I tell him to call me collect.

ROLLER COASTERS are still called "Russian mountains" in some parts of Europe, because thrill rides began with a giant ice slide in St. Petersburg in the 17th century. The first wheeled "Russian Mountains" were in Paris, in 1804 and 1817.

It wasn't until 1870 that the thrill ride crossed the Atlantic, when a company in Pennsylvania converted a coal-mining train into a thrill ride.

They were all great fun, but we wouldn't call them roller coasters today. The first "real" coaster was built exactly 100 years ago, in 1884, on Coney Island by a pious gentleman who wanted to divert young people from spending too much money in beer gardens. It was called Thompson's Switchback Gravity Pleasure Railway.

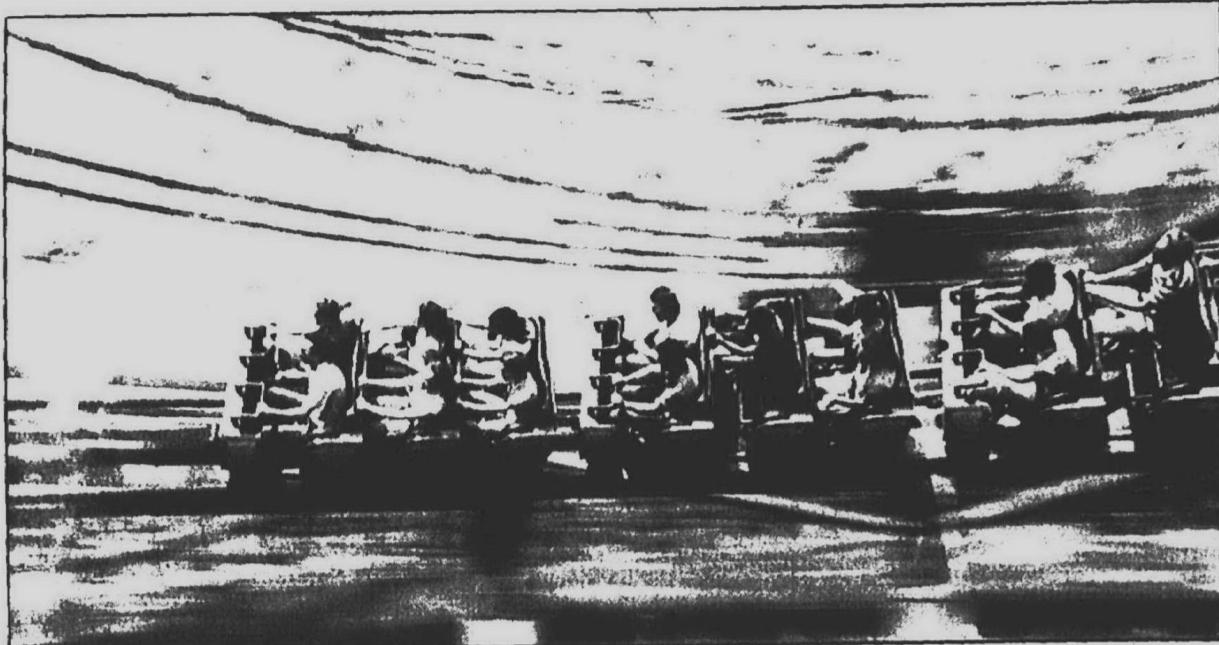

CONEY ISLAND had all the great rides through the turn of the century, including the Oriental Scenic Railway and a 360-degree loop called the Flip Flop, that carried four passengers a minute.

(At the Columbia Exposition of Chicago in 1893, a new frozen version of

'Last year, I even rode the Loch Ness Monster at Busch Gardens, Williamsburg, although that was only because I was literally kidnapped by friends who are friends no more.'

The real coastermaniacs started screaming for the old wooden shakers again.

Traditionally, the wildest ride at any park or fair is the roller coaster which provides the most thrills, chills and opportunities to scream. Parks are observing the roller coaster's 100th year this year. Below, Tracy Parker creates a 100 using the double loops of the Shock Wave at Six Flags Over Texas park in Irving, Tex. Other rides photographed at Marriott's Great America park in Gurnee, Ill., are the Demon (left), the Tidal Wave (upper right) and the White Water Rampage (right)

The White Water Rampage at Great America park has been designed to resemble an untamed northwood rivers and features three sets of rapids, wave makers, a 12-foot-long tunnel filled with special effects and thundering waterfalls.

the Russian ice slide was a sensation. They tried to move it to Coney Island later but the ice kept thawing and stalling the cars.)

