Quinn calls it quits as school board trustee is resigning from the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education.

In a one-paragraph letter to the Board of Education, Quinn cited personal reasons for stepping down. She was absent from Monday night's workshop meeting and the letter of resignation was read by President Roland Thomas Jr.

Quinn's resignation is effective Monday, April 22.

ANY RESIDENT of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools interested in being appointed to fill the vacancy caused by Quinn's departure may apply in writing by April 30. The board plans to name a replacement by May 6.

In her letter. Quinn thanked the board for its help and for working with her during her tenure as a trustee. Elected to a four-year term, she was the top vote-getter in last June's elec-nual school election.

In an unexpected move, Nancy Quinn tion which unseated incumbent Glenn Schroeder. Freshman Trustee Les Walker also was elected last June. After that election, Tom Yack resigned for personal reasons and was replaced by Dean Swartzwelter who will run for election on this June's ballot.

Any resident with an interest in schools and a demonstrated capacity day, Friday and the weekend to get for leadership may write the Board of Education Secretary, 454 S. Harvey, Plymouth MI 48170 by April 30.

The persons eventually appointed will first be recommended by a board subcommittee and then voted upon by the full board at its May 6 meeting. The appointee will serve until June 1986.

THOMAS TOLD the Observer that the Wayne County Election Commission made a determination that there was not sufficient time to allow Quinn's successor to be elected at the June an-

Monday, April 8, is the deadline for residents to apply to have their names placed on the June ballot. "We just learned of the resignation Monday night," said Thomas on Tuesday. "The news will appear in the Crier Wednesday and in the Observer Thursday. That would give residents only Thursnominating petitions circulated and back to the board office by Monday.

'The Wayne County Election Commission decided that just was not sufficient time for potential candidates to respond and so the commission told us that it would not approve having the position filled by ballot in June."

If the school board does not appoint a successor by May 11 the appointment will be made by the Wayne County Intermediate School District board. Thomas, however, expects the local school board to agree on a choice. The school board has decided that it will not consider for appointment anyone who will be a candidate for the board in the June election. Anyone who has filed as a candidate then must withdraw by April 10 before the board will consider appointing them.

THAT POSITION is being taken by the board to avoid giving an "incumbent" status through the appointment process to a candidate in the June elec-

The trustees who have filed for election in June are David Artley of Canton and Swartzwelter of Plymouth. Artley has filed for a four-year term and Swartzwelter for a two-year term.

Other candidates to date are: Stephen Harper of Plymouth, a school trustee from 1979-83 who sought appointment to the Yack vacancy earlier this year; Richard Sumpter of Canton, who ran for the board last June; Renee Casillas of Canton, a school teacher, and Phyllis Cebula of Canton.

Members of the board not up for election in June are Thomas, Walker, Elaine Kirchgatter and E.J. McClen-

QUINN, a former school teacher, is married with two children - ages 15

A resident of Plymouth for almost 15 years, she earned her bachelor of science degree form Michigan State University and her elementary teaching certificate from Eastern Michigan University. She is certified to teach in grades K-12.

Before being elected to the board, Quinn served on the PTO Council, as a room mother, picture lady for Plymouth Community Arts Council (PCAC), as a PTO president, Brownie leader, Bible School teacher.

She was a member of the PCAC and of the American Association of Univeristy Women (AAUW) as well as being active in the Town Hall series.

White reflects on police career

By Gary M. Cates

Little did Ralph White know that a chance stop in 1968 on his way to Ypsilanti would one day lead to being Plymouth's top cop.

White, 41, is about to embark upon the third phase of his working life as he retires from the Plymouth Police Department. He leaves after 17 years of employment ranging from patrolman to chief.

He now wants to go into private industry - either human resource development or security But, even though law enforcement will be a "second choice." he enjoyed his work in Plymouth

"I happened through here on my way to Ypsilanti one day." White said during an interview Monday. "I put in an application I was just timely, they gave me a call shortly

At the time, White was a radio isotopist at Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak. He was the chief nuclear medicine technologist.

"At that time, I was at the top of my profession, earning top pay for No more badges or guns people in that field," he said. I always wanted to be a law officer, so I thought I would strike out and see what happened."

White trained as a radio isotopist during a stint in the Navy, which he joined right after high school. He left the Navy in 1966 and went to work in nuclear medicine at Wayne State University

"I was one of the first technicians ever to be certified," he said. "I took the test while I was in the Navy. In fact, I was part of the group which took the first test ever given for certification

White left Wayne State to become the chief nuclear medicine technologist at Botsford Hospital in Farmington Hills. From there he went to Beaumont Hospital.

OUT OF that chance stop in Plymouth, White started his career in law enforcement.

Plymouth's department had "about 14 or 15 officers" in 1968, and White was hired as a patrolman. "I loved it." he said of the job switch. "I had a lot of job satisfaction. I went home at night and felt good; I felt like I had helped someone out.

Besides driving a patrol car, officers back then also walked beats and did other work. We had a lot of street contact the calls for service were quite a bit less then now. In 1969 the department sent

White to the police academy. Once they were sure that I was going to stay with the department, they sent me to the academy. Back then they didn't require academy training to be hired. "In 1975-76 I was assigned to the detective bureau - it was the same year I made sergeant. As a detective you worked with crime scene investigation, complaint follow-up and case presentation to the courts,'

"I enjoyed the detective work better than patrol. After years of working as a patrolman, it was more challenging and you got to see the fruits of your labor

'As a detective, you see the convictions, you see the restitution and there's more chances for citizen contact - you work one-on-one with residents, and not always residents who have done something wrong."

In 1979 White was sent to the prestigious FBI academy in Virginia. There, he trained in police management.

JUST BEFORE Plymouth Township started contracting police service from Plymouth. White was promoted to lieutenant and moved back onto the road as a shift supervisor.

Shortly after being promoted, he was named administrative lieutenant and became the second-in-command under Chief Carl Berry.

"The supervisor work meant I got a different view of things. I was no longer out there addressing citizens and criminals but also the lower employees," he said.

term but due to a personal situation, I am unable to," Quinn told the Observer Tuesday. "It was a very hard decision I've been thinking about for a month or so. I regret this action but it is necessary for the future.

"In the end, it's my decision. I have to live with it. I appreciate the support I've received from all facets of the community.'

Quinn, the mother of two school-age children, is "extremely proud" of roles she has played in furthering the Alternative Education and Head Start programs, Begindergarten, and the revamping of high school graduation requirements. But she has some regrets.

"I really would have liked to have seen the final result of everyone working for better education for our kids," in which the administration, board and large have cooperated and worked to-other board members have been very helpful and cooperative with me," she added. "I really have no complaints." Asked about the timing of her announcement, Quinn said the proximity of June's school board election played no part in her decision.

"To tell you the truth, I hadn't even considered it. So many other things are going on in my life I was not paying that much attention to time," said Quinn, a Plymouth Township resident.

IT HAS gratified Quinn to see the board "go from a very authoritarian, rigid approach to a more flexible, cooperative approach, which was one of my goals.

"I would like to think I played a key she said. "I was pleased with the ways role in bringing that about. We have two other new board members this staff members and the community at year, and they were very helpful," she

Plymouth City Manager Henry Graper has presented a $4.42-million

Canton will co-sponsor, wants to rename event

By Gary M. Cates and Diane Gale staff writers

Promoters of the Mayflower Hotel Hot Air Balloon Festival received necessary approvals this week to hold the event at the Centennial Educational Park (CEP) at Joy and Canton Center roads.

At separate meetings, the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education and the Canton Township Board gave the goahead for moving the July 5-7 event to the CEP. In the past the event was held at the Plymouth Township Park at Ann Arbor Trail and McClumpha. "We are happy to be able to provide our facilities for the balloon festival and look forward to working with Canton Township and the festival promoters to make the event a success," Roland Thomas, school board president. Monday night.

CANTON TRUSTEES supported the move and directed Supervisor James Poole to continue negotiations. Trustees, however, stressed that Canton should have top billing in promotional Ads should say sponsored by Canton Township and Plymouth-Canton Community Schools in that order, said Trustee Robert Padget. 'If the township board is going to extend $10,000 for police and crowd control, if it does not promote Canton Township, it is a waste of money," said Trustee Stephen Larson

"In my mind, if the publicity doesn't prominently state that it's in Canton Township, people will think it's in Plymouth," Larson said.

Signs should be located on Ford Road advertising the festival, which will lure drivers past Canton businesses, said Trustee John Preniczky.

Canton Treasurer Gerald Brown objected to the township supporting a private company "I object to the use of the name Mayflower Hotel, and the fact that it is sponsored by Canton Township,' Brown said. "I'm in favor of community promotion, but we are talking about supporting a commercial company with the taxpayer's money.

POOLE EMPHASIZED that the festival could be a two-edged sword. He cited potential problems with congested parking in residential areas, traffic problems and crowd control. "This certainly could be a big promo-

Winter doesn't slow down sales

By W.W. Edgar staff writer

Old man winter's extended visit put of a crimp in the holiday business in the Plymouth community.

In an unofficial survey of the business areas, the proprietors, almost in chorus, said, "Business is good, but it could be better.'

The Midnight Madness campaign downtown didn't draw as many visitors as a year ago. But there were more gusty winds this year than in 1984 and the shop owners expect this will be balanced over the rest of the week.

IN MOST PLACES, especially the restaurants, the parking areas have been filled.

The fact some were more crowded than usual was seen as evidence that the people making their visit to the business houses would be back before the stores close Saturday night.

This was especially true at K mart and Bill Knapp's on Ann Arbor Road where parking spots were filled most of the day and into the evening

When told that retailers claimed the business was good or could be better, Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen said, "Many of our business places couldn't get any better. They are doing fine now and still have several days to go."

Bill Armbruster, owner of Armbruster's Bootery on Main Street, spoke for many when asked about business: "It's good. But it could be better. But no matter how good it is, business always can get bet-

The Mayflower Hotel, which usually is a barometer for activity in the city, reported that business was good all week and plans call for it to get better

THE MERCHANTS who were smiling were the greenhouse keepers and florists.

Mrs. Joseph Graye, owner of Graye's Greenhouse on Joy Road, said, "We can't complain. We worked hard and now we have been selling flowers and plants for the past three weeks. And the big days are yet to come. Explaining the hard work, Graye said that most customers want their flowers and plants by May, so the greenhouse keepers have to work hard and long to meet this demand. Bernie Morrison at Famous Men's Wear on Ann Arbor Trail had a new experience with the Midnight Madness on Monday evening. All day he was planning for a good gathering until midnight and he wasn't fooled.

So Old Man Winter's extended visit hasn't cramped activities in the Plymouth community.

A Palm Sunday celebration

EMBERS OF the First United Presbyterian Church of Plymouth celebrated Palm Sunday in a special way this week.

Dressed in costumes characteristic of 33 A.D., members re-enacted the events which marked Palm Sunday when Christemade his triumphant ride into Jerusalem.

Led by a donkey and rider, the congregation's procession marched from the church, at the corner of Church and Main, to The Gathering at Kellogg Park. Parishioners waved palm branches along the way, just as the Jews did when Christ made his way through the streets.

Once at The Gathering, a short service was held which included reading scriptures related to Palm Sunday and singing hymns.

Christ went to Jerusalem on Palm Sunday to celebrate the Passover with his disciples. Even as he entered the city and the Jewish nation proclaimed him as messiah, he knew their cries of "Hosanna" soon would be exchanged for shouts of "crucify Him."

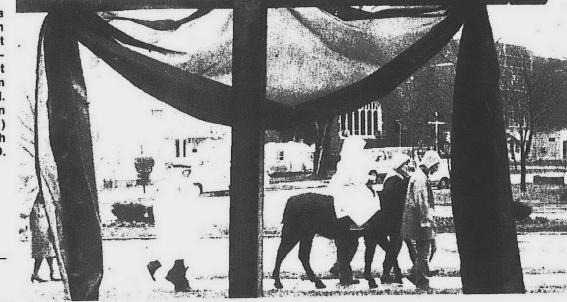

Just days after the triumphant entry, Christ was put to death on the cross — which will be remembered in Good Friday services tomorrow. Easter Sunday marks the celebration of his resurrection and victory over the grave three days after his death, as He had predicted.

