Schools OK 5 percent for administrators

By Emory Daniels
staff writer

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education has made "labor peace" with all the district's administrators.

In separate action Monday night, the school board voted to ratify a two-year contract with the Plymouth-Canton Administrators (PCA), approved pay increases for non-unionized administrators, and voted salary increases for the district's top leaders.

The contract negotiated with the PCA granted 5 percent increases over each of the next two years. The new agreement also results in an adjustment in the range factors to better reflect the existence of different degrees of administrative difficulty among administrative positions, explained Roland Thomas, school board president.

The agreement now calls for eight steps in the salary schedule instead of five, Thomas explained, and brings the salary schedule structure for the administrators' union more in line with the teachers' contract structure.

The PCA includes principals, assistant principals, area coordinators, and some directors.

THE BOARD also approved pay increases for all non-affiliated administrators which includes all managers who are not unionized except for the assistant superintendent, associate superintendent, and two assistant superintendents.

The non-affiliated administrators also received a 5 percent increase for each of the next two years, and had three range steps added to their salary schedule.

The board also voted to eliminate the first two steps of the non-affiliated salary schedule, said Thomas, as they were so low the district was unable to hire anyone in at those steps anyhow.

THE BOARD REACHED a one-year agreement on salaries for its top administrators, although the top members of the central cabinet would have preferred a three-year understanding.

Under the adjustments approved by the board, the superintendent's (Dr. John M. Hoben) salary increased from $63,700 to $73,524 and the associate superintendent's (Ray Hoedel) salary rose from $53,655 to $60,657.

Salaries for the two assistant superintendents for instruction and for personnel (Dr. Michael Homes and Norm Kee) rose from about $52,500 last year to $58,019.

"We realize the value of our administrators and hope these increases allow us to be more competitive," commented Thomas.

"With the new retirement laws at the state level we'll be losing a number of our administrators within the next five years. Right now we are not in a competitive position to attract competent administrators to replace our's if they should retire or leave the district for another position."

In commenting on the merits of the top administrators, Thomas added: "Our administrators, and particularly Dr. Hoben, have led the way to improve the morale of our staff, communication with the community, and to raise student expectations."

The increases for the PCA and for the non-affiliated administrators both were approved by 7-0 votes of the board. For the superintendent, associate and two assistant superintendents the increases were approved by a 5-2 vote with trustees Dave Artley and Les Walker voting "no."

DR. HOBEN ADDED that administrative salaries had fallen behind as administrators had taken a pay freeze one year and modest increases in others.

As a result, Hoben said, the gap narrowed between pay for teachers and for administrators and the increase approved was needed to maintain the desired differential.

"I think the board also recognized that I am the senior superintendent in Wayne County — if not Washtenaw, Oakland and Macomb also — and that the salary for the superintendent was not in line with that being paid to many others."

When looking at the superintendent's salary, added Dr. Hoben, "you need to remember that Plymouth-Canton Community Schools is the fourth largest district in Wayne County and the ninth largest in the state."

State Racing Commissioner William Ballenger says they're going to have to come and get him before he vacates his Plymouth office to former Wayne County Prosecutor William Cahalan. Ballenger has filed a lawsuit challenging Cahalan's recent appointment to the post.

Office not big enough for both Ballenger, Cahalan off to 'races' for appointment

Michigan Racing Commissioner William Ballenger says the "walls will be shaking" before Gov. James Blanchard can get him to vacate his office.

"They're going to have to come and get me," Ballenger said Tuesday during an interview in his Plymouth office — adding that it may require a battering ram.

"I intend to continue to serve as racing commissioner until the highest court of law possible rules to the contrary," he said.

BLANCHARD on Monday appointed former Wayne County Prosecutor William Cahalan, a fellow Democrat, to the $44,900-a-year job. Ballenger's attorney Tuesday filed a lawsuit challenging that appointment.

"The connection between the pari-mutuel teller's union and James Karoub — who is not only the lobbyist for unpopular race track management but a past treasurer and political supporter of Attorney General Frank Kelley — is too obvious and possibly unsavory for anybody to overlook," Ballenger said.

Kelley ruled last November that Ballenger's term expired at the end of 1984. Ballenger contends he received a full four-year appointment in 1982 by then-governor William Milliken, a fellow Republican.

Ballenger replaced Frederick Van Tien, who died before his four-year term ended. Tien's term would have expired Dec. 31, 1984. That is why Kelley believes Ballenger's term has expired.

BALLENGER CONTENDS that Karoub, a powerful Michigan lobbyist, represents the owners of Hazel Park — Herbert Tyner and Bernard Hartman.

Ballenger believes Tyner and Hartman would prefer to see Cahalan as racing commissioner for a number of reasons.

"Karoub has been circulating Cahalan's name for some time now," Ballenger said Tuesday, during an interview squeezed in between calls from various state leaders.

"Karoub, acting on behalf of Hazel Park and Jackson, wanted to get me out by Sept. 1. It was because of a decision they were afraid I might make," he said.

"It's a case of the influence of a lobbyist who represents the very narrow interest of his clients being able to exert influence over the governor to make a decision that's not in the best interest of racing.

"Everything I have done is in the best interest of racing," he said.

A BLANCHARD spokesman denied Ballenger's charge.

"The governor's decision was based on the fact that Cahalan is an absolutely outstanding man for the job," said Tom Scott, Blanchard's deputy press secretary.

Asked whether Karoub met with Blanchard prior to the decision on Cahalan, Scott said:

"Not that I'm aware of — I doubt it. The governor has known Cahalan for some time, and it's pretty hard to question his qualifications."

A spokesman for Karoub's firm couldn't be reached for comment Tuesday.

TYNER AND Hartman also used to own the Detroit Race Course (DRC) in Livonia and were forced — by Ballenger, acting under a legislative mandate — to sell one of their tracks. DRC was sold to the British Ladbrooke Racing Corp. last winter.

Earlier this month, in an unprecedented move, Ballenger awarded 1986 racing dates to DRC and Northville Downs before Sept. 2 — the final day for racing date applications.

Hazel Park and Jackson Raceway, which hadn't applied for dates prior to the announcement, will have to split the remaining 1986 dates.

Ballenger believes his decision to announce 1986 racing dates prior to the final application day forced the appointment issue.

"A number of tracks already had applied. To me, it was pretty obvious who was going to apply for what dates. Tyner and Hartman were furious because they, as always, apply at the last minute for their dates," he said.

"I crossed them up in that I've given Northville Downs its dates."

Northville and Hazel Park compete against each other for harness racing dates.

"I THINK the decision to appoint Cahalan was made before I announced the racing date. I think Cahalan's appointment was announced more quickly because of my announcement of dates," Ballenger said.

"I think there is very good reason to believe there is an improper motive to the decision.

"I was appointed racing commissioner for a full four-year term in the fall of 1982 with the advice and consent of the Senate, who wrote the law and who subjected me to a two-hour public hearing at which time no questions were raised about whether my appointment should have legally been for anything less than four years.

"It is obvious what the present governor's motives are. I'm sure this incident will rekindle memories of the Dorothy Comstock Riley fiasco and the abortive attempt by the governor to install John Hertel as director of Agriculture," Ballenger said in a prepared statement.

CAHALAN WAS Wayne County prosecutor before resigning in 1982, in the middle of a four-year term, to enter private practice.

Ballenger, 44, was a state representative for two years, state senator for two years and Milliken's director of Licensing and Regulation for four years.

He served on the Michigan Organized Crime Commission and was deputy assistant secretary for congressional liaison in the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in the Ford Administration.

Neither Cahalan nor Ballenger had any direct experience with either the horse racing industry or its regulation before being appointed racing commissioner.

Plea to change posting paradox

Plymouth Township may have one of the only two-lane roads in Michigan with dual speed limits posted — but not for long.

Acting on a petition from residents on Ann Arbor Trail west of Sheldon, township trustees instructed Supervisor Maurice Breen to take the necessary steps to solve the problem.

Breen said because Ann Arbor Trail is a county road — not a township road — any change of the speed limit would require county approval. The board voted unanimously to have Breen — who, by law, also serves as the township's traffic engineer — to take "the necessary steps" with the county to have the speed limit reposted.

The request will be handled by the Wayne County Department of Public Works, which has replaced the Wayne County Road Commission.

"The speed limits posted on Ann Arbor Trail between Sheldon and Beacon Hill Drive make it dangerous to live on this section of road," according to Joel Dujsik.

"On Ann Arbor Trail the speed limit is 45 mph from the west and in the opposite direction, it is 35," Dujsik said.

"This difference in speed makes it hard to judge the traffic, especially when trying to get onto Ann Arbor Trail. Also, with the speed limit of 45 mph in the one direction, it is difficult to accelerate from a short driveway," he said.

Schools for rent not easily found

Future enrollment increases in Plymouth-Canton likely will not be absorbed by renting school buildings in neighboring districts.

That was the informal report given the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education Monday night from Superintendent Dr. John M. Hoben.

At the request of the district's bond study committee, Hoben talked with neighboring school districts about renting school buildings as an alternative to building a school within the district.

Washington Elementary in Livonia, near Lowell Middle School, is "non-touchable," said Hoben, explaining that Livonia Schools would not consider leasing it at all.

While Livonia might be willing to lease Garfield Elementary, the building is in such bad condition that plans call for it to be razed and so it really is of no use to Plymouth-Canton, added Hoben.

PLYMOUTH-CANTON IS interested in the Webster School on the east side of I-275 and north of I-96 three blocks from Merriman. Webster, however, is used as a special education center by Livonia Schools which probably is unwilling to discuss leasing that building.

Plymouth-Canton also is interested in Wincester Elementary in Northville near Tanger Elementary but Northville Schools will not consider letting that building go. The only school Northville has closed, added Dr. Hoben, is an elementary building downtown which is being partially used by high school students.

Hoben said he talked with Wayne-Westland Schools about Walker Elementary in Canton on Michigan Avenue east of I-275 but was told Walker has a stable attendance area and Wayne-Westland wouldn't consider leasing it.

The only building Wayne-Westland mentioned as a possibility was the Nankin Mills Learning Center on Cowan Road east of Wayne Road which Hoben felt was too far away.

The superintendent did say that Livonia is willing to continue leasing Lowell Middle School to Plymouth-Canton on a year-to-year basis for the next five years. Hoben said he felt Lowell would be needed until at least 1990.

So far, Lowell is the only school Plymouth-Canton has been able to lease.

Poor weather did little to dampen the excitement at Detroit Metropolitan Airport Saturday, as the thunderously loud take-off of a British Airways supersonic Concorde jet awed thousands of on-lookers.

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Joene McCoy and daughter Cathi head for Metro in style. McCoy, owner of Personal Development Center Inc. in Plymouth Township, was among the Nomads who flew to London on the Concorde Saturday. She'll return on the QE2, the British Cunard cruise ship.

Local 'ambassadors' board Concorde

By M.B. Dillon Ward
staff writer

No one's eardrums popped, nor did any airport windows shatter. But as Nomad travellers were whisked off to London aboard Concorde supersonic jets Friday and Saturday, the ground trembled. So deafening were the take-offs that car alarms were triggered.

One hundred Nomads departed on each of four flights last weekend, which marked the Detroit debut of the state-of-the-art airliner capable of flying at twice the speed of sound, and at altitudes of 60,000 feet.

Passengers — among them Joene McCoy of Canton, Virginia Gibson of Plymouth Township and Barbara Harper of Rochester — are touring England for four days before boarding the Queen Elizabeth 2 for a five-day cruise to New York. "Then we turn into pumpkins and fly Republic back to Detroit," said a harried McCoy the day before her flight.

The supersonic transport Concorde, manufactured jointly by the governments of France and Britain, can travel at speeds of 1,350 mph, making it the fastest-flying passenger jet aloft today. Most commercial jetliners fly at about 600 mph or less.

"It goes twice the speed of sound and 10 percent faster than a rifle bullet — so that's fast. I understand they can't break the sound barrier until we get to the coast," said Gibson before she left. "They have to stay within the speed of sound, otherwise dishes and everything else will break." Gibson completed a 24-year career as a Plymouth-Canton school nurse in 1982.

"We'll be there (in London) in four hours — normally it's an eight-hour trip," said McCoy, adding that the Nomads are getting a healthy discount. The trip will cost each traveller a total of $2,000, while a one-way ticket from New York to London routinely sells for $1,500, she said.

ANYONE cussing about having missed the Concorde's Detroit visit needn't feel they've missed the boat. On Monday, Sept. 9, the last of the Concorde flights chartered by the Nomads — a Michigan air travel club celebrating its 20th anniversary — will depart from Metro Airport.

Put into service by Air France and British Airways in 1976, the Concorde's "droopable" needle nose, delta wings and slim fuselage render it highly recognizable as well as efficient across a wide speed band. Four Rolls-Royce turbojets propel the craft at speeds so high that the resulting heat friction causes it to expand up to 10 inches during flight. "Time machine" passengers speed along at up to 12 miles above sea level, so they can see the curvature of the earth — a sight formerly reserved for astronauts and the military. Conventional airplanes cruise at altitudes of roughly 38,000 feet or less.

Despite the plane's capabilities, Concorde production stopped in 1979. The world's only fully operational supersonic airliner and the first to enter regular service has long been the object of controversy. The route network has grown, but the program suffered when Braniff and Singapore Airlines withdrew their sectors, according to Hiroshi Seo, author of Civil Aircraft of the World.

Operating economics make it "seem unlikely that civil supersonic transport will redeem itself in airline service," says Seo.

Controversy was the last thing on McCoy's mind as she embarked on her European getaway. Hired by McCoy's friends, Linda Puryear of Efficiency Management Consultants is taking care of car maintenance, shopping and home repair in the world traveller's absence. Her pals' gift even included a limo ride to Metro Saturday morning for McCoy and her daughter.

Township eyes weeds which turn into seeds

Once again, Plymouth Township trustees have been forced to tackle the thorny problem of weeds and enforcement of the weed ordinance.

And, once again, the board has elected to take a course of no action as its action.

The most recent request for weed enforcement has come from Fred Swan of Beck Road. Swan appeared at an earlier board meeting and placed a letter on record at Tuesday night's meeting.

"As I have stated to you and the township board, my wife has allergies from weed pollen, and I had requested the weeds be cut around my home on lands other than my own," Swan wrote in the letter to Jim Anulewicz, building department director.

The township weed ordinance requires land owners east of Beck Road to eliminate the existence of "noxious weeds, wild grass or fowl seeds" before they reach the seed-bearing stage.

The ordinance also provides enforcement power to the township building department — including the right to eliminate weeds for a landowner at the landowner's expense.

"JOSEPH ATTARD, chief building official, who delegates authority to enforce provisions of the weed ordinance, told me that I was being unreasonable, and we ended up in an argument," Swan wrote.

"You, yourself (Anulewicz) told me that township government was not going to enforce the ordinance to a woman on Beck Road, even though you state in the township newsletter that one of your duties was enforcement of the township ordinances.

"I notified you on July 1 about cutting weeds that still are not cut.

"As I have stated to you and the township board, some of these lands are held by land-holding companies whose only interest in the township are for profit, not the health or living conditions of the community," Swan wrote.

"Maurice Breen, the township supervisor, said he did not think so. . . . Of course, Breen thinks things are funny when you make statements to him and he laughs at you at the Township Board meetings in which other people I have talked to had the same thing happen when addressing him.

"Maybe Breen will laugh when the people of the township vote him out at the next election," Swan wrote.

Anulewicz, in a response to Swan, explained that some of the lots he requested enforcement on were west of Beck Road — where the ordinance doesn't apply.

As for the other areas, Attard was instructed to review the lots and notify owners in non-compliance with the ordinance.

"HE WANTS us to go ahead and administer the ordinance as it is written," Breen said Tuesday night.

"He wants us to take a proactive stance to attack weeds by buying the necessary equipment. We don't have a ton of people out there to do the whole township," Breen said.

Breen also said Swan wanted the township to consider extending the ordinance to include the area west of Beck. The supervisor said the matter was before the board to decide.

"West of Beck Road, the people didn't want the ordinance because they didn't want to cut their acreage," he said.

Trustee Abe Munfakh said west of Beck Road "clearly was excluded from the ordinance.

"Certainly the western side of the township has a lot of open land," he said.

Trustee Jim Irvine asked how the "protect-the-wilderness people will react" to eliminating weeds in the open spaces.

"I don't consider the east side of the township the wilderness," Clerk Esther Hulsing said.

"I'm not too enthused about revisiting an ordinance that is three years old at this point. Swan has my sympathy but I'm not interested in writing laws," Irvine said.

The board voted to receive Swan's letter, without directing Anulewicz to authorize weed cutting.

The trustees also asked that the township attorney continue his review of the ordinance to eliminate portions which suggest chemical eradicating and to change the collection process to property tax liens.

Canton continues to lose its key staffers

By M.B. Dillon Ward
staff writer

Recent deaths and resignations have taken their toll on Canton's talented leadership.

In roughly a year the township has lost, among others, its longtime clerk John Flodin, community leader Bart Berg, planner Jim Kosteva, finance director Mike Gorman and grants coordinator Terry Carroll.

Flodin died last October. Berg died last spring. Kosteva was elected state representative for the 37th District in November. The rest have gone on to new career challenges.

Canton can now add its public library director to the list of those leaving the township to accept other opportunities.

Deb O'Connor, who transformed Canton's library from an idea to a 70,000-volume, widely-respected facility, has been active in the regional library community as well as in the Canton community. Somehow making the time outside working hours, O'Connor has served as Canton Country Festival president, parade chairman and in a variety of capacities with local organizations.

The 34-year-old O'Connor will become assistant director of the Geauga County Public Library near Cleveland, Ohio beginning next month. She sought the post after husband Pat O'Connor was promoted and transferred by his firm, Pioneer Standard, Inc.

While the four-year Canton resident "is looking forward to this new position," she does so with conflicting emotions.

"I have made many friendships here and worked with many people with common values, and I will always treasure their friendship," said O'Connor, selected 1984 Woman of the Year by the Canton Business & Professional Women — an organization she currently serves as president.

"I feel that I am very fortunate to have had an opportunity to have been instrumental in providing much-needed and well-received public library service in Canton. I feel Canton residents deserve no less than the best. I have enjoyed my stay in Canton — I have admired many people, most particularly the Canton Library Board which has always worked to provide the very best for Canton," she said.

O'CONNOR'S FIRST days on the job in 1979 were spent on the empty third floor of township hall.

"The library millage passed in May, 1979. I interviewed for and became head librarian of an independent library in June. It seems like yesterday," O'Connor recalled. "They installed me in the third floor with a desk, a chair, a telephone, paper and pencil and said, 'Go about the business of setting up a library.'

"I hired a designer, decided how to use the floor space, entered into a lease with the township, bought books and equipment, hired a staff and designed all systems and all policies.

"I think I was one of the youngest people (at 28) who ever got the chance to start a library. It was a tremendous responsibility that could never have been done without the library board."

If O'Connor is spreading thin the credit for the young library's success, Supervisor James Poole isn't.

"Deb has done a tremendous job for the library," said Poole. "She's been a real positive asset as far as coming up with ideas and recommendations. She's probably one of the most chauvinistic and civic-minded people I've ever met.

"She not only believes in her community, but has put time where her mouth is and devoted a lot of time to the community, the BPW, the Canton Country Festival, the Chamber of Commerce, and untold hours to promote the library and their various programs. I don't think anyone will realize how much she's done until she's been gone six months or a year," added the supervisor.

O'Connor came to Canton well-qualified. She'd worked as regional librarian for the Wayne County Regional Library for the Blind, and as acting head librarian during a three-year stay at the Plymouth Library before that.

Since earning under graduate and graduate degrees at Wayne State University, O'Connor has been active with the Women's National Book Association, the Salvation Army Canton Advisory Committee, the Detroit Suburban Librarians' Roundtable, the Wayne Oakland Library Federation Automation Council, the Michigan Library Association, and the American Library Association. The Melvindale High School graduate and her husband worked for the Archdiocese of Detroit's program for engaged couples before moving to Canton nearly five years ago.

Canton taxpayers will continue to "get a bang for their buck," thanks to the library board, says O'Connor.

"I think that because Canton is a relatively young community, that it is still looking to establish its identity. I feel that a strong public library has given people something to be proud of in Canton when they speak about their community to their friends and relatives.

