Merchants protest deck assessment

By Gary M. Cates
staff writer

Downtown Plymouth merchants don't want to pay the $40,000 a year operational costs for the newly constructed deck in Central Parking Lot. They would prefer to let their customers pick up the tab.

Merchants packed the auditorium at city hall Monday night to protest a plan to pay the operational costs through a special assessment. The overwhelming majority opted for parking gates and a 25-cent per day parking fee.

The merchants made their opinions known to the city commission during a public hearing on the special assessment plan. The city commission will vote on the plan at its next meeting and is expected to approve a user-funded parking system.

Opponents of the assessment vigorously protested being billed for the deck's maintenance.

"The land owners will have to pass it on to the tenants and these tenants can't afford much more passing on," said Earl Smith, a downtown landlord.

Original deck plans called for construction to be financed through a downtown development authority (DDA) tax increment financing plan and for operation to be financed through user fees (parking gates requiring 25 cents to exit).

After the deck was built, the idea of offering free parking was brought up and the city's parking commission went to work on a plan. They came up with the special assessment idea.

That plan calls for drawing concentric circles around the deck so that those owning property closest to the deck would pay larger shares with those farthest away paying the least. Credits for parking already provided by land owners would be applied. Those without parking deficiencies would be exempted from the program.

"I UNDERSTAND that we changed plans because many of us (downtown merchants) came to the parking commission to discuss other ideas," said Bob Wade, another downtown property owner.

"However, I am against the assessment plan and am in favor of the gates," Wade said.

Others said merchants still had the option of providing customers with a quarter to pay for their parking if the gates were installed.

"My customers do not wish to park in there (the deck)," said Maria Shaw, a downtown tenant. "It's not to my advantage at all."

"If I choose to give my customers a quarter, that's at my discretion, because some of them don't deserve it," she said.

"I resent the commission making that decision for me."

Board eyes computers

By M.B. Dillon Ward

With a little help from Birmingham, the Plymouth-Canton school board is planning to plunge into the high tech age.

Plymouth-Canton Community Schools — readying a campaign to promote the $5-million bond issue voters will decide upon this winter — hosted two representatives from Birmingham Public Schools at a Monday night workshop.

Coordinator of Media Services Lucy Ainsley and Teacher Consultant for Instructional Computing Joan Burleigh spent 2 1/2 hours teaching board members, administrators, librarians and media specialists about the avant-garde application of computers and cable TV in Birmingham's school district.

Looks of awe, envy, amazement and puzzlement passed over staffers' faces, and administrators drooled over the dollars and know-how at Birmingham's disposal.

While the Plymouth-Canton district furnishes computers for high school students, 1984-85 will mark middle school pupils' initial exposure. The only elementary schools equipped with computers are those whose parent-teacher organizations, staffs or student bodies have obtained computers on their own.

"The board wanted to get some insight into how technology is being used in other districts, and these two (Ainsley and Burleigh) have done some innovative kinds of things in Birmingham," said Richard Egli, Plymouth-Canton community relations director.

The session was intended to help the board outline for the community why more money is needed, and to "update the board on what needs there are," Egli added.

"The board is very concerned about maintaining quality education. This is part of the determination they have to make — what priorities there are in the technological age."

AINSLEY and Burleigh — who have no direct counterparts in the Plymouth-Canton school district — highlighted ways in which "the information age" has transformed life in Birmingham schools:

- Robotics instruction, incorporated into an industrial technology program, "has received national press."

- Administrators use computers in financial management, forecasting, word processing, correspondence, tracking attendance and to compile catalogs and reports.

Kirkpatrick rally staged

DALLAS — It was supposed to look spontaneous — and it did. It was supposed to catapult Jeane Kirkpatrick into media prominence — but it didn't.

Conservative Republicans staged a 10-minute demonstration Monday night for the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

And while hers was widely considered to be the best speech of the first night of the GOP National convention, it went almost unnoticed by national TV.

"It wasn't as long as we had hoped," Michael Legg, delegate from Livonia, said after the show he had helped plot.

"It was like a nomination — it seemed so spontaneous," said Page Yeager, an alternate from Bloomfield Hills who was unaware of the plan.

LEGG ANNOUNCED to the Michigan delegation that morning that he was part of a plan to stage a "spontaneous" demonstration for Kirkpatrick.

The humorous inflection in his voice told everyone there would be nothing "spontaneous" about it.

"Two minutes are allotted for applause," Legg said. "The band is to stop at that point. But every time he (the chairman) hits the gavel, it's your cue to cheer harder."

"We want Jeane to leave Dallas with real stature, the same as Mario Cuomo (New York governor who keynoteed the Democratic National Convention last month and emerged as a

The eastbound M-14 ramp to northbound I-275 was closed Tuesday morning as police and wrecker crews attempted to right a flipped truck. The truck, carrying some 45,000 video cassettes, flipped on the turn when the box shifted. The trailer box is held to the trailer frame by locking pins, which police said weren't in place. No one was injured.

'Cost-cutters' keep Kroger closed

Starting today, Canton shoppers will be able to "go Krogering" once again.

The Kroger store at Ford and Sheldon — one of the 70 Michigan stores closed last month after employees rejected a wage contract — is being reopened.

But Plymouth's Kroger store at 240 N. Main Street isn't among the 45 stores that are reopening. There's no chance the decision will be reversed, according to Kroger spokesman Paul Bernish.

The Ohio-based grocery chain moved to reopen its stores after employees accepted a new contract which reinstated seniority rights, but granted the employer a 13 percent reduction in wages.

Company officers examined several factors in determining which stores to reopen.

"We conducted an evaluation of all our stores in Michigan, and based on a number of variables, including recent track record — and also its potential for success — we had to choose between those that would reopen. Canton was one of those," said Bernish Tuesday in an interview.

"Canton was one of those that had good chances of being successful. It has been a good store for us."

Bernish declined further comment on the older Plymouth store, saying only that it will be sold.

"We're in the process of selling it now," Bernish said.

ALSO IN progress is the rehiring of Kroger workers.

"We have to go through the process of allowing employees to transfer if they want to, and if so where . . . If they don't, it has to be determined who would accept severance, who's retiring, and who would go on the recall list. It's impossible to say with any precision who's going to be where. That's all being undertaken right now," Bernish said.

It's unlikely any new job openings will develop after existing employees exercise their seniority rights, he added.

WORKER'S NEW WAGE and benefit package will drop starting pay for new hires to $4.56 from $5.25 hourly. Wages for employees with more than 30 months seniority were decreased to $9 from $10.37, according to a spokesman for United Food and Commercial Workers Union Local 876, which represents Kroger's Michigan employees.

Adopted by nearly a three-to-one margin about two weeks ago, the package leaves intact the health and benefit package, he added. "We gave up some sick and personal days and some vacation time, but were successful in retaining all rights and benefits in the contract. We only gave up monetary benefits."

A monumental task confronts Kroger management, Bernish said.

"Stores have to be fully restocked. We have to order merchandise from all over the country, particularly perishable goods," he said.

"We have to make sure our buildings are in store-ready condition."

Managers who weren't let go will be mopping floors, washing windows, cleaning and stocking shelves to meet today's deadline, he said.

"We are delighted to be able to maintain a retailing presence in Michigan, where we have operated food stores since 1917," said Joel E. Greenisen, vice-president of Kroger's Michigan marketing area.

"The past few weeks have been difficult for all of us, and now we are eager to open our stores as quickly as possible and get back to business."

Canton's store in Harvard Square shopping center is one of 16 stores reopening this week. The others are in Ann Arbor, Dearborn, Grosse Pointe, Monroe, Mount Clemens, Port Huron, Rochester, Union Lake and Ypsilanti.

Slated to reopen next week on Aug. 29 are stores in Auburn Heights, Bay City, Birmingham, Brighton, Dearborn, Essexville, Farmington, Grosse Ile, Grosse Pointe, Howell, Inkster, Lapeer, Midland, Milford, New Baltimore, Novi, Orchard Lake, Richmond, Roseville, Royal Oak, St. Clair Shores, Sterling Heights, Troy, Warren, Waterford, Wayne, Westland and Woodhaven.

Stores to be sold — aside from the Plymouth site — include those in Adrian, Dearborn, Ferndale, Flat Rock, Lincoln Park, Livonia, Madison Heights, Pontiac, Southfield, Southgate, St. Clair, Taylor, Tecumseh, Warren and six in Detroit.

Cops still seek answers from city

The Plymouth Police Officers Association is waiting for a response to questions it asked the city commission last month.

During a July commission meeting, union president Mike Gardner asked the city commission to answer six questions concerning the leadership of the department, the disbursement of money raised from the contract with Plymouth Township and the resignation of chief Ralph White.

"The police officers, many of whom are citizens of the community, posed some questions to the commission," police officer Jerry Vorva said at Monday night's commission meeting. (Of the 13-member patrol unit, Vorva and three others live in Plymouth.)

"THE COMMISSIONERS took it upon themselves not to answer these questions," he said.

Vorva spoke during the citizen comment portion of Monday night's regular commission meeting.

The commission chambers were packed, with overflow into the hallway, mostly because of a controversial parking plan being discussed. However, a good number of police and fire union members also were in attendance.

"This is not merely a labor problem, a lot of the police officers are tax-paying citizens," he said.

"We are at a cross roads, we're at the point where we demand accountability. We're saying tonight that we want accountability from this commission. We want answers to our questions," Vorva said.

Omnicom pushes for first profit

By Dennis Coffman
staff writer

For sheer excitement, operating a cable-television station is about as good as it gets.

Just ask Rick Collman, general manager of Omnicom Cablevision, the company that provides pay television to Plymouth, Canton Township, Plymouth Township, Northville, Northville Township, Hamtramck and Belleville.

Collman's company, in business four years, has to please subscribers and government agencies; has to be on the lookout for illegal use of its services; must respond quickly when service is interrupted; must keep its programming and its equipment state-of-the-art; and all for the privilege of losing money.

Like many cable operators, Omnicom has been operating in the red but, like most, expects to eventually make money, according to Collman.

"Our biggest enemies are Mother Nature and fences," said Collman. Storms and high winds cause transmission interruptions. Digging for fence installations can cut the cable, if the person doing the digging is unaware of the exact cable location underground.

"Our computer can get zapped," said Collman. "But we're proud of our response time. We find out where the damage is and then it's hop-to-it time."

Omnicom has three "dishes" at its Canton Township main office, 8465 Ronda, off Joy.

As a cable operator, Omnicom dishes receive transmissions via the SATCOM satellite from program companies such as HBO or CNN, then distribute the programs via cable to subscribers in Plymouth or Canton.

IT HAS studios in Canton, Northville and Hamtramck, which allow local school districts, city and township governments or local organizations to have access to cable facilities.

Omnicom has six broadcasting technicians to assist local groups in Plymouth and Canton with the mechanics of putting a show on the air (or on the cable, as it were). Omnicom first provides a workshop to orient Canton or Plymouth residents to the niceties of producing a cable-television show.

Although Omnicom is a monopoly in its area, it doesn't have the advantages enjoyed by one former monopoly — the telephone company.

"Ninety-nine percent of the residents have telephones," said Collman. "But we are not a monopoly in the sense that they (Plymouth-Canton residents) need the service. They vote with their (cable service) bills. We have 45-50 percent of the homes in the area signed up, from Northville to Belleville. It is an entertainment, luxury service."

Omnicom now has 16,000 subscribers, although 28,000 homes in the service area are wired for cable. All cable installation is now complete in the area which Omnicom is licensed to serve.

"It took the phone company years (to install connections)," said Collman. "But we don't have the help of the federal government. It takes a while to reach a sparsely populated area. But we are pretty well wired in this area. It takes awhile to make money, but it's nothing to be ashamed of."

At the heart of every cable system is what Collman calls a "lengthy, complicated document" — the contract between the local government and the cable company.

OMNICOM HAS a 15-year agreement with the Plymouth and Canton communities. Included in the agreement is the right of the community to the cable facilities for local access programming.

Omnicom is providing programs such as a fundraiser for the Canton Township 150 Fund, to mark the city's sesquicentennial. In Plymouth, it will provide program time for the Fall Festival.

Omnicom is providing time for a "Help Lynn Live" telethon in Hamtramck, to help raise $100,000 for a liver transplant for Hamtramck resident Lynn Kinsman.

Omnicom is asking for a $2 rate increase in Plymouth and Canton, which would raise the cost of its basic five-channel tier (The Music Channel (MTV), Cable News Network (CNN), the Weather Channel, the Nashville Channel and the Health (Lifestyle) Channel) from $7.95 to $9.95.

Omnicom, as is the case with other cable operators, rewards heavy users of its product by giving special rates to customers who use more than one of its packages.

Its most popular movie channel is Home Box Office (HBO), followed by The Movie Channel, Cinemax and Showtime.

Collman said cable eventually might enjoy the market penetration of telephone companies, which is about 99 percent. With long distance and special charges, phone bills typically approach the amount of cable billings.

"We have completed the construction. Now it is time to concentrate on service and the use of good business judgement," said Collman.

Of the 42 channels available on Omnicom, most are specialized (narrowcast) but have a sufficient following to justify their existence, such as CNN or MTV. But some, such as the Weather Channel, are subsidized through contributions from cable operators such as Omnicom. Collman said the Weather Channel, though not profitable, adds to the diversity of the Omnicom schedule and is a valuable service that most viewers regularly check at least a few minutes every day.

COLLMAN SAID the future is difficult to predict for a fast-changing business such as cable television. He considers himself a "veteran," with seven years in the business.

But he expects rates to level off, as more companies decide to advertise on cable, to help cut operating costs. Viewers have been receptive to the Pro-Am Sports System (PASS), for example, even though that channel has advertising.

However, Collman said, it is not likely that viewers would settle for advertising on HBO or The Movie Channel, because the "no-commercials" feature of those packages has been heavily promoted.

"There is nothing sacrosanct about movies not having ads," said Collman. "But there could be an uproar from (cable) operators."

Another prediction from Collman is for increased popularity of music-only channels such as MTV, with offshoots such as country music video channels.

Other highly regarded channels, according to Collman, include the Arts and Entertainment channel. The new "learning" channel could be another indication of things to come, as professional persons, such as doctors or accountants, use cable to keep abreast of the latest developments in their fields — or as workers seek new skills in areas such as computers.

Stereo via cable also holds promise. Omnicom now offers an optional stereo service.

One potential use for cable that never materialized was security, or surveillance systems, whereby homes could use their cable as a kind of security alarm. Penetration of the system would be monitored.

"The Qube system, too, has gone by the boards," said Collman. The system allowed cable subscribers to respond to surveys by "voting" through their two-way cable connection.

"There weren't that many customers and the marketplace determines success," said Collman. "Two-way Qube was not that viable."

He expects future cable to be pretty much like present cable. "What we have now is where it's at," he said. "Omnicom is still state-of-the-art."

NOR DOES Collman expect to see very many "mom-and-pop" cable operators in the future.

"The days of locally owned (cable systems) are over," he said. "The capital outlays are too great."

That little box used by cable subscribers costs the company $120. It takes months to recoup that investment alone, Collman pointed out.

Omnicom, reflecting the trend away from local ownership, is a subsidiary of Capitol Cities Communications.

"They're the smartest, but not the largest," said Collman. "They are in it (cable) for the long haul."

Faces at the national GOP convention

Did you vote for this man? He is the Republican gubernatorial candidate in 1982 — Richard Headlee sporting a Detroit Tiger baseball cap.

Enjoying an off-moment at the national GOP convention are Michael Legg of Livonia, chairman of the 2nd District Wayne Republican organization, and Elaine Donnelly of Livonia.

Enjoying a partisan speech are delegates Steve Bruce of Farmington Hills and former U.S. Senator Robert Griffin. Griffin is a candidate this November for election to the state Supreme Court.

ERA foe Donnelly likes GOP platform

By Tim Richard
staff writer

DALLAS — Elaine Donnelly, the highly quotable Livonia homemaker and public relations counselor, found herself a television star again as the Republican platform committee put together its plank on women's issues.

"I'm satisfied — very much so," said the Michigan at-large delegate of the conservative document on which President Reagan will run in 1984.

"It's very positive, innovative and more sophisticated than the Democratic platform, which rubberstamps anything the feminists want and says it's good for women."

DONNELLY WAS invited onto the MacNeill-Lehrer national television report last week after tangling before the platform committee with Sen. Robert Packwood of Oregon on the subject of "unisex" insurance. She at one time campaigned against the Equal Rights Amendment.

In a nutshell, the Donnelly doctrine is that America has two women's movements:

- The failing feminist movement of former Rep. Bella Abzug, author Gloria Steinem and NOW's Judy Goldsmith. It lost its major goals:

passing the Equal Rights Amendment, defeating Reagan for the presidency and winning "gay rights" legislation.

- The "non-feminist" movement, which she said pinpoints such specific goals as improving Individual Retirement Accounts, doubling federal income tax exemptions for children and protecting widows' pension right. It also opposes the "comparable worth" theory of wages and "unisex" insurance.

MICHIGAN'S TWO delegates on the platform committee also were pleased with the final report.

"We don't need the ERA. We already have ER," said Joyce Kleiman of Portage, an at-large delegate and president of the Republican Women's Federation of Michigan.

"This is written as a platform of a governing party," added W. Clark Durant, Grosse Pointe attorney and vice-chairman of the state Reagan-Bush organization. "It was written for the next 10 years, not just to win an election."

The official word to the Michigan caucus came from Paul V. Gadola, Flint attorney, chairman of the state Reagan-Bush organization and the man responsible for getting Donnelly a delegate's spot.

"We don't want any changes in the platform. It's an excellent platform from the point of view of Reagan-Bush," Gadola told the caucus Sunday.

Republican moderates, however, argued that the extreme right wing of the party had captured control of the platform committee by controlling local, regional and state delegate selections, thus weeding them out.

"Given the party's position on women's rights, the future of the Republican Party looks bleak indeed," said Mary Dent Crisp, former co-chairman of the Republican National Committee. She said she would support the Democratic presidential ticket.

The Michigan delegation voted yes on a voice vote. Pat Ganzberger, a 15th District delegate from Southgate, said, "I voted yes though some parts of it were disconcerting."

She mentioned that the platform encourages state right-to-work laws. Her husband is a member of the AFL-CIO building trades council. "We got the platform quite late and just had time to scan it," Ganzberger said. "We got it the morning of the session that we voted on it."

Alternate Susan Heintz of the 2nd District was photographed reading

'It's very positive, innovative and more sophisticated than the Democratic platform, which rubberstamps anything the feminists want and says it's good for women.'

—Elaine Donnelly delegate from Livonia

the platform and the photo appeared in a number of newspapers. Michael Legg of joked that she was a "disgrace to the delegation" for actually reading the platform.