By 1919 there were 1,500 amusement parks in the United States, many with "fearsome and fantastic coasters." Some were trolley parks, amusement parks at the end of trolley lines, like Chicago's Riverview Park and Cincinnati's Ohio Grove, "the Coney Island of the west."

THE MANIA for coasters died out eventually. Many of them were torn down. Robert Cartmell of New York, acknowledged as the American roller-coaster expert, had collected much of the old, discarded coaster paraphernalia by the time that theme parks hit the entertainment scene again in the 1960s.

He helped the Smithsonian design a historical exhibit called Coaster to Coaster. His list of the 10 top roller coasters is still awaited eagerly every year.

Coasters used to be wooden and full of shakes. During the '60s and '70s they began to make them out of steel, electronic computerized marvels that corkscrewed you around and dropped with a gravity of three G's.

That was certainly enough to scare away any coastermaniacal tendencies I ever considered, but the real coastermaniacs found that the thrill couldn't be renewed after the first few dozen rides, so they started screaming for the old wooden shakers again.

COASTERS GOT shakier and bigger. The first megacoaster was the Beast at King's Island, followed by the American Eagle at Great America in Gurnee, Ill.

They are everywhere now. A Viking ship called the Berserker does a 360-degree loop at King's Dominion. The Shock Wave gives you shock waves at Six Flags over Texas. Dragon Mountain at Marineland in Niagara Falls claims to be the longest roller coaster in the world at 5,500 feet.

But most theme parks are beginning to offer other kinds of thrills: water rides, bobsled rides, Alice in Wonderland rides through a magic garden.

Theme parks are taking on a new, more educational look, like that found along with the fun at Auto World in Flint or at Sesame Place in Irving, Texas or Langhorne, Pa.

Sesame Street is designed for little kids. Now that sounds about my speed.

The newest ride expansion at Busch Gardens, The Old Country, in Williamsburg, Va. is the Big Bad Wolf, something like a roller coaster without the rollers underneath. Riders swing wildly from side to side as it swoops over the rooftops of the themed Bavarian Village. Suspended from an overhead track, the Wolf travels a free-flight course following the natural terrain of the site

REACH MICHIGAN'S FIRST MARKET ONE CALL DOES IT ALL

More state funds for school improvements

Phillip E. Runkel, state superintendent of public instruction, has hailed approval by the Michigan Legislature of 15 State Board of Education recommendations aimed at improving Michigan's public schools.

"Adoption of these incentive proposals places Michigan among the first states in the nation to forge a link between financial aid and educational quality," Runkel said.

Most state board recommendations were part of the $1.6 billion state school aid bill which received final legislative approval July 11. It is expected to be signed by Gov. James J. Blanchard.

THE AID BILL offers additional state money to schools which voluntarily take measures to improve by 1) expanding their high school curriculum, 2) providing high school students with a longer day, 3) offering programs for academically talented students, or 4) merging with another district.

The $1.6 billion appropriation for 1984-85 represents an increase of $177 million, or nearly 11 percent, compared with last year.

Last year's state aid appropriation was $230 million higher than the previous year. It was the largest year-to-year increase in school aid in state history, after three years of cuts in state school aid. If fully implemented during the coming school year, the cost of the school incentives included in the state school aid bill would amount to approximately $40.5 million, according to Runkel.

THE LARGEST incentive — totaling $36 million, if all eligible school districts qualify — would go to districts that make available all of the following for grades 9-12:

- Six 50-minute class periods, or a total of 300 minutes of classroom instruction per day.

- Four years of English, three years of mathematics, science and social studies.

- Two years of foreign language, fine or performing arts, vocational education or practical arts, or any combination, and one year of health or physical education or both.

Starting in the 1985-86 school year, schools would be required to provide one semester of computer education for high school students.

In order to qualify for the $28-per-student incentive grants, local school boards would be required to adopt a resolution stating they are in compliance with these requirements and submit the resolution to the State Board of Education by Oct. 1.

"WE HAVE HAD two very good years," Runkel said of the school appropriation.

