Annual batch of potholes rears ugly head

By Kevin Brown staff writer

With spring approaching, thoughts turn to gentle, sunny days. Or maybe trips to the beach or ballpark, vacations or visits to an amusement park.

But some of us have already experienced our first roller-coaster ride of the season. And this ride isn't amusing. It's the terrible tour, the cursed cruise - driving through the potholes. It's the dark side of spring; a time when a once simple drive home from work more closely simulates Gen. Patton's breakthrough at the Marne. And the repeated cycle of thawing and freezing, coupled with road construction methods yet unperfected by mortal man, insures a "bumper" crop this spring, as in seasons past.

EXPERTS DISAGREE on this winter's relative impact on the pothole situation

"I think this year might be a little bit better than last year because we're down on our salt use this year," says William Oakley, director of the Wayne County Department of Roads. Yet Ken Vogras, Plymouth public works director, disagrees. "I think this year is worse than the last two or three years because of the freezes and thaws - an on and off situation."

Whatever the overall verdict, certain cratered road sections are worthy of the expletives a startled motorist might mutter. "Our roads have all got enough age on them that moisture gets in pretty easy," says Oakley, adding that the Plymouth-Canton area is no more plagued by potholes than other sections of the county.

"Probably the worst area in the city is Main Street between Central School and Penniman Avenue, right along that curb line," says Vogras, describing a half-mile section. He warns pedestrians that they're "subject to get a shower" if a car hits water-filled potholes in that area as they pass. Improper road drainage adds to the problem, he adds. So far, Vogras says the city hasn't received any complaints from drivers on this year's pothole crop.

someone breaks a wheel," he said, adding that potholes have been to blame for some serious accidents in years past.

"I've heard of people not only break-ing their wheel but losing control of their vehicle and jumping a curb, injuring a pedestrian," he said.

BUT MAINLY, potholes are a nuisance - to motorists who plow through them and to road crews who endlessly fix them.

"The ideal thing would be to resurface all the roads," says Oakley. "But with money what it is, we just keep patching."

The material most often used by repair crews is cold patch, an oil-based asphalt. "It stays in the hole better than most," Oakley explains.

"Sometimes a citizen will see us putting it in and not packing it down, and they think we're not doing a good job," says Oakley, who explains that is just the way it's done.

"Over the years it's been perfected in "We haven't had any major holes. the testing labs in the county, it works We've had a lot of holes but not where best. But every time you fix them, you know you're going to come back and do it again."

Each year, Plymouth puts 100 tons of cold patch - $4,500 worth - into the city's potholes. Yearly pay for manhours spent filling potholes comes to nearly the same amount, said Vogras. As for cost to the county, Oakley comments, "I'd be scared to guess how much.

Often, pothole patches don't last past the first couple of times motorists pass over them, Vogras said. A somewhat better but more costly patching method involves "hot mix," in which asphalt is heated then packed and rolled down into a pothole. "It's a little bit gooier, it's got more asphalt to it, a little more binding effect," Vogras said. "But a little bit later that will go out, too."

Vogras notes that some of the worst pothole areas in past years, Blunk Street and Fairground Avenue, were paved last year. He said the city has a major paving program planned this year, with Main east of Penniman one of the areas scheduled for paving.

That should ease the problem - for a while.

Township police say yes to union

By Doug Funke staff writer

The 17 non-command officers in Plymouth Township's police department have voted to be represented by a union and the collective contract bargaining process.

Currently, individual officers sign personal service contracts.

Officers voted nearly unanimously Tuesday to align themselves with the Police Officers Association of Michigan (POAM). The township police department was created last July.

While the affiliation isn't exi year contracts, which call for a base salary ranging from $16,264 to $19,516. Fringe benefits include fully paid medical, vision and life insurance, long-term disability, pension, sick leave and two weeks annual vacation with one to five years service.

FULL - TIME officers also receive overtime/compensatory time, uniform and equipment allowance, and training reimbursement.

Part-time officers are paid at a rate of $6.50 to $7.80 per hour. They don't receive medical insurance, sick leave or vacation pay.

The department has 12 full-time and five part-time officers.

"I don't expect any change in performance. They're professionals," Berry said of his officers.

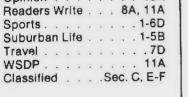

Unionization often leads to less flexibility in the work place, according to some managers. It remains to be seen how negotiations will affect the township's department.

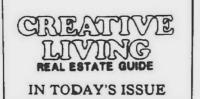

Local officers' belief that individual contracts would be difficult to enforce if grievances were to arise prompted the call for collective representation, said William Birdseye, secretary of the union.

"As a general proposition, township officers feel they are in a growing department, which has a good future," Birdseve said. "In order to provide for themselves security, they will be reaching for fringe benefits and wages commensurate with other departments in the area.

"I think any police officer who feels secure about what he does is far better than one who is concerned about job security.'

You can go home again, Melin learns on the job

By Doug Funke staff writer

Most of us get to taste life's experiences only once. Andrew Melin at the tender age of 25 has gone back for seconds.

As a student at Plymouth Salem High School in the mid-1970s, he zealously worked at WSDP-FM radio and, for a time, participated in basketball, football and baseball at the junior varsity level.

Now, Melin works full time as station manager at WSDP and moonlights, so to speak, as JV boys basketball coach and girls varsity assistant at his alma mater.

"The one thing I realize is I have been working with young people and I feel I have to do that the rest of my life," said the soft-spoken Melin.

That might sound corny coming from some people but not from the young man known affectionately by the community as Andy.

As station manager, Melin supervises a student staff of 30 and coordinates all fund-raising and promotional activities. A little more than half the staff comes from radio classes taught by John Seidelman, the remainder sparked by a special interest in broadcasting.

"I'M NOT a certified teacher but as part of my duties I am training young months before learning that the sta-people in how to run a broadcast station," he said. "I'm a teacher in that respect.'

He proudly points out that several of his students have gone on to paying jobs at commercial stations directly from WSDP.

Melin, in fact, credits his high school experiences at WSDP for launching his career. He had a paying job at WKAR in Lansing before he started as a student at Michigan State University from which he graduated with a degree in telecommunications.

In high school, Melin initially tried to combine athletics with the radio station as extracurricular activities. He decided it was too much.

"I just wasn't good enough to play basketball," Melin said. "Maybe I could have made the team but I had radio then. In a way I regret not playing varsity athletics but on the other hand it sure helped me in radio."

After graduating from MSU, Melin did marketing and promotional work for the Detroit Pistons for a few tion manager job had opened at WSDP.

"When this opportunity arose, I jumped at it."

MELIN ALSO jumped at the opportunity to get into coaching.

The role of athletics here at the high school is it's another opportunity for a student to be involved in something and to help them become a better person. "We talk about wanting to provide a well-rounded education. Athletics and radio help broaden a student's base of knowledge. I'm teaching rules of life, responsibility. Athleticially, I'm teaching them how to take care of themselves - competitiveness."

Melin conceded to having some apprehension about returning to his old stomping grounds.

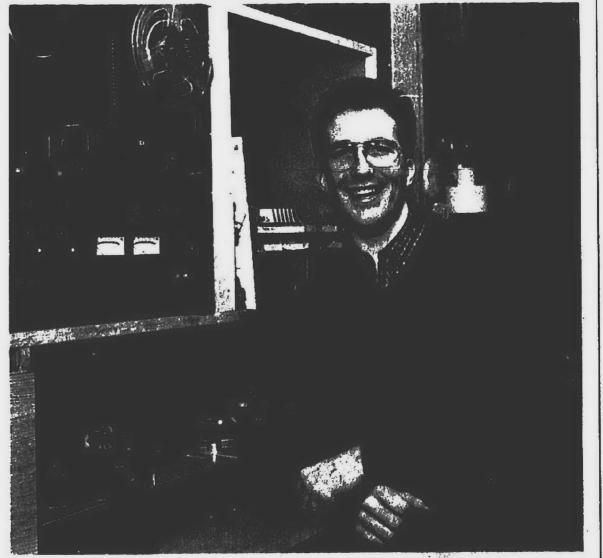

"Everybody knew me. Would they treat me as a student or treat me as an adult? Fortunately, they treated me as an adult and gave me the freedom to do my job here. They left me alone and I appreciated that.

"The hardest part was the first day walking into school. It's like, 'What am I doing here?' It wasn't a comfortable feeling but as soon as I started working, the feeling went away." MELIN CARRIES that same philosophy into dealings with his students

Tips on appealing property taxes

Property owners can challenge their latest property assessments by meeting with their local board of review.

Board members meet annually with individual property owners who have tried to work out their concerns with the assessor's staff, but couldn't. A home's assessed valuation is supposed to be half the market value.

Under Michigan law, 50 percent of the true cash value of property is the taxable value. True cash value is the usual selling price of property.

Assessments are based on sales that actually occur in the marketplace, and other factors, including age, lot and house size, quality and type of construction, number of rooms and the neighborhood.

When challenging an assessment, make an effort to document your case with examples of comparable housing sold at lower prices than your appraisal or of sales patterns in your neighborhood.

Property owners unhappy with their board of review's action can appeal to the state Tax Tribunal, P.O. Box 30230, Lansing 48909. The telephone number is 1-517-373-8850. There is no fee.

Emergency telephone system clears hurdle

By Diane Gale staff writer

A woman is alone at home and begins to feel pains in her chest. She quickly dials the 911 emergency number for help but falls unconscious on the floor before she can give her address.

An Enhanced 911 emergency program would help in this and similar types of traumatic situations. A law approved by the state Legislature this week will help make the system financially viable. The proposed system would route the call directly to the police station in the community the call is being made and list the telephone number and address of the caller on a computer screen. "Enhanced 911 is probably one of the most valuable tools for handling emergencies and non-emergency calls for service that I've seen," said Canton Police Chief John Santomauro, who has been designated Canton's representative to the Conference of Western Wayne. CWW has been coordinating a study of the feasibility of the E911 system for its 17 communities, which include Plymouth, Canton and Plymouth Township. Senate Bill 303 — implementing a payment plan affecting E911 — was returned from the House and the Senate concurred with amendments this week, said state Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, whose 6th District includes Canton and Plymouth. The bill now awaits Gov. Blanchard's signature.

THE BILL would allow local governments to form areawide 911 emergency service systems.

The measure calls for a uniform charge for everyone in the community because "they are all potential users" of the program. It could cost 10 to 25 cents - or up to 2 percent of the highest residential base rate in that area - for resident's monthly billing rate. Only communities opting for the change would be affected by the SB 303.

"Currently, because telephone exchanges and lines do not correspond to political boundaries the first community in an area to get the 911 system effectively restricts surrounding communities' use of 911 unless there is an agreement among the communities involved," Geake said.

Presently 911 calls are received outside the township and the Canton police and fire stations are notified. This creates a time delay.

"Anytime a person can't communicate an emergency it's a critical situation, and without that feature we wouldn't be able to handle that emergency," said Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry. "Suppose there is a deaf mute who has an emergency. They can dial the 911 number, and we would get their address immediately."

EVEN THOUGH the outlook for SB 303 looks good, E911 probably won't be implemented immediately. "My understanding is that if the system is approved by the individual communities it will still be two to three years before it goes into effect," Santomauro said. Eliminating prank calls is another advantage of E911, Santomauro said, because police officers would be able to immediately identify where the call is coming from. "Secondly, when people are calling for emergency service they panic and sometimes fail to give us proper information so we can respond," Santomauro said. "If the costs are in line, and they certainly appear to be, I am in support and would recommend it to the board for approval." Because E911 has not yet been implemented San-tomauro encourages Canton residents to directly call Canton's police emergency number at 397-3350 and the emergency fire number at 981-1111. The

Melin relishes return to CEP

"I had a meeting with my student directors, told them about myself and my ideas and told them I needed their help to run the station. I laid down some guidelines and let them know they were going to run it. They liked that.

"Respect is something that is earned," Melin said. "I treat all students I work with like adults. I make sure they understand what my position is and what theirs is. Whether they like me or not isn't my concern.'

Melin acknowledges that he's well paid and en-joys the freedom of having "one of the best high school station manager jobs in the country." However, he says that someday he expects to pursue other career opportunities.

"My future, I hope, is athletic oriented," Melin said. "I am looking to return to school and get a master's in athletic administration or education administration. Maybe get some coaching experience at the college level and see what happens.

Boller warned that county purse strings will be drawn even tighter next year, placing nonessential services in further jeopardy. He re-ferred to the county's anticipated loss next year of $19 million in federally shared revenue.

In that financial climate, he said commissioners from suburban areas where the bulk of the county's park services are found will be hard pressed to win continued support from the general fund because "we're outnumbe BOLLER RECOMMENDED the task force

Boller said it would operate similar to other county task forces on linues such as infant mortality, crime and jall space. The concept for a parks task force was first recommeded by county parks and recretion director Eric Reickel during last year's budg-et hearings. Reickel supports a separate parks millage. He is a vocal advocate of improving county parks. county parks. All this comes at a time when County Commission Chairman John Hertel, D-Harper Woods, proposes splitting up the county park system and turning over responsibility of two facilities to the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority.

Under the plan now under consideration, the two parks would be Elizabeth Park at Trenton, complete with a boat ramp on the Detroit River, and Warren Valley Park in Dearborn Heights, which offers two 18-hole golf courses and banquet facilities.