"I FOCUSED on equal pay for comparable worth," said Donnelly, who favors "equal pay for equal work."

The "comparable worth" notion, she argued, assumes the market is "biased" and ignorant of economic values. "Comparable worth" studies by bureaucrats equate laundry workers to truck drivers, place librarians far ahead of carpenters and nurses at twice the value of chemists.

"The irony is that if a woman is in a category where men predominate, she would get a wage freeze or cut, along with the men," she said.

Her clash with Sen. Packwood, a moderate who outdraws Reagan in his west coast state.

Using data from Michigan, one of four states which prohibits life and accident insurance rates based on sex, Donnelly argued such "equality" raised auto insurance rates for young single women 13 to 127 percent and 103 to 327 percent for young married women.

"Sen. Packwood was extremely rude to me. The data I brought was so harmful to his case that he reacted very negatively."

OTHER KEY points in her testimony:

- Under Reagan, the "marriage penalty" — under which the earnings of a working married couple were taxed higher than those of two single individuals — has been reduced.

- Married couples with a single income should be allowed under law to place $4,000 of annual income into Independent Retirement Accounts (compared to the current $2,250).

- The tax exemption should be doubled to $2,000 per child. The current $1,000 limit, with inflation, has actually shifted the burden of taxation onto parents.

- Laws signed by Reagan protect a wife from being disinherited from her husband's pension without her knowledge and consent. She said widows have found themselves helpless when their husbands signed away the wives' pension rights in order to get a higher pension during the man's lifetime.

The public relations counselor said she is bringing out a new book next month entitled "The Successful Candidate's Guide to Winning Women's Vote." Item: He shouldn't ask his wife, in the presence of female voters, "Have you finished ironing my shirts?"

That actually occurred during the 1982 Michigan campaign, she said, but smiled when asked the source.

School board gets high-tech lesson

Under way is the integration of computers into the entire curriculum. No longer are computers isolated as a single "subject" or within specialized math classes.

For library media specialists, circulation, overdue books, inventory and indexing all have been computerized.

• 386 computers — maintained by three in-house repair technicians — are used by Birmingham's approximately 3,000 students. (The number of computers in use in the Plymouth-Canton district is unknown as an inventory of recent purchases has yet to be made, according to Dave Rodwell, administrative assistant for research and data processing.)

Teachers "are teaching teachers" how to use high-tech equipment. "They're curious, and it's fun," says Burleigh, who offers workshops year-round to teachers.

Booth cable subscribers, numbering about 6,500, are offered 20 hours of weekly local school programming. "Parent producers" help televise spelling bees, guest lectures, graduations, football games, story hours and summarized board meetings. Planned is two-way cable communication enabling "our buildings to communicate with each other."

While Omnicom's Channel 11 has been dedicated for Plymouth-Canton school programming for several years, it's still an under-utilized resource. "We've been off and on — we've had technical problems from a variety of sources. Some have been of the machinery, and some from the computer itself," said Egli. "We had some local programming last year, but have none at this point."

Scrolling "video-text" does appear currently, he said. Birmingham last year spent $90,000 on hardware and $30,000 on software. An equal amount is budgeted for the coming school year.

Ainsley and Burleigh, who each were paid $100 plus expenses for their presentation, were pummeled with questions.

ASKED CHARLES Jones, library/media specialist at Hulsing School: "Do you have proof that kids learn more, or better, with computers?"

Burleigh answered no, but said she's convinced computers are "extremely effective in motivating kids."

"It's a pretty powerful tool. You have to be careful using it."

Jones' question is one Burleigh often re-evaluates.

"Teachers keep me honest by being as cautious and resistant as they are," she added.

Board member Elaine Kirchgatter wanted to know how the pair reacts to the accusation that like new math, computers are "a passing fancy."

"In education, we've gone through a lot of phases over the last 11 years," Ainsley said.

"The difference with computers is that they're interactive. Kids aren't sponges. This isn't a passive thing. Often, computers are more patient (teachers) than I was as a teacher."

"Computers are a problem-solving tool in society that I don't think are going to go away," said Burleigh. "If we can create a comfort level for kids — take the mystery out of it, we're doing them a great service."

Burleigh, who, through Birmingham Eccentric newspaper articles solicited the community's expertise, set up "implementation programs" for Birmingham's elementary, middle and high schools.

She advises districts such as Plymouth-Canton to "get on the bandwagon."

Pay parking sought

pressed concerns that the assessment plan was unfair.

"If it was black and white none of these people would be here," said parking commissioner and former mayor Jim Jabara.

"We are trying to solve a problem that has been persistent in Plymouth for a long time, I think the deck is a great asset to downtown," Jabara said.

"Much of the resentment being expressed," explained Pamela Woods, another downtown merchant, "is because of the lost revenue over the last couple of months (while the deck was being constructed)."

"We're looking forward to getting back to business as normal," Woods said.

Woods, like several other women at the public hearing, also commented on the stairs installed for the deck.

"Those stairs are, to me, just absolutely the icing on the cake. They are dangerous and they damaged my shoes," she said.

"A woman wearing any type of heels, if she lives to make it down the stairs once, I can guarantee she'll never try it again," Woods said.

Another concern the merchants expressed was the two-hour limit on many parking spots and lots around town. Business owner Bob Strauch challenged Mayor David Pugh to conduct an experiment on two-hour parking.

"As I understand it," said Roger Haslick, an attorney with a downtown office, "the deck was part of an overall plan to attract the (adjacent St. Joseph Hospital clinic)."

"The timing here might be a little bit off. I think we should have voted on this before the deck was built because it might have been a factor on whether or not we wanted the deck," Haslick said.

Path arrest made

Canton police have arrested and charged a suspect with assault and battery in the wake of two weekend assaults on women using the I-275 bike path.

The incidents bring to eight the number of bike path attacks on women this summer.

Jeffrey Clair Gruber, 23, of Flat Rock was arraigned Tuesday in 35th District Court before Judge James Garber. Assault and battery is a misdemeanor carrying a 90-day jail sentence.

Gruber pleaded guilty and was released on 10 percent of a $2,500 bond. His sentencing date is set for Aug. 24 in 35th District Court.

The first suspect to be arrested in the string of attacks, Gruber's arrest stemmed from the report of a 22-year-old Belleville woman who was riding her bike on the path north of Ford Road at 4:10 p.m. Saturday. She told police a man jumped out of the bushes and knocked her off her bike. The woman fled and was chased by the suspect.

A witness, who was driving north on I-275, appeared and scared the suspect, according to Canton acting-Lt. Alex Wilson. The witness gave chase to the man — who fled and escaped in a waiting car.

"Based on information obtained by the witness we were able to make an arrest," Wilson said. However, because the suspect didn't say anything and did not touch the victim, no criminal sexual conduct charges could be brought, police said.

Police have questioned Gruber in connection with other assaults on the bike path. However his description does not match that of a man accused of four other attacks. That man is described as having dark brown hair, 5-foot-9 to 5-foot-11 and weighing 155-190 lbs.

Rally for Kirkpatrick lacked spontaneity

1988 presidential contender.

"We're going to outdo the Gary Hart demonstration by 10 times," said Legg, recalling the show-stopping demonstration for the No. 2 Democratic contender in San Francisco.

THE "WE" Legg referred to is Citizens for America, a conservative group set up in 40 states by Lewis E. Lehrman, the 1982 GOP nominee against Gov. Cuomo in New York.

"It's an obvious outlet for his energies," Legg said. "He has a strong belief the second Reagan administration will be more social-issue oriented than the first."

"He wants to stay active in politics. I don't know if he (Lehrman) is stumping for 1988 or not."

Why honor Kirkpatrick, who is still a registered Democrat?

"Jeanne Kirkpatrick represents the true course in foreign affairs," Legg answered. "She can be a good spokesperson for Reagan's foreign policy."

"Both Jeanne and Katherine Ortega (the keynote) are examples of well-qualified and articulate leaders in the Reagan administration. Gender had nothing to do with their appointments. They are well qualified. They are on top of their jobs."

YEAGER JOINED the "We Want Jeanne" chant with enthusiasm. "She was so effective that everyone was thrilled and delighted. There were signs saying 'You Tell 'em Jeanne' and 'We Support Ambassador Kirkpatrick.'"

Yeager had missed Legg's original announcement and assumed the demonstration really was "spontaneous."

So did Alabama delegate Peggy Lambert, who said, "It was a spontaneous thing. It just spread very quickly in the delegation."

Susan Heintz, an alternate from Northville Township, enjoyed the show, adding, "Her message was that 'I know there'll be a lot of lifelong Democrats who feel the way I do.'"

House votes on aid hike to El Salvador

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes immediately before the current three-week recess.

HOUSE

EL SALVADOR AID — By a vote of 234 for and 161 against, the House granted the White House request for an extra $70 million in military aid to El Salvador during the last two months of this fiscal year. This reversed a previous House denial of the added money.

The vote occurred during debate on HR 6040, later sent to the president. Congress now has appropriated $196 million in fiscal 1984 military aid to the government of Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte.

Supporter Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said "this is a critical vote for the future of this hemisphere."

Opponent David Obey, D-Wisc., said U.S. military aid around the world has been hiked by more than 400 percent under the Reagan Administration.

Voting no: Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield.

Not voting: Carl Parsell, R-Plymouth.

FOOD STAMPS ELIGIBILITY — The House rejected, 120 for and 293 against, a proposal requiring recipients of food stamps to file monthly financial statements as a condition of eligibility. Those without earnings were to have been exempted.

The vote came during debate on a hunger relief bill (HR 5151) that later was sent to the Senate.

Sponsor Bill Emerson, R-Mo., said the requirement would curb fraud and abuse.

Opponent Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said the proposal ran counter to the Administration's campaign against government red tape.

Members voting yes wanted to require monthly financial statements of certain food stamp recipients.

Voting yes: Parsell.

roll call report

Voting no: Hertel, Levin, Broomfield. Not voting: Ford.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT CUT — By a vote of 212 for and 181 against, the House inflicted a three percent across-the-board cut in fiscal 1985 appropriations for the Interior Department. The bill (HR 5973) then was sent to the Senate with a pricetag of $8.03 billion.

Sponsor Joseph McDade, R-Pa., said President Reagan had threatened to veto the bill if the cut were not made.

Opponent Sidney Yates, D-Ill., asked: "Since when is acceptance by the White House to be the sole test for this House?"

Members voting yes heeded the president's call for a cut in the Interior Department spending bill.

SENATE

FAMILY FARMS — By a vote of 46 for and 34 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment requiring President Reagan to provide the public with a report on his plans for easing the family farm's credit, export and income problems.

Sought by Democrats, the report was to have been issued in advance of the November presidential election. The vote occurred during debate on the fiscal 1985 Agriculture Department appropriations bill (HR 5743) that later was sent to conference with the House.

Bob Dole, R-Kans., said the amendment deserved to be killed because "this is pure politics."

Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., who opposed the tabling motion, said the public wants to hear "what the Administration plans to do to ameliorate the severe plight of the farmer."

Senators voting no wanted to force Reagan to issue the special pre-election farm report.

Michigan Democrats Carl Levin and Donald Riegler voted no.

SOIL EROSION — The Senate adopted, 63 for and 34 against, an amendment adding teeth to "sodbusting" legislation aimed at preventing farmers from cultivating highly-erodible land. The amendment replaced softer sanctions in HR 5743 (above).

Fragile lands are being plowed under so rapidly that the government fears another Dust Bowl in parts of the West.

Under this amendment, if a farmer plants a crop on grassland or other soil classified as fragile by the government, he will be denied federal subsidies for that crop throughout his acreage.

While many farm lobbies regard this as excessive government interference, conservationists and some other farm groups say such a crackdown is needed to control sodbusting.

Senators voting yes supported the tough anti-sodbusting language.

Levin and Riegler voted yes.

TARGET PRICES — By a vote of 66 for and 25 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to raise the "target price" for wheat and feed grains such as corn to the level specified in the 1981 farm bill. The amendment was offered to HR 5743 (above).

Sponsors wanted to nullify the wheat and feed grain portions a new law that freezes or lowers the target price for many major commodities beginning in 1985. All taxpayers are affected by the congressionally set target price for a crop, because they supply the difference between it and the lower market price.

Thad Cochran, R-Miss., said the amendment would cost the Treasury $1.6 billion annually.

James Exon, D-Nebr., who sponsored the amendment, called the cost "small compared to bailouts and deals we have provided financial institutions, manufacturers and foreign nations."

Senators voting no sought higher government subsidies of wheat and feed grain growers.

Levin voted yes and Riegler voted no.

State Sen. Doug Cruce, Troy-R, wasn't a delegate to the GOP convention but he volunteered to help. Cruce was put in charge of transporting delegates about town on buses and vans.

Cruce is the man if ride is needed

By Tim Richard
staff writer

DALLAS — "Do you know the way to the Anatole?" asked the woman delegate who wanted to attend the rally at Vice President George Bush's headquarters hotel.

"Yes, I do. I'll give you a map," replied the Michigan delegation's transportation director — better known as state Sen. Doug Cruce of Troy.

The lean, tanned, 36-year-old lawmaker quickly has become an expert on the network of highways, roads and hotels in America's seventh largest metropolis, which this week is hosting the Republican National Convention.

"I thought it would be a breeze," said Cruce, wiping his brow in the 107-degree heat.

CRUCE'S JOB has been to get 77 delegates, 77 alternates, assorted guests and newsmen from the airport to hotels, from hotels to the convention parking lot and from the parking lot to the Dallas Convention Center.

His problems have included 11 lost delegates, a fellow senator who wound up on a nonexistent airline flight and a pair of delegates who just plain didn't show up.

Assisting him were five college students from Michigan and Texas.

"He just volunteered," said GOP State Chairman Spencer Abraham. "He wanted to do something."

"He personally met the majority of planes, and he personally drove a bus," said an admiring Jane Hershey, one of two Michigan GOP staff workers.

SEVERAL OTHER legislators are delegates, but Cruce didn't want to come to Dallas that way.

"As an elected person, I don't want to compete with party workers for delegate positions," Cruce said. He also admitted to being more interested in the 1988 convention, which will pick new party leaders and be more than a Reagan coronation.

Early in the year he volunteered his services to Abraham. Two main jobs were open — housing, which National Committeewoman Margaret (Ranny) Riecker spoke for, and transportation, which Cruce thought would be "a breeze."

"Originally," he said, "Everyone was supposed to be going on American Airlines (designated the official airlines of the convention). That would have meant everyone would be coming on just a few flights and could be transported by bus."

"Then Piedmont and Braniff ran specials, and a lot of people cancelled and switched."

"So American began running its own specials, and we had a lot of changes and cancellations back again the last two weeks."

"I lined up large buses with the Dallas Transit Service, but then we had to rent a couple of vans, too."

"Jason Allen (college student from Traverse City) and Joe Underwood (college student from Warren) called and wanted to do volunteer work," he said.

Cruce also heard of a college professor in Texas who had lined up student interns. Cruce landed a couple. "They knew the lay of the land," he said.

Should victim help set penalties?

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Law enforcement people like the idea. Defense attorneys don't.

The idea is to give "victims" of crime some input into all stages of criminal proceedings against defendants — including advice to the sentencing judge.

"There is no legal right for victims to have input in sentencing," said Ronald Covault, a division chief in the Oakland County prosecutor's office. "It has been treated largely as a matter of grace. Some judges do invite victims of crime into their chambers."

Of all the 88 recommendations from a presidential task force discussed last Thursday at Sheriff Johannes Spreen's professional conference on "The Needs of Victims and Witnesses," the proposal to give crime victims more input into the lengthy law enforcement process got the most-persistent amount of attention.

"A PERSON is not a 'victim' until a conviction has been sustained," argued defense attorney Elbert Hatchett of Pontiac. "We should more properly refer to the person as a 'complainant,' not as a victim."

"I have a real problem," said defense attorney Jo Anne Bigler of Royal Oak, with victims having a role in sentencing, co-prosecuting and plea bargaining.

"Victims will add things like retribution and anger" to the process, she went on. "A judge has all the information necessary to make a sentence. Why should one defendant receive a harsher sentence because his victim has a sadder story?"

To a hostile questioner who asked Hatchett how he could sleep at night when he has got a defendant freed on a legal "technicality," the defense lawyer shot back:

"There is no such thing as a technicality. It's the Constitution — and that's the most substantive thing there is. That's not a technicality."

PRESIDENT Ronald Reagan's task force report on "Victims of Crime in America" proposed an addition to the Sixth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution which would guarantee crime victims "the right to be present and to be heard at all critical stages of judicial proceedings."

(As it stands, the Sixth Amendment protects the rights of the accused to "a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury" in the state where the crime was committed, to confront witnesses against him and to have legal counsel.)

The task force also asked judges to "allow for, and give appropriate weight to, input at sentencing from victims of violent crime." It further suggested victims be allowed "to attend the trial, even if identified as witnesses, absent a compelling need to the contrary."

Conference keynoter H. Jerome Miron, director of the National Sheriffs Association Victim Witness Program, noted the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled a victim currently has "no judicially cognizable reason to participate in the prosecution of a case."

COVAULT, A 12-year veteran of the prosecutor's staff, felt victims should be allowed to attend trials.

He told of an unnamed judge who refused to let the young victim of a sex crime attend a trial "on the grounds the jury would be inflamed by the presence of a child."

Covault said some judges dislike to admit color photos of injuries as evidence. "The court tends to forget there is a real victim, a person in the grave who will speak and walk no more," the assistant prosecutor said, deploring the judicial tendency "to squeeze life out of a trial."

Covault revealed the prosecutor's and sheriff's offices will present a proposal to the County Board of Commissioners for a joint victim-witness task force "when the moment is propitious."

CIRCUIT JUDGE Alice Gilbert praised the presidential task force proposal for "victim impact statements," telling the sentencing judge the effect the crime had on his/her health, physical well-being, mental well-being, reputation and income.

Gilbert, a former Birmingham district judge, attacked the "unfettered discretion" American prosecutors have in deciding whether and how to prosecute a complaint. She suggested victims be allowed to apply to the state attorney general or the judiciary for a review of what appears to be lack of diligence by a prosecutor.

"Victims have no recourse if a prosecutor decides, for whatever reason, not to prosecute," she said.

In the effort to treat victims of crime more humanely, Gilbert said corporations and organizations should be recognized as victims, too. She cited a case where a physician had defrauded Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Michigan of $300,000. In a plea-bargained settlement with the U.S. attorney's office, the physician was punished by loss of his medical license, a $100,000 contribution to a charity and four months behind bars.

"There was not one word about restitution to Blue Cross/Blue Shield," she said, adding that the charitable contribution was tax-deductible.

SPREEN'S DAY-LONG conference, which he called the first of its kind in the nation, attracted about 120 law enforcement and legal professionals to the Silverdome in Pontiac.