"Last year, we started to see some programs come back from the earlier cutbacks, and more can be restored this year as a result of the strong bipartisan support for education from the governor and the Legislature."

The state school superintendent said he believes the incentive funds "will have a tremendous impact on making instructional improvements universal in this state."

Runkel said many Michigan high schools have been forced to reduce the number of classes from six to five during the last three years because of budget cutbacks. The incentive grants will help them restore the six-period day.

THE INCENTIVE grants are available only to school districts that receive state school aid — known as "in-formula" districts. About 75 percent of the nearly 1.7 million students enrolled in Michigan's 528 K-12 grade districts attend "in-formula" districts.

The curriculum requirements are consistent with high school graduation requirements that were recommended by the State Board of Education in January, when it adopted a report entitled, "Better Education for Michigan Citizens: A Blueprint for Action," a long-range plan to improve learning in Michigan's 3,300 public schools.

Runkel said the state board plans to monitor, during the next four years, progress made by local school districts on implementing the high school graduation guidelines.

The state board will decide in 1988, he said, whether it will seek legislation to establish minimum high school graduation requirements throughout the state.

OTHER SIGNIFICANT state recommendations that are part of the 1984-85 school aid bill or contained in the state board's budget bill are:

- $3 million for incentive grants to school districts or groups of school districts that develop and operate comprehensive programs for gifted and talented students. Grants of $35 per pupil for up to 5 percent of the school district's enrollment would be paid as part of this program.

- $1.5 million in incentive grants for school districts that vote to merge. The grants, to be paid during a three-year period, are to cover additional costs incurred by districts that merge.

- A requirement that school districts make up any school days that are lost because of weather or for other reasons. Present state law requires schools to provide 180 days of student instruction, but in the past districts could count so-called "snow days" as days of instruction. The average Michigan school district lost seven days during the 1981-82 school year because of weather or for other reasons.

- $1 million for implementation of a comprehensive school health education program for public schools.

- $271,500 to expand the statewide testing program conducted by the State Board of Education.

- $1.3 million for special grants to districts that join together and offer cooperative educational programs, special grants for cable TV and computer literacy programs, and to start and operate state education leadership academy.

- $1.4 million for grants of up to $25,000, starting in 1985-86, for immediate districts that develop and operate pilot district-wide transportation programs or centralized school bus and insurance purchasing programs for local districts within the intermediate district.

Volunteers

They bring museum's wealth to children

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

The make-up of the volunteer group is almost as varied as the communities they cover — working women, mothers with young children, retirees, empty nesters, interior designers, computer programmers, housewives and executives.

When Flo Schreier of Beverly Hills, Johanna Hall of Plymouth and Robert Russell of Bloomfield Hills get together to talk about the Art to the Schools program, there's non-stop conversation.

They are three of the 50 some volunteers for this Detroit Institute of Art outreach program. Last year alone, they gave programs for more than 36,000 fourth, fifth and sixth graders in 540 schools in 61 communities.

And they want to recruit more volunteers for the training program which starts in September.

The make-up of the volunteer group, said Schreier, a five-year Art to the Schools veteran, is almost as varied as the communities they cover — working women, mothers with young children, retirees, empty nesters, interior designers, computer programmers, housewives and executives.

By the time the volunteers complete the first-year training program, they are well-prepared. They have attended classes, had many tours of the museum, become well-acquainted with a special subject area and perfected their particular program with lots of expert help.

"Yes, it takes time," said Schreier, "but the opportunity to learn is fantastic."

SHE DOES programs on African and native American art, a subject which, she said, at the time it was assigned to her, "I was the least interested in."

Now, she said, "I love it and I collect it. Modern was what I liked. This gives people an opportunity to learn about things they would never know about otherwise."

Last year she did 26 programs and more than 30 the year before. Volunteers generally average about 26 during the school year from October through April.

Hall, whose specialty is American art, said, "I've been doing it for four years and this year I'm adding a second, 'Introduction to the Museum.'"

"I just love it," she added saying that she isn't an artist or avid collector, but someone who loves art. "I've been in museums all over the world, including France, Russia."

Russell, retired from General Motors and in the program for just a year, chimed in, "So many of our volunteers have had amazing travel experiences. My year of training was wonderful. I'm interested in history, so it really fit with my interest. It entailed a complete survey of recorded art."

His program area is Ancient Art.

