School millage OK'd by narrow margin

By Emory Daniels
staff writer

Voters Tuesday approved the tax increase requested by Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

With a voter turnout of almost 13 percent, the request for an additional 1.74 mills received a majority of 44 "yes" votes — 2,973 to 2,929.

The voting patterns followed previous millage elections with the older areas in Plymouth, with heavy concentrations of senior citizens, casting "no" votes, while Canton precincts where families with elementary children predominate provided a heavy "yes" margin to the proposal.

Seven of the school district's 14 precincts voted against the millage request, but the margins in the positive precincts were much larger — especially in Eriksson and Field where the yes vote was 2-1.

BECAUSE OF a mixup in the Michigan Legislature, two different color ballots were used. Voters who registered between Sept. 5 and 24 were given buff-colored ballots while all others voted with white ballots.

That made little difference in the vote outcome, however, as the 20 residents who voted on buff ballots split 50-50 — 10 yes, 10 no votes.

The mixup was caused when House Speaker Gary Owen adjourned the Legislature before action could be taken on HB 5475 which would have certified voters who registered during the month before Tuesday's election. Normally, voters must register 30 days before an election.

"The Plymouth-Canton community should be proud of itself," Superintendent John M. Hoben said Wednesday morning.

"The passing of this millage says at least two things about this community — first, people value quality education; and second, when they understand the need, they are willing to support that value with their tax dollars.

"Obviously, I am pleased and happy at the way this turned out. The district is grateful to the many citizens and staff members who helped to inform voters about the need for this millage," added Dr. Hoben.

"Like most districts, we're still not out of the woods when it comes to money but we pledge to continue to use each dollar well to provide maximum education for money expended.

"The real winners in today's election are the young people and adults whose programs will be maintained because of this millage."

PRECINCTS WHICH normally vote against tax issues followed suit Tuesday. Central Middle cast 285 no votes to 192 yes, and Starkweather cast 180 no to 128 yes votes.

Allen, which reported a heavy turnout of senior citizens, reported 298 no votes to 168 yes votes. Isbister voted down the millage, 249-228, as did West Middle by 397-367. Bird went against the millage, 170-127, while Farrand voted down the increase 281-214.

The result is that all precincts in Plymouth and Plymouth Township voted against the millage. All Canton precincts voted in favor of the millage.

The yes-vote margins in Canton were: Gallimore, 256-228; Fiegel, 184-122; Miller, 230-143; Hulsing, 259-176; Eriksson, 165-86; Field, 153-58; Canton, 302-255.

The district now must ask voters to approve a millage renewal during the early part of 1985. A committee presently is studying a possible bond issue which could appear on the ballot next June.

Veteran cop, Berghoff, retires after 32 years

By Gary M. Cates
staff writer

The man responsible for solving many of Plymouth's crimes during the past few years has retired.

Lt. Henry Berghoff became a civilian Monday after almost 32 years of police service.

The 54-year-old father of four was forced to go on medical disability this week due to health reasons.

"When acting police chief Ralph White said go home Monday I had mixed emotions," Berghoff said. "I was happy in one way and in another way I knew it was all over."

Berghoff's police career began on Feb. 19, 1953, when he was hired as a patrolman. Through the years he has served under seven chiefs and made hundreds of arrests.

Besides earning the respect of his fellow officers, Berghoff has the respect of attorneys and judges. He is admired by the many residents whom he has befriended through the years.

"I've always felt you're here to serve the people, you're not here to work against them," he said Tuesday.

"I've got a lot of good memories of the job and the things I have done."

The police veteran has been on the job long enough that he is running into the children of people he dealt with as children.

"I guess you could say I've been around here for two generations," he said.

BACK WHEN he started, the lieutenant said Plymouth was just a small city with police call boxes.

"There were three red lights hung along the traffic lights throughout town. When we were out patrolling, you were suppose to check those lights. If it was on that meant they needed a police officer and you had to call in," Berghoff said.

"I can't remember for sure if we had radios — we must have," he said.

In those early years, Forest Avenue was the hot spot for teenagers to race their cars.

"I learned a valuable lesson one time," he said. It was while he was collecting money from parking meters.

"I was looking over here getting the money out of the meter when I heard this guy squealing his tires.

"I looked up and there was only one car on the road, so I knew it had to be that guy."

Berghoff issued a ticket to the driver and learned his lesson when the case went to court.

"When acting police chief Ralph White said go home Monday I had mixed emotions. I was happy in one way, and in another way I knew it was all over."

— Lt. Henry Berghoff
Plymouth police

"I was telling what happened and I said, 'I assumed it was him.' I learned this was a word a policeman should never use. You don't assume in this business," Berghoff said. The driver beat the ticket.

AMONG THE investigations which stand out in Berghoff's mind are three murders — two at the Old Village Inn (the old Nelson Hotel) and one behind a bowling alley in Plymouth Township.

"All three were convicted of first-degree murder and received life sentences without parole," he said. (One of the convicted suspects since has appealed and received a second-degree conviction.)

"On our murders here in town, we have 100 percent — we don't have an unsolved murder," he said.

What did go unsolved was the arson at the Penniman Mall several years ago.

"The Penniman fire still kinda bothers me," Berghoff said. "We spent many, many hours investigating that and eventually turned it over to the FBI."

"The FBI came in and interviewed most, if not all, of the business people and employees of that building and they came up with nothing. We had our own idea on who did it but we couldn't prove it," he said.

ONE OF THE most satisfying parts of his job was solving break-ins.

"On these burglaries, so often you don't make an arrest," Berghoff said.

"When you do, it's really satisfying — especially on a dwelling burglary where they stole items like grandpa's pocketwatch and grandma's brooch and you get them their property back."

Among the not-so-pleasant aspects of the job were the accidents and suicides.

"When a drunk hits a tree, that's his fault," he said. "But when you see an accident where children get hurt or mangled — children tend to bother you. The child had no say in what happened."

"It's true that if there's anything bad that's going to happen the police officer is going to see it. The trick is you have to leave that on the job; you can't forget it but you can't take it home with you."

Through his years, Berghoff has seen many changes in the police field.

"The paperwork now takes up so much of the officer's time," he said. "When I started people had more respect for police."

"So many people today would just as soon fight an officer. They didn't resist you like they do today."

"Today there is a much larger volume of cases than when I started. When I started you could give personal attention to every B&E — you just can't do that today," he said.

EVEN THOUGH the workload was higher in his last few years on the force, Berghoff was known to do quality work.

"Henry is absolutely a brilliant guy, yet very modest," said attorney Robert Delaney of Plymouth. Delaney was the defense attorney for one of the murder suspects Berghoff brought to trial.

"His handling of cases is absolutely superb. He is reasonable and thoughtful," Delaney said.

"Instead of being hardened by the job, he has grown in understanding. He has contributed more than another person has to the Plymouth police force," Delaney said.

Echoing the words of praise is 35th District Court Judge Dunbar Davis, who has heard many of Berghoff's cases through the years.

"When he comes into court he always is well prepared," Davis said. "When he says something, you can believe it."

"I think Henry Berghoff is a very fine officer and I think he has done a good job for the city," Davis said.

Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry worked with Berghoff as an officer and later supervised him as Plymouth chief.

"I think he's a good cop. I think he's a good person," Berry said. "Hank was always a leader. He was always willing to take the time to show somebody how to do something — he cared."

As Tiger team roars, local spirit soars

These Field Elementary School students are excited about the Detroit Tigers and took part in a special Tiger lunch Tuesday. The students are: Jason Haney (left), Cissy Daniels, Jamie Hamey, Michael Woodruff, and Hollie Bruff.

Selling Bless You Toys

By Gary M. Cates
staff writer

Boy are the Detroit Tigers blessed — just ask Jim Wauldron.

Thanks to the team's 104-58 season and an Al Ackerman slogan, Wauldron has been showered with his own blessings — selling more than $1 million worth of "Bless You Boys" goods in three months.

"The Tigers are hot and it's a good product to sell because you're selling the Tigers," Wauldron said. The 30-year-old businessman spoke in his Plymouth office, surrounded by Bless You Boys T-shirts, glasses, mugs, buttons, baseballs, and pennants.

"Three months ago this was zero," he said, "now we probably have done as well as anybody selling Tigers stuff."

Wauldron, a Canton resident and father of two, holds the license for Bless You Boys goods. Ackerman, a sports announcer for WDIV, is responsible for the slogan and the station is donating its royalties to Easter Seals.

So far the sales have netted almost $1,000 for Easter Seals, according to Lynn Johnson of WDIV.

"We got the license for the Tigers stuff because we could jump in quickly and had the contacts," Wauldron said.

WAULDRON'S NO STRANGER to manufacturing and distributing sports goods.

At age 20, he started out dabbling in key chains with sporting logos for high school teams. The work grew and a company was formed as Wauldron became licensed to make key chains for colleges and major league teams.

The company, American Logo, was sold to Asco and Wauldron moved on to other things.

"Three months ago I was in Minnesota selling Michael Jackson bags," he said. "I called Ackerman from Minnesota and we put together a proposal."

The "we" is Wauldron and Thom Hay, now vice president of Wauldron Inc.

"On July 16, WDIV gave us the license," Hay said. "There were several local business people who thought of ways to sell the stuff, but they selected us."

"WDIV recognized Jim's ability to put it together. Now we got things all over the city. All the major stores carry our stuff, plus hundreds of independent stores," Hay said.

"You can't go anywhere without seeing 'Bless

You Boys,'" Wauldron said. "I'm trying to think of a place it isn't being sold at."

Even President Ronald Reagan was seen wearing one of Wauldron's T-shirts on television.

WAULDRON INC. has branched out from the "Bless You Boys" merchandise.

The company also manufactures "singing" college and baseball buttons, as well as carrying a variety of sports-related items.

"We came up with the musical buttons," Hay said. The buttons contain a computer chip which is programmed to play different fight songs.

"Bill Savola of Plymouth helped us get the computer chips, and we put the buttons together here," Hay said.

"This is all emotional stuff. The whole key is in the distribution," Wauldron said.

It's just experience as to what to get into and what not to when it comes to selling emotional stuff," he said.

ANOTHER "emotional item" Wauldron has developed is a trivia game playing on the success of Trivial Pursuit.

"I actually set up this office to sell our Trivia Plus game," he said.

"Trivia Plus is a whole new concept in games. This is the first trivia game which doesn't have questions with answers."

"Everything about it is unique and everything is different," he said.

The playing board is printed on the inside of a looseleaf notebook. A deck of playing cards and a deck of cards with various categories are placed in the binders.

Depending on a roll of the dice and the suit of a card which comes up, the player must name an item from the category card which begins with a specified letter. At least one player must agree with the answer for it to be valid.

"That's what makes this game so great, the answers change with time," Wauldron said.

The game will be produced locally and marketed nationally.

"The trend is for trivia games and anything dealing with trivia will be hot for a while. But just like the Tigers stuff, when the trend passes then something else will come along," he said.

And just like now, Wauldron promises to be there with a way to market take-off items.

Maybe his next product will be a singing Tiger trivia game.

Students munch a 'Tigers lunch'

By M.B. Dillon Ward
staff writer

Today's Tiger Trivia Q: How many Tiger fans were lucky enough to lunch on "Trammell Quarter-pound Hot-dogs," "Parrish Pizza," "Baseball Bananas," "Playoff Punch" and "Milt's Milk" the day the baseball playoffs began?

A: 517 students at Field School. Not only that, but five fortunate students with blue dots on their trays won autographed Bengal baseballs. Twenty-five left the cafeteria with Tiger championship pins, and 150 young sports fans relished every last lick of their "Playoff Pudding Popsicles."

On the playground, where many students spent their lunch hour, the Popsicle eaters were easy to find. Their chocolate-covered mouths were almost as noticeable as the Tiger hats, shirts, uniforms and pins they wore to celebrate the school's "Tiger Day."

Students had plenty to say about their team. Some excerpts from an eavesdropper:

"I know one thing. The Tigers won a lot," said first-grader Billy Hack. We watch 'em on TV."

"I don't like 'em," said fellow first-grader Jennifer Meredith.

"You're funny. You're very funny," said Billy, a bit miffed.

"I think the Tigers will win. They've been doing good in the year round. I think they're going to win with their pitching," said third-grader Jeff Fisch, 8.

If conversation strayed from the Tigers, it wasn't for long. Blaring from loudspeakers on the school's roof were recorded reminders, including "Go Get 'Em, Tigers," highlights from the 1968 World Series and an elated Ernie Harwell proclaiming the Tigers world champs.

"I think I got a pretty neat hat with this button," 6-year-old Cissy Daniels was saying. "I got it at a game. I went to a game three times with my uncle and dad and gramma."

"I like the great player — the one who's got blond hair . . . Kirk Gibson. He's a great player. I always watch him," said Delores Johnson, 6, looking dapper in her cap with the old English "D."

"I want the Tigers to win."

Monica (who was unsure of her last name) saw eye-to-eye with her classmate Jennifer.

"I'm hoping they lose because I don't like ballgames," she said.

Patty, also uncertain of her surname, was looking forward to the Tigers' televised games.

"I like seeing them throw the bat," she said.

Jason has a soft spot in his heart for Tiger outfielder Chet Lemon. "He's a good player. And Alan Trammell is a good hitter," he said. Asked what his last name was, Jason paused as his friend Hollie Bruff piped in, "he doesn't got one."

Delores Johnson also ranks Lemon as the Tiger's No. 1 player.

"HIS REAL name is Chet, but my mom calls him Lemon," said Delores.

Mike Woodruff remembers Lemon "once hit a grand slam this summer. Once I didn't like it when he got hit in the head and got 10 stitches. But he's still playing."

Lee Terry, 6, looked more like a Detroit Lions than a Tiger fan, sporting a silver and blue jacket and hat. But the 8-by-10 picture of pitcher Jack Morris he proudly carried definitely made a hit. Oblivious to his friends' badgering, however, Lee wouldn't part with his king-size baseball card.

SCHOOL CHIEF Cindy Bastion, who dreamed up the day's stadium-style specials and donned a baseball cap to serve them, said "this is a real experience. It's a big deal. We had the autographed balls and pins donated anonymously — a parent called WJR (Radio) about what we were doing . . . we even had one little girl make a Tiger necklace and earrings out of orange felt."

"Jan Bell, our assistant principal, heard them talking on WJR while she was driving to work and was so proud she put on her Tiger hat and wore it the rest of the way," she said.

Principal Larry Miller, who declared Oct. 2 Tiger Day, considered celebrating the playoffs a way "to boost community and school spirit by picking up on something that interests kids, and people in the area."

"We thought we could salute the Tigers at lunchtime and give the students a chance to, in an appropriate way, wear Tiger dress, caps and trinkets and not have it be very disruptive. We're always looking for ways to help students feel they belong," said Miller en route to Team Math.

Who envied the sports fans seated before wide-screen TV's — cheering, whistling and waving the Tigers on to an 8-1 victory at Canton's Center Stage? Not 517 Field School students — that's for sure.

3 residents become new citizens

By Diane Free
staff writer

When President Reagan came to town Monday, 1,500 new U.S. citizens felt it was their special day. Three little girls from Canton Township were no different.

The Minsterman girls, Diana Lynn, 9, Susan Florence, 7, and Sarah Elizabeth, 5, adopted daughters of Alan and Linda Minsterman of Proctor Road, glowed with excitement as U.S. citizenship was conferred on them during the largest naturalization ceremony ever in Michigan.

"They are just beside themselves," Mrs. Minsterman said earlier. "This is something they've wanted desperately. They want to be able to say 'I'm American.'"

THE MINSTERMANS became the adoptive parents of the South Korean orphan girls in July 1981. Since that time, Mrs. Minsterman said, "there's never been a dull moment."

Diana, who is in third grade, is the most reserved and "a little mother" of the sisters, Mrs. Minsterman said. Susan, the most outgoing and a talented ballerina, is in second grade, and Sarah, the family clown, is in kindergarten. All three attend Field Elementary School where they were honored at an assembly Friday and each given a classroom-size American flag from Principal Larry Miller.

Miller and a neighbor, Karen Flavin, also saw to it that the girls had red, white and blue corsages for the naturalization ceremony Monday at Cobo Hall. Grandmother Elizabeth Shade of Ambler, Pa., was present for the ceremony.

THE THREE-YEAR wait for citizenship was a long one, Mrs. Minsterman said. "The process takes so long that they were getting frustrated," she said.

The adoption became final one year after the girls' arrival, and the first papers for citizenship were filed in October 1983. The girls appeared before an examiner in May, and since then "it's just been a matter of waiting," Mrs. Minsterman said.

Since the girls are under 16 and were adopted by American parents, they were not tested as adults applying for citizenship are.

UPON THEIR ARRIVAL in the United States, none of the sisters spoke English. The Minstermans taught the girls their names by combining them with their given Korean names. Diana was Ee Boon-Diana, Susan was Ko Boon-Susan and Sarah was Ko Soon-Sarah. As with other words, the girls learned to associate the English and Korean words and gradually the Korean was dropped.