BOLLER SAYS he opposes the Hertel plan, particularly Elizabeth Park, located in his district. He cites a 1979 corporation counsel opinion that states that deed restrictions would prevent ownership of Elizabeth Park by any entity other than Wayne County or the city of Detroit.

"The decision says the county must fund and maintain it, or it reverts back to the owners or their heirs," he said. Elizabeth Park, which Wayne County came to own in 1909, is today valued at $15 million.

Wayne-Westland preparing budget cuts

By Sue McDonald staff writer

BA(P,C)

The Wayne-Westland school board, faced with a recommendation to cut $2.5 million, will start its review of the next budget Friday, March 15.

The process won't be an easy one for the board, which Monday night received an overview of the cuts in programs and personnel that must be made to balance the budget.

The board took no action on the recommendations at the study session, and had only a few questions for the administration.

Superintendent Dennis O'Neill has proposed a $68.1 million budget for the new fiscal year, which starts July 1, an increase of less than $1 million over the current budget of $67.15 million.

But to balance the budget, he has recommended that 90 full-time equated (FTE) positions be eliminated, including 19.3 teaching positions, to reflect a decline in pupil enrollment.

"As we annually go through this cutting process, our options become more district is proposing that the arts proand more limited," O'Neill said. "Although the reductions recommended will have an effect on our ability to deliver services, we believe that these cuts represent dollar savings which will least affect students. "As difficult as those decisions may seem today, postponing the inevitable has a snowballing effect, if it is not addressed. It is therefore imperative that our ultimate goal must be a balanced bottom line."

Among the recommendations presented to the board were:

· Elimination of five directors' positions in employee services, instruction and planning, custodial services, adult/community education (ACE) and intern/special education, one executive secretary and three non-affiliated location managers in ACE and leaving vacant due to retirement the supervisory positions in accounting and personnel records. • Elimination of 24 FTE teachers due to a 67 percent reduction in the elementary expressive arts program. The gram be offered on a rotating 13-week basis at the elementary schools as opposed to current full school year programs.

. ELIMINATION of 3.4 FTE teachers due to a 50 percent reduction in elementary instrumental music. That instruction also would be on a rotating basis and district officials are working at ways to keep fifth-graders in the program.

e Elimination of three FTE teachers due to the high school release time. O'Neill said there would be a tighter scheduling of the student/teacher ratio to take into account those students who are not in high school for a full six-hour

• Reduction of teaching supply ac-counts from $22 to $19 per student in elementary schools and $32 to $29 per day. student in the high school. Although listed as a reduction, the $19 and $29 figures, according to Woody London as-sistant superintendent for business services, reflect an increase over the current budget figures. The amounts would be guaranteed as opposed to previous years when the supply accounts were budgeted for the maximum, but schools actually received only 70 percent of that amount.

· Reduction of high school supply accounts due to the equivalent of 350 FTE students attending the William D.

Ford Vocational/Technical Center. O'Neill said about 700 students spend' half their school day in classes at the center.

· Reduce money set aside to match grants for the vo/tech center from . $90,000 to $50.000.

City to finance DPW expansion

By Kevin Brown staff writer

New building construction at Plymouth's Department of Public Works yard will begin June 1, following city commission approval Monday of a $250,000 bond issue to pay for the continuing improvement project.

Slated for completion by Sept. 1 is a 2,850-square-foot administration building, an adjoining building for workers, a concrete parking lot and eight-foot chain-link fencing, according to the plan. With cost estimated at $237,000, City Manager

Henry Graper explained $250,000 was being sought to make sure the project could continue despite possible cost overruns.

Graper noted that Phase II cost originally was estimated at $200,000. In a report to commissioners, he wrote that the increase allowed for further construction, legal and financial costs and contingency funds.

Improvements at the DPW yard are necessary, Graper said, adding the present DPW building is square-foot garage addition, curbs, pavement and storm drains. Tentative cost of this phase is $560,000.

The final step in DPW-yard improvements involves the estimated $30,000 demolition of the existing building and the sale of 21/2 acres at the Arthur Street site, Graper said. He added the city is seeking to sell the parcel for about $39,000 per

Robert Jones was the lone commissioner voting against the resolution approving the bond sale. Jones questioned the lease provision giving the Plymouth Municipal Building Authority "the unilateral right to issue bonds."

"I do not think this gives the city commission; proper contro,." he said.

Graper responded that the lease followed standard models. He said the city could in extreme cases remove hostile board members from a building. authority.

Also Monday, the commission approved an earlier publicized plan for spending 1986 Community-Development Block Grant funds. Rogers said he's convinced he wouldn't be here to ponder several ironies relating to the experience if not for the quick work of several employees of the parts and service division who just happened to be in the right place at the right time. And knew what to do.

"The good Lord was over me, and I do believe he gave me a second shot," Rogers said while recuperating at home from what he's been told was an asthma attack. "I appreciate there were people around or I could have just passed out in the snow in the parking lot.

Rogers collapsed at about 11:30 a.m. while walking to his car. Ironically, he was going for a chest X-ray because he hadn't been feeling well.

Two other ironies about Rogers' episode are especially striking.

The nurse who administered CPR had just been reassigned to the parts and service division last fall. Up to Jones' return, the facility had been without on-premises medical personnel due to budget cuts.

Also, Rogers and his wife had been scheduled to take a CPR course themselves less than a week after he was stricken.

Panel predicts toxic waste dispos

By Teri Banas staff writer

The lack of hazardous waste sites in Michigan is nearing "crisis propor-tions" while public opposition has mounted — a scenerio that could dissuade industries from locating here in the near future.

That was the conclusion reached by members of a Southeast Michigan Council of Government's study group at a press conference yesterday. "We believe the crisis level could be reached shortly. There are tens of thousands of tons generated each year including cleanup from contaminated sites," said the group's chairman, Dick Burstein of Detroit.

At the forefront of concern is that the only remaining operating Michigan landfill, the Wayne Disposal site near Belleville Road and Interstate-94, has only a 6- to 10-year life expectancy before it becomes filled.

And officials worry that unless Michigan acts, shipments currently made to disposal sites in neighboring states will no longer be an alternative when those states begin shutting their doors to Michigan waste.

THE STUDY, which took into account interviews with 50 "experts" from government, regulatory agencies, business, industry and enviromental groups, was coordinated by the Municipal Affairs Corp. of SEMCOG.

SEMCOG executive director John Amberger noted that Michigan generates about 2.5-million tons of hazardous waste each year. With only one commercially available landfill allowed to hold it, and no incinerators, the crisis "is on the horizon," he said.

Amberger said the purpose behind the study and yesterday's press briefing was to initiate public discussion "to help remove the doubt and suspicion" of the public.

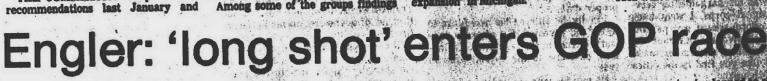

He said the group has made recom-mendations that would work toward easing public acceptance of carefully planned sites and said they already have been hicorporated in recent rec-ommendations by the state Natural Re-sources Commission. THE COMMISSION adopted those recommendations last January and

One of the last places you would go 1) find a husky man, who had served several years in the European theater of World War II, is in a kitchen making fudge.

But that's where you would find Leonard Grunwald.

"When I was discharged after servingrin the signal corps, I went back home to Gaylord where my parents owned and operated a restaurant. On the side, my mother and father made fudge, much like you find in the cities of northern Michigan.

"I had worked for Western Electric before serving in the Army and wanted something that I would enjoy and still make a good living.

"I hadn't been back home very long until I realized I had found what I wanted - to make fudge and use that as a livelihood. So, here I am in Plymouth and nothing could be better.'

AS HE SPOKE, Grunwald had an instrument that looked like a shovel in his hands

The fudge he was making was in a big roll on the table. As he spoke he walked up and down, working the fudge until he thought it was mixed to the proper style.

Finally, he allowed the new fudge to settle and revealed that after the war and his term in the restaurant in Gaylord, he came to the Detroit area in 1955

He met his wife in Gaylord and they figured life would be better in a larger city. So they headed for the Detroit area and he found a job in Dearborn. It didn't work out as expected and he kept his eyes open for the kind of place he would like.

When they saw the Plymouth communty on the rise, they decided to come here. And it has proven to be just what he wanted.

THE GRUNWALDS have been married 39 years and the experience he has found in Plymouth has been to their llk-

He now makes 16 different tastes of fudge at the Fudge House on Ann Arbor Trail between Harvey and Forrest, and it is one of the busiest places in the entire area.

"I have been making fudge for more than 20 years," he said as he took up the spreaders again and started anew on the fudge.

He recalled that when he worked with the Bell Telephone Co. in Gaylord that regular-type work was not to his liking. But each day he gave more thought to making fudge and this desire finally brought him to Plymouth.

While he was working with the fudge on the big board, Grunwald said he didn't want to keep working for years and now he has found just what he wanted.

While he doesn't have much room in his present location, it is just big enough to keep him busy and happy, as he makes 175 to 300 pounds a day.

"Business here is just what we needed. We are busy all day and there is a steady stream of customers. We couldn't have asked for anything better than that.

"I did my hard work in the Army, and now I have found just what I wanted here in Plymouth making fudge. It was a good break for me when I came home from the Army and worked in our little restaurant in Gaylord. That's where I learned to make fudge and it is the best thing that ever happened to

Library hours disheartening

To the editor:

It really disheartens me to find that a prominent and prosperous city like Plymouth has to close its doors to public library on Friday and Sunday.

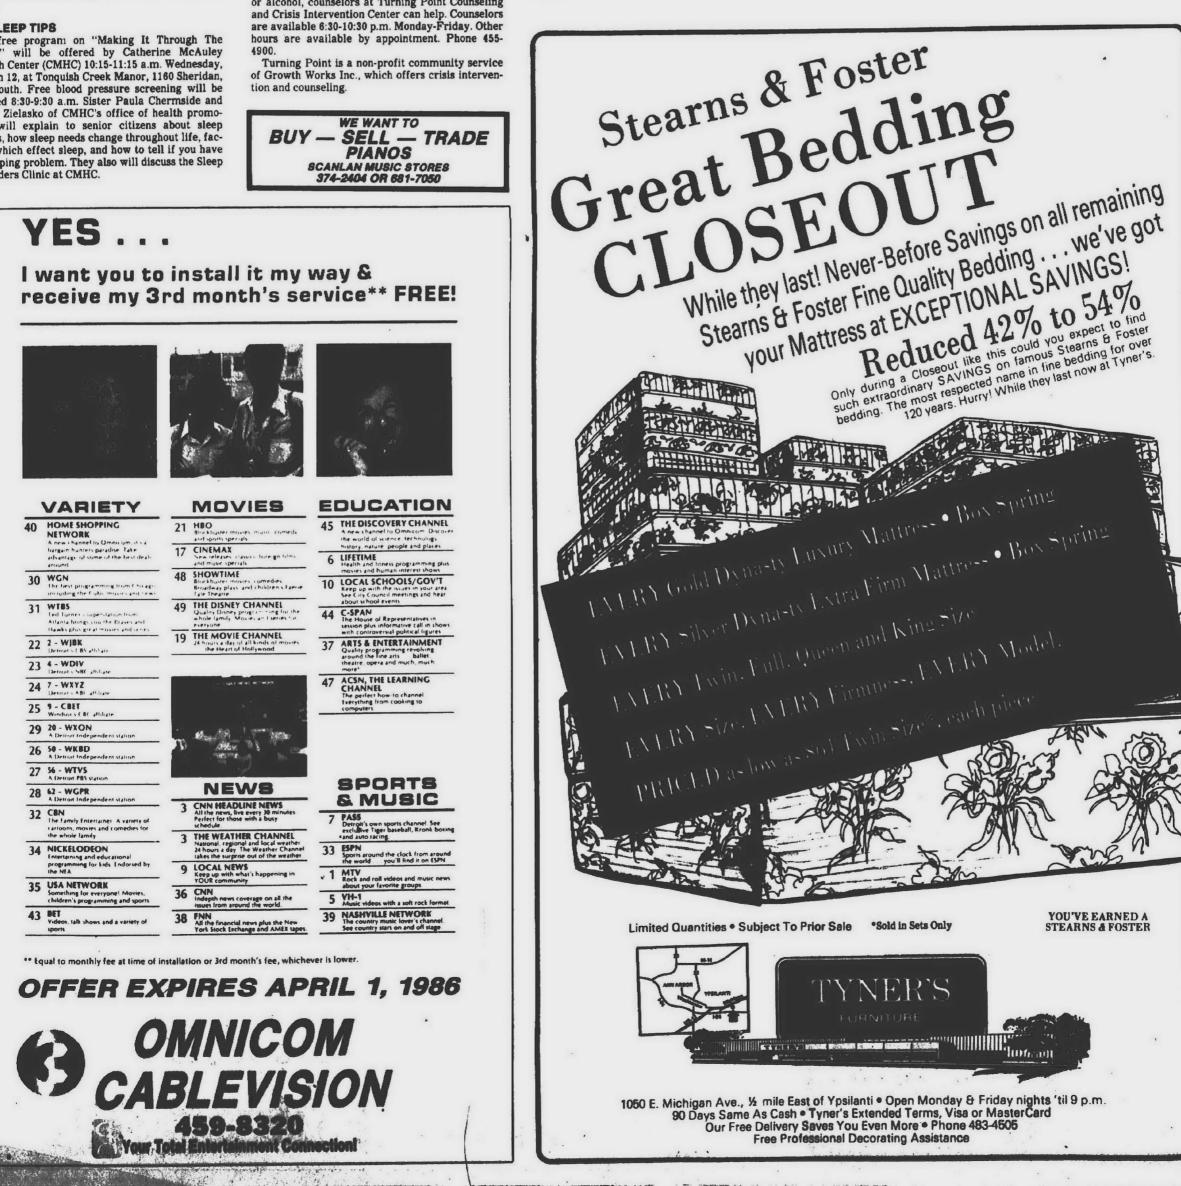

There have been many a time that I tried to use the library only to find the doors locked. Consequently I turned to Northville only to fnd that its library is closed on these days also.