"I think strong community activities and events like the Canton Country Festival can help to promote a sense of community pride which Canton so richly deserves. I hope that I have assisted in the development of a strong Canton, and I will always be proud to have been part of Canton's history."

Dual speed debated

"BECAUSE OF this difference in speed on the same section of road, and because there is a 45 mph limit in an area with small children and limited sight of the road, the 45 mph lane should be lowered to match the 35 mph lane.

"With the situation as dangerous as it is, two accidents have occurred in this area in the past two months. Please review the limits posted and reduce the speed limit of the 45 mph lane to 35," Dujaik asked.

Breen said the problem with that section of road goes beyond the speed limits.

"The city of Plymouth requested years ago that Ann Arbor Trail be designated as a truck route," he said. "We have been trying for some time to get it undesignated as a truck route."

"But there is a 'no trucks' sign at the entrance to the city of Plymouth," clerk Esther Hulsing said.

Police Chief Carl Berry said there are six traffic control signs in the targeted section of road.

Besides making speed enforcement a problem, Berry said the dual speed limit is dangerous. The chief cited several studies of the road by the police department, school district and residents.

"There is pedestrian traffic on both sides of the road in the evening," he said in supporting a move to 35 mph for both lanes.

BERRY SAID the speed signs that are posted were installed some 15 years ago. Since then, the area has developed and a golf course and township park have been added, he said.

Just in the past two months there have been two accidents caused by people pulling onto Ann Arbor Trail, he said.

"The police department at this time tends to agree with the petition. I would go with 35 all the way out to Ann Arbor Road.

"The traffic cruises at 35 mph out there now. We're currently involved with doing random radar checks of the speed on that section of road," the police chief said.

Source: Highway Loss Data Institute. Body Styles: SW=Station Wagon; SS=Specialty. All results are stated in relative frequency of injury claims. A relative injury claim frequency of 100 is average. Relative frequencies of less than 70 are defined by HLDI as "Substantially Better than Average."

The Highway Loss Data Institute (HLDI) is a non-profit public service organization associated with the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. As it has done for several years, HLDI has summarized and published its findings on the frequency of automotive insurance claims.

This year, HLDI finds that 6 of the top 11 models with overall injury claim experience defined as "substantially better than average," are General Motors cars.

We are pleased that GM cars are rated best again, as they have been ever since HLDI started summarizing its findings eight years ago.

We believe this continued excellence reflects not only our cars—their quality, size, weight, and design—but also how and where they are driven.

The HLDI results show that our cars and our customers go well together. And we trust it will continue that way in the years ahead. Because we are doing our part to see that it does.

That's the GM commitment to excellence.

Plymouth-Canton residents active in peace center

By Teri Banas
staff writer

The young blonde woman with the shag haircut and blue jeans sat back in a large stuffed chair and offered a question to those gathered around her. "Any more ideas?" she asked, stretching her legs out in front of her. "We've got to grab the public's imagination."

Seated around her on three mismatched hand-me-down sofas was a group of 18 men and women from communities like Plymouth, Canton, Livonia, Redford Township, Dearborn and other parts of western Wayne County.

It was the first night of the new season for the Peace Resource Center of western Wayne County and the members were discussing how to broaden public awareness of nuclear weapons issues.

CAROL CARPINELLI, the young mother of a 1-year-old from Plymouth Township, said she liked the idea of informational meetings where members were encouraged to bring a friend.

Another woman, a retired teacher, agreed that meetings with outside speakers were particularly informative and useful.

Planning the year's activities would take lots of volunteers this year, said director Joan Pence. A Plymouth Township biology teacher, she announced her teaching job would be full-time this year and that would cut her volunteer activities.

The group's efforts also would take some money to pay for printing costs, speaker fees, table rental fees to sponsor informational booths, and all the other things associated with running a social interest organization. To that end, a canister was placed on top of the group's coffee table, a make-do discarded ping-pong table set up on cement blocks.

It's certainly not the way they do things at the Pentagon.

THE PEACE Resource Center, lo-

'Pursell's on the appropriations committee and he's a Republican, so, if we can hold sway with him, we've got some hope.'

— Joan Pence
Plymouth Township

located next to the campus of Schoolcraft College in Livonia, was organized by Johanne Fechter three years ago during the height of the Nuclear Freeze Movement.

It is headquartered in an upstairs office in Schoolcraft's Newman House, space the group shares with four other organizations.

Today, the center, along with nearby church units, makes up one of five chapters of the Nuclear Freeze Movement in the Detroit area. The membership has fluctuated but on this particular Monday night the showing was a good one, said a number of the members there.

In the past year, members have lobbied area congressmen and senators by letters and phone calls, organized a peace symposium with three speakers at Madonna College, sold Christmas cards to raise operating expenses, and in recent months attended public protests such as the "Ribbon Project" in Washington, D.C., to commemorate bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki 40 years ago.

ON THIS night, Pence has asked the members which of two forms of Christmas cards they'd like to sell for their holiday fund-raiser this year. The choice is between one an Ann Arbor artist designed and another put out by the national freeze group.

The front of the national one is back-grounded in deep blue and illustrated with a patch of stars surrounding an image of Earth. The slogan is: "So many stars, one Earth." There's a catch to the one the Ann Arbor artist has offered.

"She won't sell the copyright for less than $100 which means we'd profit six cents a card," Pence tells them. "To me, that's unacceptably low."

Balancing out the group's coffers, however, is its sale of peace pins. One of the members came up with the idea of buying a collection of religious pins in attractive gold and silver that repackaged make peace pins. They've turned out to be "hot sellers" Pence says.

This year, Pence says the group will focus on pushing for congressional approval of a comprehensive test ban. A non-binding one was approved last session and the vote is coming up again this fall.

They look at Congressional leaders like U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, with some interest. "He's on the appropriations committee and he's a Republican, so, if we can hold sway with him, we've got some hope," says Pence.

IN GENERAL, Pence says the congressman's record on peace concerns is passable. He opposes space weaponry, but he continues to support nuclear research, Pence says. Other area leaders, such as U.S. Rep. William Ford, D-Taylor, (whose district includes Canton) and U.S. Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., are sympathetic to the movement's concerns, she says.

Besides lobbying congressional leaders, the group has other plans this season to improve local support. Among the projects they agreed to work toward is another peace symposium in the spring.

A second program targets the young. With the help of a volunteer from Madonna College, they plan to take part in the Michigan Peace Child project, an arts festival targeting Michigan's K-12 students.

"The idea of the project is to help children learn to think non-violently," said volunteer Sandy Abraham from Madonna. "Children are real resources to tap."

Along with the group's outreach efforts will be the start of public access programming on the local OMNIBOX channel in the Plymouth community. Pence herself will appear on one program on Sept. 13 and says other programs prepared by the nuclear freeze movement will be aired.

BUT MOST of what's planned couldn't get off the ground without hours of volunteer efforts.

Among those are people like 90-year-old Clara Vincent of Livonia. A one-time director of the American Civil Liberties Union, Vincent comes to the meetings supported by two canes.

"There's just so much at stake," she says with determination. "There's so much to live for in this beautiful planet. I just don't know how people can sit idly by and not see it's being ravished and raped."

A veteran of public activism, Vincent offers the other members tips on how to be politically savvy. Vincent had taken part in the second World Peace Conference in 1950 and was part of a group of 39 traveling from the states to Warsaw when it was unpopular and un-American to petition for peace.

Bell Collins, a Ford Motor Co. engineer from Dearborn, said he became involved in the movement four years ago when he attended a Catholic service by Archbishop Romero, who, along with four American religious women, was killed in El Salvador. Through religious associations, he became one of the original "Witness for Peace" members.

Changes made in fall festival

Some events and activities have been added to the Plymouth Fall Festival which opens Thursday, Sept. 5.

The R.E. Olds Museum of Lansing will be sending 17 one and two-cylinder cars vintage 1895 through 1914 through Plymouth on Friday, Sept. 6.

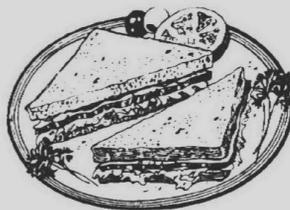

The cars, en route to Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, are expected to arrive in Plymouth between 3 and 4 p.m. The visit is made possible through the cooperation of the R.E. Olds Museum, Henry Ford Museum, and the Veteran Motor Car Club of America.

The Michigan Goldwing Association will be coming to town to participate in the Plymouth Rotary Chicken Barbeque on Sunday. The Goldwingers will have their motorcycles on display on Penniman Avenue west of Main.

At its Aug. 14 meeting the Fall Festival Board of Directors also voted to allow another booth to be entered in this year's festival. The Plymouth Township Community Service Officers now will have a booth fingerprinting children.

The board also has contracted with the City of Plymouth for the double deck bus to be running during the Fall Festival Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The Plymouth Historical Museum will be open during the festival and extending their hours of operation. The museum features permanent and changing exhibits on local history. Permanent exhibits include 19th Century Main Street shops, a collection of Daisy air rifles, and the only remaining Alter car which once was produced in Plymouth. For more information, contact the museum at 455-8940.

Omnicom system still up for sale

By Dennis Coffman
staff writer

The sale of Omnicom Cablevision, a cable television system serving the Plymouth and Canton area, is expected to be completed in eight to 10 weeks, according to general manager Rick Collman.

The cable facility was offered for sale by its parent company, Capital Cities Communications Inc., in order to abide by Federal Communications Commission (FCC) regulations dealing with dual ownership.

Capital Cities is in the process of merging with the American Broadcasting Co., which owns commercial television stations throughout the nation.

Accordingly, Capital Cities must divest itself of Omnicom.

"The divestiture must be completed by Jan. 6, at the latest," said Collman, "because that's when the ABC-Capital Cities merger takes place."

Goldman, Sachs and Co. is the brokerage house retained by Capital Cities to screen proposals from interested parties.

Omnicom provides cable service to Plymouth, Canton, Northville, Belleville and Hamtramck.

PROSPECTIVE BUYERS would include other cable systems, independent stations not operating in the Detroit area or media groups without Detroit area affiliates.

Collman said Omnicom will conduct tours of its facilities for prospective buyers at its Canton location on Ronda Drive.

Omnicom, which has never earned a profit, is regarded as a long-term investment. It provides a full range of cable programming, including news, weather, sports and premium movie channels.

Collman has claimed that rate increases are needed, if the company expects to make a profit. Omnicom recently raised the rate for premium channels to $10.95 per channel for new subscribers.

For the basic channels, such as Cable News Network (CNN), The Weather Channel, the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network (ESPN), the USA Channel and WTBS, Omnicom is allowed to impose a 5 percent yearly rate increase without approval of local governments.

After next year, cable companies will be completely deregulated.

CAPITAL CITIES also must sell Clear Cablevision, which operates systems in Dundee, Manchester, Chelsea, Milan, Saline, Clinton and Dexter. The two systems will be combined for the sale.

Capital Cities has sold most of its cable systems to the Washington Post Co. But the Post owns Detroit Television Station WDIV and is not eligible to own a local cable company.

There has been movement among cable systems recently. Maclean Hunter Cable Television and Group W are selling all or part of their systems.

According to Collman, the sale of Omnicom probably would not have a significant affect on programming, at least in the short run.

Hoben views schools of the future

By W.W. Edgar
staff writer

If we are to keep up with the great changes taking place in our lives today, the education programs in our schools will have to undergo many changes.

This is the message from Dr. John M. Hoben, superintendent of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

"Just think of what we have seen in the past few years. There's the computer, high tech and many other things that have come to help make life easier. But it also means that our education system must be able to do its job in sounder, modern ways."

As a former football coach who has been accustomed to changing plans with most every game, Hoben is looking forward to some interesting times.

He called attention to some of the major companies, eager to use the latest high technology available, which are planning to have their own teaching systems. He said schools have to move along to keep up with them.

As he spoke, Hoben commented that the ballpoint pen is about 30 years old, yet few people go back to the old-style pen.

As the administrator of the school system, Dr. Hoben realizes that with the great changes taking place in our every-day life and work, the teachers and officials must undergo a change.

"Even I go to school just to keep up with the changing times."

ESTHER HULSING, Plymouth Township clerk and a former president of the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education, agreed with Hoben that changes have to be made.

"I'm sure we won't abandon 'reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic' that we once used as our base," added Mrs. Hulsing, "but we will have to broaden it so the students will be able to keep pace with the changes."

"There is going to be a need for many changes," said Hoben, "even among our officials. With the change in state law which permits a person to retire at 50 years of age, providing he or she had put in 30 years of employment, we will need replacements. So that will mean changes all around."

According to the superintendent, many of these retirees will not be giving up work but will just be taking another type of job. "But it will mean a change for us."

AMONG THE changes in the schools are the many computers in the system.

Hoben, in looking ahead, said he thought society may be losing its middle class — one of the reasons for some of the political and social trouble of some foreign nations.

"Our unemployed rate is increasing all the time and with the modern way of doing things in our factories — especially the automobile industry — where high tech is taking hold, there will be fewer jobs and much of the middle class (the workers) will be on the outside."

District library a sound step

To the editor:

I am very pleased to see that the Plymouth District Library proposal will be decided by the voters and library patrons of the City and Township of Plymouth.

The district library is the only viable solution to the problem of having the library used as a political football by both the city and township governments.

This proposal will at last give the Dunning-Hough Library the financial security and the autonomy it needs to better serve the entire Plymouth community. Having the library board elected district-wide also will ensure that the board will be representative of the entire community.

SOME OF THE GREATEST
AMERICA NEVER CHANGE.

SOME DO.

U.S. Savings Bonds.

Now Paying 9.49%.

In the 1800's, baseball was a child's sandlot game. Then came the curve ball, the slide, the crowds and the legends—like Babe Ruth. Baseball had become our national pastime.

Some things never change.

But one great American tradition has changed—U.S. Savings Bonds. Now Savings Bonds pay higher variable interest rates like money market accounts. Currently, Bonds are paying 9.49%.

Just hold Savings Bonds for five years and you get the new variable interest rates. Plus, you get a guaranteed return. That means you can earn a lot more, but never less than 7.5%.

You can purchase Bonds at almost any financial institution, or easier yet, through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

Buy U.S. Savings Bonds. Like baseball, they're another part of our proud heritage. For more information, call toll-free 1-800-US-BONDS.

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS
Paying Better Than Ever

Variable rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11/1/82 and held at least five years. Bonds purchased before 11/1/82 earn variable rates when held beyond 10/31/87. Bonds held less than five years earn lower interest.

Economic index up with auto sales

In July, the Detroit Area Business Activity Index once again moved forward three points to a level of 135 from 133 in June, according to Manufacturers Bank.

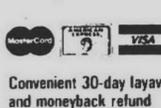

At 135, business activity in the local economy, after discounting inflation, is 35 percent greater than in the base year 1967.

For the first seven months of 1985, business is 10 percent ahead of 1984, said staff economist Patrick Anderson.

Between June and July, auto and truck production increased and auto sales remained strong. As partial offsets, electric power sales and steel output declined. July's activity level exceeds the average of the prior quarter and suggests continuing strength in the metro area economy.

The Detroit Area Business Activity Index is a monthly index of private business activity. It is comprised of eight different economic statistics and calculated on a seasonally adjusted, inflation-corrected basis by the economics department of Manufacturers Bank.

'Flesh peddlers' blamed for malpractice suits

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Medical malpractice insurance is skyrocketing in cost because Michigan physicians are being sued so heavily and often, a parade of witnesses told a Senate panel.

"Both the size and number of claims are growing at an unconscionable rate," Frederick Minkow, Bloomfield Hills physician and president of the Oakland County Medical Society, told the Senate Judiciary Committee hearing in Pontiac.

An obstetrician pays $40,000 for $1 million of coverage, and cardiac and orthopedic specialists pay $50,000, said Minkow, one of about 16 witnesses heard Tuesday.

"Doctors are taking early retirement, and many younger doctors are leaving the state," he said. "Doctors routinely consider every person who comes to an emergency room for the first time" as a potential plaintiff in a lawsuit, creating "an iron curtain of fear" between patient and physician.

EDWIN DOEHRING, Farmington osteopath and president of the 220-member Michigan Association of Osteopathic Physicians, said 89 percent of general practitioners have stopped or will stop taking obstetric cases because of "the thirst for money through our court system."

Kevin Clinton, chief actuary for the state Insurance Bureau, said that in an atmosphere of lawsuits, where claims and jury awards are rising faster than inflation, "insurers are unable to reasonably price their product."

Clinton was warmly applauded by an audience packed with hundreds of physicians during a hearing of the Senate Judiciary Committee in the Oakland County Commissioners auditorium in Pontiac.

DOCTORS, INSURERS and lawyers who defend them put the blame for the rising tide of malpractice cases and the mass exit of medical practitioners on "flesh peddlers and malpractice mills." Those were their terms for companies which advertise like theatrical agents promoting out-of-state expert witnesses who sell their testimony to patients suing doctors.

Lawyers — such as Oakland County Bar Association President George Googasian of Bloomfield Hills — were booed and hissed when they maintained that juries were only doing justice to patients wrongfully harmed by incompetent medical care.

Siding with the doctors was Judiciary Committee Chairman Alan Crosey, R-DeWitt, though he himself is an attorney.

Crosey publicly bawled out James Tuck, president of the Michigan Trial Lawyers Association, for "being negligent" in ignoring three earlier hearings and failing to offer solutions to the problems.

CLINTON, A soft-spoken statistician, focused more than any of the other witnesses on the reasons for high medical malpractice insurance costs.

Comparing auto and workers comp injury cases, Clinton said medical malpractice claims have these distinctions:

- Malpractice settlements are higher on average, with a wider variation in awards.

- Malpractice claims frequently aren't reported until two years after an incident.

- Malpractice cases are not paid off until four or five years after the event.

- Malpractice cases are costlier to litigate.

Because costs are so uncertain, insurers are unable to estimate losses and must build up large reserves, Clinton said.

And because so much of the settlement goes to courts, attorneys and expert witnesses, he said, "It is not a cost-efficient system."

"THE INDIANA Plan is the salvation of doctors," said Mike Miller, vice president of operations for Medical Protective Co., a Fort Wayne, Ind., insurer against medical malpractice in 15 states, including Michigan. (See box on this page for Indiana Plan details.)

Miller agreed with Clinton that insurers can't accurately predict premiums because they don't know what their payout will be. "Until you have the Silverdome collapse, you don't know how to price it."

"Is Michigan different from other states? Absolutely!" said Miller, noting all but a handful of insurers quit Michigan years ago.

"Flesh peddlers and malpractice mills are your No. 1 problem," he went on. "They (patients' lawyers) have gotta go out of state to get 'experts.' You've gotta change that arena. You've gotta make it unethical for them to do that."

Miller also advocated that a "screening panel" of three doctors be set up to weed out "non-meritorious claims" and perhaps discourage them from going to trial.

SPENCE JOHNSON, president of the Michigan Hospital Association, said rising malpractice costs will reduce the availability of medical care. More lawsuits and larger awards are having "devastating results," he said.

In Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties, he said, there is an epidemic of malpractice claims: only 200 in 1970, 1,200 in 1980 and 2,200 in 1984. Cost of defending a claim is $20,000.

"The word is out among practitioners . . . don't go to Michigan," Johnson said.

David Benferd, executive vice president of Henry Ford Hospital, said $565 of every patient's bill goes to cover malpractice insurance, whose costs have risen 200 percent in two years. Rick Grattan, a lawyer representing the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce, said, "The cost of medical malpractice has gone through the roof." It's caused "not by any decline in the quality of medical care but by patients' expectations of perfect babies . . . and a litigious society that sues at the drop of a stethoscope."

Robert M. Leitch, president and chairman of Michigan Physicians Mutual Liability Co., said malpractice claims have soared from 10 per 100 physicians in 1979 to 25 per 100 in 1984.

"Did medical care deteriorate in those few years? No . . . it is easy and profitable to sue for malpractice," Leitch said.

"THE MEDICAL community wants to blame the lawyers," said George Googasian, Oakland Bar president.

"The large verdicts and judgments are justified. I am a professional. I will do the best job I can for my client within the system. Don't blame the lawyer," said Googasian, who was hissed.

Googasian, a practicing attorney who is under consideration by Gov. James Blanchard for a judicial appointment, said that "every kind of insurance has increased tremendously in the last 12 months" — not just medical malpractice.