Spreen, a Democrat who is leaving the office of sheriff to run for county executive Nov. 6, praised Republican Reagan's "concern for the plight of crime victims." He said the task force's recommendations showed that police, mental health professionals, lawyers, courts, hospitals, schools and even business have a role in helping crime victims.

Novi Chief Lee BeGole, president of the Inter Lakes Chiefs of Police, said prosecutors should spend time with crime victims and witnesses because "stress must be kept at a minimum. It's important they not be intimidated by the defendant."

Royal Oak Chief John Ball, president of the South Oakland Chiefs of Police, said police responsibilities to victims "transcend the legalistic. They are humanitarian. We have the ability to diagnose when something is wrong and needs attention."

"Many victims and witnesses want nothing more than to be listened to — to be made a part of the process. They want to know we care," Bell said.

2 leave school district

When school bells ring this September, Plymouth-Canton schools will be without two of its veterans.

Resigning are Greg Owens, principal at Central Middle School, and Dave Dursum, assistant director of community education.

Owens, who came to the district along with former Director of Secondary Schools Dr. John Telford, will rejoin Telford in the Rochester Community School District. Telford recently became assistant superintendent for the Rochester district.

Dursum has been named director of community education by the Willow Run school district.

Dr. Brian Kidston is another staffer who won't be on hand this fall. Kidston, however, will be returning after a one-year unpaid leave granted by the school board Monday night. A social studies teacher at Plymouth Canton High School, Kidston is pursuing a law degree.

Bar Association approves program

Approval of the Legal Assistant Program at Madonna College was recently granted at the American Bar Association's annual meeting.

A visitation committee spent three days at the Livonia college during February and March to meet faculty, visit classes and survey library resources.

The Madonna legal assistant curriculum offers an associate degree, a bachelor's degree or a post-degree certificate.

What do alternates do in Dallas? Mostly watch

DALLAS — For each of the 2,235 delegates to the Republican National Convention, there is an alternate — a backup person. But what do alternates actually do all day?

"Unless your delegate has other things to do, you're pretty much an observer," answered Yvonne Strother, 53, of Rochester, an 18th Congressional District alternate who is active in Oakland County women's groups.

"Alan May (her delegate) has been there the whole time," she said as she waited for a bus Tuesday in front of the Marriott Quorum.

No sooner had she spoken, however, than delegate May, a Bloomfield Hills attorney, walked up and said, "Thursday I'm not going to be there. I have to be in court Friday. Please take my seat the whole day."

May needn't have said "please." Thursday night was when Ronald Reagan and George Bush were to give their acceptance speeches. Strother was only too delighted to pinch-hit.

BEING AN alternate doesn't sound like much unless you are Page Yeager, 51, who has held a long string of Oakland GOP offices and was an active candidate for national committeewoman.

Yeager of Bloomfield Hills is the alternate to state party Chairman Spencer Abraham.

That makes her chairman of the alternates and, when Abraham leaves the floor, chairman of the entire delegation.

"Dick Chrysler (party fund-raiser from Brighton) worked out the organization. It's a pyramid chart," she said, showing a chart with a series of team leaders designed to assure every delegate seat is filled at all times.

"But since this convention isn't going to have any controversy, it isn't going to get much use," she said.

Lounging in the rear of the convention hall while his wife worked was Weldon Yeager, longtime state party secretary.

"WE WARM the bench and hope the bus ahead is in a wreck," joked L. Brooks Patterson, Oakland County prosecutor and at-large alternate.

Not until he arrived in Dallas did Patterson even know whose alternate he was. He's the backstop of Richard Headlee, Farmington Hills insurance executive and 1982 gubernatorial nominee.

Patterson, 45, ran a close third in the gubernatorial primary and ran for attorney general with Headlee in what turned out to be a Democratic year.

"It's drone activity. When the big vote is cast (for president), the delegate will be there," Patterson said.

There is no chance for a division of labor, with the delegate voting for Reagan and the alternate voting for Bush. The presidential-vice presidential team will be nominated in a single vote.

"Headlee is off playing tennis," said Patterson with a sly grin as he boarded a bus for a delegates party in a private Dallas home. "Maybe he'll get a racquet in the groin."

MIKE CASSA, a 24-year-old law clerk from Southfield, couldn't have been happier with being an alternate to a woman who was officially Michigan's top lawyer for several years, Mary S. Coleman, retired chief justice of the Michigan Supreme Court.

"I'm having a good time," Cassa bubbled. "I'm hearing great speakers. I'm meeting people from other states."

A conservative admirer of Patterson, too, Cassa noted Coleman is honorary chairman of the Reagan campaign in Michigan.

The Wayne State Law School student hopes some of her legal knowledge will rub off when he takes the State Bar exam next February.

SUSAN HEINTZ, 2nd District alternate behind Michael Legg of Livonia, skipped the Monday morning session to take a long walking tour of downtown Dallas, including the site where President John F. Kennedy was slain in 1964.

The Texas heat left her drenched in sweat and exhausted. There was, however, nothing on the Monday afternoon agenda and an opportunity to rest.

"Michael lets me go in and sit whenever I want. I sat with the delegation during the Ortega (keynote address Monday night by U.S. Treasurer Katherine Ortega) speech."

Heintz, attending her first national convention, found voting on even routine committee reports a thrill "because, for a party person, this is the pinnacle. The reward."

Heintz, Northville township clerk and the unopposed GOP nominee for supervisor, preaches fiscal restraint in local politics but was ecstatic at the prospect of engaging in "personal deficit financing" by running up a charge account at the famed Neiman-Marcus Department Store. The Michigan delegation has scheduled a "day of fashion" there.

To television watchers, the most famous Michigan delegate may have been Nanig Manoukian, the Middlesex-born Farmington Hills political workhorse.

WXYZ-TV selected Manoukian as its delegate to follow for the week. When she didn't attend, the Monday morning session, Dallas Haun stepped in.

Haun, 58, West Bloomfield Township, has labored quietly in the GOP vineyards for a half dozen years, currently serving as treasurer in the 18th Congressional District organization.

So did the TV station switch its coverage to Haun for the morning?

"They don't even know who I am," answered Haun, who seemed content to continue working quietly in the GOP vineyards.

Although Haun has voted Republican all his adult life, he finds political activity has made him refine and alter his views on public policy questions.

"My views aren't static, anymore," he said.

Commuter train funding may go to people-mover

By Kathy Parrish
staff writer

Federal money intended for three other transportation projects may end up being used to help pay the rising costs of the downtown People Mover.

Among other things, the project is faced with cost overruns and the discovery that a portion of the train's completed support beams are defective. Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority (SEMTA) hopes to use federal money for three other projects — new buses, the Woodward Avenue light rail from Detroit to Royal Oak, and new train cars for the now-defunct Pontiac to Detroit commuter train — for the People Mover.

"The People Mover is our top priority," said board chairman Dewitt Henry during Tuesday's meeting of the SEMTA board of governors.

"We want to prove to people here and the nation that we can build a major public transportation project."

THE 2.9 MILE elevated rail system with up to 13 stations at key downtown Detroit spots was started in April. The first beam was installed July 9 at the new Millender Center, an apartment-office complex being built around the construction.

All beams are expected to be in place by winter, with the system expected to open in March 1986.

To help cover an expected $26.2 million cost overrun on the $108.5 million

'We want to prove to people here and the nation that we can build a major public transportation project.'

— Dewitt Henry
SEMTA board

federally funded project, SEMTA board members voted Tuesday to reprogram $16,236,000 worth of capital resources.

The amount includes $3,594,351 in federal funds given to SEMTA for the commuter rail which ran from Pontiac to Detroit. The train was discontinued last fall during SEMTA cutbacks.

The transportation authority also hopes to get another $12,641,549 for the People Mover in federal money expected to be awarded for two other priorities — buses and the Woodward Avenue light rail from downtown Detroit to Royal Oak.

SEMTA will also ask for $10 million in new funds on the basis of the project's "extraordinary costs."

Henry expects the federal money to be "reprogrammed" without any problem. "The federal government has been lenient. It does this all the time," he told reporters.

SEMTA BOARD MEMBERS seemed relatively unconcerned about the discovery that a third of the guideway beams which will support the People Mover have flaws. Construction was interrupted for a week because 38 of the completed beams have problems — and 10 of those are "extensive problems."

At least three beams are to be completely recast because the steel "rebar" (re-enforcing steel) inside them shifted during casting. The steel is not evenly or adequately covered by concrete and could rust if moisture or salt gets inside.

Of 173 People Mover beams, 91 have been finished.

Henry blamed the problem on "short cuts" taken because the project was behind schedule. "Too much concrete was going in at once and the rebar shifted," he explained.

A team of experts was scheduled to study the structural problems and report back to the board. SEMTA's chief said none of the defective beams were put in place.

"The beams will be structurally sound or they will not be used," said SEMTA acting general manager Albert A. Martin.

This is a section of the elevated rail people mover system in downtown Detroit. Plans called for all beams to be in place by winter with the system operating in 1986.

State GOP loses out on 'bonus points' in Dallas

By Tim Richard
staff writer

DALLAS — Michigan Republicans will get no "bonus" at the 1988 national convention for their takeover of the state Senate in the 1984 taxpayers revolt.

"It's regrettable," said Alan May, Michigan's member of the current national convention committee on Rules and Order of Business.

"There was a lot of arm-twisting by the Reagan-Bush people not to take it (the bonus plan) to the convention floor," said May, a 42-year-old Bloomfield Hills lawyer and chairman of the 18th Congressional District GOP.

states up to five "bonus" delegates in 1988 if they elected Republicans to become governor, U.S. senator, state senator or state representative. (In Nebraska, with a one-house legislature, Republicans would have won two bonus seats for controlling the legislature.)

Not only would the plan stimulate Republicans to win legislative offices, but it would strengthen the hand of the north in nominating a moderate candidate for president in 1988.

"The southerners said, 'You're not giving yourself a bonus — you're taking away from us,'" May said after his committee meeting.

"I said, 'If anyone is losing it's Michigan because we fought so hard to get it' — meaning control of the upper house after suburban voters recalled two Democratic state senators.

In committee, May was outvoted, 44-42.

SPENCER ABRAHAM, state GOP chairman, was unhappy about the loss for still other reasons:

• "It's the legislatures which reapportion congressional districts. After 1990 the more legislatures you control, the more congressional districts you reapportion."

• For the first time since 1966, Michigan Republicans in 1984 have fielded a candidate in every one of the 110 state House of Representatives districts. "In recent years we have had as many as 15 to 21 unfilled legislative slots on the ballot. This condition has allowed Democrats to focus their resources on key races and, thus, easily to maintain their numerical advantage in the state House."

Abraham said the state party would target as many as 30 House districts for help but was unable to say yet which ones. In 1982, despite statewide losses for governor and U.S. senator, the GOP picked up six state House seats by targeting campaigns.

MEANWHILE, MAY kept up the fight. He began rounding up the required 25 signatures to submit a minority report on the bonus delegate proposal to present to the full convention.

"We got 31 names on petitions," May said. "But the next thing we knew, arms were being twisted."

Before long, the southern opposition had affidavits from some of May's petition signers saying they were withdrawing and didn't care to submit a minority report to the convention floor.

Had the fight gone to the floor, the issue would have been decided by a close vote — perhaps 1,200 to 1,100, May said.

THE IDEA, pushed by May with the blessing of state leaders, was to award

Pols scurry to dance around 1 big issue

There's still 11 weeks to go but my brain is already beginning to act like the inside of a pinball machine as I contemplate the nature of the race for the presidency.

Issues? Seemingly, there is one: taxes. Everyone is scurrying to get on the right side of the issue. Trouble is most politicians have differing ideas of where the right side is.

Ex-astronaut Jack Lousma, a Republican from Texas, thinks the right stuff for a candidate for the U.S. Senate from Michigan is to declare that never, never during his six-year term of office would he vote to raise taxes.

INCUMBENT Democratic senator Carl Levin's statements suggest that Lousma perhaps is a space cadet who took too many walks without his space helmet on.

Fritz Mondale raised the issue of taxes by claiming we have to pay the piper soon or the $2-billion national debt is going to sink the country. President Ron, Fritz said, is secretly planning a tax raise.

President Ron, who may have taken dancing lessons from fellow former actor George Murphy (the one-time U.S. Senator from California), has done so much tap dancing around the tax issue that he makes Gene Kelley look like an amateur.

He first suggested that he would never, never have anything to do with a tax raise. Vice President George Bush asserted that never is a long time. President Ron then hedged his bet saying a president should never say never.

NOW RON'S stand is that he would never raise taxes unless every other alternative including cutting every ounce of waste had been explored.

Lousma acknowledges at the Dallas convention that while he would never raise taxes it is OK for a president to raise taxes, if absolutely necessary.

While all this is taking place, Gerry Ferraro scurries from one press conference to another to prove that she and her husband indeed are on the right side of their tax issue. During a five-year period, they paid 40 percent of their income to the government as taxes. That should satisfy the average stiff, but the press insists there are still questions to be answered.

Few will read the questions or explanations. There will linger over the whole situation a sense that something is wrong with the way the Ferraro-Zaccaros paid their taxes.

THERE WILL come a day when the taxation issue will fade but the memory will linger on. Lousma will be remembered as taking the Boy Scout oath against taxation. The public will have trouble remembering where Levin is on the issue.

Voters will know in their hearts that President Ron would sooner give up his helicopter rides than raise taxes, no matter what the national deficit. They will suspect that Fritz is soft on spending to keep America strong.

In the end, the political rhetoric about taxes will not significantly influence the election. No matter how strongly the public might feel about taxes it votes for national candidates on the basis of images.

President Ron, the master pitcher, puts across the right Big Daddy image; Fritz doesn't. If Levin can carry the image of a decent, hardworking senator, voters will return him to office, no matter what his ideological leanings. Lousma could do it if he can convey the image of a hard-working decent ex-astronaut, but he has a lot of ground to cover in going from space to Texas to the Senate.

He's gone — we're safe

Schools: still a risky business

Next week rusty school doors will open. After a three-month summer vacation school will be back in session.

It's time to think again of our local schools.

As you may recall two critical reports have been issued about our public school system within the past year. The most widely publicized was the national study "A Nation at Risk." That was followed up by a study conducted by the state Department of Education.

Some of the evidence cited in "A Nation at Risk" was convincing.

- Scores on standardized tests given to high school students have dropped consistently over a 20-year period.

- An average school year in this country is 180 days, while in many countries it's many more, such as Japan's 250 days.

- Most school children in the world attend classes eight hours a day, while in the United States it is six hours a day.

- This country has more school districts than physics teachers.

BOTH REPORTS recommended that local school districts act quickly to resolve a crisis in our public schools. So what changes have these critical reports brought to your local school?

Probably not much. I suspect that many school officials hope that in time the public will forget "A Nation at Risk." It's more comfortable to ignore criticism and continue with the status quo.

Nick Sharkey

Earlier this summer a reporter did a survey of several Oakland County school districts to consider the impact of "A Nation at Risk."

Two school districts — Troy and Southfield — admitted they did little to respond to the report. Troy administrators quickly prepared a letter which was sent to local residents stating that Troy either meets the recommendations in the report or they don't apply.

According to Richard Watson of Oakland Schools (the county's intermediate school district), "My interpretation — the way I read the board's reaction — is that it thought Troy already had an adequate program and (the national report) called for very little action on their part."

Southfield's Supt. Carl Hassel said he read the report but admitted he didn't ask subordinates or a citizens committee to study it.

Hassel contended that increasing the number of credits required to graduate or the number of days students must attend school is meaningless.

"The problem is not the number of days; the issue is the quality and commitment in the classroom itself," Hassel said. "You cannot get quality apart from quality people working with students."

What Hassel says sounds fine, but what does it mean? How does one measure "the quality and commitment in the classroom itself" to see if it is improving from one year to the next? Of course, that's impossible.

Some school districts are making changes. But those changes were in process before "A Nation at Risk" was issued and are not really a response to it.

For example, Birmingham is thoroughly examining its two high schools. Westland has completed long-range plans for its school district.

ATTITUDE IS important when it comes to making changes in schools. One exception to the lukewarm response to "A Nation at Risk" is Bloomfield Hills.

Supt. Fred Thorin formed a commission to study the report and it came up with 170 recommendations. They include increasing high school graduation requirements for more computer and science classes and expanding the school year from 180 to 190 days in 1986.

Thorin will recommend many of these changes to the school board next month.

But for most districts it will be business as usual when school opens next week.

DID YOU KNOW that the purchase of an automobile was a comparatively painless transaction back in the early part of the century? Henry Ford, for example, produced a quarter of a million Model T Fords and sold them at a retail price of $490. He considered this too high a price, so by 1916 he produced a half million Fords and sold them for $360 apiece.

Mary's fall may mar memory of Olympics

The summer Olympic Games are a matter of history now and they will be remembered for many things in the years to come. But when they are mentioned, more than likely, it won't be for the usual politics of the event, or the fact that the attendance in the Los Angeles Coliseum set an all-time record.

Neither will they be remembered for the fact that Carl Lewis won four gold medals to join the late Jesse Owens as the outstanding man in the track and field events. Neither will they be remembered for the fact that the Americans won 174 medals to set an all-time record — or the howls that went up in the boxing division over the unusual decisions that were announced or the fact that the Detroit boxers came home with two of the gold medals.

Usually, these games are remembered for the politics that is played before, during and after the last medal has been awarded.

The games this year started off on a political binge when the Russians boycotted to get even with the United States for not sending its team to Moscow four years ago.

And it may be recalled that the political factions robbed Detroit of holding the 1968 games after Detroit had been designated as the bid city. And no excuse was given.

THE LASTING MEMORY will be of Mary Decker, one of the United States' best woman runners — and the idol of the spectators — laying on the infield grass after falling in the midst of the 1,400-meter run.

the stroller

picture of her in agony on the infield grass. And the world press was filled for days over the incident that came when Zola Budd, the English entry, became tangled with her and caused one of the biggest hassles of the games.

They'll talk about this incident for years. Mary Decker had been an odds-on favorite and was near the lead at the halfway point when the freak happening occurred.

In her statement to the press afterward, Budd told of her action. She confessed that her coach had told her to run arm against arm with the U.S. favorite, to keep her under pressure, then at about the halfway point to take the lead and keep it.

The one big mistake she made was that she decided to switch lanes too quickly. It is something that is seen on the highways of the world every hour of the day. There is nothing wrong with switching lanes — if you have enough room. More often than not the one crossing over barely misses a collision. That's what happened.

So far as The Stroller's eyes saw on television, she crossed too soon. Had it been in an automobile, the car she hit may have been a total wreck. It happens on the highways of the world amid a lot of cursing and then is forgotten.