How are adults and children (who, incidentally, are potential future leaders in this community) supposed to learn and enrich their lives if the doors are closed to these important learning facilities? Is this an indication that libraries may become a thing of the past? I certainly hope not for our sake as well as the sake of our children.

Plymouth residents wake up and observe what is happening around you. Where are your tax dollars going to? The next time you decide to use the library you may find out that it no longer exists.

Youth program added in Plymouth the Plymouth-Canton community is being added to the list of services offered by Growth Works

Growth Works is a youth service agency which offers such programs as counseling, crisis intervention, job search and skill training, and alternative education. The latest addition to its service agenda is a diversion program known as Youth Development. The program is an intervention and alternative for the first-time juvenile offender. The funding was made available through the efforts of the Wayne County Executive's Office and the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

UNDER THE new program, Growth Works will work with the police departments of Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Canton Township to offer the firsttime youthful offender an alternative to involvement in the juvenile justice court system.

Juveniles participating in Youth Development will be referred by local police departments according to criteria such as prior history, seriousness of the offense, and parental attitude. If agreement is reached that the juvenile will enter Youth Development, then the police will delay turning the offender over to juvenile court to allow the youth and parents to complote the program. Upon completion of the Youth Development program, the charges will be dropped.

Under the program, the youthful offender is required to meet weekly with a volunteer mentor to review weekly goals. The juvenile also will be required to attend weekly group sessions as will the parents.

The effort is a constructive alternative to the more formal, and sometimes less effective, juvenile court system. The program will be closely monitored by Growth Works staff, will require important commitments from the young person and the parents, and offers more assurances to losult THE APPROACH is typical of the creative programs offered by Growth Works, a valuable community resource that over the years has come up with creative programs to deal with the problems faced by young people growing up.

Founded when drugs were a major concern, the agency has increased its involvement in social programs to include job training efforts through Wayne County Private Industry Council (PIC) and other sponsors, and an educational program conducted jointly with Plymouth-Canton Community Schools for students who cannot cope with the regular high school program.

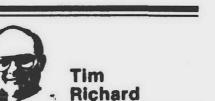

Turning Point, the counseling arm of Growth Works, continues as a cornerstone of the agency. The crisis line continues to serve its purpose. And now Youth Development is introduced to meet the needs of another segment of our community's vouth

To get the program started, Growth Works has trained a corps of 10 community volunteers to serve as mentors in the program. The training is required for those wanting to be mentors, a key role in the program.

Adults wishing to be mentors can volunteer by calling Sue Davis at 455-4902. Previous experience is not required, but the volunteer must be willing to complete a 16-hour training course. The training covers policy and procedure, communication skills, decision-making and consequences, values clarification, chemical dependency and problem solving. The sessions are held for about three hours per week for six weeks.

The Observer congratulates Wayne County, Plymouth and Canton police departments, and Growth Works for developing an effective means of dealing with first-time juvenile offenders. The pay-off in helping troubled young people straighten out their lives will be well worth it.

Balanced-budget games

the other side does. That's just one set of arguments.

DEFINING "REVENUE" becomes even trickier when you shift to the federal budget. There are just too many ways to manipulate the numbers.

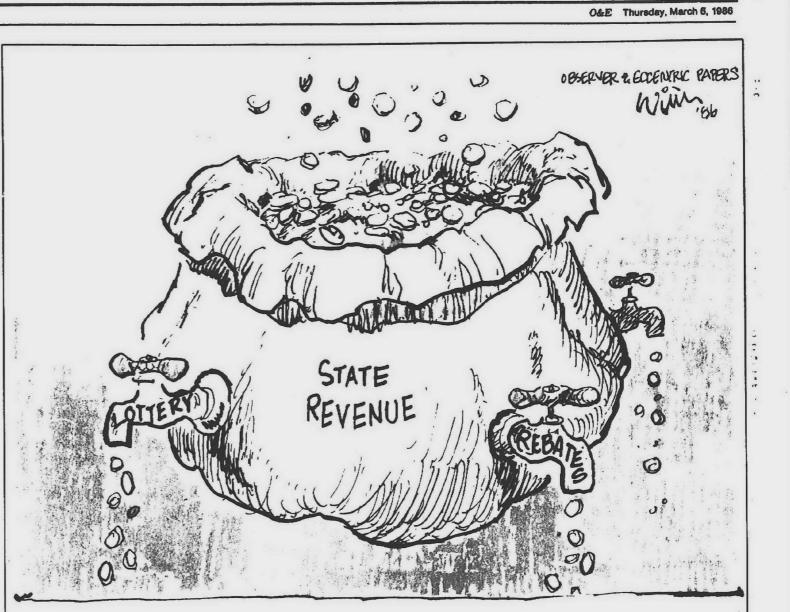

Suppose the Congress decides to beat the balanced budget amendment by splitting expenditures into operating and guarantees are examples. Do you count that as spending even though a check never is written?

Suppose the amendment allows an unbalanced budget in time of war. What's a war? Was the Korean conflict, where there was never a declaration, war? How about our activities in Vietnam, again without a declaration? Or Grenada?

In the 1930s, '40s and '50s, Social Security was a separate trust fund and not part of the operating budget. What's to stop Congress from going back to that kind of "off-budget" spending plan?

THE LATE entry of state Rep. Colleen House Engler, R-Mount Pleasant, into the race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination may be just what is needed to stir up interest in what hitherto has been largely a ho-hum affair.

Engler, who is in her third term as a state representative, said she believes there is a need for an "exciting" candidate, someone who can generate a lot of enthusiasm.

; It remains to be seen whether she is the person who can generate excitement, but her observation is correct that there is a paucity of enthusiasm in the GOP ranks.

The two-year-old-plus quest of Wayne County Executive William Lucas to become the next Republican governor and the country's first elected black governor seems to have peaked about the time that he was turning from a Democrat to a Republican. Lucas doesn't seem to be losing any ground, but he isn't gaining any ground either.

Qakland County Executive Dan Murphy is as dull as dirt, no matter what his qualifications or ability as an administrator. his campaign.

BRIGHTON BUSINESSMAN Dick Chrysler has been the only one of the cantes whose campaign looks like it is king up momentum.

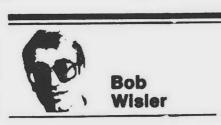

man who made a large fortune in car versions, Chrysler has spent a small une on advertising depicting him as a d-nosed businessman, a captain of the p industry and a family man capable of reviding the same kind of leadership for the state that he has provided for his fam-ity and the car industry. The nearly $500,000 worth of TV adver-lising certainly isn't enough to get him

OP stalwarts thinking that he is a legiti-be contender. Indeed, it may be that in race, with his money — if his out - Chrysler could beat ng out Lucas may be > however. How ent for his norship? Very difficult.

The issues that cause the kind of public discontent that is necessary to unseat an incumbent just aren't there.

ALL OF the GOP candidates have been hitting on the now three-year-old tax hike engineered by Gov. Blanchard shortly after he took office. But that really isn't causing the kind of stir needed to get a campaign going.

Enter Colleen Engler. If anything could build some interest it is a woman candidate who can appeal to women without turning off the men. In addition to there being more self-professed Republican voters than self-identified Democrat voters, there are more women voters than men voters.

I always thought the Republicans should have talked Peace Corps Director Loret Ruppe into running for governor to make the GOP race more interesting and to bring out a resurgence of womanly interest in the Grand Old Party.

Richard Headlee, the Republican candidate for governor four years ago, just about lost the race because women perceived his treatment of them as patronizing or chauvinistic.

A GOP candidate who could retain the votes Headlee had and pick up the women's votes that he lost could win the governorship in November. That assumes that all other factors remain the same, which they don't.

Nevertheless, the time of a woman candidate for governor is at hand and certainly we are not far away from the time when this state will elect a woman governor. Engler senses this and is ready to capitalize on the situation.

Who'd have thought a few years ago that it would be the Republicans who would end up having a black and a woman making a run for the governor's job? 4 . PONDER THESE details:

fray.

 The state places a 7 percent tax on oil and gas found in Michigan and uses the money to acquire parkland. One side doesn't want to count that as revenue; capital costs. Corporations do it all the time.

For example, our clever congressmen could say air bases, big dams and interstate highways are capital investments and can be financed with borrowed money. Such financing is perfectly logical and could easily defeat the purpose of a balanced budget constitutional provision.

Another trick is to have fun with "contingent" expenditures. You've never heard of those? Well, a loan guarantee, like the feds gave Chrysler, or farm loan the point.

It's going to be impossible to write a workable federal balanced budget amendment.

A Republican named Lincoln said we should be reluctant to clutter up the Constitution with amendments.

A Democrat named Muskie elaborated: "We don't need fiscal handcuffs to wipe the deficit out. We need fiscal discipline. If we have that will, no formula is necessary. If we don't, no formula will work.'

Whispered failure haunts us

THE DEBATE BETWEEN the Detroit NAACP, city of Dearborn officials and suburban mall developers really is the story of how a dream has turned into a nightmare of fear, cultural ignorance and bigotry.

For just a moment put park restrictions, boycotts and suburban shopping malls to the back of your mind. Today, we're talking about a massive social failure in America.

Eliminating a social crisis would be a simple matter if all we had to do was build another shopping mall.

But no such luck.

This controversy uncovers an uncomfortable truth - integration in America has failed.

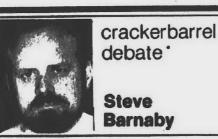

And while many civic and business leaders talk economics, they're really just skirting the issue. But then, most of us are still only whispering.

Let's face it, to proclaim loudly and clearly that racial integration has been rejected by a majority of society is frightening enough. The consequences of such a mentality is, frankly, unimaginable.

Any social scientist would be hardpressed to cite even one American city or metropolitan area that has integrated. And the Detroit metropolitan area is in far worse shape than we care to admit.

What we hear civic leaders tell us is that a boycott won't work.

But what we hear whispered is that many suburban whites are delighted that fewer blacks are showing up at the malls. What we hear business leaders tell us is that "conditions" for a major mall in Detroit just aren't feasible. What we hear whispered are the voices of fear from those who are just too frightened to go downtown.

FOR THOSE OF US Detroiters who have lived the roller coaster existence from riots to resurgence and back to retrenchment - we mourn the division that haunts this area.

We mourn that metropolitan Detroit has grown into a scattering of conclaves - blacks divided against whites, poor against rich, power against pawns.

Maybe a mall in Detroit is impossible, but the excuses we hear from the experts are impossible to believe.

For years we've been told that a mall in Detroit would only succeed if more people lived downtown. But remember when Westland Shopping Center was constructed - in the middle of an empty field" without a subdivision in sight.

We hear that parking is too expensive. But that doesn't stop the thousands who go to Greektown or Cobo or Joe Louis Arenaevery week.

Others tell us the river acts as a barrier. Sure just like Lake Ontario is a barrier for Toronto or the empty fields north of Northland were barriers when that shopping center was built.

Still others say that Detroiters' income level is too low to support a mall. But really now, folks living around Southland fare about the same.

NO, THE REALITY IS that we are living in an area where people fear one another - so much so that they no longer care to shop together, let alone live on thesame block.

To survive this crisis, and it is just that, we must escalate the dialogue. Civic, political and business leaders must act more responsibly in facing this issue.

The decision makers in our society must be willing to make decisions which will: break down these walls of fear, misunderstanding and prejudice.

In short, blacks and whites at all levelsmust sit down and start talking about what really is on their minds. Blacks must tell whites about their fears and resentments and their cultural aspirations, which whites must learn to understand.

Teachers share renewed spirit of pride

This week Americans in cities and towns across the country will be honoring those who are shaping the future — our nation's school teachers. National Teacher Day takes on special significance because the spirit of the outstanding New Hampshire teacher astronaut, Christa McAuliffe, is still so much with us.

Christa represented the very best of our profession. Vibrant, upbeat, energetic, courageous, she was full of enthusiasm for teaching and for life. Her dedication to her students and to her profession touched America's heart. This is the time to recognize the thousands of Christa McAuliffes in classrooms everywhere, the teachers who are encouraging children and making a difference in their lives.

Each day teachers in schools as different as large urban high schools and rural, one-room school houses are helping students explore new ideas, master new knowledge and skills. Teachers are reaching out to every student — regardless of ability, regardless of interest in learning, regardless of social or economic background. They are striving to help all children realize their potential as worthy and effective members of this democratic society.

ciety. More and more Americans, I believe, now understand that teaching is both a science and an art. More and more Americans are understanding how very complex the teaching-learning process is. I welcome this new understanding.