Once at Kellogg Park, congregation members took time to read scriptures relating to Palm Sunday and sing some hymns. Kristy Moyer, 10, (left) and Lisa Neu, 5, bow their heads during the short service held inside the Plymouth Gathering.

Every week nearly 200 people are of the colleges with criminal justice told they have multiple sclerosis (MS), a disease whose cause is still unknown. and which seems to strike young adults most often. The disease affects at least 250,000 Americans. It also affects socsiety as a whole in terms of costs needed for research and treatment, and the loss of productive manpower in many industries.

Multiple sclerosis is a chronic, often disabling disease that affects the brain and the spinal cord. When a person has MS, the covering - myelin - that protects the nerves in the brain and spinal cord is affected so that messages cannot always get through. Myelin protects the nerve fibers of the brain and spinal cord in the same way that insulation protects electrical wires. When this sheathing is destroyed, the nerve impulses are interrupted and distorted, resulting in tingling sensations, numbness, slurred speech, double vision, muscle weakness, poor coordination Detecting multiple sclerosis can be dfficult because early symptoms are often so slight a person doesn't go to a doctor; also, other diseases of the nervous system have some of the same warning signs and laboratory tests are not yet available to definitely confirm or rule out possible MS.

MS CAN mean long years of increasing disability and constant uncertainty, caused by the unexpected exacerbations and remissions which are characteristic of this disease.

According to Vice Admiral Thor Hanson, president of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society (NMSS), the lifetime costs of each year's new caseload of MS patients may easily range up to $3 billion.

Adequate funding of MS research and support for MS rehabilitation centers may help ease this economic burden on individuals and our society, experts agree.

Residents tell commission no police layoffs

By Gary M. Cates staff writer

Some Plymouth residents again objected at Monday night's City Commission meeting to any police reconfiguration plan that calls for layoffs.

The number of residents attending commission meetings has increased lately, mostly due to discussions about cutting police department costs and concerns about the city's overall spending trend.

tract for shared police service with Plymouth Township.

Instead, projected revenues fell only $165,275 or 3.6 percent from last year - indicating increases in other revenue areas offset a majority of the contract loss.

All but four of the revenue sources are projected to increase in the coming fiscal year and are led by:

• State shared revenues - up $108,225 or 17 percent.

• Administration fees - up $80,000 or 61 percent.

• Miscellaneous revenues -$33,845 or 71 percent.

• Cultural Center revenues -$29,500 or 7 percent.

• Parking fees - up $19,500 or 92 percent.

Revenue sources which have reduced projections include: a total loss of the police contract; district court revenues. down $41,840 or 73 percent; general taxes, down $26,565 or 1 percent; and federal grants, down $7,270 or 7 per-

The five areas in which Graper proposes cutting spending include:

$14,850 or 11 percent. Administration — cut by $14,565

To balance the budget as required by city charter Graper called for using $26,000 from the city's surplus.

The proposed budget can be adopted as is or revised by the City Commission. The Commission has scheduled a budget workshop for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 16, as well as setting aside Wednesday and Thursday, April 17 and 18, at the same time if needed.

The April 29 public hearing will start at 7:30 p.m. All Commission meetings are held in the second-floor auditorium at City Hall, the corner of Main and Church streets.

er during citizen comments recently on the issue of police layoffs.

"You're forgetting that the power starts down here. You're elected to do what the people want, and you're neglecting what we want," he said, adding that the city one day might be contracting police service from the

"You've hit the nail right on the head," Mayor David Pugh said. "The city of Plymouth has a tax base that virtually has not increased, and the city is involved in a labor intensive type of

"In five years we're going to have a crisis - you can only tax people so much," Pugh said.

'We very well might be contracting from the township. The township has a tax base which is growing very fast. Their growth is at such a rate that I don't think they could hold it back if they wanted to," he said.

Kroeger also questioned City Manager Henry Graper's proposed budget for 1985-86. That budget calls for a cut in police personnel from 20 to 13.

Layoffs go against what police consultant Rod Bartell recommended in his report on police reconfiguration," Kroeger said.

"That report cost $17,000 . . . and it said layoffs were minimally acceptable. You also are going against the wishes of 93 percent of the citizens who were surveyed for the report," he said. "What do we have to do as citizens to make you realize that we don't want

THE POLICE issue has been bringing residents to city meetings for more than a month, as well as lengthening the comment portion by as much as 60

Many of the residents voice the same concerns as Kroeger and call for a public hearing on the police department.

We hold a public hearing on the budget," Pugh said, "and the police issue is a budget issue."

What happens to the police department must be considered with the overall city budget, Pugh said.

"You want us to hold a public hearing on the police issue and make a decision. You can't do that in a vacuum; you have to assess the impact on other areas of the budget."

Another resident asked why the city was notifying officers of impending layoffs before the budget hearing, scheduled for April 29.

The mayor said announcements about police layoffs are tentative. The layoffs are part of a budget proposed by Graper

"The City Commission has to make the decision on the budget. We have some options, including a tax increase, but we have to ask if the citizens should bear the brunt?"

Graper's budget must be balanced when presented, so he had to figure in layoffs to balance it, Pugh said.

"I was advised by legal counsel to notify the officers as soon as possible so they know beforehand, in the event they have a job offer," Graper said. Resident Jean Morrow asked why other department's weren't being targeted for layoffs.

Other city departments already have gone through reductions, Graper said. The police department would have been cut earlier if the township wasn't contracting for service, he said. "Also, we had three people who announced last week that they were leaving, and we don't know if they are going to be replaced."

Another resident questioned why the City Commission doesn't put the issue on the ballot, and if residents can get copies of the proposed budget.

There is no way to get the question to the public before July 1," Graper

As for the proposed budget, a copy will go on display in the library one week before the public hearing. Because the document is 150 pages long, Pugh said, residents would have to pay to have it photo-copied.

Europe: Cathedrals, castles, river trips await cathedrals, castles, castle hotels and historic settings have a plethora of excursions they could consider before making vacation

What brought tours to mind was a conversation with Beverly Buchanan of Christ Church Cranbrook which is sponsoring a 17-day to England in May.

Christ Church Cranbrook, and will include famous places like Canterbury, York, Cambridge, Durham, Wells, Salisbury, Coventry, Winchester and, of course, London.

The tour is from May 20 through June 5 so anyone who is interested in joining the group should act quickly. The cost is $2,249 per person, double occupancy; single supplement, $220. This kind of tour is seldom low-cost, and the prices quoted are based on a minimum of 30 paying passengers. That price includes air fare, accommodations, some meals, tours, etc.

For more information, contact Beverly at Christ Church Cranbrook, 644-5210 or at home, 649-5046.

THE CANTERBURY CATHEDRAL Trust in America also sponsors a 14day travel-study tour of Canterbury and the chateaux and Benedictine monasteries of the Loire, beginning in London Sept. 19. Tour members will be led on a candlelit tour of Canterbury Cathedral, and visit Leeds Castle and St. Mary's Abbey in England.

In France they will tour the Abbey of St. Wandrille near Rouen, the Abbaye Bec-Hellouin near Tours, the Royal Abbey of Fontevraud in Samur, the Abbey of St. Benoit and Rheims Cathedral. They will also visit the famous chateaux of the Loire. In the final day, in London, the group will be invited to lunch with members of the House of Lords.

TRAVEL TIME OF CHICAGO. which specializes in classic travel holidays, will offer its annual edition of Brideshead and Beyond, a tour inspired by Evelyn Waugh's novel "Brideshead Revisited." For 23 days from June 14 to July 6, travelers will enjoy some of the grand living epitomized by the book and the subsequent television series.

If you don't like group tours, but you don't really want to go on your own, consider Lyonesse Tours, described as "chauffeur-driven scenic safaris of Devon and Cornwall." Tours abound in Europe. One of the most enjoyable is the trip down the Thames River in a luxury hotel barge (left). Guests enjoy leisurely meals while the barge slowly goes through the countryside. Other tours enable visitors to see such things as the town square (right) in Chester, England; Chambord, a chateau (below) in the Loire Valley of France at Halifax; and the cathedral at Chartres, France.

to public gardens, castles, museums and churches, and deliver you to the door of the manor houses and quaint hotels chosen to fit the mood of elegance and hospitality. Sound expensive? It is: $2,400 for one, $1,465 each for two, $1,185 each for three, for six nights and seven days plus air fare.

Please note that I have never taken these tours, so I can't possibly recommend them. There are people who are willing to spend high dollar for such vacations however, so I want you to know

One high-dollar English vacation that I have taken is a trip down the Thames River on a luxury hotel barge marketed by Floating Through Europe.

THESE HOTEL barges, which are also available in the Netherlands, Belgium, Germany and France, take a very small group of people on a slow river voyage aboard a commercial barge that has been converted into a small floating hotel.

It took a week to float the 50 miles from Windsor to Oxford on the Thames, a lazy week of casual clothes, gourmet food, and afternoons wandering through tiny villages forgotten by time. The rooms are tiny and the deck is small, but it is a lovely leisurely way to see England as the Normans saw it centuries ago.

Seven days on the Thames cost from $1,000 to $1,200 per person double oc-It was certainly the best trip I took that cupancy. You can do three nights from $685 per person. Call your travel agent or call Floating Through Europe tollfree 1-800-221-3140.

> There are several companies offering these luxury barge tours. Salen Lindblad Cruising got into the act this year with "King's England," a 16-day 12-passenger expedition from Windsor to London aboard what has been described as "one of the most luxurious vessels in the world."

If this is true, it breaks with the barge tradition; most are simple, although the food and service are always land of Syon where "special permission has been granted . . . for a lace and crystal picnic lunch in the Privey Garden of the Queen." Those brochure writers will get you every time.

The rates for this 16-day trip, which includes the cruise, meals, accommodations, bus from London to Windsor and the usual sightseeing are $2,490 per person double occupancy and $2,690 single. Call 1-800-223-5688 or your travel agent.

Michigan selected top tourist state

Michigan has been rated among the top states in the country for tourism festivals and events for tour groups, according to the American Bus Association (ABA).

The ABA prepared a list of "Top 100 Events in North America" for 1985 and listed Michigan as one of only seven state and two Canadian provinces in its selections. Among the state events cited were the Plymouth Ice Sculpture Spectacular, Battle Creek's World Hot Air Balloon Championship and the Frankenmuth Music Fest. Michigan also shared with Ontario the honor of having the International Freedom Festival in Detroit and Windsor.

Holland's Tulip Festival, Frankenmuth's Bavarian Festival and Dearborn's Christmas at Greenfield Village were selected in previous years.

The ABA, which promotes motorcoach tours all across North America, selected what it considered the best attractions from among nominations in 46 states, Washington D.C. and seven Canadian provinces.

"This selection constitutes recognition of Michigan's great appeal for tourists and enhances our efforts to pomote the state's strong and fast growing tourism industry," said John Savitch, director of the state Department of Commerce's Travel Bureau.

The Auto Club of Michigan recently noted that some $477 million worth of tourism-related construction is set for Michigan this year.

This includes Olympic-type facilities, festival marketplaces, Cobo Hall expansion and $166 million in new lodging facilities.

AAA Michigan Travel Operations Manager James Drury said the amount of construction "shows significant growth for Michigan tourism, an industry which last year pumped $11.4 billion into the economy and provided more than 250,000 jobs.

INCOME TAX FORMS

Although most taxpayers receive a tax package from the Internal Revenue Serivce (IRS) by mail, the forms they receive may not meet all their needs. If you experience that problem as you prepare your 1984 tax report, the forms you need may be at the Plymouth Post Office. Office-in-Charge Vernon Raccine says that changes in filing status, capital gains or losses, or profit and loss on a business may require the taxpayer to seek IRS forms which are not included inthe package. "We have many forms for these situations at the post office," adds Raccine.