But this one never will be forgotten. It was a human mistake, but it will always be the one view that comes to mind when the 1984 summer games are recalled.

Instead of being remembered as a gold medal winner, Mary Decker always will be known as America's Fallen Idol.

We can eliminate Vista stench

LET'S LOOK beyond the sensational headlines in the Vista case and the television footage of Charles Beckham and Darralyn Bowers. Let us explore instead how such a case of racketeering, extortion and mail fraud came to be and how we can prevent it from happening again.

The case is really messier than it appears.

It began in the mid-1970s when the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency filed suit against the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department for being "the single biggest polluter of the Detroit River."

U.S. District Judge John Feikens had a chance to make a major reform by appointing a receiver for the plant or looking to some new method of governance for the department, which serves about 100 communities in southeastern Michigan.

Feikens blew it. He made the wrong decision by 180 degrees. Instead of appointing outside management and moving toward a regional authority, the judge appointed Mayor Coleman Young as a kind of super-administrator for the plant, giving Young extraordinary powers and not requiring him to deal with the Detroit Council.

FEIKENS' DECISION amounted to "putting the fox in charge of the chicken coop," in the words of a colleague.

The enormity of Feikens' blunder was further obscured when the Michigan United Conservation Clubs gave the judge an environmentalist award for his handling of the case.

We turn now to Bowers and Beckham.

Bowers was a great friend of Mayor Young's. Fearing her Vista Disposal wouldn't get the contract to haul sludge from the Detroit sewage treatment plant, she paid off Beckham, then director of the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department. The federal prosecutors said Beckham did other things to help Bowers. To quote from the news reports:

"Beckham approved changing the contract from two to three years after the document had been signed by Young. It took 7½ months before the city water commissioners and finance department were notified."

WE NOW SEE why good local government charters require a governing board to approve major contracts. Council approval won't guarantee clean government, but it will increase the chances that someone may spot a flaw or raise a pointed question about a particular personality or blow the whistle in some way.

The situation shows how wrong Feikens was to grant Young extraordinary powers to run the sewage treatment plant.

It also shows how wrong Wayne County Executive William Lucas is in seeking a charter amendment to strip the County Commission of its powers to approve contracts. Voters should refuse to sign Lucas' petitions and should be wary of electing commissioners too friendly to the county executive.

TWO OTHER lessons are obvious:

- Oakland County Drain Commissioner George Kuhn should be supported in his suit to recover damages from Detroit in its handling of the sewage treatment plant affair. We as customers paid for the operation of that plant.

- The Michigan Legislature should turn a deaf ear to the idiotic charges of racism and pass state Sen. Rick Fessler's bills to set up a truly representative governing board for the water and sewerage system, one in which the people who pay the bills have the votes and the oversight authority. Fessler, R-Union Lake, has taken an ungodly amount of abuse from Detroiters for attempting to correct Feikens' blunder.

A water and sewerage utility serving 100 communities should not be operated by a single community. Some of us have been saying so for years. The stench from the Vista case should teach the lesson to everyone.

State GOP loses out on 'bonus points' in Dallas

By Tim Richard
staff writer

DALLAS — Michigan Republicans will get no "bonus" at the 1988 national convention for their takeover of the state Senate in the 1984 taxpayers revolt.

"It's regrettable," said Alan May, Michigan's member of the current national convention committee on Rules and Order of Business.

"There was a lot of arm-twisting by the Reagan-Bush people not to take it (the bonus plan) to the convention floor," said May, a 42-year-old Bloomfield Hills lawyer and chairman of the 18th Congressional District GOP.

THE IDEA, pushed by May with the blessing of state leaders, was to award states up to five "bonus" delegates in 1988 if they elected Republicans to become governor, U.S. senator, state senator or state representative. (In Nebraska, with a one-house legislature, Republicans would have won two bonus seats for controlling the legislature.)

Not only would the plan stimulate Republicans to win legislative offices, but it would strengthen the hand of the north in nominating a moderate candidate for president in 1988.

"The southerners said, 'You're not giving yourself a bonus — you're taking away from us,'" May said after his committee meeting.

"I said, 'If anyone is losing it's Michigan because we fought so hard to get it' — meaning control of the upper house after suburban voters recalled two Democratic state senators.

In committee, May was outvoted, 44-42.

SPENCER ABRAHAM, state GOP chairman, was unhappy about the loss for still other reasons:

- "It's the legislatures which reapportion congressional districts. After 1990 the more legislatures you control, the more congressional districts you apportion."

- For the first time since 1966, Michigan Republicans in 1984 have fielded a candidate in every one of the 110 state House of Representatives districts. "In recent years we have had as many as 15 to 21 unfilled legislative slots on the ballot. This condition has allowed Democrats to focus their resources on key races and, thus, easily to maintain their numerical advantage in the state House."

Abraham said the state party would target as many as 30 House districts for help but was unable to say yet which ones. In 1982, despite statewide losses for governor and U.S. senator, the GOP picked up six state House seats by targeting campaigns.

MEANWHILE, MAY kept up the fight. He began rounding up the required 25 signatures to submit a minority report on the bonus delegate proposal to present to the full convention.

"We got 31 names on petitions," May said. "But the next thing we knew, arms were being twisted."

Before long, the southern opposition had affidavits from some of May's petition signers saying they were withdrawing and didn't care to submit a minority report to the convention floor.

Had the fight gone to the floor, the issue would have been decided by a close vote — perhaps 1,200 to 1,100, May said.

"There were two ways to take the vote. One would be a voice vote. There would be no way (convention chairman Howard) Baker could tell who won, especially since southerners can yell louder.

"The other way would be a poll of the delegations. That would take an hour."

In the end, May and the northern group yielded to the arm-twisting and did not take the "bonus" question to the convention floor.

The Rules and Order of Business Committee rejected two other northern attempts to increase delegation sizes in 1988.

One was Indiana delegate James T. Neal's plan to award 1,074 delegates on the basis of the Republican vote in the three previous presidential elections.

The second was May's proposal to allot four delegates from each congressional district instead of the current three — a reform that would have prompted many districts to elect equal numbers of men and women delegates.

ALEX KARRAS and Susan Clark were too involved in video taping a "Webster" episode to come to our "Word of Honor" party. They did send a telegram addressed to "The people of Plymouth."

It read, "So glad Birmingham turned us down. It gave us an opportunity to become acquainted with the wonderful town of Plymouth. Will keep you in mind for future projects. Have a great party."

Paul Sincok, who introduced the actors appearing in the film, read the telegram to the audience at the cast reunion party in the Mayflower Meeting House.

RON ROTOLE, 12, of Leighwood Drive, Plymouth wrote a penciled note on a piece of paper, rolled it up and tied it to the string of a helium-filled balloon. He let it float free back on Jan. 14. That seemed the end of balloon and the story.

Recently, he received a letter from Sherri Ham, 16, who lives in New Durham, N.H. Sherri wrote that she had been out picking blueberries the morning of Aug. 4. "About 10:45 a.m. I came to a semi-good patch and was picking along when I came to some sticks, sticking up in the air. I was whipping them out of the way when a blue, shriveled thing with a string attached flew out."

She said she broke off the string and saw the note attached. After all those months it was legible. "I found your Burger King balloon. I'll bet you thought it was lost," she wrote.

Ron estimated the distance between Plymouth and New Durham — some 650 miles. Then he checked out the Guinness Book of World Records and decided his balloon had come close to that record.

FRED AND BUNNY Hallway of Crabtree Lane, Plymouth Township, and Dan and Mary Ross of Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth, received large color photographs in the mail Monday. They were taken in June at graduation ceremonies at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. Both couples were at the academy for a son's graduation.

At the time, they were too far away to get a good look when President Reagan shook hands with Lt. Frederick Hallway and Lt. Mark Ross. Their new pictures give them a close-up view of the occasion.

Mark, a graduate of Plymouth Salem High School, reports today at Laughlin A.F.B. in Del Rio, Texas, where he will begin pilot jet training. Mary said the base is right on the Mexican border.

Fred, a Catholic Central High School graduate, is stationed at Eglin A.F.B. at Fort Walden Beach, Fla.

Fred Hallway said there were 970 June graduates from the academy and the President shook hands with every one of them. "And with every parent, grandparent and relative there, you couldn't see much, even with field glasses. We were very happy to get the picture."

CHARLENE Bolling was pleased with her Persian tortoise shell kitten's showing at the cat show last weekend at the Hyatt Regency Dearborn.

It was judged third best in a specialty ring of 50 kittens. That's an excellent rating for the 5 1/2-month-old Persian.

GERI AND BOB Vollmer of Plymouth are co-chairing a major dinner dance scheduled for Oct. 20 at Fairlane Manor in Dearborn. Both are members of Ticker Club Inc., sponsor of the fundraiser to benefit cardiology services at Children's Hospital in Detroit.

For more information or a reservation you may call them at 459-0134. Ticket donation is tax deductible. You'll be hearing more about this later.

Flaxen hair is braided and circled by a handmade wreath of dainty dried flowers in the Williamsburg fashion. The face is unbleached muslin, painted first with a base coat before the features are added.

Dollmaker Sarah Beckler is always on the lookout for old children's shoes for her folk dolls.

Staff photos by Bill Bresler

Atlanta-bound Dollmaker creates a clan—the Willow Creek Cousins

Dollmaker Sarah Beckler is taking her Willow Creek Cousins to a Country Peddler show in Marietta, Ga. early in September.

The gathering of country folk artists near Atlanta will be Beckler's first national show and sale — and she is unsure of how she will feel about parting with the "cousins."

Her decision to stay home and make dolls, after three years as a bank teller, was a change of career, a business venture. But as each doll was created with loving attention to detail, it assumed its own personal identity.

Beckler's Willow Creek Cousins are country folk dolls, like those made by women for their children in the 19th century. They are made of cloth and their faces are painted and "aged" to give them character. Their hair is combed flax fiber imported from England. The flaxen locks do not tolerate additional combing, but they can be braided and arranged in traditional hair styles.

The legs are filled with sawdust to give the dolls stability. Beckler said many of the old dolls' bodies were filled with sawdust, but after experimenting, she found a fiber fill was easier to work with. It also allows more detail as it can be quilted to define the fingers. She obtains her sawdust from a friend who is a cabinetmaker.

EACH DOLL'S body is signed, numbered and dated by the maker. It also has Beckler's trademark, the perfect heart, embroidered in a satin stitch. These identifications add to their value as collectors' items.

The dollmaker attends antique shows, flea markets and estate sales to find materials and children's clothing for the dolls.

"Old shoes are the hardest to come by," she said. The cousins' footwear dates from the 1800s to the late 1920s and they wear vintage cotton hosiery.

Linda Neuroth of Plymouth makes the wreaths of flowers that some of the dolls wear in their hair. Beckler's mother in North Carolina does the hand smocking on the dresses and 80 percent of the sewing on the clothing is done by hand. Doll quilts are patched and quilted from old materials.

Dolls range in price from $20, for a replica of a primitive Appalachian rag doll, to $160 for the larger, more elaborately dressed models. Some of the cousins may be seen locally at the Salt Box on Forest Street, Plymouth, and Two's Co. on Main Street, Northville.

Hand smocking on the pinafore is done by the dollmaker's mother and the fabrics for dolls' clothing are country originals. The quilt is made of old materials.

Christening gown with tucked bodice and hand-crocheted lace is an original from the turn of the century. It has a matching slip.

Cousins vary from the Victorian lady in the hairloom circle (left), the doll of the sea in the drop-waist model, to the Appalachian rag dolls on the right.

Whites remember years of neighborly kindness

This is it. Norris and Marge White have recently taken the plunge into what they term "new found freedom." The Whites owned and operated Whites Sales and Service on Sheldon for 35 years and many of us, myself included, have counted on them for good, reliable service on our many types of lawn equipment.

Yes, indeed, they sold the business and are enjoying the fruits of their many years of hard work. Better yet, they did not move to Florida or up north to enjoy the good times. They are still right here in Canton and are having a ball.

One very important thing on their list of things to do when they had the time was to entertain some of their wonderful neighbors who have through the years been so kind to the Whites. So, they created a shish kebab cook-out to say thank you to the special people. Guests included Gene and Sophie Daley, Lamar and Marianne Authier, Dorothy DeVenny, Jean Cole and the White's daughter, Lana Olson.

As many of you know, it takes long hours and hard work to build and maintain a business. Through the many years that the Whites were working so hard at building, maintaining and trying to keep up during Canton's incredible growth period, there were many of the nice things that the Whites just didn't have time to enjoy. Sensing this, and being the type of people, or neighbors, they are, these friends would do some of those special things.

TO HELP EXPRESS these, the Whites ordered a special cake from the Cake Depot in Canton. The staff did an excellent job of de-pickling some of these things right on the cake.

Canton chatter

Sandy Preblich

For instance, the homemade bread which Marge never had the time to bake. Dorothy DeVenny would bring over homemade bread for the Whites, just because she is the type of special neighbor she is. To say thank you, a small loaf of bread was pictured on the cake.

Or how about fresh vegetables? Well, right there on the cake was a reminder of the fresh vegetables that the Daleys would so generously share with the Whites.

It was this type of neighborly conduct that the Whites appreciated for so long. Now, with the time off, and even though they never can repay them in kind, they can say thank you. The entire evening was very special as the Whites shared movies not only of their trip to Hawaii, but of the guests themselves. All through the evening, pictures were taken of the gathering and each guest will receive copies of those pictures. A nice idea for a nice evening, for some nice friends, from some nice people.

As for Whites Sales and Service, don't worry Canton. They sold their business to a couple of reliable, qualified young men. I speak from experience since our lawn mower decided not to run this season. My husband took it to Whites and three days later he was back in business. He received quick, courteous and friendly service. As a matter of fact, I am embarrassed to say we didn't realize at the time that the Whites had sold the business.

AS FOR THE WHITES, Marge now has time to devote to a hobby she loves, doll collecting. She even enjoys sewing the special clothes for the dolls. This is something I wish I had the patience and talent for. Marge, I wish you all the luck and fun in the world. Which means as much enjoyment and fulfillment as you found in Canton's White Sales and Service.

Norris is having no trouble keeping busy with his long-lost dream of spending endless hours working with his wood lathe. Who knows, with all the ambition and dedication these two have shown in the past 35 years, they could be back with a new leisurely business. Without the demanding "I need my lawnmower yesterday" pace, they could be selling their beautiful handmade gifts of exquisitely dressed dolls, perhaps even sitting in their own one-of-a-kind cribs.

Whatever they do, for now they'll take some time getting to know their neighbors again, take an occasional trip here and there in their trailer, and ENJOY!

YOU'VE SEEN it talked about on "Donahue," read about it in your paper, even picked up a book or two on the subject, the changing status of nursing. If you've ever been a patient in a hospital you know something about the subject.

You know the topic of what nurses "can-do, should-do, or will-do, which nurse does which, and who is responsible for what." These, along with many more, are questions nurses have been asking for a long time.

Thankfully, they finally have enough momentum going to try and clarify these questions and formulate some answers.

One such effort recently was undertaken by Samaritan Health Center in Detroit. As a guest at a recent installation ceremony, I can say with confidence that there still are good, caring, concerned, progressive nurses out there and, by golly, they are going to make a difference.

On this particular occasion, they installed a committee of 13 nurses who were nominated, reviewed by a selection committee, and confirmed to serve on the first Nurse Practice Committee at Samaritan Health Center. These nurses will serve as "promoters, interpreters, resource persons, and reviewers of current nursing practice." These were the words of Anne Marie Rudzewicz, nursing systems coordinator, in her opening remarks as a super gal and good friend of mine from Canton, Judy Karpinski, was installed as one of the chosen 13. After a beautiful luncheon with too many petit fours, Judy, her daughter Kristen, my daughter Tammi and I, made a quick stop at Pegasus for some oopa, a tasty flaming cheese appetizer. The flame from the brandy nearly sent Tammi into a cata-tonic state. She was sitting right next to it and was not expecting the "OOP" of the "OOPA."

However, once reassured that we did not intend to eliminate her with flame, we had a wonderful time. Congratulations Judy as you strive for what was called "new heights of excellence in quality nursing care." This is one committee that can be assured that every-one wishing success, as it concerns all of us.

ANOTHER CELEBRATION here in Canton as someone takes a chance on us with the opening of a brand new store.

I have some inside information on the "Leading Lady," conveniently located next to Winkelmans and filled with new fashions for fall. My inside-source, Ronnie Roman, tells me that the store will open today, Thursday!

NEXT WEEK: News on Newcomers! And by the way, did you or anyone you know go to the Michael Jackson Concert? Please give me a call.

Baritone featured at state convention

Baritone Russell Beck of Canton Township will be a featured soloist at the Michigan regional convention of Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship International (FGBFI) Aug. 22-25 at the Hyatt Regency, Dearborn.

Beck has been an active member of the Fellowship group in the Plymouth, Northville, Farmington area for the past seven years, singing at meetings and monthly dinners. He sings at weddings, memorial and church services, and country clubs. In 1970, he was baritone soloist in "The Messiah" with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra.

He started his career when he was 4, with the reputation of "the little boy with the big voice." His wife, Barbara Ann, said his voice never changed.

BECK RECORDED his first tape recently. "He Touches Me" has 10 of his favorite gospel songs. It includes "Majesty," "The Day He Wore My Crown," "Rise Again," "Cornerstones" and others. He credits Mark Ziembra, former cassette manager for Motown, for good sound of his tape. Ziembra is recording engineer at AgapeAudio Recording of Redford Township.

The tape will be on sale at the convention.

Good things seem to come in threes for Beck. Along with the convention performance and his first tape, the tool and die maker has returned to work at the Ford Rouge plant after a very long lay-off.

Deckards mark 50th anniversary

Ted and Eula Deckard of Perth, Livonia, were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary recently with a party at the home of their daughter Marie Jackson on Tomahawk Lake in Highland.

Eighty relatives and friends attended the dinner, to which the Deckards were chauffeured in a 1934 Ford.

The party was hosted by their children and in-laws: James and Marie Jackson; David and Gail Deckard of San Jose, Calif.; Lynn and Lynne Deckard of Snellville, Ga.; and Sam and Diane Deckard of Livonia.

The couple have nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Ted Deckard retired from Ford Transmission Engineering in 1978.

Madonna College to provide Saturday sampler courses

Saturday sampler classes for high school seniors or working adults contemplating college have been arranged by Madonna College for the fall term. Saturday classes for regular degree-bound students are also available. The classes include two which can be viewed on television.

Introduction to the Humanities includes a review of Maslow's hierarchy of human needs and Gutowski's concepts of folk, classical and mass culture. It will be shown on WTVS-Channel 56 as well as many cable channels. Four Saturday class meetings with Assistant Professor Ralph Glenn will provide for group discussion of the programs and evaluation.