Using that system of word association and assorted sign language, and with the help of a tutor from Field Elementary and a Korean-born friend, within four months the girls were speaking only English, Korean all but forgotten, Mrs. Minsterman said.

"Silly little things" will occasionally cause problems now for the girls," Mrs. Minsterman said.

"They'll come across a word or a phrase they don't understand, like seesaw or windmill," she said, or they will lack a reference point to such events as Thanksgiving or Abraham Lincoln's birthday.

THE FIRST YEAR was "quite a culture shock," Mrs. Minsterman said. Susan and Sarah were too young when they left Korea to remember much of their previous life now, but occasionally Diana has a flashback. Since Diana was only 5 at the time, "it's difficult for me to know how much and what really happened," Mrs. Minsterman said.

"The Korean community has been absolutely phenomenal," Mrs. Minsterman said. Friends made sure the family had Korean recipes on hand, and helped with translations during doctor's and dentist's visits. "The support has been absolutely tremendous."

For all the excitement the girls' arrival generated and the attention they still attract, Mrs. Minsterman said, "It's been awfully normal too. They fight, I yell."

In some ways, adopting the three girls may have been easier than adopting just one child, Mrs. Minsterman said. "They didn't feel all alone, they had each other to rely on." The family, which has three dogs and two cats, is used to doing everything in multiples anyway, she said.

Would they do it all over again? "I'd do it exactly the same way," Mrs. Minsterman said.

Reagan welcomes 1,548 new citizens

By Kathy Parrieh
staff writer

As soon as their three-year wait was up, Diana, Susan and Sarah Minsterman became American citizens. To the three Korean-born children, U.S. citizenship makes them just like everyone else in their Canton Township school.

Christopher Norris waited 24 years to take the citizenship oath. Becoming an American was something the Farmington Hills resident always meant to do, but it was harder for him to give up his British "heritage."

No matter how long the wait to become citizens, the excitement was there Monday as 1,548 Michigan residents took part in the state's largest naturalization ceremony.

Cobo Hall became a U.S. District courtroom as 1,391 adults and 157 children were sworn in by Chief Judge John Feikens during the effort to unclog the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's area backlog.

MAKING THE once-in-a-lifetime event even more memorable was the presence of President Ronald Reagan, who was in town to address the Economic Club of Detroit.

In one of his rare appearances, the president saluted the long rows of immigrants waiting to take citizenship oaths. Dressed up for the occasion, many tightly clutched tiny American flags.

My fellow Americans — welcome to your country," the president told natives of 82 different countries.

"You have joined a country that has been called the 'least exclusive club in the world — with the highest dues,'" added Reagan, calling the ceremony one of his most rewarding in office.

"America was founded by men and women who understood that freedom does not come free. It has a cost. But I don't suppose anyone would know the cost of freedom better than you."

WHILE WELCOMING the new citizens, Reagan urged them not to forget their native lands which provided America with "new ideas and new blood."

Sometimes this country's ethnic diversity makes for disagreement, the president acknowledged. But it's "usually pretty good-natured arguing, and it doesn't tear us apart," he explained.

"All of us want 'One Nation Under God, Indivisible, With Liberty and Justice for All.' Most of the disagreeing just has to do with the best way to secure liberty and justice, and the best ways to protect them."

DESIGNED TO BRING the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service up to date on citizenship requests, the morning ceremony was a first for the state.

Usually, the eastern district swears in between 50 and 75 new Americans every Monday in the U.S. District Court.

Tight court space and immigration service resources were blamed for the backlog, compounded by a growing number of refugees and adoptees eligible to be citizens.

In January 1983 naturalization became a nationwide priority. Since then, efforts have been made to get people into the system as soon as they meet the required three years permanent residence if married to a citizen or five years if not.

FOR THE NEW Americans and their families, the president's visit added even more excitement to the rousing occasion.

before that he would be on hand. But even the very biased said Reagan's appearance made the event even more special.

Canadian-born newscaster Byron MacGregor, who led the "ceremony of allegiance," nostalgically recalled his own naturalization ceremony.

"Only in America could a kid from Calgary, Alberta, end up on stage with the president of the United States," said the Farmington Hills resident.

"IT'S NICE the president could show up for the kids," said Canton Township resident Alan Minsterman, whose three adopted Korean children were naturalized Monday.

"It's probably just another political stop for him, but they'll remember it always."

Although he put off naturalization for 24 years, Christopher Norris was excited about it. But his two daughters were more impressed that the president would be there for the ceremony.

"I thought it was quite moving," said Norris, who came here at 15 from Blackburn, England. The director of corporate communications for Ameritech Publishing in Troy admitted feeling a "little twinge of patriotism rising."

"There's something kind of exciting about it all anyway. But the president being there just made it more interesting."

Reagan, Ferraro duck questions

By Tim Richard
staff writer

"Open press coverage."

That was the official word on the White House memo for reporters and photographers covering President Ronald Reagan's arrival at Wayne County's Metropolitan Airport.

It wasn't so. There was no opportunity to ask him a question. And the regional news corps had lots of questions.

DESPITE THE tens of millions of dollars poured into presidential campaigns, little hard news comes out of a top candidate's appearance. That was particularly true of Reagan Monday and of Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro last week.

Unlike Democratic challenger Walter Mondale and Vice President George Bush — who fielded as many questions as their tight schedules allowed during recent visits to Wayne and Detroit —

Reagan and Ferraro spoke only to crowds.

The president climbed off Air Force One with Senate candidate Jack Louma and House candidate Tom Ritter of Waterford, both facing uphill battles against Democratic incumbents Nov. 6. The press "pool" — regular White House correspondents — was allowed alongside the plane for pictures.

THE REST of us were confined to a flatbed truck next to a cargo terminal. Our photographer, Steve Cantrell, had to use a 300-mm telephoto to see anything. Just as he was about to shoot Oakland County Road Commissioner John Gnau shaking the chief executive's hand, official White House photographer Mike Evans placed himself in front of Reagan and Gnau, who spread his shoulders, weaved back and forth — and spoiled Cantrell's shots.

Ferraro, spontaneous before a crowd in Utica's Stevenson High, also took no questions during her first tri-county visit last week. Instead, her staff set up individual interviews with writers from out-state papers.

"I WAS wanting to answer more questions," Reagan told the Economic Club of Detroit luncheon, "but I guess we've run out of time."

The businessfolk asked three: on protectionism (he's against), on whether he and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko could ever be friends (he didn't think personal friendship was relevant) and on his favorite team in the World Series (never answered).

Two unasked questions:
● Of critical importance to this region is the St. Lawrence Seaway, which is no longer large enough to handle world-class shipping. Should it be expanded? Should two-way locks be built where necessary? Many Great Lakes manufacturers and midwestern farmers would like to know about that.

● Billions of eastern tax dollars are drained to states with oil, coal, natural gas and uranium. Some western states tax them as high as 30 percent and cut their own sales and income taxes. States like Michigan with double-digit unemployment must pay those double-digit taxes in their utility bills. Should those state taxes be capped?

No answer. No question. No "open press coverage."

FERRARO'S HIGH school speech was billed as a talk on education. It said so right in the official release.

Charging that the present administration "doesn't value education," the former teacher ridiculed Reagan's off-hand proposal to send a teacher on a space mission. Ferraro then announced

STEPHEN CANTRELL/staff photographer

White House photographer Mike Evans blocked the working press' view of Reagan as he was greeted at Metro airport.

she and Mondale are launching a major new initiative on education. But she never said what that will be.

Later she had a closed-door session with women political leaders. That was it.

The unasked questions for Ferraro:

● As a U.S. representative from New York, you voted against establishing the U.S. Department of Education. Why? Have you changed your mind?

● Why did you send your children to private schools?

● The National Education Association, which was one of the earliest groups to endorse Walter Mondale's presidential bid, favors financing schools with one-third federal money, one-third state and one-third local. Do you favor the NEA platform?

No answer. No question. No chance to ask the question.

Feikens tells of thrill new citizens express

By Gary M. Cates
staff writer

Naturalized Americans often express more joy over their freedom than do those who are born in the United States, according to Chief Judge John Feikens of the Federal District Court in Detroit.

Feikens administered the oath of citizenship to about 1,500 people Monday at Cobo Hall, as President Reagan looked on. The ceremony was the largest naturalization in Michigan history.

"There is a joy on the faces of those who are sworn as citizens that we natural-born citizens don't always show," Feikens said Tuesday night, speaking to the two Kiwanis clubs of Plymouth.

"Frequently, as I administer the oath of citizenship, I ask a question. I ask the question and I know what the answer will be," he said.

"I ask why do you want to become a citizen of the United States? And the answer always is because you are free in the United States — you have freedom."

Feikens was the guest speaker at the installation of officers program for the Colonial Kiwanis Club and Plymouth Kiwanis Club. Thirty-fifth District Court Judge Dunbar Davis introduced Feikens, noting that it was an honor to have the federal judge speak at such a function.

Feikens kept his comments brief and didn't deviate from his patriotic theme. The chief judge most recently is known for hearing the Vista Disposal bribery cases and for taking jurisdiction over the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department.

He came under fire of late for his comments about Detroit and Mayor Coleman Young in a newspaper interview, but carefully avoided anything controversial Tuesday night.

"NO PERSON shall be accused of a crime in the federal judicial system unless a grand jury meets and indicts them," he said.

And no person shall be convicted of a crime in the federal judicial system unless a jury hears the evidence and decides beyond a reasonable doubt that the person is guilty, the judge said.

"Nobody can take away that right unless the person being accused waives it," he said.

Those rights are "deeply imbedded in the Constitution" and it's for that reason emigrants come to the United States, he said.

"People continually come to our shores from all around," said Feikens, "and we don't realize what an amazingly remarkable country we have."

"I encourage you, especially as we draw close to a national election, I encourage each of you to recognize what a truly great country the United States is."

With that Feikens concluded his comments and quickly sidestepped an opportunity for questions.

Besides administering the oath of citizenship Monday, Feikens also was given the honor of introducing President Ronald Reagan to the Detroit Economic Club.

The chief judge was chairman of the Republican Party in Michigan during the 1950s. He has served as a federal judge for 15 years, the last five as chief of the eastern Michigan district.

County buys time to file Supersewer lawsuit

By Gary M. Cates
staff writer

A U.S. District Court judge will decide the fate of the $120-million North Huron Valley/Rouge Valley wastewater project — otherwise known as Son of Supersewer.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) has been barred from implementing a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) decision to deny 75-percent grant funding for the project, while Wayne County files a lawsuit in federal court.

"We think it's something that the people have a right to, to have the court review the EPA's decision to determine if it was arbitrary," said John Breen, attorney for Wayne County.

Without 75-percent EPA funding, many believe the massive sewer project will die because of increased costs to the 17 participating communities, which include the townships of Plymouth, Canton and Redford, and the cities of Livonia, Westland and Garden City.

Although EPA funding can be sought again next year the problem is the maximum level, by law, has been reduced to 55 percent — effective Oct. 1, 1984.

"IT IS OUR belief that the split system (Son of Supersewer) was designed and advocated by the DNR," Breen said. "We believe we did everything we were required to do."

Wayne County obtained a temporary restraining order against the DNR Monday in circuit court. That order, signed by Judge Sharon Finch, prohibits the DNR from forwarding Son of Supersewer grant money to other communities as long as the county files in federal court by Friday.

Wayne County is the grant applicant for the project, and the DNR serves as the EPA's agent for setting priorities and certifying projects for funding in Michigan.

Finch's order came one day after DNR officials claimed all EPA grant money would be gone. DNR director of community assistance, Richard Hinshon, told the Observer last week all the money would be gone by Monday.

"THAT'S ESSENTIALLY what we told the judge," Hinshon said. "The money has been awarded. We are just in the processing stages now and holding until Friday because of the court order.

"For all practical purposes the money is gone, the feds have already awarded it. There is very little happening between now and Friday," he said.

Regardless of whether the money is gone, Breen intends to have a federal judge review the entire Son of Supersewer fiasco.

"To the best of our knowledge this is the only time a project has been kicked back by U.S. EPA, which has been certified by the DNR," Breen said.

"Our feeling is that it's something beyond our control. The DNR represents us to the EPA and we did everything we were required to do.

"The DNR did all they are suppose to do under EPA regulations," Breen said. "This should be decided on its merits rather than arbitrarily."

But EPA water director Charles Sut-

fin claims the decision wasn't arbitrary and that it wasn't the first time a DNR certified project was rejected.

"I couldn't quote a percentage to you but it is something that has happened in the past. In fact, it has happened recently," Sutfin said.

Insufficient planning, and failure to correct pollution problems, are the reasons for the EPA decision, he said.

SON OF Supersewer is suppose to increase sewerage capacity for the participant communities while correcting pollution problems with the existing Rouge Valley wastewater system.

Among the EPA's concerns are a project design which calls for dumping raw sewage into the Rouge River during peak wet weather flows and a lack of certification that Detroit's wastewater treatment plant can handle the increased sewage.

Law will help victims of Agent Orange

State Rep. Gerald H. Law, R-Plymouth, said his office will assist any veteran of the Vietnam War who would like to become a claimant in the Agent Orange settlement case.

Earlier this year, an out-of-court settlement was reached between a group of Vietnam veterans and companies that produced the defoliant used in the war.

The settlement created a $180 million trust fund to help Vietnam veterans and their families. Law represents the 36th District, which includes all of Plymouth and half of Canton.

An Agent Orange-Computer Center has been established to accept and process claims.

"Any veterans in my area who feel they have been exposed to Agent Orange should obtain a claim form from our office," Law said. Veterans can also contact the Michigan Veterans Trust Fund or the Agent Orange Computer Center. The address for the computer center is P.O. Box 905, Smithtown, NY 11787.

Although the claim form says veterans must file by Oct. 26, 1984, the deadline for filing has been extended to Jan. 1, 1985.

CEP Marching Band tops Clarkston field

For the second successive week, the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park (CEP) Marching Band won a marching band competition.

The band, directed by James Griffith, won the Michigan Competing Band Directors Association (MCBDA) competition held Saturday at Clarkston High School.

Besides taking the trophy for best overall band, the CEP Marching Band also won first place in its flight and captured six of eight individual honors.

"This is the best I've seen come out of the Centennial Educational Park," Griffith said Saturday night.

When the band returned to the CEP Saturday night, there was exciting news awaiting one member. Trombonist Chris Lore of Beacon Hills Drive, Plymouth, was notified of his acceptance into the McDonald's All-American High School Band.

McDonald's picks only 105 high school students from more than 5,000 nominations for this band.

THE 160-PLUS member band marched to such selections as the "Flintstones" and music from the Broadway show "Cats."

Individual awards won by the band included Best Color Guard, Best Winds, Best Percussion, and Best Visuals.

Among the bands competing at Clarkston were St. Clair Shores Lakeview, Durand, Flushing, Southgate, Utica Eisenhower, Westland John Glenn, Linden, Southfield, and Royal Oak Dondero.

Many CEP Band Boosters were on hand at Clarkston to root for their band.

This week, the band will prepare for the Flint Invitational on Saturday. The MCBDA State Competition will be held Saturday, Oct. 27, at the CEP Athletic Field next to Plymouth Canton High School.

The band will be at the CEP football stadium this week to perform at half-time for Canton High's homecoming.

Local radio station funding scholarship

A scholarship fund has been established by WSDP (88.1 FM), the student-operated radio station at the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park (CEP).

The WSDP Scholarship Fund was developed to assist deserving CEP broadcast graduates in their future pursuits.

"Our student staff volunteers, in most cases, 15-20 hours a week to WSDP without course credit or pay," said Station Manager Andrew Melin.

"It's time WSDP management reward those efforts which are above and beyond expectations."

THE FUND WILL generate revenue from tax-deductible donations for locally produced Public Service Announcements (PSAs) and station tours.

Federal Communications Commission (FCC) policy now permits non-commercial, educational stations to air promotional announcements on behalf of non-profit organizations in return for financial consideration.

"WSDP is not comfortable with mandatory fees for airing PSAs," said Melin. "A donation to support a scholarship fund could make it easier for organizations to contribute knowing how it could benefit a student's future."

A $5 contribution would be requested for airing a live announcer-read spot while a $10 donation would be asked for an expanded recorded spot.

WSDP conducts 15-20 tours per year of its facilities for area organizations.

A 50-cent contribution per individual per tour will be requested.

"This is not a profit-making program," said Melin. "It is a means for our community to reward a WSDP staff member for outstanding effort and achievement."

The scholarship would be determined by the WSDP Citizens Advisory Committee and can be awarded at the station's annual banquet in June.

Any organization which would like to use WSDP's public service time or tour its facilities is encouraged to call 451-6266 or write: WSDP-FM, 46181 Joy Road, Canton MI 48187.