• WEATHER SPOTTERS Training meetings are from 9 a.m. to noon on the fourth Saturday of each month at Plymouth Township Hall, Mill at Ann Arbor Road. Volunteers are trained by the Plymouth Township Office of Emergency Preparedness as severe weather spotters. As part of the area's early warning system, the volunteers are trained to spot and report emergency weather situations such as tornadoes, severe wind or hail storms.

VETERANS PROGRAM EXTENDED

Area Vietnam era and disabled veterans should be aware of recent changes affecting the Veterans Readjustment Appointments (VRA) program. VRA is a federal hiring program providing special, noncompetitive hiring of these veterans. Originally scheduled to expire Sept. 30, 1984, the program has been extended through Sept. 30, 1986, through passage of the Veterans Benefits Improvement Act (PL 98-543). It is not expected that the VRA pro-

In addition to extending the program, PL 98-543 raised the entry grade level maximum from GS/ WG-7 to GS/WG-9 and also provided limited appeal rights during the first year of appointment. A Vietnam era or disabled veteran who has completed no more than 14 years of education may qualify for a VRA. (This restriction may be waived for disabled veterans). Finch walks extra mile Marlyn J. Finch of Smith Elementary School is the newest recipient of the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education Extra Miler award. Honored at the March 25 school board meeting, the first grade teacher was recognized by Trustee Dean Swartzwelter.

Comments form co-workers included:

• "Marlyn has put in an enormous amount of personal time and effort organizing field trips involving parents and siblings and other activities." · "She's always searching for additional ways to stimulate her students. What a wonderful district this would be if all teachers were as dedicated as Marlyn Finch,"

Finch, a 12-year veteran of the school district, said "I can only say thanks to the students and parents who've given me their extra mile - and to staff workers and peers who have helped me and spurred me on. I feel we've strove for excellence. I thank the board for its leadership and I thank my husband and family for their patience with me."

Finch was the 1978 recipient of a Plymouth Community Arts Council grant, and helped launch the district's Talented and Gifted program.

Random selection has worked effectively

NCE AGAIN random selection of Plymouth-Canton Board of Education meetings. It happens once a year - when selections are announced. their particular assignments appeal to the school board, asking to be assigned to the other school. Over the years, the vast majority of requests has come from students assigned to Plymouth Canton High who would prefer to attend Plymouth Salem

High. This year is no exception. Assigning students by random draw to either Salem High or Canton High was initiated to balance populations, to lessen abuses of athletic recruitment, and to avoid any possibility of being charged. with de facto segregation (an important factor back when the suburbs were in panic over the possibility of cross-district busing).

Random selection has accomplished those goals. The populations are balanced, abuses of athletic recruiting have been very few, and absolutely no student assignments have been made on the basis of Sometime it is hard to realize how complex state government can be. The state Department of Agriculture has several committees established by law to dealwith various agricultural products.

Included are the Apple Committee, the Asparagus Committee, the Bean Commission, the Plum Committee, the Potato Industry Commission and the Soybean Com-

The committees have similar reponsibilities. The Asparagus committee, for example, was established by public act in 1965 to develop an Asparagus Industry Development Program.

Its seven members "oversee conducting promotion and advertising programs and assembling and disseminating market information." Expenses are subscribed by producer assessments. Members are appointed by the governor from lists submitted by asparagus growers

NCE AGAIN random selection of high school assignments has become the topic of hot debate at Athletics behind most recent upheavel

STUDENTS ATTEND classes in both Parents and students unhappy with buildings. So academically, it makes no difference which school a student is as-

> The school board has recognized that students develop a loyalty to the school from which they will graduate. To avoid split loyalties in a family, the board has allowed siblings to attend the school attended by their older brother or sister if that sibling will be in high school at the same time. Historically, that is the only exception to the random draw. All appeals, no matter how emotional or rational, have been denied — period!

> Now a drive is on to allow an exception for siblings of staff members at the Centennial Educational Park. Staff members making the appeals, however, are not librarians, custodians, teachers, or cafeteria employees. Rather, the appeal is coming from coaches. That is interesting because athletics is the only area where it makes a difference which school you are assigned

> In sports, you can play only for the team of the school where you are matriculated. While there is one band, one newspaper, one radio station, one forensics team, one yearbook, etc. at CEP, in sports there are two football teams, two basketball teams, two soccer teams, two baseball teams, two swimming teams, two cross country teams, two wrestling teams,

If there were only one football team, the appeal now being made from coaches would be satisfied (or one swimming team, one basketball team, one wrestling team, etc.). But that action has broader implications than the question about random selection.

We note, however, that the current appeals are coming from Salem coaches. Coaches of Canton teams are not appearing before the school board asking that students be allowed to attend the school their parents work at.

Does that mean Canton coaches don't have children? Or that siblings of Canton coaches want to compete against their parents? Or that Canton coaches are apathetic? Or does it mean that there may be a relationship between the Salem appeals and athletic recruitment?

The arguments made by Salem coaches seemingly apply to librarians, custodians, teachers at both schools, cafeteria employees, security guards and Canton coaches. But in spite of media exposure, the crowd at school board meetings still is dominated by Salem coaches. That says something.

SOME ARGUE that a boundary feeder system should be used to determine where students attend high school.

The problem is that there is no precedent for that approach. When Plymouth High School operated in what is now Central Middle School, all high schoolers in Plymouth-Canton attended P.H.S. Where they lived made no difference, and no one talked of boundaries or feeders at the high school level.

When old Plymouth High was closed and Salem opened, all high schoolers still attended one building. The geographical boundaries were those of the school dis-

If a geographical boundary approach is used, is there one single approach which makes more sense, since both high schools are located in Canton Township? Should we have all students who live in Canton attend Salem High and all Plymouth students attend Canton High? Is that not just as rational as suggesting that Plymouth students should attend Salem and Canton students attend Canton High?

Should we have all students living east of Main Street/Morton Taylor attend Salem and all west-siders attend Canton High? Or should all students living north of Warren Road attend Canton High and those south attend Salem? Are there any rational arguments for these positions?

No. And neither are there any rational arguments for having students living in the western or northern parts of the community attend Salem High.

TRUE, EACH YEAR a crowd of parents storms the school board to protest the random selection process.

But it also is true that each year the overwhelming majority of parents and students has not protested. The vast majority realize that it makes little difference which school a student is assigned to,

if that student is not an athlete who aspires to be Salem-coached.

Because the balance is almost 50-50 between the schools, the fact that relatively few protest random selection each year may suggest there might be community support for the process. There is little evidence to suggest that large numbers such as a third or even a fourth of the student body - are dissatisfied.

There may be merit in having single athletic teams at the CEP, but no argument has been made to warrant elimination of random selection. The process works, adversely affects only a minority and, barring the lack of any logical alternative, seems to be the best approach.

The administration and board are going to take a long-range look at random selection to consider changes. But major changes should come only after study and considered deliberations - not because of an adverse affect on one group of students, but because it would be in the best interests of the district at large.

And that kind of conclusion will, and should, stand the test of time.

Emory Daniels

Granpy launched an orator's career

AFTER TRAVELING along life's highway for any length of time, a fellow gets a yearning to turn back and relive some of the days of his youth.

Each year as we enter Easter week, The Stroller thinks of the days of long ago when this was the day for the big family

It wasn't the food that brought back the memories. It was the visit with Granpy Edgar when the meal was finished.

Grandmother raised chickens, so we always had full and plenty to eat. But after dinner it was something different.

Granpy took all the boys into the parlor and chatted with us. He asked all sorts of questions. When he was finished getting the information he wanted, he would ask us to recite for him.

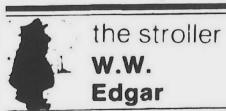

KNOWING THAT was what he was after. The Stroller always memorized some verses and was ready when called upon. This always pleased the old gent, whose daily occupation was piling up cast iron pieces on what was called the iron wharf back home.

With this background, one never would guess the old gent had a love of poetry. So when the others were finished, he called on The Stroller, and then came the thrill.

On one particular Easter Sunday, he stepped to the center of the room in front of the kind old gent and recited."The Village Blacksmith." As he went from verse to verse, he noticed the smile on the old gent's face. And he knew Granpy was going to be pleased.

When the verses were ended, Granpy got up, grabbed The Stroller around the shoulders and praised him for a fine effort.

"Some day you could be an after-dinner speaker," he whispered. "that would be a lot of fun for you. So don't ever give up."

SO WHEN Easter week comes along, the memory of that particular Easter years ago comes back, too. In memory, The Stroller always has a fine visit with his granddaddy.

As the years passed and he came west from the Pennsylvania Dutch country, the prophecy came true. He was here only a short time when he was invited to address a luncheon club. From that day on, the Stroller was more or less a regular on the lettuce circuit.

Each time he spoke before these luncheon groups, his memory carried him back to that Easter Sunday afternoon when his grandfather hinted it was going to happen.

SO THIS Easter Sunday afternoon, there will be no colored eggs in the little white house with the green shutters. We have outlived that custom and favor softboiled eggs for Easter Sunday breakfast.

But as he sits there enjoying his meal, The Stroller's mind will carry him back to the old home town and family dinner, and then meeting with Granpy Edgar. That takes the lead over colored eggs, the coming of rabbits and all other traditions.

Easter Sunday memories are a thrill, and The Stroller's only wish is that he could return for another visit with Granpy in the parlor.

Then his Easter would be complete.

Spinning political wheels

MAYBE THE people doing it feel good. But you have to wonder whether the "peace" groups who picketed Congressman Bill Broomfield's Birmingham office and the anti-tax groups still trying to recall Gov. Jim Blanchard are using their time productively.

Start with the Recall Blanchard movement. Upset with the rules imposed by Secretary of State Richard Austin, they went to Oakland Circuit Court - and lost. They're headed for the Court of Appeals, where they'll no doubt lose again.

IF THEY CAN even file their petitions, they will need 760,000 signatures, which guarantees only an election, not a recall. On the other hand, it would take only about 9,000 signatures to put a Republican candidate for governor on the ballot in 1986 and 20,000 for a Democratic candi-

For a recall to be successful, you must collect your signatures in a 90-day time span. To nominate another candidate in 1986, you have no time limit.

There are a host of other rules inhibiting recalls. On a recall, you must use a separate sheet in every city or township, but for a candidacy you can mix them within a

The state is telling the recall folks they would have to bear the cost of a special election. But if they simply nominated an opponent to Blanchard at a normal election, the state would bear the cost.

Which is simpler - a recall or a positive campaign for a rival candidate?

AT THE VERY beginning, we tried to warn the recall folks. We told them how difficult it is to pull off a recall, but they wouldn't listen. We respected their views on taxes but suggested they use their energy in supporting a rival to Blanchard in 1986. They wouldn't listen. We told them that people tend to be active in politics an average of 3.8 years (that's based on a Republican Party study of precinct delegates). Since volunteers tend to burn out, we suggested it would be wiser to join an established political party and work for positive change, not a negative recall. They wouldn't listen.

Now they are snarling at the distinguished judge (with a Republican history) who ruled against them, Meanwhile, Blanchard is rising, rising, rising in the opinion polls and hell-bent for re-election. And the recall people spin their BROOMFIELD, WHO has been in Congress since the mid-1950s, isn't the most visible officeholder in these suburbs. When he's in town, he speaks to business and banking types who wear three-piece suits and buy tickets to his fund-raisers.

It stands to reason: If you want to hear Bill Broomfield and get his ear, the way to do it is to put on a three-piece suit (or a designer dress, if that's more appropriate), buy a ticket to his fund-raiser and tell him there that you want the U.S. to keep hands off Nicaragua. He would understand that.

Casually dressed folks have picketed Broomfield quite a bit in recent years. His re-election margins keep growing.