The history of the Jewish people from the beginning to the present in 10 color television programs may be viewed on the same stations for general education required credit. The programs, which will be narrated by Abba Eben, will be discussed at four Saturday class meetings with adjunct professor Paul LaRose. LaRose has a degree in Hebrew Studies from New York University. Eben is an Israeli politician, former deputy prime minister and ambassador to the U.N.

A COURSE STUDY guide has been prepared by William Hallo and David Ruderman of Yale University and Michael Stanislawski of Columbia University.

Registration for the fall term, which begins Sept. 4, must be completed by Monday, Aug. 20. Registration hours are extended that day to 7 p.m. For information regarding registration, call the admissions office at Madonna College, 591-5053. Classes meet during day, evening and weekend hours.

Church founded 150 years ago

Cherry Hill United Methodist Church in Canton will celebrate its sesquicentennial Saturday and Sunday.

The celebration will include exhibits of quilts and antiques Saturday afternoon, followed by a box social at 6 p.m. and a square dance at 7:30 p.m.

In the fall, the church will put on an evening of historical skits under the title of "Our Legacy."

The church was started by the Methodist Conference in 1834. Circuit rider Marcus Swift became the pastor, and services were held in the cabins of local settlers. But Swift served the conference for only a few years because his strong anti-slavery views did not sit well with conference leaders.

In 1838, a frame church building was erected, and the present brick building was constructed in 1882.

Cherry Hill Church presently has two Sunday services. Its building committee is working on plans to enlarge the friendship hall for more Sunday school classrooms.

This year the University Women of Plymouth honored the church with a bronze plaque naming it the oldest church in Canton. The church was designated a state historical building in 1976.

Cherry Hill United Methodist Church in Canton will celebrate its sesquicentennial this weekend. The present church building (left) was built in 1882 and contains such antique items as these brass candle snuffers-lighters (right).

To be cared about, we must care

The newspaper article said the instructions for her funeral had been prepared 14 years before her death and delivered to a friend in a sealed envelope. When she died the seven instructions were carried out to the letter. It was the last one that seemed most unusual. "Do not notify relatives or friends except . . . Do not put my name in the paper. No great publicity or praise - too late!"

It was a front-page article in the business section. Corporate leadership has turned toward a "no-frills" style of management. High salaries and large bonuses are no longer enough. All kinds of arrangements are being developed by corporate management to protect their own financial well-being in cases of take-overs, firings etc. "Golden parachutes" and "greenmail" are two new words to add to our lexicon of human behavior under pressure.

Behind all the eccentricities of the first one, and all the avariciousness of those included in the second, there is an element of humanity that urgently needs our attention and care. One woman's perceived separation from community and a category of corporate leaders seeing a loss of corporate and public care and regard for their well-being are two sides of the same issue. . . . "That no one cares about me."

THIS CONNECTION for that kind of action must come from those who think that way, as well as from those who relate to them. In 14 years, a person could meet a lot of people and indicate some kind of concern for them. People who care for others do not feel left out in the stress of life. And corporate managers rejecting huge bonuses and gratuities are more convincing in their espoused regard for the human experience and condition.

But if those who feel separated from "community" do not succeed in reaching out to others, then our bond hasn't been stretched out either so that they could reach us. Other ladies who want to be loved without justification to relatives and friends and coworkers corporate managers are also indications against our practice of community.

It's a long way to being sorry if not enough reaching out in care and concern. In another person's mind, it may not be enough either, but if we start, perhaps they will follow.

Ypsi Heritage Festival is one of the best

Ypsilanti Heritage Festival will be held in Riverside Park, Ypsilanti, this weekend, August 24 through 26. I attended it last year and can recommend it as one of the better festivals in the state.

As you drive into town you will see a sign telling you that the town was founded in 1823 and named after a Greek city called Ypsilanti. I had always wondered about that. The telephone poles all over town are covered with yard-sale signs, but the balloons are what you see when you approach Depot Town.

When the festival is on, balloons, umbrellas and craft stalls make a busy moving pattern against the street, with the old restored buildings as backdrop.

On a hot August day it is a sunny walk through the gleaming shelves of pottery on the street, past the Civil War encampment downhill in Riverside Park and to the circus site where the elephants are always popular guests.

You'll find entertainers on the stage beside the river, the smells of barbecued chicken wafting past your nose and all the fun and games of any summer festival going on around you.

During the festival you don't really see the caboose and museum that are usually the main attractions in Depot Town, but you will find them there just behind the street activities that attract your attention now.

The Ypsilanti Black Arts Festival is also on the weekend calendar Aug. 24-26, in Partridge Park.

SEVERAL OTHER FESTIVALS are also going on this weekend, including, of course, the biggest bash of them all, the Michigan State Fair. The State Fair opens at the State Fairgrounds in Detroit today, Thursday, Aug. 23, and continues through Sept. 3.

The African World Festival will be in full swing at Hart Plaza Aug. 24 through 26. Michigan Renaissance Festival will be held in the Colomiere Center, Clarkston, Aug. 25 and 26.

You will also find an Outdoor Dance Party at Dodge Park in Sterling Heights Aug. 23; Lion's Chicken Bar-B-

Q at Lion's Clubhouse in Marine City Aug. 24; a Country-Western Jamboree at Freedom Hall, Sterling Heights, Aug. 26; and an Auto News World Expo at Cobo Hall in Detroit Aug. 26 to 30.

For further information on any of these events, contact the Southeast Michigan Travel and Tourist Association (SMTTA) at 585-8220 or call for a recorded message at 585-7233.

SMTTA is a non-profit organization that promotes travel in an 11-county area of southeast Michigan. It has started sending me a regular weekly list of events, which should make it much easier to keep you up to date on local travel opportunities.

WEST MICHIGAN also has a lot of festivity in the air this weekend, especially at the Hasting's Summer Festival Aug. 24-25. The kids will love Fibfest, which features goats, rabbits, sheep and all the arts they provoke: shearing, spinning, weaving, knitting, hooking and fiber art.

RAIL TRAVEL IS BACK in western Michigan, in case you haven't heard. The Amtrak train Pere Marquette resumed service between Grand Rapids and Chicago this month. It leaves Grand Rapids daily at 7:30 a.m., arrives in Chicago at 10:30 a.m. The train leaves Chicago at 5:40 p.m. daily and arrives in Grand Rapids at 10:40 p.m.

One way fares from various stops, including Holland, Bangor, St. Joseph and New Buffalo, range from $14 to $31. Snacks and cocktails are available. Call toll-free 1-800-USA-RAIL for this and other Amtrak information.

Aug. 25 and 26 are the dates of the sixth annual Art at the Center in Fenton, St. John's Parish Festival in Fenton, Banjo Days at Crossroads Village near Flint.

Aug. 25: Mexican Fiesta at Wenonah Park, Bay City; the Bobby Crim Race for the Special Olympics at Mott Community College in Flint; Summerfest downtown in Okemos; a corn roast in Briley Township Park in Atlanta.

so summer events will all come to a grand finale. Eastern Michigan State Fair is on Aug. 27 through Sept. 3 in Imlay City.

Aug. 31 to Sept. 3 is the ninth annual West Michigan Arab Association Horse Show at the Ingham County Fairgrounds in Mason; it is also time for Riverfest 84 in Lansing and the Michigan Bean Festival in Fairgrove.

Mackinac Island will be all dressed up for Labor Day weekend activities Aug. 31 to Sept. 4. And don't forget the farmers market every weekend in many Michigan cities, including Bay City and Saginaw.

The Chippewa County Fair is on in Kinross Aug. 29-Sept. 3, the Black Gown Tree Pageant in St. Ignace Aug. 31 to Sept. 2 and the Black River Fishing Derby in Ironwood Aug. 31 to Sept. 3.

As for next weekend, five events begin Sept. 1: Arts Dockside '84 goes through Sept. 2 in St. Ignace, and the other four run through Sept. 3: the U.P. Steam and Gas Engine Show at the U.P. State Fairgrounds in Escanaba; the Labor Day Festival in Ontonagon; the Fishing Derby in Black River Harbour, Ironwood, and the Felch Invitational Hardball Tournaments in Range Field, Felch.

That will take you to the Mackinac Bridge Walk Sept. 3 and get you ready for the Frostbite Regatta in Menominee Sept. 8 and 9. I'm not sure I'm ready for that. Contact UPTRA at Box 400, Iron Mountain, 49801 or telephone (906) 774-5480.

Mackinac Island fort boasts host of new artificats

Visitors to reconstructed Fort Michillimackinac have the opportunity to view a collection of Native American artifacts collected over a period of 30 years, beginning in the 1930's, by Loren Herrington of Pontiac, Michigan. Only a few of the 68 items have ever been exhibited to the public.

The display contains many artifacts reflecting the most sacred religious beliefs of the Woodland Indians. The Mackinac Island State Park Commission displays these artifacts to encourage appreciation of Indian culture and with a deep respect for Indian traditions.

Designed by Christopher Hogg, the exhibit will continue throughout the summers of 1984 and 1985. It is located in the special exhibits area of the Fort Michillimackinac Visitor Center, at the southern end of the Mackinac Bridge.

THE MAJORITY of the artifacts date from the 18th century, the period when Ft. Michillimackinac was the most active. They record Great Lakes Indian culture as it existed at the time of the first European contact, in the late 17th century.

Herrington's collection is unique in that the items were given to him by Indian friends, who also gave him the oral history and religious meaning of them, along with the histories of the persons who made and used them. Few collections are so well documented.

An example of one such object and its accompanying oral tradition is a small carved message board given to Herrington by a Winnebago Indian. It once belonged to Tecumseh, the noted Shawnee war chief.

Starting in about 1804, Tecumseh traveled with Tenskwatawa (The Prophet) among the tribes of the Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes in an attempt to unify the tribes and to drive out the Americans.

They distributed these message boards and bundles of sticks. One stick was to be burned each month and when all the sticks were burnt, it was time for the attack. Over the years, the bundles distributed became smaller, to make sure that each tribe would burn the last stick at the same time.

THIS IS the board's message: "All tribes on both sides of the Mississippi think in only one way. Come swift as lightning with all weapons, from the four corners. Plant no corn, hunt no animals, store no grain. Take the various trails to the main trail to the same side of the Mississippi, at the time of the Great Sign (trembling earth). Go to the home of the White Man and drive him out."

It may be only coincidence that the first terrible quake of the New Madrid earthquakes which convulsed Tennessee and surrounding states for three months happened on Dec. 16, 1811.

Tecumseh's plan was thwarted when The Prophet prematurely attacked the American forces under William Henry Harrison at Tippecanoe on Nov., 7, 1811.

Tecumseh was killed at the Battle of the Thames, in 1813.

THE THIRD annual Northport Wine Festival will be held from noon 'til 7 p.m. Sept. 1 at the waterfront park of Northport, Michigan. Featuring locally-produced wine, food and song, the Northport Area Chamber of Commerce sponsors the festival each year as an end-of-summer celebration in this quiet, visitor and agriculturally-oriented Leelanau County town.

Participating wineries and restaurants offer their wares from individual booths located under a large, open-sided tent. A second tent shades the musicians, local groups playing light jazz and traditional folk. Picnic tables and chairs are scattered about the area. The weather at the first two festivals was pleasant, 80 degrees and lots of sunshine.

Two dollars gains one entrance to the festival area and a pair of wine-sampling tickets. Children under 12 are free. Additional tasting-tickets may be purchased for 50 cents apiece.

PARTICIPATING each year have been three Leelanau County wineries: Good Harbor Vineyards of Lake Leelanau; L. Mawby Vineyards of Suttons Bay; and Leelanau Wine Cellars, Ltd., Omena. The chance to talk with the three winemakers and to sample the products of these three similar but distinctive wineries all "under one roof" is unusual.

Attending restaurants are The Beech Tree and The Harbor Shop of Northport; Traverse City's Park Place Hotel; the Leland Lodge; the Epicure of Suttons Bay; and the Leelanau Country Inn, Maple City.

Cheaters can't ever finish 1st

THE CLOUDS CLEARED, the sun breaking through the overcast yesterday afternoon after rain had threatened the Observer & Eccentric Women's Golf Tournament all morning. It never materialized, but a storm broke moments after the last threesome completed play in the championship flight.

Ann Lauer, last year's winner, missed a putt for par at the 18th hole by an inch. That gave her a 79, putting her in a tie with Geryl Repasky for first.

Not so, claimed a pair of golfers — Julie Sproul and Kathryn Heriford — who played with Repasky. Sproul and Repasky's coach, Lynn Waldecker, both said they saw Lauer kick the ball from behind a tree at the eighth hole and not take a penalty for it. Heriford then said she spotted Lauer picking up the ball and moving it back.

"I turned to Lynn and said, 'Did you see that?'" Sproul said. "I asked Tom (Welsh, assistant golf pro at Whispering Willows) what he would do in my place, and he said he'd report it. I'm just trying to protect the field."

Lauer denied kicking the ball or touching it. She said she even hit the ball left-handed because the tree was in the way.

WHAT IT BOILED down to was a "their word against mine" argument — three people claiming Lauer cheated, and Lauer saying she didn't. Welsh couldn't disqualify Lauer unless the protest was lodged by someone in Lauer's threesome. It wasn't, so the playoff ensued.

Repasky, three times a runner-up in the tournament, won on the first extra hole. For Lauer, the tournament ended earlier. She was devastated by the controversy, sobbing to her mother, "They expect me to play after this?" as she awaited a decision on whether there would be a playoff or a disqualification.

Lauer's first putt on the playoff hole assured Repasky's victory — the ball slid a dozen feet past the cup. Repasky two-putted, and the title was hers.

THERE WASN'T much in terms of prizes at stake to coax someone to cheat — $25 and a plaque. So why would anyone?

Competition is the culprit here. Winning. People do ugly things to finish on top. Did Lauer kick the ball? Or were the three people (all friends of Repasky's) who said they saw her touch the ball — from a distance of better than 25 yards — mistaken?

It's an answer that may never be known. There are so many other factors to consider. For instance, those who played with Lauer in last year's tournament had nary a kind word to say about her. They were among her accusers this year. Did that have an impact on what happened?

Make no mistake. There is no friendship kindling between Lauer and Repasky. After the championship had been decided, Lauer said Repasky had made a disparaging remark to her on the tee about cheating.

RULES ARE TOOLS, guidelines for everyone to follow if the game is to be played fairly. If Lauer did indeed kick the ball, then put it back "after she was discovered" as her accusers claim, did she take undue advantage?

Was this a controversy that should have happened?

In my opinion, no. Lauer may have kicked the ball, perhaps accidentally or out of anger. If she then put it back, where's the advantage? (Waldecker contended Lauer "didn't hit the ball left-handed" from behind the tree, as Lauer claimed.)

I believe other, more essential things were at stake than an argument over did she or didn't she, with the accompanying finger-pointing. The two best golfers were tied. Let them decide it, on the course, not in the rule book.

THAT'S WHAT happened, ultimately. Welsh did an outstanding job, calling John Molenda, tournament chairman for the Michigan PGA, and Larry Startzel, golf pro at Country Club of Lansing, and a rules expert. They agreed that Welsh could not DQ Lauer unless someone from her own threesome lodged a protest.

It's always sad when such a dispute arises in a sporting event. When it does, everyone suffers. The conflict here claimed both Lauer, who will have to live with that stigma, whether it is just or unjust, and Repasky, who won anyway. Indeed, Repasky finished just a shot off the tournament record, set in 1975 by her coach, Waldecker.

Lauer didn't know that, which was to Repasky's advantage — fair or otherwise.

Ask if Lauer took unfair advantage (if she did move the ball). If not — and I don't think she did — then play on.

Don't let a win-at-any-cost attitude pervert your perspective of the sport.

One final, ironic note: The tree Lauer was behind at No. 8 was a hazard. She was allowed a one club-length drop.

Long wait ends, Repasky rules

O&E golf champ Geryl Repasky lines up a putt.

The drought for Geryl Repasky is "finally" over.

The third time supposedly carries the charm, but for Repasky it took four tries before she stepped from the runners-up circle to the title in Wednesday's Observer & Eccentric Women's Golf Tournament at Whispering Willows Golf Course in Livonia.

Victory didn't come easy for the Livonia native who will start her sophomore year at Bowling Green State next week. She edged Ann Lauer of Birmingham, last year's champion, on the first playoff hole after each finished the 18-hole tournament with 79.

CONTROVERSY MARRED the championship flight, centering around Lauer (see accompanying column on this page) and her score on the eighth hole. Two players in the foursome in front of her — Julie Sproul and Kathryn Heriford — claimed Lauer first kicked her ball from behind a tree, then moved it back when she thought she had been spotted.

After a 45-minute delay to consult several golf experts, Whispering Willows assistant golf pro Tom Welsh said to go ahead with the playoff while awaiting a final ruling.

Repasky nailed down the triumph with her putter. Her drive on the playoff hole — No. 10 — went high and left, and her next shot was still more than 100 yards from the green. An eight iron rolled to the back fringe, 35 feet from the cup.

LAUER FARED better on the fairway. Two strong shots put her within 30 yards of the green. But her chip sailed to the back fringe, stopping inches away and nearly parallel to Repasky's.

Lauer putted first — and poorly. The ball rolled 12 feet past the cup on the down-sloping green. Repasky stepped up to her ball and tapped it to within six inches of the cup. She putted it in, then watched as Lauer missed her attempt to tie.

"I hit two bad shots, off the tee and in the fairway," said Repasky. But when Lauer's first putt carried well past the cup, Repasky knew all she had to do was "just lag it up close."

"Finally," she said after her first triumph in four tries. She had finished second in three previous attempts, including last year, when Lauer beat her by a single stroke.

"I DID WANT to win it, but I didn't want to get too hyped up about it," the new champion said. "My goal was to shoot 77, but really I just wanted to make sure I'd break 80."

"This is the best I've played in a year and a half. This is the first time I've broken 80 in a year and a half."

Repasky needed a strong putt on the final hole of regulation to force the playoff. Trailing Lauer by one, the Livonian nailed her drive better than 220 yards into a blustery wind. Her second shot fell 15 yards shy of the green and her chip put her within 10 feet. She then salvaged par with a strong putt.

Lauer, playing in the threesome behind Repasky, was 20 yards short of the green after two shots at 18. Her chip also stopped 10 feet from the cup, but her try for a par fell one inch short.

REPASKY HAD trouble on 15, 16 and 17, bogeying all three. She two-putted the par-three 15th, and salvaged a bogey with a 14-foot putt at the par-five 16th after hitting her tee shot into the woods. A tree stopped her tee shot from sailing further from the hole at the par-three 17th, where her first putt rimmed the cup before she managed a third-straight bogey.

Lauer grabbed a brief lead at 17 by hitting her tee shot to the top fringe and two-putting. Her first putt came up six feet short, but she sunk the second to make par.