WSDP EMPHASIZES community service and information, which primarily comes in PSA form.

The station's daily programming consists of at least 90 PSAs in either live, announcer-read or recorded form. WSDP has aired more than 200 different PSAs in the first six months of 1984 of which more than 70 directly concerned Plymouth-Canton community services, information or events.

FM 88 has produced some 20 local PSA campaigns recorded in WSDP's facilities at not cost to organizations.

The station feels it is imperative, explains Melin, to assist organizations in informing residents of community activities, and many times uses material received from groups not only for PSAs but for 2-3 minute news features which air as part of WSDP's daily 6 p.m. newscast.

Public Service Announcements of a local nature are broadcast as much as 5-6 times daily on WSDP for such events as the Canton Country Festival and Plymouth Fall Festival. The station often will broadcast live from community events.

A farewell to arms

Career ends for a caring cop

EVERY ONCE in a while you run across someone like Henry Berghoff. He's one of a rare and dying breed — people who really care about others.

Berghoff left the Plymouth Police Department this week because of health reasons. He is taking a medical retirement after some 32 years on the force.

It's not very often that a community really owes something to somebody, but Plymouth truly owes this man something for all that he has done.

Berghoff might have carried his badge and gun eight or 10 hours a day, but he was a public servant, around the clock. I don't think Berghoff knows what the words "off duty" mean.

BESIDES HIS police service, he gave the city five years as a volunteer firefighter. After that he started investigating fires with the Force Five arson team. He lives in the community and cares about it.

If Berghoff thought there was going to be trouble somewhere around town, it wasn't unusual for him to just "casually" be in the neighborhood — even though he was "off duty."

An example — a Saturday afternoon when Nazis were marching into Kellogg Park. Nobody scheduled Berghoff to work, and nobody asked him to keep an eye on the park.

As he puts it, "I just thought if there was trouble the guys would need some help."

Luckily he was there. Berghoff jumped between a Nazi and a resident a split-second before sparks started flying. Who knows what would have happened if Berghoff didn't keep the two from getting into it?

Why was he there?

For the same reason he takes the time to talk with senior citizens and warn them about con scams — "I've always felt you're here to serve the people."

AND WHAT a service he provided. Berghoff was the "cop's cop." He always gave people that additional minute, that extra attention to let you know he really cares about what he's doing.

"To be a good police officer you got to be a fella with compassion, a person who can listen to both sides," he says.

"You have to be a person who can keep a cool head and be fair."

Has Henry Berghoff been that type of cop?

"Anyone I was responsible for putting in jail, I think if they are honest with themselves, they would have to agree they deserve to be there and would have to agree that I was fair to them.

"I have always tried to do everything right. I have always tried to never lie to a prisoner, and I have never once hit a prisoner," he said.

"I very seldom argue with people; you got to be the one in command. You got to keep your cool."

I CAN vouch for Berghoff's fairness.

Covering the Plymouth police beat for the past three years I've had to depend on him for information.

He never seemed to judge people. For minor offenses he could always explain to you what happened and why somebody did it. Understanding radiated from him.

Other times you could sense that somehow, in some way, Berghoff was feeling the pain for victims.

Attorney Robert Delaney of Plymouth, who has known and worked with Berghoff for many years, said the lieutenant grew in understanding instead of becoming callous and hardened.

I'll never forget him telling me about senior citizens who fell prey to "gypsy" scams. First he told me how the scams worked and how the gypsies target older residents.

Then, what I didn't expect, was a lesson from Berghoff about how embarrassed many of the victims feel. He told me how their families would react if they found out. He told me about how important it is for older people to believe and feel they can take care of themselves.

How much easier it would have been for Berghoff to read off the victim's name without a word. But he cared.

DELANEY GAVE me a call back this week after talking to me about Berghoff.

"They should retire Henry's number," he said.

At first I chuckled with Delaney and then realized he was serious.

"Cops become just as attached to their numbers as athletes do," the attorney said.

It might be the first time it's done, but something along that line should be done for Berghoff — to show him the community he cares about can return the concern.

Tigers, Cubs great drama

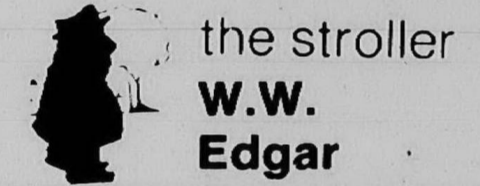

NOW THAT the Detroit Tigers have won their divisional title, local baseball fans could wish for nothing better than to have them meet the Chicago Cubs in baseball's World Series.

These two teams have met twice before in the series — in 1935 and 1945 — and few games could equal their battles for drama and real excitement.

One of the most memorable meetings came in the 1935 series when the championship was decided by a ninth inning "bloop" hit by Goose Goslin that allowed Mickey Cochrane to score the winning run. All hell broke loose when he crossed the plate. The celebration didn't stop until Goslin was honored with a place in the Michigan Sports Hall of Fame.

THEN IN 1945 when the teams met again, the Tigers missed a chance to end the Series in six games when Chuck Hostetler fell while rounding third base with what could have been the winning run in extra innings. However, the Bengals won the seventh game behind Hal Newhouse.

While Goslin's name will live on whenever World Series dramas are recalled, it was the gutsy pitching of little Tommy

the stroller
W.W. Edgar

Bridges that furnished the heartbeating drama in the final inning of the '35 classic. From his seat in the press box, The Stroller groaned with the others when Stan Hack opened the Cubs' ninth inning with a triple. It seemed all was lost — the score tied, a man on third and no one out. But Bridges was equal to the task, and Hack was still on third when the inning ended.

Then came the drama. After one was out, Cochrane singled and was on second base when Goslin came to bat. The "Goose" connected for his "bloop," and Cochrane sailed home with the winning run.

TEN YEARS later, when the Tigers and Cubs met again, there was drama aplenty, especially when Hostetler fell while rounding third — the flop of the year. There was so much excitement in 1945 that it wasn't until 10 at night before one of the games was officially written into the books.

It came when the same Stan Hack looped a single in front of Greenberg in left field. The ball danced crazily, and the runner on second base scored.

Immediately a protest was made, Greenberg claiming that the ball got away when it hit the wood cover of a water line in front of him and that he shouldn't be charged with an error. Not until 10 that night did the scorers change their minds, and the error was not given to Greenberg.

THERE WAS a bit of mystery all through the series, and it reached a peak when Virgil Trucks, who had beaten the Cubs in the second game, refused to take his turn in Chicago. He claimed the umpires were not giving him the corners. He was serious about it because "getting the corners" was his stock in trade.

So, you see, the Tigers-Cubs battles always furnished the unusual. And chances are they will do it again — if fate decrees that they meet in the World Series for the third time.

How much is stress worth?

THE $90,000 worker's comp award to the family of the late Blair Moody has sparked many conversations about that method of recompensing people for the loss of loved ones.

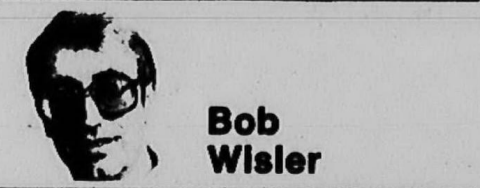

The most common question is, "How can I file for a worker's comp award?"

A startling assumption among scores of workers is that their jobs are more stressful than that of Michigan Supreme Court justice, which is what Moody was when he died two years ago.

Press reports of the award stated that a worker's comp administrative judge made the award to Moody's family on the basis that the fatal heart attack he suffered at home on Thanksgiving was prompted in large part by long hours and the stress of the job.

I confess I do not know all the ins and outs of the workers comp system, but I am already wondering how a judge's job can be more stressful than dozens of others, including that of a newspaper reporter, which was what Moody was before he got smart and became a lawyer.

STRESS IS being told to go into the area where residents of a particular community are rioting and starting fires to determine the exact nature of their anxiety so that you can race back to the newspaper office and write a detailed account before a deadline imposed by someone who thinks you can package news stories with the same mechanical efficiency used in packaging fertilizer.

Bob Wisler

Stress is being told to go knocking on doors after midnight in an inner-city neighborhood to learn some information about someone who is wanted desperately by the police and who supposedly was seen in the area. Stess is having someone tell you to get off the porch before you get blown away by a shotgun blast and then calling an editor who says, "Go right back, there; this newspaper can't be intimidated."

Judges, on the other hand, lead a fairly stress-free life, unless you're adventurous, like Soapy Williams, or unlucky, like James DelRio. Williams, the Supreme Court jurist, a few years ago drove to an employee's apartment on Lafayette Street in downtown Detroit some time before midnight to water her plants while she was out of town and was bopped on the head by a would-be mugger.

BUT HE learned his lesson and hasn't done anything similar since. It's not true that the popular definition of a conservative — a liberal who was mugged the night before — sprang from this incident.

DelRio, you may recall, was holding forth in Recorder's Court when a Detroit lawyer having marital problems decided to use the Detroit police department to kill himself. He drew a gun in court as a squadron of STRESS police officers (a special unit entitled Stop Street Crime — Enjoy Safe Streets) was testifying or waiting to testify. Several STRESS officers drew their Magnums and Brownings and let the lawyer have it. DelRio ran out of the courtroom with his black robes flapping. As one court employee recalled it, "He looked like a big black bird."

I have sympathy for the Moody family. He was one of the best, and most decent, jurists on the Wayne County Circuit Court bench, which is noted for the quality and dedication of its judges, and he was a respected Supreme Court jurist.

But how much stress can there be in a job where everyone calls you "your honor," where you can work wherever you want, where everyone stands up when you enter the room, where your word is, in effect, law?

According to former supreme court jurist John T. Lesinski, the stress he had while on the court was caused by trying to get along on a supreme court justice's salary (now $69,000 per year). Lesinski claimed a good lawyer two years out of law school earned as much as a supreme court justice.

It all goes to show that one man's idea of stress is another lawyer's idea of Nirvana.

Economic recovery: 'You gotta believe'

IN MY BUSINESS, it's often the "bad" that is the news. Any journalism student learns early that millions of persons who stop at a red light are not news. It's the one guy who runs a red light and kills a group of crossing school children who is news.

Thus, many stories in this newspaper are about crimes, disputes, strikes and deaths. "News" is the unusual and unexpected — unfortunately, that's often negative.

IN THE past four years, we've had more than our share of negative economic news. Those of us living in suburbs in southeastern Michigan have lived through a recession that has been the worst since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

We've seen friends and children move out of state to find jobs. We've seen entire departments at major universities decimated by budget cutbacks.

We've seen state government on the verge of bankruptcy. We've seen our cultural institutions like the Detroit Zoo and Detroit Institute of Arts curtail services.

Perhaps, the cruel joke of a few years ago summed it up best: "Will the last person out of Michigan turn off the lights?"

SOMEHOW WE have survived. We've weathered tough times. It is important to remind ourselves of some positive economic news.

These are a few tidbits I have picked up in the past few days.

- Domestic car sales in 1984 are up 20.3 percent compared to the same mid-September period in 1983.

- During the past three years, the number of unemployed persons in Michigan has dropped from 700,000 to 300,000. The unemployment rate has fallen from 16 percent to 10.9 percent.

- Last week, two major Detroit banks reduced their prime lending rate to 12.75 percent. The rate in early 1981 was 21 percent.

- In 1983, more new businesses were started in Michigan than in any year in history.

- During the past two years, state government reduced its debt from $800 million to $300 million. At the same time, the state has moved from the worst credit rating to the best credit rating on Wall Street.

- The state's record in retaining its graduates is improving. Nearly half of this year's engineering graduates found jobs in Michigan, compared to 39 percent in 1982.

- A recent study of business attitudes in Michigan by SRI International of Menlo Park, Calif., showed a "surge of optimism." It also indicated that the Blanchard administration's economic development policies are supported by business leaders.

WHY IS IT important to recall good economic news?

Because we must have confidence before we will have a full recovery. Like it or not, psychology plays an important part in economics.

Consumers must believe they will continue to have a paycheck before they will buy a television set or automobile. Businessmen must believe consumers will buy more of their products before they will expand their plants and hire more workers.

A few years ago, a baseball team that had struggled through years of mediocrity rallied to a championship behind the cry, "You gotta believe." We've had enough negative economic news during the past few years.

Now it's time to believe.

Senate OKs pruning voter lists

By Tim Richard
staff writer

A bill to erase the names of inactive persons from the registered voters rolls has cleared a state Senate committee over the objections of organized labor.

Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville, is author of Senate Bill 86, which was reported out of the Senate Local Government Committee, 4-0, and sent to the Senate floor. Geake credited Plymouth Township Clerk Esther Hulsing with the idea.

"At present, if a registered voters hasn't voted in four years, the clerk may place his or her name on the 'inactive' voter filed for six years," Geake's aide, Bill Margaritas, told the Senate panel. "Then the clerk sends a notice to the person, who has 30 days to ask for reinstatement."

"SEN. GEAKE'S bill says the bill may consider inactivity for five years as a sign that the person is no longer around."

"It has the effect of getting rid of the inactive file. This removes the two-tier system (two different files)," Margaritas testified.

Geake pointed out that the basic period of time that a person would remain registered would be extended from four years to five.

Lansing capitol update

Gene Thornton, lobbyist for the Michigan Townships Association, supported much of the bill. But he added that across the 50 states, a registration is cancelled after only two years, on average, if the person has been inactive.

(A person is considered "active" if he/she votes at any time during the period or signs a card asking to be kept on the active list.)

John Luston, representing the state AFL-CIO, said organized labor "opposes the whole concept of restricting access to the polling place. We should consider opening it up, not closing it down," the labor lobbyist said.

ANOTHER ISSUE — whether to allow persons to register to vote by mail — was resolved with an amendment to Geake's bill by Sen. Patrick McCollough, D-Dearborn.

The McCollough amendment would allow those drivers who are allowed to renew their drivers' licenses by mail to register to vote by mail also. About 20,000 drivers' licenses per year are renewed by mail, according to the secretary of state's office. The amendment passed 4-0.

But MTA's Thornton said townships in rural areas have problems with voter registrations accepted by the secretary of state. Examples:

• "A precinct line runs down County Road 612. When a registration form comes to the township clerk from the secretary of state, the clerk can't tell from the box number which side of the road the person lives on."

• A post office may serve several communities. The Lewiston post office serves four townships in three counties. A person with a Lewiston mailing address who registers to vote with the secretary of state may have his/her registration bounced around several clerks' offices until it lands in the correct community.

Geake agreed to the McCollough amendment in order to win Democratic support for his bill. But the third-term senator from Northville Township said he would oppose expanding the register-by-mail plan because "many of us think it would open the door to fraud."

Hoping for a new home is Mitzie, a mixed terrier poodle. The 5-year-old female is housebroken. Chester, the five-month-old male cat is litter trained. For information on these and other pets, contact the Michigan Humane Society's Kindness Center, 37255 Marquette, Westland (telephone 721-7300).

Job training network starts

Wayne County Private Industry Council (PIC) will operate a new Job Training Information and Referral System.

Five centers throughout the county will advise qualified residents of job opportunities available through occupational training, industry based training, on-the-job training and job placement assistance offered by the Federal Job Training Partnership Act (JPTA).

Area programs are at: Schoolcraft College' Career Planning and Placement Center, Room W-169, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia (591-6400, ext. 372); and Wayne County Cooperative Extension Service, 5454 Venoy, Wayne (721-6578).

Excluded from the network are Detroit and downriver communities which operate their own programs.

A job counselor will assist unemployed applicants with questions and applications. The five centers also will provide services to employers.

Referral assistance is also provided to laid-off auto workers.

Job seekers and employers are urged to call the centers between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A SPECIAL premiere benefit showing of the movie "Amadeus," the story of Mozart, is in the planning stage — a combined effort of the Plymouth Community Arts Council and the Plymouth Symphony League.

Tom Hulce of Plymouth has the lead role of Mozart in "Amadeus," and hopefully, will be able to schedule a trip home for the fundraiser. There'll be more about this as plans are completed.

FOR THOSE WHO have been asking, the book "Peanut Butter Syrup" now is available at Austin Vacuum and Sewing Machine Center, Big J's TV, Brian's Sweet Shop, Cloverdale Farms Dairy, Community Federal Credit Union, Healthways, Lorraine's Dolls and Doll Hospital, Peniman Delicatessen, Station 885, the Rainbow Shop, and Wiltse's Pharmacy. Books at $3 also may be bought at Little Professor on the Park and Plymouth Book World.

The illustrated story is about a little boy who believes a friendly monster is growing up in Plymouth. Proceeds from the sale of the book benefit New Morning School, a pre-kindergarten-through-eighth-grade, non-profit school in Plymouth Township. Books may be obtained by calling the school, 420-3331. Kids love "Peanut Butter Syrup" because they recognize the locale of the story.