Schreier emphasized that being an Art to the Schools volunteer stretches far beyond the classroom. She loves the perks, such as tours of the new shows at the museum with the curator in charge, visits to outstanding private collections and the warm friendships which spring up among the volunteers.

"The nicest thing," Schreier said, "is when the kids draw pictures and send letters — saying the things that only kids can say when they write."

THE PROGRAMS given by the volunteers include slides and touchables, most of which are reproductions of paintings and sculpture in the museum.

The Art in the Schools program is free to public, private and parochial schools in metropolitan Detroit, the suburbs and surrounding communities.

For schools which no longer have funds available for bus trips to the museum, it is a way of becoming acquainted with this wonderful community resource.

The 50-minute programs on Ancient, African, Native American, Asian and Modern Art are presented as a dialogue between students and speaker.

The programs, Schreier pointed out, often dovetail nicely with the study the class is involved in.

Anyone interested in the next training class beginning in September should call Helen Shannon, education department, Detroit Institute of Arts, 833-1426, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays for an interview.

Schreier said with a touch of pride, "You know when our kids (five) all left home, they probably wondered what I would do without them. Now, they don't have to worry."

She told of meeting one of them, Noah, in New York City recently and his smile when she said, "Come on, I'll give you a tour of the Metropolitan Museum of Art."

Sculpturing is expressive and fulfilling

This is another in a series of lessons on art and drawing by special columnist David Messing. He has taught for eight years and operates an art store, Art Store and More, 18774 Middlebelt, Livonia. "Wow, oh, hey wow look at those twins!" I thought to myself. It must have been love at first sight. After arranging an introduction I knew my life would never be the same. Within months I knew Sandy was the one for me.

I remember once telling her, "I have waited for you all my life." And now 15 years later, whenever she is late and I have to wait for her, I still tell her, "Honey, I've waited for you all my life!" But I do remember that introduction to Sandy and Sue (her sister), like it was yesterday, because it led to a love that continually supports me in whatever I do and the maintenance of it is my primary goal.

There is however another introduction that I also distinctly remember and that, in fact, was the name of the course; Intro to Sculpture. I clearly remember moulding the clay to the general shape of the male model's head. First I worked in the planes of the face, head and neck and with many stolen glances to either side of me I could see I was keeping up with the other students.

Then came time to do the features and this started to separate the "men from the boys" so to speak. Many of the sculptured lips looked like they were either "giving the raspberries" or puckered for a kiss. And the work of my own hands was producing the same three dimensional error. So I did what any other self-respecting overweight sculpture student does. I went down to the snack bar and ate my frustrations away.

artifacts

UNFORTUNATELY WHEN I returned, my sculpture actually looked worse. So there we stood head to head. My sculpture seemed to scream about "burry up and fix me". And I with an Oh! Henry in one hand and a Coke in the other couldn't think of what to do next. So, since I was out of money and couldn't possibly eat any more, I had to stay and face this problem. Bravely I cut the lips right off my sculpture and just stared at the model. You know how I always write that it must be clear in your mind before it can be clear on canvas or paper? Well, this was the moment that it all was revealed to me. I had to see the main shape which was his mouth. Then see the many subtle shapes in the lips. Then the texture of the skin of the lips and the mouth.

This was not a medium that allowed me to hide any difficult areas in shaded color, not could I rub a little here and there to vaguely suggest a feature. This was three dimensional modeling, this was creation, sculpture. To me this was the true art form! The formation of a three dimensional image is the finest hour for any artist. The day and hour of my introduction to sculpture and the revelation of shape and mass will always be clearly remembered.

My entire approach to art changed from that day forward. When I went to my life drawing class it seemed easy to merely draw the two-dimensional image and simply to give it the three-dimensional shading. In my approach to any object I drew or painted with an appreciation for not only its length and height but also its depth or mass. Because this moment was such a revelation to me, because the revelation affected my approach to all other media and because it opened my eyes to the third dimension I would like to take a couple weeks to introduce you to sculpture.

Even if you don't try it, you may gain from just reading some of the basics of how it is done. You may even dislike working in three dimension but as I tell my students, "It is not important that you don't like a particular medium. It is worth a few lessons to learn how to use it so that your decision to never do it again, will at least be an educated one." As for my students they will all have the opportunity to decide for or against sculpture as it will be required when we move to our new facility some time after the first of the year.

