HALLELUJAH CHO-RUS: The Plymouth Community Band will hold a special concert beginning 8 p.m. Friday at St. John Seminary, Five Mile just east of Sheldon Road in Plymouth Township. The seminar offers the perfect setting of European architecture for the performance of some of the world's greatest classical compositions, which will be performed Friday night by the chorus. In addition to the Community Band there will be a choral group and a bell choir. The band will perform a church liturgy, including the "Manzoni Requiem" by Verdi, the "Hallelujah Chorus" by Handel, "Pie Jesu" by Weber, and "Blessed Are They" by Brahms. The concert is open to the public and free.

COFFEE DAY: Coffee Day, an event to benefit Easter Seal Society of Wayne County, will be held Friday, April 18, at Silverman's in Plymouth, White Castle in Canton, and more than 40 other participating restaurants and bowling alleys. The Coffee Day buttons are available at participating restaurants on April 18 for a donation of $1 or more. On that day, the button wearer will receive a free cup of coffee at Silverman's or White Castle or at another participant who will have posters and table tents on display. Proceeds will help support the more than 14,000 hours of day camp programs for the Easter Seals this summer at four sites in Wayne County.

Ten candidates will seek election to the Plymouth-Canton school board June 9.

Two four-year terms and one twoyear term will be contested.

The candidates include two incumbents, a Canton resident making his third bid for the board, another trying for a second time and several newcomers.

One incumbent, E.J. McClendon, who is completing a four-year term, has filed for a two-year term this time around. Another incumbent, Marilyn D. Schwinn, who was appointed to fill the vacancy left by Nancy Quinn's resignation, has filed for a four-year term.

Elaine Kirchgatter of Canton, whose four-year term expires this June, has decided against seeking reelection after 81/2 years service.

City to garner land-sale cash

By Kevin Brown staff writer

The city of Plymouth stands to make nearly $500,000 from the sale of two parcels of city-owned land. -At the city commission meeting on Monday, commissioners accepted an offer to sell the 48-acre Beck Road Well Field between Six and Seven Mile. City Manager Henry Graper said Singh Associates has offered $393,500 for the land.

Graper said the land likely would be used for residential development. The firm has developed single-family and multifamily housing projects in the Detroit metropolitan area, including the Quail Ridge subdivision in Northville and Turtle Creek in

The $393,500 from the sale of the Beck Road Well Field will go into the city's water and sewer fund.

The commission also accepted a resolution confirming another sale of nearly 2.6 acres of city-owned property to developer Carrollton Arms, who plans to house light industry on the property adjacent to the Department of Public Works yard.

Proceeds from the $101,220 sale will pay for the third and final phase

Sincock said that holding onto the land for some future contingency offered no real benefit to the city. 'Now's the best time to sell and these are the best offers," Sincock said

The city has received a $70,000 down payment for the Beck Road Well Field property. According to the sale agreement, the developer has 90 days to make sure the property has proper soil conditions and available utilities. The sale involves a three-year land contract at 9 percent interest.

The city received a similar offer for the property in 1979. But when Crawford, Etter and Associates Inc. stopped payments in 1982, the city foreclosed. "We made about $50,000 to $75,000 on that deal and we stand to make $70,000 plus interest on this deal," Graper wrote, "even if they . . do not exercise their option to close."

Also at Monday's meeting, the commission approved a resolution accepting the special assessment roll specifying streets targeted in the 1986 Paving Program. The public may view the roll, on file at the city clerk's office, prior to a public hearing on the special assessments at 7:30 p.m. Monday, April 21, at city hall.

city of Plymouth Public Works Department will start its spring spraying of all city elm trees. Homeowners are asked, if at all possible, to keep their vehicles off the streets for at least a twoweek period. The DPW crews will be spraying 4-9 a.m. each weekday until finished. There will not be a set schedule on what days crews will be in any particular area as the spraving must be done on a calm morning.

of improvements to the DPW yard: construction of a road, parking areas and landscaping, Graper said.

PAUL SINCOCK, assistant to the city manager, said the city has tried to sell certain parcels of city-owned land for several years. The purchase offers "are really the first serious offers we've had" on the Beck Road

Should the roll be confirmed, the project "will go out to bid next month," said Graper. He added construction could begin in June or July. Special assessments are intended to fund $330,000 or 58 percent of the $573,000 project, Graper added.

There will be little or no change in most Plymouth residents' city taxes and services in fiscal year 1986-87, according to the preliminary annual budget presented by City Manager Henry Graper to Mayor William Robinson on Monday.

The balanced budget of nearly $4.5 million shows a slight increase under 2 percent - over last year's budget of more than $4.4 million. The budget calls for no change in the current city tax rate of 18.17 mills ($18.17 per $1,000 state equalized valuation).

Before the budget can be enacted, city commissioners will convene a budget study session Tuesday, April 15. If needed, study sessions will continue April 16 and 17.

THE BUDGET, including possible changes, will be posted in the City Clerk's office no later than April 21.

A public hearing on the budget is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday, April 28. The preliminary budget is posted at the Plymouth Public Library.

In an introduction to the budget document, Graper noted that in the early 1980s, the city "dealt with extensive revenue problems as a result of the state of Michigan's economic situation." While those problems have passed, "We must deal with a budget that will no longer have a federal revenue sharing account," Graper wrote.

Most notable revenue increases are expected in: cemetery fees, $80,500, up 49 percent from last year due to a fee increase; district court fees, $65,000, a rise of 433 percent due to projections of more fees paid to the court; and general taxes, up nearly $43,000 from nearly $2.6 million levied for fiscal year 1985-86.

Notable decreases in revenue will come from a drop in administration fees, from $210,000 to $130,000, and a more than $27,000 cut in federal grants due to federal revenue sharing cuts mandated by the federal government.

AS STATED IN budget highlights prepared by Graper, "this budget does not project additional head count for any department," except for the hiring four months early of a replacement for City Clerk Gordon Limburg who plans to retire in August 1987

Graper said Limburg's replacement would be hired early to help prepare the 1987-88 city budget.

Limburg, who helped prepare this year's budget, said free-lance building inspectors would be hired part time to report on stepped-up construction this year.

Graper added that other than previously planned improvements to the Department of Public Works yard, We have not taken into consideration any major modernization or building program to any city facilities."

Saying that new equipment purchases "are at an absolute minimum," Graper wrote that the only major purchase planned is three police cars for $36,000.

Warm weather attracts picnickers

By Kevin Brown staff writer

You know it's spring when the heavy coats come off and the office workers come out to Kellogg Park for lunch.

Kids pedal bicycles down brick paths cut into a greening lawn, and the smells of spring ride on light breezes: scented blossoms, moist earth, pastrami . . .

Pastrami?

The return of the lunch crowd to the park means a resulting upswing in Russ Taft's business. That's because stopping by Taft's Penniman Delicatessen for a salad or sandwich on the way to the park is a Plymouth warmweather tradition.

year, evidenced on a recent weekday from the deli counter at the rear of the store past refrigerated boxes of spinach pasta, bags of chips stacked on a metal rack, and ends near the front entrance.

Taft, 28, has run the business "a little over eight years." Some regulars, and there are plenty, still call it "Johnny's Market," the business name for more than 20 years.

"We see the same people every day," says Taft, adding the deli brings in about 300 people per day in warm weather.

Once employed as a butcher, Taft, a northwest Detroit native, says "I had no intention of being in the deli business." But he's adapted to the lunch rushes lunch makes up half of his business, Taft says.

So how does a small deli survive in an age of ultra-popular fast-food restaurants?

"It's a good location," Taft said. "It's fine to go to Burger King or McDonald's but you get kind of tired.'

On Penniman Avenue, the Whopper and Big Mac face stiff competition from the deli's tuna fish salad and chicken salad, the most popular sandwich fare, Taft says. But the deli's homemade salads also are big with lunchgoers

The Penniman Deli has less of a New York flavor than some in Ann Arbor or Detroit. While you won't find those special brands of soda or cheesecakes unique to the New York-style delis, Taft stocks a variety of fresh meats, exotic pasta shells, and the usual basics.

Glancing beyond crates of oranges, potatoes, tomatoes and onions, one notices shish kebab already speared on skewers behind the slanted glass of the meat counter.

Stacked nearby are bright red, green and white-colored boxes containing pasta shells. A low, red metal cola dispenser rests along a back wall.

A woman approaches Taft, preparing meat behind the counter.

"I have a coupon for groundchuck hamburger," she says. Taft offers a cheerful "OK," and wraps the ground chuck in white waxed paper.

Sun streaming in from the front window brightens a red and white checked tablecloth at a small table used by some lunch goers. Six junior high boys mill about the front of the store, most dressed in T-shirts.

It must be spring.

Gathering to spotlight boating equipment

The Western Wayne County Boat bralter, T-J Sales of Pinckney, Show will open Friday, April 25, under The Gathering in downtown Plymouth

Free to the public, the show hours will be noon to 8 p.m. Friday through Sunday at the pavilion on the Penniman Avenue-side of Kellogg Park. The show is sponsored by the Plymouth Kiwanis Club.

The show will cover all aspects of boating from windsurfing, water skiing, and fishing to sail and power.

Among the dealers displaying boats will be Marine Affiliates of Canton, Paul's Sailboats from GilNorthwest Boat from Southfield. Prop and Sail of Taylor, and Trenton Marine from Trenton.

Marine Affiliates will display Grumman aluminum fishing boats, runabout, and water skiing boats. Ebb Tide Cuddy Cabin sport boats and Dyna Trac fishing boats also will be shown.

PAUL'S SAILBOATS will show a Compac 19-foot and 16-foot which are, trailerable sailboats for summer fun, along with Little River rowing shells. Being on Lake Erie, Paul's Sailboats operates a sailboat charter service and will provide information to those interested in chartering and learning the art of sailing.

Trenton Marine will feature an 18foot Lund aluminum fishing boat with pedestal seats and trolling motor mounts, along with a 17-foot, 6inch Aerocraft Monte Carlo runabout bow rider ski boat.

Trenton Marine is the only dealer in this area to display the 15-foot Galilee, a stable daysailer with selfbailing cockpit and reverse transom. Prop and Sail will display Glassmastger runabouts and Fisher aluminum fishing boats, along with Johnson outboard motors.

T.J. Sales will feature two Spindrifts, one 19-foot and one 22-foot. Spindrifts are trailerable weekender sailboats which sleep four. Also in their display will be Sunfisher and Lasers

"With the number of great waterways in the state of Michigan and the increasing number of public launching sites, trailerable boating has increased the opportunities for boating enthusiasts," said Ted Campbell, show chairman.

IT IS NOT hard to imagine why so able boating as a recreational activity, Campbell added.

The number of beautiful lakes in Michigan with public landing sites for boat launching makes water sports available to all.

"Unlike purchasing an automobile, where one can see the wide variety of manufactuer's models while driving on the road, a boat enthusiast has a difficult time choosing the right boat. That's why we have boat shows it's a place to examine the features of different manufacturer's models and learn of dealer services.

many people are choosing trailer- Comparisions are easily made under one roof.'

> Campbell added that a boat show also is a good place to get advice on use, such as fishing, water skiing, cruising, pontooning, sailing, safety and storage.

"And don't forget the trailer. It can easily take you and your boat to many different lakes throughout Michigan and other states. And the trailer makes a great boat storage platform as Michigan water has a tendency to become hard in the winter."

Study uncovers high cardiovascular risks

A group of nurses conducting a community assessment of the city of Plymouth has discovered that the city has a high incidence rate of cardiovascular disease.

The assessment was conducted recently by four Madonna College senior-level nursing students Joy Gornick of Plymouth, Sue Middleton of Westland, Charlene King of Detroit and Donna Lyons of West Bloomfield

The assessment was a requirement of a senior-level Community Centered Nursing Class, which allows studnets to view an entire community as a client or patient. The assessment involved collecting data from community subsys-spiritual dimensions and recreincidence of cardiovascular disease, the four decided to offer suggestions on how to reduce the risk and survey what resources might be available in the community.

The cardiovascular system con-sists of the heart and blood vessels within the body, which are responsible for pumping and carrying blood throughout the body.

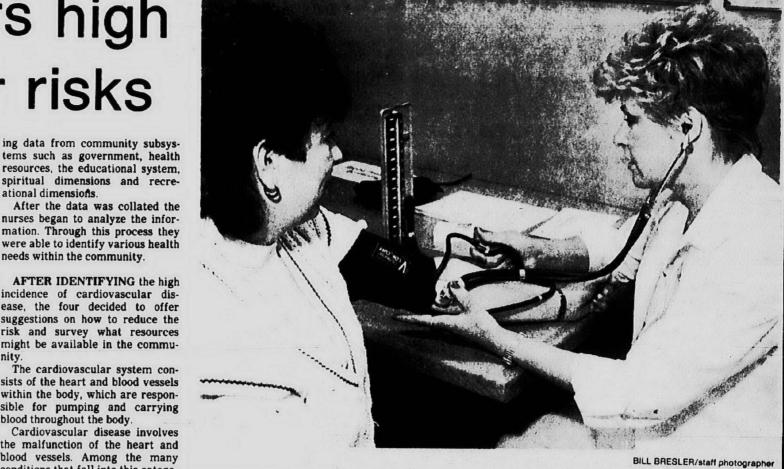

Cardiovascular disease involves the malfunction of the heart and blood vessels. Among the many conditions that fall into this category are: arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries); angina pectoris (chest pain); myocardial infarction (heart attack); hypertension (high blood pressure); and cerebrovascular accident (stroke).

A person with a heart disease usually will display common symptoms that include: chest pain; dyspnea (breathing which is difficult or labored such as shortness of breath); fatigue; palpitations, a pounding or racing of the heart; syncope, loss of consciousness or fainting; and edema, which is a swelling or puffiness of the extremities due to an abnormal accumulation of fluid.

People experiencing any of these symptoms should not become alarmed, said Middleton, but should contact their physician.

Presence of the symptoms alone does not mean a risk factor is present. A risk factor is any factor which, when present, will increase a person's chance of developing an unwanted or unhealthful situation. There are many risk factors that will increase a person's susceptibility to developing cardiovascular disease, explain the nurses.

Some risk factors are modifiable, that is they can be eliminated or lessened to a certain degree

Carol Pata has her blood pressure taken by Kathy McFeely during a free blood pressure while other risk factors cannot be changed.