"All I've heard (from doctors) is: 'Cut the cost — it's hurting my pocket.' Selfish . . . that's what you're being." This was met with groans, hisses and shouts of "liar."

Asked by Sen. Gilbert DiNello, D-East Detroit, of the effect of lawyers' advertising on the glut of malpractice claims, Googasian answered slowly:

"Advertising encourages people to respond. It increases the number of inquiries. It increases the number of claims filed."

DiNello suggested, "We should close a couple of law schools."

ANOTHER LAWYER, Detroit's Richard Kitch, who has defended hospitals for 31 years, said the bar association's attitude is "Hey, don't mess with our golden goose."

"In 1964 three attorneys handled all medical malpractice defenses in Michigan. In 1985 my firm has 70 lawyers, 95 percent of whom work full time on medical malpractice. There are 150 malpractice defense lawyers in the state."

Kitch was cheered for deploring "manufactured, contrived, baseless suits made possible by baseless testimony" of non-practicing, self-styled medical experts who give $1,000 depositions at poolside in the morning and spend the afternoon on their yachts.

Oakland Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson said filing fees for medical malpractice cases should be lifted from $75 to a non-refundable $1,000. Judges should be required to fine persons who file "frivolous" claims $5,000. "Let's end the fishing expedition," Patterson said.

'Indiana plan' boosted here

Hospital and insurance groups in Michigan are rallying behind a set of legislative reforms aimed at reducing the cost of medical malpractice lawsuits and insurance premiums. Dubbed the "Indiana plan" because they are based on changes that state made in 1975, the main features are:

1. Place a cap on awards in malpractice cases. Most often mentioned figure: $500,000.

2. Reduce the interest rate on awards. Currently, the jury's award earns 12 percent interest from the day the case is filed — typically three or four years before it's settled.

3. Allow "structured payments" of large awards, so that insurers wouldn't have to pay out more than $500,000 in one year. Limit payments to the lifetime of the plaintiff.

4. Require that "expert" medical witnesses spend 75 percent of their time in practice or teaching in their specialties. Eliminate use of "experts" who do nothing but testify for a living.

5. End "deep pockets" picking where the medical defendant with the most money is expected to pick up the bill. Where there are multiple defendants, don't make one defendant disproportionately liable.

6. Limit time after injury in which a suit may be filed. Insurers complain Michigan has no effective statute of limitations, and lawsuits are started 20 years (for example) after brain damage is known to have occurred.

Indians celebrate end of summer with a festival

Over the shadows beyond the ridge of the ancient hills sing the stars of summer.

Although sometimes invisible to the naked eye, these constellations signal the Tonquish of Misbegum as well as the Seneca of the Iroquois, that the time for the gathering has come.

The surplus food must be preserved for the long winter ahead, and plans must be made for the winter hunt. They will conduct a special ceremony to propitiate their Gods. This is their way of life.

It is late in August 1749 and a glance on a clear night at the summer sky shows us Deneb in Cygnus, a star of the first magnitude; and over there is Lyra, the harp, crowned by Vega, one of the brightest stars in the heavens; and the third light of the magical summer triangle is the beloved Altair in Aquilla, the sign of the eagle. To these Indians this light is the high point of their summer. It tells them that the time for the gathering has come at last.

PERHAPS CELERON knew this and planned ahead so that we might view the ceremony.

More probably our advance guide, Chabert de Joncaire, whose mother was a full-blooded Seneca, heard about the ritual and signalled a stop here so that we might witness the spectacle.

We were glad to interrupt our long journey from Montreal. We had left La Chine June 15 and it has been a long haul over our water highways, through good days and bad. We are bone weary and ready for a rest.

As we approach the ancient Seneca village we call Le Paille Coupe, Celeron signals a stop with an urgently whispered, "Sans bruit, Sans bruit." We have come a long way from Lake Chataqua to this Seneca enclave on the Allegheny not far from Fort Duquesne (Pittsburg).

Through the starlit shadows of the early evening we see a group of eagle-feathered warriors putting the finishing touches on a massive stone cairn. This must be their repository for their surplus crops. Deep in the forest beyond the cairn are hundreds of shadowy figures circling a large bonfire while chanting to the rhythm of their drums.

Even from this distance we can hear them. Our ears are not attuned to their language. The rhythm is so insistent, over and over with a kind of hypnotic intensity that demands our attention.

The refrain was always the same, "Deganawida, camawida. Deganawida. Orenda." I have no idea what these words mean in translation except I do know that Deganawida was the name of their spiritual leader, a kind of God, or Master, in their concept of the world of the Spirit. (I made a mental note to ask Joncaire about this in the morning.)

Out of the shadows there suddenly appeared a young brave in the elaborate costume of a chief's son. He motioned to Joncaire and they babbled on for quite some time in their native Seneca. Joncaire said we were invited to the long house of the chief to witness the "Ceremony of the Green Corn."

ANTOINE BEAUBIEN, Pierre des Jardin, a Detroit trader, and Jacques Baby were among the Detroiters who volunteered.

Celeron made sure the rest of us stood by the boats with our guns at the ready. I was not among the volunteers. It seemed to me that my role was to keep my distance, be an observer, keep the record straight, and write about it afterward. I think that future generations may want to know what it was like to be a French soldier on the Allegheny in 1749. (By the way, the French called this river the Ohio.)

The Seneca are, as you probably know, members of the Six Nations of the Iroquois. Others in the confederation are the Mohawk, the Oneida, the Cayuga, and the Onondaga. Later the group was joined by the Tuscaroras, who were driven out of the south.

The Deganawida was the motivating, spiritual force of the confederacy. The ceremonials and rituals are in the form of mystic parables which have great force among the confederation. It has been said that Deganawida was an actual person who lived sometime in the 16th century. He brought the warring factions together and wrote a code for the confederacy. It reads, in part:

"I, Deganawida, and the confederated chiefs, now uproot the tallest pine tree, and into the cavity thereby made we cast all weapons of war. Into the depths of the earth, deep down into the under-earth currents of water flowing to unknown regions, we cast all weapons of strife. We bury them from sight and we plant again the tree. Thus shall the Great Peace be established."

And, so it came to pass that the Iroquois found great strength in the Deganawida's creed and stood together for more than two centuries while fending off their enemies who would confiscate their land.

We had a creed of our own that we wished to promulgate, and in the morning, after they had ceremoniously buried their green corn we asked permission to address them. Because of Joncaire we were allowed to tell our story to the chief at the long house, and to most of the leading warriors he had assembled there.

We were surprised to see several women in the group. Some Iroquois have a matriarchy, and it is not at all unusual to find a female chief. Queen Alequippa, who was very pro-English, was present at this meeting, and later, when we reached her village further downstream, we found nothing but deserted wigwams. As far as she was concerned we were a lost cause.

CAPTAIN CELERON read a message to them from the Marquis La Galissoniere, governor general of Canada and d'Etroit, which said, in part:

"My children, since I was at war with the English, I have learned that they have seduced you; and not content with corrupting your hearts, have taken advantage of my absence to invade lands which are not theirs, but mine; and, therefore, I have resolved to send you Monsieur de Celeron to tell you my intentions, which are that I will not endure the English on my land. These English hide from you their plans. They would settle here and drive you away. Follow our advice and the sky will always be clear over your villages and the day be calm."

Then he urged them to stop all trade with the "intruders," and promised many gifts.

The Seneca promised compliance but it was clear to us that Father Bonnecamp was right when he said, "Nobody doubted that fear had extorted their answer." Fear and diplomacy.

And so we went on with our journey through the endless waterways of the Ohio Valley. We distributed our gifts, made our beseeching speeches, promised our protection, and over and over there was seeming compliance. But in our hearts we knew, and they knew, that their acceptance of us was cloaked in distrust and fear.

When we reached the mouth of Wheeling Creek we buried another plate and tacked another tin scroll on a tree. We repeated the same at the mouth of the Muskingum. On the Aug. 18 we buried another plate on the Great Kanawha.

Finally, on Aug. 30 we reached the Great Miami. We call this river the Riviere a la Roche. And here we buried the last of our lead plates. Here we met Old Britain, or, as we called him, La Demoiselle, a tarter of a chief who was to bring real trouble to us. It will be October before we see d'Etroit again.

Rail Crossings are dangerous

(This guest column was written by R.R. Murdock, assistant manager of claims for the Chessie System Railroads. Murdock recently investigated a severe railroad crossing accident in Plymouth in which a young man was seriously injured. The following is based on a true story, although the names and exact location have been changed.)

MY NAME IS Randy Murdock. I am an engineer for the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway and have been for 22 years.

As I move freight trains, I am moving literally millions of dollars worth of customers goods across the countryside. I like to think of myself as one of the best there is, but that is not to say I have never been involved in an accident. There have been a number in my career, but the most memorable occurred this last Saturday night.

I was working the Extra 4297 West, from Plymouth to Grand Rapids and was called on duty at 9:05 p.m. Upon coming to work I inspected my locomotive, making sure all mechanical systems were working properly. Before getting under way, I turned the headlight on to the bright position — it has the illumination power similar to aircraft landing lights.

At 10:15 p.m. we stopped in Howell to set four cars off at a grain elevator and picked up two empty cars, then proceeded west to Grand Rapids. That night the weather was clear and cool, the air clean.

As our train moved across the countryside, the peacefulness of the evening was shattered at 11:05 p.m. as we crossed Burkhart Road just east of Fowlerville. I was traveling at 47 mph in a 50 mph speed zone, pulling 113 railroad cars.

Burkhart Road is a country setting, and in the southeast corner of the crossing is a small factory. This factory building blocks my view and blocks the motorist's view of approaching trains, but that is why the red-flashing lights were installed. I began blowing the air horn better than a quarter-mile before the crossing, and continued blowing until I got to the crossing. Some folks tell me you can hear my train whistle for miles.

Why didn't she? Maybe the kids were yelling or the radio was too loud. I don't know. When I was about 30-40 feet from Burkhart Road, I got my first glimpse of the headlights traveling northbound. They were still about seven car lengths to the south of the crossing.

I knew immediately the car was not going to stop. I could see the red flashing lights working and do not understand why the driver did not stop and yield. I know all drivers are trained to stop for flashing red lights. This driver never put her brakes on.

Within a split second of my first seeing the car, I slammed my train into emergency — the hardest application of the air brakes I can make. All the steel wheels started to lock up on the train, but we slowed very little prior to impact.

It was only a couple seconds later that impact occurred, but it seemed like many minutes. The last frightful moment before impact I saw the terrified face of a young child looking at me from the backseat, passenger's side, window.

In the next instant there was nothing but exploding glass and debris as that stationwagon bent and welded itself around the front of my locomotive and was shoved to the west, about three-quarters of a mile. This is the distance it took my train to grind to a stop.

WE RADIOED for police and ambulance immediately, but I knew there was little hope for the passengers inside that car.

The hardest thing was to go down and look at the damage that I had done. Though I know realistically it was not my fault, I was the operator of the train.

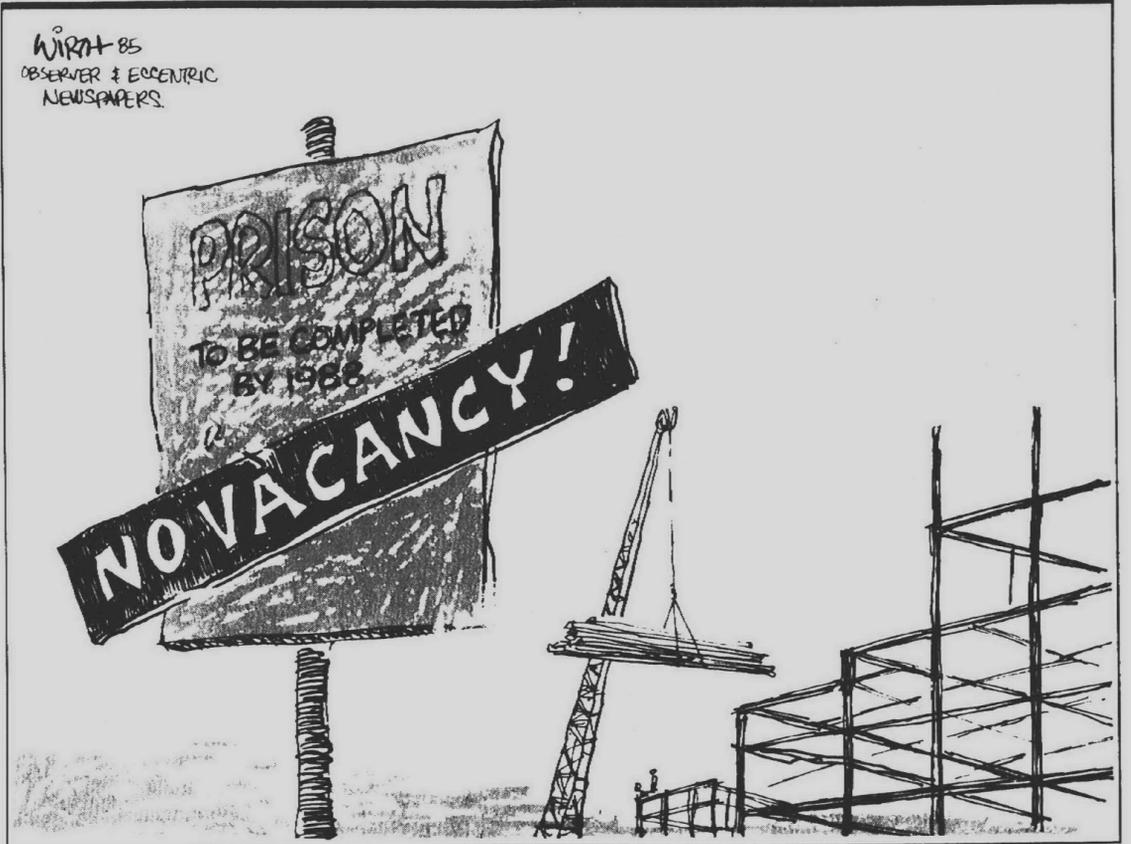

I found out later the woman driving lived within two miles of the railroad crossing. She had to cross those tracks many times and was very familiar with the trains which passed there regularly. She had a clean driving record, and I cannot understand why she would ignore the traffic laws in the manner she did.

I can only assume she never saw the train coming or she would not have endangered the lives of her children. There was a 13-month baby girl who survived with minor injuries, only because she was strapped into an infant seat. None of the others were wearing their seatbelts.

I killed 29-year-old Rebecca Johnson, her 8-year-old son Brian, and 5-year-old daughter Kathy — instantly upon impact!

I have not had a full night's sleep since. I wake up in a cold sweat seeing the face of that little 5-year-old girl looking up at me with frightened eyes just before the train I was operating destroyed her life and the substance of her family.

I am not looking for sympathy. This is part of being a railroad engineer, though we all pray it will never happen. If my story can prevent one crossing accident, my suffering will have been worthwhile. Please expect a train any time you cross the railroad tracks, and never ignore the railroad protection which is there for your safety.

Unlocking a prison crisis

"... he's read ever'thing about prisons now, an' in the old times, an' he says she makes less sense to him now than she did before he started readin'. He says it's a thing that started way to hell an' gone back, an' nobody seems to be able to stop her, an' nobody got sense enough to change her."

— Tom Joad, in "The Grapes of Wrath"

tentary would have to be built every three weeks to meet the crisis.

What's happening? Well, folks are fed up with watching over their shoulders. They're demanding better law enforcement, stricter sentencing and then wanting to throw away the key.

You can't throw away the problem, however. That get-tough stance can only result in an insatiable need for new prisons. Time magazine recently quoted a Pennsylvania official as saying "you can't build your way out of" the problem.

Still we try, while no one is willing to bite the bullet on where to put new prisons. Neighbors are banding together to fight prisons in a residential Detroit neighborhood and next to a hospital in Westland. Mental health officials are trying to quash plans for a prison at the Clinton Valley Center in Pontiac.

Meanwhile, local officials have lost the fight to bar prisons from prime industrial land in Plymouth and Northville townships.

WITH RISING crime rates, prison populations and new facilities to house criminals, a B-grade movie called "Escape from New York" becomes a shade more believable. The movie, shown late nights on some local cable systems, depicts the Big Apple as so rotten that it has been turned into a walled city strictly for criminals.

If we can't build our way out of a nightmare like that, do we shoot down plans for new prisons? No, but it's obvious that incarcerating criminals isn't a deterrent to crime. We have to look elsewhere for that key.

And that's the real crisis of conscience. It's much easier to isolate a problem in a cell than think about its cause.

Why, we could start to feel guilty if we thought about what we'd do with no education, no job prospects, no hope.

We're ready to spend millions to build new cells — and $16,000 to keep each one filled a year — but balk at welfare programs that would provide jobs and nutrition and reduce the costs of crime.

An' nobody seems able to stop, an' nobody got sense enough to change.

THERE'S NO ESCAPE from the headlines now, but early news reports had begun sounding the alarm three years ago.

"State prison policy 'inviting' escapes," said a November 1982 issue of your local newspaper. There were more to come.

"Prisons 'bursting at seams,'" said another from March 1983. Then in July that year we learned, "State defers decision on (double bunking) jail inmates." And in February 1984, "State to build new prison."

In three years, a permanent solution should have been in the works. Instead, hardly a week goes by without word of overcrowding in Michigan prisons, and the number of criminals sprung because of it now reaches the 10,000 mark.

THE SITUATION isn't unique to Michigan. One report says a new federal peni-

Labor Day parade far cry from '30s

AFTER ONE has travelled the highways of life for a length of time, it comes to mind that the passing years have brought about many changes in our everyday life and special events.

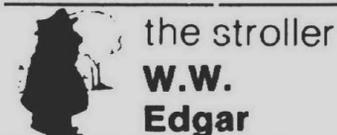

Robots now are replacing humans in many factories. Airplanes are being used more than passenger trains, automobiles have put horses out to pasture, microwave ovens have replaced the old kitchen stoves.

Baseball and football are played at night in buildings now known as "domes." The old-fashioned lead stereotype printing plates are gone from newspaper pressrooms. And our special celebrations are a far cry from what they used to be.

THIS WILL BE shown in a few days when we celebrate Labor Day. The parade down Woodward Avenue will be a far cry from what it used to be a half-century ago.

True, in the last two or three years, the Michigan AFL-CIO has been working to rejuvenate the Labor Day parade. The one starting at 10:30 a.m. Monday on Woodward at Mack will have a festival tone, with skydivers, fun bands and floats. Brief speeches are expected at Kennedy Square from UAW President Owen Bieber and Thomas R. Donahue, national secretary-treasurer of the federation.

Back in the '30s when Walter Reuther was organizing the auto workers, the working men flocked to take part in the line of march down Woodward Avenue to the stroller W.W. Edgar what was known as Cadillac Square.

It's the same spot, but it won't look the same. The old-time granite city hall whose steps furnished the speakers' platform is now only a memory.

That platform long was known as the starting point of presidential campaigns. President Truman started his successful 1948 campaign against Tom Dewey, Michigan's native son from Owosso, on that platform.

Nowadays, things have changed to the point where President Reagan knew he won his second term before he cast his own ballot on the west coast.

IT WAS ON that Cadillac Square platform that John F. Kennedy started the campaign that placed him in the White House.

JFK made such a hit with his address that morning and the manner in which he greeted admirers at the Book-Cadillac Hotel that the square was renamed for him after his death. But, sorry to say, the structures now at the site are far from the old days. Many folks visiting the area now ask, "What is it?"

Tales of 2 Michigan hikes

THIS IS about two 4½-mile walks.

One is easy, and you get a certificate for it. The other is tough, and you get no recognition except the satisfaction of knowing you've done it.

And now is the time of year to do both.

THE EASY hike is across the Mackinac Straits Bridge, from St. Ignace in the upper peninsula to Mackinaw City in the lower.

You can do it beginning at 7:30 Labor Day morning. About 40,000 others will join you, with Gov. Jim Blanchard himself leading the parade. It's easily done in 90 minutes — often faster.

You hike up a gentle slope, watching an occasional Great Lakes freighter below. Mostly you watch other people because, if you don't, you'll trip over someone.

The whole state of Michigan seems to be there. In 1984 I spotted high school jackets from Redford Union, Garden City, Avondale, Pellston Christian, Sturgis, Portage Northern and the VFW Cooties.