If American foreign policy is to be changed, the Bill Broomfields of America will change it, not the peace activists. It wasn't John Kennedy who opened America's door to Communist China, but the red-baiting Richard Nixon. It wasn't retail merchant Bill Milliken who changed state government's bad attitude toward corporations, but the supposedly liberal Jim Blanchard. Pickets make good news copy and pictures. But they aren't achieving positive change.

COMMITTEES - By a vote of 254 for and 158 against, the House approved a partial budget of $48.01 million for its committees in calendar 1985. Later, it will take up a companion measure that will push total 1985 spending for the 25 committees well above $80 million.

This measure (H Res 100) did not require Senate approval.

The $48.01 million represents an increase of 4.45 percent over camparable 1984 expendatures, including a 3.5 percent hike to cover a pay raise for committee staffers. Most committee spending is for staff salaries, with travel and communications also claiming large outlays.

Supporter Joseph Gaydos, D-Pa., said the budget measure is "fiscally responsible and fair and equitable" and that the House "through its committee system will be able to effectively and adequately discharge its constituional obligations.

Opponent William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., said he was "saddened" that House members were increasing spending on themselves while preparing cuts in programs for their constituents. He said this recalls the adage that "the king can do no wrong." Members voting yes favored the committee funding resolution. Voting yes: Pursell, Hertel, Ford, Levin and Broomfield.

'Far-fetched' idea becomes a reality

> It's being referred to as a "marriage of sculpture and architecture.

Whatever the name, a one-man show of Peter Rockwell's works in a Frank Lloyd Wright house is an impressive undertaking.

What began as a glimmer of an idea almost two years ago, will become a reality May 9 when the Plymouth Community Arts Council opens the 20-day show. A shuttle-bus service will transport guests from the Frame Works on Penniman Avenue to the Frank Lloyd Wright house recently purchased by Tom Monaghan, owner of the Detroit Tigers and Domino's Pizza.

Sculptor Peter Rockwell, son of artist Norman Rockwell, is coming from Italy a few days before the opening. He will be here to set up his marble and bronze sculptures in the "Snowflake House" and its surrounding gardens.

The works are being shipped from his studio in Rome for the show.

THE ARTS TOUR of Italy in June 1983 attracted 22 members of the arts council and their families. The tour had been suggested by Ruth Tonner, humanities teacher at the Centennial Educational Park, and arranged by the Arts council members were considering a site for the show and about a year ago, they thought of the Frank Lloyd Wright house. They were told it should be available during a transition period in May 1985.

They had the artist and famous Snowflake House." The hexagonal structure has four levels and seven flat, sky-lighted roof lines that harmonize with the site. Wright also designed the furniture for the house so that the land, the structure and the interior are one. The bedroom wing designed by Wright was added later.

HELEN MILLIKEN agreed to be honorary chair of the show. The Frame Works would be a co-sponsor and the shuttle-bus will leave there every half hour. Video tapes of the artist and his works may be viewed at Frame Works during the show.

Partial funding came from the Michigan Council for the Arts. Rockwell will give a special lecture

The opening benefit reception will be 7-10 p.m. Friday, May 10. Admission will be $25 and guests will have an opportunity to meet the sculptor. After May 11, the show will be open to the public free.

Moving to Plymouth after graduating from college in 1957, Braun taught Jones, admitting to being "sort of disa few years in elementary schools but has been mainly a private teacher and avid promoter - of the viola.

Doktor, a viola star who has recorded on the Deutsche Grammaphon label, is her hero. The April 14 concert will be his second appearance with the PSO and his fourth in the western suburbs. Jones, too, admires Doktor as "an excellent performer, teacher and editor."

JONES IS a keyboard musician who frankly admits that "the only thing I can write without help is a piano concerto.

In the months that Jones worked on the viola concerto, Braun ran through the solo part, "testing it to see what works." Jones called her "much too modest" about her role.

The score was mailed to Doktor. Jones said the soloist "polished up things like balancing runs. He's the shaper. It takes these shapers. It's a constant team effort. You gotta have all this help."

The practice is common. Brahms, Beethoven and Tchaikovsky needed help on their violin concertos, and even Mozart worked with soloists in serving up his clarinet concerto and four horn concertos.

JONES WAS hired at Schoolcraft College in 1969 as composer-in-residence under a Ford Foundation grant. Previously, he taught at all levels in Hartford, Conn.

The community college's fine arts director was Wayne Dunlap, who doubled then as conductor of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. Dunlap's idea was that Jones would compose for all sorts of community groups in the metropolitan area. As it turned out, most of Jones' bigger compositions were for the PSO - including a folk opera based on Shaker themes and "A Plymouth Symphony.'

Jones on the viola neglected, sensuous

Here are composer Robert W. Jones' program notes for his Concerto for Viola and Orchestra. It will receive its initial performance at 4 p.m. Sunday, April 14, in Plymouth Salem High School, Joy west of Canton Center Road, by the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra with Paul Doktor as soloist. General admission is $6.

FACE IT: The viola is a neglected instrument. In the string family, the only one given shorter shrift is the string bass.

For hundreds of years, first the violin, then the cello inspired enough literature to keep an army of virtuosi busy for a good half-century. The viola? Well, it's always been there. When somebody needed a "pah-pah-pah" to follow the basses' "oom," guess who got the job.

In Haydn's early quartets, the first violin got the meaty melodies, the second violin got the countermelodies, and the cello bolstered the bass. Guess who got the fillers.

When Paganini asked Berlioz to write him a piece for viola and orchestra, Berlioz gave the melodies to the orchestra. Guess who got the accom-

When I began to get deeply involved with violists and the viola, my eyes were opened. I began to investigate the

I came to the conclusion that, for me, the greatest 20th-century composer for the viola was Paul Hindemith - because he was not only a masterful composer but also an accomplished working violist. He loved the instrument and wrote long and lovingly for it. After him, Bartok and Walton. After them, Porter and Piston.

I welcomed the opportunity.

THIS CONCERTO was written for Paul Doktor as the result of a dinner conversation. Many things begin that

I'd sketched a couple of movements for a viola concerto 10 years ago at the MacDowell Colony, but when I took them out and looked at them, I realized that my thinking had changed so much since then that it was time for a whole new start. I sat down one day during the early spring of 1984 and let the juices flow

To fling or not to fling — aye that's the rub

est, considerate, conscientious, goodnatured cooperation. Tall order, I know. But in this community, I think we can do it.

First and foremost, let's hang up our egos and try to communicate.

The issue is the Cow Chip Fling. The problem is: to be or not to be.

Thus far, the only decision has been to reinstate the fling until some sort of community feedback can be attained. The biggest question remaining seems to be how to attain the feedback.

Thank heaven the situation is not what you could call grave, but it is charged with emotion. We must remember that people usually don't tell you what they like, but rather what they don't like - a sad but true fact that prohibits most methods of community sampling.

A phone sampling may yield only questions as to what is a Country Festival. By the same token, a write-in campaign will, more likely that not, enlist only the dissatisfied responses, not those who enjoy or don't mind the fling.

So what have we left? Perhaps you have an idea.

IN ORDER FOR this to be as honest as possible, I called the "anti" side and asked for correct wording of their objections. They are as follows:

The fling is in poor taste.

• This is not the type of image builder they want to see in Canton.

• Most Canton residents are in their second homes and are looking for an up-type image and, in many ways, the fling does not provide this.

• They feel that since it is only four years old, we are not looking at a tradi-

• For a community that worked so hard to secure a berm ordinance and fought the sign ordinance so vigorously, to turn around and have a Cow Chip Fling is contradictory.

• Only a select few actually participate in the fling. It is by invitation only.

• It is not a sport in which real farmers ever participated.

• There was report of an eye infection last year, caused by a foreign substance in the eye. It could have been received during the fling competition.

THERE YOU have it.

Some of you may relate to these statements; some may oppose them. However you feel, let it be known.

The township board voted 6-1 for a rather lengthy resolution in support of the Cow Chip Fling. Art Winkel, our fire marshal, again has agreed to run the event. It does not cost the township any money, and does, as stated in the resolution, leave the playing field in better condition than when it began.

So let me make a couple of personal observations:

· Many farmers and older residents of our community not only want the activity but are offended that some find it in poor taste. • As I mentioned before, I have touched a dried chip, and it is not offensive as an object. There was no odor problem either • With regard to image, I am not trying to build an image, but soul, in my children. This was a lot of fun and resulted in far less injury than any other sport.

• I can't say that any one event would keep me away from our Country anything can enter the eye when you Festival, especially if it ran only for a short period of one day and was in a area away from most other activities. However, I can tell you that I avoid Ford Road when the carnivals are in town. This is due to my lack of ability to say no, repeatedly, to my children. This is my own fault.

IT DOESN'T seem fair that I answer each of the anti's areas of concern, since they don't have the opportunity to do the same in this column. But two more things seem to be important to any decision we may make.

First, perhaps we should consider having the invited participants "toss the moss" first. And then, since the kind Mr. Winkel always provides more than we need, how about opening the competition to the public on a firstcome, first-serve basis? This may attract a larger crowd, which is another issue that should addressed. Perhaps we could increase the number of invitations to include past participants - if they so desire.

CONCERNING the one eye incident: The people involved say they do not know for sure that it was from the fling, but the doctor thought that to be a good possibility.

Let's worry about the big things death, destruction, despair, missing children, broken homes, illness, loss. Don't let us get so sophisticated that we fear other communities pointing fingers because for one hour of one day each year some of us go into a field and fling a few cow plasters. We are talking about dried chips, you know!

What more can I say? It's supposed to be fun, carefree and not embarrass-

If you really don't like the whole thing, please don't worry about it. Please don't be offended; don't even tell your friends about it. We don't mean to embarrass anyone. Don't even go near that part of the grounds at that particular time on that particular day.

I THINK many of the other fine things our community has to offer can overshadow any ill feelings this one event may invoke.

In turn, I promise not to be upset that we have gambling, drinking, expensive, not to mention dangerous. rides, and bulls jumping fences. All this at what used to be a simple Country Festival with balloon and egg tosses; clown makeups; shoe tosses where children won simple ribbons; homemade crafts; a little baseball and a chicken harhecue

Passover: redemption, hope

At sundown tomorrow, the Jewish people throughout the world begin the observance of Passover, the oldest and perhaps the most beloved of Jewish festivals. This is a festival of freedom, which celebrates the liberation of the Hebrew slaves from the cruel bondage of Pharaoh, more than 3,000 years ago. We gather in our homes to recount the story of the affliction of our ancestors at the hands of Pharaoh and of how the Almighty led them forth with a "strong hand." This ancient story of slavery and Exodus finds a responsive chord in the experiences of many peoples at diverse times.

Our thoughts turn to many nations who live under the domination of dictatorship and repression. The number of democracies in the world is small. Much of humanity suffers under the lash of modern taskmasters no less harsh than those of the Bible.

When the work men and women do does not provide for them adequate shelter, nourishing food for themselves celebrates redemption not only as a past event, but as a challenge to the and their children, and opportunity for future. May all who dwell in the darkness of oppression find renewed faith a better life, they are slaves. One of the most stirring parts of the Passover Service is the declaration that begins the Seder meal: "This is the One can suggest that even in this land of liberty, there are many kinds of slaves today. Some are forced to live in bread of affliction which our ancestors the constant fear of unwarranted hate ate in the land of Egypt" where we inand prejudice, and must endure tolervite all who are hungry to eat with us ance. They are slaves. Men can be at the Seder meal.

TO PREVENT THIS declaration dishonesty and violence, they are from becoming an empty ritual, we are required to act affirmatively by taking personal responsibility for our fellow human beings. Jews and Christians are entering a time of religious celebration in their different calendars. But let us join in reaffirming our shared moral obligation for aiding the needy and the deprived. Hunger has become a reality for millions in our country, for many thousands in our city. The Bible teaches us that we are responsible for "the stranger that so journeth in Passover calls upon us to put an end to all slavery. We can help make the dream of freedom real for those who are not yet redeemed.