I welcome this new understanding. We've clearly gone beyond that old idea that those who instruct and care for our nation's children just aren't quite as knowledgeable, quite as professional, as those working in other professions. Christa McAuliffe's inspiring example hashelped change this misperception.

Christs also reminded America that education belongs in the forefront of any plan for the future, because education and learning are uniquely about the future.

Among all of us who work in America's classrooms, there's a renewed spirit of pride in our profession. We can feel the respect and confidence we have gained -from our students, from parents, and from our communities. Few neighbors would pass public hearing test GROUP HOMES always generate a lot of angry words from homeowners at public hearings. But when your average, runof-the-mill neighbor moves in, nary is heard a discouraging word. What would happen, though, if everyone who moved into a neighborhood had to undergo a public hearing? Imagine . . .

"I would like to thank all of you for coming to this meeting on the placement of a Single-Family Home at 5555 Offal Court. I'm Mr. Cleaver of the State Department of the Folk(s) Next Door. We want to place here a family of four — a mom, dad, and two kids. Let me, as best as I can, summarize the special needs and attributes of each of these potential residents. fortunately rarely sees them to fruition. As a result, three or four obsolete automobiles in various stages of disassembly will be in his back yard at any given time.

"He will spend his down time — and, oh boy, does he have down time — sitting sans shirt on the back porch, listening to loud rock music, drinking quart bottles of beer, ogling and making comments to any female neighbor between the ages of 12 and 87, and chain smoking cigarettes, flicking the butts onto the neighbor's lawn.

"The mother often will engage her spouse in loud verbal or nonverbal disputes, usually between the hours of 3 and 4 a.m. for maximum impact on the neighbors. She will spend the rest of her time gossiping on the front porch with like-minded female neighbors, flicking cigarette butts onto the neighbor's lawn.

"The oldest son, 16 years old, is an enterprising lad who doesn't sit back and wait for things to happen — he makes things happen. Break-ins and teen drug use will quickly rise in the neighborhood once he moves in.

"Impatient with the petty details of daily life, he has an amazing aptitude for cutting right to the heart of matters" — so he will drive his motorbike across the neighbor's front lawn to get home. Much of his spare time will be spent in his driveway with other youth, discussing the rising price of marijuana and fluctuations in the cocaine commodity market while flicking cigarette butts onto the neighbor's lawn. "The younger son, age 8, is an irrepres-sible little nipper. He cannot be repressed. It has been tried. No lie-in-bed type, he'll be up at dawn Saturdays, bouncing balls of various sizes and consistencies off the neighbor's house. A thoughtful boy, he will clear all rocks from the yard so his father can perform the semiannual, "whether it needs it or not, ha ha" lawn mowing.

"He will remove the rocks by tossing them at the neighbor's shrubs, garage, pets and/or the neighbor himself. When not up to childhood hijinks, the youngster will be found behind the garage, sneaking a smoke and flicking the butts onto the neighbor's lawn.

"WELL, THAT'S my general overview of the family. Any questions or comments from the audience? Yes, the gentle with the shotgun."

"Thank you very much. Mr. Cleaver, and giving me the opportunity to speak. Hy comment is this: Take your proposal and yourself out of this building very quictive and do not cross our city lines ever, again-- or else."

"Thank you for your timely, pertinent observations. And good-bye."

Fortunately, such a public-hearing property cess will never come to pass since it would be a gross violation of individual rights under the Constitution. So when it constito neighbors, we'll have to keep on taking w them — or leaving them. Anybody keeping of any good desert islands for sale? 1000

You find that interest rates are high when you want to borrow money, but when you loan money (i.e., certificates of deposit) you now only get about seven per cent interest at the local credit union with $10,000 on deposit. I feel that credit card interest at 18 percent still is usury when the banks pay six or seven percent on money that you loan them.

However the real threat of credit cards is that they discourage banks from loaning money to businesses. If, for instance, being a pharmacist and wanting to open a drug store; what if I would want to borrow some money? Even if my proposed business proved successful, I probably would not be able to make a profit equal to 21 percent.

Senators split on sports fee hikes

By Tim Richard staff writer

On the same day they rolled back the income tax, state senators began work on a bill to raise hunting and fishing license fees 32 to 50 percent.

"It's too substantial an increase," objected Sen. Patrick McCollough, D-Dearborn, as he voted against the measure in the Senate Natural Resources Committee.

McCollough and Joe Mack, D-Ironwood, dissented as the panel voted 3-2 to send the measure to the Senate floor.

Supporting the increases were Chair-man Kirby Holmes, R-Utica, and Sens. Connie Binsfeld, R-Maple City, and Phil Arthurhultz, R-Whitehall. Holmes was author of the income tax rollback bill, which the Senate had passed that morning.

IF ENACTED, the House-passed bill would hike most non-resident fees 33-50 percent this year.

Michigan residents would pay 32-36 percent more beginning in 1987 - after this year's election.

'It's too substantial an increase.'

-Sen. Patrick McCollough D-Dearborn

Even with the increases, said Rep. Tom Scott, D-Flint, Michigan's fees will be lower than surrounding Great Lakes' states.

The fee hikes, first since 1981, are needed to pump $6 million into the state fish and game fund, said Scott, who chairs the House Conservation Committee.

"It's not a tax increase. This is the user fee concept," said Scott, anticipat-ing McCollough's and Mack's objections.

MUCH OF the new money would go to add 31 more officers and other staff to the wildlife and fisheries divisions of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

"In 1926, we had 150 conservation officers," said Scott. "Today, with our population doubled or tripled, we have HUNTING and fishing licenses provide the bulk (87 percent) of the game and fish protection fund.

That bothered McCollough. "If these programs are worthwhile, they benefit hikers, bird watchers and berry pickers, too," he said. "They should be fund-ed by the general fund, not by hunters and fishermen."

lawmaker frequently at odds with DNR, voiced the same kind of objec-tion. "My position is that law enforcement is a top priority. We squeeze law enforcement all the time," he said.

Fishing — $7.25 to $9.85 (36%). Trout — $7.25 to $9.85 (36%).

Sportsmen's (five licenses) $36.25 to $45.35. The 1987 license would include the $9.85 trout stamp, reducing the effective increase to al-

Fishing - $17.25 (13%).

Resident senior citizen licenses would remain at $1 for fishing and $4 for hunting.

Scholarship Ball honors achievemen

The Woman's Club of Plymouth is sponsoring its fourth annual Invitational Scholarship Benefit Ball on March 15 at the Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth.

The first such ball was held there on March 11, 1983, in celebration of the Club's 90th anniversary. The Observer and the Mayflower Hotel serve as co-sponsors for the event. The tribute is organized by the Woman's Club to recognize the community's outstanding graduating seniors. Continued support from the individual, business and corporate sponsors makes it possible.

Each December, scholarship applications are available in the schools or at the Observer office in Plymouth. Students whose parents live in or have a business in the Plymouth-Canton Community School District may apply.

A minimum 3.25 overall grade point average and service to the school, church/synagogue, and community complete the requirements of eligibility. Financial need is not a consideration.

WOMAN'S CLUB members review the applications and select the students to be invited to the ball. A panel of judges who are non-club members work on a grid system to evaluate the candidates. Each candidate is assigned a number: no names are used.

A total of 31 outstanding seniors will be honored this year, four more than the traditional maximum established over the past two years. Although the students qualify in one of three different grade point categories (3.25 to 3.50, 3.51 to 3.75, and 3.76 to 4.0-plus), com-petition in each group determines the number that can be invited.

Twelve young men and 19 young women have been invited, including one student who is now studying in Ger-many. In 1983, not even one male applied.

Schools represented include Plymouth Christian Academy, Catholic Cen-tral, Plymouth Salem High School, and Plymouth Canton High School.

Engineering, law, medicine, math, business, psychiatry, biomedical engineering, language, music, genetic research, communications/journalism, government, financial planning and robotics are among the fields of study the young people are planning to pursue.

4 developers pitch SC on empty land

By Tim Richard staff writer

Four companies this month will present Schoolcraft College trustees ideas for developing unused college land at I-275 and Seven Mile.

As the landlord, the college is seeking a compatible builder for 15.6 acres on the southwest corner. The land is in the middle of a booming high-technology arc stretching from Oakland University at Rochester to the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

'Twenty-eight companies were sent requests for proposals," said board chairman Michael W. Burley. "Ten responded. Four have been invited in."

The four are: Proctor & Associates of Troy, Phillip R. Duke & Associates of Indianapolis, First Martin Corp. of Ann Arbor and Shaw Construction & Management Co. of Livonia.

THE BOARD last week approved incorporation of a non-stock, non-profit Schoolcraft Development Authority to be the actual landlord.

Attorney Steve Palms of the Miller Canfield law firm said the separate authority would:

1) Shield the college from lawsuits involving the development.

2) Be exempt from the Open Meetings Act and able to deal with developers behind closed doors. 3) Be effectively controlled by the college, which would provide five of the authority's nine trustees.

"Schoolcraft College can put limits on the building such as restrictions on the height and kinds of businesses which go there," said Palms.

Staff advisers estimate the land could earn $175,000 a year in rent, about 1 percent of the current operating budget.

THE AUTHORITY would receive rents from the tenants and turn them over to the college.

Staff advisers estimate the land could earn $175,000 a year in rent, about 1 percent of the current operating budget.

Trustees will set up special meetings to hear presentations from developers, allowing each about 14 hours.

IN OTHER business, the board of trustees:

• Learned the college food service, which had run a deficit for years, has turned the corner. Controller A.H. Raby said the operating deficit, which was $46,000 for the first seven months of last fiscal year, is down 90 percent to less than $4,000 for the same period this fiscal year. "Theme days," notably Mexican, and "blackboard specials" are luring student diners.

· Received gifts of audio-visual training equipment worth nearly $4,800 from Rhoda Bowen of Detroit for the nursing program; and an IBM Fastdraft computer system from IBM for the architectural and drafting programs.

"They think there aren't any jobs for math majors - other than becoming math teachers," said Wayne State University Mathematics Department chairman Clarence W. Wilkerson. "That's simply not true."

STUDENTS BELIEVE math is a tool used by engineers, physicists, computer scientists and other professionals, but not a profession in itself.

Wilkerson of Southfield hopes to attack that myth. He has facts about the need for mathematics majors in industry and business as well as education.

"Math is not seen as a separate field," he said. "We don't have the recognition factor at the high school level that other disciplines have.

"A mathematician is a resource per son for other people in the company. I think of a mathematician as being a general problem solver who can abstract out the important components of a situation and see what is really necessary to solve a problem."

Planners help map financial strategy

If you are beginning to believe your personal financial affairs are out of control, and what you need is honest, expert advice in getting it all together, you are in good company. Much of this country's affluent middle class is in exactly the same position: in over its head and looking for help - on taxes, investments, insurance, real estate, fringe benefits, retirement plans, wills and trusts.

One way to obtain help is to engage a personal financial planner. Some are individual practitioners, some are attached to banks, brokerage houses, insurance companies or accounting firms, and some serve only top executives or the very rich. Others offer more modest services.

No one can - or should - tell you which financial planner is right for you because that depends on several factors, including your needs, ability to pay, net worth, expertise and so on. Before you put yourself in the hands of one, you should be able to identify some qualities that can help in selecting a competent financial planner.

In my opinion, the financial planner should have at least a bachelor's degree and preferably a master's of business administration degree with concentration in finance. The planner should be a Certified Financial Planner (CFP) and an active member of the International Association for Financial Planning (IAFP). He or she should also have been admitted, or in the process of being admitted, to the Registry of Financial Planning.

There are no set criteria for determining the competence of a financial planner. The fact that a person has all the planning credentials does not guarantee that he is a competent financial planner. One way to judge a planner is by the quality of the financial plan he or she draws up for you. A means different things to different financial nlan people. To some, it is nothing more than a statement of net worth and a list of insurance and investments held by the client. To others, it contains an overwhelming amount of data and other information. What is important is not merely the volume but the amount of useful information presented in a comprehensible form.

areas, contained in the seven letters of the word

- E Educational planning
- T Tax planning
- I Investment planning
- R Retirement planning
- E Estate planning
- D Desired financial independence planning

Regardless of the complexity of your financial situation, the financial planner must offer to provide the client with a written financial plan. It must provide answers to questions that are unique to a client's situation.

A financial plan should include the following:

· A simple description in words of the existing financial conditions as well as financial assets and products held by the client. This section will give the client an overview of his present financial situation

• A list of key recommendations followed by explanations of why these recommendations were made. Recommendations should first be made in generic terms with no reference to specific products (investments, insurance, etc). The planner should then translate these generic recommendations into specific product suggestions.

All the basic observations and key recommenda-

Bologna came by his interest in how people cheat with computers by track-ing down accounting fraud.

Bologna, who founded and heads Computer Protection Systems Inc. in Plymouth, spent years detecting accounting fraud before starting his own company. His company counsels companies on how to improve computer security and reduce computer theft. Two days a week, Bologna is an assistant professor of management at Siena

This week, he is in Paris delivering a paper before the Fourth World Congress on computer and communications security. His paper, "The What, Why, How and Who of Computer-Related Crime," indicates his approach: preagement.