I chatted with the 16-year-old girl in the Portage Northern jacket, and it was like a reunion. Back in 1962 I was a reporter for the Kalamazoo Gazette and covered the Portage School District's bond issue election for construction of Northern High. The girl filled me in on the fortunes of the volleyball team.

PEOPLE-WATCHING is the best part. That was an election year, you'll recall, and the Democrats were out in force — the gov, Attorney General Frank Kelley, Sen. Carl Levin and local luminaries.

There was one young fellow who was crippled, and he propelled himself on a three-wheeler by hand power.

In the stores, you can buy patches saying "I walked the Mackinac Bridge in 1984." Some folks collect them year after year.

Only trouble is you can't take dogs, so The Boomer couldn't join me.

THE FIVE-MILE walk I prefer is the Penosha Pathway. It starts in the parking lot of Bishop Lake, a half-dozen miles southwest of Brighton.

I discovered the Penosha (pronounced pain-o-shay) in the book "Michigan Hiking Opportunities," published by the Department of Natural Resources.

Not much chance for people watching here, though you do meet a few hardy souls from Ann Arbor. The Brighton State Recreation Area has steep hills — glacial deposits called terminal moraines. Between the hills lie occasional ponds about the size of hockey rinks.

The Boomer, my poodle, made the trip with me often, the last time when he was 15½. Ordinarily it's a two-hour walk, but a fellow who is the equivalent of 79 human years should be allowed to stretch it out to three hours.

Besides, The Boomer's style was to take time to smell the flowers, or whatever it was that dogs smell at trailside. He would supplement his lunch of dog biscuits with sandwich remnants and bird corpses.

THE PENOSHA reminds me of what a National Geographic Magazine article once said about Michigan as a whole: "splendid spectacular but always satisfying." In fall there are spectacular colors. In winter the wind whips your face when you stand on a ridge, unless your face is covered with fur like The Boomer's. Spring is for connoisseurs of bird calls.

No one gives you a gubernatorial certificate or shoulder patch for hiking the Penosha Pathway. I remedied this slight to The Boomer's prowess as a hiker by awarding him my Bridge Walk patch.

That resilient little guy earned it.

How local reps voted on 'comfort index'

In a year when the Defense Department has drawn heavy flak for buying $7,823 coffeepots, $640 toilet seats and $44 light bulbs, Congress has served up an equally vivid example of wasteful federal spending.

The House and Senate are spending $650,000 in public funds on the salaries of some 50 employees who occupy and "operate" automatic elevators in Capitol Hill buildings.

These are patronage employees. They are handpicked by senior members. Their elevators, located throughout the Capitol complex except in the three Senate office buildings, often are exclusively for the use of lawmakers.

Tourists and other visitors to Capitol Hill usually have to punch their own elevator buttons.

CRITICS OF extravagance in Congress see plenty of negative symbolism in the spectacle of lawmakers, at a time of roaring federal deficits, spending so much on a seemingly pointless function.

They have tried to turn the expenditure into the sort of object lesson — such as the Pentagon procurement horror stories — that Main Street readily understands.

Their hope is that Congress will better be able to control overall federal spending if it practices frugality with its own budget.

"How can we in good conscience talk about reducing the deficit and then not sacrifice our own luxuries such as automatic elevator operators?" asked Rep. Pat Swindall, R-Ga., during a mid-July floor debate.

"Truthfully, the American people ought to be disgusted by such obvious abuse by members of Congress who should be setting an example by 'tightening our own belts' till the deficit is eliminated," Swindall said.

"It is utterly ridiculous that (the elevators) are manned at all," said Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn. "Since they are automatic, there is not any reason to have anybody in them."

SWINDALL AND Frenzel argued in vain for an amendment to delete some $106,000 in elevator money from the fiscal 1986 legislative branch appropriations bill.

The amendment was rejected, 191-221, after defenders of the practice argued that manned elevators help members from faraway offices avoid crowds and speed to the House floor in time to meet voting deadlines.

The vote is one of six House and Senate issues covered its own Comfort Index. This report also shows constituents how their lawmakers stood on issues relating to pay, mailing costs, the cost of committees and the overall pricetag of the legislative branch budget.

The Comfort Index is compiled annually by Roll Call Report, a nationwide newspaper service that each week reports the key votes cast by House members and senators.

This year, it covers virtually all record votes dealing with "the good life" on Capitol Hill that were conducted during 1984 and the first seven months of 1985, excluding only those where the issue was duplicated.

One 'comfort index' vote showed the House continuing to keep the operators who push buttons in the Capitol Hill buildings' automatic elevators. Elevators used by the public have no operators and users push the buttons themselves.

HOWEVER, THE Comfort Index is unable to track many congressional actions that enhance lawmakers' benefits and perquisites. The reason: Members avert record votes whenever possible if the issue relates to the greening of their personal or professional existence on Capitol Hill.

For example, House leaders no longer permit floor assaults on the budgets of individual committees, requiring any proposed amendments to apply across-the-board.

Leaders also have become reluctant to permit roll-call votes on the explosive issue of congressional pay.

In the past 20 months, House members have received two cost-of-living increases without benefit of record votes. Senators received the same hikes and, like House members, now are paid $75,100 annually. They conducted a record vote on the first of the two pay issues, and that tally is covered in accompanying chart.

Here are details of votes that make up the 1984-85 Comfort Index:

HOUSE

1. BUDGET CUT — By a vote of 193 for and 211 against, the House on July 18, 1985 rejected an amendment by Rep. Bill Cobey, R-N.C., to cut the House portion of the fiscal 1986 legislative branch budget by 2.7 percent.

A yes vote was in favor of freezing 1986 spending at the fiscal 1985 level that existed before Congress approved a 1985 supplemental appropriations bill.

Voting yes: William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

Voting no: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, Sander Levin, D-Southfield.

William D. Ford, D-Taylor, did not vote.

2. ELEVATOR OPERATORS — The House rejected, 191 for and 221 against, an amendment offered July 18 by Rep. Hank Brown, R-Colo., to cut 1986 spending for House elevator operators by $106,000.

A yes vote was in favor of cutting the elevator outlay.

Voting yes: Pursell.

Voting no: Hertel, Ford, Levin, Broomfield.

rollcall report

3. MAILING COSTS — By a vote of 204 for and 217 against, the House on July 18 rejected an amendment by Rep. Clarence Miller, R-Ohio, to cut $10 million from the 1986 appropriation for members' franking, or free-mailing, privileges.

A yes vote was in favor of cutting mailing costs.

Voting yes: Pursell.

Voting no: Hertel, Ford, Levin, Broomfield.

4. COMMITTEE BUDGETS — The House approved, 254-158, a resolution to spend $48 million in calendar 1985 on the investigative expenses that comprise about half of the House's annual committee budget. The vote occurred March 26, 1985.

A no vote was in opposition to increasing the committee outlay by 4.5 percent over the 1984 level.

Voting yes: Pursell.

Voting no: Hertel, Ford, Levin, Broomfield.

IN SUMMARY:

Pursell, whose 2nd District includes Livonia and Plymouth, voted twice in favor and twice against the comfort index.

Hertel, whose 14th District includes Troy, voted four times in favor of the comfort index.

Ford, whose 15th District includes Garden City, Westland and Canton, missed one vote and cast the other three in favor of the comfort index.

Levin, whose 17th District includes Southfield and Redford, voted four times in favor of the comfort index.

Broomfield, whose 18th District includes greater Rochester, Birmingham-Bloomfield, West Bloomfield and greater Farmington, voted twice in favor and twice against the comfort index.

SENATE

1. PAY RAISE — By a vote of 66 for and 19 against, the Senate on Jan. 26, 1984 voted to rescind a $2,400 cost-of-living pay increase for members of Congress. The rescission attempt failed when the House refused to go along, and the pay hike took effect.

A yes vote was in opposition to the pay raise. Michigan Democrats Carl Levin and Donald Riegle voted yes.

2. RESTORE BUDGET CUT — By a vote of 39 for and 36 against, the Senate voted on June 21, 1984 to restore a 2 percent, or $25 million, cut in the fiscal 1985 legislative branch budget.

A yes vote was in opposition to a lower legislative branch budget. Voting yes: Riegle.

Voting no: Levin.

In summary, Levin voted against the comfort index twice, and Riegle voted against it once.

"Kathy's family needed hope."

A young mother with a serious illness. Her family in crisis. They came to Harper Hospital and found new hope. They learned that Harper is a university-based research and teaching hospital. A place where scientists work alongside physicians, transforming discovery into treatment. They found that Harper concentrates on the tough adult cases in cancer, heart disease and serious vision disorders.

Patients like Kathy come to Harper Hospital at the Medical Center with confidence. They come because Harper is a major participant, together with the Sloan-Kettering Institute in New York and the M.D. Anderson Tumor Institute in Houston, in America's network of only twenty Comprehensive Cancer Centers. Patients know that if the diagnosis is cancer, there is no better place to be than Harper Hospital.

And they come with confidence because the Kresge Eye Institute is at Harper Hospital. This important Medical Center resource is devoted exclusively to the problems of vision. And through its research and clinical work, the Kresge Eye Institute gives new hope to millions with impaired vision throughout the world.

Harper is hope for heart patients, too. Its large scale, nationally recognized program brings together research, teaching, surgery and medicine. More open heart surgeries are performed each year at Harper than are performed at any other hospital in Michigan. But of more significance is the growing number of heart patients Harper is able to treat successfully each year without surgery.

For Kathy and her family. For you and your family, Harper Hospital is Science. Research. Hope and Healing.

Plans set for Symphony League Antique Mart

Mary Louise Weed of Plymouth will be among the exhibitors at the Plymouth Symphony League 23rd Annual Antique Mart.

Weed recently took part in the Fairlane Show, Dearborn, a show for Goodwill Industries.

The show was her debut as a dealer. "I don't do many Michigan shows," she said at the time. "I guess I feel that you get more interest when you're from out of state. I've developed a big mail order business."

Weed has been in the antiques trade eight years. She once owned a manufacturing business that made little "old fashion girl" pins.

"I entered the antiques trade as a business. I took courses and sometimes studied six hours a day," she said.

One of her first courses was taught by Jordan Humberstone. He is considered a Michigan "antiques king."

"I'm constantly reading and trying to expand my knowledge," she said. "I really enjoy people and I can't think of a better business in which to meet and talk to interesting people."

Weed is a serious dealer and collector. "I started collecting sterling baby cups years ago, when you could pick them up for $5 to $10. I have maybe 45 now."

She shares a tool collection with her husband. "That's how I got started in antiques; otherwise, husbands like to just sit in the car and complain when you go antiquing. We have a great tool collection with an emphasis on New York planes."

"One of my best collections is the 85 hand mirrors, all in different woods and shapes. They are all displayed in a bathroom. We are big dealers in Royal Doulton. We have 300 to 400 Royal Doulton jugs and figurines."

Weed holds an open house every Christmas. "And each room is decorated for the holidays. We have 200 to 300 people invited to come through."

Weed's comments on the Fairlane Show were printed in Maine Antique Digest last February.

THE PUBLICATION quoted her saying, "Great sales. I sold everything that was on that side of the booth, the stuff that was in the back, the two matching benches, the table that was in the front, the . . ."

She hopes to do as well at the Symphony Show Sept. 6, 7 and 8.

One of the items Weed displayed for the Fairlane Show was a Scottish butter mold, $295. The handle forced the butter up against the interchangeable wood design at the top.

For the Plymouth show, she plans to display an antique whirlingig, Shaker doll, selected furniture and accessories. This is her first exhibition of the furniture.

Weed has spent the summer in England and New England.

THE SYMPHONY League Antique Mart will run from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

It will be held in the Plymouth Cultural Center, 525 Farmer St. Admission price for adults is $1.50, for students and senior citizens, $1.

All proceeds benefit the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. It is the single largest fund-raising project sponsored by the league each.

Twenty-two dealers will display a wide variety of antiques and collectibles, including primitive furniture, golden oak furniture, caned and rush seat chairs, china, ironstone, Heisey glass, Doultons, American brass and copper, quilts, children's miniatures and toys, baskets and country antique accessories.

Co-chairmen of the mart are Cindy Merrifield and Judy Lore; dealers, Barb Brewer and Sharon Kania; treasurer, Lura Hanschu; meals chairmen, Evelyn Funk, Dorothy Frick and Mary Childs; posters, Sue Langley; hostess, Carol Patterson; set-up and clean-up, Pam Anderson and Joan Kisabeth; publicity, Pat McCombs; reception, Marlene Ciofani; and costumes and decorations, Judy Morgan.

1st Seniorfest to be held in Hines Park

By Dennis Coffman
staff writer

Plymouth area senior citizens will have a chance to stretch their legs, view some scenery, breathe some fresh air and please their palates, during the city's First Annual Seniorfest.

Seniorfest 85 will be held Wednesday, Sept. 11, in Hines Park at River Drive, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Plymouth double-decker bus will transport Plymouth residents, 55 and older, from pickup points at Tonquish Creek Manor, the Friendship Station and the Cultural Center.

The bus will provide seniors a tour of the parkway and deliver them to the Seniorfest site. The buses will leave the pickup points throughout the day. Carol Donnelly, Plymouth senior citizens coordinator, said a bus schedule would be available next week.

Seniors will be able to feast, free of charge, on hamburgers, hot dogs, pretzels, potato chips and beer. The City of Plymouth will pick up the bill.

AT NOON, the city will hold a homemade pie-baking contest. All pies must be accompanied by a recipe and delivered to the parksite by 11:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Pie categories are fruit, vegetable, nut and unusual.

Winners will receive ribbons. But best of all, the pies will be eaten for dessert by all the seniors.

"We expect about 200-300 people to attend the Seniorfest," said Donnelly. "Any senior is welcome to attend from the western Wayne County area. They can be from Plymouth, Canton, Northville and other areas."

"We are looking for donations from other communities or from companies," said Donnelly. "The Coca-Cola Co. is donating pop."

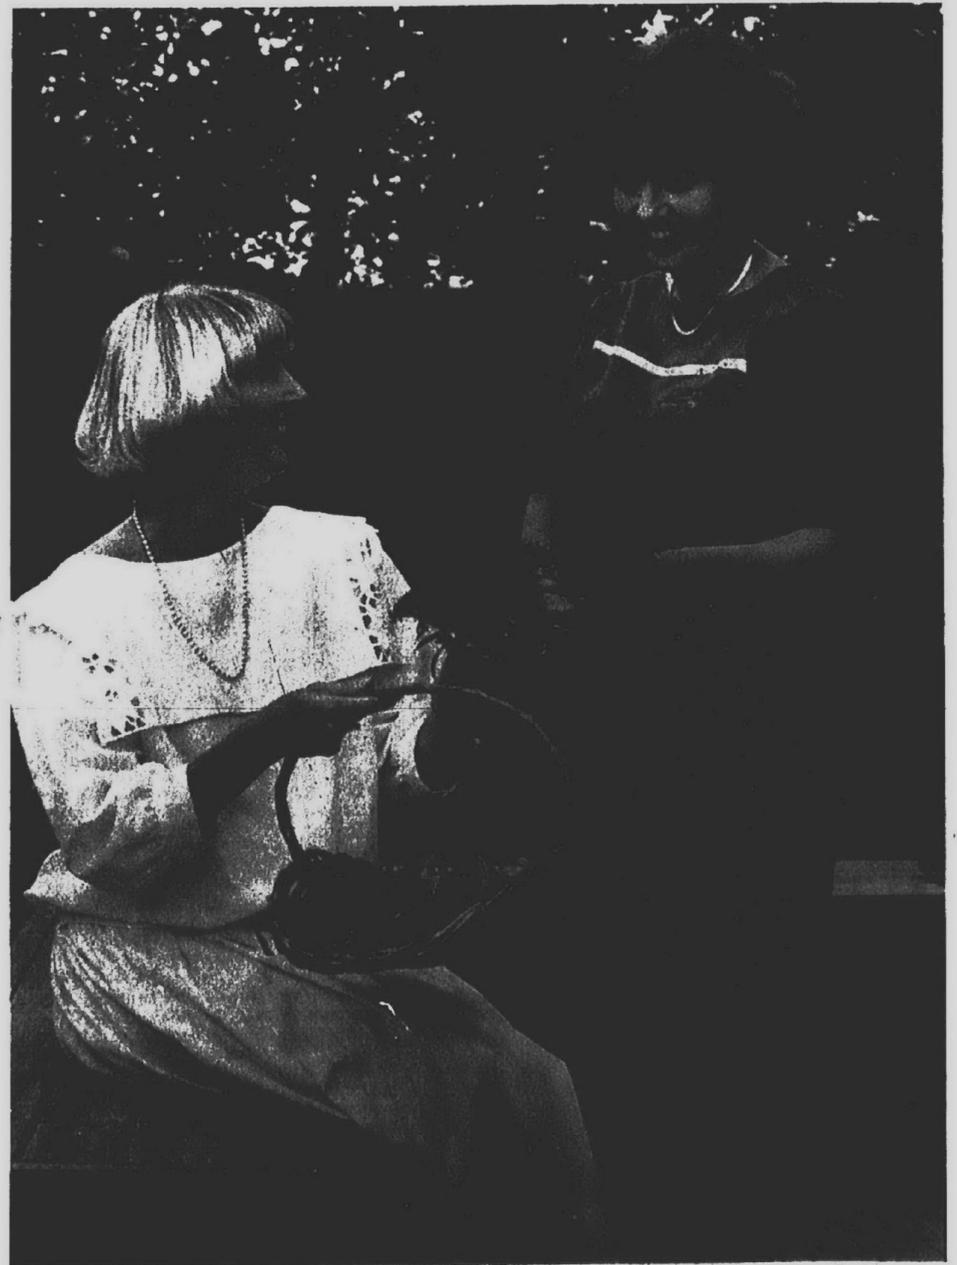

The Seniorfest will be held partly to increase awareness of Hines Park scenic and picnic areas. "There are lots of aspects of the park that can provide a tour," said Donnelly. "It's their (seniors') park, too."

Following the Seniorfest, the seniors who arrive by bus will be returned to the pickup points by double-decker bus.

Entertainment will be provided by the Canton Kitchen Band, a magician and a Livonia band.

The pie-judging will take place at noon.

Persons interested in attending the Seniorfest should call 455-6620 or visit the Cultural Center, 525 Farmer St.

Ice cream social fine, despite wretched weather

I hope you had an opportunity to visit the historical society's ice cream social and arts and crafts fair. I am told it was the first time in years that they actually made money. Their primary goal is not money making, but rather to give township residents a chance to slow down and gather together and enjoy a nice summer weekend.

But, they made money, even though Michigan weather did its part to dampen spirits as well as the whole day. The clouds went away and they had a glorious finish to their ice cream social.

There were 42 exhibitors displaying their crafts, and although many of them departed on Sunday when the bad weather hit, the Saturday turnout was beautiful and profitable. Adding to the mood of the occasion was Earl Linke of Yip with his horse-drawn wagon, giving folks a ride for only 50 cents, bringing back a bit of the good old days as the name ice cream social would suggest.

When they talk of success, they are speaking in numbers like 300 hot dogs and hold on to your hats for this one, how does 52 gallons of ice cream hit you? Well, that's what they used, and that was with the rainstorm.

CAN YOU imagine how much they would have used if the sun was out all weekend? Much of this must be attributed to Art Winkel, our fire marshal, as he stood there somewhat like a carnival barker, and reeled in the customers on a hook t-h-i-s-l-o-n-g. I know, I was one of them. Not only did I get hit on, to buy ice cream, but a huge banana split, no less.

After I was seated next to some old friends, Flossie Tonda, Bonnie Berg and Tillie Schultz, I learned that nearly everyone had experienced Art's unique selling technique. Goading would be a good word for it, maybe forced buying, or selling or eating or something. I just know it wasn't my fault. I would never have bought a banana split on my own. NO WAY. Especially a Cloverdale ice cream banana split, and if anyone tries to claim they saw me in Cloverdale's after every family triumph, like basketball games, track meets, band concerts, etc. Well, I won't put your child's birthday in this column, that's what. So there.

Canton chatter

Sandy Preblich

NOW THE hot dog with everything on it, well, maybe that was my fault, but that's nutrition, right? Everyone knows you have to eat dinner. That job I have down cold. Actually, I must admit that Art had the banana split down to an art, no pun intended — fun, maybe, but no pun.