It is surprising how many artists come from the other side of the mountain. By that I mean there are many wood carvers who already have an appreciation for three dimensional art, but are unaware that they can even draw. I have one student named Leon who is a wood carver. Since his beginning lessons at the Art Store, Leon has attracted much attention, as his ability to capture realism is remarkable. Each lesson, each medium so far seems to come easy to him and I am sure it is so because of his three dimensional background.

AS A humorous compliment to other new students, Marleen (one of our teachers) and I will say, "this lesson is turning out so well it almost has a 'Leon' look to it." So if your three-dimensional hobby is wood carving or ceramics you may be surprised to find you too can draw.

Sculpture is the true art form, sculpture is expressive and fulfilling, sculpture is therapeutic, sculpture is the biggest mess you have ever seen in your whole life. My wife and mother-in-law, June threatened my life if I taught another student sculpture in our present classroom setting. The usual oil base clay, wax and plaster materials are akin to accidents and debris.

While one student has clay stuck to the bottom of his tennis shoe, another is flinging plaster to make a break mold, yet another is lost in a cloud of hydrostone dust as he or she mixes the plaster for pouring. Sounds fun doesn't it? If you are ever going to try sculpture, summer is the time and outside is the place to try it. So hold on to your three dimensional hats and we will start next week with an introduction to sculpture. Here's a good line to end on. I was bettering my mind watching "Beverly Hills Cop" reruns one day, and Jed had a good comment about sculpture. He said, "Shucks, sculpturin's easy! Ya just cut away everything that don't look like what yer sculpturin'."

Richard Kozlow's lithographs and paintings on bullfighting extract the essence of the drama and the ritual of movement without over-sensitizing the sport. The artist from Birmingham attended bullfights while living in Mexico and Spain.

Bullfight art wins praise

By Corinne Abatt

Richard and Lois Kozlow of Birmingham are still a trifle awed by the reception in Madrid to his lithographs and paintings on bull fighting.

An American taking bull fight art to Spain is as audacious as taking canoe paddles to the Indians or fishing rods to the Eskimos.

Richard and Lois Kozlow of Birmingham are still a trifle awed by the reception in Madrid to his lithographs and paintings on bull fighting.

But, then, Kozlow is as much international personality and artist as he is hometown painter.

When he and his family lived in both Mexico and Spain, he had an opportunity to study bull fighting and the elaborate ritual surrounding it as an objective, keen-eyed observer.

The show, sponsored by the U.S. government, was held at the U.S. Cultural Center in Madrid.

"I MUST ADMIT I was a little apprehensive," said Kozlow, remembering the moments just before the opening reception when they weren't certain if anyone would show up.

But the crowd was sizeable, and unlike those at openings here, Kozlow said many who came were involved in bull fighting.

Kozlow recalled with a smile the woman art reviewer who is married to a bull fighter.

"She stood in front of each painting for a long time. Then she told me she was so surprised. Everything was correct, the moves, the passes, everything. She said it was like going to the corrida. Like spending the afternoon at the corrida."

Corrida de toros is the Spanish phrase for the bull fight.

That and other favorable comments erased Kozlow's fears.

Particularly interesting is that this artist has depicted this most colorful of events in black and white.

WHILE RESIDING in Spain, the Kozlows lived near the bull ring, so he had opportunities to see the spectacle. But this was one of the few trips when he didn't take pack art supplies.

"Most of the time when we go away, I pack my brushes and acrylics, but this time I didn't. Over there the acrylics are not very good, so I bought a large jar of tempera. I don't even paint with tempera. Then, all of a sudden, I was painting bull fighting in tempera — a forgiving medium that added a whole new thing."

Biography probes sad life of photographer Arbus

"Diane Arbus, A Biography," Patricia Bosworth, Alfred A. Knopf, $17.95

By Chuck Moss
special writer

"Every form correctly seen is beautiful." If any one statement could sum up the work of photographer Diane Arbus, this is it.

Arbus relentlessly captured the freaks, the outcasts, the lonely and the grotesque in our society. Her most famous pictures, "Jewish Giant with His Parents," the nudist series, the shots of wealthy children, all find a common humanity in the strangest and loneliest of forms.