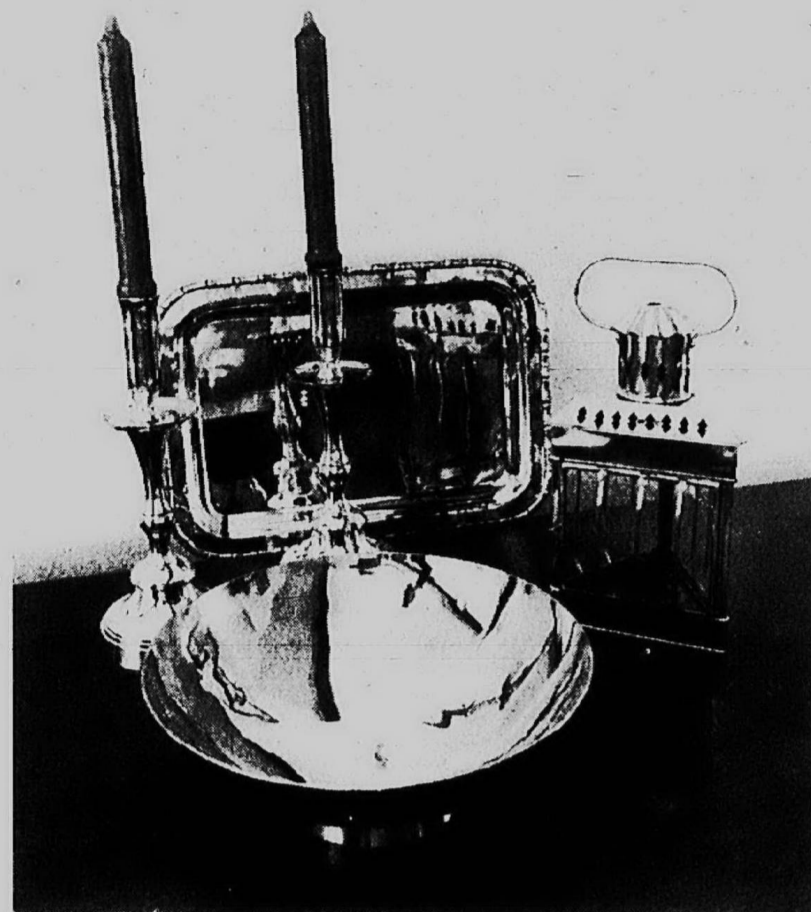

JUDITH ALSEITZ of Canton Township and her friend, Betty Otwell of Belleville, are putting their years as homemakers to good use. They are publishing a newsletter of recipes and household hints, "The Chatterbug."

The first edition came out in August with 14 pages of recipes, hints, a sewing corner, a pen pal corner, a memory corner, and even some poetry. The women lined up 100 subscribers before they started their project at $6 for six months or $10 for a full year.

For more information, write to Ladybug Books, 6920 Sheldon Road, Belleville, 48111.

FIRST UNITED Presbyterian Church of Plymouth will mark its 150th anniversary next year.

The old church at Main and Church streets will have a colorful springtime in 1985, thanks to the Acts group of the Women's Association. They were out last week planting 150 tulip bulbs — all yellow — for the celebration.

Fair is international event

The result is an opportunity to shop around the world — an international bazaar. There will be brasses from India, woodcarvings from Africa, baskets from South America.

The height chart, a cotton giraffe applied on a jute cloth hanging, was made in Bangladesh. Craftsmen in Bangladesh also made the jute angels, bells and animals that may be used as Christmas decorations or blind pulls.

Beautiful hand-crafted items from more than 40 developing countries will be offered for sale 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 13 and noon to 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 14. The homemade baked goods will be prepared by the Presbyterian women.

The Sales Exchange for Refugee Rehabilitation Program (SERRV) was established as a missions project to help native artisans sell their work. The proceeds go back to them and for some, the money they receive is their only means of support.

JUDY LEWIS, Dottie Magee and JoEllen Odom are co-chairing the fair. They selected the items for the fair from a catalog provided by SERRV.

LOCAL MATERIALS, straws and grasses, bamboo, whist, fibers, seeds, coral and bones are used by the craftsmen. Elephant grass and palm fibers are woven into placemats. The Shesham trivets, made of carved wood, were fashioned by East Indians in the northern village of Saharanpur.

The shesham is a shade tree that grows quickly. The coil baskets are made of bundled grass, wrapped with a split palm leaf.

Many of brasses are made in the "brass village," Marabad, in northern India. Every item is passed from one artisan to another so each can perform a particular step in the finishing process. The brasses are cast in sand molds, then polished and etched.

Artifacts from Central America, South America, the Middle East and Korea will be offered for sale at the international fair. Pat Rood is in charge of the bake sale, Karen Karum is doing decorations, and Jean Pritchard is assigning volunteers to work in the booths.

Baskets, bells and boxes are among the handcrafted items from developing countries offered at the fair, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 13 and 14.

They enter the hospice program to die. These patients are terminally ill and most will not live longer than two weeks.

But at St. Christopher's Hospice in London and in hospice care programs throughout the world, living and dying are part of the same process.

That was the picture painted by Dr. Michael Levy, one of the leading medical experts in the field of hospice care in the United States, when he spoke recently in Livonia under the auspices of Hospice Support Services, based in Westland.

Levy, chief of the Lung Cancer Section of Fox Chase Cancer Center in Pennsylvania, described the philosophy behind hospice care and shared his experience visiting St. Christopher's in London and Belmont Memorial Hospice in Montreal.

"ST. CHRISTOPHER'S is located in the middle of the city, with double-decker buses rumbling past patients' windows and a cricket club across the street," he said.

When the ambulance pulls up with a new patient, the head nurse, whom they call "Matron," enters the ambulance and greets the person by his or her first name.

The actual bed the patient will use is wheeled from the oversized elevator shaft to the ambulance — "an old-fashioned way to show the continuity of life," Levy said.

"HOSPICE IS a medically supervised interdisciplinary team comprised of physicians, nurses, social workers, psychologists and families who talk about the patient on a regular basis to develop a joint care plan."

Family is a key component to the hospice philosophy.

"It isn't simply the patient and his problems and goals. It's the family too."

"What happens in a hospital when it's time to bathe Aunt Sally? Everybody is shooed out of the room. So how can you ever expect them to take Aunt Sally home if you don't hand them a sponge?"

In a hospice, Levy said, the treatment is palliative instead of curative. The interdisciplinary team comforts the patient with medication and learns to control the symptoms so that the patient can die in peace.

BUT AS SUCCESSFUL as the program has been in England, the idea is still new in the United States. The biggest critics of hospice care say the hospice program is a form of euthanasia because it does not focus on curing the terminally ill.

Yule greetings help charities

They arrive each December, as expected as the cold weather and snow, but much more welcomed. Greeting card season is almost upon us again.

As in the past, the Observer & Eccentric will publish pictures of greeting cards being sold by non-profit organizations during the Christmas season.

Non-profit organizations are invited to submit three copies of their cards to the Observer & Eccentric by Thursday, Oct. 11. The newspaper reserves the right to choose one sample for publication if more than one style of card is submitted.

Every effort will be made to publish all cards received by Oct. 11 on Thursday, Oct. 25. On that day, extra space will be devoted to the charity cards as a public service effort on behalf of the organizations and for residents who wish to purchase the cards. Cards received later will be published throughout the holiday season as space permits.

INFORMATION pertaining to ordering the cards will appear with photos in the Suburban Life section of the newspapers. As in the past, organizations are requested to include such information as the cost per box, cost for larger quantities, per for imprinting the cards with the senders' names and deadline for ordering imprinting. Please include such information as the location at which prospective buyers can purchase the cards or a phone number which they can call.

In addition to the published listing, display books of charity cards will be available for public viewing in the Observer & Eccentric offices at 1225 Bowers, Birmingham and 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia beginning Monday, Oct. 29.

Cards should be sent to Louise Okrutsky, Observer & Eccentric, P. O. Box 978, Rochester, 48063.

Everyone contributes to auction's success

Since everybody else has had a chance, I cannot let the occasion get away without a small but very sincere thank you to a very special lady. She would insist that she is no different than anybody else, and basically she is correct. However, some people — some very special people — see things and can separate the good, the bad and the needed.

That's the special part — the needs in the world. Some people see things that aren't there but should be, and then try to fill those needs. We must never forget the many wonderful people who serve on this committee and that, those who can't say "NO" and always are there when you need them. Heaven knows we can't do without them because these people keep the whole system running, doing what needs to be done.

But the person I am speaking of is a special breed. Each community is allocated only a few of these special types.

They keep the can't-say-no types inspired and in awe of all they do and the spirit in which they do it. Perhaps that is what causes the can't-say-no types to begin with — just the wish to be as cheerful, willing, generous, selfless, or just as all round good-natured as that special breed.

THE PERSON of whom I speak today is, of course, Flossie Tonda.

I feel it appropriate that this column honor one of Canton's own — a leader in the community, a kind spirit, a fighter for our kids, one who never believed in the so-called gap between our communities.

Perhaps she couldn't work miracles on the school board, but she did make you feel that you did have a right to some say in your child's education.

One of the most frustrating parts of parenthood is the feeling of helplessness when dealing with the "system." But you could call Flossie, and even when she was unable to make your dreams come true, she did sympathize with you. She understood your frustration, she seemed to feel your frustration, and she managed to be a buffer between you and the system.

Canton chatter

Sandy Preblich

As for real miracles, as I said, maybe she couldn't work miracles. You'll never prove that to those people who ran head-on into hard times and couldn't dig out. For there was our Community Clothing Bank, and the Guardian Angel protecting it. Flossie, don't think for a moment we didn't notice.

NOW I TURN to another thank you, which Flossie and I discussed a couple of years ago. That's Tony, her husband, and daughters, Tini and Toni. Nothing, absolutely none of the wonderful things that Flossie has done for us, could have been done or would have been done without her family.

I'm not saying they polished and shined the house daily, and pushed her out the door for her many obligations. But you can be sure that without their "OK," or at the very least, tolerance, none of this could be possible, for anyone.

All too often when the awards ceremonies are over, there, sitting beside the recipient is the backbone and support — those who have sacrificed much care and attention that would have otherwise been given to them, and never a word of thanks is given to this heroic support team.

So to the "Tonda Family" and all the wonderful families waiting for dinner

THANK YOU.
Flossie, I know you're not through with us, and that this community can always count on that special smile from that special spirit. You may be through with the Board, but that's not to say you will be "bored."

I HOPE YOU didn't miss the Canton 150 Auction last weekend, but if you did, let me tell you it was a success!

Especially when you consider it was our first, and was done with only four months and a basic staff of three hard-working souls. Closer to the end, they had more help and everybody learned a lot, but they accomplished even more. At the helm Suzanne Skubick, program director for Omnicom, with Tracy Wilson and Cathy Handyside, took on this enormous task and pulled it off. I'll never know how (the planning alone was a tremendous task), but Friday rolled around and there it was — the impossible had been done.

I haven't the space to mention everyone, however, I think we owe a big thanks to those celebrities who showed up in support of our cause to benefit historical, educational and recreational activities.

So let's begin with John Fuller, a producer from Channel 7 — what a beautiful voice and a very patient and kind disposition. Tom Dean from WCLS radio. Another beautiful voice, and a walking wounded, Tom came in with six brand new stitches in his hand, and as the night grew older the stitches grew redder and Tom had to leave. We wish him well and thank him for his valiant effort — injured and in pain, what a trooper!

To the rescue, none other than Tim Skubick of Channel 2 and radio fame as well as Lansing P.B.S. What a fantastic job! Tim wasn't scheduled for this, but jumped in to help us — not just for one night, but for two. He turned out to be fantastic and really kept the auction moving. Tim, as always, what more could we ask, you're great!

Susan Paul from the Detroit News — well Sue, you said you've never done anything like this before. I hope you won't say you'll never do it again. Actually, after your car broke down on the expressway I thought that it was.

BUT TALK about how the show must go on, there you were, and how can we ever thank you?

Then the big guys came in, completely out of their element, but ready to help out all they could — none other than Hockey Hall of Famer and former Red Wing Bill Gatsby along with another Red Wing (Larry Johnson) kidding with the crowd as he threatened a "body check" if you didn't call in.

Last, but not least, Johnny Wilson — a former Red Wing player and coach — who was really getting into it before the time was up. That's the spirit guys.

Other "big names" doing their part for Canton were Dave Gilbert from Channel 7. You'll never recognize him — he's the gorgeous blond (even more so in person). Not to be out-shone over on the big board, we had Channel 2 weekend weatherman Ted Textor calling on our community to do its part for the Sesquicentennial.

Levy describes philosophy of hospice

By the time a patient enters the program, he knows he doesn't have long to live. Psychologically, he is ready to die, Levy said.

"MY FAVORITE patient at St. Christopher's was a man by the name of Blake Butler. We didn't know anything about him when he arrived. Where was his family?"

"We learned that he was a Shakespearean actor and that his family were the various marvelous actors and actresses who came to visit him. He had already said his goodbyes and was quite ready to die, thank you."

This is a critical concept to hospice: Patients are allowed to die on their own terms.

ANOTHER PATIENT Levy met liked to have breakfast with his daughter. It was something they always did together. But she couldn't care for him at home, and he was placed in a hospice.

The workers and nurses arranged it so that they could dine every morning together at his bedside before the daughter went off to work.

This country does not have a facility exactly like St. Christopher's. The focus here is on the combination of in-patient facilities and home care.

The purpose of the seminar is to educate the public, Levy said.

"What people have to realize is that hospice is a program, not a place. It isn't just bricks and mortar."

"IF YOU don't have clergy on the staff, you don't have hospice. If you don't have clergy, social workers and nurses, you don't have hospice."

"We treat the total patient — emotionally, spiritually and physically."

Through the years, a lot has been learned about controlling pain in a safe way, Levy said.

"We now know that morphine works as well as heroin without causing addiction. By studying the patient, we know the right dosage to give so that his or her last hour is not filled with pain."

THE HOSPICE movement began in the Middle Ages, Levy said, when inns provided people with a clean place to die.

In modern times, England is the leader in hospice care. A Britain, Cecily Saunders, began the program while working at St. Joseph's in London. She saw how the indigent and dying were ignored in hospitals and how much pain they suffered.

She was told that to change the system in England, she would have to be a physician. So she went to medical school.

WHEN SHE got of school, she set up St. Christopher's and is still talking to the patients there today.

"She is an amazing woman. With all the awards she's been given, she still gets in there and talks to the patients. That's what hospice is all about."

That's what Levy wants to see grow in this country because of the dignity it gives the dying patient.

"Patients have to know about it to ask their physicians about home care with their family. Physicians need to know more about it to set up the right program of care."

"The key to this is education. Nobody presumes that we want to set up a group of specialists to take care of the dying."

"I don't want that to happen. I want everyone to learn how to do it better."

LASER BEAM FOOT SURGERY

Podiatry is among the newest medical fields to incorporate the use of lasers as surgical instruments. Dr. David R. Basch, D.P.M., was among the first podiatrists in the state of Michigan to incorporate Laser Beam Foot Surgery in an OFFICE BASED SETTING.

Laser Applications
Among the foot problems that can be effectively treated with Lasers are:

- INGROWN TOENAILS: Laser vaporizes nail growth centers preventing recurrences.
- WARTS & GROWTHS: The Laser beam vaporizes the growth instead of cutting thus giving relief and helping to prevent recurrences.
- FUNGUS NAILS: Destroys fungus while sterilizing tissue. With Laser surgery danger of infection and scarring is minimized and healing time is reduced. For further information As To How Laser Surgery Can Help You.

Duchennes mark 50th anniversary

Helen and Emmanuel Duchenne celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary today.

They have six children: Beverly Myers and Denise Fodor of Redford, Suzanne Dreyfus of California, Celeste Dunham, Marlene Blenman, and Roger Duchenne.

They also have 21 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

The family of Kenneth and Marian Reber of Livonia really covered everything when it came to celebrating the couple's 50th wedding anniversary recently. Each member of the family contributed a square to this special quilt.

Special quilt marks Reber anniversary

Kenneth and Marian Reber of Livonia got a special surprise for their 50th wedding anniversary recently.

Their family, including 10 grandchildren, gave them a hand-sewn quilt. Each member of the family had a square on the quilt depicting some special memory he or she has of the Rebers.

The Rebers' daughter-in-law Jan put the quilt together.

The Rebers also were honored with a party with dinner and dancing given by their children and their spouses, Larry and Ruth Reber of Livonia, Don and Bonnie Salmon of Livonia, and Janet Reber of Pinckney.

Special guests were Kenneth Reber's sister Rose Kurtzel, who was maid of honor at their wedding, and his brother Karl Reber of North Carolina.

Henry Chiles of Livonia is one of 280 persons in the nation to receive the God and Service Award of the Boy Scouts of America.

He was honored for his community, church and Boy Scout service. He currently guides the Scouts of Troop 742, especially in hiking and camping. This fall, he will lead a Methodist work team to Haiti, the fourth team he had led and participated in since 1981. He is a member of St. Matthew's United Methodist Church in Livonia.