It really was a wonderful event, the best part as always was the conversation, and I must admit that it always is the same people, the old standbys, be it school, church, or community events. It seems you run into the same people; oh perhaps it's a different group for each category, but they are always there. As is true with this group, I know some of them couldn't make it this week, but many of the regulars were there. You'll recognize many of their names, I'm sure. Hank and Sharon Johnson, Art and Shirley Winkel, Jerry and Joan Brown, Ray and Catherine Schultz, Parnell and Lillian Johnson, Orren and Martha Hall, Roy and Tillie Schultz, Melissa McLaughlin, Carol Bodenmiller, Phila Gust, Bill Tesen (president of the historical society), Walt McCrae, Tonda, Elaine Lavender, John Schwartz, Carol Perrin and keeper of the museum, Dorothy West.

Sure, you know the folks; without them we wouldn't have half of the groups, parties, donations and whatnot that we enjoy here in Canton, and by golly we owe them a great big THANK YOU. By the way, I may have missed a name or two, but at these gatherings the people don't sign in to help, they just do. So we were going by our memory of faces. If I missed you this time, I am very sorry, please know how I appreciate and admire the members of the historical society. Have no fear, I'm sure you'll be at the next function and I'll catch you there.

You all did a marvelous job with long hours, and you did it magnificently. Congratulations, and THANK YOU.

The Karpinski family is on the road again. Just back from a trip to Boston, Mass., and parts west of there. They enjoyed such sights as The Witch House and The Witch Dungeon. Although they sound like a ride in an amusement park, they proved to be educational.

The Witch House is said to be the home of a suspected witch, and the house later served as a courtroom for witch trials. In the witch dungeon, they viewed a live performance of a re-creation of an actual trial. They heard many stories, one being that poor accused witches and warlocks or wizards were kept in cells so small they could only stand up, while the wealthier accused were lodged in much roomier accommodations. How's that for a did-you-know? Suppose you can use that at your next bridge game?

There were some gruesome stories too, but I've decided to spare you the details. But one theme came across loud and clear, that Salem is not proud of its past and will never allow anything like that to happen again.

Then it was onward to other sights, the JFK Library, the USS Constitution, Plymouth Plantation, and the Mayflower II, not another restaurant or hotel, but a replica of the ship. Shocking to them was the size of the ship, which is extremely small. They found it hard to believe how many people were supposed to have crossed in it; of course, it was probably even more shocking to the Karpinskis than anyone, since that family comes in the large economy size with dad, Richard being 6 feet, 4 inches tall, mom Judy 5 feet, 11 inches, the 15-year-old Rick towering at 6 feet, 3 inches and growing and Kristen 5 feet, 6 inches and 12 years old and growing.

NO WAY could our forefathers have crossed in that ship at those heights. As might have been expected, the Karpinskis dined on lobster, and saw the Plymouth Rock.

They visited Niagara Falls on the return trip, along with Marineland, with Dragon Mountain. They rode the incline train at the falls, and marveled at the falls at night. They managed to squeeze in Lundy's Lane, with the five water slides, which was, for Kristen, the best part about the whole trip. They even managed to catch Maple Leaf Village with museums like Ripley's, World Records, etc., the biggest ferris wheel in North America and many other rides and lots of games. I'd say the Karpinskis made good use of their time, but I'm glad to have them back. Welcome home.

Don't miss the big softball tournament this weekend at our new, beautiful and very large Canton Softball Center on Michigan Avenue. This will be the World Championship Men's slo-pitch, USSSA Tournament, for industrial teams, 80 teams in all, with the best players in the world. The tournament runs from Aug. 30 through Sept. 2. A weekend pass admits you to all the games, is only $10 and if you're a softball fan, that's a lot of softball for $10. If you've never been to our new center, they have 12 diamonds, a marvelous restaurant, fast, friendly service, and you'll love it. They have nine batting cages for your practicing enjoyment. You don't have to get the full weekend pass. You may see as many or as few games as you please. I believe passes will be sold by the session, with six sessions in all at $3.50 per. For more information, call 483-5800. The center is on the south side of Michigan Avenue, just two minutes from I-275. Have a great weekend, whatever you do.

Next week, read how you can "help a lady in distress." See you then.

Special note: Do you remember one of our Cantonites Extraordinaire, who won such awards in bodybuilding as Mr. Michigan, Michigan Pairs, etc.? Well, his name is Ron Clark. Ron, and his darling wife, Brenda, left our fair township and state for sunny California. I'll never understand why anyone would do that, but apparently it has paid off for Ron as can be seen in the October issue of Muscle and Fitness Magazine. It appears that our loss is definitely California's gain, and they are making the most of it. Congratulations, Ron.

Optimist's lines have upward slant

Dear Ms. Green: I have experienced a number of dramatic changes in my life over the past few years and have noted corresponding changes in my handwriting — especially in my "end-strokes." I will be fascinated with any insights you offer. It may be helpful to note that I am 34 years of age, right handed and female. Thank you for your time and for a is if you can remain inactive long enough.

You are ever busy and active and often find yourself involved in activities with other people.

Security is important to you, as are the creature comforts of life.

There is a high degree of ambition in this handwriting. And you are not afraid of hard work to accomplish your goals. An aggressive side to your make-up will not permit you to let others stand in the way of your success. So it seems paradoxical that fulfillment eludes you in some areas of your life.

consistently interesting column

V.L., Redford

Dear V.L.: Your unique handwriting style points up a success-oriented person. The admirable quality of optimism might seem insurmountable to a less dynamic person. Your mind is rapid and facile and can furnish original ideas and solutions. This is complimented by an easy flow of words and ideas. In fact, literary aptitude seems like a definite possibility. I have to think you enjoy reading, that

Majority of school districts have pacts

Nearly nine out of 10 Michigan school districts have ratified contracts or tentative agreements with their teachers, the State Board of Education reported.

Among the larger districts still without contracts for the 1985-86 school year are Detroit, Flint, Kalamazoo and Pontiac. A survey was conducted by the State Board of Education on Monday and Tuesday.

"We would like to see all school districts reach agreement with their teachers by the time school opens, but I realize there is little likelihood that will happen," said State Superintendent of Public Instruction Phillip E. Runkel.

Runkel said 446, or 85 percent, of Michigan's 525 kindergarten-through-12th grade school districts reported they have either a ratified contract or tentative agreement with their teachers. They enroll about 1.2 million of the state's 1.6 million students.

Runkel said the remaining 79 school districts, with 400,000 pupils, are still negotiating with their teachers for contracts covering the 1985-86 school year.

Although some schools reopen next week, the majority of students will return to classes during the week following Labor Day, which is on Sept. 2.

Sullivan receives toastmaster award

Phyllis Sullivan of Plymouth, the former president of The Oral Majority Toastmasters Club of Plymouth, was presented the president's circle award for unsurpassed contribution to membership growth in 1984.

She received the award, out of 115,000 toastmasters throughout the world, at the 54th annual convention of Toastmasters International in Columbus, Ohio Aug. 22.

At the hall of fame ceremonies, international president John Latin presented the award, her second hall of fame recognition. In 1982, she was District 28 toastmaster of the Year.

Following her term as president of The Oral Majority of Plymouth, as a district officer, Sullivan became involved in the Toastmasters International club extension program, organizing The Wind Baggers Toastmasters Club of Farmington and the Jewish Community Center Toastmasters Club of West Bloomfield.

Sullivan is now a division lieutenant governor and is organizing Toastmasters clubs in two corporations.

She also is a member of the Toastmasters Speakers Bureau, speaking to groups and organizations outside Toastmasters.

What if my new car is a smash hit on the way out of the showroom?

With Auto-Owners, it's covered. An Auto-Owners policy automatically covers your new car. And should you have an accident within 90 days and your car is a total loss, they'll pay the full cost of a new car. Not all companies offer coverage this complete. But at Auto-Owners they try to think of everything. Stop by and see us for full details.

Madonna course looks at leadership

A new course at Madonna College will look at the relationship between individual leadership and the successful organization. The course, "Human Behavior and Leadership," is scheduled to meet for two weekend sessions, Fridays and Saturdays, Sept. 13, 14, 27 and 28. The course will meet Friday evening and all-day Saturday. The course also will be offered from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesdays, Sept. 18, Oct. 2 and 16.

The course will offer participants the chance to assess their own leadership qualities, said Ester Yager, adjunct management instructor. "The participants will be able to evaluate through standardized testing the leadership qualities they already possess, or perhaps need to acquire," she said. For more information, call the college at 591-5124.

Gift of love

Marguerite Fullhart, a resident of the Trinity Park West home for the aged in Livonia, takes a cookie offered up by one of the children in the Sward of the Spirit Lutheran Church vacation church school. The church school members visited the home for the aged last week to sing songs, offer refreshments and generally bring good cheer to the home's residents.

MacLeods mark 50th anniversary
Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacLeod of Livonia recently marked their 50th wedding anniversary at a family dinner. The MacLeods, both natives of Scotland, lived in Detroit for 39 years before moving to Trinity Park Retirement Apartments in Livonia in 1974. Her maiden name was Annie Murray. Donald MacLeod was one of the founders of Presbyterian Free Church in Livonia and is the church's senior elder. Annie MacLeod also has long been active in church affairs. The couple have three children: Peggy of Mount Clemens, Donald of Whitmore Lake and Kathleen Hanifan of Livonia. They have seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Living together shows self doubts moral perspectives

Rev. Lloyd Buss

THEY WANTED to be married. They had set a date. They had rented a hall. They were ready to send out the invitations. They were looking for a church. They were not members of the parish I serve as pastor. They were planning to move into the area after they were married. Their address indicated they were living together. It's a common occurrence in the life of clergy. With an increasing number of people not actively affiliated with institutional religion, the search for religious services for marriage is intensified. Some churches openly encourage the use of their services and facilities. Others are more restrictive. ARRANGING FOR the facilities and services of institutional religion for a marriage event after having selected a date and rented a reception hall is disquieting. It certainly identifies the couple's primary concern.

Church selection may well end being an issue of calendar instead of doctrine and faith. Far more disquieting, however, is the frequent failure of couples planning for marriage to recognize and appreciate the nature of the covenant of commitment at the heart and center of wedded life. It shows up most clearly in the increasing practice of living together before marriage. Living together before marriage is explained as a time of testing — a time to test the possibilities for a marriage that endures. It offers the experience of life together without the consequential legal and social features. LIVING TOGETHER before marriage as a time to ascertain the possibilities of a permanent marriage is based on massive self-deception. It can only have more if one doubts his/her capacity for a covenant of commitment before marriage. How can one overcome that same doubt in marriage? When one doubts one's own integrity of commitment before marriage, what will be changed to trust his/her own ability to keep a commitment without a trial period, will erode their trust of each other and themselves in marriage. It's vicious circle without resolution. The fact that couples living together want to be married is a good sign. It illustrates a degree of sensitivity for the order of community life. If they had no regard for the community, they would not bother with marriage. PEOPLE MARRY and make covenants of commitment because community is important and we want our lives in relationship to others to carry the values of life in community. What is so sad is to watch people destroy the very possibilities for trust and commitment that marriage is made by trying to practice it in a "test" before marriage. The same doubt that created their desire to live together will be changed to trust his/her own

Rocks may thrive in '85

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Dena Head exploded on the area hoop scene as a freshmen last year reminding local experts of a young Kim Archer — she's back and should be better this season.

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

Fred Thomann knows as well as any other coach that today's quotes make for tomorrow's scouting reports for the opposition.

That's why Thomann chooses his words cautiously.

But the big man cannot hide his feelings about the 1985 version of his Plymouth Salem girls basketball team. The smile gives him away.

"We've got good athletes," he said, beginning cautiously. "They run real good, jump real good, and they compete very well. When we put some basketball skills with our athletic ability we could be a good team."

A half-hour later he said: "This team right now, without having played a game, has the potential to be one of the better teams we've had here."

Then, after thinking about what he'd just said, he added: "But, if we don't work, if the skill level doesn't get better, we won't be there."

WHY IS Thomann high on this team? Several reasons.

No. 1 is balance. The Rocks will suit up nine players, all of whom will play.

"Last year, we would pressure teams at the beginning of games and then back off," Thomann said. "We have enough quality people that we could keep the pressure on all the time."

No. 2 is Dena Head. Head burst upon the scene last year as the most explosive freshman this area had seen since Kim Archer — her main weapon being a lethal blend of speed and power.

"I think you'll see Dena being used more in the open court this season," Thomann said. "She'll handle the ball more."

With that, the Rocks may deploy a more fastbreak-oriented attack than is their norm.

"We'll see if we can (run more)," Thomann said. "If we can do it, we will. If not, we'll set up. We have some kids that can shoot the ball pretty good."

girls basketball

JESSICA HANDLEY is one of the Rocks' sharpshooters. She saw limited time on the varsity as a sophomore last year. She'll occupy one of the backcourt positions.

Kristin Hostynski is another expected to carry some of the scoring load. The 5-10 junior saw a lot of varsity time a year ago and had a very productive summer.

"Kristin and Jesse (Handley) played very well this summer," Thomann said. "Really impressive."

So the Rocks appear to have balance, depth and individual talent. Thomann also sees another ingredient in his team, one perhaps more important than the other three: a competitive fire.

"You look out here (at his team's practice) and you like the attitude of these kids. These kids like to compete. They really get after it," Thomann said.

The heart and soul of that fighting spirit is provided by co-captains Suzie Balconi and Julie Tortora. You might not be able to distinguish between the two without a numerical roster. Both are small, quick point guards who possess unlimited athletic ability — they also share a fondness for having a good time.

"WE NEVER worry about things getting dull with those two around," Thomann said. "But, that's OK. Look, these kids have been practicing for 40 minutes and I haven't done a thing. If we went home right now, we had a great practice. Those two (Balconi and Tortora) did that."

This Salem team is also a bit of a

NAME YOUR FAVORITE sport. Choose any one you like, and I'll tell you why you like it. Go ahead, any sport, old or new. You can even pick baseball, although that's currently as popular around Detroit as Russian roulette. Come to think of it, the two have striking similarities.

Anyway, have you made your choice? Don't tell me, that's part of the game. Now I'll select my favorite, then I'll start naming all the reasons why it's my favorite. And I'll wager most of those reasons could apply to your sport, too.

Now let's see, what would my favorite be... Frisbee? Nah, too mindless. Auto racing? Nah, too mindless. Bowling? Boy, am I on a roll!

Let's try something more universal in appeal — cliff diving.

Now name what it is you like most about your sport. And don't tell me!

HERE'S WHAT I like about cliff diving: finesse and grace, the beauty of pure athletic skill put to the ultimate test. Sound applicable to your sport?

Sure it does. Of course, if the tide changes in a basketball game, you still got a chance to fight back. If the tide changes in cliff diving, you better hope the bottom's soft, your head's hard or your insurance is paid.

Nevertheless, most of my description could be applied to any sport. That's what makes sports such an attraction. You can change the game, change the players, change the locale, but you can't change the basic appeal. The attraction's the same for Chinese and Lebanese, Bulgarians and Americans.

It's the thrills and chills, the element of surprise. Excitement — that's what all sports share. Risk, performance under pressure, determination, the challenge to succeed against the odds are all key components to sports.

AND LET'S NOT forget money. That wasn't on your list? It should be. You may not like to admit it, but cash is as elementary to sports as water is to swimming. You can run around pretty quick without it.

For instance, name any modern organized sport that doesn't require at least a nominal financial investment. Equipment has to be paid for at the very least — even proper shoes are needed for running.

And the more serious an athlete gets the more it costs. Better coaching, better equipment, better practice facilities all drive the price skyward.

Money makes the difference. I'm right — you'll see. Keep an eye on Schoolcraft College's sports teams this fall. They'll provide proof enough. If they don't convince you, watch Oakland University's and Orchard Lake St. Mary's teams.

Sports are absorbing a bigger piece of the financial pie at all three institutions.

AND THE MONEY isn't being invested with dreams of a big payoff just over the horizon. None of the schools operate among the NCAA's upper echelon (Schoolcraft is in the NJCAA, St. Mary's is in the NAIA and OU is in the NCAA's Division II). None entertain hopes of making money.

So why would anyone invest in a losing proposition?

Publicity, of course. Good sports teams draw attention to the institution (I guess bad teams do too, but who wants to be tagged a loser?).

Actually, sports serve as fairly reasonable advertising.

As Marv Gans, Schoolcraft athletic director, said: "I think (sports) add to the community, and it keeps the school in the public eye."

But again, 0-20 teams don't get favorable attention, so if a school is going to have a sports program, it damn well better be a good one.

That's why Schoolcraft is offering, for the first time, athletic scholarships. And not only to those on the men's basketball team. Every member of the women's soccer team is receiving some kind of financial help. So are most of the male soccer players.

THAT AID, according to Schoolcraft men's coach Van Dimitriou, is why there are 29 players on this year's team. It's also a big reason why Dimitriou believes this team could be the best in school history.

It's the same at OU and St. Mary's. Both have expanded their scholarship programs. The budget for athletic grants at OU has grown from $132,800 to $190,000 in three years, with the number of scholarships available jumping from 33 to 45. Athletic director Paul Hartman estimates that budget will reach $300,000 by the 1989-90 school year.

More scholarships mean better players. Better players mean better teams. Better teams mean better PR.

But as all of us learned early in life, money doesn't grow on just any tree. You have to plant your seeds in fertile soil, and cultivate your crop carefully. Fund raising has nearly become a sport in itself. There are runs. There are dinners. Then there's the fantastic mass appeal of the run-and-dine party.

All this expense, the hype, the effort directly benefit only the handful of athletes competing. But it can supply the school with a positive public aura. And there's nothing as important as looking good before the all-seeing public eye.

It's the way of the world, I suppose. The cost of success is high. The more success, the more expense.

The spectacle of sport is colored green and can be found in a cash drawer.

Lady Ocelots eye another big year

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

There's a hole in the Schoolcraft College women's soccer team lineup. One key performer from last year's 16-4-2 squad, which finished second in the NJCAA tournament, is missing.

Is coach Ed Dudek worried? He's recruited six players in an effort to fill the hole, and he isn't sure they can do for the Ocelots what a single player did last year.

Of course, that single player was Sue Ferguson. The Farmington Harrison grad accounted for 39 of Schoolcraft's 70 goals last season. The team's second-leading scorer had seven.

"Last year, I thought we were outplayed in several games but we came out winning because (Ferguson) put the ball in the net," said Dudek, now in his third year coaching the Ocelot women.

"We're going to have to work more together. Sue had that knack of doing it all herself."

Fear not for Schoolcraft, however. With adept recruiting, Dudek has seen to it that the 1985 edition will be equal to last year's NJCAA runners-up.

"We should be a much stronger team," the Ocelot coach said. "Whether we can score or not remains to be seen. But we have excellent talent — there's no serious weak spot anymore."

OF THE 17 players on the roster, nine were prep all-stars in the past two years, and the others earned at least all-league accolades. That means that not only does Schoolcraft have talent, it has something last year's squad lacked — depth. Against Michigan State a year ago, for example, Schoolcraft had 11 able bodies, the bare minimum.

"It was remarkable we could play as well as we did," Dudek said.

There's no such lack this year, due in great part to scholarships now available. All 17 team members are receiving financial aid, either scholastic or athletic.

Although Ferguson's loss is a huge one, there's plenty of able replacements. Lori Nicley scored 30 goals for Troy Athens in 1984, and Denise Plwko had 42 for Fraser last season. In 1984, Jane Moylan, Livonia Ladywood's leading scorer, and Tamara Brown of Dearborn were both all-state. Julie Kusza was all-division at Livonia Stevenson (1984) and Angie Butterfield was all-league at Northville (1983).

"I'm not sure who's going to come out of all this," said Dudek. "Every position on the front line is up for grabs."

AT EVERY other spot, Dudek figures the Ocelots are as strong or improved. "Our midfield will be better, and our fullbacks will be quicker this year," he said. "They'll have more speed, which should help us get the ball on transition back to our offense faster."

At midfield, Tina Bazar (Sterling Heights Stevenson), Dorene Dudek (Livonia Churchill) and Mary Jo Taylor (Southfield) are possible starters, with Sue Bartrum (Farmington), Lisa Griffin and Sue Caprara (both Livonia Franklin) capable of playing both midfield and fullback. Dudek, Taylor and Bartrum are the only returnees from last season's squad.