Double-entry bookkeeping on paper has been around a couple hundred years, and management knew how to prevent cheating with paper. But with the advent of the computer, many new ways to cheat appeared.

WHILE A dishonest bookkeeper is still a threat, the dishonest programmer is, too. And the dishonest computer operator could cost the company a bundle. "Computers don't steal. People do."

The hundreds of years of experience with paper did little to train the auditor or manager to find errors caused by poorly written programs or intentionally written "mistakes."

But it wasn't just dishonesty that could hurt a company using computers. A disgruntled or incompetent bookkeeper, data entry clerk, programmer, computer operator or anyone knowing the passwords and procedures of a de-partment could unethically manipulate data

*1C

And a lot of companies had little idea how vulnerable their electronic accounting systems were. In steps Bologna

The physical threats are fairly easy for management to see. Those threats have been found over the years sometimes by bitter experience - by the larger user of computers. Disaster protection is easily understood. It deals with Acts of God: tornadoes, floods, explosions.

Bologna focuses on the psychology of cheating. If no employee feels the need or desire to cheat, the company will be much safer from cheating, he believes. To eliminate losses, a company must reduce the motivation to cheat.

you are left on your own to take whatever steps you

Campus connections are vital

By Tim Richard staff writer

Far from being dangers to academic freedom, corporate-campus connections should be increased, according to three university presidents and an industrialist.

"It's not a fad; it's here to stay," Oakland University President Joseph Champagne told the Economic Club of Detroit Monday.

"Our trading partners are spending more on research and development than we are," warned University of Michigan President Harold Shapiro.

An economist, Shapiro said America's rates of personal saving, corporate investment and research and development are "not adequate for economic leadership.

"The need for a strong corporatecampus connection has never been greater," agreed John A. Betti, Ford Motor Co. executive vice president for technical and operating staffs.

FAR FROM being a phenomenon of the 1980s, corporate-campus ties have been important in America for decades, but declined in the early 1970s, said John DiBaggio, new president of Michigan State University

'At the same time, industry's role in basic research diminished, decreasing regular scientist-to-scientist contact, the MSU chief said.

They defined "corporate-campus connections" as: industrialists serving on university boards and advisory committees; companies making large grants; universities having access to ecialized industrial equipment; mutually drawing on a pool of expertise without expanding in-house capabilities; companies applying campus re-search; companies gaining a skilled work force; and universities generating spin-off firms in the research field.

"IT DOESN'T happen elsewhere in the world," said Shapiro.

"In fact," added DiBiaggio, "a recent industry study concluded that the single most important factor attracting such industries to a region was the proximity of a major research unives-

Champagne noted that "nearly 75 percent of all scientific discoveries in this country are attributed directly to university scientists."

ARE THERE dangers to universities if they "climb in bed" with corporations

Problems, yes; dangers, no, they replied.

"The interests of corporate shareholders are not the same as universi-ties," Shapiro said. "But our challenge is to pick that band of mutual interests.

DiBiaggio said that as president of the University of Connecticut, he personally knew every corporate leader in the state, and, "I never encountered one who wanted to interfere with research findings or interfere with academic freedom.

"But they did ask, Would you kindly investigate the things that are of interest to us?'

"And they did say, 'Give us engineers who can write a report.' " Nevertheless, the MSU president repeatedly said he was concerned that world-class universities "might be called upon to train more and educate less.'

to business

CORPORATIONS spend $40 billion a year on supplemental education for employees, said OU's Champagne - fully half of the $80-billion, combined budgets of higher education institutions in the U.S.

Ford's Betti called for re-examination of the corporate-campus connection to "reduce the entrance training we (industries) have to do.'

Shapiro and DiBiaggio predicted devastating effects on federal aid to students and research if the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings plan of across-the-board budget cuts is implemented next year.

DiBiaggio said that when he was a college student in the 1950s, a summer job could yield almost enough to pay a year of tuition and board costs - a situation that's "almost impossible" today.

Choose financial planner carefully

Financial planners who charge both a fee and a commission are frequently accused of a possible conflict of interest. A financial planner should not be accused of being dishonest merely because he earns a commission on the sale of an investment, insurance or a tax-sheltered product. Rather a financial planner has a conflict of interest only if he or she distorts or manipulates information in order to realize a profit to the disservice or the detriment of his or her client.

So if you wish to select a financial planner who charges both a fee and a commission, make sure that the following conditions are met:

1. The financial planner should promise to deliver a written comprehensive financial plan for which he should charge a fee consistent with that charged by a "fee only" planner.

 You must have the option of purchasing the recommended products from another person, if you so desire.

3. If you choose to purchase the products from the financial planner, he should charge the "normal" commission; that is, you should receive no rebate or refunds merely because you decided to purchase the products from the financial planner. A financial planner is a generalist dealing with many complicated and technical issues. He should recognize that he must function in an ever changing, Selecting the right financial planner is neither an exact science nor an esotericart. complex world. In this world, complete financial planning requires the services of more than one professional adviser, and best results are obtained through a team effort of a CPA, an attorney, an insurance counsdor, an estate planner, a banker and a tax-shelter specialist.

The type of prectice a financial planner has, and the market in which he operates, determines what advisers are needed. An attorney is needed to create wills, trusts and other legal documents. A CPA prepares tax returns and answers tax and businessrelated questions. An insurance counselor satisfies various insurance needs, and a trust officer offers many services (e.g., custodian accounts, trustee of a trust, etc.) of great benefit to the client. The planner may also need to work with bank loan officers, real estate appraisers, hard asset specialists and general partners of tax shelters.

Selecting the right financial planner is neither an exact science nor an esoteric art. In the final analysis, it can be described as looking for a cross between a symphony conductor and a doctor.

The players in the symphony include not only you and your spouse but also various advisers like the CPA, the attorney, the insurance counselor and the investment expert. The conductor need not know how to play one or more of these instruments being played, but he has an overview and general working knowledge of all the instruments being used by the group. In addition, you should also view your planner as a financial doctor, who can be fully trusted not only to cure your financial problems but also to ensure that you remain financially healthy and prosperous.

Financial planning should also be viewed as a lifelong process. Development of a comprehensive financial plan is but the completion of the first phase. A dedicated financial planner makes a longterm commitment to his client and believes that the client needs his continued support as a means of achieving all of the short, intermediate and longterm financial goals.

Man of many faces Arte Johnson's interests range from books to cows

By Ethel Simmons staff writer

4C*

ON'T EXPECT a rubberfaced comic when you meet Arte Johnson. Even though he is still most fondly known for the years he spent as one of the stars of television's incredibly successful "Laugh In," Johnson doesn't think of himself as a comedian, but as an actor.

He has played many comedy roles, however, including the one in which he now appears at the Birmingham Theatre. In the title role of "The Foreigner, he's a guy who finds himself in some hilarious situations because no one realizes he can speak or understand English.

Not only does Johnson in real life downplay his comedic talents, he also isn't interested in centering his attention just on acting. In an interview last week at Punchinello's restaurant, across from the Birmingham Theatre, he seemed most willing to talk about everything but his career as a performer.

"Comedy is just one facet of acting," Johnson said. "I started out in PR, with Viking, the book publisher." He got into acting when he took "the path of least resistance."

HOW HE BECAME a trouper on "Laugh In" was "from knowing people from other places and things" and from "being in a certain place at a certain time." It all came together through his personal contacts and friendships.

Johnson, who had been doing radio and TV voices, was on his way to a memorial service at a cemetery, with a friend who was going to be a writer on "Laugh In." He also knew the producer, "someone from New York, who used to see me when I worked in the small clubs."

The innovative comedy show took the country by storm.

"Everything was so helter-skelter," he recalls about the way the performers worked together, his roles being "primarily in the area of dialects."

Among these much-admired characters was "a chap who came from behind the Iron Curtain. I played a sumo chef that John Belushi later used.

Other roles were an Arab sheik and l of us, we all doubled in brass," Johnson said. Doing dialects takes a special talent. "It is music - if you have an ear for it.

Johnson arrives for the interview.

Describing his role of Charlie Baker in "The Foreigner," Johnson said, "I think he's harmless. He's just sort of a fun character.

Things are happening around him. He is from the publishing industry. He has been a proofreader for 27 years. He is a consummate B-O-R-E, bore, on a sci-fi magazine yet.

WITH THIS he launched into a recollection of a TV talk show he hosted, when he had a best-selling author as his guest.

"They never assume you read the material. I used to throw the questions (prepared by his staff) over my shoulder and start talking. The author was with his publisher's rep and I said, 'On page 323 you've got a typo.' They said. 'You really do read these books!

Johnson, his soft eyes behind steelrimmed glasses, greying hair and wry sense of humor, is of a literary bent. "I speed read. In preparation for the show. I would read four books a night.

He also remembers, somewhat gleefully, the professor he interviewed on the talk show.

"He wrote a book about bribes. It was 1,100 pages. I read the whole book." Johnson knew where all the typos were and asked his guest, "Did someone proof: ad this for you?" "After that, he got in conversations that were a lot more profound," Johnson said. The actor lives in Los Angeles with his wife Gisela, who is from northern Germany and is a naturalized American. They have two dogs Kleine (which means small in German) and Knudel (which means little, a hug). Johnson takes great pride in his wife's achievements.

"She's a fashion designer and interior decorator. She's the bright, tasteful one of our group," he said.

THE COUPLE has been married 18 years and had a Hawaiian ceremony for the renewal of their wedding vows eight years ago. They plan to renew the vows again on their 20th anniversary

"We may go back to Hawaii," Johnson said.

Their home is "very comfortable, with antique wood. I have an all-wood library and a fireplace."

They collect New Guinea art, cattle figurines, oils, brass and porcelains. "I have books on veterinary medicine. I like cows," he deadpannned.

How did he develop this thing for cows? "I was raised enough with cows. They're dumb and nice. They don't bother anyone."

Johnson said he grew up mostly in southern Michigan, around Benton Harbor and South Haven. "I had a big family there. They're all gone. Now they're all over the world.

He looks back on childhood days spent on the farm.

"I learned to climb trees. I got stomach aches eating the wrong fruit. I got one cent for picking bugs off tomato plants." He doesn't mind that he still hasn't collected most of the money owed him at one cent for each bug.

JOHNSON LOVES living in Los Angeles. "I adore it. I have not done any theater in New York in a long, long time. New York smells like unwashed baby diapers. I'm a day person. New York is a night city."

What he does like about the Big Apple is that "I can just walk for hours in New York."

He enjoys the at-home socializing in Los Angeles, where "my wife and I have dinner at 5 p.m. You can close the doors at 11 p.m."

When shooting a movie, he's up at 6 a.m. and back home at 6:15 or 6:30 p.m.

"You govern your time judicious-ly," he said of his life in the world of show business. "It looks a lot more romantic than it is. Drug society? In our social circles, all my friends are having quadruple bypasses. They're not filling their noses with garbage."

Last New Year's Eve the the stayat-home Johnsons celebrated with a composer and other musician friends. They had omelets at midnight. "The New Year's before, someone sent over a kilo of caviar."

"We have a very simple lifestyle," he continued. Arms folded, he said, "I prefer a good book. I have been in houses 10,000 square feet that don't have a book in them.

AS AN ACTOR, Johnson has acquired a fame of sorts for his many appearances on the long-running TV "Loveboat" series.

"There was a big banquet for the 1,000th star - Lana Turner. I was honored as the male who has done the most guest appearances." Johnson figures that honor isn't exactly one he wants engraved on his tombstone, however.

"They're all personal friends going back so many years, the producers, the writers. When in doubt, get Arte,' he said, in explanation of why he has been seen so often on "Loveboat." He may have made his last appearance on the show. "'Loveboat' may be scuttled this year.

Arte Johnson's real name is Arthur Johnson, but when he went to join the union, he found the name was already taken. He decided to go for Artie, but dropped the "i" because it seemed too ordinary.

"Show business is not the sum total of my life," he emphasized, as he hinted at business interests he is pursuing. "I will be doing work for major corporations relating to journalism. It's a lot of travel.

"I love to travel. Last year I was on the road close to 238 weeks." He was in Germany twice, on an isle off Madagascar, in Bangkok, Singapore, Bali, Hong Kong, Sun Valley, Alaska and Mexico.

"ALSO, I FORGOT, I took a Caribbean Cruise. I'm a chocoholic. I get shipments from Nestle's in Switzerland and Germany. I have a penchant for dark chocolate, aged 12 years."

As if 21 this weren't enough, "I am a first-day cover collector of stamps. I have a major library and was spokesman for the American Antiquarian Society convention in Los Angeles.'

He collects first editions, from Mark Twain and Rudyard Kipling to Charles Dickens. "In other words, it's not all laughs."

Asked if he thinks his "Laugh In" success has eclipsed his other acting achievements, he answered, "I have done other things since then that were well received - dramatic things, movies that have been acclaimed critically. I would like to have a little more recognition."

Some of his stage roles are "Gentle-men Prefer Blondes," "No Time for Sergeants," "Finian's Rainbow," "Stop the World" and "Little Me." Among his films are "Cannonball Run II" and "Love at First Bite."

And then there's that Emmy award he got for "Laugh In."