By our charity we shall be judged

"At the end of life we will not be judged by..." This phrase, from a statement by Mother Teresa, struck me because several persons I know are battling fatal diseases. I wonder how many think about what happens to us after we end this life. My own observation is that few think or talk about this issue. Yet it is the purpose of religion to make the connection which has every-day meaning.

Mother Teresa says that she believes that we shall be judged not by our diplomas, our income or our achievements, but by our response to the poor and the dispossessed.

She believes it is not simply physical needs that we are called to alleviate. Mother Teresa finds that people are hungry, not for bread alone, but for love. They are naked not only for clotheings, but naked of human dignity and respect.

Scripture tells us that our encounter with that world beyond death will be moral perspectives

weighed not simply by our charity of giving money and things to others, but by giving dignity and acceptance to the least of those in this world.

Last week a man walked into a church asking for enough money to get himself by bus to a home where he could get something to eat. He was dirty, he did not smell pleasant and he lacked shoes. The minister turned away from his committee meeting and began to ask this man about his problems. The first thing he asked was, "Where are your shoes?" Mother Teresa would help us to see the soul of this man, to go beyond his physical needs to the dimensions of love, dignity and respect.

We hear a strange attitude in this land about the poor and the hungry. It's a "get tough" attitude, which is increasingly expressed about both criminals and the poor. The viewpoint which is common today is that we have been too easy on people with these problems. They should be made to face the consequences of their actions. Make them serve the full prison term, make them get a job; these are prevalent attitudes. Such attitudes usually objectify the less fortunate into problems, rather than persons. Such attitudes leave no room for love, dignity and respect.

Mother Teresa reminds us that in every human problem there is a spiritual dimension. We cannot argue with her when she says that people need love, dignity and equal acceptance. We cannot argue because we also know that who we are among the more fortunate also need love, dignity and equal acceptance.

Mother Teresa confronts us when she points out that the Scriptures say we shall be judged beyond this life on whether we have treated the less fortunate with love, dignity and acceptance. My hunch is that our own self-esteem is affected by how we treat others.

Our attempts at charity must take consideration of these deeper issues of the human soul — love, dignity and acceptance. We are fortunate to have people like Mother Teresa remind us of such dimensions.

Disability is bigger threat than death

business briefs

By Sid Mittra and Mari Kulikowski special writers

Part V DISABILITY INSURANCE

Permanent disability is three times as likely as death for people 25-45. Permanent disability is still more than twice as likely for people 45-55.

Total and permanent disability is also referred to as "living death."

Definition of Total Disability. Definitions vary from policy to policy. To be considered totally disabled on some policies, the insured must be unable to engage in any gainful occupation. A more liberal definition would require an inability of the insured to engage in his own occupation for a specified period of time: 5 years, 10 years, or to age 65. In selecting a disability policy, look for a policy with the most liberal definition possible.

Renewal Provisions. Disability policies use five types of renewability clauses: 1. Cancellable, 2. Optionally renewable, 3. Conditionally renewable, 4. Guaranteed renewable, and 5. Non-cancellable. Obviously, the last two are preferable to the first three.

Definition of "Accident" and "Sickness." The provision "accidentally bodily injury" is a more liberal provision in the insuring clause. The company honors claims as long as they result from any accidental injury. Sickness is defined as either "first contracted" or "first manifested." Under "first contracted," the company could deny liability if it could prove the insured had this condition, at the time he applied for the policy. "First manifested" is a much more liberal clause.

finances and you

Time Limit on Injury. Following a specified period of time, 90 or 180 days, the insurance company may treat a claim resulting from an "accident" as "sickness." If this is in a policy with a lifetime accident benefit and a two-year sickness benefit, the insurance carrier has greatly reduced its potential liability.

Casualty/property/health insurance

The Homeowner's Policy
The homeowner's policy comes in three forms: basic, broad and comprehensive. The basic policy (HO-1) is the least expensive.

It covers the holder against personal liability and damage or loss due to fire, lightning, windstorms or hail, explosion, riot or civil commotion, aircraft, vehicles, smoke, vandalism, theft and breakage of glass that is part of the building.

The broad policy (HO-2) includes the basic coverage, but adds damage from snow, sleet, and ice, and accidental discharges of the plumbing system.

Finally, the comprehensive policy (HO-5), the most expensive, includes most perils. In addition, a variant of HO-2 called HO-3 is also available. The latter insures against such unlikely risks as injury from climbing around the attic, stair of the exterior of the house and so on.

A homeowner's policy covers against the specified losses only where the insurance is for at least 80% of the replacement value of the house. Since replacement value and market value are not necessarily the same, it is important to determine periodically the replacement value of the house to ensure its full coverage.

Automobile Insurance

In buying auto insurance, the major concern should be to protect the family against others' claims arising from bodily injury or death and property damage caused by members of the family. When a family purchases a policy that includes liability, the insurance company promises to honor the claim of the aggrieved party up to the financial limits specified in the policy.

These limits are expressed as, say, 10/40; this means that the insurance company is liable for up to $10,000 for any one person injured, and up to $20,000 for all persons injured in the same accident. In addition, property damage liability should be purchased which would cover collision and comprehensive fire and theft.

Health Insurance

There are essentially two types (not including Medicare) of health insurance policies in existence today. The hospital-medical surgical coverage, known as the basic health insurance plan, pays for the hospital room, for doctors and surgeons, and for other services. The major medical policy coverage insures against serious accidents and illnesses.

It supplements protection for the basic plan. It also provides broader coverage than a basic plan, covering the cost of blood, drugs, and treatment for mental illness. Major medical plans generally come with a deductible and then pay a fixed percentage — usually 75 to 80% — of all further costs up to policy limits.

Personal Excess Liability Insurance

Personal excess liability insurance is advisable in addition to auto and homeowner's insurance. This so-called "umbrella" policy covers almost all liabilities where there is an excess over the maximum limitations of the standard homeowner's and automobile policies. In addition, such a policy provides coverage for liabilities not included in the standard policies (for example, it would include coverage of slander). Coverage for at least $1,000,000 is advisable.

Former stars make the grade in college

ASK JEFF COHEN if he thinks his collegiate football career was a waste. Ask Rich Hewlett the same thing.

Their answers may surprise you. "I'm quite satisfied with the way my career went," said Cohen. "I'm just glad I got the opportunity to play there," said Hewlett.

These were not two borderline athletes. Both Cohen and Hewlett were prep stars, among the best to come out of their respective schools.

HEWLETT WAS born to be an option quarterback. He was All-State at Plymouth Salem and was earmarked to take over for Rick Leach and operate University of Michigan's option offense.

You could try to list the essential ingredients of a football player, or you might just say Jeff Cohen. He had speed, adequate size and know-how. He played on a North Farmington team that stunned Birmingham Brother Rice in the 1978 state semifinals, a game Cohen still ranks as "one of the greatest feelings I had."

Both graduated in 1979 and headed to Ann Arbor. In the next five years (both were redshirted a year), they would start fewer than a dozen games for the Wolverines — combined.

DISAPPOINTMENTS? More in a lengthy line of high school stars who failed to make the athletic grade in college?

Neither Cohen nor Hewlett think so. They could have gone somewhere else initially, a smaller or less successful college, or they might have transferred to another school when it became apparent playing time would be scarce.

Jon English did. The former Brother Rice quarterback was touted as one of the best quarterbacks to ever toss a football in this state, but he ended up bouncing from Michigan State to Iowa State to a junior college in Pennsylvania to Tulane, all in search of a place to play.

Others have found happiness — wrapped nicely together with playing time and success — at smaller schools.

But Cohen and Hewlett stuck it out at Michigan, without any regrets.

"As far as self-satisfaction goes, I knew that if I could start (at U-M), I could start anywhere in the country," said Cohen.

STILL, IT was a five-year wait before Cohen felt assured he would start. And those hopes were dashed before the season began by a busted hand.

Hewlett was limited to a few starts at quarterback, one as a freshman in the season finale against Ohio State and two more his sophomore year, before he was replaced. He would never again start at quarterback for the Wolverines, and eventually would switch to defensive back.

"People back in Plymouth," Hewlett said, "they think 'He didn't start four years at quarterback, he must be unhappy.' That's not true. When things didn't work out (at quarterback), I was glad I got a chance to play somewhere else."

"People look at one criteria — how many minutes you play, which is a narrow way to look at it."

GO AHEAD and ask for a definition of success. The differences between those offered by fans and these players will be significant.

Fans cite games started, passes completed, yards gained, interceptions made, etc., etc.

And Cohen? "The most important thing was to get my degree. I was realistic enough to know my limitations."

"Football was important, sure. Let's face it. That's why I went to Michigan, to play football. That's why they gave me a scholarship. It took me a couple of years to realize the important thing was what I would be doing when I was through with football."

"But understand, you've got to be a great player to go to a tough program and stick with it for four years. No one who does that is a failure."

HEWLETT OFFERED similar perspective. "The whole experience itself is much more valuable than just playing, which really is just one small part of it."

But what about all the talk when they came out of high school? The dreams of being All-American and going on to play pro football?

"Once I got to Michigan, I never entertained thoughts of playing pro," said Hewlett. "I was much more concerned with what was at hand. I never really entertained thoughts like that, and I think that helped me the last couple of years. I knew they would be my last two years playing football."

Cohen contacted a few USFL teams and went to a free-agent mini camp for the Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League. That, Cohen acknowledges, "got it out of my system."

WITH BOYHOOD dreams quickly dispelled once at Michigan, with game time at a minimum, what did this pair of former prep all-stars gain from college football?

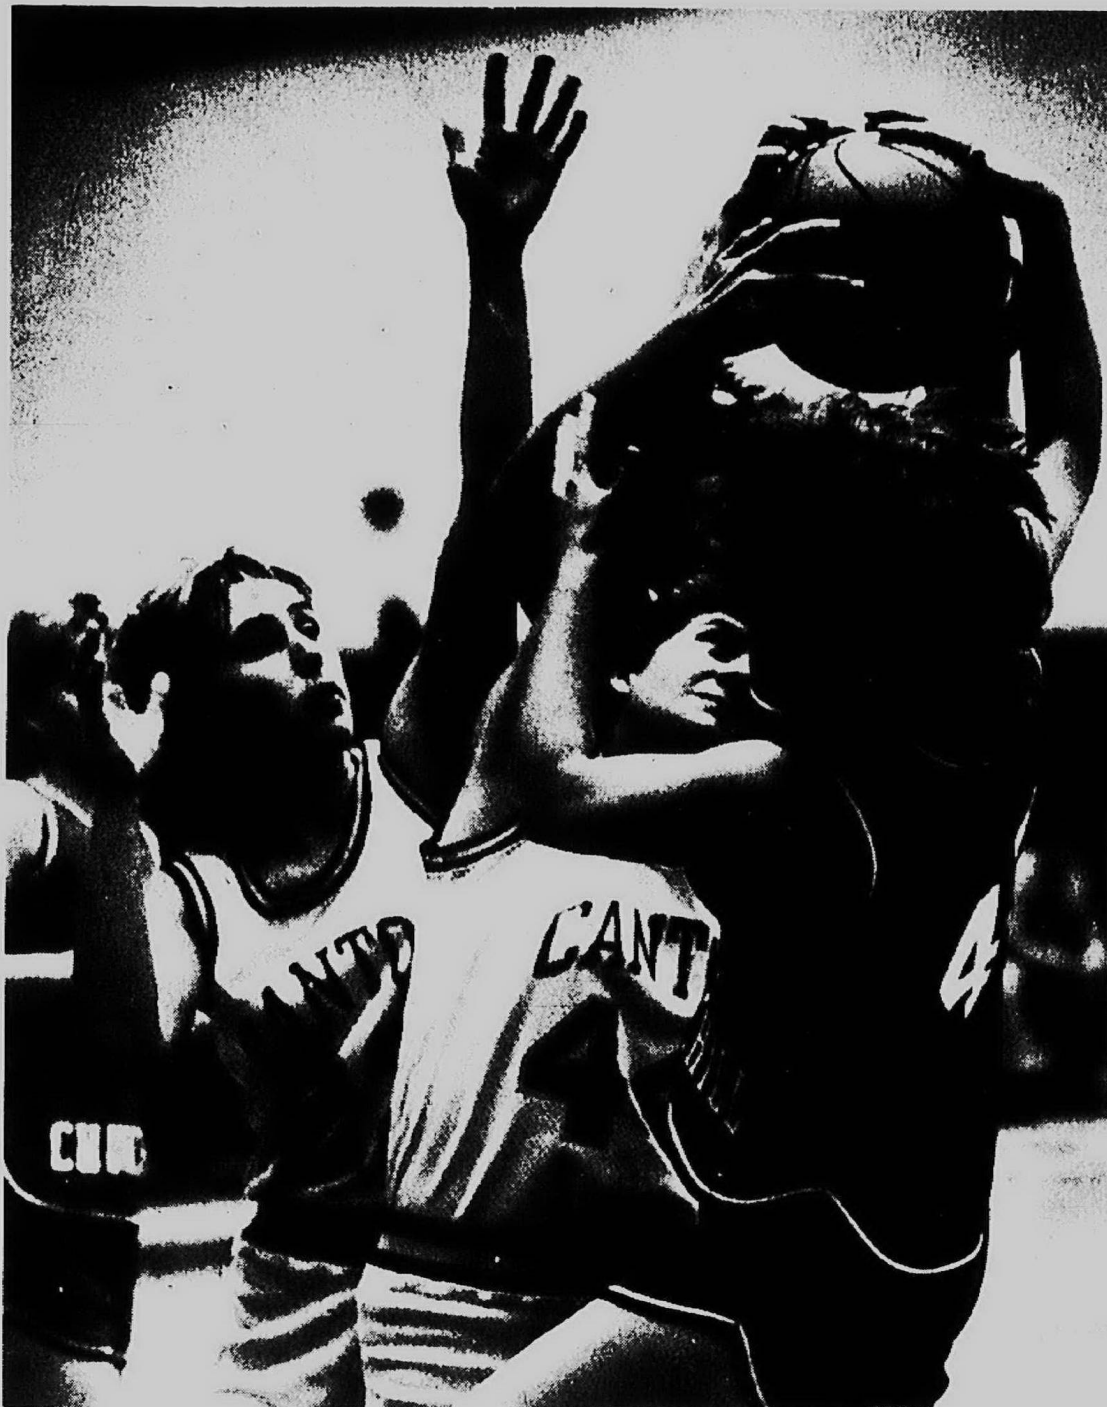

"It enters your mind," Cohen reflected, "that I could have gone to a smaller school or a different school on the same level and done better."

"But I wouldn't trade my experiences for anything."

For Hewlett, "the chance to play against the best was the reason I went to Michigan."

They each got their shot. And, no matter what the statistics might show, neither one will be counted as a flop or failure, because they endured and persevered.

And by the most important of standards — their own — they won.

Oh my!

Falcons stun Rocks; Chiefs rout Churchill

Let's talk about upsets for a minute. Farmington's girls basketball team, winners of just five games (5-15) a season ago, stunned Plymouth Salem 40-38 in overtime Tuesday on Mary Kay Orrico's 10-foot shot with four seconds left in a pivotal game for both teams.

It was Farmington's third straight win, giving the Falcons a 4-2 record in Western Lakes Activities Association (WLAA) league play. Salem suffered its first league loss, dropping to 5-1 and 6-2 overall.

"The kids are starting to play good basketball," Farmington coach Bruce Brown said. "It all came together tonight."

"THEY'RE CONFIDENT — they're starting to believe in themselves. Plymouth Salem is an awful good basketball team. It was a big win for us."

The game was close all the way. Salem jumped out to a 14-10 first quarter lead, but Farmington came back to take the lead, 19-18, at the break.

As usual, Alyse Fortune was the big gun for Farmington, tossing in 22 points.

"Alyse put on one heckuva show," Brown said. "They (her teammates) got the ball to her inside. When she was double-teamed, she just dumped the ball off."

But it was Orrico who came through when the Falcons really needed it. She scored all of Farmington's points in overtime, including the clutch game-winner. She finished with seven for the evening.

"WE SHOWED patience," Brown said. "We were just trying to work for a good shot. We wanted to get a shot with 10 seconds left so we had time for a rebound."

Obviously, the Falcon's didn't need it.

girls basketball

With Farmington trailing by a point with just seconds remaining in regulation, Fortune was fouled putting up the final shot. She missed the first free throw, then coolly sank the second to send the game into OT.

After Orrico connected on her first bucket in the extra period, the Rocks Fran Whittaker tied it, setting the stage for Orrico's game-winner.

Whittaker scored 15 points to lead the losers.

The win still gives Farmington an outside chance at the league title.

"I don't know how we'll do — we still have to play Salem again and Bentley," Brown said. "But we'll be more involved in the league race this year than in the past."