THE NON-MODIFIABLE risk factors are: • Age. Susceptibility increases with age. Occurrence before age 40 is unusual. • Sex. Females usually do not get cardiovascular disease until after menopause at which time they become as susceptible as men. · Family history. A positive family history of cardiovascular disease increases the likelihood of its development.

MODIFIABLE RISK factors include:

· Elevated blood cholesterol and triglycerides. This can be modified by following a low-cholesterol diet, which restricts intake of saturated fat, cholesterol and simple sugars. Substitute polyunsaturated fats for saturated fats.

• Cigarette smoking. It is best not to smoke. Smokers should try to cut down or quit if they can. Carbohydrate intolerance (diabetes). Follow prescribed regimen as ordered by physician. See physician for regular check ups.

· Habitual diet high in fats, total calories, carbohydrates, cholesterol, and salt. Eat well-balanced diet avoiding foods high in cholesterol, salts and fats.

· Obesity. Eat well-balanced, low-calorie diet. Reduce weight gradually. Seek advice of physician before beginning to diet.

• Sedentary lifestyle. Seek some form of regular exercise such as walking, jogging, swimming or other sports. Before taking an exercise program, consult your physician.

 Psychosocial tensions (stress). Try to avoid stressful situations as much as possible. Learn how to deal effectively with stress through relaxation techniques.

THERE ARE VARIOUS resources in the community the nurses identified that can assist in modifying certain risk factors of cardiovascular disease.

Programs offered through the Catherine McCauley Health Center at the Arbor Health Building, Ann Arbor Trail at Harvey in Plymouth, include:

Be Trim weight loss program; various senior citizen health pro-screening program offered the last Monday of each month at the Arbor Health Center.

(P.C)3A

grams such as on healthy eating, dieting, and exercise; Smoke Stoppers program; stress management programs; and free blood pressure screenings.

By way of example, the health center will offer a class on "Ex-ercise Your Way to Less Stress" 1-2 p.m. Monday, May 12. Information on the center's programs can be obtained from Janet Zielasko at 455-5869.

Similar programs are offered at , the Ford Hospital center on S. Main in Plymouth, from Oakwood-Catnon Center hospital at Warren and Canton Center Road, the city and township recreation classes, and the Plymouth Community Family YMCA.

There also are many programs offered through Plymouth-Canton Community Education, including a nutritional/fitness/weight control class designed to help people un-derstand nutrition and its impact on health.

Community Education also offers aerobics classes, swimming, and various sports. Information on these programs can be obtained from Dee Basher at 451-6660.

Blanchard, Bowman back state college tuition plan

By Tim Richard staff writer

Michigan parents can guarantee their child's four years of college tuition will be covered by investing in BEST - the state Baccalaureate Education System Trust. So says Gov. James J. Blanchard.

State Treasurer Robert Bowman this week unveiled some details of the plan, contending it has advantages over individual savings. Private financiers earlier expressed doubts that a state fund could out-perform private investments.

So far, however, Blanchard's office hasn't revealed how much would have to be invested in a lump sum to guarantee the $20,000 that four years of college tuition are expected to be by the year 2000.

The plan requires approval of the state Legislature.

BOWMAN said BEST has three advantages over private investments:

"First, this program guarantees tuition. Parents will have their child's tuition paid in full. Many private savings plans offer a lump sum in future years that might not be large enough to cover the full tuition cost provide a tuition guarantee and tax advantages to parents. Professionals in the field believe that interest earnings can be made exempt from federal and state taxes, as is the sub-private investment community, the state's experienced money managers can take advantage of prudent investment opportunities which many individual investors may not be able to realize.

"For example, the state earned a 24-percent return last year on state pension fund investments, while tuitions were frozen at the previous year's levels."

EARLY NEWS reports, after Blanchard's state-of-the-state speech in January, used a figure of $2,400 invested at birth yielding $20,000 by the time a child reached college age. But the governor's report this week used no cost estimate.

Bankers interviewed by this newspaper frankly doubted the state could achieve the 13 percent or more return needed to yield a $20,000 tuition fund.

st. Bowman said, "The amount (of in-"Second, Michigan's BEST will vestment) will depend on the age of the child, the payment plan chosen, the date of entry and the option for separating from the fund." He outlined three options:

could make a gift, Bowman said, and many parents would see fit to borrow the investment. As for poor families, he said, the state's expanded student aid programs will help the needy.

No state money would be used to administer the program, Bowman said, adding:

"A public authority - which would utilize the talents and knowlege of both the public and private sectors - would provide the best oversight for the fund, which will work through the private sector in making investments.

PRIVATE FINANCIERS spotted several questions about the Blanchard plan and said it has flaws. Among them:

What if the student decides to attend a private or non-Michigan college?

What about the major part of col-lege costs — room and board, books, labor and computer fees, and transportation?

How can the state be so sure the investment will be tax-exempt?

Ford-Sheldon asks for tax break

Ford Motor Co., which already has been granted tax breaks on its Sheldon Road plant, has asked for abatement on an additional $6.8 million worth of new equipment and improvements at the site.

A public hearing on the request has been scheduled before the Plymouth Township Board of Trustees on April 22.

Ford's application for the tax breaks says that the new machinery and equipment will be used to manufacture and assemble aluminum radiators and heater cores.

Ford has requested abatement -50 percent of property taxes due for the maximum period (12 years) allowed by law.

Ford tax officials estimate that tax breaks would total $610,000 over 12 years of abatement. Additional tax revenues also would come to $610,000, with the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools in line to receive about $428,000.

Ford anticipates installing most of the new equipment next year.

THE PLANT provides jobs for 1,040 hourly and 328 salaried workers. Some 87 production jobs and 14 supervisory positions are expected to be added within two years after completion of the project.

In 1982, Ford was granted an abatement on machinery and equipment with a market value of $8.8 million and on $403,000 of building improvements.

Plymouth Plating Works on Joy Road also is coming back for additional tax breaks but considerably less than Ford Plymouth Plating has requested abatement on $200,000 worth of building improvements and two new line machine computers and a large hoist valued at $110,776.

Plymouth Township voters will cast ballots by punch card in all township, state and national elections starting with the state primary Aug. 5.

The township board has authorized spending up to $50,000 to purchase a system.

Township Clerk Esther Hulsing projects that a punch card system would pay for itself within five years by savings resulting from not naving to set up and dismantle the heavy Shoup voting machines. Hulsing said she believes voters are more likely to complete a long punch card ballot with a guide book directly in front of them than having to pull levers all over the Shoup machine.

The township also would have available more punch card voting stations than Shoup machines which could save voters time during popular elections.

A voter education effort in how to use the new system has been promised by Hulsing.

Township voters will continue to use paper ballots or Shoup machines for school elections depending on the number of candidates.

Wilhotie running unopposed

By Sue McDonald staff writer

Rex Wilhoite is assured a Wayne-Westland school board term, barring an unexpected write-in campaign. The election will be Monday, June

The Wayne-Westland district includes the city of Wayne and portions of Westland, Canton Township and Romulus.

Wilhoite was the only candidate to file nominating petitions by 4 p.m. Monday for the single Wayne-Westland school board position.

It is the second time since the district began keeping records of elections that a candidate has been unopposed in an election, according to elections clerk Lorraine Roulo. In 1974 then trustee Thomas Barrett was unopposed in his bid for re-election, although eight residents were campaigning for an unexpired term on the board

The district serves southeast Canton.

Wilhoite will succeed school board vice-president Dewey Combs, who announced late last month that he wouldn't be a candidate for a second four-year term on the board.

Wilhoite isn't a newcomer to the school board.

He served from January until June of last year after being ap-pointed by the Wayne County Intermediate Board of Education to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of James LeDuc.

He also was a candidate in last year's election to complete the remaining three years of LeDuc's term but lost out to Sylvia Kozorosky. A resident of Wayne, Wilhoite is employed as a branch manager for Cambridge Filters, which manufactures industrial filters. He is 41.

House OKs new kind of lenders for state By Tim Richard

His objections satisfied. state Rep. William Keith threw his support behind a bill to license a new kind of business lending institution.

four of Keith's amendments, the House recently gave 101-3 ap-Keith proval of the bill

The measure - SB 564 - goes back to the Senate for concurrence in Keith's amendments. Sponsor was Sen. Harry DeMaso, R-Battle Creek, who received strong support from Oakland County investors and bankers

"I WASN'T fronting for anyone," said Keith, a bank manager before his election to the House in 1972. The governor wanted this, the Republicans wanted this, and the banks wanted this.

"But I had some areas of concern. First. I had an amendment which put criminal usury into the statute."

That amendment capped business loan rates by a BIDCO at 25 percent. "Otherwise, it's an invitation to unscrupulous lenders to prey on momand-pop stores," said Keith. "What favor are we doing those under-capitalized businesses by allowing an interest rate of over 25 percent?

"SECOND, I was concerned that BIDCOs could take over the operation of a company that defaulted. kick out the president, vice president and treasurer and run it for up to three years.

So I had an amendment: When a BIDCO takes over a company, it takeover? What percentage of the securities would the BIDCO plan to own? How long did it anticipate controlling the firm, and what did it plan to do?"

Without such accountability to state FIB regulators, Keith said, "BIDCOs could sap the business, transfer the assets to their own company, then close it down.'

The amendment allows FIB regulators to require the BIDCO to show. why it needs to take control of a defaulting firm. Keith has much confidence in FIB

"I don't think there's a dispute; I make the decision about staffing in the various departments because I have responsibility for balancing the budget," Lucas said.

"Only one in Michigan failed. Our regulators are doing a damned good job.

HIS THIRD concern resulted in a compromise. Keith wanted high levels of capitalization of BIDCOs.

Studying California, the first state to allow BIDCOs, Keith found the average loan was $300,000 and that "few growth-type loans were being made. In my opinion, they were severely under-capitalized."

His colleagues wouldn't agree. So the amendment requires a minimum capitalization of $1 million enough to make three average California-sized loans - and requires the FIB to review the BIDCO's planned lending activities to assure adequate capitalization.

On House adoption, three outstate lawmakers opposed the bill. It was supported by 12 of 13 Observer & Eccentric area representatives, with John Bennett, D-Redford, absent.

War to be waged on false alarms

Plymouth Township public safety officials have urged the township board to join the fight against false burglar and fire alarms

Police Chief Carl Berry and Fire Chief Larry Groth were instructed Tuesday to report back with a discussion paper on the subject next month.

The pair already has suggested ticketing and fining individual homeowners and businesses $50 per incident after two false alarms within a 30-day period or after the fourth false alarm in a year.

As an alternative, Berry said the board might want to consider changing the priority of police responses to buildings where false alarms are a problem.

A computer study for the six-month period ending last Dec. 31 indicated that public safety officers received 552 false burglary alarms and 36 false fire alarms from commercial and residential establishments combined, Berry reported.

Through the first three months of this year, police responded to 144 false residential burglar alarms and 78 at businesses, the chief said.

"EACH ALARM is a priority call, meaning an emergency run," Berry said. "With each emergency run the chance of an accident occcurring in-

"The demand for time becomes so great the need for additional personnel becomes necessary and the cost becomes prohibitive." Then, there's the time factor. Two cars' respond to every alarm and officers spend an average of 10 minutes on each alarm call, Berry said.

'False alarms create a false sense of security," he added. "All you need is one alarm to be real and somebody is going to be hurt.'

A new ordinance, Berry said, "will not completely eliminate the false alarms but will give us the ability to recover some of the financial loss caused by repeated alarms which are not maintained properly.

According to an ordinance proposed by Berry and Groth, repeat offenders would receive written warnings before tickets.

The ordinance is aimed at mechanical failure, improper installation or negligence. False alarms caused by severe weather or beyond the direct control of the property owner wouldn't be counted, they propose.

City of Plymouth police announced a crackdown against false burglar alarms in February. Several tickets have since been written. City police now write tickets after three false alarms in a year.

Group may save the Wilcox House

test public sentiment on whether the Wilcox House ought to be saved.

The meeting, which will begin at 7:30 in the Plymouth Grange Hall at 389 Union just north of Penniman Avenue, has been called "for the purpose of organizing to raise funds to move and restore the Wilcox House," explained Cheryl Szyniszewski of Plymouth.

One of the keys in determining future plans will be how strong an indication of public support is seen by organizers, she adds. The public is encouraged to attend tonight's session.

For the past several weeks, Szyniszewski says, a small group of residents have been meeting "in hopes that the rich tradition of the Wilcox House might be preserved.

'Plymouth is a community rich in

A meeting is being held tonight to progress in our downtown business district. We would like to be a part of preserving some of our past."

One of the possibilities the organizers are looking at is moving the Wilcox House to a school site to be a preserved as a historical building. Other historical buildings, such as Geer School, could be moved to the same site which could then become a 'historical village.'

Another idea being looked at is for the Wilcox House to be a center to house offices for different cultural and art groups in the community. Szyniszewski says there would be some benefit in having the cultural groups in the same location.

She added that it's possible that the Wilcox House will be razed within the next 45 days. "We are anxious to establish whether there's any sigheritage and tradition. A part of that nificant community interest in movheritage is about to make way for ing and restoring the Wilcox House."

Minorities in state jobs rise now 23%

By Warren Hoyt special writer

The number of minorities in Michigan's state work force increased during the 1984-85 fiscal year.

The turnover rate dropped to a new low, and the average worker's age increased, according to the Department of Civil Service annual report.

The average number of total state employees for the year was 58,283 down 37 from the 1983-84 average of 58,320 the report showed.

But at the end of the fiscal year, total state employment increased to 59,788, the result largely of the Department of Corrections hiring 1,113 persons to staff new prisons.

THE REST of the sudden increase came mostly from persons hired to replace employees who left under the state's early retirement program.

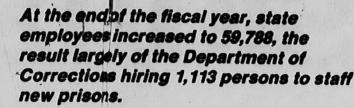

When part-time and seasonal workers, and overtime pay are equated to full-time employees, the state work force increased from the prior year by 3.4 percent to 60,245.2, the report said.

The state payroll was $2.03 billion. an increase of about 6.8 percent. Total state expenditures increased about 5 percent.

Minority representation in the state work force increased to 23.1 percent during 1984-85 compared to 22.1 percent in 1983-84.