After the long delay, Repasky went to the 10th tee determined. "I didn't see anything of what happened (at Lauer's controversial eighth hole)," Repasky said, "so I didn't get involved."

She had been in playoffs in the O&E tourney before, winning twice — both times for second place. This time, it was for the title.

Other flight winners were Debra Horning of Birmingham, who fired an 84 to claim top honors in the first flight, and Dora Abdo of Livonia, the second flight champion with a 104.

U-M hopes in receivers' hands

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

There is nothing typical in this year's edition of Wolverines.

That's not to say coach Bo Schembechler's University of Michigan football squad won't log another season of lopsided wins. But it's not as certain as in the past. For the second straight year, the Wolverines may not be atop the Big Ten come season's end.

The reasons were laid out plainly enough by Schembechler at U-M's media day Saturday. In simple terms, the Wolverines lack proven performers at key offensive positions.

Indeed, that inexperience could make U-M's positions of strength ineffective.

OFFENSIVELY, the Wolverines are loaded on the offensive line and at receiver. But their quarterback is virtually untested in game conditions and the team's top running back — Rick Rogers, who gained 1,069 yards last season — may be academically ineligible.

Can a host of inexperienced runners fill Rogers' shoes?

And can Jim Harbaugh, a junior with five pass attempts in his varsity career, be counted on to get the ball to his veteran corps of receivers?

Vince Bean says yes to both. Bean heads the list of returning veterans at receiver. The fifth-year senior from Southfield snagged 29 passes for 412 yards and three touchdowns last year. His career totals are 64 receptions, 1,069 yards and five TDs.

"We've got a ton of running backs," said Bean. "That won't be a problem."

"I think (Harbaugh) throws better than Steve (Smith, Michigan's quarterback last season). Especially since Steve's shoulder was hurting a lot of the time. (Harbaugh) likes to throw."

THAT MAKES the always optimistic Bean anticipate an even more productive season at split end this year.

"My goal last year was to catch at least 30 balls," he said. "I was pretty happy from that standpoint, although I could have caught more. 'This year I'm going for 45.'"

Bean forsee an increase in opportunities that will allow him to increase his production by more than 50 percent. "I think we're going to throw that much more," he said, then added, "But it's up to the man (Schembechler). He likes to run a lot."

Rogers' absence at running back — combined with a knee injury suffered by back-up Brian Mercer last season that kept him out of spring practice — leaves precious little experience at tailback. Rogers' fate won't be decided until his summer grades are evaluated Sept. 5 — two days before U-M's opener against Washington.

THAT MEANS Rogers will miss two weeks, at least (he isn't practicing with the starters at present). Ben Logue (13 carries for 85 yards) is the lone returning back with game experience. Gerald White and Thomas Wilcher will also see action.

The receiving corps will be relied on to pick up the slack. Bean is certain they can fill the role.

"This is the most talent we've had at wide receiver, depth-wise, since I've been here," said Bean, who started alongside All-American Anthony Carter for two seasons.

Triando Markray is the incumbent at flanker. Markray blossomed late last year, catching 11 passes for a whopping 319 yards (a 29.0 yards-per-catch average) and four TDs. Steve Johnson and Gilvanni Johnson are able back-ups.

THE PLAYER expected to spell Bean at split end won't be overlooked — not at 6-foot-8. Paul Jokisch, a junior from Birmingham Brother Rice, came to Michigan as a basketball player but decided to give football a try last spring. His size makes him an imposing target, but that isn't the limit to his talent.

"I was surprised how good he is," Bean said of Jokisch. "He's really competitive and he's got great hands. He's a lot better than I thought he'd be."

Jokisch doesn't know how much playing time he'll get as he gets acclimated to a sport he hasn't played in three years.

"I feel I'll get as good a shot as anybody," said Jokisch. "The first couple weeks of spring ball it was kind of tough, getting used to the pads."

"But I'm ready to get going. We've got a lot of receivers."

"This is the most talent we've had at wide receiver, depth-wise, since I've been here."

Wasczenski's MSU fate in his own hands

By Chris McCook
staff writer

BOB WASCZENSKI was not a happy man after the fourth annual Michigan High School Coaches Association All-Star Football game played Aug. 4 at Spartan Stadium in East Lansing.

The Farmington-Harrison-via-Plymouth-Canton graduate was anticipating a big day.

All week in practice, Waz had wowed coaches and scouts with his blinding speed and his ability to shake defenders. He had even impressed his own coach, John Herrington, with the way he was hanging on to the football.

"He was fantastic in practice," the Harrison mentor was saying in the press box prior to Saturday's game. "He was catching everything."

Herrington has seen Waz catch many passes, 25 last year to be exact, good for 523 yards and seven touchdowns. But, Herrington has also seen Waz drop a good many.

"He has real small hands and sometimes has trouble bringing it in," he said.

BUT, DURING the week prior to the game on the campus of Michigan State University, where Wasczenski is a highly regarded incoming freshman, the Waz was at his best.

The game itself, however, won't be one Waz will want to remember.

The opening kickoff foreshadowed what was to come. Waz was set to field the kick at about his own five. He dropped it, picked it up and ran it back to the 26.

Waz told Herrington before the game that the East would be throwing to him long and deep on the first play. Sure enough, first play from scrimmage Waz went deep. He was a good five yards beyond his defender. Unfortunately, Terry Andrysiak's pass was way off the mark. Waz caught it about three yards out of bounds.

On the third play from scrimmage, Waz ran a curl pattern. He was open, but the pass arrived late and was batted away.

During the East's next offensive series, Waz was replaced by Southfield-Lathrup receiver John Slazinski. Andrysiak hit him perfectly for an 11-yard gain. Three plays later, Slazinski hauled in a 24-yard TD pass.

"I WAS open all day," Waz said after the game. "They either didn't throw it or they missed me. After such a great week of practice I was really looking forward to this. I guess I shouldn't expect too much in an all-star game."

Waz returned to the line-up in the East's third possession. Kevin Jarema, a noted runner, was the quarterback. Of the nine plays, eight were runs. On the lone pass, Waz was alone in the end zone. Jarema, however, had already elected to tuck the ball under his arm and run. Wasczenski was hard-pressed to disguise his frustration.

Don't get the wrong idea. Waz did contribute. His punt and kick returns gave the East good field position, and he helped spring fullback Steve Palmateer on a 42-yard run with a bone-jarring block.

But, in front of MSU coach George Perles and the rest of the MSU elite, Waz wanted to shine.

WITH THREE minutes left in the first half, the East drove to the 12-yard line. Waz ran a slant pattern and was, again, virtually wide open. This time, Andrysiak delivered the ball perfectly. Right in Wasczenski's hands. But, the ball didn't stick. Waz didn't even try to hide his frustration this time. He laid on the turf in the end zone for several seconds before trotting back to the huddle — things weren't going his way.

Ah, but the smile came back to Waz's face and the bounce back into his gate at the outset of the second half. He again blew by his defenders. Andrysiak again launched a relatively poor pass. But this time, Waz circled back and made a nice grab worth 36 yards. Had the throw been on the mark, it would have been six more points for the East — who won the game 24-7.

"We were going to throw more in the second half, but with the lead, the coaches decided to keep the ball on the ground," Waz said. "This was such a disappointment."

Waz is looking forward to playing for Perles. When he was signed last year, Waz was touted as being one of the top offensive recruits for the Spartans. Then, a week later, MSU signed a speedy All-American receiver out of Chicago named Norm Dempsey. Suddenly, Waz was scarcely mentioned among MSU recruits.

BOTH WAZ and Herrington still believe MSU is the right school.

"I think I have an advantage over Dempsey," Waz said. "He's only 5-foot-8 (Waz is 6-3) and I'm just as fast. I think I'll have a great chance."

Dempsey, though, is already being touted as the next Anthony Carter. Waz knows he'll have to work hard, but he's confident he'll be ready to accept the challenge.

"I've never really had to give 100 percent effort before," Waz said. "I'll be giving it all I have in the fall."

Indeed. It will be the biggest test of Wasczenski's athletic life. Look for him in the green and white jersey next fall. He'll be wearing No. 15 on his back.

LOCAL GOLFER IN NATIONAL TOURNEY

Jim Lear Jr. of Plymouth has won a trip to Florida to compete in the Oldsmobile Scramble National Championship golf tournament Sept. 28-Oct. 1.

Lear will be competing with the country's best amateur and professional golfers on the Magnolia Course at Walt Disney World.

Lear, three other amateurs and club pro Randy Erakine, formed a team that won the regional Oldsmobile Scramble Aug. 13 at Oakland University. The team, which plays out of Washtenaw Country Club, combined on a 15-under-par 57 to capture the regional prize.

The regional tourney drew 300 golfers.

CANTON SLUGGERS SLUMP

The Canton Sluggers, the township's senior citizen softball contingent, fell to fourth place in the Oldsters Softball League with just one game remaining.

The Sluggers dropped a toughie last week to Garden City 17-14 to lower their record to 4-5. They take on league-leading Allen Park in the season finale.

The league standings look like this: Allen Park (8-1), Livonia (7-2), Garden City (5-4), Canton (4-5), Dearborn (1-8) and Lincoln Park (0-9).

FALL BALL

The Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department will open its fall softball league Monday, Sept. 10.

Returning teams can sign up Aug. 27-31. New teams can sign up between Aug. 27-31.

The entry fee is $150, plus $11 per game for ump. A $40 forfeit fee will be required along with the entry fee — the fee will be returned after completion of the schedule. Leagues will be limited to 16 teams and play a 14-game schedule.

Dameron is national champ

By Chris McCook
staff writer

Only the wrestler fully knows and appreciates what it takes to be a champion. Only the wrestler knows the pain of a defeat. For wrestling, regardless of the attempts to make it a team sport, remains a truly solitary sport. It pits man against man — one emerges the victor, the other the defeated.

David Dameron is 16 years old. He has crawled off the mat a frustrated, beaten young man. He has had his nose broken twice. He has severely sprained his arm. And he has strode off the mat, hands raised triumphantly, the champion.

Dameron came home Monday from the AAU National Junior Olympics in Jacksonville, Fla., with two medals — one silver, one gold. He came home a national champion.

Wrestling at 130 pounds, the Plymouth Salem High School junior competed in both the Greco and freestyle wrestling events. He won his gold in Greco, his silver in freestyle. He wrestled 11 matches in Florida, against state champions from all over the country, and lost just one match.

HIS JUNIOR Olympic performance culminated a fantastic summer for Dameron. He won 106 of his 112 AAU matches during the summer. He won 92 of those by pins.

"It was real rough," said the shy, blond-haired grappler. "I was so sore after some of the matches, I could barely get off the mat."

Dameron, who has been wrestling for just two years, credits his coach, Ron Krueger, with giving him the winning edge on a national level.

"He's taught me all my moves and he got me into freestyle wrestling," Dameron said. "The difference for me was coaching. Most of the kids down there (in Jacksonville), their coaches didn't really care. But, Mr. Krueger, he really cares. He pushes me all the time."

Ron Krueger is no stranger to wrestling in this area. The head coach at Salem is simultaneously respected, feared and disliked by a lot of people. There is no one, however, who could honestly say he isn't an outstanding and dedicated wrestling coach.

Krueger has nursed Dameron through some pretty traumatic times at Salem. Especially last year. Dameron, then a sophomore, and Plymouth Canton senior Todd Gattoni were two of the best wrestlers in the area at 119 pounds. The rivalry, naturally, was fierce. Gattoni beat Dameron three times, all on close decisions. Dameron was frustrated and depressed.

"IT WAS REALLY a bad time for Dave," said his mother, Norah Morrell. "I kept telling him that he was only a sophomore. When he was a senior, I wouldn't expect a sophomore to beat him either."

The logic didn't wash with Dameron. He was bitterly depressed because, in his heart, he knew he could beat Gattoni.

"High school wrestling is a lot of stalling," Dameron said. "If you get behind, you're in trouble because your opponent will just stay away from you. You can't get away with that in Greco or freestyle."

In the early matches, Gattoni got ahead and stalled. But, in the league meet, Dameron got the early lead and Gattoni was forced to wrestle. Dameron got his revenge.

He finished his sophomore year with a 34-10 record and was named third team All-Area. Gattoni was second team. His brother, Denis Dameron, was also third team All-Area at 98 pounds. Denis, a sophomore at Salem now, competed in AAU wrestling this summer, also.

Dameron may not be fond of the collegiate style of wrestling in high school, but he has set some pretty serious goals for himself.

"I want to be a high school state champion," he said, without hesitation.

And after that?

Don't bet against him on either one.

Dameron knows all too well the physical pain and mental anguish of defeat. He now knows the exhilaration of being a champion and the sacrifice it takes to become one. At age 16, David Dameron has learned lessons normally taught to those much older.

Parilo gets uncontested gold medal

The success of Plymouth wrestler David Dameron at the National AAU Junior Olympics in Jacksonville, Fla., overshadowed the fact that

Parilo was less happy with his gold medal than was Dameron, however.

Parilo, state and regional champ at 200 pounds, traveled to Florida only to find out that he had no opposition in his weight class. He was the only 200-pounder there. He could have moved up to heavyweight, but decided against it.

medal in the 200 and enjoyed a nice vacation at Disney World.

Livonia Adray ousted

By Morris Moorawick
special writer

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. — Livonia Adray staged a futile rally in the ninth inning Thursday as Brooklyn (N.Y.) Youth Services held on for a 4-3 victory in the All-American Amateur Baseball Association (AAABA) national tournament at Highland Field.

The loss knocks Adray out of the double-elimination event with a 29-10-1 record overall.

Trailing 4-1 in the bottom of the ninth, Adray rallied for two runs before leaving the tying and winning runs stranded on base.

Don Dombey, who had three hits on the day to lead Adray, doubled to open the inning. John DePillo and Randy Baringer each were then hit by pitch to load the bases.

After David Austin and Bill Ulle struck out, Greg Kuzia came through with a two-out single, scoring two runs.

went all nine innings, then earned the victory by retiring Pete Rose on a fly out to end the game.

Silber scattered seven hits, walked four and fanned a total of five Adray batters.

Livonia starter Bill Matthews, meanwhile, gave up only five hits in seven innings or work, but three went for homers and two were doubles. The hard-throwing right hander, who fanned seven, was relieved by Brian Porter in the eighth and Dave Cooper in the ninth.

Livonia jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Dombey singled, went to second on a throwing error by Silber, and scored on DePillo's single.

Brooklyn scored twice in the fourth to take a 2-1 lead and tallied a pair of runs in the seventh.

ON WEDNESDAY, Livonia was dumped by Detroit Adray League champion Adray Photo, 15-3.

Photo (40-10), which lost 4-3 Thursday to defending champ Johnny K's of Baltimore (Md.), collected 17 hits against four Livonia pitchers.

Two Livonia errors contributed to five of Photo's first six runs.

Hitting-wise, Photo second baseman Scott Willis had a homer and three singles. Right fielder Rick Ziegler knocked in five runs on a triple and two singles. Shortstop Al Richardson chipped in with three singles and scored three times.

For Livonia, Cooper hit a solo homer in the third, Kuzia added an RBI single in the fourth, and Baringer's groundout scored Mike Johnson in the fifth to account for the Adray runs.

Ron Rightnower was the winning pitcher. Jay Bobel, the Livonia starter, took the loss.

Cage coach Fralick moves on

By Brad Emone
staff writer

Redford Thurston High School lost one of its most valuable coaches last week.

Principal Jack Harms was stunned to learn Thursday that Gary Fralick was leaving the boys basketball job after five years.

Fralick, who posted a 73-34 record, announced he'll be taking a similar position at Royal Oak Kimball.

"Gary came in and gave me numerous reasons," said Harms. "The big thing was the distance he would cut down on travel back and forth."

"It leaves an empty feeling because he was a heck of a guy."

Fralick, 35, lives in Troy and was employed only as a coach in the South Redford Schools. He teaches physical education and runs the athletic program for grades 6-8 at Kensington Academy, a private school in Bloomfield Hills.

"The distance between my house and Kimball is eight minutes," Fralick said. "And it's 15 minutes from where I work."

"I can be home now by 6:30 (p.m.). Coaching at Thurston, sometimes I wouldn't get home before 9 and I'd go two weeks without seeing my 3-year-old and 6-year-old.

"MY FAMILY became very important to me the last few years. I made a choice to have my family come first."

Fralick, however, is leaving Thurston with some sadness.

"I feel sad because I had five great years there and the administration backed me all the way," he said. "I met a lot of great people."

"The kids were well behaved, dedicated and hard working. I was treated well and I became attached to the school."

Fralick was among 27 candidates who applied for the job and one of three interviewed.

"Six of the first seven players graduated, so it will be a bit of a rebuilding year," said Fralick. "But there is some good talent with the freshmen and they had a very good sophomore player last year.

"I'm looking forward to the challenge of the SMA (the Southeastern Michigan Association)."

AT THURSTON, Fralick took an also-ran program and turned it into a legitimate force in the Northwest Suburban League.

After going 8-13 his first year, Fralick reeled off four consecutive winning seasons, including the school's first league title (since 1966) during 1982-83 year when Thurston went 18-3 overall.

Fralick's team beat Westland John Glenn for the title and went 10-0 in league play. The Eagles also pulled off a stunning 91-76 non-league win over Ecorse that year.

"That was the most perfect game I had ever seen," Fralick said. "I've never seen a team rise to the occasion like the team that beat Ecorse."

Last season, Fralick guided Thurston to a 15-7 mark.

During his five-year stint, Fralick produced several All-Observer players.

Part II

The Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 leaves tracks all over your tax returns. Here are some examples.

Interest free loans

This type of loan loses its glitter under the new law. Formerly, you could lend money to a child charging low or no interest and let the child invest the money.

The investment earnings would build up in the child's name, and because he had a low income he would owe little or no tax. Whenever you like, you could call in your loan and get your principal back.

The result was that you could shift income into the child's low bracket while retaining control of your money.

Under the new law, this loophole remains good for loans of less than $120,000 and earning less than $1,000 a year.

But on large amounts, the IRS will assume that the child is paying you annual interest on the loan at treasury bill rates. You will be taxed on that assumed income, even though you do not actually receive the money.

For 1984, the loan rate has been set at 10 percent. If the child's investments are earning interest at a higher rate, it is marginally useful to keep the loan going, but it is not the attractive tax loophole it used to be.

To avoid the new tax on outstanding loans, you have to collect them within 60 days of the date the tax bill becomes law. Incidentally, the same rules apply to loans granted by companies to their employees.

Employee benefits

Through a loophole, smaller companies have been making tax deductible contributions into employee-benefit associations and using them to pay for their own vacation home and other special benefits.