Yet the life of this artist was a maelstrom of contradiction, insecurity, sexual politics, and finally a deep despair that ended in her 1971 suicide. Now Patricia Bosworth probes this strange and fertile life in "Diane Arbus, A Biography."

"I DON'T PRETEND to have the answers. Diane was extremely contradictory. She would make a statement one minute, then totally contradict herself the next, and be completely unconcerned. She deliberately threw up smokescreens and enjoyed creating an air of mystery around her," said Bosworth, an experienced and professional journalist who candidly admits this was a difficult subject.

It took her 5½ years to pierce the smokescreens surrounding Arbus. What emerges is a fascinating and harrowing portrait of an obsessive personality, compelled to pursue and portray the "dark world," the forbidden around her.

BORN INTO a wealthy Jewish merchant family (they owned the Russek's Fifth Avenue store in New York), Arbus grew up insulated from the harsh world of the Depression. This separation from life affected her profoundly.

"She thought the world she grew up in wasn't the real world. Nothing was real to her until she experienced it," Bosworth said, "Arbus constantly felt what she called 'the pain of being immune.'"

At 14 she fell in love with Allan Arbus and married him at 18. The two opened a studio and became high-fashion photographers during the 1950s, a golden age for commercial photography. Ironically, author Bosworth once posed for the Arbuses during a stint as a model.

THIS BOOK is fascinating, yet disturbing as it explores the roots of this sad and seductive person. Refused permission by the Arbus estate to use any of Diane's pictures, Bosworth nonetheless paints a vivid and wide canvas of not only the lives but the times surrounding the artist.

By the late 1950s both Arbus and her husband yearned for other creative outlets. She finally quit the studio to take classes and work on creative images.

Her teacher, Lisette Model, advised her, "If you don't photograph what you are compelled to photograph, then you'll never photograph." Arbus replied, "What I want to photograph is evil."

DRIVEN BY a compulsion to seek the dark, strange world forbidden by her parents, Arbus dove into the lives of freaks and the inhabitants of the demimonde.

"She was constantly frightened, and needed to overcome that fear daily," Bosworth said.

"Those places carried real danger. In researching the book, I approached 42nd Street and the other places very carefully, very timidly. I found some of the same people she had photographed. I came away with a great appreciation for her courage."

Arbus' photos expanded the range of the permissible in the growing discipline of photojournalism. Her confrontational, controversial images evoked intense reactions. When exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art, curators had to come in every morning to wipe off spit from the Arbus pictures.

But as her fame grew, so did her loneliness and despair.

Raised from childhood to live dependent on a man, she was desperate and lost when her husband divorced her and moved to California for an acting career.

Her growing fame brought unwelcome pressures and money became a constant worry to the woman who had grown up wealthy.

"Depression was congenital to her family," Bosworth said. "Her mother and father suffered, and Diane was allergic to anti-psychotic drugs."

A bout with hepatitis left her sick and weak and, depressed and desperate, she took her own life.

"DIANE ARBUS was one of the significant creative personalities of the '60s. I was fascinated both by her as a person and the world of photography in those years. In some way I can understand her. She was an obsessive person and I am too," said Bosworth. "But I don't want to get into analyzing or judgments. Tell the story. Just tell the story."

"She showed the freakishness in the normal and normality in the freaks."

The tragedy lay in her inability to see these qualities in herself.

The story of Diane Arbus is well told in this book. Intense and strange, Arbus nonetheless found that human qualities transcend society's idea of "normal."

Ottawa Indian artifacts show at Harbor Springs

Ottawa Indian beadwork and textiles are on display through Sept. 30 at the Andrew J. Blackbird Museum in Harbor Springs. Exhibition pieces include historically significant items dating from the 18th century to the present.

Of special significance are Ottawa wampum belts, of which there are only four remaining in the world. The belts, made from shell beads, were rare even when in use.

Another unusual item is the Arbre Croche sketchbook of Indian hell drawings used in 1830s religious instruction at Holy Childhood School in Harbor Springs. The cover of the sketchbook was made from moose hair on deerskin.

Moccasins, leggings, textile mats, bags and trade cloth also will be displayed. All items were made by the Ottawa in the Cross Village and Harbor Springs areas.

Harbor Springs is on Little Traverse Bay. The Blackbird Museum is at 368

E. Main Street, Harbor Springs.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and noon to 5 p.m. Saturdays. Admission is $1.