Sheri Wolfe (Livonia Bentley), Wendy Propp (Saginaw MacArthur), Julie Nowka (Northville) and Shannon Bowler (Ladywood) are fullbacks.

Dudek also recruited Livonia Stevenson grad Doreen Beagle to play goal. Beagle was all-state last season, a distinction Dudek felt was well-earned.

"I thought she was the best in the whole state," he said. "It's a big plus having her come to Schoolcraft."

EVEN THOUGH this team is deeper in talent, it doesn't mean it will match last year's record. That's because the schedule is far more difficult.

Included are trips to Xavier University and University of Cincinnati to start the season Sept. 14 and 15. Cincinnati could be ranked among the top 10 NCAA Division I teams.

Schoolcraft will also host Nassau (N.Y.) CC, last year's NJCAA champion, Sept. 29, and Monroe CC of Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 5, before travelling to St. Louis, Mo., for games against Florissant Valley CC and Meramec CC Oct. 12-13. The Ocelots will compete in the Ohio State Tournament Oct. 23-27.

"We've added a lot of stronger teams," said Dudek. "And we won't get an automatic bye into the NJCAA tournament like we did last year because of two new teams in our region, one in Illinois and one in Indiana."

Those two new teams may necessitate a playoff game if Schoolcraft is to make the NJCAA tournament Nov. 26-30 at Mercer CC in Trenton, N.J. But if this team jells like last year's, it should spend Thanksgiving weekend in quest of a national title.

New start

New faces, old story at Mercy

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

It's a tribute to the success of a basketball program when it can graduate five starters (three of whom were three-year starters), including a pair of all-stars, and floor a potential championship squad the following year.

That's exactly the tribute bestowed upon Larry Baker's basketball program at Farmington Hills Mercy.

All-stater Annette Ruggiero is off to Colorado State. All-stater Mary Rosowski is at the University of Michigan. Three-year standout Amy DeMattia is toiling in the Ivy League at Princeton. (If you want to include 1984 graduate Sarah Basford, who's at U-M, that's four major college players from one program in two years.)

Also gone this year are Bev White and Sue Scott, two exceptional players for Mercy.

"Certainly we'll always look back on that group that just graduated as a remarkable group," said Baker entering his 11th season at Mercy. "But at the same time, we are very pleased at how ready this group of seniors are to perform."

LAST YEAR'S B team is this year's A team and the Marlins may not skip a beat.

"It was a disadvantage, to some extent, that these players didn't get a lot of game experience. But they certainly got a unique practice experience," Baker said.

Perhaps the two biggest benefactors from last year's B squad are Missy Duczynski and Michelle Fryatt.

"The time Missy spent playing behind Mary Rosowski and Amy DeMattia in 1984 is now paying dividends for her," Baker said.

Indeed, Duczynski, a solid 5-10, blossomed into a strong force inside this summer. She was named among the top 10 players at the All-State camp in Traverse City.

Fryatt has spent the better part of two seasons playing behind Ruggiero. She appears more than ready to assume command of the Marlin offense.

"She's an explosive force at point guard," Baker said.

Fryatt, a crafty ball handler with surprising strength and quickness, has the ability to penetrate defenses and shoot the long-range jumper.

BUT THE Marlins' top weapon was not a member of last year's B team. In fact, she has been earning A's for the Marlins since her sophomore year. Terri Ford, her of sprinter's speed (11.9 in the 100 meters) and high jumper's leaping ability, is back for her senior season.

Clearly a Division I college prospect, Ford averaged 12 points, nine rebounds, two assists and three steals over 24 games last season. She has labored somewhat in the shadow of others the past two seasons. Look for her to bust loose in 1985.

Jean Wassenberg is another who has toiled in anonymity for the Marlins and who's time has come.

"In the semifinals last season Jean emerged as a dynamic offensive player," Baker said. "She is a No. 2 guard who shoots well from 18-feet, yet she will fearlessly take the ball to the basket."

Defense, though, is the strength of her game, Baker said.

BENCH STRENGTH, as always, will be a plus for the Marlins. Jan Herberholz, a promising sophomore; Terri Nolodka, a strong front-court player returning after sitting out her senior season; and Margaret DeMattia, a junior who was one of the leaders on last year's undefeated Mercy JV unit, will all see significant playing time.

Mercy fights state rule

As of right now, and perhaps for the entire season, Yvette Maison will not play basketball for Farmington Hills Mercy.

Maison, as a sophomore at Bishop Gallagher last year, was one of the top players in the Catholic League. In fact, it was her last-second basket that defeated Mercy in the Catholic League Playoffs.

Maison's family moved out of the Harper Woods area last spring to Union Lake. Maison was enrolled at Mercy where she hoped to continue her promising high school basketball career this fall.

But the Michigan High School Athletic Association considers the Catholic League one school district. And the MSHAA rule book states that if an athlete transfers to another school within the same district, that athlete must sit out a semester before becoming eligible.

"WE ARE fighting that rule and so is the Maison family," said Mercy athletic director Ellen Sekerak. "There are two parts to the state's rule. The other part involves the school's service area. I was told that if I could prove Yvette moved out of Gallagher's service area — which she clearly did moving to Union Lake — then she could play. That's basically the premise of our appeal."

Sekerak said that according to Gallagher's enrollment figures, there were no residents of Union Lake attending the Harper Woods school.

Meanwhile, the Maison family has hired an attorney and is seeking a court injunction to block the MSHAA ruling. If the court upholds the injunction, Maison could play without penalty to Mercy for as long as the court deliberated on the case.

"I'm hoping Yvette can play, for her sake," Sekerak said. "She's such a great kid and basketball means a lot to her."

As of right now, Sekerak said, list Maison as ineligible for the 1985 basketball season.

Wasczenski, Miller reunite on MSU turf

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

Four young men dressed in green and white football uniforms stood in a mini huddle near midfield at Spartan Stadium Saturday.

Bob Wasczenski was there with his old Farmington Harrison teammate John Miller. Dave Yarema and Tom Holba, a pair of quarterbacks, were with them.

The rain was falling but spirits were high. It was picture day and members of the media littered the stadium carpet.

"There it is, the O&E connection," said the wise-guy reporter intruding upon the mini huddle.

This so amused Yarema that he promptly walked away.

"How's it going for you big fella?" was the question posed to Miller, MSU's highly publicized freshman recruit.

"Great, it's going great," Miller said. But you had to wonder what he was really thinking. He wasn't in camp more than three days when a front-page story accompanied by a color photo featuring him and teammate Andre Rison appeared in the Detroit News.

"No, everything's been fine. Nobody has said anything to me," Miller said. But then, the upper classmen have yet to practice with the freshmen.

Coach George Perles isn't concerned about any animosity — he's not talking about it if he is.

"Our freshmen class has gotten a lot of publicity," he said. "Perhaps more than they deserve. But they're like first-round draft choices in the pros. They are that good. They have a great chance of making and helping our ball club."

Later, when asked if he felt the upper classmen may hold a grudge against the highly touted rookies, he said, "These freshmen, Miller, Rison, (Maurice) Ware, these guys were Parade All-Americans. It's only natural that they get the publicity."

He didn't really answer the question, which makes you wonder if he's not at least a little concerned about a potential problem.

IT'S HARD to tell if Miller is worried about it. He says he's not, but after the players disbanded from the team photo to greet reporters Miller stayed in the stands.

He came down later and was besieged by a reporter from the Associated Press and several others. Most freshmen only have to worry about making the team.

"How are you doing Waz," quipped the reporter to Wasczenski. "I don't see any cast on your hand, any broken bones?"

"Hey Waz, this guy knows you pretty good," Holba joked.

Actually, it turned out to be no joke.

Wasczenski had earned a starting wide receiver job with the Spartans last year and caught a touchdown pass in the Cherry Bowl after an injury slowed his early progress.

Waz retained his starting role after spring drills this year. But, in an informal workout, he twisted his ankle. He wore a cast on it Saturday.

"I've been going to therapy four days a week," he said. "I think it'll be ready by Wednesday (the first day of fall practice)."

THOSE WHO know Wasczenski know him as a care-free, happy-go-lucky guy — almost to a fault. But, on the matter of his injury he's dead serious.

"It takes a lot of work to make it at this level," he said. "There are three or four outstanding receivers out here that can take my job in a minute. You have to work your tail off every day and keep getting better or else you won't be here long. I'm practicing Wednesday if this thing (ankle) is ready or not. I have to."

Wasczenski is an amazingly talented athlete. After a rather undistinguished high school baseball career at Plymouth Canton and Harrison, he has become an all-star in Lansing. He led his team to the AAABA World Series in Johnstown, Pa., this summer. He expects to play baseball for MSU this spring.

It appears Wasczenski can do just about what he wants to in athletics. Don't expect an ankle sprain to keep him off the field too long.

Absent from this cast of local characters was another Harrison product slated to be in an MSU uniform: Dave Blackmer.

BLACKMER, AFTER an outstanding high school career, was exiled on the bench at the University of Wisconsin for two years. He transferred to MSU last fall with hopes of taking over the placekicking duties.

Perles announced Saturday that Chris Caudell, a transfer from Kentucky, will handle the Spartans' kicking chores.

Bob Wasczenski, a Harrison grad who also spent time at Plymouth Canton, hopes a pre-season ankle injury won't keep him off the Spartan starting lineup.

Houle finds new life in trenches

By Chris McCosky
staff writer

The mention of Dave Houle generally elicits this type of response: Great high school football player, should have gone to a smaller college. He could have been a star.

Dave Houle didn't go to a small school after completing his consensus all-state career at Plymouth Salem in 1982. He went to Michigan State.

He has yet to play a down. But don't write the big man off just yet. As far as he's concerned, his college career officially begins this season.

"I'm looking forward to this season," said Houle who is in just his sophomore year of eligibility thanks to a red-shirted freshman season. "I should see some playing time."

Said MSU offensive line coach Buck Nystrom: "I'm encouraged at Dave's progress. I think he's blossoming into a good football player. He'll be a contributor to our football team."

IT WAS Nystrom who recruited Houle and it was Nystrom who helped Houle make the humbling adjustment from high school star to a just-another-name-on-the-roster college player.

"When I came here, the quarterbacks weighed more than I did," Houle said. "It really brings you down to earth. It was hard for me. But coach Buck stayed with me. He told me if I worked and kept trying, I'd get my shot."

It was Nystrom who transformed Houle from a tight end to an offensive guard.

"It was tough to switch positions," said Houle. "But it was the best thing for me. I miss being the star, you know, catching passes and things. But I just want to play."

From the day Houle agreed to switch positions he became a weight-room maniac. In two years he has built himself up from 198 pounds to a rock-solid 250. The bulked-up Houle still runs the 40-yard dash in 5.0, only a tenth of a second slower than he did at 200 pounds.

"He has the biggest arms in the Big 10," said teammate Tony Mandaric — exaggerating only a little.

Houle was impressive this spring. Head coach George Perles cited him as one of the most improved players over the course of spring drills.

"DAVE HAS come along very well," Nystrom said. "He's got a tremendous attitude, he works hard and he's gotten himself very strong. But it takes a long time to learn to play offensive line. It's the toughest position to learn. But Dave is intelligent. It looks promising for him. We'll see how he develops this fall."

THAT KIND of media exposure can be hard on a freshman. The upper classmen, those who have taken their licks at the college level without much attention, can hold such exposure against a young untried freshman.

1st S'craft Run sounds like fun

What could be more fun on a Sunday morning than exercise, entertainment, food and fellowship?

If that sounds appealing, then set aside Sunday, Sept. 22, for the first annual Schoolcraft College Ocelot Run, co-sponsored by the Observer & Eccentric.

The run — or, more correctly, runs — are open to any and all, with competition in nine age groups for both males and females. There will be three races: one-mile, five kilometers and 10 kilometers.

All three will start at Schoolcraft College, on Haggerty between Six and Seven Mile roads. Trophies for those finishing first through third overall and first and second in each division will be presented. Overall male and female champions will receive a $25 gift certificate from Racquets Unlimited.

Following the runs, music, food and beverages will be available, and a running

random drawing will be held for prizes like certificates for dinner and shower facilities will be available.

Cost for this athletic extravaganza is $9 if registered before Sept. 18. The cost is $12 on race day. Those who pre-register will receive a long-sleeve shirt (shirts will be given to race-day registrants if available).

Entry coupons are available at Schoolcraft College, the Plymouth and Livonia parks and recreation departments, the Plymouth and Livonia YMCAs, Racquets Unlimited, and in the Observer & Eccentric sports pages. For more information, call 591-6400, Ext. 480.

Imports make Ocelots potent

By C.J. Risk staff writer

Van Dimitriou spoke evenly, trying to maintain his objectivity.

"Right now," the Schoolcraft College men's soccer coach said while watching his team scrimmage Friday, "it looks like we have a pretty good core. Our starters are solid."

That was about as long as Dimitriou could harness his excitement for the coming season. Truth is, Schoolcraft is loaded, and the Ocelots' coach knows it.

Last year, Dimitriou's first as head coach (he was an assistant 1977-83), Schoolcraft was 8-4 overall and won the Region XII berth to the NJCAA tournament with a 6-2 mark. Only two starters return, but the new recruits are so talented that many of last year's players would be hard pressed to retain their starting status.

"I would have to say that, at this point of the season, this group ranks with the best we've ever had," Dimitriou said, comparing it to the 1980 Schoolcraft squad that reached the NJCAA semifinals.

Schoolcraft sports

WHAT SEPARATES this team from those of past seasons is not only the talent but the depth. There are currently 29 players on the squad, more than ever before, and all have more than a small measure of ability.

"We are starting to reap the benefits of the soccer programs in Livonia and the surrounding areas," Dimitriou said. "Now, we're getting kids with skills. We only need to refine them."

But local talent isn't the whole story at Schoolcraft, the Ocelot coach admitted. "What makes us fortunate this year is that, not only do we have better local ballplayers, but we have some good foreign players, too."

"Good" might not be quite eloquent enough to describe Dimitriou's two finds. Matthew Pace, from Kent, England, is slated to start at striker and Rick Hamers, from Leek, Netherlands, should take over the midfield slot. Both possess superior talent.

"It's beautiful to see a soccer player like that," said Dimitriou. "It puts a smile on a coach's face."

IF THAT'S the case, those two would be enough to keep Dimitriou in stitches for the season. But there's more.

Like John Gelmsi, the all-state forward from Livonia Stevenson, who will play wing and some midfield; Randy Johnson, the former Plymouth Salem star forward who transferred from Florida Southern; Scott Steiner, the center fullback from Salem who will anchor the Ocelot defense; and Sam Matovski, the goalie from Livonia Church Hill who earned all-Western Lakes Activities Association honors.

Each one figures to be a starter when the season begins, although that's subject to change. For instance, Matovski has played well, but there are three other goalies challenging for the starter's role, including Jeff Vkratsis of Livonia Clarenceville and Jeff Guido of Garden City.

"The competition there is so close, I would have no hesitation going with any of them," Dimitriou said of his goaltenders.

THE TWO RETURNEES from last year's team are counted on to contribute heavily. Ab Yaffal, from Livonia Bentley, will fill the stopper's position, and Jeff Neschich, a halfback from Plymouth Canton, has "come back in great shape and is ready for the season," Dimitriou said.

The schedule includes the normal rough trek against the Region XII opponents. "I have to say, as always since I've been here, that Macomb CC and us will be up there, with Cuyahoga CC a dark horse — you never know what they'll come up with," Dimitriou said.

A game at Eastern Michigan Aug. 29 started the season for Schoolcraft. The Ocelots also host the College of DuPage at 1 p.m. Sunday, then entertain Michigan State at 7 p.m. Friday, Sept. 6 at Livonia Stevenson.

All proceeds from the Michigan State contest, will benefit the Schoolcraft College and Stevenson athletic programs.

Wolves, Marauders fall in Challenge Cup

By Rob McElhany special writer

The Livonia Wolves-West and Redford Marauders each suffered hard-luck losses resulting in shootouts during Michigan Challenge Cup quarterfinal action Sunday at Detroit Benedictine High School.

A questioned call by the referee in one shootout (a series of kicks following regulation play), helped the Detroit Spartans eliminate the Wolves, 1-0. Meanwhile, a fluke goal assisted the Mount Clemens Booters in ousting the Marauders, 2-1.

With the score tied at two in the shootout between the Spartans and the Wolves, Spartan goalie Dino Chatsis stopped a shot by the Wolves' Russ Gans.

The Wolves, however, claimed that Chatsis illegally made a move prior to Gans' kick and should have been awarded the goal.

"It was a very bad call," said Wolves acting coach and Great Lakes Soccer League president Lyn Clarke, subbing for Emilio Troiani. "It was the worst one I've seen in quite awhile."

AFTER THE PLAY, Vasilos Tsatsarounas found the net for the Spartans, pulling the Detroit Soccer League team ahead 3-2. Walt Barrett of the Wolves then followed with a shot that hit the left goalpost, and the Spartans were winners.

The Wolves, Great Lakes League runners-up, had plenty of opportunities to score, but couldn't capitalize. Jim Duggan fired a shot which Chatsis managed to get a hand on early in the second half. Minutes later, Dave Kusza's header struck the crossbar.

Midway through the first half of the Redford-Mount Clemens showdown, Booter Manuel Failoc took an unbelievable shot from 45 yards out, sailing high into the net over a leaping Brian O'Shea.

But the Marauders recovered from Failoc's fluke goal.

Eighteen minutes into the second half, Dan Laurie took the ball down the right side of the field, beating Booter goalie Rick Krom with a low shot.

BOOTER GREG COGNETTO opened up the scoring in a shootout, but Matt Pace quickly tied it up for the Marauders.

O'Shea made a spectacular save on the next shot, taken by Logan Pichel.

Manny Murua followed by putting the Marauders ahead, 2-1. At that point, it appeared they would advance to the semifinals.

'76 Wolves victorious

The Livonia Wolves 1976 soccer team, coached by Paul Scieluna and Jack Hensley, won all four games and their division championship at the German-American Festival Soccer Tournament last weekend in Toledo, Ohio.

The Wolves defeated the Sylvania Blazers (11-0), Perrysburg Yellow Jackets (6-3) and the Fairview Park '76ers (4-2).

In the championship game, the Wolves blanked the Sterling Heights Travelers, 2-0.

Spikers stay fit for contention

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

If there is a certainty regarding Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (GLIAC) volleyball, it's that nothing is a certainty.

A year ago, Oakland University was picked to finish fifth in the coaches' pre-season poll. OU coach Bob Hurdle then guided his Pioneers to a third place.

Three seniors graduated, but five starters return, Hurdle told his fellow coaches at this year's GLIAC meeting, adding that he had just completed his "best recruiting season ever."

So what happened? OU was once again picked to finish fifth in the GLIAC.

Salem aims for big year

chameleon. They can throw several different looks at you. Thomann can floor a fast, scrappy team with three guards and Dena Head. He can put out a patient offensive team with a trio of potential scorers.

And, he can set out a big, strong, physical squad. Senior Leslie Plichta has recovered from the knee injury that ended her junior year. She is a strong 5-10 front-court player. Laura Clifford, 6-0, is the tallest Rock. She saw limited varsity duty last season but had a successful summer.

Thomann is also very high on junior Michelle Cygan, a physical player, and sophomore Keri McBride, who at 5-11 has the potential to be an effective inside threat for Salem.

"I'M JUST going to take this team, feed them as many basketball skills as

OU sports

"I'm a little surprised, but not too much," said Hurdle. "We lost three seniors, and I guess people think that means they'll be three new faces in the lineup."

THAT MAY or may not be the case. Among the four returning seniors are hitters Mary Pike and Becca Wyatt. Pike was a first-team All-GLIAC selection last year, and Wyatt was a second team choice.

"As far as the pre-season poll, if people want to pick us fifth, that's fine," said Hurdle, whose Pioneers posted a school-record 32 victories in 1984. "My players don't put much stock in it. Actually, it causes more chuckles than anything."

Hurdle figures several GLIAC rivals have improved. Which means Ferris State, an NCAA Division II tournament qualifier and the dominant force in the league the past two seasons, will have to work much harder to reclaim its title.