The new law puts a stop to that. It also lays down the principle that, to avoid being taxed as income, certain fringe benefits must be offered to all employees, not just to a chosen few.

Income averaging

The income averaging rules have been modified to reduce their benefits.

Currently, taxpayers whose income exceeds 120 percent of their average income for the prior four years are eligible to use income averaging.

This is now changed to 140 percent of the prior three years' average income. Therefore, individuals with high income years will have less of a chance to use income averaging and will be subject to higher taxes.

The effective date is for tax years beginning after Dec. 31, 1984.

Valuation

The new law requires appraisals for charitable contributions of property in excess of $5,000. The donor must report to the IRS any disposition of donated property valued at more than $5,000, which is made within two years of the date of the receipt.

In addition, there is a penalty of 30 percent of the tax liability where the claim valuation is 150 percent or more of the correct valuation.

Business autos

Cars bought or leased by your company will also carry fewer tax deductions, especially if you drive them on business no more than half the time. It will take longer to write off a car costing more than $16,000.

Home computers

You will get fewer tax deductions for buying a home computer if you do not use it more than half the time for business. You will get no deduction at all unless the computer is bought for your own business or unless your employer requires that you have a computer in order to keep your job.

Normally, managing your personal investments does not count as business use of a computer.

The tax bill is complicated. Consult your CPA, attorney, or financial planner to find out if the new tax law will really hurt you.

EDUCATIONAL SEMINAR: The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers and the Coordinated Financial Planning staff will conduct a seminar 7:30-10 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 18, at the Kingsley Inn, 1475 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills.

Ready for fall

Organizing theater classes keeps new director busy

By Tom Panzenhagen
staff writer

JOHNN QUINN CALLS his recent, four-week layoff from Kroger a summer vacation. Ask him how he spent his vacation, though, and you won't hear typical stories of summer pursuits.

Quinn, a Redford resident, kept busy organizing fall term education programs at the Actors Alliance Theatre Company in Southfield.

"Our goal is to become a fully accredited school of drama, and to establish credibility in the education community and the artistic community," said Quinn, 34, who doubles as the company's lighting director.

and it's a make-it-or-break-it type thing," he said. "We've been doing well and getting respect, but if we make a mistake, we can end up in a hole. One bad show can be a disaster."

"But we're not performing for audience draw," Quinn added. "We're performing works of artistic merit — if you want to be highfalutin."

ACTORS ALLIANCE, with offices, classrooms and stage in the Lycee International school building at Evergreen and 13 Mile roads, is a professional theater company and also offers class work in theater and stagecraft.

The company is entering its third production season and fourth year in community education. It continues to sublet Lycee International facilities, but eventually, Quinn said, the company will move into its own home.

"I'm almost going to be a little sorry down the line when we don't have this facility because you don't often have this much flexibility," Quinn said.

"We can hold big classes or little classes. There's nowhere else around town you can do what we do, except the universities, which charge an arm and a leg."

Quinn doesn't know when the move will come. "We foresee Lycee International needing the space more as they grow — we're in no rush to leave. When we go, it will be to the perfect space," he said.

That space will have to have the potential for a modular stage area, similar to the Lycee gym now used by the company, Quinn said, because the company prefers the flexibility of that design.

ONE DRAWBACK to the present facilities is that they must be shared with the school.

"Every Friday we have to go in (to the gym), put up a theater, do three shows and take down the theater, and that can be a real pain depending upon the show we're putting on," Quinn said.

"Kids play basketball during the day, and we play theater at night. But I'm always intrigued by the fact that we do create that little bit of magic every week."

Quinn said he's always been satisfied with the way his lighting has worked in the gym-turned-theater and called working in such facilities a big challenge.

"We actually build a theater around the production," Quinn said, noting that theater-in-the-round is being considered for two of this season's five productions.

"If a director thinks it will work, we'll build it," Quinn said.

The two productions that may be done in the round are "Godspell," set for Nov. 23 to Dec. 30, and "The Taming of the Shrew," April 12 to May 12. The other productions are "The Rainmaker," Oct. 19 to Nov. 18; "Close Ties," Feb. 22 to March 24; and "El Grand de Coca Cola," May 17 to June 16.

COURSE SELECTIONS for the term running mid-September to October are "Acting Fundamentals," "Character Study," "Audition Technique," "Professional Performance Practicum" and "Youth Theater."

Quinn said the courses are designed to meet community needs.

"Some students may need a class in fundamentals, but other actors, with perhaps four years experience, have no use for introduction to acting techniques," Quinn said. "But they may need a course in audition technique."

The "Youth Theater" course, for 11- to 13-year-olds, isn't a "baby-sitting service," Quinn said. Its students study "stage presence, self control, vocal techniques — things they can use right away in school."

The practicum course is designed to provide an overview of the theater so students can determine their field of interest. It runs seven weeks and lets students work behind the scenes — in the box office or as ushers, for instance — and then delves into how theater designers put their ideas into practice. Eventually the students launch their own show.

QUINN, A REDFORD native who attended U-D High School, said that in high school he never thought he would get into lighting design or theater education.

In fact, he attended the University of Michigan as a biology major with leanings toward going on to medical school.

MINDY SAUNDERS/staff photographer

John Quinn of Redford is the new education director, as well as the lighting director, at the Actors Alliance Theatre Company housed at the Lycee International School in Southfield. Here he stands in the school's gymnasium, which is converted into a theater on weekends during the season that begins in the fall.

"I always liked the theater as a hobby," Quinn said. "I did a lot of musical theater dancing — why, I don't know. I didn't like it," he said with a smile.

While working on one show, the opportunity to assist with technical work presented itself. Quinn hasn't appeared on stage since 1976.

"Now I'm at something of a crossroads," Quinn said. "I've been a theater amateur and proud of it. Suddenly I've become an education professional."

He will continue to work full-time in the Kroger warehouse in Livonia while putting in as many as 15 to 20 hours a week with Actors Alliance.

So far he's not been paid for his services, but he's not asking for any money either. Quinn said an honorarium has been discussed, which he said he would probably turn into a scholarship fund.

"And my gas money from Redford to Southfield goes under my (personal) entertainment budget," Quinn said.

Registration for fall classes at Actors Alliance runs Sept. 5, 6 and 8. For more information call 642-1326.

Safari East ends 'Jazz at Institute'

Tickets at $7 are available through the DIA ticket office (phone 832-2730) and at the door.

Bob May (center), inventor of the Record Game, is surrounded by other executives of his company. Dan Carpenter (right), who is originally from Farmington Hills, is the art director.

Game pinpoints record business

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

Bob May was working for a Nashville record company when he came up with the idea for a board game that could be sold in record stores. He doesn't expect it to be as big as Trivial Pursuit, but May hopes that the Record Game will become a top seller.

In a promotional swing through metro Detroit recently, May talked about the game, which he describes as "a business game about the record business, although it could be about any business."

The game took five years to bring to market. Singing star Kenny Rogers was approached with a prototype of the game and became so enthusiastic he subsequently signed a licensing agreement. May reported Rogers called the game amazing, and very authentic about the way the record business operates.

"Kenny Rogers Presents the Record Game" is the way the cover of the game box reads. "The Board Game of the Music Industry" is the rest of the description.

THE SNAZZY red, gold, silver and blue box and the giant game board inside were designed by a former Farmington Hills resident, artist Dan Carpenter, who is now living in Nashville. The game includes a 45 rpm record, with "The Record Game Song" on one side and rules telling "How to Play the Record Game" on the other, and a fat 29-page book of official rules for "The Record Game." These also were designed by Carpenter.

In addition, the artist created all the promotional materials to launch the game, including buttons, T-shirts and painters hats with the Record Game logo. He also participated in the filming of a TV commercial for the game.

him do everything from business cards to movies."

The game board used for play unfolds to become "the largest single-piece board in the world," May declared. Players move pawns over 318 squares and pick from 198 "circumstance" cards.

"We have built in a lot of decision procedure," he said. Each player starts with $4 million and balances expenditure of money for product and promotion against sales. The winner is whoever makes the most money.

THE GAME BOARD lists a real phone number, which players can call and get changing information for playing the game.

"The Long, Long Trailer" (1954), 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Redford Theatre, 17360 Lahser at Grand River, $2. Running time 103 minutes.

"The Long, Long Trailer" is interesting as a curiosity piece. It stars Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz — at the height of their popularity — but does not cast them as Lucy and Ricky, although their characters aren't too much different from the zany TV Ricardos, either. Their fans won't be disappointed, though, as the couple's antics lead them down America's back roads in a very, very long trailer. Keenan Wynn and Marjorie Main co-star.

Rating: $2.75.

"Bananas" (1971), midnight Saturday on Ch. 56. Originally 82 minutes. TV time slot: 105 minutes.

Ch. 56's annual movie marathon runs for most of the weekend, and includes such films as "Father of the Bride," "The Endless Summer," "The Man in the White Suit" and, the best of the bunch, "Bananas," written and directed by Woody Allen. It's one of his first films and as funny as all the others. Howard Cosell even manages to inspire hilarity in a spoof of ABC's "Wide World of Sports." And don't be distracted, because the sight gags are as funny and plentiful as the written jokes. Louise Lasser co-stars and Sylvester Stallone has a bit part.

Rating: $3.35.

"Babe" (1975), noon Monday on Ch. 9. Originally 100 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

Susan Clark gives a moving performance as premiere woman athlete Babe Didrickson Zaharias, in one of the first collaborations between Clark and husband Alex Karras, who plays Babe's wrestler/husband, George. The film's a bit too weepy but nonetheless riveting. Slim Pickens, Jeanette Nolan and Ellen Geer co-star.

Rating: $2.95.

"A Love Affair: The Eleanor & Lou Gehrig Story" (1978), 12:30 Tuesday night on Ch. 7. Originally 96 minutes. TV time slot: 125 minutes.

"A Love Affair" may be closer to the truth than the story told in "Pride of the Yankees" (1942), the first movie about baseball great Lou Gehrig, but that doesn't make it a better movie. Still, Edward Herrmann and Blythe Danner give standout performances as the Gehrigs, with Patricia Neal a bit overbearing as his mother, and Jane Wyatt and Gerald S. O'Loughlin rounding out the cast.

Redford home 'a sanctuary' for collector

By Mary Rodrigue
special writer

Even Joan Collins' bold "Dynasty" wardrobe would look drab in comparison to Laurea Miley's clothes.

Miley, a professional costume designer and collector, has 350 period originals stored in her south Redford Township home — everything from Civil-War-era black embroidered silk to a seal-skin cape.

Although most of the goods are meant to be seen and not worn, stored in boxes and trunks in her climate-controlled attic and basement, she does cherish a few personal treasures.

Miley's winter coat is a mid-length fur circa 1943 which she models with a Bette Davis wide brim black hat. Other treasures include 100-year-old Japanese silk and a 1920s cream color floor-length dress with a hoop slip and trussle.

"Most of these things will end up in a museum someday," said Miley, who has no living relatives.

Trying to get her to pin down her favorite fashion era is nearly impossible.

"I love the '20s, the '30s, the Victorian era and Egyptian. Oh, I love them all."

At 36, Miley has been costuming actors, musicians and other entertainers for over two decades. She did her first show, "Pirates of Penzance," at the age of 15. But glory came even earlier for the natural born seamstress.

"I won my first sewing contest when I was 5," she said, recalling the blue ribbon she won at the Michigan State Fair for a matching tea towel and apron set.

SHE HAS since mastered such advanced tasks as making hats, placing tiny geometric metal designs into mesh fabric by hand and outfitting every theatrical character from Lizzie Borden to the Elephant Man.

For the past five years the University of Windsor drama department has been the showcase for her work. An instructor and costume designer on the Canadian campus, she has just completed her 69th main stage production there, "I'm Not a Legend, Vince Lombardi."

"The only period costume necessary for this production was for Lombardi's grandfather who arrived at Ellis Island in 1880," she said. "The Canadian authors of this play are Lombardi collectors, and we're lucky enough to have Lombardi's coaching jackets, sweaters, Bart Starr's uniform and Joe Thiesmann's Washington Redskins uniform."

Most productions don't come so completely outfitted and marathon sewing sessions have occurred on more than one occasion to meet a deadline, she said.

"This is the hardest work I've ever done in my life. I usually put in a 12- to 16-hour day and keep three changes of clothes at work: one for teaching, one for administrative meetings and luncheons and one for grub work."

A self-confessed workaholic, she admits she loves the pace.

"The students are the greatest part, watching their potential develop."

Some of her star pupils have worked at the Stratford and Shaw theater festivals, Ontario's internationally acclaimed summer festivals.

"The entire faculty all have an area of specialization. I just soak up what they have to offer. I suppose when the time comes that I won't be learning from them or with them, it will be time to leave."

AN AMERICAN, Miley was offered the job in Windsor after impressing the drama department director during a guest artist stint there.

Miley's students seem equally impressed.

"Laurea is one of our most respected professors and has a way of encouraging and bringing out the best in people," said third-year student Wendy Krekeler.

"Last year she worked 83 straight days to complete a difficult season, yet she still had time for any personal problems and teaching classes."

The job and the daily 50-mile-round-trip international drive leave Miley with little free time.

She calls her home, bedecked with Victorian-style furnishings, "a sanctuary." She shares it with an 11-year-old blind Boston bull terrier, Ming.

A foot-pump sewing machine in an ornate cabinet in the living room is Miley's favorite piece of furniture.

"My great-grandmother made her living off of this machine," she said. "I use it only for guest lectures. Eventually it will be donated to the Henry Ford Museum."

Another grandmother was also a professional seamstress.

"I guess it was in my genes."

Miley has five other sewing machines in her house, including a 19th century, cast-iron Singer that had to be converted to electric.

"Not even my first-year students can ruin this machine," she said.

A PERPETUAL student herself, Miley has acquired everything from a bachelor's degree at Eastern Michigan University to a doctoral degree in costume design from the University of Michigan. She attended Wayne State University and the Rhode Island School of Design along the way.

Eight years ago she launched her own company, Designing Yours. Clients included Motown's Four Tops and Enchantment as well as the Cedar Point Amusement Park in Sandusky, Ohio.

"I made 1,500 costumes in three months for four years for all of Cedar Point's live entertainment."

Although her university job has put her company on temporary hold, Miley still takes occasional clients and isn't adverse to helping local theater groups, such as the Dearborn Civic Theatre and the Grosse Pointe Players.

Pressed for a number she can only say that she has made thousands of costumes during her career.

"I don't even like to think about it," she said.

Although her students help her sew for the university productions, she is responsible for the actual design and has a penchant for authenticity.

"I read a play five times before I go at it. I look at the characterization. I've often dreamt costumes that I couldn't consciously visualize in my waking hours. And I go with the director's concept of the show."

A dozen semesters of theater history and acquired graduate research techniques help make the job easier.

"The costume designer and the scenic designer must be coordinated," she said.

"I'VE HAD my share of flops, like making earth tone costumes to go with brown scenery. You couldn't see the players on stage, only their heads."

There have been other heart-stopping moments for Miley, like the time the wicked queen lost her hoop skirt on stage and her dress collapsed during a scene.

"She played it right into her character," Miley said proudly.

Other actors have gone onstage unaware of unzipped costumes only to be met with raucous laughter from the audience during serious dramatic scenes.

But there has been more glory than embarrassment for Miley. She has won several awards at the Edinburgh Theatre Festival in Scotland. Each year the university sends two productions to the festival.

"I've never been able to afford the trip myself," she said.

With the Canadian dollar hovering at 70 cents U.S. at the current rate of exchange, Miley is finding it increasingly difficult to make ends meet.

She makes all her own clothes ("no single garment costs over $3") and furniture.

"I'm a perpetual junker. I love finishing furniture. I never felt that I belonged in the nuclear age.

"And I don't really need to eat," she jokes.

Although she has obtained landed immigrant status in Canada which would allow her to move there, she claims she just hasn't had the time to pack a single box.

"I haven't had a vacation in five years. But I'm not complaining. I've always known what I wanted to do."

Miley has 350 period costumes stored in her home, most of which are meant to be seen and not worn. 'Most of these things will end up in a museum someday,' said Miley, a University of Windsor instructor and costume designer. She has been involved in 69 stage productions on the Canadian campus.

Sculpture starts with sketches

Probably the most valuable lesson I learned in college was not taught by any teacher. Nor did I learn it in any text book.

Because of limited finances I was forced to work any job I could find in the summer and budget my savings throughout the school year. So my most valuable lesson was to work hard and spend money wisely.

Here is one of my favorite techniques for finding a free mat board: Sit close to the cutting board and look like you are really working hard on your drawing. Then when one of those "Daddy foots the bill" students cut out a mat, they usually throw away the center of the mat board.

Why, you ask? Because "Daddy foots the bill." Now I do have my pride, you know, so after class I would pack up and leave with the rest of the class. Then I would say, "Oh, hey guys, I'll meet you in the cafeteria, I gotta go back and get something." Then I would root through the trash barrel and pull out some real "keepers." Same with the sculpture class.

Professional modeling clay is expensive and I only had a little of it in my first class. Now sculpture is a required course and many who take it know they will never do it again. So at the end of the semester they simply throw out their clay.

So on the final day of class there was, for years, this kind of tall guy hangin' around every sculpture 0120 class, and minutes after class dismissal he could be seen pulling pounds of clay out of the trash barrel. What a cheap skate. But, hey, I had to be. This kid was putting himself through school.

I once asked a girl in class if she wanted a Coke at the campus coney island. When we got there she ordered, of all things, a coney island, fries and a Coke. Breaking out in a sweat, I only ordered a coke. The cost of that meal was the thing that forced me to think of the "mat board in the trash" scheme.

Well, I made it through those days of frugality. I'm glad to say those days are over and I'll not deprive my children the opportunity to learn the same lesson. In other words, "This Daddy won't foot the bill."

THE BEST PART of professional clay is that it last and lasts. As a matter of fact I am still using the same clay that I rescued from the trash 17 years ago.

What I call professional clay is more rightly called permanently pliable, or oil base clay. This clay is strictly for modeling and for casting molds. Permanently pliable clay is made of casting wax, Jordan clay, oil and grease.

All of this stuff is heated and mixed and the name of the homemade variety is called "Schmidt wax." The mess, however, from homemade clays makes you feel better about buying premade clay, or swallow your pride and look through the trash barrel in the sculpture room.

Of course there are many brand names for permanently pliable clay. Some are Plastiocene, Plas-

Summer jaunts bring pleasure

Recently I had the pleasure of strolling through Gale Colwell's Garden. She is director of the Birmingham Community House.

I was curious as to how a busy executive could maintain a garden, having purchased 50 flats of annuals to plant with a backdrop of shrubs, trees, and evergreens. Right off, I must assure our readers she is a success.