PLY. CANTON 48, LIV. CHURCHILL 28: Cheri Remer set the tone. She scored all nine of her points in the first quarter to put Canton up 11-3.

The Chiefs were never hedged.

"Remer was right on target," said Canton co-coach John Mulroy. "She was fanatic. Her shooting swung the tide. We also played super defense. We took them away from what they wanted to do."

Diana Knickerbocker picked up the pace the rest of the way for Canton, scoring 16 points to lead all scorers.

The Chiefs led Churchill 29-19 after three quarters, then put the Chargers away with a 19-9 final-quarter spurt.

Johnson fits bill with S. Florida

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Randy Johnson liked what he saw when he visited Florida Southern, an NCAA Division II school, following his junior year at Plymouth Salem.

Now, Florida Southern soccer coach Sam Snow likes what he sees in Johnson.

"I'd throw Randy in with three or four other freshman that were quite pleased with," said Snow. "They will provide the nucleus that we will be building upon."

DESPITE HIS freshman status, Johnson has already cracked the starting lineup at right wing. He's played in seven of eight games, starting four, and has scored one goal and has one assist.

"What he's added for us is some speed on the wing that we didn't have before," said Snow. "He's getting in some good crosses and has a good strong throw-in."

Florida Southern has struggled through its first eight games, winning two and losing six. Florida is a hotbed of soccer, with two state college teams among the best in the nation: Florida International, the 1982 Division II champions, and Tampa University, which lost to Seattle Pacific in last year's Division II finals.

people in sports

WHICH MAKES it difficult for Snow to recruit, particularly "when we have one partial scholarship versus 10 full-rides."

That makes Johnson a valuable commodity. "He's a very coachable young man," said Snow.

Still, like most freshman, Johnson has his problems.

"He's a bit inexperienced, but that's not unusual," said Snow. "He came to us very attack-oriented, and he's learning now to play both ways."

"He needs to improve his ability to tackle, but that's a technical thing he has to work on. He has the speed and determination to get back on defense."

Johnson, who poured in the goals for the Rocks, has also had trouble finding the net. "He's disappointed in himself, in that he's not getting as many goals as he did in high school," said Snow. "But he keeps working hard. They'll come."

On a team with six seniors, Snow is counting on Johnson to be the foundation of the future.

Canton 'pack' gives Chiefs narrow win

Parents will sometimes advise their children to avoid running with the pack. Not so cross country coaches.

Especially not Plymouth Canton cross country coach Jim Hayes after his team nipped Livonia Bentley 29-30 Tuesday.

"It was awful close," Hayes said. "We finished in a group. That really helped the scoring. The kids did a good job tonight."

Bentley grabbed the first two places, with Kevin Sari (17:41) and Bob Annett (17:42) forming a little pack of their own.

Canton's Bob Tellier was third (18:04). But, after Bentley's Scott Leslie (18:16), Canton took the next six spots.

Keith Rosol (18:30), Dave Barger (18:34), James Jerguens (18:35), Paul Trout (18:38), Ron Ziemba (18:46) and Adam Kocik (19:10) all came across in a pack for the Chiefs.

The win ups Canton's record to 2-3-1.

Some gotta win, some gotta lose

By Brad Emons and Chris McCosky staff writers

Some things became very clear after the fourth game of the prep football season.

We overestimated the strength of Plymouth Salem and Walled Lake Central, the teams which battled for the Lakes Division crown last year.

This season is different in that Livonia Bentley and Farmington, who meet Friday, along with Livonia Stevenson are fighting (?) for the chance to meet Western Division powerhouse Farmington Harrison in the Western Lakes crossover championship game on Oct. 26.

Meanwhile, the Northwest Suburban League race (NSL) finds unbeaten North Farmington (2-0) alone at the top with Livonia Franklin, Redford Union, Westland John Glenn and Garden City (all 1-1) lurking in the background.

North will get its stiffest test of the season Friday at home against Redford Union.

And how about the Catholic League's Central Division?

Redford Catholic Central, defending Class A state champ Birmingham Brother Rice and Warren DeLaSalle have the early jump after the first week of play.

And for the first time this season, Emons, the veteran prognosticator, assumed the top spot, going 10-1 to raise his season record to 36-12. McCosky, meanwhile, suffered through his worst week (7-4) to fall to 34-14.

LIV. BENTLEY at FARMINGTON (3 p.m. Friday): Both teams find themselves in unfamiliar roles — both are fighting for the Lakes Division crown. The teams appear evenly matched. Bentley's defense is stingy, while Farmington's offense is limited. But the Falcons may be stronger up front. Pick — McCosky likes Bentley, but Emons takes Farmington.

REDFORD UNION at N. FARMINGTON (3 p.m. Friday): Unbeaten North could really take a giant step toward another NSL championship with a victory. The game features two outstanding running backs — Marc Brown of North and Don Angel of RU. The key could be at quarterback, the hot hand wins between RU's Raffi Kostegian and North's Eric Engel. Pick — North is king for another week, both agree.

NORTHVILLE at FARM. HARRISON (3 p.m. Friday): Both teams are undefeated. The Mustangs could very well be the second best team in the entire Western Lakes Conference, but are they on the same level with Harrison? Northville showed some chinks in its armor last week, having to come from behind to beat Plymouth Canton. Pick — Could be the best team Harrison's played, but the prognosticators agree that Harrison rolls.

PLY. SALEM at LIV. STEVENSON (7:30 p.m. Friday): Salem (1-3) is in dire need of a victory, while Stevenson (3-1) hopes to stay hot on the trail of Farmington and Bentley in the Lakes Division race. The Spartans couldn't move on the ground again last week in a 10-6 win over Walled Lake Central. Salem could be changing quarterbacks. Pick — Emons and McCosky like Stevenson in a close one.

LIV. CHURCHILL at W.L. CENTRAL (7:30 p.m. Friday): Both teams are 1-3. Central doesn't have much of an offense, but Churchill does. This is first meeting ever between the two schools. Pick — Churchill wins, both predict.

W.L. WESTERN at PLY. CANTON (7:30 p.m. Friday): Canton's done everything but win the past three weeks. Like Canton, Western is 1-3 with its sole victory against lowly Redford Thurston.

Pick — Canton gets the monkey off its back, McCosky says. Emons disagrees.

GARDEN CITY at WESTLAND JOHN GLENN (7:30 p.m. Friday): Banged-up GC rebounded last week to beat Franklin, while Glenn held off RU in four OTs.

"Tony Boles injury is something that's behind him now," says Glenn coach Chuck Gordon. And, as Boles (the Rockets' leading rusher) goes, so goes Glenn.

Pick — Glenn fires its Rockets for the home crowd — a unanimous choice.

BISHOP BORGESS at HARPER WDS. NOTRE DAME (2:30 p.m. Saturday): The Spartans (3-1) played miserably Saturday night in a 19-0 loss to Catholic Central. Star running back Fred Owens went down with a sprained knee and is questionable against 1-3 Notre Dame.

Pick — Borgess still has enough, both say.

CLARENCEVILLE at M.C. LUTHERAN NORTH (1 p.m. Saturday): The Trojans (2-2) have demonstrated the ability to put points on the board. North, meanwhile, evened its record at 2-2 with a 21-7 win last week over Harper Woods.

Pick — Clarenceville prevails, both agree.

RED. THURSTON at LIV. FRANKLIN (1 p.m. Saturday): The Patriots remember last year's near-upset. This is not an even match. Junior Brad Norrid, the Patriots' halfback, is getting better by the week. That's bad news for winless Thurston.

Pick — No upset, Franklin gets two confident votes.

ST. AGATHA vs. ST. FLORIAN (2 p.m. Saturday at Hamtramck's Keyworth Stadium): The Aggies (2-2) have lost two in a row and so has St. Florian. Agatha, however, has dominated this series in recent years.

Pick — McCosky likes St. Florian in an upset, while Emons sticks with the Aggies.

CATHOLIC CENTRAL vs. BISHOP GALLAGHER (7:30 p.m. Saturday at Clarenceville): CC (3-1) may have come of age in an impressive 19-0 victory over Redford rival Bishop Borgess. Gallagher (2-2) is no slouch, losing in overtime last week to powerful Warren DeLaSalle. A good match-up.

Pick — CC gets the nod twice.

The freshman Lions lost a toughie to the Belleville Cougars, 8-7. But, the JV and varsity Lions won big.

The JV beat the Cougars 26-12 as quarterback Carl Wukie scored a touchdown and threw for two others. Brian Riggs, Derek Knapp, and John MacDermid added TDs. Jason Riggs picked off two Belleville passes.

The varsity Lions kept their unbeaten string alive taking a 24-6 win Sunday. Wayne Merrick scored two TDs, Brian Soeder and Ron Pratt scored one each. The varsity is now 4-0.

● EAGLES TUMBLE

The Plymouth-Canton American Eagles men's soccer team lost Sunday 8-1 to Detroit College of Business. Keith Sockow scored the Eagles' lone goal.

The Eagles are 1-2 in the Great Lakes Men's Soccer League.

Van Hoose red hot in Christian's defeat

The win raises Canton's record to 4-3 overall, 3-2 in the Western Lakes. Churchill falls to 2-4.

BETHESDA 55, PLY. CHRISTIAN 37: Plymouth Christian got 22 points from Debbie Van Hoose but it wasn't enough to offset powerful Bethesda (3-0).

The Eagles came from a 22-12 deficit at half to take a brief lead in the third quarter. But, they couldn't sustain the lead.

The Eagles are now 1-4 on the season.

Why isn't Canton winning?

WHAT'S WRONG with the Plymouth Canton football team?

Some cynical observers may instead wonder what is right with it.

Actually, despite its agonizing 1-3 record, there have been plenty of rights going for Canton.

In fact, the team should be 4-0. Offensively, the Chiefs are having one of their most productive seasons. They have scored 73 points in the first four games — last year's Chiefs scored 91 all season.

Quarterback David Knapp has shown his big-play capabilities via the run or pass. Sophomores Mike Johnson and Matt Flower have been effective in the backfield at times. The offensive and defensive lines have played better than most expected. Dave Liuzzo has kicked well.

The pieces are seemingly all there for the Chiefs, yet, they somehow are not coming together. It's puzzling.

THE CHIEFS began the season by beating an underrated Livonia Bentley team 14-9. Since the loss, Bentley has reeled off three straight wins. Since the win, Canton has gone in the opposite direction.

Week two, Canton lost 14-7 to rival Plymouth Salem. Canton was the dominating team again. Time after time, however, the Chiefs squandered scoring threats with penalties or turnovers.

Chris McCosky

Week three, Canton lost in three overtimes to Livonia Churchill, 37-31. The Chiefs led 14-0 at the half, 28-15 after three quarters. Yet, somehow the game got away.

Last week, Canton lost in similar fashion to Northville, 24-21. The Chiefs twice wasted 14-point leads.

"Frustrating, that's all I can say," said coach Rich Barr, now in his fifth year with the Chiefs and still looking for his first 500 season.

Frustrating indeed. Especially considering the Chiefs have played (more like outplayed) four of the better teams in the Western Lakes.

Why can't this team win football games?

"Mistakes," explained Barr. "We just have been making bad mistakes at bad times."

TAKE LAST week for example: Canton, leading 21-7 in the third quarter, the Chiefs drove to the Northville 8-yard line. A penalty brought it back to the 23, then the Chiefs fumbled. A Northville defender grabbed the ball in the air and took it back to the Chiefs' 20. Instead of a 28-7 game, it becomes 21-14.

But, Barr has managed to keep his composure. He is still able to joke about his situation.

"I'll tell you what," he said Monday, "this week we'll spot them 14 points. How's that? It's been close but no cigar so far this year, but, if we beat Walled Lake Western Friday, we'll be smoking in the locker room."

The jokes, the carefree demeanor, the calm approach Barr is taking, one suspects, is only exterior design.

Don't be fooled: Losing is taking its toll on Barr. You can see the pain in his eyes, hear it in his speech. His eyes glance downward, his voice trails away at the end of his sentences.

"I don't know, we miss a few tackles.

We play fairly well, we've done some good things, we just . . ." The rest of Barr's sentence is inaudible.

The smile he flashed so proudly before the season began is now forced. It looks more like a smirk.

BARR IS wearing his grief, the grief of 4½ years of losing football, on the inside.

It's not been easy for him. Two assistant coaches left him after last season. There was talk that the assistants felt Barr was incompetent and that he wouldn't listen to their suggestions. Barr has also heard similar criticism from the parents.

Now, with the team's confounding losses so far this year, the negative talk will resurface. People in the community, and in the media, will again be forced to question Barr's ability as a head coach.

Still, Barr goes about his job nonplussed.

"We have to get it together, there's no question. If we can stop beating ourselves we'll be OK," he said.

"We've got five games left. Realistically, we have a legitimate shot at winning four of the five," he added.

Sadly, even if Canton does win four of its next five games and finishes with a 5-4 record, some will still scoff saying the Chiefs should have been 8-1. It's the nature of the beast.

Canton quarterback Dave Knapp has shown his big-play skills.

Revved-up Rocks earn a tie with Bentley

Don't tell the Plymouth Salem soccer team that playing a tie game is like kissing your sister. The Rocks aren't likely to buy it.

They played their finest game of the season Tuesday night and earned a 2-2 tie with powerful Livonia Bentley.

"We just played a great game," said an ecstatic Salem coach Ken Johnson.

The Rocks took a 1-0 lead before the half on Mike Messana's goal with an assist from Dave Dameron.

Bentley came back with two quick goals in the second half. Just six minutes into the half, Dennis Patchett scored on a penalty kick. Four minutes later, Eric Sicluna made it 2-1.

One minute after that, however, Salem got the equalizer. Kevin Sultana scored on an assist from Dameron.

Dameron now has eight goals and eight assists for the Rocks.

Johnson also gave credit to sweeper John Geddes, who neutralized Bentley's top weapon, Patchett.

The tie leaves Salem at 7-2-1. Bentley is 7-2-2.

PLY. CANTON 4, FARM. HARRISON 1: Bryan Whiteley and Brad Neville led Canton to the win Tuesday.

Whiteley scored a pair of goals and added an assist on another. Neville scored a goal and also notched an assist.

Jay Pollard added the other Chief goal.

Harrison scored its only goal off a penalty kick. The Hawks didn't get off a shot on the Chief goal in the second half.

"We had a couple of breakdowns early," said Harrison coach Harry Swytun. "They scored at the three and six minute marks."

"We're starting to play like a team now. The score isn't really indicative of how well we played."

Canton coach Mike Morgan agreed. "The game was up and down. I'm not really surprised. They have some good talent. The Farmington soccer program is a good one," he said.

Harrison twice hit the goal post in the first half.

The win improves Canton's record to 7-2, the Chiefs are 6-1 in Western Lakes play. Harrison, meanwhile, falls to 2-8-1.

The Plymouth Canton-Plymouth Salem match originally scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 9 will be played this Saturday, Oct. 6 at 11 a.m.

LIV. STEVENSON 9, N. FARMINGTON 1: North played Stevenson close earlier in the year, but the Spartans flexed their might in this one.

Chris Wiegel scored three times and Jim Carney and John Gelmini twice.

Zac Biem scored the lone Raider goal.

North is 3-6-1 on the year, Stevenson 11-0.

B. SEAHOLM 6, FARMINGTON 0: Injuries continue to plague the Falcons. They now have four starters injured and out of the lineup. They are 2-8.

'Amateur bowling' topic addressed

The country's top bowling officials, the American Bowling Congress and the Women's International Association — are headed for what could be a long drawn out affair.

With the introduction of rich amateur tournaments around the country the question now is, "what is an amateur bowler?"

In many cases the bowlers draw money either from sponsors as employees or as prize money in various tournaments. In some countries abroad this is permitted by the Olympics Committee, but in the United States an amateur is not allowed to accept cash — even though they have contributed to the prize fund.

The bowlers claim they are bowling for their own money, so it could be a tough subject.

HIGH SCORES The pins keep flying around the area and they are producing high scores in such places as Wonderland Bowl where Mary Mohacs, the international singles champion, rolled games of 269, 207 and 256 for 730 during the past week. Meanwhile the men posted high counts too. Tom Highley paced the classic with 740 and Don Nikkila was next in line with 730.

BEL-AIRE Ron Enders, bowling in the senior house league, earned membership in the 700 club when he closed with a 289 for 773. Mike Flynn was next with 690. In the ladies classics Joyce West had 259, but was beaten for the pace-making role by Sandy Gressen who posted a 264.

WOODLAND LANES Another member was inducted into the 700 club when Mark Payne came through with a 739. In the Chevy League Rick Biegas was top man with 678 and in the Holiday Park league Grace Gamarino showed the way with a 220 in 576.

MERRI-BOWL Bill Nag paved the way in the

in the pocket by W.W. Edgar men's doubles with a 641, four pins more than Ann Troke posted to pace the ladies side.