Actor plays title role of 'The Foreigner' to perfection

Performances of the Birmingham Theatre production of "The Foreigner" by Larry Shue continue through Sunday, March 30. For ticket information call the box office at 644-3533.

"The Foreigner' boasts a very funny script, a first-rate supporting cast and the immense comedic talents of Arte Johnson, best known for his antics on television's "Laugh In.' The current production at the Birmingham Theatre is a perfect delight.

In the title role, Johnson plays Charlie Baker, a very drab Englishman who describes himself as utterly boring and devoid of personality. Spirited away under implausible circumstances by an old army buddy, Charlie finds himself about to spend three days at a rustic So shy he cannot bear to converse with the strangers at the lodge, Charlie pretends not to understand English in order to preserve his privacy. To the locals, Charlie is an exotic specimen, to be ridiculed or fawned over, according to one's natural inclination. Likewise the rural Southerners are foreign to Charlie, especially in their speech.

The situation is rife with comic possibilities, and both Johnson and director Charles Karchmer take full advantage.

Pretending to be someone else, Charlie discovers a playfulness within him while at the same time he tries to thwart a plot he has accidentally overheard. With his twinkling eyes, infectious grin and diminutive size, John-particularly convincing, but he is in his confront life's mysteries. The English element when Charlie assumes a vaguely Russian accent, strongly reminiscent of one of Johnson's "Laugh In" characters.

While the lodge residents help elicit Charlie's true personality, he also fills important needs in some of their lives. Lodge owner Betty Meeks, dejected at the possible loss of her property, perks right up because Charlie reminds her of a former pet squirrel. Billie Lou Watt is sweet and motherly in the role and terribly funny when she repeatedly shouts into Charlie's ear to compensate for his lack of English. Whiney southern deb Catherine is played to perfection by Stacy Huntington. Certain that he cannot understand her, Catherine finds Charlie the perfect listener to whom she can confide her romantic problems.

Charlie works hard to instill confidence in Ellard, Catherine's mentally retarded young brother, by letting him play English teacher. Mark Morocco is wonderful as the simple but kindly El-JOHNSON'S BRITISH accent is not lard, his face perpetually screwed up to lessons allow Johnson to broadly mimic the southerners, turning words like "lamp" and "rug" into two syllables each

Risk pays off with Performances of the Meadow Brook Theatre production of "The Miser" by Moliere continue through Sunday, March 23, on the Oakland University campus in Rochester Hills. For ticket information call the box office at 377-3300.

By Cathle Breidenbach special writer

It's risky to take liberties with the words of the old masters.

Meadow Brook Director Terence Kilburn takes that risk, and the updated version of Moliere's "The Miser" is a rollicking good time thanks in large part to Charles Nolte's wonderful adaptation of the script.

His version infuses the old tale about love, stingi-ness and parental authority with some fresh silliness that includes idiosyncrasies of our own times such as returnable bottles and detergent presoaks.

At the Stratford Festival, peppering scripts with modern "in" jokes has become part of the success formula. With "The Miser," Kilburn joins the company of directors who can make a good classic comedy thrive on present laughter.

The master, Moliere, takes his pot shots at the conspicuous consumerism of Parisians in the 1660s. Charles Nolte adds a few spoofs at American society of the 1980s and William LeMassena in his masterful portrayal of the old French skinflint, Harpagon, shows us a timeless character familiar to any society.

The costumes aim to define character. Mostly they do. Harpagon's strapping son. Cleante (Mi-chael Patterson), looks ludicrous in a curly wig and a black and white striped jumpsuit with fluorescent orange such orange sash.

He could double for a foppish Clarabelle the Clown. In contrast, old Harpagon wears coloriess garb suitable fo: a ragpicker. Even for high comedy, the contrast is a bit much.

When it comes to costumes, George Gitto's takes the cake. In fact, he looks like one — a multi-tiered birthday cake cascading with lavender and peach frosting flowers. He belongs on a debonair lamp. The wonder of Guitto as an actor is that as outra-geously as he's decked out, he maintains the dignity of his character, the wealthy Anselme to whom Harpagon hopes to marry his daughter, Elise (Dona Werner).

The lavender and orange colors carry over into the marble inlays on the walls of a once-elegant salon in Harpagon's house. The set isn't up to Meadow Brook's usual high standards.

FOR ONE THING, the marble walls seem to go on and on to cover the large stage and the monoto-ny is punctuated only by a threadbare sola and chair. Either less wall or more furniture would

Dameron: solid as a Rock

By Chris McCosky staff writer

Y ALL rights, Dave Dameron should be the cockiest, most arrogant young man walking around Plymouth Salem High School these days.

Let's face it, he has done virtually everything he had set out to do when he joined the Rocks' wrestling team four years ago.

Last Saturday, the blond-haired, blue-eyed 126-pounder capped off a prolific high school career by winning the state Class A title in his weight class. He finished his career with a 148-34 record, 50-1 this season.

He is the winningest wrestler in Salem's proud wrestling history. He owns all but two individual school records.

This season, he eclipsed six team records (see graphic) - three of them held by John Beaudoin (most wins in a season, most points in a season and most pins in a career), two by Jeff Brown (most wins in a career and most team points in a career), and one held by Harry Walkley (most pins in a season)

ALL THESE accomplishments plus his aggressive, overpowering style of wrestling, his tightly compacted, muscular physique and his impish good looks - have given him almost a legendary prominence within the wrestling community.

Such is his fame - a young girl approached him for an autograph at the Western Lakes league meet last month at Westland John Glenn. When he won the league title (for the third straight year), the Glenn cheerleaders fought amongst themselves for the privilege of presenting the championship medal to him. The girl who finally won out presented Dameron with both the medal and a lingering hug. Such success has been the ruin of many high school athletes over the years. But success, like virtually every 126-pound wrestler in the state, hasn't been able to bring Dave Dameron down

He is not cocky or arrogant. If anything, he's shy about his achievements and determined to work harder to achieve even more after high school.

HIS DREAM is to some day compete in the Olympics. He'll take his first step next weekend in Grand Rapids. He'll compete in a United States Wrestling Federation tournament - winners from which could be selected to a Michigan team heading for competition this summer in West Germany.

That dream, plus some unpleasant experiences both early and later in his career, have helped keep Dameron hungry and humble.

The hardest thing I had with David was getting him to be confident in himself," said Salem wrestling coach Ron Krueger, who saw Dameron's potential four years ago and groomed and coaxed him into a state champion. "He was as good a wrestler last year as he was this year, but he lacked the experience and maturity that comes with being in the big competitions." Dameron placed fifth in the state last year, somewhat of a disappointment. He had been ranked No. 1 in his class most of the season.

THEY RANKED him No. 1 all year, but the minute somebody beat him, everyone turned on him," Krueger said. "This year, same thing. He's No. 1 and getting all the hoopla and attention, then he loses and everybody turns on him again. It's like everybody was always trying to predict who would beat him

"I guess he took it all pretty good. He wound up No. 1."

There were other disappointments for Dameron along the way. He won 23 matches as a freshman, more than any other frosh in Salem history. He won 32 matches as a sophomore - but the midpoint of that sophomore season may have been the low point in Dameron's career.

He lost three straight one-point decisions to Todd Gattoni of archrival Plymouth Canton. Displayed on Dameron's refrigerator door at home were newspaper photos of Gattoni beating - a haunting reminder. him

"They were all real close matches," Dameron said, still remembering. "He just had more experience than me. It was disappointing, but it didn't bother me too much. I knew I had two more years to show what I could do.'

ACTUALLY, HE showed what he could do in the league meet that season. He beat Gattoni for the championship, 1-0 in overtime.

From that point, Dameron became an overpowering force in Observerland wrestling.

"He's really strong, he became confident, he's good with his moves, he's got a good upper body attack and he's super quick," Krueger said. "He's certainly one of the two best wrestlers I ever had (the other being Beaudoin). I hate to do all that 'who's the best' thing. I'll just say that it's going to be a while before anyone gets a shot at his records '

Dameron pointed his entire senior season toward winning the state meet. He suffered a frightening setback, losing the district title to Ann Arbor Huron's Andy McNaughton. But Dameron came back to win the regional and took a No. 1 seed into the state finals last Saturday.

"THERE WAS a lot of pressure," Dameron said. "Everything I had done for four years leaned to that moment. It just made me want to work harder. I had to win.'

He did. He beat Mark Smith of Holt 4-2. Smith had knocked off McNaughton earlier in the tournament. But the way Dameron was wrestling Saturday, it may not have mattered who he wrestled.

"He was in control of himself," Krueger said. "He wasn't wild like he has a tendency to be. He stayed within himself and took the points when he could get them."

Dameron is hot property for major college wrestling programs. The universities of Michigan, Indiana and Ohio State are among those in pursuit. Krueger mentioned sending a letter to the nation's No. 1 college team, Iowa. "I think he could help them," Krueger said

RIGHT NOW, Dameron is uncertain about which school he'll attend. He is enjoying his success and preparing for the federation meet in Grand Rapids. But somewhere in his mind, the dream lives: Olympics - 1988.

Don't bet against him.

Said Krueger: "Hey, if he gets with a good college coach, I don't see anything stopping him."

Solom 7t in state

By Chris McCosky staff writer

Two state champions, two teams among the top 10 and 10 wrestlers in the top four - Observerland did mighty fine at the state Class A wrestling tournament at Grand Valley State College Saturday.

As expected, Temperance-Bedford won the title with 110 points. Hazel Park was second with 80 and Lansing Eastern was third with 62. (See statistical summary.)

Redford Catholic Central, the No. 1 team in Observerland, placed fourth with 60 points and Plymouth Salem (No. 2 in Observerland) placed seventh with 54.

Others placing were Westland John Glenn (16th with 30 points), Livonia Churchill (19th with 26) and Farmington (tied with Brother Rice for 24th with 24 points).

"We're really pleased," Salem coach Ron Krueger said. "Our goal was to get back up into the top 10 and we did that. We were only a point out of fifth and six out of fourth.

THE MAIN man for Salem was 126pounder Dave Dameron. Ranked No. 1 througout the season, Dameron made good on the rating by topping Holt's Mark Smith 4-2 in the finals. Dameron was 50-1 on the season with 41 falls.

Brother Dennis also had a successful meet. At 112, the junior placed third, beating Hazel Park's David Sayler 1-0 in overtime.

"Our goal for Dennis was third of better," Krueger said. "He was sensational. I had been thinking about retiring from coaching after this year, but Dennis told me if I stayed, he'd win it all next year. I've got to stay at least one more year."

Salem's Jamie Woochuk placed fourth at 185.

AS PROUD as Krueger was of his own wrestlers, he was especially proud of his son. Lee Krueger, a freshman at Redford Catholic Central, placed fourth in the state at 167 pounds.

"It's been quite a year," Krueger said. "To place three kids in the state meet, place seventh as a team, and to have my own son do so well - it's been nice."

Krueger couldn't help make one more observation: "Do you know where we would have placed if we had my son? Second."

The other Observerland state champion was Churchill's 112-pounder, Sa-lem Yaffai. He finished off his undefeated season with a 7-1 decision over Lansing Eastern's Tom Morris.

For CC. Mike Gentile was runner-up at 98 losing to Hazel Park Jeff Saferian 10-7. At 119, Jason Wiebeck placed third, topping Gibraltar Carlson's Mark Statler 11-3.

John Glenn's Dan Schimansky (145) and Chris Zimmerman (heavyweight) each placed fourth. Farmington's Dan Parilo placed fourth at 198.

Dennis Dameron gave Salem a lift Saturday by taking a third place at 112 pounds at the state Class A wrestling meet.

C cagers grab conference title E

Just one day after its most impressive performance of the season, Oakland Community College's mens basketball team sunk to the brink of defeat in a game it should have won handly.

At least it can be said OCC did win, escaping with a 77-76 victory over Southwestern CC in the Michigan Junior College Athletic Association finals Saturday at Kalamazoo Valley CC.

"Our players really earned the victory." said Fred Thomann, who has assumed the coaching duties for Tom McPhillips, who is on medical leave. "I really believe it's hard coming back after an emotional game against an arch-rival."

The arch-rival was Highland Park, which beat OCC twice during the regular season. Last Friday OCC thrashed its nemesis, setting up the showdown with Southwestern CC of the Western Conference for the MJCAA title.

SCC DIDN'T possess HPCC's talent, but that didn't stop it from battling OCC throughout. The Raiders trailed throughout the first half and into the second before making a run that put them in front by six.

The game remained tight until the final two minutes. OCC was up by seven, but missed free throws, a bad shot, a turnover and two fouls that sent SCC to the line and cut OCC's lead to 77-76 with a second left. SCC got the ball back on an OCC turnover. but its final, desperation shot missed, pre-serving the Raider win.

Northville sends Canton packing

"Hey, we knew Canton would be tough," Northville coach Omar Harrison said. "This was the third time we've played them. We knew it would be hard to beat them, we knew Joel Mies would shoot the ball well. The thing that surprised us a little bit was that they came out in a zone defense."

That surprised a lot of people. Northville has beaten many teams this year with its perimeter shooting game. But Canton coach Tom Niemi also knew that his team couldn't match up with Northville's big people inside, particularly 6-6 Matt Hinds.

So, he gambled that Northville's guns would be off target. He was correct.