The front entrance to the home is banked with large areas of annuals, tastefully placed to suggest warmth to a guest. The inside of the home shows excellent taste. But with my love of gardening, my eyes at once saw a large patio with fine white wicker chairs and tables. The entire roof of the covered patio has many bright, hanging baskets.

A stroll in the adjacent area revealed many large containers of flowers plus colorful groupings of color at the ground level. There is a fine display of unusual shrubs and trees.

Several feet to the rear of the patio area is a gleaming white, picket fence.

Upon leaving this garden I walked down the driveway and along the wall of the structure found more hanging baskets, nearly touching each other.

Because I have been gardening most of my adult life, you can imagine my appreciation of the splendor scene in Mrs. Colwell's garden. On her gardening and professional work, I will give her an A plus.

EVERY SUMMER your columnist returns to her roots in Steuben County, N. Y. The village is small, so I was met at an airport in Rochester. While still in this town, we went to Wegman's Supermarket.

It is as big as our largest in the area. What took my eye was the superb cleanliness of the total store. You could have eaten off the floor and it had many departments we haven't yet seen in our giant stores.

The excellent management is a treat. There are displays and opportunities to eat while shopping with a flare we haven't seen in our local markets.

The talk of upstate New York is the "Wild Winds." It is in an unusual setting in the high hills of Naples, N.Y. The setting has nature trails, farm animals, a country garden, a gift shop (for the women), and sundry highlights developed by John N. McMath, Jr.

Upon introduction to the host, I said: "You must be related to the McMaths in our area." His answer was yes.

THERE IS something of interest every age and gender on the ground. And when you get inside, you aren't disappointed — the food is excellent.

At Wild Winds the guests are given nasturtium flowers and leaves to eat, marigolds (green stems and baby marigolds), calendula petals, a pattern of Johnny Jump-Ups on the butter patty and pink baby carnations to munch on.

You can be sure I didn't miss a trick. The food (a la New York) and the style of serving makes me anticipate my next return to Naples. Wild Winds is an unusual restaurant and a terrific accomplishment.

Home tour slated

Doors of six historic structures will be open for visitors noon to 5 p.m. Sunday for the home tour, part of Ypsilanti's 1984 Heritage Festival. Pictured are several 19th century commercial buildings. The two residences in the buildings will be open to visitors. Other treats on the tour are: a Queen Anne House, two apartments in a converted mansion, and several unusual Italianate structures. Tickets are available at ticket booths in front of the Ypsilanti Historical Museum on North Huron and on the circle in Riverside Park, just south of the new Cross Street Bridge.

U-M Dearborn hosts exhibit

The University of Michigan-Dearborn is inviting area art collectors and artists to submit photographs of their works to be included in the third annual art exhibition, "The Dearborns Collect," in the University Library.

The exhibition, which will run from Nov. 5 to Dec. 10, will feature works of art from Dearborn and Dearborn Heights, including works by artists who lived, studied, or taught in those cities or who have other close connections with the area.

Color slides of works to be considered must be submitted by Monday, Sept. 17. Submissions will be reviewed by a panel of Detroit area art collectors, including W. Hawkins Ferry, architectural historian from Grosse Pointe; William Bostick, artist and former administrator of the Detroit Institute of Arts; and Ferdinand Hampson, a gallery owner from Lathrup Village.

An opening reception for the Dearborn and Dearborn Heights community is scheduled for Nov. 9. In 1982 and 1983, the exhibition featured some 100 works.

A registration form can be obtained by calling Betty Gauthier at 593-5400.

Institute offers language classes

An invitation is out to discover the culture of a new land in the International Institute's language classes.

The classes begin Monday, Sept. 10 and run for 10 weeks. They are designed to teach the language for fun, with special emphasis on the culture of those lands.

Spanish, Italian and German classes will be held Mondays and Wednesdays, while Japanese, Arabic and French classes will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays. Times are 6 to 8 p.m.

CLASSES ARE conducted by nativespeaking, experienced teachers who enjoy exploring their mother culture through films, visual aids and conversation. An authentic ethnic feast, an evening of special activities and 36 hours of classroom instruction are included for $150 tuition. The classes are limited to a maximum of 15 and a minimum of eight students, to insure that a small group learning environment will prevail.

To register, send a first payment of at least $20 to Cora Lee Sterling at the International Institute, 111 E. Kirby, Detroit 48202. Checks should be made payable to the International Institute.

The last day to register is the second class meeting. For more information, contact Sterling at 871-8600 during business hours on Tuesdays or Wednesdays.

"Our foreign language teachers are dedicated to making the classes a full ethnic enrichment experience," said Mary Ball, executive director at the International Institute. "They give students insight into tradition and customs that an academic language class cannot offer."

tolena and Artone. Artone has my vote as it is perfect as soon as you open it up. Other brands, to me, seems rather hard. To soften them up, you must dab motor oil on your fingers and work it well into the matrix of the clay. Oil base or permanently pliable clay does not need to be covered as it will never harden.

There are many tools you can buy for working clay but I recommend you limit yourself to a few wood and wire loop tools. If you only have a few tools, you soon become very familiar with them and will make them do the work you need. Nothing can slow you down more than looking for the perfect shape in a fistful of tools. My favorites are the bass wood tools and wire loop tools. The wood tools, moistened in water or oil can produce a perfectly smooth finish and wire loop tools are irreplaceable for cutting and gouging out clay.

BEFORE YOU BEGIN a sculpture, do a few sketches to develop your mental image into a two-dimensional image. Then you will, from this sketch, create a three-dimensional shape. But before you start flinging clay all over the place, build a decent armature.

What's an armature? No big deal really. An armature is merely a rigid shape or inner structure to support the clay. A good armature will help your sculpture stand up to all your pushing, patting and pulling. It will also save you money because the more massive the armature you have, the less clay you need to buy.

An armature can be made of wood or pipe wound with rags. You could even wad up this article and tie or tape it to an upright dowel or pipe (really, I wouldn't mind). But best of all is our modern-day marvel: Styrofoam.

When you, for example, do a head study you can as a base merely use an 8-inch or 10-inch square of three-quarter-inch or inch hole and glue in about a 12-inch dowel rod of the same diameter. Then you can tape chunks of wood or Styrofoam to this dowel rod to help form the large mass of the head and thereby save clay.

The reason I prefer Styrofoam is often in sculpturing you cut into the clay and hit your armature. With Styrofoam this is of no consequence.

So start covering the armature of whatever simple shape you would like to sculpture. Just cut slices of clay and press them over the armature. Add clay wherever you need to begin building the shapes you require.

Remember at this point you are three-dimensionally sketching and should not mess around with details. Just develop the main shape.

Frank and Nancy Boos of Bloomfield Hills represent growing individuality of couples who pursue their own careers. Frank is an auctioneer; Nancy is a fitness expert and member of the board of trustees for the Michigan Foundation for the Arts. Her coat dress by Louis Feraud is black and white wool, $380, Jacobson's. His double-breasted window pane check wool suit, $595, striped shirt, $35, foulard tie, $32.50, pocket puff, $7, are from Kosin's.

F A L L '8 4 Boy, oh boy!

Sue Stevens wears Anne Klein II pants, $110, Outlander tavad, $88, and cowl, $72, with Evan Picone taupe pump, $80, with Simone oversized coat in taupe and cream. At right, Rhonda Clark wears Simone's cape in black and white window pane check, Tahari jacket, $224, and pant, $96, Evan Picone black pump, $80. Coats from C'est Simone. Other fashions from Hudson's. For more on the fall silhouette, turn to Page 6B.

THE FASHION message for fall '84 is as easy to read as the big letters on an eye chart.

Menswear for women. That's it pure and simple.

The images that will linger in the mind's eye are unmistakable. Color. Big coats. Slouchy sweaters. Winter white. A slimmed down silhouette for evening. A few, but important, accessories.

At a time when color, instead of new styling, is the big thing, and a return to classics is as brave as Boy George punk dressing, there is a new kind of flamboyance, a decisiveness in how to put things together.

The best fashion this season does not hold back. If a woman wants a menswear look it has to look frankly masculine. If she wants to be sexy, she can choose a new short skirt in the bright colors.

If she wants to be casual, then she must pull out all the stops, pull out her shirt, and add a layering of knit or sweaters. And she'll have to find the right low flat shoe from a selection that will be so apparent this season.

Here is a season of contrasts, when the look can range from elegant suits in luxurious fabrics to austere trenchcoats and sexy black lace for evening. What sets this season apart from the rest? The return of refined ensemble dressing with a new emphasis on the waist and hips; new variations on the long, leaf silhouette; and a lot of options for career dressing.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR . . .

The key pieces of the season are big oversize jackets; the new coat; long lean cardigans; knit dresses, tops and pants; long pleated skirts; winter white anything; and the menswear touches — hats, berets, cuff links and any man-tailored jacket or trouser.

No longer will we see women directing envious glances at beautifully tailored, proportioned and comfortable menswear.

This year, look for her to be wearing the time-honored classics men have traditionally called their own.

Mary of Shansinsky

Gail Colwell, director of The Community House in Birmingham, wears Anne Klein II gaberdine coat, $248, pleated pant, $110, blouse, $158, sweater vest, $68, to carry her through a busy day of meetings and appearances. Bonwit Teller. For more about the menswear influence, turn to Page 2B.

Mary Hitchcock, Troy resident, model and actress, likes the transition qualities of the season's bold dressing. Her black and taupe bold stripe jacket, $54, skirt, $44, are from T. Edwards of Somerset Mall. For more about bold dressing, turn to Page 10B.

Fashion authority Brenda Rosenberg knows the value of the right dress for any occasion. For evenings, she chooses black and white sequins and bugle beads in Hattie's own trompe l'oeil jumper. About $550. For more on glittering nighttime appearances, turn to Page 8A.

Marilyn Pallier is marketing director at Lakeside mall. Her red and black jacket, $245, is by Carolyn Doyle of New York. At Claire Pearens. For information about the season's big influence, the fitness boom, turn to Page 5B.

The fall fashion supplement is a project that occupies our thoughts here at the Observer & Eccentric on a 12-month basis. As soon as one project is completed we begin collecting ideas for the next edition. Our observations are often scribbled on pieces of paper, then discarded when an even more exciting idea or fashion trend captures our attention.

But the Observer & Eccentric knows that when the moment comes to prepare the newest edition of the spring or fall supplement it is also time to call upon the professionals — the hair and makeup experts, the clothing coordinators and the managers and directors of businesses, private clubs and institutions who generously give their time and their facilities to allow us to interpret what we see as the looks that readers will want to know about.

While preparing the fall '84 edition, we would like to acknowledge the assistance of a number of talented persons whose work enhances the final product. Creating hair fashions for our volunteer models were Max Reiger, Denny Kier and Bob Gotko of Mario Max in Farmington Hills, and Yiannis of the Bellissimo salon in Southfield. Makeup and styling was created for us by Samia, also of Bellissimo, and Rochelle Apkarian, Cheryl Mancinelli, and Patty Yagoobian, all of Mario Max.

We would also like to thank the staff and directors of Meadow Brook Hall, Roper City & Country School, and the Oakland Hills Country Club for their generous, often amused, assistance during the preparation of this special section.

And finally, we would like to say a special thank you to all the volunteer models, who took time from busy schedules to visit stores, discuss fashion, and wait patiently while being prepared for their appearances before the camera.

Editors seldom have as easy a task as I have, due to the generous help of so many talented individuals.

On the cover

They've been whispering about it for years, but this year man tailoring comes out of his closet to make big impact on her appearance as she strides into the office and board room. Few interpret it better than Gloria Sachs, who creates the big polo coat in camel hair, then teams it with grey cashmere pinstripe trousers and double-breasted jacket, and a cream colored silk blouse and black silk tie. The felt hat is by Liz Claiborne. Lord & Taylor.

What to wear?

The key element simply menswear

WHY the menswear look for fall?

There is nothing so pulled together or so traditional as the elements of this way of dressing.

Also, the pieces will survive gracefully in a wardrobe for years at a time, to be called upon and worn in different ways according to what the fashion or whim of the moment dictate.

What are the items that can turn an ordinary wardrobe into a sensational wardrobe? We'll be seeing top coats, polo coats, any tweed or traditional plaid, trousers with front pleats, balmacaans, and raincoats in luxury fabrics.

American designers have created wardrobe dressing to lean on, a foolproof wardrobe stamped with the American obsession for quality.

HERE IS clothing based on the virtues of traditional men's tailoring. A good suit. A good white shirt. Flat shoes. A wonderful overcoat.

Ralph Lauren softened his menswear look for fall and sweetened it with lace and self belts. Calvin Klein's collection was the most mannish, with almost everything a replica of something from a gentleman's wardrobe.

Bill Blass never loses sight of femininity. His menswear look is frankly feminine, with pink polo coats, a jeweled vest for evening, and big bows at the neck replacing ties.

Perry Ellis designed his menswear to be comfortable. His oversize jackets all have the punch of color.

Anne Klein went hard-edged and snappy, with skirts to the ankles and big jackets with huge pockets.

This influence also is reflected in men's dressing. Gentlemen are treated to new colors in traditional tweeds. The colorful sweater to wear under jackets is a must this season. Cashmere is back for men and women.

THERE ARE more options for men this year, yet at the same time the traditional pin-stripe stripe remains the reigning king.

Whether they are designing for men or women this season, the pacesetter designers tell us that clothing should enhance the wearer's looks and make a person feel good. Clothing should be perceived as a part of a person's identity, and it must be capable of helping him or her meet everyday challenges with assurance.

This year the preferred identirevolutionary. Whether the silhouette is oversize or understated we'll see styles that are accented by attention-getting detail, then accessorized with the great accessory. Dismiss the

Bright ideas shine at night

GET READY for a major return to glitter and glamour as a busy social season begins to take shape. Brilliance in color, drama in sequins and satin, the demure bow and the spectacular ruffle cascading from shoulder to hem will all make their entrances, along with "the column," narrow, body defining gowns that we haven't seen in recent years.

Look for combinations of cashmere and satin, hip draping, intricately worked panne velvets, the one-shoulder tie, and lace edging to soften her tuxedo dressing. Lace insets at the yoke will make sultry velvet nighttime dressing smolder.

Get used to the words robe de chambre; it will travel from home entertaining out onto the town, as will the smoking jacket, which, like the robe de chambre, is being interpreted for her in exquisite silks and brocades. Eye interest will appear at the neckline, at the waist, over the hip and sweeping down to the hemline. Lace is again with us, in silver and gold shimmer from shoulder to ankle.

With all of these big nighttime looks you will want to complement your look with sparkle aplenty, dazzling diamonds: whether real or faux, come in ensembles of ribbon bracelets, chandelier earrings and masses of brightly colored stones for the neck.

Nighttime dressing reflects brilliantly on how the women feel about themselves this year.

Heidi Stein, owner of Heidi salons, chooses cashmere and silk for evening. Her soft grey cocktail dress, $750, accented with Chanel pearl necklace, $180, all from Jacobson's.

Florine and Bill Mark Ross of Bloomfield Hills take time away from her busy career as president of Weight Watchers and his practice as a family physician. Her black jersey special occasion dress is by Harve Her-nard, $298. His tuxedo and pique formal shirt are by Adolpho, $550. Both at Saks Fifth Ave.

Former fashion model Gretchen Hitch now divides her career between the International Visitors Council and writing a column for the Eccentric. This fall she rediscovers glamour of sequins and bugle beads in Riazee's two-piece, scene-stealing night time dressing. Claire Pearone.

Lorraine Golden of Bloomfield Hills is vice president of radio station WNIC. Her spectacular cocktail dress, $700, is accented by Kenneth Jay Lane jewelry, Stuart Weitzman shoes, $142. All from Roz & Sherm.

THIS is the season to demonstrate a knack for wearing knits and sweaters.

It is the season to strive toward seasonless dressing that adds years to the life of a wardrobe.

Among sweaters, the categories are many. One great and fun trend is the intarsia sweater, those eye-catching, trend-setting sweaters with intricate designs or unusual color blocking or patterning combinations. We got a preview of what's ahead when everyone made a dash into brilliant cotton summer sweatering. Now look for the trend to soar in variations of-shetland and cashmere as the temperatures drop.

Sweaters will be seen every way imaginable, from sweater coats to tunics that can double as short dresses or change personality when they are eased over a skirt.

A sweater jacket is a must to begin the season or for layering later on to keep us warm. And when sweaters of different colors are layered one on the other the effect adds a certain zip to dressing.

As more and more people demand clothes that travel and always look great, knits can be squashed, folded, rolled or jammed in a corner, then with a good shake they go on without a care in the world.

Linda Pool (left) a science teacher at Rooper, wears the classic cable front stitched sweater, $14, when she shows Julie Hargraves, display coordinator for Sears, around the Birmingham campus. Hargraves' classic navy blue crewneck sweater is also from Sears.

Kimberly Cook of Detroit, a clerk typist at Manufacturer's National Bank, is all set for cool weather activities wearing layered sweatering topped by brown and white sweater, $26, from Albert's.

Kevin Gilmore (left) wears the intarsia sweater in black, grey and rust by Bill Diftord, $76, with Zacari's cord pant, $27.50, and Mavco black wool jacket trimmed in leather, $252. Roger King's black leather pants by Mavco, $208, black and white herringbone jacket with leather trim also by Mavco, $252, and black and red plaid flannel shirt by Henry Grethel, $40, are all from Strictly Sportswear.

She wears a silk paisley Highland dirndl, $358, Harris tweed wool blazer $498, wool plaid camp shirt, $298, and field boots, $483. Her husband wears glen plaid sport jacket, $375, paisley shirt, $67.50, and grey flannel trousers, $175, from Claymore Shops.

Newest looks fit our lifestyle

IT'S CALLED physicality, it's the fitness boom that has influenced the way we wear our clothes, not to mention how it has affected our perception of how certain fabrics should feel against the body.

The use of layering for aesthetics and warmth is part of the new thinking. The influence is so strong that some designers are adding underlayers to their lines, such as T-shirts where a shoulder is meant to be seen.

The Japanese influence is subtly apparent this fall, particularly in the emphasis on new textures, some more subdued coloring and loose-fitting shapes.

Look for fall clothes that are somewhat structured, with a finished look.

Weekend wear affords the opportunity to dress in loose-fitting shapes, an idea that has long been popular in the Far East. Now that it has been imported to America, the newest looking designs come in cottons and less refined fabrics than usual.

Off-beat texture mixes will be fun. Long and full weekend skirts will be worn with boots or socks that are layered.

Full cropped pants in denim and wool gaberdine are the great scene stealers. Expect to see jumpsuits, bomber jackets and slouchy mannish blazers.

Don't expect country casual to steer clear of the big city. Or you may want to contemplate smoldering evenings ahead wearing another reinterpretation of the great classics, the loosely wrapped smoking jacket that is cut long and lean.