THE PERCENTAGE of minorities in the entire state population is 16, the report said. Black employees made up 19.5 percent of the total work force, Hispanics 1.6 percent, Asian and Pacific Islanders 1 percent, and American Indians 1 percent.

The Department of Civil Rights had the largest percentage of minorities working - 60.9 percent. The attorney general's office had the fewest - 7.7 percent.

Minorities were best represented in the upper salary inge, where they accounted for 441 percent of the workers making over $70,000 a year, due primarily to mental health professionals.

Asian Americans comprised only 1 percent of the state work force, the report said, but are dustered in high-paying jobs such is psychia-trists with the Department of Mental Health.

Included in that upper learning strata were 85 Asian males and 44 Asian females. Others inthat bracket included 155 white males, 30 white females, 8 black males, 2 black females, 6 male Hspanics and 1 female Hispanic.

THE AVERAGE sute worker earns $24,749 ayear, with additional fringe benefits worth $9,156.

Lowest salaries paid were be-tween $6,000 and $7,000. Highest salaries were between $5,000 and $96,000.

Asian males had both the highest median and highest average salary $32,792, and $42,823. Iispanic females had the lowest median and average salaries, $19,871 and $20,262 respectively.

Median salaries are the dividing ine between equal numbers earning higher and lower amounts. Averages are the total payroll of a group di-vided by the number of workers.

THE STATISTICS also showed that the ratio of state employees to 10,000 state residents dropped to 164 per 10,000 compared to a national average of 166 per 10,000 persons. The report cited figures from the U.S. Department of Commerce showing that 37 states had a higher ratio of state employees to 10,000 residents. Alaska had the highest ra-

By Teri Banas staff writer

A prominent Russian defector, now an author and lecturer living in Washington, D.C., decried Oakland University's cancellation of its Russian language program when it was brought to his attention by the department's retiring instructor.

"This is surprising because even in Washington the Congress of the United States wants to encourage the study of the Russian language," said Arkady Shevchenko, a former U.N. delegate for the Soviet Union on a visit to Oakland University.

Shevchenko, who spoke to a student assembly on Tuesday, had been a ranking Soviet diplomat when in the 1970s he became a "reluctant" spy for the United States and later defected. His story has been told in a recently published book titled "Breaking with Moscow."

Department chairman Dave James said the curriculum currently offers one section each of Russian I and II as well as courses in thirdand fourth-level Russian. But enrollment has been on a "steady decline" and now only one student has expressed an interest in majoring in Russian and four to five say they would minor in it.

Lauve tries 'straw poll' with no luck

Tax protester John Lauve, an admitted underdog in the race to be elected GOP gubernatorial nominee, decided to take a "straw poll" of his own Tuesday at a candidates forum sponsored by the Bloomfield GOP Women's Club.

Interjecting a bit of humor into an otherwise dry program, Lauve passed out pieces of paper with the names of each of the five candidates printed on them. Lauve's name appeared first in big, bold block letters.

It didn't do him any good, howev-er. As in other polls, he finished be-hind GOP candidates William Lucas, Dan Murphy and Dick Chrysler.

Clubwoman Iris Spencer thanked Lauve saying the impromptu poll was "rather exciting" but announced the winner as Oakland County execu-tive Dan Murphy with 16 votes.

She said Wayne County executive William Lucas had 15 votes, Brighton businessman Dick Chrysler 10 and state Rep. Colleen Engler and Lauve each had six.

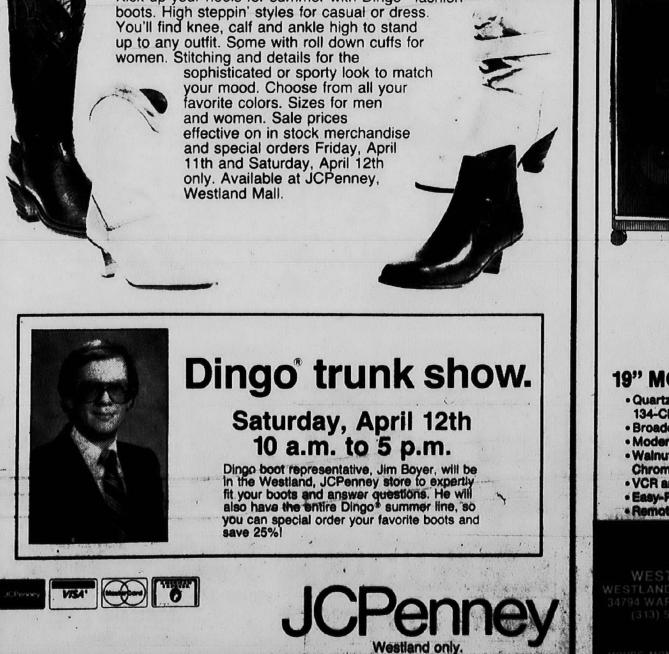

That might have ended it but club historian Bell Hagemeyer found two missing ballots.

The ballots were for Lucas. Despite the announcement of Murphy's victory, "He (Lucas) would have won," Hagemeyer said.

Commissioners to probe Akhtar retirement

By Teri Banas staff writer

Wayne County commissioners objected to a job transfer that gives former Lucas aide Jim Akhtar early pension benefits of $1,800 a month. They called Wednesday for the Ways and Means Committee to investigate.

The probe could result in legislative action that tightens rules over the county's retirement system, said one committee member, Commissioner Richard Manning, D-Redford. "He (Lucas) is filling a job that he Akhtar will never see the desk of. It flies in the face of provisional appointments. Is it a rule that should be used or abused?" Manning said.

The dispute involves a transfer that assistant county executive Akhtar was granted from his $68,000-a-year political appointment to a $37,000-a-year civil service job in the county's risk management department.

COMMISSIONERS are angry because Akhtar, who plans to retire on May 2, will never work in the claims position, but will be able to collect contract with Local 502 of the Serpension benefits immediately upon retirement

Had Akhtar, 45, not received the transfer, he would not be able to collect retirement benefits from the county until age 60. But under a union contract covering the civil service claims position, Akhtar does not have to wait to collect benefits. Instead, he can benefit immediately. No one had previously worked in this particular civil service job. Akhtar has been employed by Wayne County for 221/2 years. He spent most of that time, 191/2 years, in the Sheriff's Department under vice Employees International union. According to county sources, Akhtar could have collected pension benefits under the Local 502 contract. But that would have required his returning to that department for at least two more years to fulfill a 25-year requirement clause. Akhtar, who recently earned a law degree, said he plans to leave county employment to enter a law practice in Birmingham with a former assistant to Oakland County executive Dan Murphy.

COMMISSIONER KAY Beard, D-Inkster, who also sits on the Ways and Means Committee, said the committee asked for a special session next week to question various county officers, including the personnel director and the labor relations director.

"It appears that he's been given special treatment," she said. "Why should he be treated differently than other county employees?"

"We're also asking if this is being done for other political appointees which isn't fair," Beard added. Akhtar has complainted that he's being singled out by critics and that he is merely taking advantage of an existing system.

Some 450 county employees took early retirements - not just Jim Akhtar," he said last week.

State official says forestry industry may appeal limits

By Penny Wright special writer

"The National Forest Management Plan is the hottest issue in Michigan forestry today," said David Olson, a member of the state's Natural Resource Commission. The NRC oversees the operations of the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

According to Olson, the sparks of controversy won't be extinguished when the plan is completed late this summer.

The commissioner hinted that if certain areas of conflict are not resolved, "there will be a formal notice of appeal filed to the plan by the Michigan Forest Products Industry Development Council and possibly the DNR.

Although most forest harvesting is done in the Upper Peninsula, many suburban residents have followed the issue as it has been debated in Ann Arbor.

"MICHIGAN IS in the midst of a major expansion of the forest industry. Over $1.5 billion of forest industry expansion has happened since 1980," said Olson.

"The plan states levels of timber production which are too low to allow achievement of forest industry goals."

DISAGREEMENTS have centered on the issue of timber harvesting. The plan proposes to more than double logging in the forests. The three national forests represent 19 percent of Michigan's commercial forest land

Such groups as the Wilderness Society have opposed the projected timber harvest goals. They contend timber sales in the national forests have lost money over the last six years, and that increased harvests are unnecessary and damaging to the forests' wild resource values.

Timber industry representatives harvest projections are set too low. They say increase logging will improve local economies, contribute toward better wildlife habitats and

Indians reject Washington's invite to join British

Today we are amazed that a 21vear-old, a novice in war and peace, could be a major in the Virginia Militia and, in 1753, in control of a mission of international importance.

However, Washington's journal indicates that, although reasonably confident and courageous, the young Virginian was fully aware of the many difficulties involved and somewhat surprised by his own success:

Thomas Flexner's study, "George Washington - the Forge of Experience," states that this mission of "world-shaking implications" was given to an "obscure youth" from a burg as provincial but from the point-of-view of London and Paris it hinterland, which had to be controlled and traversed so that the Early the next morning Chief Shingass ably abetted by old Chief Pollatka visited the half-king and demanded that he call the group to-gether with the other chiefs and that he exclude the British-Americans from the meeting. The king obeyed and a most raucous argument began again.

Two of the traders, Stewart and Davidson, had some knowledge of the Seneca dialect and listened in on the argument from an opening at the back of the Council House. They heard the word, "kill," "take by surprise," "take the wrong trail,"

"He said that you, George, made and that you would keep your word, and if they killed you they would bring down a whole army of British Morning came and they followed the Half-King along the trail for five long days. Late in the morning of Dec. 4 they saw three golden fleur-de-lis on a field of white silk fluttering in the breeze. Ahead was a heavily fortified log house the French called Fort Venango. It was near Franklin, Pa., and not far from to-day's Venango Historical Museum.

Washington and his cohorts were royally entertained by the French at a supper party. Their host was the remarkable Philip Thomas Joncaire, Sieur de Chabert. SPRING IS for visions - you know, dreams of how this tattered and weary world really should be.

Suck in the fresh air, soak up the warm sun and swear to God it's going to be different. We all do it, even if it's just for a quiet moment with ourselves.

Most folks around here seem to dream big dreams of baseball. Opening day at Tiger Stadium is something more akin to a down-home religious revival than a game

And while I wish our Tigers well, I've got a little different dream for this town and its team

For Detroiters, baseball means something more than just the professional high-stakes tourney into which it has grown.

In Detroit, baseball means 1968 the year this city made peace with itself, when blacks and whites sat down, side by side, and said amen to the year's Winsberg found that Detroit's polarizaprevious disaster - the riots.

That's what baseball means to Detroit. It unified, if only symbolically, a with the likes of Newark and New York, metropolitan area that only months before seemed hopelessly rent asunder.

But it really does take more than a baseball championship to fix a broken town. A recent study by Florida State University geographer Morton Winsberg shows us that.

4 mg WAYNE COUNTY 'You're clogging the drain, Charlie.'

Consolidate drain office

HE COUNTY drain commissioner job was born in the 19th century when every position was elective.

Times change. We quit electing constables decades ago; we dropped township road commissioners in the 1930s; the 1963 state constitution eliminated the highway commissioner and state school superintendent as elective posts. Wayne County managed to get rid of its three-member Road Commission under the new county executive plan.

But the drain commissioner survives. The Wayne County home-rule charter ought to be amended by voters Aug. 5 to eliminate that elective post and consolidate it into general county government

During the Charter Commission's 1981 public hearings, many horror stories were told of the Road Commission paving a road only to have the drain commissioner tear it up for a drain job six months later.

WE ENDORSE the effort by progressive Wayne County commissioners, led by Chairman John Hertel, to place a proposal on the ballot to eliminate the post.

Commissioners Mary Dumas of Livonia and Milton Mack of Wayne have been on the side of the angels in this effort. Indeed, Dumas used to raise the subject when the other 14 commissioners wouldn't touch it.

Commissioners Richard Manning of Redford and Kay Beard of Inkster have hesitated. We urge them to vote yes and then campaign for the proposal

HERTEL HAS drummed up support for the commission plan with a campaign against the performance of incumbent Drain Commissioner Charles Youngblood.

Youngblood's critics have accused him of over-assessing, giving out contracts without competitive bids, comingling funds and keeping poor records. Youngblood himself goes into hiding when reporters and commissioners seek his response.

But it's a political fact that Youngblood faced many of the same accusations in his 1982 renomination campaign, and voters paid no attention to

So it does no good to make Youngblood the central issue and try to bounce him from office. Only a few rural townships, in this metropolitan county of 2.3 million, deal with Youngblood and know or care about him.

Good season may quiet the creatures

"I HOPE THEY don't expect too much.'

These words, spoken by Jim Campbell, president of the Tigers, at the annual winter party at the DAC, came rolling back as the Tigers got going on another campaign.

Well-versed in baseball, Jim seldom speaks out of line, so when he uttered these words it meant that his mind was on the groups that occupy the bleachers and at times make things uncomfortable for the entire team and the folks in the grandstand seats.

Several times last year these bleacher fans became so unbearable that he closed the bleachers for a few days and stopped the sale of certain beverages.

NOW HIS mind, even in the middle of winter, was on those fans again. He had in mind that they may carry on again if the Tigers don't get off to a good start.

It must be remembered that in 1984 they won 35 of their first 50 games and went on to win the pennant and the World Series.

This is a mark that may never be equalled. Sure, the Tigers have most of that team back but the players are older and Campbell hinted that it would be too much to expect to have that record equalled.

It would be great if they could do it but it is doubtful even with the new men in the lineup.

from the training camp. For instance, pect too much."

Kirk Gibson may not be able to play the full time. His shoulder is still sore and his throwing arm may not stand the need for the long throws from right field. Trammel, in the infield, is much the same. One of these poor throws from the outfield could decide a game. And it could happen.

One must remember that Milt Wilcox, who did a great pitching job in 1984, is not around any more. That is, he isn't with the Tigers. The oddity of it is that he may be called upon to face the Tigers when the Seattle team comes to town

HE WAS picked up during the winter and he may have some good pitches in that old arm. It would be odd if he came back to Tiger Stadium and conquored the team that used to be buddies.

Odder things have happened. So, if he does come back and beat the Tigers it wouldn't be too strange. This thought might have been on Campbell's mind, too, when he spoke last winter.