How an expert dodges an issue

If only I could make decisions the way the Michigan High School Athletic Association (MHSAA) does

Just imagine. Get up in the morning and have . to figure out what to have for breakfast: 'First," I'd say to myself in keeping with the spirit of the MHSAA, "I have to recognize all the far-reaching implications of my decision. Heavens, all the people that could be affected." Organizing myşelf with true-blue bureaucratic efficiency, I would dissect the problem and examine it piecemeal. Of course, I wouldn't make a move without the full support of those involved. Well, dear wife, what do you think I should have?" I would ask my dear wife. All answers would be duly recorded. Well, dear cat, what do you think I should have?" I would ask my dear cat. Any discernable answer would be duly recorded, then forwarded to Ripley's Believe It or Not.

AFTER TABULATING the results, I would then announce my monumental decision, if I could come to one. Of course, by then it would be lunchtime anyway

Imagine trying to decide something really important, like what color underwear to wear' Well, okay, so I sound a little silly But I won't admit to exaggeration. For instance, see how the MHSAA has treated the most controversial matter put before it the football playoffs.

'Let's take a poll," was their reply to the Michigan High School Football Coaches Association, which requested an expanded playoff format for the second time in 2 years.

Remember last year. The football coaches association thought it had a good plan and presented it to the MHSAA's Representative Council, a noble body of 19 which professes to present the wishes of the high schools of Michigan. The coaches wanted to expand the football playoffs to include 32 teams per class, instead of eight

THE COACHES obviously didn't realize what they were asking - or from whom. A change that severe was far too drastic for the MHSAA. Not too surprisingly, the Representative Council turned them down flat.

There were problems with that plan, to be sure longer playoffs, shorter regular season schedules, the possibility of playing two games in I week. Radical changes, far too radical for the MHSAA to even consider

So the coaches put together another playoff plan. This one is far different from the first. It's reasonable, logical and fair. It certainly seems better than the present format

That makes it dangerous to the MHSAA. It could even result in Heaven forbid'

The plan calls for expanding the playoffs to 16 teams per class. That would add one game to the playoffs, but, according to the coaches plan. teams would be selected after 8 games. The first playoff game would be played on the season's nintl; week

Schools could still schedule opponents for the ninth week and switch for the playoffs. For example, if Farmington Harrison and Plymouth Salem were to meet in the opening round of the state playoffs, the team's they scheduled for their final games would play each other instead

The MHSAA has answered this threat with its normal dodge the bullet strategy, they conducted a poll. Know what they found? Nearly 70 percent of the schools that replied (713 received questionaires, 580 answered) favored expanding the playoffs

Of course, as the MHSAA might point out, more than a quarter liked things just the way they are. And the poll results didn't convince some people, like MHSAA assistant director Warren McKenzie

McKenzie told O&E sports editor Chris McCosky that some school principals gave the survey to their football coaches and let them fill

'Many superintendents, we understand, are upset with their principals for voting to expand the playoffs," McKenzie said

If you think that sounds like the makings of a dodge, you're not alone. The MHSAA is supposed to make a decision on the matter May 5-8 at its annual meeting in Cadillac

MY PERSONAL poll on what that decision will be revealed the following

• 10 percent figure the MHSAA will favor the new playoff format; • 30 percent figure the MHSAA will can it;

• 50 percent figure they'll find some way to table it for another year,

10 percent figure they'll ignore it altogether What are the MHSAA's true feelings on the subject? Here's what one MHSAA insider told McCosky. "I think the whole playoff thing is a problem. It's not good for the sport and it's not good for the kids. If it has any value at all, it's to satisfy the whims of adult coaches egos.' With an attitude like that, I can't see the MHSAA ever expanding the playoffs. Their perception is dismal: The bigger the playoffs. the bigger their headache.

It was as if the ball was coming down in slow motion. Chris Gilles stood poised to kill the return. She had her opponent so far out of position, the point seemed a cinch. Slam! Gilles whacked the tennis ball with a mighty

"I don't believe it," Gilles shrieked in a voice that was part whimper and part scream.

Homecomings can be awfully cruel sometimes.

Chris Gilles, the former high school all-stater from Plymouth Salem now the No. 1 singles player at the University of Wisconsin, played tennis before the home folks Sunday morning for the first time this year.

A large contingent of family and friends turned out, at 8:30, to see Gilles and Wisconsin take on the University of Michigan in a Big 10 match at the Huron Valley Tennis Club.

Wisconsin won, Gilles lost.

"I WAS really glad everyone came," Gilles said. "I really wanted to see everyone and I'm glad they wanted to see me. But, I was really, really nervous. I'm not blaming the loss on that. I'm blaming me, mentally. Even after I got over being nervous, I didn't pull it out."

U-M's Paula Reichert, of Grosse Pointe, outlasted Gilles in the 21/2 hour match, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5. Gilles had led 5-4 in the third set.

It was another in a long series of tough moments for the attractive and personable freshman this season - the type of tough moments that are often referred to as character builders.

"She's playing No. 1 singles and she's taking her lumps," said Wisconsin coach Kelly Ferguson, a two-time NCAA champion. "It's tough playing No. 1 with type of schedule we have. She's had some great wins, but she's also lost matches she should have won."

Wisconsin has played 10 of the nation's top 20 teams already this season. Gilles, after beating Michigan State's Trish Bandenbrink, 6-0, 6-4, Saturday and losing to Reichert Sunday, is 12-8 in singles. Wisconsin is 11-10.

FERGUSON ISN'T too concerned about Gilles' ability in singles.

"She'll be all-Big 10, I'm 80 percent sure of that. And she should go to nationals. The top four singles players from the region qualify for nationals, and Chris is ranked No. 3 right now," Ferguson said.

But there are other areas, Ferguson said, in which Gilles needs plenty of work. Like in doubles play, where Gilles began the season at No. 1, slipped to No. 2 and now is playing at

'Chris Gilles has been everything I hoped she'd be when I recruited her. She's very, very tough. A great competitor.'

> - Kelly Ferguson Wisconsin coach

"She needs to work on her doubles game," Ferguson said. "I hope that's what she concentrates on this summer. We've not been picking up many points in doubles and that's been hurting us

Said Gilles: "No, I don't really like playing doubles. At the beginning, it was real tough on me. Now I'm just going out there to have fun. I'm playing No. 3 now and it's a lot easier. We're winning. We'll have a winning doubles record by the end of the year. Playing No. 3 is fine with me, whatever helps the team win."

FERGUSON LIKES to hear Gilles talk in terms of "the team." The two have locked horns on the issue a couple of times. After a recent loss, Gilles wondered how the loss would affect her chances for the nationals. Ferguson's reply was stern: Don't put your personal accomplishments and goals ahead of

"That's been hard for me," Gilles said. "I have a problem thinking in terms of the team. If the team won and I lost, I'm not happy and I should be. But, I'm never happy when I lose. Don't get me wrong, I am happy for the team when we win. It's just I take my losses harder than I should. I have to understand that it's more of a team thing."

Gilles is in the throes of a slump. She has lost four of her last six matches. Yet, nobody is worried. In three of the four losses, Gilles played very well against superior competition.

"Chris Gilles has been everything I hoped she'd be when I recruited her," Ferguson said. "She's very, very tough. A great competitor."

Gilles, despite the ups and downs, is happy with her freshman season.

"This is good for me," she said. "I mean, the girls I'm playing are about ready to turn pro. I know now what I have to do to get to that level."

There's something to be said for taking lumps, even if the lumps spoil a

Chiefs hungry for WLAA title

staff writer

It seems a little funny to hear Plymouth Canton baseball coach Fred Crissey calling for a return to excellence in

After all, Crissey's Chiefs have comniled records of 17-7 and 18-7 the past two seasons - 220-68 since 1974.

Believe it or not, though, the 1983 and 1984 Chief teams did not play typical Plymouth Canton-style ball. As a result, the Chiefs, after winning six Western Six League titles in seven years, have yet to win a Western Lakes

"CHEMISTRY-WISE, it's been a pleasure to work with this group," Crissey said. "They are just outstanding, the dedication, the enthusiasm - these are things we've missed the last two years also. I don't know how we'll play, I'm not about to make any predictions. But, you kind of get a gut feeling about

Of the 25 athletes on Crissey's roster, 16 are honor students. And a good number are experienced and talented players weaned on Canton baseball.

Pitching will key the Chiefs in '85 and Crissey received an early Christmas present. Left-hander Mark Coburn, an all-Catholic pitcher at Redford Bishop Borgess last season, has transferred to Canton. He, along with flame-throwing right-hander Buckey Blake (3-1 last year despite tendonitis in his throwing arm), will anchor the Chiefs' mound corps.

Mike Clark (3-1 last year) and John Lenders will also be in Crissey's rotation, though Clark may see full-time duty at shortstop. Juniors Adam Kocik, Jeff Lyle and Paul Swartzinski will help out in relief roles.

The Chiefs lost an outstanding catcher, Tim Collins, to graduation. But the void will be neatly filled by senior Dwayne Bennett, a solid defensive catcher with long-ball potential at the baseball

JUNIOR TONY AIKEN, who hit .350 as a sophomore last year, will play center field and be counted on to provide some offensive sock. Same holds for senior Dave Knapp. Knapp, a .320 hitter last year, will play third base.

Jeff Rummel and Mark Moreno will most likely hold down the other two outfield spots and senior Pete Morman, consistent contact hitter, will play But, there are holes to be filled.

Mark Bennett, Jim Dillon, Collins, Jeff Wittner, Scott Ford, Jeff Olson and John Longridge, all starters last year, have moved on. Some newcomers expected to help fill those holes are Tom Kenyon (second base), Chris Sisler (first base) and Mark Stevens (outfield).

"I think we have some good contact, on-base-type hitters, but our power might be suspect," Crissey said. "We're deep. We've got at least two kids at every position. I don't how they'll do on the field, that remains to be seen. We might be rough at first. It could take a while to get our feet down."

THE TEST will come early for Canton. The Chiefs open the Western Lakes season on the road April 17 against defending Class A state champion Walled Lake Western. And the schedule doesn't let up. The Chiefs' will play five teams ranked in the state's preseason top 10: Western, Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher, Clio, Midland and Midland

"Hey, win or lose, this will be an enjoyable season working with the type of kids we have," Crissey said.

Bet on this: Crissey has absolutely no intention of losing with this 1985 squad.

Goike's repeat bid falls short

should hold down one of Canton's outfield spots this season.

Any hope that Bob Goike, the Canton bowler, had of repeating as the All-Events champion of the American Bowling Congress faded last week.

Making his appearance as the defending champion at Tulsa, Okla., he fired an excellent nine-game total of 1,892, but that failed to get him a place the top 10 when the shift ended. Last year he established an All-

Events record, but this year he posted 628 in the team event, 585 in the doubles and 679 in the singles. His twoyear figures are an average of 224. It is the seventh best in ABC history.

WONDERLAND LANES: Billy Golembiewski paid a visit to the Classic last week and wound up with the high score of 731. He linked games of 266, 255 and 210. Next in line came Mark Hammel with 720 and Jeff Dishong with 702.

MERRI-BOWL: Max Hansen was incount, but high scoring for the week went to Mike Dessentz, who rolled a 726 series. On the ladies side, Lisa Ducher was high with a middle game of 258 in a 648 series.

WOODLAND LANES: The 700 club received two new members when Rick Patton rolled a 712 in the senior house league and Tim Henry posted a 704. In the Senior Citizens League, Burley Schultz was high with a 246 game and Ruth Jansen paced the women with a 212 game in a 582 series.

Lynn Johnson of Livonia Stevenson, running the first leg of the 3,200 relay in a meet against North Farmington, hopes to give the Spartans depth so they can improve on last year's fourth place finish in the WLAA.

Title contenders?