"I think any one of five teams can win it," said Hurdle, and OU is included in that number.

Others returning are senior Judy Jenner, a three-year starter at setter who holds the single-season school record for assists, and hitters Stacey Young, a senior from Bloomfield Hills Andover, and junior Bridget Bohnet.

TRACEY JONES, a freshman who earned Class B all-state honors at Fenton, will crack the starting lineup at middle blocker-hitter, Hurdle figures. Pike will shift to the outside "where we can get the ball to her more."

If Hurdle faces a problem, it's finding enough spots for everyone.

"Our seniors are all doing a nice job, and I'm really pleased with the development of our young players," the OU coach said. "I'm very happy with our depth. My biggest problem is figuring out who to play. There's a lot of competition going on right now, which makes it nice for me. I can make some moves."

Hurdle plans to insert freshmen Shelley Heney (Saginaw Eisenhower), Anne Harrison (Richland Gulf Lake) and Susan Mavesian (Dearborn) and sophomores Lori Quinn (Clawson) and Noelle Graham (Ferndale) at the hitter/blocker positions often. Graham will also get extensive playing time backing up Jenner at setter.

THE MORE he uses them, the more they will gain "valuable experience, not only for later this season, but for next year when we graduate four seniors."

The schedule is not easy, with tournaments at Indiana-Purdue-Ft. Wayne Sept. 13-14, at Wayne State Sept. 20-21 and at Ferris State Sept. 27-28. OU will also host the Pioneer Classic Oct. 25-26, with Elmhurst, Northern Kentucky, Wisconsin-Green Bay and Wayne State all visiting.

What should help the Pioneers is that GLIAC title contenders Ferris, Grand Valley and Northwood will be home matches this season (last year OU played each on the road).

The Pioneers open their season by hosting GLIAC foes Hillsdale and Saginaw Valley and community college teams from Schoolcraft and Macomb in the Oakland University Invitational Sept. 6-7.

Chris Gilles was bumped from the U.S. Open Tennis Tournament in the first round of the qualifier Friday, losing a hard-fought three-set match to Susan Rimes of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Gilles needed two victories in the qualifier to win a berth in the tournament's main draw.

Paul Deedler and Glen Bemiss captured the Canton Recreation Mens Golf League championship by taking 4 1/2 out of a possible five points from Walter Scott and Jim Martin. Deedler shot a 37 and Bemiss a 40 in the nine-hole match play.

'Big Story': It's made in Detroit

Moviemaker's focus is man's dark side

By Tom Panzenhagen
staff writer

BRIAN LAWRENCE, like a growing number of young and dedicated, Detroit-area moviemakers, wants to see his star rise over Motown, not Hollywood.

"You're allowed more freedom to work outside Hollywood — you've more control over the product," he said. "And the nice thing about independent films is you can make them anywhere; Detroit is one of the better places because studio facilities are very good here."

Lawrence, 32, lives in Southfield. His latest film, called "The Big Story," is being shot in Detroit and Bloomfield Hills. A 30-minute "prototype" of the projected, feature-length film already is finished.

Lawrence also runs an acting workshop called The Studio on Washington Avenue (in Royal Oak), and he's the co-founder and head of the year-old Independent Film Producers Association of Michigan (IFPAM), a non-profit clearinghouse of film talent in southeastern Michigan.

It's not unusual to find the graceful, slightly built

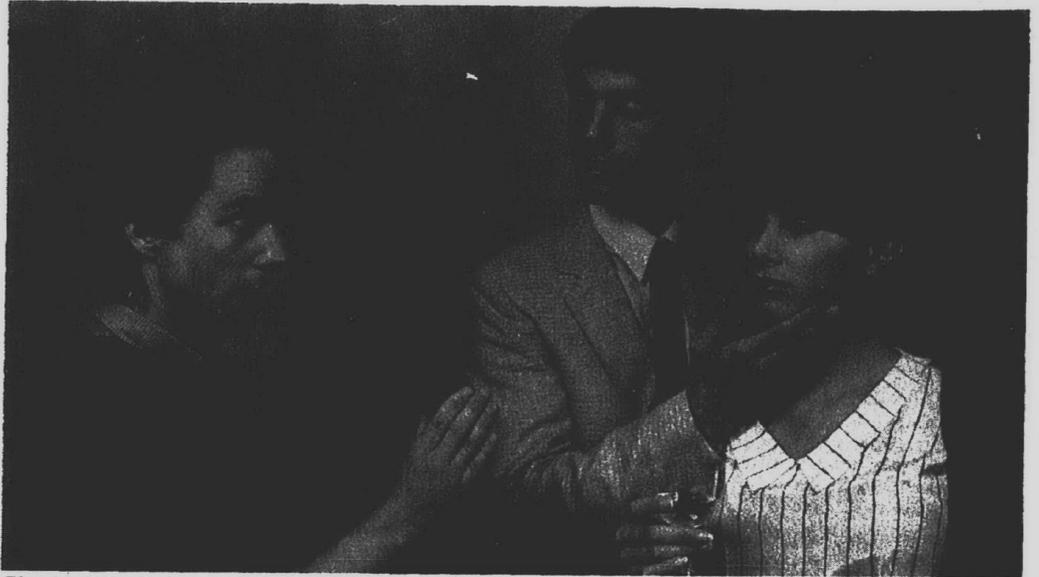

Lawrence teaching acting classes from 10 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, holding casting calls on behalf of area filmmakers on a Saturday morning, and on the set directing "The Big Story" whenever and wherever he can line up cast, crew and location.

Lawrence may be no more dedicated to film than other area moviemakers, but he certainly is more involved in its many different aspects.

LAWRENCE STRESSES classic filmmaking methods and acting techniques — routinely citing Konstantin Stanislavsky's theories of method acting — when discussing "The Big Story."

"A lot of other directors don't know acting theory and, to some extent, are cynical of it, and I don't understand that," Lawrence said.

"The Big Story" is about a newspaper man who's "too cynical to be a reporter because he doesn't believe there's truth," according to the director. The reporter, while on an assignment, witnesses a murder and must elude the killers.

Some scenes shot in Bloomfield Hills

"It's in the Hitchcock tradition of the innocent man becoming a victim. He just shows up for an interview and several hours later he's being chased by murderers," Lawrence said.

It's also being shot as film noir, a style of moviemaking which became popular in the 1940s that's characterized by dark screen images combined with a dark thematic outlook.

"Classic film noir is similar to Greek tragedy. You do your best but you know it's going to turn out bad; like Greek tragedy, everything's all fated ahead of time," Lawrence said.

Ironically, the big story within the movie never gets told despite the best efforts of a second reporter. "The idea is there's a world out there you're not in control over," Lawrence said; and no, he added, that's not meant as a metaphor of the Hollywood moviemaking system, but the similarity is unmistakable, he conceded.

ANOTHER OF Lawrence's projects is the IFPAM-sponsored Michigan Independent Film Festival, slated for Saturday-Sunday, Sept. 28-29.

"The idea is to showcase independent filmmakers from the Midwest area," he said. The festival will include short films and documentaries produced by filmmakers from Michigan and surrounding states.

Lawrence wants the festival to entertain and enlighten people to the charms of independent film.

"We have to rely on a lot of people being very supportive of independent film. We have to get more community awareness and financial support right now, and that's what this place (IFPAM) is designed to do," he said.

LAWRENCE FOLLOWED a path familiar to many young filmmakers.

He started out making his own 8mm films, graduated to the 16mm variety and then studied acting and filmmaking in college, at Michigan State University.

Lawrence said, "I never imagined not finishing school, but it isn't that important. I'd see no reason for doing graduate work in film; the experience is more important."

"But if I could teach (filmmaking), I'd include business. You've got to raise money; the aesthetics are wonderful but when you get out here, God, you've got to raise money."

Lawrence hopes to raise money for "The Big Story" by showing his 30-minute prototype to potential investors. "Independent filmmakers don't have a chance of becoming a Steven Spielberg — you're not going to make $200 million. But they're a safe investment," he said.

Lawrence supports himself via the acting studio. Classes are held year-round. The next session, called "Acting for the Camera," starts Tuesday, Sept. 17. It will feature instruction in commercial script analysis, dramatic scene study, dramatic monologue study and improvisational technique.

Cost of the 12-week course is $360, Lawrence said. For more information, call 398-7744.

Local actors during filming of Brian Lawrence's film, "The Big Story," play out an abduction scene. The actors are (from left) Jelle Jackman of Detroit, Susan Michalski of Birmingham and Brian Schulz of Warren.

"Word of Honor" (1980), 8 p.m. Friday on Ch. 50. Originally 100 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

Plymouth-area residents have another chance to see themselves on the small screen in "Word of Honor," the made-for-TV movie about a staunch, small-town newspaperman who refuses to betray a source. The movie, starring Karl Malden, was filmed in Plymouth five years ago by former Detroit Lion Alex Karras' production company. Although the movie simplifies complex legal and journalistic issues, it does so in an engaging, entertaining way. Solid performances lend themselves to the overall high-quality production.

Rating: $2.90.
"Rocky" (1976), 8:30 p.m. Friday on Ch. 2. Originally 119 minutes. TV time slot: 150 minutes.

Yo! It's Rocky Balboa — a.k.a. Sylvester Stallone, a.k.a. Rambo — in an undeniably heartwarming love story about a boxer. That's the key: "Rocky" is a love story first and a boxing saga second. The tribulations of the lead character are more important than the outcome of his fights, as director John Avildson so effectively dramatizes in the movie's climactic moments. Stallone is excellent as the beefcake boxer, and Talia Shire lends super support as his moxy girlfriend. Carl Weathers, Burgess Meredith and Burt Young co-star.

Rating: $3.50.
"Captain Blood" (1935), about 3 Friday night on Ch. 50 (following "The Salzburg Connection," which starts at 1). Originally 99 minutes.

In his autobiography, Errol Flynn wrote of his first screen success: "Jack Warner's faith in me set off my career — for whatever it has meant to me and to the world, for good or ill — and started me on that road which has so often made the public acquainted with my wicked ways." "Captain Blood" launched Flynn on that road, although his ways were pretty wicked even before Hollywood beckoned. Flynn's autobiography, "My Wicked, Wicked Ways" (1959), written in the last year of the actor's life, provides a fairly accurate, albeit self-serving, look at those ways. For a more objective and biting account, see David Niven's "Bring on the Empty Horses" (1975), which includes a chapter on Flynn, Niven's best friend in their early days as Hollywood rogues.

"Captain Blood," of course, is a rousing swashbuckler of a movie, co-starring 20-year-old Olivia de Havilland and a most menacing Basil Rathbone. An excellent supporting cast and stirring musical score enhance the material even more.

Rating: $3.30.
"A Change of Seasons" (1980), 9 p.m. Monday on Ch. 2. Originally 102 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

Tired of male menopause movies? Then stay away from "A Change of Seasons," which is Bo Derek's second bout with male menopause in as many outings. She's still a 10 to look at but while the movie "10" was about a 7, "A Change of Seasons" is no more than a 4. Anthony Hopkins this time plays the middle-aged-crazy man on the make. A not-so-interesting plot twist finds his wife, played by Shirley MacLaine, likewise on the prowl after learning of the husband's indiscretions. The screenplay was co-written by "Love Story" author Erich Segal.

Rating: $1.98.

Here are 'everyday' values

It is always pleasant to report on wine releases that carry sound value. There is, of course, more appeal in reporting great wines, whatever the cost, but most of us must pay close attention to what we buy if we are to be able to afford wine most days, for "everyday wines," as the phrase goes.

Today in the market there are two series, one from Napa and one from Sonoma, that consistently produce very sound wines in the under-$5-a-bottle range. The first, Round Hill, has only recently been available to us, though it has been available in California since the early 1970s.

Its origins and ownership are difficult to trace, but originally it was created to be the prestige label for the Ernie Wine Stores in California, carrying wines a step above the standard stuff issued under the Ernie name.

In some complicated fashion, it got spun off, and today it is a legitimate and semi-independent operation located on Lodi Lane, just below the Freemark Abbot complex. The wines are still featured in Ernie's stores under some marketing arrangement, but distribution has now become national.

IN ADDITION to a fairly standard line of varietals and generics at decent prices, Round Hill releases regularly a series called "house" wines. These are the ones that are the focus of this column, the real values, sold here for about $4 a bottle, perhaps a bit higher. Now available are a 1984 chardonnay and a Lot 4 cabernet sauvignon, both of high quality. Additionally, there is a Lot 4 chardonnay sold in 1.5-liter bottles that, I think, is not the same as the 1984 issue. Both, however, are varietal, uncomplicated, clean and pleasant. These, and the cabernet, are all fine values.

Earlier efforts to make "house" fume blanc have been less successful.

Round Hill also has a standard issue 1980 petite sirah available locally. It is a massive, grapey, full, fairly complex wine of great vigor. For those who like deep and rich sirahs, this one is not to be missed. It should age well, but it is such a pleasure now it will be hard to keep around.

The other winery presenting a good "series" value, Glen Ellen of the Sonoma Valley, is still only five or six years old and has been available to us in Michigan most of that time. This family operation makes a very high quality cabernet sauvignon, chardonnay and, unusually, both a fume blanc as well as a sauvignon blanc. They are not inexpensive, all of them.

In addition to these, its inexpensive series is called Proprietor's Reserve, and each year under this name it issues wine

at least one red and one white, usually two. With these issues it is necessary to read the fine print on the labels to know what you are buying, but it is worth it.

FOR EXAMPLE, there are now two 1984 Proprietor's Reserve whites. One is made, as the label indicates, from chardonnay, and it is a beauty. The other is also a 1984 Proprietor's Reserve white with no varietal designation. The label indicates that this is a "Dry Table Wine" and that is all.

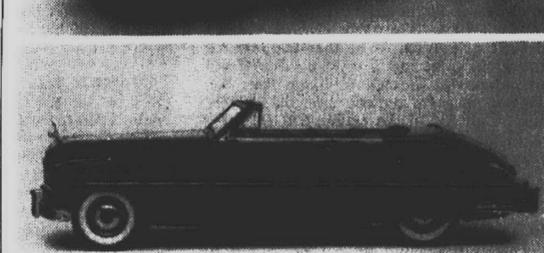

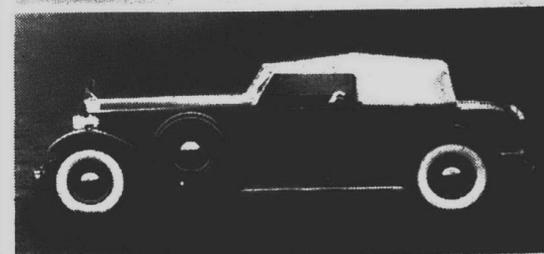

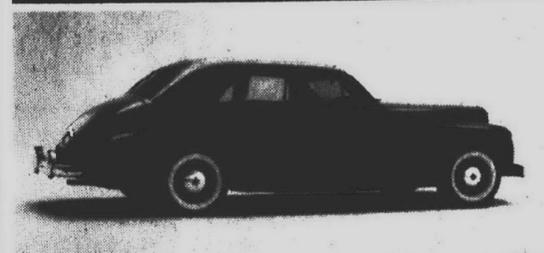

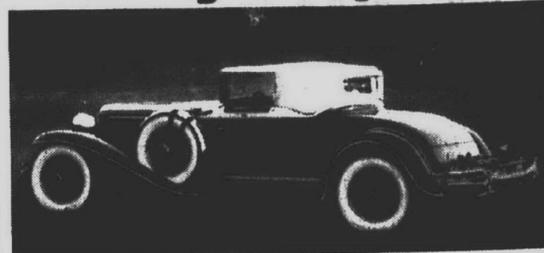

Pity the poor buyer who originally bought the first, liked it, and then somewhat casually bought the second thinking he was getting the same wine. For that one, if my detective work is correct, is a blend of chenin blanc, riesling and French colombar. It is not a "dry" wine, except perhaps for the person whose standard is a spatlese or other rich riesling. It is acceptable wine but far from "dry" as the chardonnay is. However, at $4, either is fine value for the money.

Buying the Proprietor's Reserve red also has an element of challenge in it. Since its initial release in 1981, these have been made of cabernet sauvignon, duly indicated, and very decent ones at that. Not a deep, complex wine but straightforward and distinct. Recently, there has been a non-vintaged release that does not indicate the grape varietal used. It is not cabernet, far from it. My guess is that it is petite sirah and a fine one (and considerably less intense than the '80 Round Hill).

I DO not intend to imply deception on the part of Glen Ellen here. Clearly, it is selling a category of wine rather than a particular varietal. But let the buyer be alert to read its labels closely when a Proprietor's Reserve is selected. Differences within both the red and the white issues are considerable; again, the wines are all sound and dependable.

Here's potpourri of ideas for cooking up vacations

MY MAILBAG is brimming with things to do this fall, in Michigan and throughout the country and the world. Labor Day is a good time to use this information to plan a close-to-home trip or something more exotic and far away.

The Michigan Department of Transportation estimates that motorists will drive a record 790 million miles during this 78-hour Labor Day weekend in Michigan, up three percent from last year. That caps a summer that is expected to bring up to $4 billion into state coffers because of tourism, the best we've done since the record-setting season of 1978.

If you are still making plans for the long weekend, you will find county fairs, and festivals dedicated to fruit, fish and just-plain-fun, throughout Michigan. Call the Michigan Travel Bureau toll-free 1-800-292-2520 for events along the roadway you have chosen for your meanderings.

The state travel bureau, or one of the four regional bureaus, will give you information about any of the events going on in the weeks to come: West Michigan Tourist Association, 616-456-8557; East Michigan Tourist Association, 517-895-8823; Upper Peninsula Travel and Recreation Association, 906-774-5480; Travel and Tourism Association of Southeast Michigan, 585-8220. The hotline number for southeast Michigan is 585-7233.

FEELIN' PEACHY? — Word comes regarding Michigan's 1985 peach crop, 20 percent higher than 1984. Bob Underwood, manager of the Traverse City area's largest farm market, attributes the increase to "extremely favorable weather and no spring frost. One of the best fruit crops of recent times."

Before you drive to T.C., call Bob at 616-947-8799 for latest harvest conditions, or the Michigan Travel Bureau for U-Pick farm information.

MOM, B'BALL, AND APPLE FESTS — A bumper crop of state fruit festivals has three for apple addicts, beginning with the Sept. 20-22 Apple Festival in Niles. Bangor's Apple party is Oct. 10-14; Charlevoix breaks out the cider Oct. 12-13.

OLD CAR FESTIVAL — Its 35th year for this prestigious gathering of vintage vehicles and costumed owners at Greenfield Village, Sept. 7-8. Parading past judges who check under the hood for authenticity, all 350 of the classic REOs, Pierce Arrows, Model T's, et al, from the 1890s to 1920s are in running condition. On the Village Green and special events field; no additional charge for admission. 271-1620.

WRECKS IN PARADISE — The Lake Superior light station at Whitefish Point, 11 miles north of Paradise in Michigan's UP, now includes a Shipwreck Museum. Exhibits and video tapes today; tomorrow's plans include an enormous open diorama and special effects, giving guests an underwater you-are-there experience. Open 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., seven days a week until Oct. 15. $1.00 admission. (Tahquamenon Falls, good rockhounding nearby).

ADVANCE TO PARK PLACE — Groups convening in Ann Arbor should ask for parking passes for attendees. A windshield card permits free parking at all City of Ann Arbor meters as long as you observe posted restrictions. Not valid for university meters (colored blue and gold) or private lots. Contact A.A. Conference and Visitors Bureau, 207 E. Washington, Ann Arbor 48104. 313-995-7281.

A sure-fire fall attraction is the 35th annual old car festival to be held in Greenfield Village, Sept. 7-8. About 350 cars will be judged. Visiting the car show and the area makes for a good weekend vacation.

MOUNT SNOW, VT. — Balcony seats (best in the house) for New England's fall color show are reached by gondola operating from Mt. Snow's base area and the 3,600 foot summit. At the top is the new Summit Lodge, food, drink and a view of forever. Mt. Monadnock, Mt. Washington, and peaks of the Killington Range. Mid-Sept. to mid-Oct.

PRESTONBURG, KY. — The eastern Kentucky highlands will ring with the sound of traditional music from England and Ireland, the kind of fiddling that gave roots to bluegrass. The Kentucky Highland Folk Festival, Sept. 6-8; storytelling, country clomping, mountain joys.