We've got several new faces in the lineup - one particular is at third base. If he fails to show his stuff as he did in spring training, there could be trouble. And perhaps Tom Brookens won't be the all-around man they expect in the infield.

All these things must be taken into consideration in the coming race. So that is why Campbell, in the midst of a winter banquet, and in front of the Tiger owner, when asked what he thought of the coming race, he answer-This time around the Tigers must thought of the coming race, he answer-overcome some injuries and soreness ed: "I hope (the bleacher fans) don't ex-

A decades, a De-There, was a toll gate every five miles. Charge was a penny a mile and % of a cent for each additional passene Detroit and Howell Plank Road ger, according to Michigan History

HISTORICALLY, Wayne County has had three different kinds of public works agencies, born at three different times.

The drain commissioner emerged in agricultural times. The Road Commission grew out of the 1920s fad of giving road work to a semi-autonomous agency. The Public Works Department grew out of the suburbanization of the post-World War II.

You've heard county government referred to as a Hydra-headed monster. Well, that's one reason why. One agency didn't always know what the others were doing.

Waiting in the wings is Livonia Mayor Edward McNamara, a county executive hopeful who has taken over incumbent Executive William Lucas' ballot proposal to let the executive appoint the drain commissioner.

McNamara says - and we agree that the commission's proposal is the broader and better one.

McNamara promises - and we thank him for it - to put his on by petition drive only if Hertel can't get a majority for the commission proposal.

THE DRAIN commissioner's office should be integraterd into general government, not because Charlie Youngblood has messed up, but because all public works functions deserve coordination and unified management.

The time for the Wayne County Commimssion to place an appropriate charter amendment on the ballot is immediately. The date for voters to act is Aug. 5.

Rouge + friends = cleanup

DAVE VRABEL moved from Detroit's westside, where he grew up, to Redford Township a few years ago. But while the location changed, one constant remained in his life.

The Rouge River has always been close to home.

"I played along the Rouge River all my life," he told a group gathered in Livonia last week. "And I see how dirty and crummy it looks. I just want to help."

There were a lot of Dave Vrabels last week-some 35 in all at an organizational meeting of the "Friends of the Rouge." Some were professionally oriented community volunteers, some were not. All shared a common denominator - whether they came from Rochester or Southfield, Novi, Westland or Melvindale-they live along the Rouge River and that connects them.

THE RIVER, which is 125 miles long and looks and smells like an open sewer in parts, has become a celebrated cause these days. It is - environmentally speaking - notorious. It is to water quality what Moammar Khadafy is to common sense and good decency.

But now it has become the focus of local and state cleanup efforts while a joint Canadian-American commission orders that it be cleaned up before its poses a serious threat to the Great Lakes, into which it flows after leaving #### these communities.

Years of neglect, raw sewage dumping and rapid development in the region has made everyone responsible for its present state. And folks along the river basin realize the need for a cohesive, combined effort.

That is what's behind the June 7 cleanup day that community activists and volunteers from all along the Rouge hope will mark the start of an annual observance.

IN THE PROCESS, this notorious, sometimes noxious river, is doing something quite curious. It's bringing together a mix of people from an assortment of backgrounds and private interests.

Take, for example, the collection represented last week. There were those from League of Women Voters, like Helen Boxer and Verona Morse of Southfield, the powerful Michigan Unit-ed Conservation Clubs, the Dearborn Heights-based Wayne County Taxpayers Association, and the UAW.

"The UAW is here, available to helppolitically, influentially and financially. We have a whole staff available in the conservation department to assist. Justshout," said the rep.

There was also Nancy Watkins, anemployee of the Wayne County Parks. and Recreation Department, and a selfstyled "public enemy number one" among developers because of her strong opposition to developments that damage flood plains and river patterns.

There was also Chester Marvin with the Wolverine's 4-Wheel Drive Club. What was his interest? "I was involved with Project Pride. We've pulled out vehicles from the river with our truck since 1979."

Finally, Dick Ralson of Novi said he found himself drawn toward attending because of his active involvement with the Big Brothers, Big Sisters organization.

"If this is feasible, I just think this river could be a fantastic resource for kids. It's part of the good ole days, go down to the river and fish."

In all likelihood, the Rouge will never again be a recommended fishing site But there's nothing wrong in hoping that someday, some kids will grow up — like Dave Vrabel did -- with untainted memories.

Baseball cards: Valuable historical documents

HOW WOULD a scholar feel if someone rolled up one of the Dead Sea Scrolls and played paper-wad football with it? That's how I felt as a kid when another kid would stick a baseball card in his bicycle's spokes to make a "puttputt" motorcycle noise. I thought, 'Doesn't he realize that card is a valuable document to be saved for future reference?"

I put my cards away in a safe, secure cigar box, which turned out to be a very wise move. The cards, dating back as far as 1961, are now collector's items.

The cards' real worth to me, though, is their sentimental value. Baseball cards instilled in me a love of the game, which I've never lost. The cards introduced me to the great players who were then playing - Hank Aaron, Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays, Stan Musial - and the not-so-great players, such as Howie Nunn, Frank Funk and Harry Chiti.

The cards had a picture on the front, and career statistics, cartoons and a little bit of prose about the player on the back. The cards offered no pronunciation guide, however, so we kids were on our own. I pronounced Bob Clemente (that's how they listed Roberto Clemente on the 1961 card) as "Bob Clement," Carl Yastrzemski as "Carl Yasterzemeski," and Hank Aaron as "Hank Ah-ron."

THE MORE inept the ballplayer was, the more you would get to know him on an intimate, personal level through his baseball card. Instead of writing about his achievements - there weren't any - the card writers would have to write personal things.

So we learned that Johnny Romano, Cleveland Indians catcher, "spends his spare time constructing things out of wood." Wynn Hawkins, Indians pitcher, "attended college in Ohio" and "enjoys going to the movies and reading books." We were told of Pittsburgh Pirate rookie pitcher Earl Francis' career plans. "After baseball, he would like to be-come a barber." He no doubt set up shop very soon after that card was printed.

The card of Hal W. Smith, Pittsburgh Pirates catcher, says, "Believe it or not, Hal is a good cook." I had no trouble believing it. Ron Moeller, Los Angeles Angels pitcher, "played against Russ Nixon and Dick Drott in school." That's not the kind of thing I would have admitted to.

Carroll Hardy, Boston Red Sox outfielder, "has a large gun collection at home." As a lifetime .215 hitter, he probably needed the guns to defend himself from irate fans. Don Giles, 6foot-6-inch Red Sox catcher, "is the tallest catcher in the majors." But not for very long, judging by Don's statistics. Bill Short, New York Yankees pitcher, "resembles Whitey Ford in style" but, alas, not in substance.

The card for Angels first baseman Steve Bilko, however, fails to note an important piece of information: He was the only major leaguer ever to have a situation-comedy character named after him, The creators of Phil Silvers' Sgt. Bilko were big baseball fans, and they named their character after the relatively obscure Steve Bilko. Sometimes I wonder what the players on the cards are doing now. Does Bob "Hawk" Taylor still find fishing a re-laxing hobby? Does Mel Roach continue to play golf "whenever he gets a chance?" I wonder what Jose Valdiviel-so thought of the latest Academy Award coloritors dince he was "a big for do selections, since he was "a big fan of motion pictures." Did Eddie Bressoud, who "attended L.A. City College for four years," ever get that elusive de-gree? Is Dave Wickersham, at age 50, still "always willing to learn?"

I don't know, but I'm glad I still have their cards on file. You never know when someone's going to ask how many hits Julio Becquer got in 1960.

Canton left off freeway signs

To the editor:

Marie Chestney's lead article "At the Crossroads" caught my attention so I bought a copy of the Observer. I have lived in Canton for five years and have observed the growth and changes she mentioned.

I'm just beginning to feel like I belong here. That can be dangerous, since one begins to take things for grapted. I believe we need to constantly remind ourselves that not everyone in our midst feels "at home" or like they belong.

That is why you have been chosen to receive this letter of complaint. Understand, you are not to blame but you are the first name I found to direct my letter to. Also, I believe journalists care enough to get some action.

With all this wonderful development and growth going on around Canton, don't you think someone could get us on the map and on exit signs at Ford Road?

Our family comes from the Philadelphia area, and Indianapolis, and many other friends from all over the country and literally from around the world (we used to live in the Philippines) and frequently these people ask, "Where's Canton?" Even the AAA road maps don't show Canton.

A friend from Chicago asked to have a routing done by her AAA off-ice and was informed that there is no Canton, Mich. A Malaysian Air System pilot, a friend from Kualalampur, would have visited us by surprise if he had only known that Canton was near the Metro Airport, but instead he phoned us on his way out of Seattle . . . and there are more accounts.

Would you believe the only references to Canton are the two signs like the one in Steve Fecht's photo from Joy Road and at the southern boundary going north? The Ford Road exit mentions Westland and Garden City, which are miles to the east. Even the M-14 exit to Ford Road mentions only Westland (12 miles away) with nothing showing that one must first pass through Canton

Sheldon plan to add danger

To the editor:

(We the members of the Forest Trails submit this open letter regarding our feelings on the paving through of Sheldon Center Road.)

Several years ago, 1976 to be exact, Sheldon Center Road was considered to be paved through to Canton Center Road. The studies took into consideration that Warren Road was not to be paved for some time to come, and with the growing local subdivisions, was thought to be appropriate. The paving became a legal issue and was in litigation until recently. The road is now scheduled to be paved in about four months or

New studies of traffic patterns and flow have not been performed since the paving of Warren Road. Many feel that Sheldon Center need not be paved to Canton Center but only paved in its existing form but with permanent concrete surface. The rational is listed below:

Paving Sheldon Center Road through to Canton Center Road causes the following concerns to our community:

• Cutting into the playfield at Gallimore School and creating a potentially dangerous combination of traffic, predominantly comprised of teenagers from the high school who will, no doubt, be cruising back and forth

• Creating additional traffic to our neighborhood liquor store (Canton Center Market), which borders the school to the north and the neighborhood church to the south.

• Further congesting the traffic on Sheldon Road, which is where the money really ought be spent anyway. (A point to let Canton Supervisor Jim Poole in on).

 Property devaluation after this inappropriate situation becomes Canton's Folley.

· Less wooded natural land that far exceeds the want and not the demonstrated need for the proposed action.

Let's voice our opinion and let the people at Canton Township Hall and Wayne County Road Commission know the extent of liability and responsibility they face if this road is put in. Call!

Letter writer fixes record

To the editor:

May I correct an oversight in my last letter of Jan. 31? I apologize for stating that Donna Ford (among others) was burdening the taxpayers by suing the township with her "emotional stress" lawsuit.

I was not aware that Donna landed in a hospital with a heart attack. If so, it was not an everyday emotional stress but an excessive one. In such a case, Donna is truly entitled to reimbursement. I apologize to Donna for this inaccuracy.

Because of misinformation given me, I also stated that former Treasurer Maria Sterlini has not sued. I now understand that she is filing a libel suit.

May I Take this opportunity to point out the misleading statement by resident Alex Moore who stated in March that "Obviously she (Linda Chuhran) didn't feel the former clerk was doing a good job or most likely she would not have run."

May I remind Alex that the last clerk was the popular John Flodin who died while in office. Therefore, it was not a case of a former clerk not doing a good job.

John Petonsy, in a rebuttal to my letter, stated that in his phone call to Chuhran: "It was told to me (Petonsy) that she is not asking for any money in reimbursement."

Come on, John. Is her lawyer working for nothing? If Linda is so conscientious in spending only her own money, why did she fill her car tank with taxpayer's gasoline at the township pump after the Board of Trustees gave her $200 to use for such expenses?

What about the $4,392 we taxpay- : ers already paid for her lawsuit? And how about Linda's attorney, Alan Helmkamp's, threat in January that if the case continues, he expected Chuhran to seek reimbursement from the board?

BUDGET CUTS - By a vote of 230 for and 154 against, the House accepted the Senate version of a $25 billion deficit-reduction measure, ending several months of dispute over the so-called "reconciliation bill" (HR 3128) and clearing it for President Reagan's signature.

The final product approved by this vote uses $19 billion in spending cuts and $6 billion in revenue hikes during fiscal 1986-88 to reach the $25 billion figure.

Among its most disputed provisions, the bill sets new terms for distributing lucrative offshore oil royalties between the federal government and certain coastal states, denies federal workers more attractive price-support program in a way that reportedly pleases both farmers and cigarette manufacturers, and makes permanent the 16-cents-a-pack U.S. tax on cigarettes.

The House had wanted to require all states to extend basic welfare benefits (Aid for Families with Dependent Children or AFDC) to certain two-parent families in which the main wage-earner is jobless. But the Senate prevailed with its proposal to continue giving states an option on whether to qualify such families for welfare.

Citing the welfare issue, Beau

Boulter, R-Texas, said he would vote for the bill because he does not want to "increase the size of the welfare state, bringing more people onto the welfare rolls .

Opponent Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said he would vote against the bill largely because it omitted the House language requiring all states to provide welfare to jobless twoparent families that can qualify for it. "I do not think it is right to single out specific states or other geographical regions for special treatment under our national entitlement programs," he said.

Members voting yes wanted to accept Senate language in several disputed areas and pass the fiscal 1986 reconciliation bill.

Voting yes: William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

Voting no: Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, Sander Levin, D-Southfield.

Not voting: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, William Ford, D-Taylor. SENATE

CONSTITUTIONAL AMEND-MENT - By a vote of 66 for and 34 against, the Senate failed to achieve the two-thirds majority (67 votes) it needed to pass and send to the House a proposed constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

gressional consideration this year of the long-simmering issue. The measure (SJ Res 225) requires each year's budget to be in balance except during declared war or when threefifths majorities in both houses agree to deficit spending.

Meantime, many state legislatures are pursuing a different route to the same goal. Thirty-two of the required 34 states (a two-thirds majority) have called on Congress to hold a constitutional convention for debating a balanced-budget constitutional amendment.

Supporter Paul Simon, D-Ill., said: 'Here, my friends, you have the opportunity to say, on the record, we must balance the budget. We do not say how it should be done, we just say it must be done .

Opponent Gary Hart, D-Colo., said the requirement that three-fifths majorities in the House and Senate must approve deficit spending in a given year "would be tyranny by minority . . . enabling senators representing only 10 percent of America's population to control all budget and tax policies for all Americans."