WESTLAND BOWL Charles Brooks joined the winners circle when he posted a 689 series to pace the classic. Bob Pmiewski was right behind with 646. In the Monday men's league Steve Cotter won a close finish with a 631. He needed a 276 final to win, but gained only a four pin margin over Dan Plitcha, who had a 254 in 627.

Blanchard fights to stay on top

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

When Charlie Blanchard works out, he doesn't mess around. "Interesting" is the word he uses to describe some of his more strenuous workouts, though other words like "mind-boggling" might more accurately apply.

For example, when Blanchard, who owns the string of Total Runner stores in Southfield and the metropolitan area, wants a stiff workout, you know what he does? He bikes 100 miles at 20 miles an hour and follows immediately with a 20 mile run at under seven minutes a mile — all of which takes about eight hours.

When you're king of the hill, you either fight to stay there or you let people push you off. Blanchard, the king of the masters' division of the triathlon hill, is fighting hard.

legendary Ironman Triathlon, which, in grueling tropical heat, combines a 2.4-mile ocean swim, 112-mile bike ride and 26.2-mile run — the events coming in succession without a break.

Blanchard, 42, has been the leading master's competitor the last two years as well as the top finisher from Michigan, but this year he faces a particularly stiff and ironic challenge from Tom Warren, a newcomer to the masters' division.

THE CHALLENGE is stiff because Warren won the Ironman, seen every year on ABC-TV's Wide World of Sports, in 1979. The challenge is ironic because Warren was the focus of a Sports Illustrated story that year, which attracted Blanchard to the sport.

"I think it's going to take a time of 10 hours to win the division," said Blanchard, 42, who won it last year in 11:18 and the year before in 10:48. "Last year there were unearthly conditions, just ridiculous. If we get better conditions this year, I think 10 is doable. I'm in better shape than two years ago and I think I can squeeze 48 minutes off my time."

Blanchard got in that condition — he weighs 147 pounds, 33 fewer than he weighed as a high school football player in Ohio — by a training regimen that would make a Marine quit. During the peak training months of August and September, a routine week of training took up from 30-34 hours in workout time, encompassing 70 miles of running, 250-300 miles of biking, and 12,000-14,000 yards of swimming.

Several times, to prepare himself for the ordeal in Hawaii, Blanchard biked hard for 100 miles and then ran hard for 20 more.

"Those were interesting workouts," said Blanchard. "That's a workout I never would have imagined two years ago."

people in sports

He has two 100-mile courses, leaving from his home in Birmingham and taking back roads to Flint and back, or going from home out to Brighton and Howell and back.

HIS FITNESS isn't the only thing that has improved — better sponsorship, equipment and coaching to help shave some of those 48 minutes he's seeking.

For example, Continental Bike Shop of Hazel Park has furnished Blanchard with a state-of-the-art bike valued at $2,000 and weighing just 17 pounds, half that of the average 10 speed.

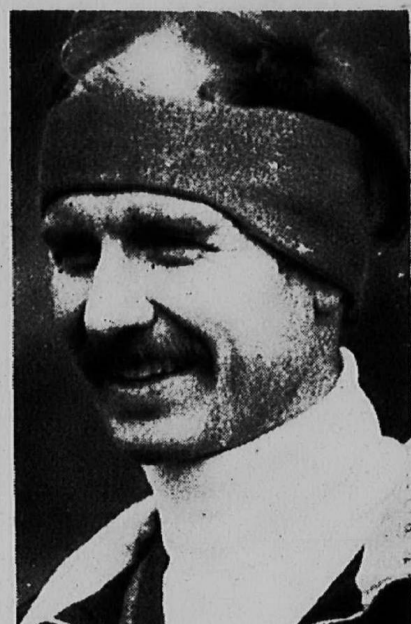

The coaching is from Mike Walden, an internationally respected Olympic development coach, while the sponsorship comes from Vic Tanny International.

But despite the best training, coaching and assistance, much of Blanchard's performance will be a function of the weather. Last year, 55 mph headwinds actually blew some bikers right to the ground, and every year surface temperatures on the black lava bike course approach 130 degrees until a noon-time sun.

"You have to force yourself to drink fluids, a quart every five or 10 miles when you're on your bike," said Blanchard. "It's like constantly pouring water into a sponge and it comes right out of the pores. If you stop perspiring, it's all over. It's the medical vehicle for you."

From the bike, you don't running shoes and head out again for a marathon run. "It's the only event where you start a marathon hoping you can recover midway through it," chuckled Blanchard. "And you can recover. You start feeling terrible and you muddle through at the beginning. Every year I run the second half of the marathon faster than I ran the first half."

Blanchard normally can relax a bit after the Ironman. Not this year. He is deeply involved with a Chicago firm to franchise his Total Runner stores. The filing work isn't completed in the various states, but Blanchard expects the first franchise to open early in 1985.

Charlie Blanchard triathlete

Dubois shines at U-D

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Ken Dubois wasted little time adjusting to the high intensity of college athletics.

Dubois graduated from Livonia Stevenson last June. He accepted a scholarship at University of Detroit, agreeing in effect to endure physical hardships for four years in exchange for four years of education in the school of engineering.

Dubois pictures the swap as strongly beneficial to him. And, if early returns are any barometer, U-D certainly will lodge no complaints.

The young cross country athlete has already clocked the fifth fastest time ever recorded by a Titan, 25:20, at the Olivet College Cross Country Invitational Sept. 15. Dubois placed second overall in that race, leading U-D to a first-place team finish.

TO FULLY understand Dubois' accomplishment, it should be noted that it was the Titan's first victory in a cross country invitational since 1977, and that Dubois set school meet records for placing (previous record was third, by Gary Servais in '80 and Paul DeFauw in '79) and time (previous best: Steve Crutchfield, 25:52, in 1981).

Remember, Dubois' experience at the college level is limited. It was only his second meet.

His first was at the Eastern Michigan University Open Sept. 8. "At Eastern, I was hoping to get into the top 10," said Dubois. He did; he finished third overall in 26:14, again establishing new U-D meet records for time and placing.

"I am (surprised)," Dubois admitted when questioned about his early successes. "It wasn't as tough as I thought it would be."

"But," he cautioned, "most of our meets haven't been against that good of competition."

COACH EARL CLARK'S landing of Dubois is a huge lift for the U-D program. Dubois sparked for three straight years at Stevenson. His senior season he managed a sixth-place finish in the Class A cross country state finals.

But saving a program is not why Dubois chose to attend U-D. His reasoning was not based on athletics as much as academics.

"I was impressed with their engineering program," he said. "And the coach was really nice. He presented it in a way that would allow me to practice without missing classes."

As an example, Dubois said, "I have a lab on Wednesday afternoons. So do a couple other guys on the team, so the coach lets us practice after the lab."

PRACTICE HAS never been a problem for Dubois. On the contrary, during his high school days, Dubois gained a reputation for overtraining. Many coaches felt he overworked, and that by season's end he was burned out.

"I don't think it was so much the training," Dubois said. "There weren't any runners in our practices to push me. I got to a certain point and, if I were to improve, I'd have to do two workouts a day. Here, practice is better because we have more competition."

Dubois and his U-D teammates run 65 miles per week, which Dubois said is "more than in high school." But there is another reason why he thinks his late-season fade won't be a problem at U-D.

"We only run and meet per week," he explained. "I think that had a lot to do with my fizzling out in high school. We ran so many meets."

Salem tankers lose

"No one got hurt." That's how Plymouth Salem swim coach Chuck Olson summed up his team's 106-66 loss to state power Dearborn Tuesday night.

Laura Shaffer won the 100-yard butterfly in 1:04.5 and Salem captured the 400 freestyle relay — Shaffer, Karen Dalpe, Tracy Meszaros and Kristal Taylor combined on a 3:55.4. But, that was about it.

Taylor did take a pair of seconds, 26.4 in the 50 free and 57.5 in the 100 free. Salem's record is now 3-2.

Like Mozart, Tom Hulce had devilish side

By Tom Panzenhagen
staff writer

WHEN TOM HULCE attended Plymouth schools, he was a bit of a devil, according to his mother.

"As a youngster, he was never in the mainstream. He was a long hair in high school," she said.

At 29, Hulce still is a "long hair" — or at least he's playing the part of one.

Hulce stars as Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart in "Amadeus," which opens at area movie theaters Friday. The film is directed by Oscar winner Milos Forman ("One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest") and written by Tony winner Peter Shaffer ("Equus").

"Tom could always be found with the more radical students," his mother said of Tom's days at Plymouth High School. "And this comes through in the role because Mozart was ahead of his time, and he was a bit of a devil."

JO HULCE, Tom's mother, knew her son was destined for a theatrical career from an early age.

"He was interested in theater almost immediately," she said. "In kindergarten or first grade they did 'Peter Pan,' and he helped with the whole production even at that point. In fact, his teacher said he was very interested in helping her direct."

Tom's first love was singing. Not coincidentally, his mother was a professional singer, appearing in operas and clubs in Chicago, as well as singing with a big band on radio broadcasts from New York City in the late 1940s.

After "Peter Pan" at Smith Elementary School, Tom spent summers at the Interlochen Arts Festival National Music Camp during his junior high school years. He also appeared with the Junior Light Opera Company out of Ann Arbor.

Following stints at Plymouth High School, the Interlochen Arts Academy and the North Carolina School of the Arts, Tom's first big break was as an understudy to British actor Peter Firth in the Broadway production of Shaffer's "Equus."

He later took over the role.

"Once I played the lead in 'Equus,' it was a calling card," Tom Hulce has said. "Directors no longer questioned whether I could act, but whether I was right for the part."

Subsequent parts that Tom was right for include productions of "Julius Caesar," "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Sea Gull," TV shows "St. Elsewhere" and "Centennial" and movies "September 30, 1955," "Those Lips, Those Eyes" and "National Lampoon's Animal House."

IN "ANIMAL HOUSE" he is one of the students rejected by popular fraternities at the start of the movie and later taken into the "Animal House" order, best characterized by its toga parties, food fights and Neanderthal personalities such as John Belushi's "Bluto."

His mother has mixed feelings about that role.

"I laughed a lot," she said, "but it's hard for me to see young people behave in that manner."

She's happier with other of Tom's accomplishments, though, and very pleased with "Amadeus," which she saw in New York City last month.

"It's excellent," she said unabashedly. "Regardless of whether people like it or not — because tastes vary — the product is very well done."

"Milos Forman is a perfectionist, (music director) Neville Marriner is a perfectionist; the photography (by Miroslav Ondricek) is beautiful," she said.

Hulce also was able to travel to Czechoslovakia last year to visit her son during filming of "Amadeus."

"Prague is a very exciting city, even though it's depressed, it is exciting in its antiquity," she said.

HULCE SAID she hasn't given much thought to the prospect of her son being on the verge of stardom.

"I'm realistic enough, and because I've been in the business long enough, it's hard for me to say that he is on the verge of stardom. He has much yet to do, and there's a lot involved in stardom," she said.

"He's not yet successful enough that he can choose what he'll do next. When he finishes a part, it's like starting over."

"There's nothing secure about that life," Hulce said.

His mother guesses that Tom will return to the theater.

"It was theater that was always his interest, and probably always will be his first love," she said. "There's money in movies, but you do theater for the love of it."

Tom is the youngest of four Hulce children.

"I feel as proud of the other children as I do of Tom," his mother said. "They're all very successful; Tom just has the visibility."

"And they're all very proud of Tom, too."

Tom Hulce of Plymouth stars as musical genius Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart in the movie version of the Broadway stage hit "Amadeus."

Hulce (left) as he appeared on Broadway in "Equus" in 1976, and Hulce today.

Hulce (boy on left) was in the cast of Gilbert & Sullivan's "Iolanthe" at Interlochen.

New theater gets it all together

Performances of the Rochester Hills Dinner Theatre production of the musical "I'm Getting My Act Together and Taking It on the Road" continue Fridays and Saturdays through Oct. 20 at the Roman Tavern, 50 W. Tienken in Avon Township. Cocktails are at 7 p.m., dinner at 7:45 and show at 8:15. For ticket information, call 651-9518.

By Cathie Breidenbach
special writer

A gutsy, professional production of "I'm Getting My Act Together and Taking It on the Road" marks the debut of the new Rochester Hills Dinner Theatre at the Roman Tavern.

The Broadway musical, book and lyrics by Gretchen Cryer and music by Nancy Ford, has foot-tapping tunes, wonderful harmonies and gritty comments about men and women in the modern world. In "Act" the strident bitterness of early feminism is distilled and comes out in spunky music and bittersweet yearning.

Heather, the lead, is a singer rehearsing a new act on her 39th birthday. With her band and back-up singers, she tells in song the tale of those 39 years living female.

It's poignant satire with catchy melodies and a good beat. One song about the pristine beauties who aspire to the title of Miss America brought extra chortles from the audience, thanks to the recent escapades of Vanessa Williams. As Heather and crew rehearse, Joe, her longtime manager and friend, butts in to rearrange the act and cut the feminist "garbage." Their exchanges are telling.

PEG HUMPHREY as Heather sings like a professional and portrays a thoroughly likeable Heather with woman-next-door appeal. In the spring of 1983, Nancy Dussault of TV fame played Heather in "I'm Getting My Act Together and Taking It on the Road" at the Birmingham Theatre. She belted her songs and exposed more of the anger and sharp edges of women's struggles.

In contrast, Peg Humphrey's Heather is earnest and almost mellow as she stands up for what she's learned in 39 years. Perhaps feminism has come of age and gotten wiser now that Gloria Steinem boasts 50 years living female.

Harry Carlson plays Joe with blustery competence. He's good but doesn't seem mature enough to be taken seriously as Heather's friend and confidant. It's a tricky part of casting to keep the sexes balanced. Joe is a confused man who can too easily come off as flaky when compared to Heather's strong togetherness.

The excellent band, made up of local high school and college students Rod Yeacker, Jonathan Brudzinski, Jim Kissli and John Melville, pulls off the music with style. So does Peggy Wickizer in leotard and glittery tights. She and Debbie Schlutow provide superb back-up harmonies.

Sue Warner directs "Act" with admirable attention to detail. Lighting and sound are top notch. Her husband, Jim, produced the show, and together they form Warner Theatre Productions. Both have long been active in Detroit-area theater.

Torch song

P.J. Benjamin (left) and Thelma Lee appear in a scene from Harvey Fierstein's Tony-Award-winning play "Torch Song Trilogy" through Sunday, Oct. 28, at the Fisher Theatre in Detroit. Evening performances are at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays-Sundays and matinees at 1 p.m. Saturdays-Sundays. Tickets are on sale at the Fisher Theatre box office and all Ticket World outlets.

Novelty song airs

In this political season, the newest candidate is "Otto-Matic the Computer for President." Singer/songwriter Joey Pullin of Livonia wrote the novelty song, which was recorded at Ambiance Recording Studio in Farmington Hills.

The song recommends a machine to handle all the problems of today's complex society, in the United States. Pullin's musical group, the Missiles, is featured on the song, a first-person campaign speech by Otto-Matic.

Pullin said, "It's sort of one of those one-time-shot novelty things." The song was released a few weeks ago and, in addition to airplay, it has been the subject of interviews he has done on TV new shows, he said.

"Man with the Golden Arm" (1956), 2:55 tonight on Ch. 7. Originally 119 minutes. TV time slot: 140 minutes.

Frank Sinatra gives the performance of his life as a drug addict determined to kick the habit in this powerful film by Otto Preminger, one of Hollywood's most overrated directors. Preminger certainly delivers the goods this time, though. Kim Novak, Eleanor Parker, Darren McGavin and Arnold Stang are superb in supporting roles; Elmer Bernstein composed the classic jazz score.

Rating: $3.50.

"Ziegfeld Follies" (1946), 12:30 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 2. Originally 110 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

"Ziegfeld Follies" isn't a movie so much as it is a revue, and a wonderful opportunity to witness vintage performances by Judy Garland, Lucille Ball, Gene Kelly, Fred Astaire, Cyd Charisse, Fanny Brice, Lena Horne, Red Skelton, Esther Williams, Edward Arnold, Hume Cronyn, Virginia O'Brien, Victor Moore and William Powell. If you don't have a video recorder, buy one because you'll want to tape this film and save it for a rainy day.

Rating: $3.50.

"Top Hat" (1935), 4:10 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 2. Originally 105 minutes. TV time slot: 110 minutes.

"Top Hat" may be Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers' best movie, and "Isn't This a Lovely Day to be Caught in the Rain?" from "Top Hat" one of their best numbers together. Throw in "Dancing Queen to Cheek," "Top Hat, White Tie and Tails" and other Irving Berlin songs, co-stars Edward Everett Horton, Eric Blore and Helen Broderick and here's another saver for a rainy, rainy day.

Rating: $3.50.

(Note: Completing Ch. 2's Saturday afternoon at the movies is another gem, "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," starring Gene Kelly and Frank Sinatra at 2:30 p.m.)