Northville made just nine of its first 28 shots in the first half against Canton's tightly-packed zone. Hinds was held to one field goal until the final three minutes of the half.

"DEFENSIVELY, WE did exactly what we had to do," Niemi said. "We had to do what we did because of our injuries (starter Roger Trice sat out the last two weeks of the season with a pulled hamstring muscle). We had to try and get more size on the boards. And it worked.'

Harrison made an adjustment of his own that helped stem the tide in the second quarter. He inserted Steve Grant and Dave McCreadie into the lineup - the duo gave the Mustangs exactly what they needed: a swift kick in the behind.

"Our bench gave us a big lift," Harrison said. "They were able to get the ball inside."

Hinds scored six points in the final three minutes of the second quarter and another eight in the third quarter. He finished with 20 points.

Teammate Don Norton also heated up in the second half. His 12 secondhalf points (including a crucial eight in the final quarter) gave him 20 for the night.

CANTON TURNED the ball over seven times in its first nine possessions of the third guarter. Miraculously, when Mies ended the 15-0, sevenminute drought with a short jumper, the score was tied 31-31.

"Mental errors," Niemi said of the drought. "We were coming down and basketball

turning the ball over ourselves. We were forgetting our assignments at times. But we stayed in the game."

Mies hit a jumper to put Canton ahead 41-39 at the start of the final quarter. He then hit a free throw after Northville was assessed a technical foul for slapping the backboard.

But Canton made two turnovers and missed a pair of free throws in its next four possessions while Northville ran off eight straight points to surge in front 47-42.

WITH TWO minutes left, Mies hit another jumper to pull the team with-in a basket, 48-46.

The teams traded free throws and with 30 seconds left, Canton had the ball and a chance to tie the game. With 17 seconds left, Canton's Jeff Lyle (scoreless on the night) fired an errant shot from the top of the key.

Hinds and Norton, fittingly, polished off the Chiefs by hitting two free throws each in the final seconds.

"Offensively, we made some real bad choices," Niemi said. "You can't do that and win. We made too many turnovers and missed too many criti-cal free throws down the stretch." Canton was two for eight from the line in the fourth quarter.

Still, the loss only partially dims a brilliant effort by Mies. Playing his final game as a Chief, playing on 'a badly sprained and heavily taped ankle, Mies's 28 points came off a blistering 12 of 17 from the floor.

"HE PLAYED with a lot of heart," Niemi said. "He played like the allconference player he is."

Mies was not selected to the all-Western Lakes basketball team this year - a fact that peeved Niemi and surprised several other area coaches.

Tyrone Reeves added 10 points for the Chiefs who bow out with a 10-11 record - 10-6 since Christmas.

"We played hard and played well with what we had," Niemi said. "We were the surprise team of the league this year, no one can deny that. I'm proud of these kids."

Rocks jolt Glenn from tournament

By Chris McCosky staff writer

If it was Plymouth Salem's intent to lull Westland John Glenn to sleep Wednesday night in the semifinals of the Class A district basketball tournament at Plymouth Canton, the strategy worked to perfection.

"Oh sure, we wanted them to think it was a junior varsity game," joked Salem coach Bob Brodie.

The laughs came easily for Brodie after the Rocks stunned No. 2-ranked Glenn, 60-57.

If you were a betting person, you might have staked large sums on Glenn coming into the game. Salem was 9-10, Glenn 15-5 and fresh off its Western Lakes championship win at Harrison last Friday.

If spirit was to be the key, Salem was indeed in trouble. The Rockets came out visibly pumped up, with their loud and rowdy group of fans (mostly students) waving and stomping.

SALEM DRAGGED through its pregame drills - its small group of supporters (mostly adults) sat quietly, chatting among themselves.

Even the Salem chéerleaders were quiet. There were only two on hand to begin the game; three others strolled in sometime during the first quarter. They never once went onto the court to lead a cheer.

As you might expect, the Rockets pounced all over Salem in the first half. They completely controlled the game and led by as many as 10 points. You had to wonder if Salem might sleepwalk its way right out of the 1986 sea-

"At halftime we just told the players that there was nothing we could show them now that would help," Brodie said. "It's all a matter of intangibles, and the No. 1 intangible is intensity. We simply weren't playing with any."

LITTLE DID Salem know Glenn was about to take a catnap of its own - a fatal one - in the second half.

The team connected on six straight shots and ran off a 12-3 spurt to pull within a point. Jumpers by Bryan." Kearis (whose six third-quarter points) spearheaded the rally) and Tony Moore helped Salem to a 42-41 lead going into the final quarter.

Glenn scored the first six points of the fourth quarter to retake control. With 4:52 left, Glenn led 49-44.

From that point on, Salem outscored Glenn 16-8. Paul Makara's jumper with-1:40 left gave Salem the lead, 52-51 The Rocks then hung onto that lead draining eight straight free throws in the final 34 seconds - the last six calmly poured in by Mike Hale.

"WE LOST this game at the free throw line," said a disconsolate Glenn coach Gordie Davis. "We were just horrible (the Rockets hit 15 of 24 from the line, Salem was 10 of 13). We had a couple opportunities to score inside late in the game, we did what we wanted to do, but the ball wouldn't drop."

Steve Hawley, a junior, scored 24 points before fouling out in the final seconds to lead Glenn. Tony Boles added 14.

The loss marks the second straight year Glenn has been upset in district ... play. Last year at Salem, the team was ousted by Northville.

"We're just snakebit out here," Davis said. "I thought we were the better team last year and I thought we were again tonight. I just don't know what it

For Salem, Hale's 16 led the way. Makara added 14 and Kearis 10.

"When we are playing, we are one of the best 10-10 around," Brodie said. "But we're up and we're down."

4 area spike teams advance

Four Obseverland volleyball teams have ad vanced to regional play on Saturday.

Three area Class A teams - Garden City, Redford Bishop Borgess and Westland John Glenn all eaptured districts and will converge on Wayne Memorial High School, along with Trenton, in a four-team regional.

Another area team, Livonia Ladywood, advanced by winning the Class B district at Allen Park, defeating Southgate Aquinas in a mild surprise, 16-4, 15-13.

Catholic League champion Borgess (36-5), survived the stiffest test, winning its own district by defeating two-time state finalist and Schoolcraft Invitational champion Livonia Stevenson, 14-16, 15-11, 15-5.

"It was a great match against a great team," said Borgess coach Jerry Abraham of the finals. "It was a power game all the way and we were fortunate to stick it out and win the match."

STEVENSON COACH Lee Cagle said fatigue my have led to his team's undoing. The second game lasted 45 minutes.

"It was one of the most outstanding matches of the season," he said. "It was a great match even though we lost. The girls came out with their heads held high.

"When we got down to the end I think we were too tired. We didn't have everybody for a full practice during the week because of various ailments."

The match pitted two of the area's strongest volleyball

hitters, junior Kristine Bailey of Stevenson and Debbie McDonald of Borgess. "I'm not sure we stopped Bailey all day," Abraham said. McDonald, meanwhile, had 17 ace spikes in 28 attempts and got strong hitting support from teammates Beth Zacharski and Cherie Johnson.

Defensively, Cheryl Livingston and Stephanie Kielb stood out for Borgess along with setter Anne Terski and reserve Kathy Stabler. Stevenson, which bowed out at 32-7, advanced to the district finals with straight-set wins over Redford Union and Farmington Mercy. Borgess, meanwhile, defeated Livonia Franklin (15-5, 15-7) and Livonia Churchill (15-10, 15-5).

GARDEN CITY had little trouble winning the Dearborn Fordson district, defeating the host school, 15-3, 15-12.

The Cougars, who rearranged their defense and used a key dink shot from Mary Hebert, rallied from a 12-9 deficit in the second game to beat the Tractors.

Earlier in the day, GC whipped a pair of Detroit teams, Northwestern (15-3, 15-7) and Chadsey (15-0, 15-1).

Gary Holt, who netted 31 points in the win over HPCC, paced OCC with 21 points.

The win makes OCC the No. 1 seed going into the NJCAA regional Division II tournament. The Raiders open today at 1:30 p.m. against host-team Kalamazoo Valley CC. Other teams competing are Delta CC and Henry Ford CC from the Eastern Conference and SCC, Lake Michigan CC, Grand Rapids JC, Muskegon CC and Kellogg CC from the Western Conference.

RUDEL A WINNER

Ted Rudel, a Farmington Harrison graduate, busted the Drexel College pool record in winning the 1,650-yard freestyle in 16:09.67 at the East Coast Conference (ECC) swim championships Feb. 21-23. Rudel, a junior, helped pro-pel Lehigh to a third-place team finish, behind Drexel and Bucknell.

Rudel also placed second in the 500 freestyle (4:39.66). Lehigh finished 9-2 overall and 4-1 in the ECC in dual meets.

RECORD-SETTER

Matt Mair, a sophomore at Albion College and Redford Catholic Central graduate, swam the 1,650-yard freestyle just once for the Britons all sean, but he made it count.

Mair, who already had the Albion 1,000-yard free record, shattered the team record in the 1,650 free with a 16:53.32 clocking at the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA) championship meet Feb. 21-23 at Calvin College.

Mair finished second in the league. He also managed a fourth-place finish in the 500 free (4:52.45), trimming nine seconds off his previous best, and recorded the fastest 200 free time of the season for the Britons (1:49.69).

Tavana rises above trauma

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Like most persons his age, Paul Tavana is given to laughter.

The Redford Catholic Central senior basketball player giggles when he reveals that he stays up to 12:30 a.m. watching "The Three Stooges." He even chuckles about getting bathroom time with five females in the same house.

But the lighter side of life has not always followed Tavana. If there is a school of hard knocks, Tavana has earned a Ph.D.

Life deals enough curves to a 13-year-old on the edge of puberty. Imagine Tavana at 13, when his father died of a heart attack.

IT WAS the third parent he'd loved - and lost.

When Tavana was 5, his natural mother died of a heart attack. At 7, his stepmother died. But with all the trauma and heartache he's endured, Tavana at 17 doesn't appear a bit scarred or cynical.

Instead, he just dribbles the ball harder and carries on

"He's a throwback to the old days," Catholic Central coach Bernie Holowicki said. "He has a sense of loyalty and a sense of respect. He places himself second and not first ahead of anyone. His sister Mary has done a tremendous job."

THE ACCOLADES directed toward Mary Tavana are not unwarranted. She picked up the pieces after the death of their father.

She moved back to the Westland family home, as did two of her other sisters, and became the legal guardian of Tavana. He and his brother John are the youngest of the eight Tavana children and the only boys.

"The day my dad passed away, she was my sis-ter," Tavana said. "The next day she was being my parent."

The transition, as expected, was difficult at first. And Tavana admitted he didn't make it any easier.

As time went on, he became more receptive. Now, Tavana admires his sister for taking charge the way she did.

"I'm glad she did," Tavana said. "We probably would've went to our godparents, and the family would've been split up."

INSTEAD, THE family stayed together. Mary, who attends most of her brother's games, attributes the closeness of the family for making the adjustments easier.

who calls her brother a sincere and somewhat shy person. "We've been a very, very close family. It just seems sort of natural that the family stayed doing the same. CC has trimmed 10 to 12 points off its opponent's score with a tough man-to-man de-whom Holowicki calls "an excellent defensive play-

BUT TAVANA, in the past, had been somewhat overzealous in keeping opponents in check. Last year, he fouled out of 15 games.

This year, he's only been sent out of five games. "I was too aggressive," Tavana said. "This year I had to stay in the game."

"He's a very aggressive player," Holowicki agreed. "That's his style. You can't hold him back. He only knows one way: go, go all out."

His tenacity on the court might be traced to the past. Mary believes that sports have been a way to vent feelings for both Tavana and brother John, who's a football player and wrestler at CC.

"PAUL DOESN'T express his feelings much," she said. "He keeps them to himself. Sports is an outlet for both of them."

'I've begun to learn to deal with it," Tavana said of his parents' deaths. "I'm able to talk about it now. Before, I used to break out in tears when I tried to talk about it.

"The hardest time is during basketball when we had parent's night," he added as his voice began to trail off.

But he looks to the future with renewed opti-mism. Currently, he's considering Baldwin Wallace College near Cleveland along with Hillsdale and Grand Valley. He plans to major in criminal justice because "I've wanted to be a cop or in the FBI," he said Holowicki thinks Tavana could be a good role player on the Mid-American Conference level.

"HE'D BE a guy stopping the other team's play-er," said the CC coach. "He could be a regular offguard or off-forward." Tavana enjoys that role now.

"I like guarding their best player because I can shut them down and score more points than them," he said.

Tavana's fondest recollection playing for CC was when the Shamrocks upset then Catholic-League powerhouse Birmingham Brother Rice in his sophomore year. He scored 18 points in the game, but more importantly: "I was playing well defensively.

He's taking more than a few memories with him from CC. Mary credits the school for helping her raise both Paul and John in their teen years.

She also believes it's a good idea for Tavana to go away to college. The adjustment of being away from home shouldn't be difficult since, according to Mary, he's already fairly independent.

"It really hasn't been that hard," said Mary, 28, As a result, Tavana has been more than able to A scorer, Tavana also can keep opponents from

Luxury barge is just right for lazy-day touri

This is the second in a two-part series about floating down the Thames River in England aboard the luxury hotel barge ACTIEF.