Senators voting yes favored the balanced-budget constitutional amendment.

Voting no: Carl Levin, Donald Riegle.

CONTRA AID - By a vote of 53 This apparently ended serious con- for and 47 against, the Senate approved President Reagan's request for $100 million in additional U.S. aid to the "contra" rebels who are fighting to destabilize the Marxist Sandinista government of Nicaragua

The measure (SJ Res. 283) re-leases $25 million immediately to the contras for non-lethal activity and defensive military purposes. Beginning July 1, if Reagan determines meaningful negotiations with the Sandinistas cannot be conducted, the remainder of the aid package would be released in installments of $15 million every three months.

Also, the Senate language mandates reforms in the makeup and operation of the contra army.

The issue now returns to the House, which on April 15 is scheduled to reconsider its recent vote that defeated Reagan's bid for $70 million in arms money and 430 million in non-military aid to the contras. Congress last approved military aid to the anti-Sandinista rebels in 1983.

Opponent Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said: '$100 million is not going to do the job - everybody knows that," and that "U.S. money is going to be followed by more U.S. money, then by U.S. advisers, then by U.S. troops."

Senators voting yes wanted to pro-vide $100 million to the contras. Voting no: Levin, Riegle.

Reducing threat of a break-in

By Julie Brown staff writer

With the summer months approaching, many Plymouth-Canton families will be thinking of vacation trips. Travels to the seashore, campground or other vacation spot will provide a much-needed break from the pressures of work and school.

When planning those trips, thoughts of crime prevention may not be high on the list. It's a lot more fun to think about vacation pleasures. Even so, a few moments spent on crime prevention can save family members from property loss and needless aggravation later on.

Homes that appear to be occupied are less likely to be targeted for break-ins.

"Anything that's going to give the appearance that the home is occupied" will help, according to Officer Robert Smith of the Plymouth Township Police Department.

What it all boils down to is giving any appearance that the person is actually there," said Officer Eddie Tanner of the Canton Police Department Lights by a home's entrances are helpful. A photoelectric cell which reacts to sunlight can be used for outdoor entrances. The lights going on and off will help give the home an occupied look; the light provided will also make many burglars less willing to hang around.

"CRIMINALS DO not like to work in the light," the Canton officer said.

Indoor lights can be put on timers. When there are lights on, it indicates there are people there," said Officer Robert Scoggins of the Plymouth City Police Department.

Those timers should be set to go on and off at different times, Canton Township's Tanner said, to give the appearance that someone is moving around in the home. A timer on a clock radio can also be useful.

Plymouth Township's Smith existing or potential security probdvised setting timers to correspond iodically. He or she can also open the garage door briefly - keeping a close eye on it - to give the appearance that someone's home.

Tanner also suggested having a friend or neighbor park his or her car in the home's driveway periodically. Doing so will give the appear-ance that the home is occupied or that someone is visiting.

That friend or trusted neighbor should have a telephone number where the residents can be reached. It's also important to leave keys to the home with the friend or neighbor. Police may need to get inside the home, Tanner said, to see that everything's OK.

Plymouth Township's Smith suggested that residents contact local police to make the planned absence from the home known. Police officers can provide assistance with crime prevention planning. Knowing that residents will be away also allows the police to make arrangements to have unoccupied homes checked periodically.

Plymouth's Scoggins agreed that contacting local police before leaving on a vacation trip is a good idea. He also advised against putting a message on a telephone answering machine to indicate that residents are away.

'Make sure they don't put anything on there about them being on vacation." The answering machine can be disconnected before travelers leave home, he said.

Just before leaving on a vacation trip, it's a good idea to go through the home for a last-minute check. All windows and doors should be checked, to make sure they're securely locked and that those locks are in good working order.

Canton Township's Tanner suggested that residents use the time before a vacation to check on home security. The Canton Police Department offers a free crime prevention survey, which is designed to identify lems. For additional information,

IT'S FUN to talk about vacation plans with friends and co-workers. Soon-to-be travelers should, however, avoid advertising their vacation plans to all within earshot. Loose lips may not sink ships, but they can make a break-in that much more likely

"Make sure it's only close neighbors, close relatives, people you feel you can trust," Plymouth's Scoggins said.

That neighbor or friend can remove circulars and bring in the mail, Tanner said. He advised against having that person pile the mail in a highly visible spot near a door or window. Tanner also suggested packing up the family car inside of the garage, rather than outdoors where visibility is greater Storing valuables in a safe-deposit box while on vacation is also a good idea, the Canton officer said. Jewelry, spare checks and credit cards, and other valuables can be locked up beyond the reach of burglars.

· Making sure that empty trash cans aren't left out for all to see.

· Having vehicles serviced before leaving on vacation.

"Of course, they should always make sure they have their vehicle serviced properly," Scoggins said. We highly recommend that they get their vehicle serviced."

Mother and son work toward full-scale recovery

By Maureen Aitken special writer

ANE MILOSCH and her husband, Mac, stopped in Alabama for the evening of April 23, 1983, to rest before heading to Florida, where they expected to spend a warm, peaceful vacation. She was asleep at 4 a.m., trying to rest before the final drive to Florida, when the phone rang.

It was the couple's son Greg. He said that Steve, their 23-year-old son, was on his way from work at General Motors in Flint when his car crashed on southbound I-75 at a sharp turn near the Clarkston exit. The bad news was that Steve was pronounced dead on arrival. The good news wasn't much better.

The doctor revived Steve, but the accident that had thrown him 200 feet left him in a coma and in very critical condition at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

That moment stays with her like a relentless nightmare, a nightmare that was followed by an endless ride to the hospital, where family members tried to brace her for the worst. 'Mom, he really looks bad," her daughter said.

But no warning could have braced her for the sight of machines breathing for her son, and stitches about a foot long exposed from his shaven head.

"I remember seeing him and then two nurses on either side of me holding me up and taking me out of the room," she said. "And I remember that I cried, it was hard to believe that my son was fighting for his life." The doctors gave it to her straight. They weren't giving any hope.

STEVE, THE doctors told her and her, husband, had received a massive blow to the head called a closed head injury. He had two blood clots and his skull was fractured. In this case, they said, the fracture was a blessing that gave Steve's swollen brain the extra room it needed.

Steve would remain in that same bed in a coma for 51/2 weeks. During that time Milosch's life changed drastically. She stopped going to her job and moved into the hospital. While other family members realized that normalcy was the best therapy, she refused to leave the waiting room, unless it was to see Steve.

Milosch describes that time as a clump of 10-minute visits between the hours of 10 a.m. and 8 p.m., three Code Blues and an intense amount of prayer. During this time she could not read or plan any sort of normal life, it all rested on Steve. All she could do was sit in the waiting room with her number-one antagonist, the clock.

"It's stressful to sit in a waiting room and all there is is a clock," she said. "And it doesn't move."

What Milosch couldn't comprehend at that time was that Steve had become another number in a national statistic. He was now one of 30,000 to 50,000 people who survive brain damage injury and he was one of the 1,250 new traumatic head injury cases caused by motorcycle or car accidents.

Steve's closed head injury meant his wound did not penetrate through the skull and into the brain, but rather the damage was caused by the brain hitting against the skull.

Milosch would learn much of this later on, but now all she concentrated on was the emotion and the hope that Steve would soon regain consciousness. She said that the day Steve did come out of his coma was unlike any movie or soap opera could have depicted it. Instead of the comatose victim suddenly waking up and returning to normal, Steve only opened his eyes.

Much later, Steve's mouth gave a low, robot-like sound. The doctors told her about the process of recovery. It would be slow, very slow, and it would require much training, drive and patience. She wanted to know if Steve suffered brain damage.

"I KNOW NOW that it was a stupid question," she said. "He didn't talk, he still had a tube in his throat, tional and speech therapy while in the hospital. When he left, Steve made progress, but he was still in a wheelchair, still trying desperately to become whole again.

The family didn't have it easy either. Mother was being missed around the house and the emotional strain was putting unneeded pressure on the family. Milosch said, for example, that it took much pain and communication to bring her out of her compulsive monitoring and caution toward Steve. She finally realized, however, that Steve had to be given the freedom to fail, if he was ever going to learn.

And learn he did. After almost three years, Steve is able to do just about anything he did before the accident, although he now has to work harder to do it. He is back at school at OCC in Auburn Hills and once again in charge of his own life.

But there are deficits. The right side of his body is still weaker than

ory. But he is driving again. His mother says Steve still fights as hard as ever to return to how he was before the accident, and she is proud of his strength and determination through the whole ordeal.

Steve is not the only one who has grown because of the accident.

MILOSCH WENT back to work at a new job called Total Therapy Management.

She is a lecturer and volunteer, she understands that the draining experience she has gone through can be used to help others in the same position. Communication and understanding are sometimes all it takes, and all that can be done.

She first started to do public rela-tions for Total Therapy Management where 18 staff members help 25-30 brain-injured clients in Oak Park and nine staff members teach 20-25

Career not always a vocation

A RECENT meeting with graduating college students, I asked what factors led them to select their careers in business or the professions or other enterprises.

In the responses of the majority, one heard references to financial reward, security or opportunities for advancement in the corporate structure. while these motivations, practical and realistic, are not be faulted, I noted the absence of a sense of vocation. Vocation comes from the Latin "vocare" - "to call" and suggests that one's life-work is a calling, the fulfillment of a mission.

Anyone with a sense of vocation does in life what he feels needs to be done. He works for the love of the task and the satisfaction that comes with it. Often, the drive for economic gain and for security blunts our perception of "calling" and thereby denies our dreams and prevents us from achieving zest and meaning in

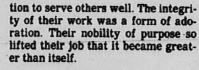

Constant of the second

FOR CENTURIES, religion used the word vocation to mean a religious vocation, a divine summons, a sacred mission. But I suggest that the term now admits to a larger meaning.

Our vocation is to be found in our inner inclination, aptitude and dedication. It is what we can do well as craftsman, teacher, chef, engineer, surgeon — anything we have a special talent for. I knew a walter, a taxidriver, a receptionist, a tailor, and a barber who turned their humble jobs into vocations, or "callings" by the way they approached them.

They worked out of love of the task, a desire to excel, and a dedica-

Fun fair helps church project

Last September, Mt. Hope Congregational Church in Livonia set on an exciting but uncharted journey that will test human resourcefulness.

At their annual membership "Rally Day," the church distributed $7 cash to each person in attendance. The sermon that day centered around the parable of Jesus in which a rich man gave charge of his resources into the hands of his servants. Their task was in invest and increase and otherwise be "faithful" stewards of their responsibilities. The church members were to do likewise with their money.

In September, there will be another special service at which the "God's money" and its increase will be collected.

IN THE MEANWHILE, Mt. Hope parishioners have been working hard at carrying out the role of faithful stewards. They have made crafts, offered services and purchased items for re-sale.

One of the outlets for all this activity and work will come Saturday, April 26, at the church's first Fun Fair, a family-oriented event that will be open to the public and offering an opportunity to shop special booths, partake of homemade foods tween 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Wednesday or Thursday.

COVENANT COMMUNITY

Covenant Community Church, 25800 Student, Redford, will have its Annual Spring Missionary Conference, " 'Til the Whole World Knows,' through Sunday, April 13. The Rev. Larry Fehl, U.S. director of SIM International, will speak at the 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. services Sunday, April 13. For more information about the conference schedule, call the church at 535-3100.

ST. PAUL PRESBYTERIAN

St. Paul Presbyterian Church, 27475 Five Mile, Livonia, is conducting a series of historical services at the 9:30 and 11 a.m. worship services on Sundays. Each week the church will look at a different era of history, and the services will be conducted in a manner similar to that time, with appropriate music. ## Switch is on to 15-year mortgages conventional mortgages matured in 15 years. In 1985, that percentage more than doubled to 13.8 percent. Fifteen-year mortgages proved more popular among repurchasers than among first-time buyers, but first-time buyers were still responsible for 34 percent of the 15-year mortgages written in 1985.

The principal advantage of the 15year mortgage is its rapid equity build-up from loan payments. With interest rates at 10 percent, the borrower amortizing a loan over 15 years will have accumulated 51/2 times more equity in five years just by loan repayment than if the borrower had taken out a 30-year loan.

Lenders typically offer slightly lower interest rates on 15-year mortgages. But this small break on the interest rate is not enough to offset the higher monthly payment per thousand dollars of loan amount. For

In 1983, only 6.2 percent of all example, a 30-year mortgage at 12 percent carries a monthly payment of $10.29 per thousand dollars of loan amount, while a 15-year mortgage at 111/2 carries a monthly payment of $11.68 per thousand dollars.

> SO TO MAKE monthly payments comparable between 15- and 30-year mortgages, borrowers using the shorter-term loan must buy less expensive housing or make larger downpayments. Otherwise the larger monthly payment would oblige them to spend a larger percentage of their income on the mortgage payment. In 1985, home buyers with 15-year mortgages tended to be slightly older than those being financed for 30 years. But in most cases, the 15-year mortgagors had lower incomes. Although it might be expected that lower incomes would be associated with lower purchase prices, borrowers choosing 15-year mortgages bought even less expensive homes relative to their incomes than their counterparts with 30-year mortgages.

Fifteen-year mortgagors made relatively higher down payments than 30-year mortgagors did. The combination of lower interest rates, lower home prices, higher down payments and lower rates typically produced lower monthly payments with 15-year loans than for those with 30year loans.

And home buyers with 15-year mortgages tended to find less expensive homes among existing housing stock, particularly in that part of the housing stock built 25 or more years ago. Relatively few first-time buyers bougat new homes or condominiums with 15-year mortgages.

Large down payments offset mortgage rates

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

The return of lower interest rates has brought a sense of deja vu to the home-buyer's market. But more stringent qualifying standards could be smudging an otherwise rosy picture

Traditional methods of home financing with short-term mortgages and spending less income toward housing are back, according to study by the United States League of Savings Institutions on 1985 house-financing data.

The results could mean increases in both home equity as loans are paid off more quickly and in personal finances because prospective buyers have to save substantially more for a down payment.

But falling mortgage rates do not necessarily mean houses are more affordable. The average conventional mortgage payment in 1985 was $865 compared to $845 in 1984, indicating buyers were opting for more expensive homes. In the Detroit area, interest rates averaged 11.37 percent for the last half of 1985. In 1984, they averaged 11.56 percent.