A 64-page, full-color catalog of the exhibit, with text by ethnologist Christian F. Feest, is available from the museum. For information, call 616-526-7731

Opera at OU

The Piccolo Opera Company will present "Little Red Riding Hood," a children's opera by Seymour Barab, at 11 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 4, at Meadow Brook.

General admission tickets are $3.50. For more information call 377-2100. Meadow Brook is on the Oakland University campus in Rochester

Texture enhances photos

Rough up your shots by becoming aware of the many surfaces and textures that are available to photograph.

Textures play a vital role in the appearance of most photographs. Used creatively, texture will enhance the color, shape and overall composition of your work.

Our environment is rich in texture, from the rough surface of a pebbled beach to the alternating smoothness and roughness of an old wall of peeling paint or the intimate texture of a single feather.

In photographing landscapes, textured areas help separate the different sections of the composition and are light.

LATE AFTERNOON or early morning light will produce needed texture and give your shot extra impact. An overhead sun will minimize textured detail, making your picture appear too flat.

In landscape photography, tune in closely to how texture can relate to composition. Rivers, roads, fences, etc., can break the scene into distinct textured shapes so that the areas created build into an integrated design pattern.

In the city, textures are everywhere. The granular pattern of a street or the roughness of a wall of bricks pattern are both rich in texture. Even an old junkyard contains a multitude of shapes and textures that will produce exciting results.

Remember that with city scenes, just as in landscapes, directional lighting is necessary to bring out strong textures.

Enjoy photographing food? If so, you know that skillful lighting is a must. A sliced cabbage, the skin of an orange, or the crust of a loaf of bread all require proper directional lighting to enhance surface textures.

When photographing your pet, use side or backlighting. By doing so, you'll obtain maximum detail in the animal's fur and get separation from the background, too.

Another interesting texture to explore is human skin. Strong side of backlighting will bring out weathered wrinkles in the face of an old sailor, while soft frontal lighting will show the sleek smooth skin found on a beautiful model.

DON'T FORGET, texture itself can be made the main subject. Details of plants, rocks, and wood can make exciting photographs in their own right. Or, on a broader scale, imagine a Monte Nagler found a lot of texture in this old garage door, shingled roof and foreground grass. By using strong sidelighting, he was able to emphasize the many textures in the composition.

New Art Review covers Michigan art happenings

With its first two issues, April/May and June/July, the new Art Review magazine made a colorful entrance into the Michigan market.

Ron Brodley of Southfield, 26-year-old publisher, said he had been working toward this project for the last six years — "as long as I can remember."

One of his goals, he said, "is to prove to New York and Chicago that Michigan has a thriving art community."

His first two issues show Michigan art, both visual and performing, to good advantage. The quality of the slick paper gives excellent color reproduction on the inside as well as the cover. Art magazines without color always seem like dinner without the entree.

The story on Romare Bearden in the current issue benefits greatly from the two color pictures. This story by Sandra Lanese also establishes a link between this metropolitan area, Grand Rapids and New York.

Birmingham gallery owner Sheldon Ross, a longtime friend of Bearden's as well as collector of his work, was deeply involved in the show of Bearden's work which was held at the Grand Ra-apid Art Museum earlier this summer. Ross has visited Bearden at his home in New York City and given one-man shows at Sheldon Ross gallery.

In that same issue, there's a story and color photos on the Faberge show at the Detroit Institute of Arts, an interview with Livonia architect and author Louis Redstone by Sandra Yolles, a story on Italian artifact collector Loren Herrington by Ira Lax and some other attractive shorter pieces.

EVEN BEFORE he graduated from Southfield Lathrup High School, Brodley was working at Gallery Art Center of Southfield. It was there that his interest in art developed and the dream of becoming a publisher began to take shape.

As to the future, Brodley said, "I don't want to be confined to just Michigan."

He added that doesn't necessarily mean he will expand this magazine's coverage beyond Michigan but rather that he might start magazines in other areas.

For now, he said the magazine will continue to define "what is art."

Jim Green, editor, who worked for Franks, and D'arcy, McManus and Masius Inc. after studying journalism at Wayne State University, said the magazine will continue to be broad-based in its coverage of the arts.

THE AUGUST ISSUE, for instance, will have features on Attic Theater of Detroit, Artcote of Windsor, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and hometown art critics.