2.2

WAS A WEEK before the Royal Henley Regatta, held every June, and the Thames Riv-er around Temple Island was alive with rac-ing shells. The coxswain was small, with an insistent, chanting voice; the rowers bigger, strong-er, pulling, splashing, moving each shell like a knife through water.

The white posts made two straight lines down the river, pointing like arrows toward the square church that dominates this famous English town of Henley-on-Thames Yachts lined one side of the river. Reviewing tents were already set up on the other side, waiting for the royalty and the boat-loving commoners who would sit on them.

This was our third day aboard the ACTIEF, a luxury hotel barge that makes regular one-week cruises on the Thames River. Henley-on-Thames is one of the barge's regular mooring places on the river, right in the center of town opposite the ancient main street, but as we tried to land a man in a gray suit raced out, waving his arms. "Actief! Actief! No mooring this week because of the regatta!" Captain Bill Almond, his head rising above the back of the 126-foot-long hotel barge, did a U-turn in the river, blocking its width with our Jones bulk.

There was one long parking spot on the north side of the river, where a man stood on the grass bank and waved us in, while the ducks paddled out of the way.

Lots of drivers talk to themselves when they drive and Capt. Bill is no exception. "Wednesday! We're going to have to stop all these navigational acrobatics on Wednesday. Okay, crew, lets try again. I'll put the nose into the bank you jump."

THE NOSE hit the bank softly and Julie, one of the three female crew members, jumped ashore. Capt. Bill raced to the front, checked the tree we would tie up to, and raced back. Katie was ready with the rope.

"Lock it up Katie, but don't let us go anywhere." Soon the eight passengers were climbing the gangplank to the grass, young Andy raced to a fence to pat a horse, the two Australians gathered their postcards for mailing, and all of us headed across the field to the road that leads into town.

It was our first real chance to shop since we left Windsor Castle behind us two days before and the most rivergoing action we had seen on this peaceful river.

We finished our shopping in Henley and were soon back on the river. There were homemade bread smells coming from the galley. A bridge game was soon in progress. One less-than active soul sat on the prow of the boat watching the ducks. I started thinking about opening the paper-back book brought along to read on the river. But first, I decided to take a nap. Henley was all the excitement I could take for one day. As we approached March Lock we could see the huge DANGER sign on the long wooden walking bridge over the weir, where water foams furiously through the sluices. Weirs were built centuries ago for fishermen and have always been a problem for Thames boat captains.

MARSH LOCK looked narrow for this long barge, but Capt. Bill steered us neatly in.between the flower gardens so popular among lockmasters. Julie rushed forward, corkscrew curls flying over blue jeans and a navy blue sweater, and as usual she charmed the lockmaster.

Sometimes it was just with a smile, sometimes with a coffee or a beer. We all hopped off for our regular walk around the lock.

At each lock a neat brick house sides the lock, neatly tended and often with elaborate gardens. Being a lockmaster is not a well-paid job, and it's as far as you can go in the lock business, but its a good life in its own way. The Thames is navigable to Lechlade near Gloucestershire, 143 miles from London, so there are a lot of locks, although we only see a few of them. We aren't much more than half way along our 50-mile route and it has taken us three days of sitting on the boat watching the world go by.

THERE ARE footpaths all along the Thames and the energetic among us use them as bicycle paths. The ACTIEF carries its bicycles strapped to the front of the boat for instant action. These footpaths were once towpaths used to haul boats upriver. Now they are like cleared botanical gardens for walkers and bikers along the river.

Those who went on foot or by bicycle towards the village of Sonning were ahead of those of us who stayed aboard.

Capt. Bill didn't want to disturb the picnickers on the bank at Sonning so he tied up to a tree 100 yards beyond his usual landing. We were warned to watch out for the traffic that roared across the nearby stone bridge. We were re-entering the 20th century long enough for a pint of beer at the Old Bell Inn, "oldest inn in England."

There can't be more than 100 of those," Capt. Bill said cheerfully as we drank.

BY 10 P.M., back aboard, we watched the misted trees make dark shapes against the gray but still light sky, with identical reflections on the steel gray water below. Cruisers and yachts made bulky shapes nearby.

At 5 a.m. on Wednesday, our third day on the river, the sound of falling raindrops hit the river out-side the eye-level window, accompanied by the early morning launching sounds of the ducks. We went through the next lock in the rain.

Julie opened it, Hatle closed it, Sue handled the ropes. The lockkeeper has business hours but the Thames is a 24-hour public waterway, so any licensed boat person can turn the wheel according to instructions, fill the lock and open the other side as long as the lock is left empty and the gates locked.

WE MOVED on. The sun came out. Mapledurham, believed to be Toad Hall in the story "Wind in the Willows," was ahead of us. So was Reading, Pangbourne, Goring Gap and Oxford.

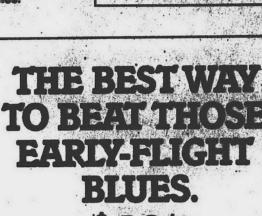

This is a leisurely and interesting way to see Eng-land, by the "back door" of the river, with a minimum of touring and a maximum of lazy-day experiences. If you would like to know more about floating down rivers on luxury hotel barges, contact your travel agent or Floating Through Europe, 271 Madi-son Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Hotel barges float on the Thames and the Avon rivers in England, and on waterways in Holland. Belgium, Germany and France. Costs are about $200 a day per person including all meals but not / including alcoholic beverages or tips.

Ann Loveland's paintings, such as the one pictured above, are strong on design and color. Shown in her studio, at right, Loveland enjoys working on many different projects at the same time. The large framed piece on the floor is a carefully done collage in black, gold, reds and other primary colors. She also teaches in the Livonia VAAL program.

Return to art brings fulfillment

By Corinne Abatt staff writer

Ann Loveland has a way with color. That's obvious as soon as she opens the door to the house which she and her husband, writer Noel Loveland, recently built and furnished in a far corner of West Bloomfield.

The immediate message is that here is a couple who take great pleasure in rich, warm color. ire is further reinforced in her stu-That plea dio, adjacent to his, where there are several paintings that she will have in the Sholem Aleichem art show, March 7-9 at the Shenandoah Country Club of West Bloomfield and many in various stages of completion.

To a point her story is a familiar one. She was born and raised in Detroit, was an art major at Wittenburg College, Springfield, Ohio, studied at Eastern Michigan University, taught grade school in the Farmington district, married and settled down in Livonia to raise her family. When her last child was in school full time, she said, "I really got serious about my art." That included some classes at Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association of Birmingham.

NOW, WITH the children on their own, she maintains a challenging teaching and painting schedule. She recently remarried, moved to West Bloomfield, but still teaches for the Visual Arts Association of Livonia, VAAL, and is an active member of the Farmington Artists Club.

And while she particularly likes teaching in the VAAL program, she said, "They're mostly adults who are very serious painters. What I really like is just painting or drawing. I like a water-based medium best."

To both acrylics and watercolor, Loveland brings a strong sense of design, and a love for pattern and color. And while they could be termed decorative, a term she used herself and said she doesn't object to, many of them move beyond that to combinations of interesting grid patterns, elements of impressionism and realistic still lifes. Her ability to bring out strong, rich, lush colors is certainly one of her strengths.

Essentially Loveland's paintings lift the spirits and please the eye. She's a gardener who has a great appreciation for the flowers she often uses for subject matter and she isn't afraid of using watercolor on folio size Arches paper.

Just recently she began to do collage. Her appproach to that is meticulous and design-oriented, but she doesn't feel she's really hit her stride in that medium yet.

Loveland's work is available at the Collector's Corner of the Toledo Musem of Art, in the Sales and Rental Gallery of the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, at the Detroit Artists Market and March 7-9 at the Sholem Aleichem art show at Shenandoah Country Club.

Art show opens Friday

The Sholem Aleichem art show, this year March 7-9, has become through its 23 year history, a showcase for excel-lent regional art in a wide price range.

Featured this year in the three-day fund-raising event sponsored by Sho-lem Aleichem Institute, a cultural and educational organization, active in all facets of Jewish life, are works by 125 Michigan artists.

Hours are 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sun-day, Donation is nominal.

The show will be held at Shenandoah Country Club, $600 Walnut Lake Road, between Farmington and Drake, West Bloomfield.

ulids an exciting litestyle

By Corinne Abatt staff writer

Jim Hasenau has built an exciting lifestyle with the same care he used to lavish on constructing houses and making models.

Hasenau, a lifelong metropolitan area resident, now in his 60s, model maker, builder, teacher and strong individualist with a naturally inquiring mind, milked all of his skills to the fullest to become an author, publisher and inveterate world traveler.

His publishing firm is Holland House Press of Northville and of the dozen books on his current order list, eight were written by Hasenau. The most popular, "Build Your Own Home," which Hasenau wrote and illustrated, has sold more than 200,000 copies since 1972, he said.

His most recent, "Toys Wooden," with lots of illustrations and easy-tofollow directions, came out last year and will soon have a sequel.

HASENAU'S FATHER worked with his young son teaching him building skills and model making.

"I was brought up on 'Popular Mechanics' and 'Popular Science,'" he said, "if he (his father) hadn't of held my hand, I'd have been just another amateur."

But, as a result of his father's guidance, these skills are second nature to Hasenau, who worked as an automobile model maker for about 10 years.

"I was pretty good at it - in fact, I was real good at it," he said.

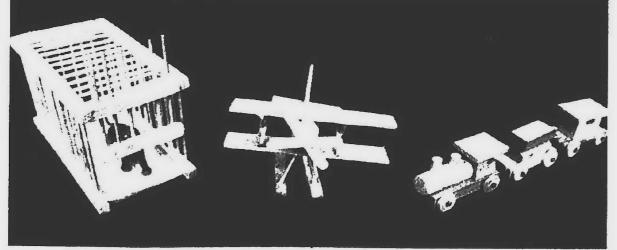

During World War II he was a navigation instructor and later completed his master's in education at the University of Michigan and taught in Detroit for two years, "until a guy pulled a gun on me and I said 'that's it'."

Even while he had his own building company, he was thinking he'd really rather write and travel the world than build and sell houses.

He found the opportunity almost by accident. When his son, John (now a veteranian), was a kid, he raised gerbils. Soon they found markets for gerbils and raising them became a business. Hasenau wrote his first book on how to raise gerbils in 1970 and published it through a vanity press. HE WAS dissatisfied with the way the book was promoted and distributed and decided he could do it better himself. And Holland House Press was born.

And now ideas and information for

The wooden toys shown, which Jim Hasenau made, are some of many in his book, "Toys Wooden." There are a variety of animals that can books multiply almost as fast as those gerbils did.

He and his wife, Florence Ann. always carry a suitcase of books with them as they make their frequent trips

For instance, while updating the information in his book, "Travel by Char-

Pro Musica Series hosts rising star

By Avigdor Zaromp special writer

The Pro Musica series presented its latest program Friday at the Detroit Institute of Arts recital hall with the young violinist Joshua Bell.

Having performed with the Philade-phia Symphony at the age of 14, Bell is considered one of the most acclaimed, rising violin stars today.

Now 19 and a student at Indiana University, he has appeared with the ma-jor symphony orchestras in this country and was also on a tour to Europe.

He was accompanied by the extremely capable planist, Angela Cheng, who has won numerous prises and is presently studying at Indiana Universi-ty under Menahem Pressier.

The high caliber of the artists was matched by the attractive items on the program. These consisted of a Sonaten-satz in C Major by Brahms, the Sonata in A Major for Violin and Piano by Faure, the Chaconne from the partita in D minor for unaccompanied violin by Bach, "Nigun" by Ernest Bloch and the "Carmen Fantasy" by Sarasate.

THE BRAHMS selection is one of his lesser known works, which was his share of a sonata whose other movements were supposed to be supplied by other composers.

While the opening bars in the lower register sounded somewhat ambiguous, the quality of Bell's tone emerged soon enough. This quality was consistent through the program.

The one drawback in the first portion, which included the Faure sonata as well, was the fact the fully open piano lid resulted in too loud a sound. This was particularly true in the Faure sonata. Some of its passages and harmonies tend to remind me of the Franck sonata in the same key, but its texture should be more subdued than this performance suggested. The closing of the lid in the second portion was beneficial.

Among the works for unaccompanied violin, Bach's chaconne is among the most challanging and, in my opinion, the most musically perfect. In addition to multiple stops, there is an intricate part-writing with alternation between the parts, requiring the kind of independence that is hard to achieve without a split personality. While such independence wasn't complete in some of the variations, it was present in many others, indicating Bell to be on the right track.

UP TO THAT point, Bell's tone was detached and emotionally aloof, even though it was technically clean. With the Bloch piece, however, one could sense a lot more emotional involvement on his part. This was a warmup for the "Carmen Fantasy," which is technically ferocious.

The smooth and clear harmonics were of the kind that only few of the greatest masters of the instrument could successfully attempt. The bravura ending had the audience standing up cheering. Bell and Cheng returned to play a Kreisler tune for an encore. Angela Cheng, whose role was some-what overshadowed by that of Bell, de-units anglit for her catable anglore.

serves credit for her capable perform-ance. She mastered the substantial demands in the Faure sonata, and her agile rendition of the scherzo was note-worthy. It is hoped that we shall be hearing more from these capable artlate.