Area banks and mortgage companies, for the most part, back up the study. The major exception to the trends set in the past few years is the vanishing of adjusted-rate mortgages. Adjusted-rate mortgages, though initially offering a lower rate (8½ percent at one bank compared to about 10 percent for fixed-rate mortgages), can fluctuate upward with inflation. A fixed-rate mortgage remains the same throughout the loan period. ARMs captured twothirds of the conventional home mortgage market in 1985, more than twice the 31.9 percent in 1983.

BUT THIS YEAR fixed-rate mortgages are what's in demand at area lending institutions.

"There's no risk involved like there is with the ARMs," said Tom

'New standards for qualifying for a mortgage are now in place --- and are the equivalent, in terms of income needed to qualify, of a 11/2 percent increase in interest.'

U.S. Housing Markets

Fitzsimmons, mortgage representative for the National Bank of Detroit office in Farmington. "Now it's more popular because the fixed rate has come down.'

The 15-year mortgage appears to be supplanting the popularity of ARMs

"Since the first of the year, I'd say 99 percent of our business has been with the 15-year fixed rate," said Ken Nelson, branch manager of First Federal Savings of Michigan in Westland. "There's very few adjusted-rate mortgages around."

But 30-year fixed-rate mortgages have one major advantage - lower monthly payments. The monthly payment on a $96,000 mortgage with a 15-year mortgage at 10¼ percent is $1,046.37. The 30-year monthly payment at 10% percent is $895.72, a $150 difference. Lending institutions generally offer lower rates for 15-year mortgages than for 30-year loans.

"The -difference in the monthly payment isn't dramatic," said William Yaw, director of marketing for First Standard Federal in Troy, "but the interest paid is significant." (See accompanying story.)

ALTHOUGH LOWER interest rates would seemingly mean more buyers could qualify for loans, a new development has canceled out for many purchasers the effect of the interest rates. According to the publication, U.S. Housing Markets, "new standards for qualifying for a mortgage are now in place — and are the equivalent, in terms of income needed to qualify, of a 1<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> percent in-crease in interest."

* 1C

In 1985, lenders reverted to the 28percent-of-income limit that had been followed in the 1970s. Translated into income dollars, the publication reports that the borrower now needs 3.57 times his annual payment instead of the former three times to be considered for a mortgage. From late 1980 to early 1985, a borrower without heavy debt obligations could qualify for a conventional mortgage first-year payments were as high as 33<sup>1/3</sup> percent of gross income. Even Federal Housing Administration and Veteran's Administration loans, which always were more lenient in income standards, have tightened their guidelines. Previously a borrower could qualify with payments 40 percent of their income and sometimes higher. Since last year, there has been a firm 38 percent ceiling with some exceptions, according to the publication.

These new limits were not arbitrarily imposed. They are a reaction to the high rate of delinquencies and foreclosures of the last few years. There is no longer enough appreciation in home prices to bail out overextended buyers."

Area lenders agreed.

"It's getting hard to approve a loan with a 5 percent downpayment these days," said Nelson.

Another aspect of home buying age of the buyers - seems to be changing. Contrary to the League of Savings report, which said the median age for a person purchasing was 36 in 1985, many home buyers appear to be younger, according to those selling area real estate.

Consumers sees area stake in Midland plant

By Tim Richard staff writer

Even southeastern Michigan residents who buy electricity from Detroit Edison have a stake in Consumers Power Co.'s plan to convert its idle Midland nuclear plant to a gas-fired generator, said CP Chairman William T. McCormick Jr.

The new chief of the state's largest utility called a news conference in Detroit Monday to announce a request for a 25-percent electric rate increase over five years for outstate customers. CP's natural gas customers in the metro Detroit suburbs, however, would face no rate inсгеазе

The rate increase, if granted by the state Public Service Commission, would generate more than $500 million in revenue. The revenue would be invested in converting the $4 billion, unfinished, nuclear plant at Midland to a natural gas combined-cycle facility by 1990.

The PSC said it has no authority over new power plant construction, other than to set electric rates to be paid by customers.

The board of directors of Consumers Power, meeting in Jackson Tuesday, approved the plan.

"Michigan's future power requirements should be met by facilities in the state for reasons of economy, reliability and security of supply," McCormick said.

BUT WHEN nearly all of the tricounty area gets electricity from Edison, why did McCormick make his announcement in the heart of Edison's territory? He gave four rea-

• The Midland plant, abandoned two years ago, would be converted to gas. Existing gas facilities would be better utilized, and distribution costs would be reduced at least $15 million a year, McCormick said. (CP's 1985 gas revenues totaled $1.5 billion. The savings would be 1 percent.)

• The utility can't go into the capital market for conversion funds. Selling stock is impossible because common stockholders suffered a 1985 loss of $4.42 a share. "We can't borrow - our bonds are below investment grade," McCormick said.

But by using electricity revenues to make the 41/2-year conversion, he said, CP could restore itself to fiscal health and find acceptance in the capital market in a future year.

 CP and Edison are part of a seven-state grid - the Michigan Electric Power Coordination Center located in Ann Arbor - that distributes electricity where it's needed during peak demands, McCormick said. If CP has adequate capacity, then so does Edison, he reasoned. He predicted supply would outpace demand in a decade, even with Edison's Fermi II plant coming onstream

· Many companies which do business statewide are headquartered in metro Detroit. CP's electricity sales rose 12 percent in four years, pacing the state's general recovery, he said. McCORMICK, 42, was an executive of the parent company of Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. until a

He succeeds John D. Selby as chairman of CP. Selby was forced out in the political-financial flap over the cost overruns of the Midland nuclear plant. McCormick said CP engineers and outside experts analyzed many options before deciding the cheapest to ratepayers and in terms of construction time - was to convert the Midland plant to natural gas in two stages

Cost to electric customers would be a 5 percent increase a year for five years, or 25 percent.

Current average bill is $36.30 a month. After five years, the CP electric customer would see the household cost rise by $9.08 to $45.35.

REJECTED OPTIONS were:

• Abandoning the nuclear plant entirely. Despite counter statements from the attorney general's office, McCormick insisted CP would be entitled to a 19 percent rate increase to recover the cost from customers. "Anyone who thinks we will get nothing for abandoning Midland is kidding himself," he said.

• Buying power from other sources - a 33-percent rate increase. This breaks down to a 19percent increase for abandoning the nuclear plant and a 14-percent increase for buying electricity elsewhere.

 Converting to coal — a 25 percent rate increase, plus longer conversion time and a dirtier plant when completed.

· Completing the nuclear plant 41 percent more from customers.

Unit trusts can ease tax bite

My income isn't really big, but it looks like it will grow some more, and I'm beginning to get conscious of how high my tax rate is getting.

Could you tell me some ways I could invest that would be pretty safe and give me some tax-free income?

Along with your question in the mail came a copy of the new Market Letter distributed by the Chicagobased brokerage firm, Wayne Hummer & Co. They have a section on unit investment trusts, and these could be one answer to your question.

A unit trust is an investment company that builds a diversified portfolio of tax-exempt bonds and then offers units of these portfolios to investors.

The unit trust is a way for an individual to spread a small investment over a number of different issues, without becoming involved in the selection of individual bonds, in the collection of interest, in the cashing in of bonds at maturity and the reinvestment of money.

THERE IS a minimum investment of $5,000 required in unit trusts, but there are many features of interest of $10,000. Although the portfolio to the investor. You can choose from those that pay interest monthly, quarterly or semi-annually.

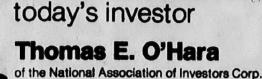

You can also choose from units that mature in the short, medium, or long term. Short-term maturities average six years, medium 10 years and long-term average 30 years. The interest rates are in the 8-percent range for short term and 9% percent for long term.

SOME TRUSTS are insured by private insurers. When the tax-exempt status of this income is considered, it is quite good.

Your broker should be able to give you a list of unit trusts that are available and a description of the features of each.

Hummer's letter also contains a model portfolio for the investment deals with taxable investments, it appears to have two appeals to the conservative investor. The quality of the companies is excellent, suggesting that the risk is not great. And the possibility of growth or slowly increasing value in the years ahead appears good.

THE MODEL calls for buying 60 American Hospital Supply at $34, 30 General Electric at $63, 60 Hewlett Packard at $35, 40 PepsiCo at $49 and 50 Schlumberger Ltd. at $39.

The portfolio's annual dividend inis $273, and the companies come have dividend reinvestment plans where dividends can be reinvested without cost.

The recent growth rates of those companies suggest there could be enough appreciation which, along with reinvested dividends, could result in the portfolio's value doubling in a seven- to eight-year period. Keep in mind that tax-free investing is fine, so long as it reduces your tax liability and not your after-tax income.

You could be better off, over the long run, with a taxable investment. You might pay more taxes, but you might also have more left.

Company pushes) wood-chip power

At least one outstate industry will fight Consumers Power Co.'s request for a 25-percent, $560 million rate increase to convert the idle Midland plant to gas-fired electric use.

Thursday, April 10, 1986 O&E

Norval K. Morey, chairman of the board of Morbark Industries Inc., said wood chips could fuel industrial boilers cheaper than natural gas. Morey said his company manufactures timber-harvesting equipment that makes it possible to "utilize junk wood, currently endangering our forests and woodlots."

IN REPLY, Consumers Power Chairman William McCormick scoffed that "there are not enough wood chips within 500 miles to power the state's needs."

McCormick said Morbark's idea would put barely "a small dent in the energy capacity." A CP spokesman said that in the 1970s, CP planned a small wood chip plant in the western Michigan town of Hershey. Because of "intense local opposition" from "locals who were afraid we'd take their wood." the utility dropped the idea.

MICHIGAN, said Morey, has 20 million acres representing two bil-lion tons of wood fiber. "As much as half is junk wood that needs to be removed as a source of energy.

"Utilizing proper forest management; a conservative 100 million tons can be removed annually on a sustained basis - equivalent to 150 million barrels of oil available annually.

"Every county but Wayne and of Monroe can easily support a 10-20-14 megawatt plant fueled by wood W7 chips to provide steam heat and electricity. The energy provided will 14 be far less costly than that generated 42 by imported crude oil or large nucle-ar facilities ar facilities.

"WOOD CHIPS are being used toola cogenerate steam and electricity in"us more than 75 small- and medium- " sized power plants either under construction or in use throughout the struction or in use throughout the U.S.," he said, citing: • Dow Corning, in a privately fi-nanced power plant across the road from the Midland plant, has been supplying 100 percent of its consid-erable steam and electricity needs for four wasne by huming model ching for four years by burning wood chips harvested from junk wood in nearby woodlots. Dow Corning sells its sur-plus electricity to the Consumers (S Power grid Power grid.

· Central Michigan University's 18,000-student campus began to "fire up chips" a year ago. Producing steam from wood chips will save CMU $20 million in the first 10 years while improving forests and woodlots within a 50-mile radius of Mount Pleasant.

• Morbark Industries, itself; started heating half of the 700,000-2 square-foot manufacturing plant in Winn with hot water heated by a wood chip-fired boiler on Jan. 1. Savings over gas from Consumers Pow-er have already paid for the conversion.

'Split Second' keeps cropping up

By Ethel Simmons staff writer

CTOR JOHN AMOS, who is starring in "Split Second" at the Birmingham Theatre, had his first contact with the police drama a few years back when John Danelle, who plays his son in the show, sent a copy of the script to his agent.

Unfortunately, said Amos in a backstage interview, "The script sat on my agent's desk for about eight months before I saw it. By that time the play had opened in New York." Losing the chance to star in the off-Broadway production was not the only thing Amos missed out on regarding the play. He also lost the opportunity for the screen rights, which he would have liked. "The screen rights were acquired by Mo-town," he said. "Berry Gordy of Motown will produce the film."

"That precipitated firing my agent," he declared, recalling the incident.

AMOS NEXT TRIED producing and directing "Split Second" with the Bahamian Repertory Company, where he has directed "Twelve Angry Men" and "And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little."

"It was aborted three or four days before it opened," he explained. He had to leave the Bahamas in order to work on a TV job, on "Hunter." He has a daughter in college and a son who will be starting college soon, and it was important to him to take the job that would put dollars in the bank for their education.

Amos got another chance to appear in "Split Second" when he was asked to perform with the Los Angeles company in Santa Monica. For his performance last year as the retired veteran police officer, Rusty Johnson, Amos "was honored in re-ceiving the NAACP Black Image award.'

See review of 'Split Second' on following page.

Danelle originated the role of Johnson's son, Val, in the off-Broadway production of "Split Second." Earlier, Amos and Danelle played father and son in a Broadway production of a comedy "Tough to Get Help."

At the Birmingham Theatre, for the first time, they are together performing as father and son in "Split Second.

AMOS DESCRIBED the two characters' roles as a difference in two kinds of morality. "I represent the older morality, 'If you've done it, own up to it.' My son represents today's morality, 'Hey, if nobody's watching, do it!"

In "Split Second," Danelle as a young police officer finds himself in a situation where he makes a decision in a split second and has to live with the consequences.

"It's very interesting," Amos said, talking about the plot, while trying not to give it away. "In the course of arresting a felon, who is stealing a car, the situation escalates into a racial harangue."

That's what the play's opening moments are about. Other action on stage takes place in the police station and homes of the police officer and his son. The drama concerns a question of morality, after the officer shoots the suspect.

"I've never seen a play where the audience becomes so emotionally involved. They talk back to the actors and themselves. It's a very visceral play," Amos said, referring to the reaction he experienced with the Los Angeles production.

HE RECALLED that police officers - black, white, Latino and others — were equally moved by the powerful drama. "They came back-stage with tears in their eyes. They told me it was the most sensitive portrayal of their lives."

"Split Second" is by playwright Dennis McIntyre, who is originally from Detroit. Amos said he was curious to know how McIntyre conceived the story. "It took me three or four years to glean this from him. He really drew this from John Danelle, who portrays my son. For the most part, it was predicated on a real incident."

Currently, Danelle is a TV soap star, who plays Dr. Frank Grant on "All My Children." Cherron Hoye, who went to Cass Technical High School in Detroit, plays Val's wife, Alea. Hoye is recipient of the Audelco Recognition Actress for her leading role in "Odessa."