Livonia schools look to move up the ladder

staff writer

Livonia high school girls track teams hope to rebound from an "off season" last year in Western Lake Activities Association (WLAA) com-

Last season, traditionally strong Livonia Stevenson and Livonia Churchill were upstaged by two Farmington schools - Farmington High and Harrison - which tied for the league title. But with a few breaks, both schools could make a run at the championship this year. Livonia Bentley, entering its last track season (the school is closing) just hopes to improve on last year's dismal season, in which the Bulldogs won only one dual meet.

The Spartans gave the best Livonia showing last season, finishing a respectable fourth. But perennial contender Livonia Churchill limped in a disappointing eighth while Livonia Bentley came in dead last, unable to record a single point.

The 1985 season should be different, however, according to coaches. Also previewed will be Livonia Clarenceville of the Metro Confer-

LIVONIA CHURCHILL

With 89 team members, Churchill boasts one of the larger teams in the area. Depth could be the key to a successful Charger season.

The long distance and throwing events will once again be Churchill's strengths, according to coach Audrey Kather. Key peformers from last year's team include shot putters Deanda Rochette and Kelly Smith, who also heave the discus. Last year as a freshman, Rochette placed a respectable third in the league meet. Smith finished sixth in the same event as a junior. They will be joined on the throwing team by a sophomores Amy Weaver, Nadine Wieczorek and Lisa Devlin.

girls track

The long distance team, made up of runners Carol Sulick, Amy Masternak, Becky Kinczkowski and Stacy Wolf, should also rack up some Other returnees include seniors Colleen Conrad (relays and long jump), Kate Stewart (sprints) and Niki Otto (distance and hurdles), and juniors Melanie Franklin (high jump) and Beth Nosakowski (middle distance). The Chargers also have a fine crop of freshman, according to coach Audrey Kather.

"We should be decent — maybe not the top, but decent," she said. "We hope to finish in the middle of

LIVONIA STEVENSON

The core of Stevenson's team is found in the long distance, hurdles and field events, where a number of team members excelled in last year's league meet.

League 800-meter champion Sheila Taormina returns, but she won't begin competing until she finishes her AAU swimming season.

Hurdler Karen Millen, who finished third in the 300 meter hurdles last year, also is back. So is Chris Schemanske, who took a fourthplace last year in the discus.

The long.jumpers are led by Amy Rozman, who finished fourth in the WLAA league meet last year, and Kim Smith.

Rozman also took second-place honors in the 400 meter dash at the league meet. She'll be joined by Gina Abidin, giving the Spartans a formidable middle distance running

Other key returnees include Michele Economou, who finished fourth in league in the 3,200, and Sue Tatigian, who captured fifth in both the 1,000 and 3,200.

Shot putter Shawn Snyder will add depth and experience to the throwing teams.

LIVONIA BENTLEY

Bentley had a disastrous season last year, but the Bulldogs are already showing signs of improvement, losing their season opener Tuesday to Garden City, 68-64, in a close encounter.

The young Bulldogs have 28 girls out for this year's team, which isn't bad, considering 17 girls from last year's team didn't return.

The long distance, sprints and relays will be the Bulldogs' strengths this year, according to third-year coach Dennis Knittel. But to improve on last year's mark, Bentley will need some help from its fresh-

"I think we're already ahead of where we were last year," Knittel said. "We have a lot of ninth-graders that have performed very well.

"I'm looking to improve over last year record-wise - we should be better. But we won't be winning any league titles."

Senior Liz Gordon will lead the sprint team. She'll be joined by junior Kathy Long and promising sophomore Katie Ebel, who'll run sprints and anchor the sprint relays. Long will also handle the high jumping chores. Junior Sue Brookshire returns to lead the hurdlers while sophomore Kris Kett heads the contingent of middle distance runners.

The Bulldogs will rely on newcomers Karen Habersett (shot put), Cheryl Crandahl (sprints), Kerry Craig (sprints), Amy Ritter (discus) and Sue Favor (long jump) to pick up the slack.

CLARENCEVILLE

The Trojans may have a tough time fielding a team this year, according to first-year coach Dick Davio. Only 15 girls have signed up for the team thus far, and Davio is unsure where the team stands at this

"We're having a real participation problem," he said. "It's looking dismal, but we're going to stay with it to see what happens. Hopefully, we'll have more girls come out."

Clarenceville has virtually no returning members, Davio said. Most of the girls out for this year's team are freshman.

"Several kids that ran last year have given me verbal promises, but they haven't shown up for practice,"

Wantuck earns places at NCAA's

staff writer

Mike Wantuck proved the ability that made him an All-American as a freshman at Texas is as abundant now, two years later at Ohio State

Now the only question still needing an answer is how much that ability can be honed and if it will be enough to carry him to the highest platform among NCAA divers.

Wantuck, an Ohio State sophomore athletically and a Bloomfield Hills Andover graduate, partook in the NCAA diving championships last weekend, a competition that OSU diving coach Vince Panzano said was "better than it's ever been." Wantuck placed fifth on the 3-meter board and ninth on the 1-meter.

'He dove extremely well," said Panzano of Wantuck's performances, both of which earned him All-American designation.

WANTUCK HAD done well at the Big Ten championships last month, but he was even sharper at the NCAAs, hosted by his former school, Texas. Wantuck scored 582 points on the 3-meter board last weekend, compared to his 555 total at the Big Ten meet. On the 1-meter, he had 479.10 points at the Big Ten and 500 at the NCAAs.

status. Senior Mark Bradshaw finished second on the 3-meter and fifth on the 1-meter. while sophomore Pat Jeffry was sixth on the 1-meter and eighth on the 3-meter. The trio scored all 78 of OSU's team points, enabling the Buckeyes to finish 14th in the NCAA, best among Big Ten teams.

IT ALSO earned Panzano Diving Coach of the Year honors.

Wantuck and Jeffry are the only underclassmen among the top 8 finishers on the 3-

'It indicates they definitely have a good chance (to win an NCAA title)," Panzano said. "And that's certainly one of (Wan-nation."

Wantuck's showing "wasn't surprising," said Panzano. "He took a year off from NCAA competition (after transferring), but he was training real hard for the Olympic

"He learned some new dives and it took some time for him to adapt to them, and to adapt to a new system and environment. But I definitely think before he graduates he can be an NCAA champion."

Three Buckeyes earned All-American Longhorn training program, which dwelled more on mental conditioning than physical training. He wanted to enroll at Michigan but diving coach Dick Kimball made it known he did not Wantuck on the team.

That's when Panzano got in contact with him. Panzano had met Wantuck when the pair were part of a team travelling in Eu-

"I told him he was welcome to come and join our team," Panzano said. "Mike was a bit concerned with the quality of education here, so I had him talk to some people in the academic program. He found out that if you do well in the undergraduate program here you can go to any graduate program in the WANTUCK IS interested in pursuing a career in law, Panzano said. He is currently enrolled in OSU's English honors program and has a better than 3.0 grade point.

His grades have been just as high athletically, and they should go even higher, according to Panzano.

"He's definitely going to improve," the Buckeye coach said. "Even though he's been diving a long time, he's still learning. His list (of dives) won't change much, but he has WANTUCK LEFT Texas after his fresh- to develop those dives to a higher level, and man year because he didn't agree with the he has to do them with more consistency."

She's got the grit of a champ at age 12

By Chris McCosky staff writer

Where do they get the courage, the poise, the confidence?

Andrea Dewey. She stands maybe 4-foot-5. She's 12 years old, a seventh grader at West Middle School in Plymouth. Her large puppy-dog brown eyes give her a timid facade.

Don't be fooled. This 12-year-old is a cool customer, nerves of steel and Dewey, a resident of Canton Township, took on more than 100 Class II gymnasts last weekend at the United States Gymnastics Federation (USGF) state meet. At stake was a berth in the USGF Class II Regional Meet April 27 in Louisville, Ky.

The first event for Dewey was balance beam, a tough way to open such a crucial meet.

"Gymnastics is fun, mostly," Dewey said. "But, I could really feel the pressure there (at the state meet). I knew that if I fell off beam, I wouldn't make it to regional."

DEWEY, YOU should know, did not fall off the beam. She didn't even wobble. She nailed her routine for a first-event score of 8.8, a personal best. She went on from there to score a 34.75 all-around, another personal best and placed fifth overall.

Since the top six scores qualify for regionals, Dewey is off to Louisville.

That beam was a make it or break it event for Andrea," said Claudia Kretschmer who, along with husband Ed, coach Dewey at Ann Arbor's Gym America. "It's the hardest event and real nerve-racking for the girls. But Andrea kept it together and really attacked it. I was very pleased."

Dewey has somehow, in just four short years of gymmnastic competition, become a clutch performer. She is at her best when the pressure is on.

"She has made remarkable improvement in a short period of time," Kretschmer said. "She learns new things very quickly. She isn't afraid to tackle the difficult tricks. She may be afraid at first, but she has learned to take the steps necessary to overcome her fears. She competes with a tremendous amount of determination."

people in sports

DEWEY CAN'T remember why she got started in gymmnastics. Her father, Ken Dewey, traced her gymn-mastics roots back to a day four years ago when his wife and daughter went to a gymnastics class at Plymouth Canton High School taught by Plymouth Salem gymnastics coach Kathi Kinsella.

From there, Andrea joined the Go-Fer Gymnastics Club in Garden City. Two years ago she migrated to Gym

Kretschmer said Dewey has somewhat of a split personality - one that is very healthy for a gymnast.

"Andrea is at the very youngest end of a Class II cycle. I expect she'll be Class I next year," Kretschmer said. "She's quite a special gymmnast. She's a very good competitor. She can be tough when it counts. She has a lot of talent and is able to putlit together at the right times.

"But, she's a very fun-loving little girl. She's the one that keeps everybody up. She makes people laugh and keep on going when things aren't going good. She's very loose. She came to us as a bouncing little girl. Now, she's a bouncing 12-year-old gymnast."

DEWEY IS making her second straight appearance at the USGF regionals. She qualified last year, but didn't earn a place at the regional

Her goal for this year is simple: "I want to place at regionals."

There's another goal, too. A more distant one. One that she doesn't like to talk about

"I guess I would like to see her go for the Olympics," said her father, Ken. "But only 10 girls in the entire country make it, although Andrea's at the right age for 1988.

"It would be great for her to compete on America's team, but there will have to be some decisions made on sacrifices. It is an expensive proposition we're talking about."

This summer, Andrea will train at the exclusive Parkettes Gymnastics Club in Pennsylvania.

"Several Team USA gymnasts train there," Ken Dewey said. "It will give Andrea good exposure and good national experience that she really

In the meantime, Andrea Dewey will spend five nights a week in an Ann Arbor gym. She'll practice a little, play a few jokes on her teammates and, all in all, have a pretty

But on Saturday, April 27 in Louisville, when she approaches her first event at the regional meet, there'll be fire in Dewey's brown eyes.

Andrea Dewey, a West Middle School student, will make her second straight appearance at the USGF regional meet in Ken-

Smathers gets RU

By Brad Emons staff writer

Homer "Tip" Smathers is coming home. Redford Union athletic director Bob Atkins announced early this week that the 39year-old Smathers, currently on a leave of absence in Whitewright, Texas, from his position as a history teacher at RU, will become the school's new basketball coach. He replaces Lee Bjerke, who resigned last

"Tip has a lot of experience, and this is the only level he hasn't coached at," Atkins said. "He'll be back on our staff next year and he's been involved with our program.

"I'm excited by it. He's an excellent role model and he knows our system."

Smathers served as a junior varsity coach at RU from 1967 through 1970. He then became an assistant coach at Wayne State, coaching there until 1974. Later that year Smathers was named the head basketball coach at the University of Michigan-Dearborn, where he served five

During the 1980-81 season he was the JV coach at Farmington Harrison. His last coaching job was 1983-84, when he led the RU freshman team.

"THE KIDS who will be juniors next year were on the freshman team that I coached," Smathers said. "I didn't know a whole lot about this year's team because I wasn't there. There's not a lot to base it on.

"But I'm excited and anxious to get back doing this."