"On the Beach" (1959), 8 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 50. Originally 133 minutes. TV time slot: 150 minutes.

"On the Beach" has some unintentionally funny moments, such as when Fred Astaire participates in a suicidal car race, but it's a benchmark film that really deserves to be taken seriously. Stanley Kramer directed this film about nuclear destruction, and isn't it frightening to think how much closer we may be to such an end today. Gregory Peck, Ava Gardner, Anthony Perkins and Astaire co-star.

Rating: $3.

"I Died a Thousand Times" (1955), 1 Monday night on Ch. 50. Originally 109 minutes. TV time slot: 127 minutes.

You may want to tune in "I Died a Thousand Times," a pointless remake of the classic "High Sierra," for one reason only: Former Ch. 50 movie host Bill Kennedy plays a sheriff and has some meaty lines to deliver near the end of the film. Jack Palance, Shelley Winters and Lee Marvin co-star.

Rating: $1.

Few conductors are revered and respected by our audiences as much as Maestro Herbert Blomstedt. During the past couple of seasons he has appeared with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra for two or three weeks at a stretch.

Last week marked his first time here this season with two more weeks to follow. In addition, he is also scheduled for an unusual second stint here in mid-March.

This is rather fortunate for us since between his positions as music director of both the Dresden Staatskapelle and the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, his appearance here in the future is uncertain.

The program last Friday at Orchestra Hall and the one on Saturday at Ford Auditorium consisted of works by Haydn, Dvorak and the Swedish composer, Franz Berwald. The Symphony in C Major titled "Singuliere" by Berwald was performed to tie in with Swedish Heritage Week in Michigan.

Officials from the Swedish diplomatic corps were present for the Saturday concert. In addition to Blomstedt, who is American born of Swedish descent, one could feel a significant Swedish presence in Ford Auditorium.

THE OPENING work was the seldom performed Symphony No. 86 by Haydn and this was its first performance by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

The medium sized orchestra was possibly significantly larger than the one Haydn was accustomed to, but it conveyed the symphonic trend of the period toward a larger sound.

The minuet was the only movement that sounded pompous. The first was bubbly, paced somewhat faster than usual. Some of the fast violin runs were occasionally lost in the sounds of the winds and brasses, but most of the captivating effects carried through. The bouncy, final movement radiated with joy.

THE YOUNG Japanese violinist, Yuzuko Horigome, made her debut with the DSO with her performance of the Dvorak Violin Concerto. This performance reaffirmed the evidence that we are in for tough Japanese competition even outside the automotive industry. Fortunately, nobody is seriously suggesting import quotas on musical talent.

The pure, silvery tone quality persisted even through the highest notes. She became totally immersed with the music, which her rhythmic body movement attested to, but which was also evident in the musical expression.

In the slow movement, her bow drew every single drop of music from each note, without the degree of mental detachment one can find among many more experienced players.

Avigdor Zaromp

THE BERWALD Symphony was performed by the DSO only once before with another Swedish conductor, Sixten Ehrling. Few countries can compete with the German tradition of Beethoven and Brahms, and Sweden is no exception in that respect.

However, Berwald is emerging today as that country's most significant composer of the period (1796-1868). His "Singuliere" Symphony, judging by first listening, doesn't have the touch of a profound masterpiece, but it offers a fair share of attraction among selections that are far from the standard repertoire.

One of its unusual features is the engulfing of the scherzo as part of the slow movement. The final movement also uses quotations from earlier movements.

This performance concentrated on maximizing the effects of rich and balanced sound, while minimizing the musical limitations of the score. The overwhelming applause at the conclusion indicated that this work reached a responsive audience and that it served an extremely useful purpose on this occasion.

Play recreates actual hearing

In "Concerning Poor B.B.," the University of Detroit's Theatre Company, under David Regal's direction, recreates the true story of Bertolt Brecht's appearance before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Performances will be Fridays-Sundays through Oct. 21 at the Theatre on the Marygrove Campus in Detroit. Curtain times are 8 p.m. Fridays-Saturdays and 7 p.m. Sundays. For further information call 927-1130.

Film shown

In a one-night, first-run engagement, French director Francois Truffaut's 1983 comedy-mystery "Confidentially Yours" will be shown by Detroit Film Theatre at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Friday in the Detroit Institute of Arts main theater.

Comedy scheduled

Several area residents are in the cast of "Once in a Lifetime," comedy hit by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, opening Friday, Oct. 19, at the Bonstelle Theatre in Detroit.

They are Michael Mendelson of Farmington as George, Thomas O'Connor of Birmingham and Erit Gill of Southfield.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Fridays-Saturdays and 2 p.m. Sundays through Oct. 28.

Fair Lane landscape is magical

By Mary Klemic staff writer

If one were asked to associate a plant with Henry Ford, the answer probably would be the kind of plant that manufactures automobiles rather than the garden variety.

It could be a surprise that the grounds surrounding Fair Lane, Ford's home in Dearborn, are as famous to some as the elegant structure itself. Almost 70 years ago, when the auto pioneer wanted his home to be a private retreat where he could escape from daily pressures, he obtained the services of one of the most talented landscape artists of the time, Jens Jensen.

"(Jensen) was to landscape architecture what (Frank Lloyd) Wright was to architecture," said Donn Werling, director of the Henry Ford Estate.

THE 72-ACRE site, on the University of Michigan-Dearborn campus, will be the center of special attention next Tuesday, Oct. 9. A presentation of a National Endowment for the Arts study of Fair Lane's grounds and gardens will be held at the estate.

The public is invited to see the area and Jensen's original designs. On that day, an informal tour of the site will begin at 2:30 p.m., and a presentation will take place at 4 p.m. in the music room of Fair Lane. For more information, contact Marcy Jefferson at 593-5590.

Jensen designed parks for the urban citizen in the early 1900s, according to Werling. His work could be seen at the estates of many of the wealthiest people of the day. These included the Armours, who made millions in the meat-packing industry.

When Jensen worked on the Ford project, he was at the height of his powers. Werling said. His design at Ford's estate has been called "one of the finest works of landscape architecture in the United States."

THE FORD grounds, which were cornfields when Jensen began the project, are an example of Jensen's theory of "idealized nature." He planned to take full advantage of the Rouge River that wound through the property. The plan originally was to feature a golf course, but this was dropped when Edsel Ford got married.

Jensen brought in plants from area nurseries and local woods. The project cost $105,000 in 1915.

A visitor's first view of the estate is the best view. The design was focused on where a visitor would get out of his car in front of the estate. Stepping into the entryway, one would be drawn to look at a cluster of trees to his right that included an apparently disappearing lake.

"You can watch heads turn as they see this," Werling said. "It's one of the best examples of progressive realization. What is behind this little bend? You want to see it, experience it."

JENSEN DESIGNED the scene with all four seasons in mind. The result is that the sight is like a giant, slowly changing kaleidoscope.

In the winter, birch trees are reflected in the water. In the spring, the hawthorn trees come into view. Fall sets on fire the leaves of maple and sugar maple trees.

"One of the best color tours in southern Michigan is right here," Werling said.

Called "Path of the Setting Sun," the site was designed for an afternoon walk.

"It's really magical in June," Werling said. "The sun sets right behind here, in the lowest crotch of the trees, on the summer solstice, June 23. It's quite magical with the light playing off the branches of the hawthorn."

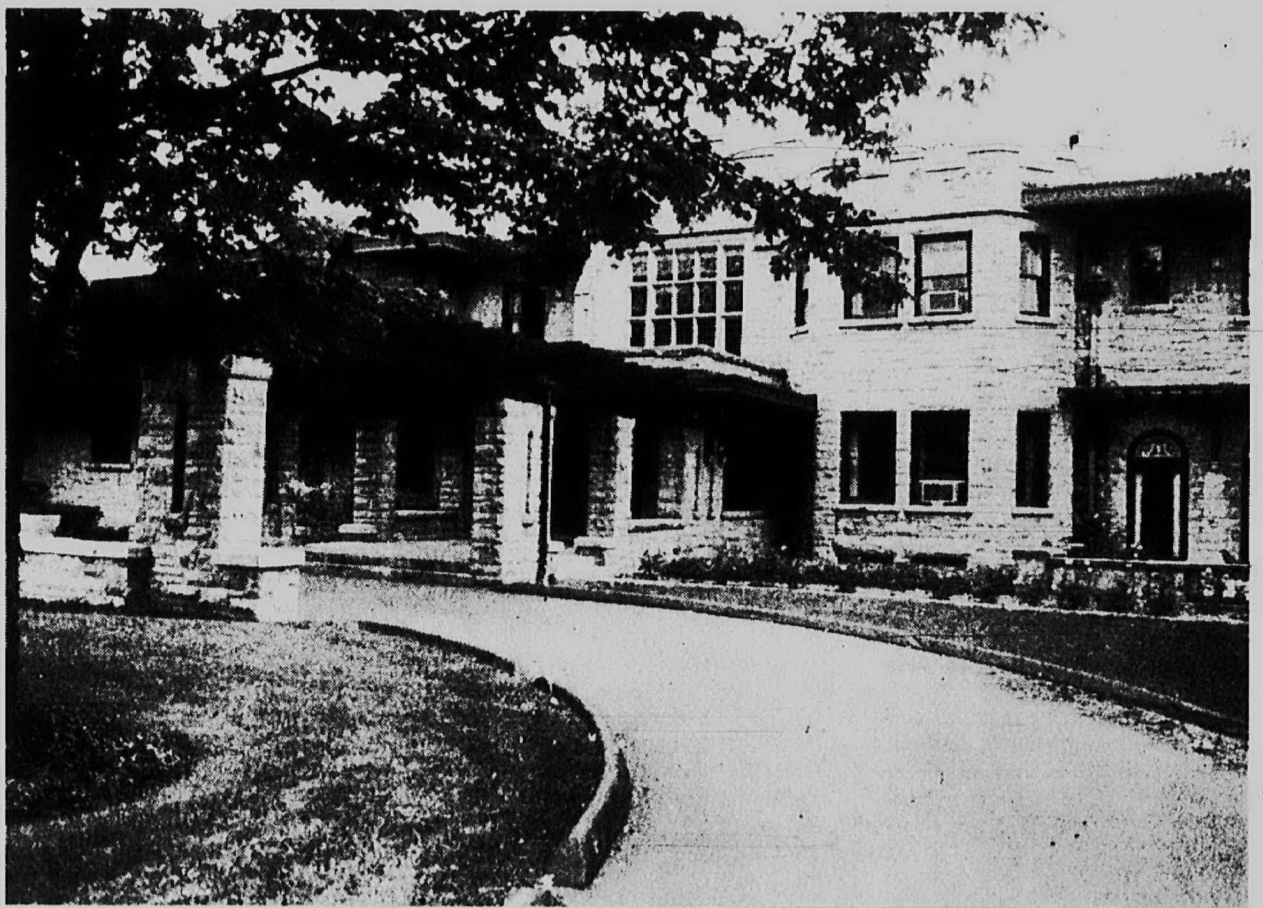

BEHIND THE estate, naturalist John Burroughs and Ford worked side by side laying stones at the area called "Burrough's Grotto," Werling said. This featured a steam-heated bird bath to keep the birds there all winter long.

An almost musical cascade of water, simulating a natural waterfall, dances on the Rouge River. It was made by a piece of rockwork under the water. The rockwork along the sides of the river is artfully arranged, with the mortar kept at the back so it doesn't show. Grapevines drop over some of the stones.

Near here is where boats were kept, used when Ford's wife Clara rode along the river.

Mrs. Ford's touch is seen in the rose garden, now much smaller than it once was. Twenty-five gardeners used to tend the 11,000 rose plants there.

LANDSCAPE DESIGN as an art form just is beginning to become recognized in the United States. People are using Jensen's ideas today, such as installing colorful flowers, earthwork grottoes and natural ponds instead of only grass.

"They are being worked into small backyards, even though Jensen never did anything smaller than 1 1/2 acres," Werling said.

Involved in the restoration of the area is replacing the capstones across the dam and adjacent to it. An observation deck will be installed in a section that had been eroded by water. Work on stone gates leading to the mansion is expected to be completed by next spring, as part of the university's 25th anniversary.

Also, a Livonia resident is working on Santa's Workshop at the site. Ford used to invite youngsters to visit it.

A STUDY on the feasibility of restoring the estate was begun because many elements of Jensen's planting plan were destroyed over the decades.

The planning study and treatment plan of the area were made possible by a conservation grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, and involves a team of consultants and experts in American landscape art. This team has been meeting at the estate to evaluate the land in terms of the significance of the artist's work, and to give their recommendations for restoration and future maintenance.

The entryway to Fair Lane looks toward a patio and the expansive side lawn that runs to the Rouge River.

Clean look helps sell your portfolio

This is another in a series of lessons on art and drawing by special columnist David Messing. He has taught for eight years and operates an art store, Art Store and More, 18774 Middlebelt, Livonia. Messing encourages questions and comments from readers. You may write him at his store or c/o Observer Newspapers, 23352 Farmington Road, Farmington MI 48024.

By David Messing special writer

I remember back years ago I went for an interview with a large company that needed a free lance artist. I left my Ford job at 3 p.m., flew home, showered, shaved and was at the interview at 4 p.m. on the button.

With my three-piece suit and black portfolio in hand I calmly walked about the lobby looking at all the company photos on the walls. I'm sure the receptionist had no idea that I was so nervous. I had to keep telling my heart to slow down, and swallowing was a conscious effort.

Finally, I was called in for the interview. A secretary brought in two cups of coffee and so far I was doing fine. So when the man said, "Well let's see what you have in there, son" I stooped down to open the portfolio.

Of course the zipper stuck and I could feel my face blushing red, which

made me hot, which made me more red, which made me sweat profusely.

TO EASE the situation my interviewer said, "Hey son, look here at these two photos on my desk. Can you believe they cost $400. Yep, I had to fly a photographer with a Polaroid just to snap two pictures and there isn't even a negative to make copies."

I really didn't hear a word he said, nor did I care about the photos as I was engaged in portfolio zipper warfare. Seconds before I completely dehydrated, my portfolio finally opened. With a sigh, I said, hoping to recover my coolness, "here sir, is an example of what I do."

I pulled out my best pen and ink drawing and at the same time knocked over the two cups of steaming coffee. "Cynthia," he bellowed as a defecated flood washed over the two precious photos and onto his suit pants. I grabbed the photos and ran into the men's room and rinsed them clean.

Returning with two curled-up photos in my hands I felt like I was seconds away from falling into a catatonic stupor.

FINALLY, AFTER the mop and dry crew left, we were back to square one. Both of us, out of breath just kind of looked at each other and he said "Well son, what else do you do?"

To make a long story short I got the job. No, it wasn't my grace or poise that landed me the job, it was that my portfolio had a commercial look to it, and that is what most businesses want to see.

What is a commercial look and how do you get it? Well that question would require many weeks of Artifacts to answer.

Basically I believe one of the most important requirements for the commercial look is cleanliness.

Now cleanliness doesn't mean the absence of fingerprints or peanut butter stains. Cleanliness is the quality of the line and the accuracy with which it is placed. It is impossible to enjoy success without the two. Clean inaccurate lines are as useless as accurate but sketchy lines.

SO TODAY let's talk about black and white artwork.

The best way to achieve a good black and white commercial look is to do your sketchy work on layout, or any white paper. When you are happy with your sketch, transfer to a clean white piece of hot press illustration board.

"Hot press" only means smooth and illustration board is now offered by Crescent in student grade, professional grade, No. 215 (extra white) and line kote (clay coated).

What I tell my students is after you transfer your drawing carefully ink with a technical pen on both sides of the transferred line. Then fill in between the lines with ink. This technique ensures a cleaner line. Many students try to accomplish varied widths of line by using a pen exactly the line width required. This is fine for ruling straight lines but in drawing if you slip or go off the line you wanted to follow you've had it.

Well-formed lines, zipatone and other techniques are used to give this picture a finished commercial look.

Always turn the board so that the curved line you intend to ink follows the natural curve of your hand. Often in commercial art, outlines are bolder than interior lines. Also large black areas naturally are dramatic and catch the eye of the viewers. Again I recommend you outline even large black areas first with a technical pen and then brush in your black ink.

ANOTHER TOOL for a clean commercial entry in your portfolio is zipatone screens. Even though Zipatone is a brand name, it has become a generic term as they were one of the first to offer screens to the market.

Screens are thin sheets of plastic with an adhesive on the back. They appear to be many shades of gray, but as you look closer you will see that screens are covered with many uniform dots. You buy them by percentage of black, size of dots or dots per line. The percentages best to use for recopy is 10 percent to 60 percent, as the higher percentages often copy as black.

Believe me a good commercial entry in your portfolio can land you a job even if you spill coffee on the man behind the desk. So next week we will talk more about building a commercial portfolio, the subjects to pick and the technique that look the best.