Amos - who arrived for the interview in his jogging clothes, after an early-morning run and shopping displays a lot of energy. He's no kid but, he points out, "I play a character role. We presume Rusty to be in his early 60s."

The big, onetime professional foot-ball player noted, "I've been a character actor through the course of my career. In 'Roots' (in which he played the lead role of Kunte Kinte), my character grew from 28 to some 60 years."

HE LAUGHED and added, "I find it much more challenging and gratifying to play characters who have predictible differences from myself."

Besides his current show, Amos said he is touring with Noel Pointer, world-class violinist and composerarranger. "We've written an entire show, dedicated to Ronald B. McNair, the deceased black astronaut.'

Amos and Pointer will be performing at services for McNair in Georgia. The night before the dedication ceremonies, they will do their show, which includes a 12-minute vignette on highlights of McNair's life prior to the tragedy. In the vignette Amos portrays McNair's father, Carl, and Pointer is McNair.

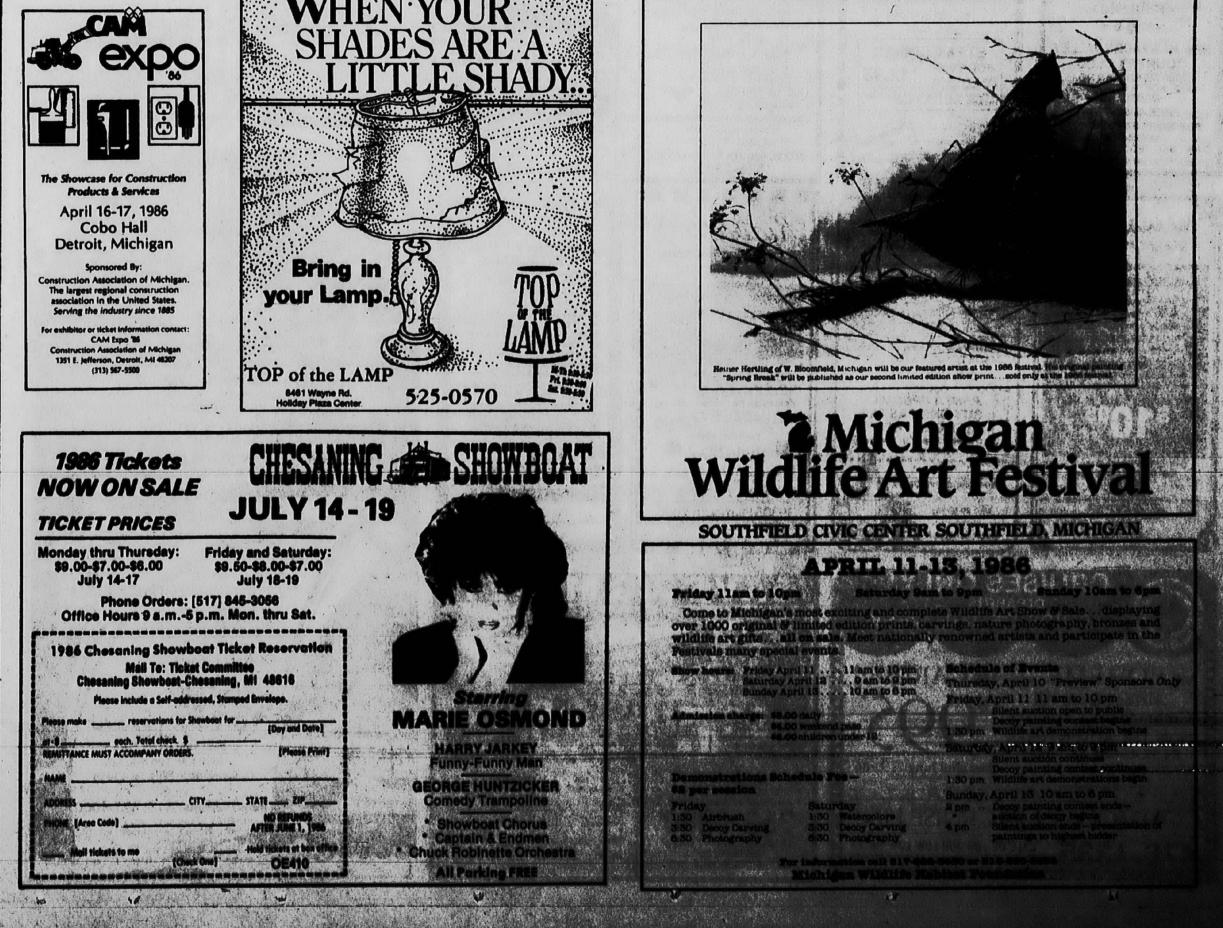

Pointer's responses are all sung. "The show is coming to Detroit this summer," Amos said. "I'm talking to people at several venues. There also will be a concert in the Bahamas and Los Angeles."

The two-hour show features an hour of music by Pointer and his > band, plus the vignettes which also include "Halley's Comet and the Old Man," with Amos portraying a man who has seen the comet come by, for by, for the second time, and "The B Boy, about a contemporary urban figure, "a kid in the inner city who has a ghetto blaster on his shoulder."

Barbara Michals A question of morality powers 'Split Second'

Performances of "Split Second" by Dennis McIntyre continue through Sunday, May 4, at the Birmingham Theatre. For ticket information, call the box office at 644-3533.

By Barbara Michals special writer

"Split Second," the current production at the Birmingham Theatre, is a well-acted drama crackling with emotional tension.

Subjected to an endless stream of vicious racial slurs from the car thief he has just handcuffed, black policeman Val Johnson (John Danelle) finds himself holding a smoking gun over a dead white suspect. Even under the most trying of circumstances, can a policeman afford to lose his temper?

Johnson must live with the consequences of that split second loss of control. But which is worse the consequences of confessing the truth or living with a lie? With the truth he will be crucified by the public and his department; with a lie he will be scorned by his father and diminished in his own eyes.

Living up to others' expectations is difficult for Johnson. His father Rusty (John Amos), now retired, was a pioneer black policeman who expects his son to win the advancements he was denied. His wife Alea (Cherron Hoye) has a keen sense of self-preservation and expects Johnson to put his marital obliga-

also pull Johnson in both direc-

DANELLE GIVES a very fine, polished performance. He makes Johnson's anguish and desperation thoroughly empathetic as he examines the source of his anger and the motivation for his career choice.

While Amos is not on stage that extensively, he is a powerful actor who makes every moment count. Bitterly disappointed in his son's behavior and integrity, Amos' Rusty is a man who has already had to make too many compromises in his life. The confrontations between father and son are super-charged.

Hoye's Alea is convincing as she struggles to understand her husband's crisis of conscience balanced against her own practical, realistic nature.

As the foul-mouthed car thief, Matthew Cowles is relentlessly despicable. The harsh language of the opening scene may be offensive to some, but it is appropriate to the situation.

as Charlie, Johnson's best friend, but Jack Landron seems too young to be effective as the cynical police investigator.

Director Philip Rose keeps the action taut and the psychological suspense continuous. Danile Proett's set, Kenneth Farley's lighting and Jimmy Owens' music all add to the crisp quality of the production.

Richardson said he decided to go on tour because "I wanted to get out and meet the people. The show is still running on Broadway. Larry Riley is doing my role."

Richardson was a classical singer until 1970 when he decided "I did not want to pursue a career in classical music.'

He made a 360-degree turn, even coming up with a disco hit, "Love Is Everywhere," in 1975. He called it one of the pioneering records of the disco era.

He made "another 360-degree turn when I went back to the opera in 1976." He joined the Huston Grand Opera Company and did a national tour of "Porgy and Bess" in the role of Sporting Life. "It was my first full-blown professional opera."

He played most of the opera houses in the country before switching over to musical theater. In 1978 he appeared on Broadway in "Timbuk-tu." Next, he said, "I played in 'Dream Girls' in the Los Angeles company and stayed there a year."

RIGHT AFTER that, he was out of work for a year and two months. Then came "Big River" and, "in four months time, received a Tony award, a Drama Desk award and hit musical reviews."

He said the message of the show is that "oppression of any one people is destructive to the whole culture. Jim is the descendant of African royalty. I think he was trapped in slavery as a result of a war. I think he was a very noble man. His survival instinct is what made him. He is able to live a life of duplicity, to camouflage his real feelings and desires."

Jim, who teams up with Huckle-berry Finn on a raft on the Mississippi, has been separated from his family in St. Petersburg.

'That's his whole purpose, to be reunited with his family. That's the real crux of the story. He became the father figure, the protector and educator of this young child who was so open to the truth," Richardson said

Winefest keeps season moving

"Tis the season to be jolly." No, you haven't slept through the seasons. This is a different kind of "iolly."

Last column reported and promoted the Tuesday, April 15, extravaganza at the Novi Hilton with the Sonoma County Winegrowers Association. Now announcement comes of the fourth annual Ann Arbor Winefest, an event designed to support the community arts programs of the Ann Arbor Art Association.

This is to be held just three days following the bash in Novi. It will be quite a week. In addition, in a more vicarious manner, wine enthusiasts may participate in bid-ding for wines through the annual Channel 56 Benefit Auction to support public television in our area, a most needed and worthy event. The wine-bidding night of the auction runs during the evening of the 18th (also) and is a sub-set of the Friday, April 11, to Saturday, April 19, auction.

Several locally prominent wine people will serve as hosts and auctioneers that evening. Judging by the past, there will be most meritorious lots of wines on which one may bid. Local wine people and members of the wine community at large are being asked to contribute from their cellars, the minimum contribution being $50. Local wine outlets may have information about participation, or those interested in volunteering may call Channel 56 at 873-7200.

BUT NOW, back to little old Ann Arbor town.

Honorary chairman is John Wright, president of Domaine Chandon. A great deal of his sparkling wine will be poured during the evening for the delight (and uninhibiting) of the guests, you may be very sure.

Other wines will be available as well. A special Italian dinner, some rare wine books from the Longone collection, overnight lodging at Sterling Vineyards followed by a luncheon at Domaine Chandon and a dinner for eight at the Escoffier in Ann Arbor also are to be had for the best prices.

The entry cost? A modest $25 per person, but that includes both wine and the food for the evening described as "a sumptuous buffet served by local restaurants." The food, prepared and contributed by 30 restaurants, will be offered in two stages (before and following the auction).

THE BUFFET ranges "from oy-sters to pates to desserts." Its scope will be international (as one would expect): Korean, French, Indian, to name a few. Bountiful amounts of wines will be poured during the evening.

Perhaps taking a room at the Ann Arbor Inn for the night would not be a bad idea. One could watch the last part of the Channel 56 Auction before falling off (down?).

All of this effort in Ann Arbor and it is a huge enterprise requiring the donated time and energy of many, many people - goes to benefit local art programs sponsored

Jim Perkins offers folk song

By Susan Thygerson-Aktary special writer

The bright-eyed bearded baritone who sings out lovely old Irish folk songs in his resonant timbre at your favorite pub may be the rover from Farmington Hills, Jim Perkins.

Perhaps you've seen him play a guitar or banjo and a spirited tune on the harmonica at one of the special-event weekends sponsored by Greenfield Village in summer, or in the winter at the Henry Ford Museum, Dearborn. He can even be seen on occasion serenading wedding guests, or at the Four Green Fields restaurant and pub in Royal Oak, the Lark restaurant in West Bloomfield, the Hurling Green in Rochester and the Old Shillelagh in Detroit's Greektown.

For folk-music fans who miss the old coffeehouses, for those who love the Irish tunes, or for anyone who simply enjoys a talented seasoned entertainer, Perkins provides a rare combination of talents. He will be the featured performer at the Musical Oasis store's "Sunday Afternoon Thing" 5-7 p.m. Sunday, April 13, at the Birmingham Unitarian Church at Woodward and Lone Pine roads in Bloomfield Hills. Tickets at $4 may be purchased at the store in advance, or at the door.

PERKINS WAS born and raised in the Detroit area. He has been singing his tunes and the sou performing from West Bloomfield to Cape Cod since the "late '60s when there was a coffeehouse circuit in the churches in Detroit," he said. Even before that, however, Perkins cherished his craft and his music.

There was always music in my home when I was growing up. My dad was a piano player, and my mom was from Appalachia, so I liked folk music well before I knew what it was called," he said.

Perkins told how he taught himself to read music out of a book, and how, after the coffeehouse scene had withered, he had to shift gears somewhat to adjust to playing in the pubs, where his role was often much more that of a background musician.

Nowadays, when he gives a concert, he said he has to switch gears again to overcome the "spotlight jitters" that come with being the center of attention, but it's always an adjustment he's happy to make.

A computer draftsman trained at Oakland Community College and employed by Aero Detroit in Madison Heights, Perkins manages to schedule each job around the other and still find time to share with his wife Cheryl and 11-year-old son, Dylan. The family enjoys raising dogs and visiting dog shows.

Perkins is 1984 recipient of the Metro Times Best Songwriter Award in the folk-country category. He re-

John Hillerman are also outstanding. Director Roman Polanski has taken Robert Towne's intriguing script, full of true-life LA political history, any recent film.

Fitzgeraldish writer. Redford is Redford, which for many women seems to be enough. He does, always, project a warm sensitivity. If you're in the mood, this works very well.

Gilley's: still the place for fun, Texas style

PASADENA, Texas - "Ride the Bull at Your Own Risk!" proclaims a sign at the base of El Toro. Switched off, El Toro is obedient, innocuous no more than a worn saddle bolted on a metal rack. But turned on, El Toro is ruthless - bucking, spinning, jerking, tossing.

That 800-pound hunk of mechanical bull, the one John Travolta immortalized in "Urban Cowboy," is the heart of Gilley's Club, the craziest, dancingest, brawlingest, biggest honky-tonk in Texas.

usually jammed with pickups, semi-trucks, motorcycles and tour

Jones Cadillacs and plain cars.

The club boasts six huge bars, 25 pool tables, 120 pinball and electronic games, 500 tables, 3,000 chairs, a dance floor, bandstand, souvenir center, western store and bull arena (there are three motor-driven bulls, each surrounded by battered foam rubber pads). There's also an indoor arena that seats 13,000 for rodeo shows every Saturday night.