Smathers takes over a team that has won only four games over the past three sea-

Country singer hopes his recording will sell but Gene Ferris, a local country singer, is still waiting for his Christmas pres-

Thursday, April 4, 1985 O&E

The 40-year-old leader of a country dance band called the Paupers (which plays at private clubs) wrote and recorded a tune entitled "Christmas Is Here" in Nashville in late 1983. He even spent a couple thousand dollars of his own money to do it.

That's because he has faith in this song. But, since then, the former Troy resident now living in Royal Oak, is still waiting for something good to come of the 45-RPM recording or of the song itself.

"I kept expecting a record company to come along and say they want it for someone like George Jones to record," said Ferris, a part-time musician who has been writing songs for many years.

On record, Ferris has a classic country voice - deep with a hard edge that suggests he's lived a little in his time. H.3 "Christmas Is Here" has appealing lyrics and melody and the backup voices of the famous Jordanaires quartet. On the Champ Records label, it was produced in Nashville by Roger Ricker and featured Elvis Pesley's former rhythm section.

Once Ferris got his supply of re-cords, however, he found he had no distribution system and no clout with radio stations to get it played. Ferris, suspects - probably rightly so - that a lot of country-music stations which received the record in the mail simply tossed it out without opening it.

They get records like mine every day," he said philosophically. "They don't have time to carefully listen to Nonetheless, Gene Ferris continues to write songs. He may even spend some more of his money, earned as a toolmaker, to return to Nashville to 9077.

Christmas is come and gone again, record a couple more songs "just for my own amusement."

In the meantime, he recognizes that as a country singer and writer he has time to still make it in the business. "I may not be another Elvis Presley," he "but look at Willie Nelson. He didn't really make it until he was 50. I can always write music no matter how JAMIE'S ON 7 in Livonia continues its policy of bringing in name entertainment once or twice a month. The club already featured the Count Basie Orchestra, Chubby Checker and the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra.

Next on the schedule is a slightly different kind of jazz act. Jazz guitarist Joe Pass, billed as "the World's Greatest Jazz Guitarist," performs the evening of Monday, April 15.

There may be other jazz guitarists around who might take issue with the title "World's Greatest." There's no doubt, however, that Pass, who has recorded with greats such as Duke Ellington, Dizzy Gillespie, Oscar Peterson and Ella Fitzgerald, is ertainly a virtuoso of the jazz guitar.

He's so good that he's not afraid to take on the challenge of playing unac-companied jazz in a nightclub. "People don't seem to mind that I'm playing without a rhythm section," Pass has been quoted as saying. "I've been fortunate in that I've never played a club that was really noisy. That would be a problem.

Usually, when in Detroit, Pass plays at Baker's Keyboard Lounge. But the musician, who has been on the jazz scene since the 1940s, should sound just as warm and lyrical at Jamie's as he does at Baker's.

Jamie's on 7 is at 29703 W. Seven Mile. For more information, call 477-

ANOTHER JAZZ great comes to the metro area when trumpeter Freddie Hubbard joins the MPJMA Jazz Repertory Orchestra for a concert at 8 p.m. Saturday, April 13, at the Wayne Community Arts Auditorium on Cass Avenue in Detroit.

MPJMA stands for the Michigan Professional Jazz Musicians Association, which is presenting a spring fundraising concert featuring the music of Wendell Harrison, Pamela Wise and Harold McKinney.

"We've got a grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts to put this concert on," said Wise, a musician and composer working regularly with Harrison. "Freddie Hubbard is an old acquaintance of Wendell's and we just thought it would be great to showcase him in Detroit."

The definitive jazz trumpeter of the 1960s and '70s, Hubbard was frequently voted No. One Jazz Trumpeter by Downbeat magazine polls. In addition to recording more than 30 albums, Hubbard has played jazz concerts and festivals all over the world. Although more recently surpassed in popularity by Woody Shaw and Wynton Marsalis, Hubbard is - as the title of his latest album release suggests - a classic jazz trumpeter.

For more information about the concert, contact Rebirth Inc. at 875-0289.

REMEMBER THE good old days when, if you heard the name of a musical group or a band you knew who the

For instance, in the 1930s and '40s, you always knew who led the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, the Freddy Martin Orchestra or the Artie Shaw Orchestra.

In the 1950s, what with the advent of rock 'n' roll, musical groups took on new kinds of names. You had group names like the Flamingos, the Coasters, the Del Vikings, the Teenagers, the Fleetwoods and the Kingston Trio. Into the 1960s, the creativity in naming bands and groups was near a high - in more ways than one. You had groups like Steppenwolf, Jefferson Airplane, Blue Cheer and Strawberry Alarm

That trend toward self-expression in names continues today, though into the present decade almost anything goes when a group selects a name. You can find bands called Twisted Sister, Duran Duran, Loverboy, Yellow Jacket, Flock of Seagulls and Revolution.

All of which brings me to a look at some local pop bands. Reviewing a listing, I ran across these gems: Benny and the Jets, Bonnie and the Working Girls, the Born Again Virgins, Boss Rhino, Good Catholic Boys, Moose and Da Sharks and Otis and the Elevators.

Jerry Patlow, a Redford theatrical agent for the last 22 years, manages and books local bands. Besides representing the "West Side Story"-sounding Benny and the Jets, Patlow also books a group called Wedsel's Edsels.

Gene Ferris wrote a Christmas song and recorded it with the Jordanaires, but it didn't get the airplay he expected. Ferris continues to write songs, hoping that one of his country tunes becomes a hit someday. He also has his own band, the Paupers, with whom he plays rhythm guitar. Other band members are Jess Childers, bass guitar; Bill White, lead guitar and Don Houston, drums.

"About 12 years ago we wanted to come up with a name that would lead called King Grease. "When you see that people to believe the minute they saw name," he said, "you know it's not a the name on the marquee that it's a country group.' 1950s group," Patlow said.

"Superman II" (1980), 8 p.m. Sunday on Ch. 7. Originally 127 minutes. TV time slot: 180 minutes.

Writers and producers who began to run out of ideas about three-quarters of the way through the original "Superman" here prove that a dearth of good, new material can't stand in the way of a sequel. Even comic book movies have to maintain a semblance of credibility, yet "Superman II" has none. Why, for instance, broadcast that Superman, once transformed permanently and irrevocably into Clark Kent, cannot again become the man of steel only to have him retransformed into Superman to save the day nearfilm's end? And what ever happens to Lex Luthor's assistant, Valerie Perrine, who simply drops out of the movie about half way through? Beyond the incredulities, "Superman II" has none of the warmth or depth of character that the original offers. It also reveals the limited acting ability of Christopher Reeve, who looked solid in "Superman," but very wooden in later works such as this one. "Somewhere in Time" and "Monsignor." A squealing Margot Kidder's no treat either, but bad guys Gene Hackman, Sarah Douglas and Terence Stamp get their fangs into too-limited parts. Ned Beatty, Susannah York, Jackie Cooper and E.G. Marshall co-star and are completely wasted.

Rating: 75 cents.

"Young Doctors in Love" (1982), 9 p.m. Monday on Ch. 7. Originally 95 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

Producer/director Garry Marshall, who gave us TV's "Laverne & Shirley," is behind "Young Doctors in Love," a satire about as subtle as a shotgun blast. It's inspired by the zany "Airplane!" but isn't as good, yet just might play well on the home screen, where expectations aren't so high. Dabney Coleman, Michael McKeon and Harry Dean Stanton star. Marshall, incidentally, also is responsible for last year's "Flamingo Kid," a tender and occasionally

"Jesus Christ, Superstar" (1973), 12:30 Monday night on Ch. 7. Originally 103 minutes. TV time slot: 235 minutes.

Happy Easter, everyone. And here's the perfect film to mark the holy day. Writers Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Jesus Christ, Superstar" is superbly tranferred from Broadway to the big screen by director Norman Jewison who, as usual, imbues the film with a clean, vibrant look. Credit, too, cinematographer Douglas Slocombe (who also worked with Jewison on the visually distinct "Rollerball") for the breathtaking visuals. The rest of the applause goes to Webber and Rice, who also wrote "Evita," for their provocative and moving play. Ted Neeley and Yvonne Elliman star.

"Gable and Lombard" (1976), 12:30 Wednesday night on Ch. 7. Originally 131 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

Just a brief blurb to cue you in on one of the worst movies ever made. James Brolin and Jill Clayburgh, who have distinguished themselves in other quarters, are absolutely horrendous as the mythic Clark Gable and Carol Lombard. Brolin's performance, especially, has to be seen to be disbelieved. For unintended comic value alone, this one rates

Rating: $2 (Canadian).

Works call for sense of humor

The Detroit Contemporary Chamber Ensemble presented its latest program of contemporary music Friday. The program featured music by Ramon Zupko, Sydney Hodkinson, Michael Colgrass and Igor Stravinsky.

If one were to ask to choose the "odd one" in the above list, that wouldn't be too difficult. None of the first three enjoys the universal reputation of Stravinsky.

The question of who is the more established composer is beside the point, however. The works of the lesser-known composers on this program did provide musical interest on their own, even if one prefers more established works. But even the work by Stravinsky, his 1918 composition "L'histoire du Soldat." (The Soldier's Tale), isn't part of the standard repertoire.

The opening work by Zupko, who was present, titled "Fixations," featured a trio for piano, violin and cello, supplmented by prerecorded sounds of these instruments (not with the identical perform-

Zupko explained that his technique differs from electronic music. The taped sounds are those of bona fide instruments rather than electronic sounds due to multiple processing. The interaction between the players and the recorded sound seemed to be spontaneous and real at some points. The trio on stage consisted of pianist Robert Conway, violinist Magdalen Heilbronn and cellist Marcy Chanteaux.

THE WORK by Hodkinson, "The Dissolution of the Serial," featured Barrett Kalellis at the piano and James Dawson, playing interchangeably soprano and alto saxophone. The work, as the name implies, features gradual transition from atonality to tonality.

Dawson, a regular performer on this series and on the faculty of Oakland University, was impressive in his ability to produce so many varying sounds on his instrument and displayed fine tech-

Kalellis, in addition to being a capable pianist, was amusing in his stage manner. Both seemed to be having a lot of fun, with added humor provided

Julian Lennon plays in Detroit concert

The first Detroit appearance of Julian Lennon in concert will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday, April 23, at the Fox Theater in Detroit.

Tickets at $15 are on sale at Hudson's and all Ticket World outlets.

"Valotte," Lennon's debut album currently on the pop charts, was recorded at several studios in New York, as well as at the Muscle Shoals Sound Studio in Alabama, where Lennon was joined by a group of supporting players.

The result is a first album and single, "Too Late for Goodbyes," by the son of the late John Lennon.

by violist Glenn Mellow, who was in the capacity of page turner in this work, running from one performer to the other.

Mellow resorted to his more conventional duties following the intermission when he played the "Variations for Four Drums and Viola" by Colgrass. With Michael Udow at the drums, this unusual combination proved to be most inspired.

This work was on one of the programs of the Renaissance City Chamber Players. The odds against hearing this work twice in one season must be considerably more than finding an egg with two yolks. With such good fortune, it may be time to try the Michigan Lottery.

SPEAKING OF fortunes, Barrett Kalellis, who is the music director of this series, has recently won a $500 award for a new composition, "The Hill

Kalellis concluded this program by conducting a rewarding performance of Stravinsky's suite "L'histoire du Soldat." This was the one work in which the entire ensemble participated. The ingenuity of the composer was matched by the quality of this performance.

The next and last program of this series will fea-ture works by Alan Hovhaness, the extremely prolific American composer of Armenian descent. The composer will be present as a guest.

isn in 20th Century Art: Affinity of the Tribal and the Modern" at the Detroit Institute of Arts is exciting, enriching and enlightening.

One of just three museums in the national tour, the exhibition, sponsored by Philip Morris Inc., examines the influence of tribal art on modern art, their affinities and the nature of modernist "primitivism" as a force in Western art over the past century.

Not within the last 50 years has this aspect of modern art history been explored. No topic in 20th century art has received less serious attention.