MARIETTA, OHIO — Painted, polished and puffing their little smokestacks out, old paddlers from up and down the Ohio River are gathering to race it out at the Sternwheeler Festival. Fireworks and other fun, but the boats are a really rare event. Sept. 6-8. 614-373-5178.

CHICAGO, ILL. — "Spiked Heeled Frenzy?" "Sentinel for the Curmudgeon?" What kind of a name is that for a piece of sculpture? See for yourself. Seven acres near downtown Chicago have been turned into an authentic Illinois prairie — complete with buffalo grass and rye — as a setting for the somewhat whimsical sculptured works of 10 acclaimed artists. Visitors to "Sculpture Chicago" can watch the creative ones working in outdoor tent studios every Tuesday through Sunday, from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. for five weeks following Labor Day.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE — The Shaw goes on, until Oct. 13. "Murder On the Nile," "The Women," "Heartbreak House," etc. can still be seen at Ontario's Shaw Festival (featuring G.B.S. and his contemporaries). Held in three theaters, seats are not available for every show, but chances of getting tickets are good if you call in advance. For a program list write to P.O. Box 774, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, Canada L0S 1J0. 416-468-2153.

EXPO '86 — Opening in Vancouver, B.C., on May 2, 1986, is at the ticket-selling stage. Tickets are available at 150 branches of Washington State's Seafirst Bank. If that's too far, write Expo 86, P.O. Box 1986, Station A, Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada V6C 2X5, for ticket and general information.

CRUISE SHY? — The three-day cruise, designed for people who aren't sure they'll like cruising, is a great way to add spice to your Florida vacation. Premier Cruise Lines have three and four day getaways to the Bahamas from Port Canaveral, Florida with special deals that include EPCOT at Walt Disney World and a free Greyhound bus to pick you up anywhere along the Florida coast. Food, entertainment, gambling, food, a private island stop, exciting shopping, food... The sell is in the sampling. FEAR OF ILLNESS — For the easy-queasy, anxiety about being sick overseas can knock out travel, but even the healthiest roamers need a doctor now and then. The International Association for Medical Assistance to Travellers (IAMAT) has a world-spanning directory of English-speaking doctors who charge moderate fees. IAMAT also issues bulletins regarding disease risk areas (such as malaria) with preventative steps to take, world immunization chart for 200 countries, your personal clinical record, world climate charts, etc.

No cost for membership, although tax-exempt donations are welcome. Write to IAMAT, 736 Center St., Lewiston, N.Y. 14092. 716-754-4883.

One of four regional state travel associations provides information about upcoming events. The numbers are: West Michigan, 616-456-8557; East Michigan, 517-895-8823; Upper Peninsula, 906-774-5480; Southeast Michigan, 585-8220.

Florida is big draw for those who drive

Florida continues to lure more Michigan vacationers who drive than any other area, says AAA of Michigan.

AAA based its count on AAA Michigan auto Trip-tik routings requested. The second most popular destination area, according to the requests, is the Ohio-Indiana-Illinois region.

Other popular areas are: Ontario, the Georgia-North Carolina-South Carolina region and the mid-Atlantic states (Washington D.C., Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia).

For those Florida bound, the top attractions are Walt Disney World and the Epcot Center, Busch Gardens, Kennedy Space Center and Sea World.

Creative Living

The ground level great room with the field stone fireplace in Dianne Rosenberg's bi-level contemporary home is where she entertains clients. The coffee table and conference table at left are both her designs. Her office, full of samples of work is adjacent to the room. Directly above it (pictured at right) is the family great room. Paul Campbell made the dining room table in ash to Rosenberg's design. The chairs are Pace leather. Notice how the drapes, a deep raisin color, are hung.

Decorators blend business and family

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

The five residences on the Saturday, Sept. 7, house tour sponsored by the National Home Furnishings League, NHFL, represent vastly different life styles and approaches to interior design and architecture.

All are within easy driving distance of each other in Bloomfield and West Bloomfield. Two belong to interior designers who have areas for business as well as for entertaining and family life.

Of the two condominiums on the tour, one belongs to a businessman bachelor and the other to a couple who moved from a large home.

The bachelor's condo, done by Beverly Stewart, is in grays with deep grape. Particularly interesting will be the furniture designed by Stewart for her client, the beautiful views and the collection of colorful figurative, paintings by Deborah Kashdan of Franklin who has seven paintings in an international juried exhibition at the Mus-savi Gallery of New York City through August.

PAUL CANVASSER, ASID, designed the other condo interior to reflect the warm, livable feeling of the former home, incorporating treasured possessions into a new sophisticated atmosphere for entertaining with lots of fine art.

One home on the tour was remodeled, specifically, to hold an outstanding collection of contemporary art.

The two designers, Dianne Rosenberg and Patty Stevens, solved the problem of work space in their homes in totally different ways.

Stevens, owner of Details Inc., is not only an interior designer, but skilled in accessorizing as well. Her 4,000-square-foot home illustrates her ability to add the touches which personalize an interior, to combine colors, fabrics, heirlooms and collector pieces to create a warm, charming atmosphere. She has her fabric and color samples neatly arranged in a small area adjacent to her hunter green and pink country kitchen.

Rosenberg uses the lower level of the California, contemporary bi-level, for her office and entertainment/conference center for her clients. The upper level is for the family, and there is also considerable amount of space for family-oriented entertaining as well.

The home is built on a sloping lot which overlooks a large pond, and the landscaping and gardens on the pond side of the house are particularly colorful this time of year.

Many of the pieces in the home were designed by Rosenberg and fabricated by Paul Campbell and Vogue Furniture of Livonia.

She is a strong booster of Michigan craftsmen and has many examples of their work.

Her husband collects European and American pottery and this, along with paintings and graphics by local as well as international artists, is displayed throughout the home.

ROSENBERG and Stevens will both be talking to visitors as they come to their houses.

Members of the NHFL will be at each home to answer questions about the furnishings, styles, fabrics and window treatments. The latter may hold some of the most exciting ideas to be gleaned from the tour.

Linda Golden, tour chairman, said the choosing of the homes was done with great care. They had to be reasonably close to each other, easy to find from the map which accompanies the tickets. They had to have lots of ideas to appeal to all tastes and pocketbooks and, of course, be innovative and exciting with good traffic flow and plenty of room for visitors.

Tickets, $12.50 per person, including lunch snack from R.I.K.'s Total Food Center, are available at all Gorman Galleries (Southfield, Troy, Dearborn); Walter Herz, Southfield; Piersons Interiors, Somerset Mall, Troy; Blinds and Designs (Arlene Lullove), Livonia; and Jacobson's Store for the Home, Dearborn only. No tickets will be sold at the tour homes. Tour hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Artisan recalls the golden days of interior design

By Carmina Brooks
special writer

One of the few remaining artisans of the ancient skill of gold leaf stenciling has come out of retirement to build copies of antique furniture.

James DiLorenzo and his daughter, Conita Bihler of Franklin, are among more than 65 exhibitors who will display their work at "Art on the Green" in Franklin Village during the Labor Day Round-Up celebration.

DiLorenzo was taught the art of applying gold leaf to architectural interiors, furniture and picture frames by his father, Thomas D. DiLorenzo. Thomas learned the skill in Italy, passed down for generations from father to son.

Conita Bihler's grandfather, Thomas, immigrated to New York from Italy in 1915. He brought with him the skill of gold leaf application, much used in the great cathedrals of Europe on wall panels, ceilings and furniture.

The Romans elaborated on ancient Grecian and Egyptian style furniture and decorated it with carving, inlay, metal applique, painting, varnishing, engraving and veneering.

"GOLD leaf is gold pounded into very thin sheets between two pieces of leather," DiLorenzo explained. "It is used for gilding. First you apply the sizing or solution on the plaque and let it set until it gets tacky — almost dry. Then you lay on the gold and dust it off. This makes it go into the sizing and contours of the design. Last you give it a coat of varnish."

But there is no longer a demand for gold leaf

James DiLorenzo stands with a couple of the American primitive pieces, a tilt-top table and a dry sink, which he made as a part of his out-of-retirement second career.

stenciling, so it has become a "lost art," DiLorenzo said.

Not long ago, James DiLorenzo, the father of seven daughters and four sons, built a "hope chest" for one of his daughters as a wedding present. This custom originated from the Gothic period of furniture in Italy. The traditional marriage coffer or "cassone" for unmarried girls was a large elaborately decorated chest made of oak — often with top and side panels depicting Biblical scenes — used for a dowry.

Conita Bihler and her father, James DiLorenzo, are among the more than 60 exhibitors who will be part of Franklin Village's "Art on the Green."

Franklin hosts 'Art on the Green'

"Art on the Green" is sponsored by the Franklin Council for the Visual and Performing Arts as a feature attraction of the 11th Labor Day Round-Up. Activities are held annually by the Franklin Community Association.

Paintings, pottery and other art objects, quilts, quilts and their art forms and related items, quilts and handcrafted clothing, handcrafted furniture and wood house portraits, photography, dolls, puppets and baskets — all will be on display from 11 Michigan artists from 20 communities will show their work on the Franklin Village Green, Franklin Road between 15 and 14 Mile. Hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, Sept. 2.

The public is invited.

Neat new items enter market for artists

This is another lesson on art and drawing by special columnist David Messing. He has taught for ten years and operates an art store, Art Store and More, 16338 Middlebelt, Livonia, 522-6311, 265 N. Main Street, Plymouth, 455-1222. Messing encourages questions and comments from readers. You may write him at his store or c/o Observer Newspapers, 23352 Farmington Road, Farmington, MI 48024.

By David Messing
special writer

I am sure you won't see it in the crime watch section of the Observer, but recently there was some mysterious "goins on," after hours, at the Art Store & More. By the dim glow of the night lights a tall (soon to be thin) bearded man was seen stalking up and down the aisles. Then he even took an item off the shelf and stuffed it into his briefcase.

But don't call the cops — it was me. My mother-in-law, June and I are partners in the business, and for years Mom has been trying to get me to take some supplies for my studio at home. Dare I call it a "studio?"

I don't think I have had more than a dozen markers at a time. My colored pencils are under three inches long and most of them are sharpened at the wrong end. Now I always tell Mom, "I don't need anything," but when I'm home trying to draw or paint I do get a little disgusted.

Recently I couldn't find my pencil sharpener. So at the risk of life, limb and mental health, I opened the top junk drawer of Adams' dresser. Just to name a few items on the top: Heman's weapons, wrappers from last Halloween's collection, one half of a yo-yo, a rubber snake and a petrified gummy worm. Believe me I could go on and on, but no pencil sharpener. I laughed to myself, thinking I'll bet people imagine I have every art accessory known to man and here I am with an unsharpened Denver Bronco pencil, and no pencil sharpener.

I sure learned my lesson. That very same night I waited till everyone was gone and the lights were dim. I sneaked down the aisle where the pencil sharpeners are and took one. Yes folks, it was a 75 cent'r and I didn't even pay for it.

BOY IT'S neat owning your own store. I guess I'm never going to change. By the way, Mom caught me, and made me take an electric pencil sharpener instead. She always tells me what's the fun of having your own business, if you don't take stuff. What a partner.

Here's some neat new items just out on the market for the rest of you folks. For years Art Bin has been making life a little easier for us artists. It's no accident that at this time every year Art Bin comes out with a new item. Their latest innovation is long overdue (but still in time for Christmas) it's a pastel holder. This large flat box has lift out layers or trays each of which can safely hold 52 pastels. I am not sure, but I think it holds about 156 colors. Each tray is lined with foam rubber for greater protection, and the box is a whole lot cheaper to buy than it is to fill. But if you have ever tipped your art bin over and found your pastels broken and powder all over your other supplies, you might consider this pastel bin a necessity. It runs around $18.95. Maybe a nice gift for someone who has everything.

If you like painting or airbrushing T-shirts than you probably already know about Dekka fabric dye. Believe me there is nothing better... until now. No, it's not "new and improved" Dekka fabric dye, it's iron on fabric dye. With the cost of shirts and T-shirts as high as they are, you can't help but think, "Gee, I hope I don't mess up this guys T-shirt."

Well now you don't have to worry, just paint or airbrush on a sheet of paper, and when your art is perfect, plug in the iron and transfer. You can get up to three transfers from off the original design. Oh, by the way, if you are transferring words along with the art, remember to do the lettering backwards. Keven, my middle son, drew a perfect cartoon of Frank and Ernest.

But we all said, "Oh, no," in unison when we lifted the paper from the shirt and read: "TSENRE DNA KNARF" Transfer dye is also great for transferring the many designs and patterns in nature. A leaf or leaves painted different colors and transferred onto fabric is a delightful pattern.

Grumbacher is one of the oldest names in art supplies. But, over the years they have all but priced themselves out of the art market. Recently however, they have made some dramatic turn arounds and we all are the winners.

JUST OUT is a whole new line of easels. These beauties are solid mahogany, sturdy and built to last. Many times they are at or below the cost of their competitors which are, by the way, soft pine wood. Also the grumbacher "Eterna" line of bristol oil/acrylic brushes is the best for the money and believe me I have compared them all. So watch the Grumbacher line for something that has been lost over their years of excellent quality... economy.

Hey, come on folks, lets be honest. I'll bet every artist or dabbler reading this article has somewhere in their sundries a Walter Foster learn to draw/paint book. You know they hadn't changed much over the years except for the cost. Every once in a while someone will bring in one of the oldies but goodies, like "How to Draw Horses," and show me the price tag of 75 cents.

Well there's a new book for Walter, and I'm personally excited about it (well as excited as I can get over a book). It is called the "Artists Library Series" and they each cost $4.95. Believe me these 64 page, paperbound books are the best Foster has ever produced. They are full of "How to" information, written well, and are loaded with something missing in many of Walter's past publications... which is good art.

Right now there are only seven books in print but they sell so fast you almost have to "take a number to get one." Here are the titles: "Watercolor," "Painting in Oils," "Pencil Drawings, Drawing with Colored Pencils," "The World of Color, Acrylics" and one of my favorites "Pen and Ink."

Here's a quick one before I go. Eberhard-Faber, the makers of design art markers have also come out with a book. Except there's nothin' in it. The book is a carrying case that holds 48 markers. The cost of this case is about $32... and... oh yeah, Mom... Mom... made me take one.

DIA exhibits Indian art

"Ancient Art of the American Woodland Indians" opens at the Detroit Institute of Arts Thursday, Sept. 5 and continues through Sunday, Nov. 10.

Some 150 works — stone sculpture, ceramics, copper tools, weapons, ornaments and ceremonial objects — define the cultural history (3000 B.C. to A.D. 1500) of the Woodland inhabitants, ancestors of present-day Native Americans.

THE ARTIFACTS, significant as cultural and archaeological objects, as well as works of art, were discovered largely through archaeological exploration over the past 180 years.

Early discoveries were made by explorers in the 1800s and found their way into museums and private collections. Additional finds have been made as recently as the past five years.

The Woodland region extends from the Atlantic coast to the western prairies and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. The exhibition explores the Late Archaic, Woodland and Mississippian periods of the Woodland area.

During the Late Archaic period (3000-1000 B.C.) societies organized into bands or extended family groups roamed in search of seasonally available food and moved toward settlements in major river valleys.

The exhibition begins with the artistic products of this period: copper tools and weapons, imaginative pendants and ornaments, and "bannerstones" which served as weights on the shaft of a spear-thrower. These colorful stone objects, with polished surfaces and precise contours, have a curiously contemporary appeal.

DURING THE second Woodland period dating from 1000 B.C. to A.D. 900, the Indian cultures extended their settlements in river territories and came to rely more on local resources for food and other necessities. Trade with other communities expanded across the continent. Materials acquired in trade, such as copper, shell and mica, were incorporated into ceremonial objects portraying serpents, birds, bears and other animals considered spiritually potent.

In the third period, the Mississippian, 900-1500 A.D., the culture became highly organized and agricultural. Large towns grew in choice river valley locations.

One city, Cahokia, existed in the 12th century on a site outside present-day St. Louis, Mo. In size and population, Cahokia was larger than contemporary Paris or London. The iconography of the culture's religious system, with its many symbols, dominated the art.

The exhibition was organized by the Founders Society Detroit Institute of Arts in association with the National Gallery of Art. David W. Penney, the DIA's associate curator of the department of African, Oceanic and New World Cultures, is the organizing curator. DIA acting director Michael Kan is the project coordinator.

"Ancient Art of the American Woodland Indians" is open without charge during regular museum hours, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday.

"More Than Bows and Arrows," a related half-hour film, will be shown throughout the exhibition in the South Court screening room.

On Friday, Oct. 18, Native American scholars, artists and speakers will attend sessions at the DIA, part of the three-day (Oct. 17-19) conference of the Native American Art Studies Association. The event is open to the public. Call Linda Salavaria 833-1432 for information.

Home tour

The 22nd Annual Marshall Historic Home Tour will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 7, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 8. There will be eight private residences built between 1835 and 1870 open for visitors along with three restored downtown commercial buildings, 1834-1859, the Honolulu House and the GAR Hall museums. The Wilcox home above is on the tour for the first time. An Italian villa, it was built in 1870.

Goodbye to gold leaf

DiLorenzo's daughters, who are antique collectors, were delighted with their father's work. They asked him to build copies of early American antiques. He has made a fireplace mantle, copied hutch, corner cupboards, dry sinks, tilt-top tables, benches, a pie-safe with a tin punched design front and picture frames. The result is a fledgling new business that produces on order sturdy copies of handmade antique furniture at half the price of the original.

As a young man, James DiLorenzo first worked with his father in Detroit on the former Bird Department Store building. Original murals and gold leaf art work in the General Motors Building was done by DiLorenzos. Thomas DiLorenzo's name appears on an archway in the interior of the Fisher Building as the decorator.

The DiLorenzos were contracted to decorate the lobby, walls and ceiling of the Fisher Theater. Thomas died just two weeks before the work was to start. His son, James, took over the job which took 17 months to complete.

A RECORD of buildings with DiLorenzo gold leaf artistry reads like a list of outstanding Detroit area church architecture. James DiLorenzo's gold leaf interior design work can be seen in the "Tower of the Apostles" inside Kirk of the Hills.

Other churches with the DiLorenzo touch of gold are Old Christ Church on East Jefferson, Old Mariner Church where they did the work after it was moved to its present location and St. Martha's Church on Joy and Greenfield.

Right now is the time to take a few steps to make your gardening experience more enjoyable for 1986.

If you are a normal gardener, when you look around your garden, you will discover pluses and minuses which you wish to remember for the next season. May I suggest you make a list of plants and perhaps a tree or two which you would add to your landscape plan.

For the last two years I have added interesting perennials to my garden. I know that they will benefit by division so I must be aware of the light factor when planning to divide a perennial and replant parts of it.

FOR INSTANCE, we know that lilies can be divided as well as mums. Also, if you have ever had mint in your garden, you know you have to thin it to make space and keep it under control.

Some of your shrubs and trees which have become a part of your garden could benefit from pruning and this would allow more sunlight in the flower beds for better performance. At this time it is important to be aware of your sun and shade patterns in your garden.

No doubt you have seen many plants you wish you had in your garden. As an illustradown to earth

Alice Burlingame

tion, as I go for a walk, I pass a hedge of lavender.

My 1986 pattern must incorporate a planting of lavender.

Another item I must add to the garden is another clematis vine. My new vine of clematis this year was French blue, so I am intent on getting another choice one to give this good vine competition.

You may be sure some judicious pruning will be in order to bring in more light for the annuals. At least one rose of Sharon should be in everybody's garden because of this shrub's delightful performance in August.

THIS IS a good time to go "wheeling" around town and gather up some new ideas to enhance your landscape program. Remember this is bulb season and a good time to try something new.

I have noticed that some of the best effects in the garden have come from placing flowers in groups, like a circle or a quarter moon rather than stringing them along the edge of a bed which is "old hat."

This year the annuals planted in circles were show stoppers.

Time to get out your pruners and saw. Look over the profile of your shrubs and trees. Remember that flowering shrubs are already forming their buds for their spring performance. Therefore, take it easy with pruning now with these.

THIS IS the time to improve lawn quality, so stop in the garden store and get the right grass seed for your lawn and aim for a beautiful one in 1986.