"Primitivism in 20th Century Art" is directed by William Rubin, director of the Museum of Modern Art's department of painting and sculpture, and Professor Kirk Varnedow of New York University's Institute of Fine Arts. It is the first major exhibition ever to juxtapose modern and tribal objects.

It is also the first exhibition to focus on ways mc ern artists came to understand and appreciate the beauty, power and subtlety of tribal objects.

THE COMPREHENSIVE exhibition, beautifully and intelligently installed, includes approximately 100 modern paintings, sculpture and drawguin, Picasso, Brancusi, Modigliani, Klee, the Expressionists and Surrealmost deeply involved with tribal

Also, masks and sculptures from the personal collections of Picasso, Matisse, Braque, Derain, Nolde, Ernst, Matta and other modern painters and sculptors are on display.

When cultures, past or present, in-The acclaimed exhibition, "Primitiv- teract, there is a new understanding, learning and communication. As a result, new ideas are born.

The beginnings of "primitivism" can be traced to Paul Gauguin. Captivated by the people and culture of Polynesia, he melded the realism of impressionism with the flat decorative and stylized forms of the non-Western arts, most particularly Egyptian and Javanese

The real breakthrough, however, occurred with Picasso's revolutionary 'Les Demoiselles d'Avignon," 1907.

Worked and reworked with more than 100 drawings, the finished painting reveals five women, prostitutes, in a bordello. The central two figures are traditionally rendered, the one on the left suggests Egyptian influence, but the two figures on the far right are African heads, monstrously distorted.

Besides his obvious ambivalence toward women, the painting communicates a sense of "barbarism" and darkness. Juxtaposed to this pivotal work is a Mbuya (sickness) mask. The question most frequently asked is how direct an influence was the African object?

REFERRED to as "art Negre," the Trocadero Museum possessed a large number and wide variety of African objects. Undoubtedly, Picasso had access Special emphasis has been placed on to these tribal works. After "Dethose artists and movements — Gaumoiselles," Picasso became an avid collector of African objects.

His sculpted, "Guitar," 1912, directly recalls the tribal form of a Gebo mask. Installed side by side, the elongation of the guitar's front panel evokes the horns of the mask, while the sound hole has the same projection as the eyes of the tribal work.

"Bust of a Woman," 1931, Picasso's sculpture of his voluptuous mistress, from Zaire. Picasso was greatly influenced by tribal art and was a collector of African art.

Marie-Therese, was inspired by the Nimba mask, goddess of fertility, that sat in the entrance hall of his chateau at Boisgeloup. One juxtaposed to the other, it is easy to see the tribal influ-ence of the enlarged, almost phallic nose and prominent breasts.

Essentially, the religious fetishes of the tribal objects are translated and modernized into new meaning. Like "Bust of a Woman," Brancusi's "Madame L. R." 1914-18, was inspired by a reliquary figure of Hongwe also on view at the Trocadero.

A Zuni war god mask on view at the Berlin Museum inspired Paul Klee's "Mask of Fear," 1932 and gives social commentary. Giacometti's bronze, "Spoon Woman," 1926-27, incorporates the spoons of the Ivory coast in a metaphoric statement that renders the female body as a vessel.

Michigan-trained artist, Italo Scanga's "Potato Famine No. 1," 1979 utilizes the found object, the potato, and in the form of a religious tribal fetish, communicates political and social sat-

JUST AS the European artists sought inspiration from African and Oceanic cultures, American artists, such as Jackson Pollack looked to North America. Inspired, he began a genuine engagement with the primitive. Not only is his interest in native American art evident in his color sense (yellow, red, black) but in "Birth," 1939-40, there is an unmistakable resemblance to Eskimo masks as he combines tribal design with an image of primal male and female forces.

The juxtaposition of the tribal and modern make the relationship between

The affinity between Eskimo masks and Joan Miro's "Carnival of Harlequin," 1924-25, is striking, but there is no documented evidence that Miro was directly influenced by the Eskimo ob-

Miro may or may not have seen the tribal masks, but certainly he was aware of the culture. The tribal arts have a simplicity and basic form that transcends time and sends its message either consciously or unconsciously. We, in turn, are the benefactors of that innovative art - "Primitivism."

Museum hours are 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday - Sunday; Wednesday and Thursday until 8 p.m. Admission is $3.75 for general public. The exhibition will extend through May 19. For additional information call 833-7963.

Young poet finds words come easily

By Mary Klemic staff writer

At the age of 25, Robin Smith is practically an old hand at poetry.

The Livonia resident has been writing since she was in grade school. A poem she wrote on Columbus was the nning entry in a contest in fifth

"It was something I always did. It wasn't something I aspired to," Smith said. "I just loved English, I loved to

SMITH WILL be one of eight writers who will participate in readings called "New Voices in Michigan Poetry," part of the Poetry Resource Center of Michigan's ninth annual Michigan Poetry Festival this year. The festival will ton. This year's eight poets were chosen from more than 100 contestants. "I was really thrilled," said Smith, who submitted five poems for consideration. "I think it's a good chance to meet a lot of other writers from around the state and let your work be known."

Smith's work has appeared in publications at Western Michigan Universishe attended and Wayne State University, but she never has taken part in public readings before.

THE POET has her dry spells, but most of the time she finds it easy to write. Many of Smith's ideas come to her right before she goes to sleep. She thinks a work is finished when it moves from one idea to another smoothly and "hangs together."

"I'm so uncomfortable if I don't take place Friday and Saturday, April write," Smith said. "It's just a part of 12-13, at the Botsford Inn in Farming- me. Sometimes I think I don't know where things come from.

"Sometimes I work and work (at a Robert Frost and other poets poem) until it seems like there's nothing else I can get rid of."

Smith writes for everyone to read, not one certain group of people. She will polish a poem until it communicates what she wants, but she doesn't compiles enough works to put in a mind if readers give it an interpretation different than she has intended.

"That's OK," Smith said. "After I write it, in a way it's not mine any

"I don't want to be an elitist poet, or be so (abstract) you can't make sense out of one of my poems."

SMITH IS FROM a creative family. One of her sisters paints, while another writes fiction. Her mother, who works as a mime, was active in community theater and also wrote poetry.

In high school, Smith's favorite poets included Sylvia Plath, Carl Sandburg,

"I never got into traditional classical rhymed material," Smith said. "My work is free verse and imagistic. That's pretty broad."

Smith wants to keep writing until she book. She also would like to take classes to finish a degree in English.

"THE ONLY goal I really have is someday I would like to have a book published of my own work," the poet said. "I don't see that happening until I'm much older."

Smith doesn't write every day, although she belongs to a writing group. She finds time for poetry around her job as a computer operator at WSU and taking care of 3-year-old son Colin.

"He likes me to read him books," Smith said. "He likes to turn the pag-

By David Messing special writer

Well we're open in our new store. Terrance Corners is a beautiful place for an art store and school. As of this writing, however, parts of the ceiling are off and six of the 24 drafting tables have yet to be assembled. I even have to "beat it" over there before 10 a.m. to reprogram the cash registers. Even though we worked around the clock for two weeks, we still have a million

Moving stock around is kind of a joke in the store, and we will probably still be moving shelves and stock for the next month. Sandy's a good one for that. She wanted us to move an 8-by-12 foot mat board display, "just six inches to the right."

"Six inches." I said, "we would need

at least 10 men and a hi-lo to move that thing one inch."

I'd swim the deepest ocean and climb the highest mountain for her, but I ain't gonna move that mat board display. Anyway, there is no way I could say that we are really ready to open,

COME TO think of it, this certainly is a bad week to continue my two part article on "follow through." I fell asleep three times writing it, I hope you don't fall asleep reading it.

Last week I ended my article with the "follow through" principle with the basic elements of No. 1, a good idea or subject. No. 2, the technical skill to rightly represent the idea or subject. No. 3, the presentation of the well-executed idea or subject. The lack of any one of the three will result as a flaw in your follow through. A good idea rendered poorly is no better off than a poor idea rendered well. Even a good idea rendered well is halted if it is poorly presented.

So first off I would like to briefly hit some of the top ten road blocks on your highway to successful follow through. In watercolor the easiest way to stifle your follow through is to do too much. Over painting or scrubbing in watercolor causes the beautiful bleeds to flatten out into boring shapes of solid color. New students in watercolor should "play" with "bleeds" or "wet in wet" techniques until they feel comfortable. Try with one brush or just wet the area you wish to color. Then with another brush full of color touch into the wet area. Enjoy the bleed and flow of color and resist adding in more color until the bleed of color has stopped.

Most new students just keep brushing or scrubbing the area and end up with a flat color. In pastels I tell my students that the first road block to their follow through is that of over bleeding. I think there is something therapeudic about rubbing our fingers on pastels. Maybe it goes back to when we used to rub the satin ribbon on our "nigh-nighs" or WHATEVER, MOST students if not warned will rub their pastel pictures so much that the details are lost under a misty cloud of multicolored dust. Well it may help produce a better pastel rendering if you do not blend with your fingers as much and simply use the different colors of pastels to rub into each other and therefore, blend with each other. This technique in pastel will produce rich colors and relatively clear images. Charcoals are usually flat because they do not span the gamut of grays to black. If your charcoal is not black enough then try using soft compressed charcoal to produce rich blacks and emphasize the grays.

Pen and ink short comings are usually due to lines that are not fine enough. Even in pen and ink "learn to draw" books, it looks like the artist should retire his quill tip in lieu of a technical pen. There are plenty of times I use quill tips and dip them in black magic ink. But for most of my realistic pen and ink, I prefer the regularity of a good technical pen.

For beginning pen and ink, you should have a "20-by-0" and a "4-by-0" and work your drawing no larger than 11 inches by 14 inches. Air brushing has plenty of opportunities to stumble. One common goof is, over spraying your frisket or template. So much so that you see the light line of the outer limits of your template misted across your

Another common short coming is when you have a large dot or "grainy" spray pattern. This is always caused by either too heavy a consistency of paint or too little air to rightly atomize the

ONE LAST warning, when peeling frisket be sure you peel up all your planned too. Because frisket is transparent it is very common to not see some little section of frisket. Then when that over looked piece is painted it begins to show up. To better see your frisket tip the illustration board so that the light reflects off from the surface of the frisket.

In gouache or opaque watercolor it is best. I feel, to keep your paint this and start out with a transparent wash effect then move towards opacity. The biggest draw back to realistic coloring is that students do not carefully study the many shades and tints even in solid colors. Every color is affected by its surrounding colors and light source or reflected light from off of other ob-

Many first time scratch-boards seem to find their way into the circular file. Perhaps the fate of many could be changed if only the artist kept their lines tiny and accurate, and in addition learn how to sharpen a scratchpoint on a sharpening stone. A good scratchpoint drawing may require from three to 10 sharpenings. The presentation is the final step in follow through. Presentation merely means how you present or show your work. All artwork should at least be matted to be protected from the finger prints of adoring viewers. Of course artwork is even better presented when framed.

There is just something about the clean edge of a mat, the make of the frame molding and the flatness of the glass, that truly finishes a piece of artwork. Use the "follow through principle" in all you do. It certainly could pertain to much more than just artwork . . . except maybe when it comes to moving an art store.

"The Strength of a Nation Lies in the Homes of Its People."

Abraham Lincoln

These words, attributed to Abraham Lincoln, still confirm a basic American freedom--the right to own, use and transfer proprerty.

The National Association of Realtors has set aside the week of

April 28--May 4, 1985

PRIVATE PROPERTY WEEK.

This weeklong observance reaffirms the rights that come with owning property. For most of us this means a home of our own. And as homeowners we tend to put down roots, to become involved in local government processes and to care about what takes place in our community and neighborhood.

On Thursday, May 2, we will dedicate a CREATIVE LIVING REAL ESTATE SECTION to Private Property Week. Look for this special edition filled with beautiful homes listed by area Realtors.

The right to home ownership is precious and must never be taken for granted. We think it is a right that should be perserved for future generations.