THE FOLKS have 17 hours to drink, dance and raise hell - 9 a.m. to 2 a.m. every day of the year. Cov-. er charges run from $2 to $15, depending on entertainment. A dining area adjoins the cavernous club; an 18-ounce T-bone is $12.95; eggs, hash browns, sausage or bacon and toast are $3.75 from midnight to 3 a.m.

All types press through the double doors, mostly duded up in Western attire - jeans, boots, shirts, cowboy hats. Jeans mean skin-tight, and the real cowboys scoff at designer labels and decorative seams. These Marlboro men wear work Levis. And they are in the minority among Gilley's beer-swigging, heel-kicking Satur-day night crowd, which often numbers 5,000.

Boots are Texan - that is, good leather - with walking rather than riding heels. The variety is staggering, from work-a-day to fancy stitched blue, beige and mauve boots. Shirts are cotton with pearl snaps. Prairie skirts, mostly jeans fights. But the punching bags have cut the fighting way down."

Cryer says the club sees every type of individual — slick New Yorkers, wide-eyed midwesterners, high-spirited old folks, Californians, movie stars, truck drivers, lawyers, doctors, rodeo hands, Texans of any kind and, of course, the "Gilleyrats" the regulars.

Music, of course, is country-western. The Texas two-step and waltz dominate; the Cotton-Eyed Joe is also popular.

From the stage, at three minutes to two, in the morning, country-western star Mickey Gilley announces, "Last call for alcohol. Motel time, 'y'all.'

Chiefs to climb last step?

Teach tots what's really important first of all, sports

O IT'S SPRING. New season. New life. Time for a new beginning. Which is what I'm contemplating. A change.

Nothing cosmetic, mind you. I'm not going to try and be nice to people, or smile more, or lend a sympathetic ear. People would just take it for sarcasm, anyway.

I'm talking career here. And I know exactly what I'll do, too. Write children's stories.

This isn't lunacy. This was well thought-out during a 10-day vacation in somewhat sunny Los Angeles, where men are sometimes men, women are usually blonde and always better athletically than I am, and the only belief shared by all sexes is: "He who dies with the most toys, wins."

Now I'm going to explain myself, so pay strict attention. The logic is there, but sometimes you've got to search a little hard for it.

WE ARE in the throes of a mini baby boom. I could bore you with meaningful statistics, but I won't. I know what I know, and I know that not since the early 1960s, when the last baby boom wilted, have there been more young couples planning to raise a houseful of tax deductions.

That means a brand new surge of eager, young minds, all anxious to gobble up whatever reading material they can find on a computer disc. It's perfect. It's profitable. To say nothing of the potential. These children will need someone to update the Dick-and-Jane-and-their-pet-dog-Spot books, so popular when I was a rug rat. Plots will have to be modernized with characters reflecting the changes, like Dick and Jane and their space robot Tobor.

And I'm just the guy to do it.

Tell you why. First of all, despite an audience far more sophisticated than the one of 20 years ago, the style of writing still must be simple. You don't want to confuse the youngsters too early in life. Let the politicians do that a few years down the road.

So who's more qualified to write simply than a sportswriter? Heck, we have an unwritten rule about using words with more than three syllables ("Only in dire emergencies or if you mispronounce the word."). Can you see the connection? It would be the perfect step up for me.

POINT NO. 2: The subject matter we concern

Bridesmaid in 1985, Canton wants a title

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Mike Burt, who played No. 3 doubles last year, jumps to No. 2 singles in Canton's lineup.

Wolverine

By Chris McCosky staff writer

Jim Hayes has been coaching tennis at Plymouth Canton since the school opened its doors 13 years ago. "He is the best coach, by far, in this area," said Farmington Harrison coach Bernie Goldstein. "He plays the game, he knows what he's doing."

High praise coming from the winningest tennis coach in the Western Lakes.

"Ah, Bernie's my buddy," Hayes said. "I appreciate what he said, but you tell him if I'm such a good coach, how come we can't ever beat his team?"

Hayes' Chiefs, after losing three dual meets in the Western Lakes last season, pulled in second at the league meet behind Harrison. The Chiefs were 10-3 on the season.

"I think we'll be about the same as we were last year," Hayes said. "Our singles players have improved; they've worked hard over the summer. I don't know if our doubles teams will be as strong as last year, though."

The four singles positions appear to be set. Senior Tom Hathaway returns at No. 1. Mike Burt, a muchimproved sophomore, will play No. 2. Freshman Dan Orlandi is at No. 3 and senior Don Cavell will open at No. 4.

If the season opened today, Hayes would have seniors Jeff Fitzryk and Sung Woo Kahng playing No. 1 doubles. Sophomore Steve Schmidt and junior Ehren Kolsch at No. 2 doubles.

Four players are battling for the No. 3 doubles spot: sophomore Rich Gurchak, freshman Jim Gallagher, junior Jeff Blunt and sophomore Jeff ## Williams.

"I think Harrison will be very good this season, as will Northville and Livonia Stevenson," Hayes said. "Our league was very competitive last year and will be again. I don't know how good Plymouth Salem will be. We will have to do better in the dual meets. We lost to Farmington, Northville and Harrison in duals last year and that really hurt us."

(P,C)1D

PLYMOUTH SALEM coach Judy Braun, in her fifth season, has a major problem on her hands. She has some 16 players on her roster, all of equal ability.

"I just have no idea at this point as far as a lineup," she said. "I mean, this is really bad. There is not a lot of difference between the players. I could have two groups, I can't really make a division. It's really strange."

Part of the problem is that five players have departed from last year's 5-9 team. Ron Rabillas moved away while Cam Evans, John Kath, Eric Sovine and Bob Gaekwad have graduated.

Braun has five players returning who started a year ago: juniors Clyde Binguit, Bob Breach, Rich Cooper, Ted Hanosh and Mark Rearick. There are no seniors on the team.

Others in the running for court time are: juniors Jeff Czerniak, Gary Kroll, Malay Mody, Mark Pilley and Brain Rowland; sophomores Bob Barr and Chris Marschak; and freshmen Rich Cundiff, Wade Garard, Mark Lloyd and Matt Lore.

"We have the talent to be competitive in this league," Braun said. Both squads will open the season Wednesday, April 16: Salem at Livonia Franklin, the Chiefs at home against Walled Lake Western.

such a venture. Remember, a newspapers' sports staff is often referred to as the Toy Department.

True, the toys that fill the reams of copy we churn out are either for adults, those aspiring to be adults or those pretending to be adults. But toys are toys, so the adjustment from producing stories about baseball to writing about Gobots can't be too severe.

It might be a heckuva lot more interesting, too. Anyway, someone from the field of sports is the perfect choice for teaching the kids of tomorrow what's important. Care to argue? Check out the front page stories of Monday's daily newspapers.

Both have stories about Libya's possible ties to recent terrorist activities, but right there with them is a story on a crooked home plate at Tiger Stadium on the day of the baseball opener and the Red Wings winning the finale in their worst season ever.

Both also carried special sections to commemorate the opening of the baseball season. End of argument.

POINT NO. 3: What's important. It took a trip to California for me to realize it.

Out there, guys who can't afford dinner or long pants drive around in $30,000 Porsches. Not just a lucky few, either. There are more cars of that caliber out there than neckties.

What perspective! The only news out of the Middle East that gets their attention is falling fuel prices, which gives them the chance to cruise even more.

Toys are everything in California. How else could one state host so many major professional sports teams — five in baseball, four each in basketball and football and even one in hockey, in a place where most of the ice is used for Margueritas.

The object is to teach toddlers what's vital, California-style. We can try to impress upon children that if Jane takes one of the three apples from the basket, two will be left.

But I maintain that if you tell them a jump shot canned by Dick from outside the 20-foot arc counts three points instead of two, they'll learn a lot faster.

NOT JUST counting, either. These kids will learn about the thrill of victory and how to attain it. They'll learn about the agony of defeat and how to avoid it.

And they'll learn about the adult population's high regard for fun and games. Who wants to hear about a Libyan madman when the Tigers are on TV?

I'll do my Howard Coseillan-best to "tell it like it is" in my children's stories. Dad will come home and ask Dick how he did in his baseball game before sitting down in front of his television to watch a hockey game on cable while perusing the sports page.

There's a fortune to be made, to be sure. And when I tire of writing children's stories, I'll take the next logical step. Such a simple style of prose would be perfect in writing a bowling column.

Dave Dameron, Plymouth Salem's state champion wrestler, had his dream year capped off Wednesday morning. He signed a letter-of-intent to accept a full-ride wrestling scholarship from the University of Michigan. How anxious was U-M to land Dameron? The signing day officially began at 8 a.m. and U-M coach Dale Barr asked if he could be at Dameron's home at 7:30 a.m. By signing with the Wolverines, Dameron said no to Michigan State, Indiana and Wisconsin, all of whom were bidding for the 126-pounder.

Hathaway tipped in Easter tourney

Rochester's Amy Frazier was the big winner at the Farmington Tennis Club's annual Easter Junior Tennis Open that concluded Sunday.

Eighty-five players from Michigan, Ohio and Ontario competed in three age levels — Boys and Girls 14, 16 and 18.

Frazier, the nation's No. 1 player in Girls 14s, won the Girls 18 title in straight sets over Northville's Breita Johnson. Frazier did not lose a game throughout the entire tournament.

In Girls 16, Brab Coughland of Birmingham defeated Dayton's Michelle Goecke. Erin Einhorn of West Bloomfield defeated Southfield's Michelle Harris in the Girls 14 division.

Wendt makes a pitch for U-D baseball

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Greg Wendt has chucked his basketball shorts for awhile to chuck a few fast balls.

At least that was the original plan. The University of Detroit basketball standout had orginally taken his act to the diamond as a pitcher.-But judging by his two-hit performance as a designated hitter in the Titans' win over Eastern Michigan recently, his hitting is a welcomed rainstorm in a desert of offensive lethargy.

Wendt, a product of Redford Catholic Central, clubbed a double, walked twice, drove in two runs and scored twice against the Hurons. The 18-16 win broke a three-game losing streak for the Titans, who've been shutout twice already this season.

"HE SURPRISED the heck out of me," said U-D coach Bob Miller, whose team was off to a dreadful 3-10 start. "You don't expect a kid to hit like that after not swinging a bat for two years."

For Wendt, who Miller said will DH, pitch and play first base this season, the adjustment back to the summer game hasn't been difficult.

"It wasn't a hard transition," said Wendt, a senior who concluded his basketball career this year. "I was able to get my timing down after a week or so.

"I was brought up on baseball," he added. "My dad gave me a bat instead of a teething ring when I was a baby."

The thought of Wendt playing baseball at U-D is something Miller has chewed on for awhile. The Titan coach, in his 22nd year, viewed Wendt in Adray League play and liked what he saw. He repeatedly asked Wendt to play before the Catholic Central grad finally relented.

When the Titans returned from their spring trip to Florida, Wendt was waiting with glove in hand.

This was my last year in basketball as far as college goes," said Wendt, who hopes to play in the NBA or in Europe. "This is a chance to have some fun in my last year here."

College baseball

HIS ENTHUSIASM appeared to rub off on the U-D hitters. The Titans have been in a drought at the plate this season. Wendt thinks his hitting performance in the slugfest at EMU helped loosened a few tight hands.

"I'm a very relaxed type of play-er," he said. "If they see me hitting the ball, then might relax and start stroking the ball also."

For the Titans to make any noise in the Midwestern Collegiate Conference North this season, the bats will have to ring loudly. U-D was 19-32 last season and finished third in the MCC North division.

Miller is counting on shortstop Rick Munson, a Redford Thurston grad, catcher Kevin Lowery and second baseman Tom Dimambro for the offense this season.

OF THE group, Miller is especially counting Munson to be the king pin of the infield. At the plate, he's looking at a .300 season from the senior shortstop.

"He better hit .300, or we're in trouble," said Miller.

Another area player trying to make at least an impression is freshman Kevin Moore, a product of Redford Union. Playing time for Moore may be limited with Lowery hitting .444.. Miller said he hopes to have Moore pinch hitting some.

On the other side of the plate on the mound, the Titans are led by the starting tandem of junior left-hander Joe Taraskavage and sophomore right-hander Gary Peters. John Rogers, a sophomore from Redford CC, has seen limited action as a reliever so far.

The bullpen features newcomer Stewart Hillman, a right-hander

WSU 'fit' for '86 season

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Wayne State University decided to get physical in its quest for top spot in the Great Lakes Intercollegiate baseball race.

So the Tartars pumped a little iron during the off season. But the Wayne State baseball team took its physical fitness kick a bit further and participated in an aerobics program.

And it paid off, especially during the Tartars' spring trip to Florida where they went 6-1.

But aerobics?

"Near the end of the year you could really tell the difference," said Steve Toth, a product of Redford Bishop Borgess who's hitting at a .424 clip. "It worked out really well. When we ran sprints, everybody was making their times.

"IT DIDN'T go over too well at first, then we started having some fun," added Toth. "We worked out with the softball team, and we got to know them a bit better."

Teams in the GLIAC should get to know the Tartars a bit better this season also. The team has been written off to finish behind Saginaw Valley and Grand Valley.

A double-header sweep by Saginaw Valley reinforced that prediction. Yet, the contingent at WSU still contends it's a force to be dealt with in the GLIAC circles.

A couple of area players give cause for such optimism. One is junior pitcher Rich Wood, from Livonia. who's on the comeback trail with a nasty pitch called a "slurve."

Then there's transfer outfielder Brad Silverstein, from West Bloomfield. Silverstein, who transferred from the University of Toledo, connected for three home runs on the team's spring trip.

One casualty is outfielder Kevin Schwanz, Redford Union product hitting .467, who went down with a broken hand. Freshman Craig Pasini, from Rochester, is taking Schwanz's place in the outfield.

Toth, who's 6-4, sprays singles all over the place. Despite the senior first baseman's size, he doesn't believe in the long-ball theory of offense

"He's always been a line-drive, upthe-alley type hitter," said WSU coach Angelo Gust.

At WSU, the distances to the fence are about 375 feet down each line and over 400 feet in the power alleys. So Toth is sans home runs at home.

Silverstein, on the other hand, still plans to lift a few out. If not at Wayne State, the former West Bloomfield High player is hoping for at least a 10-home-run season with some help of the friendlier confines of parks on the road.

THE MORE relaxed atmosphere at WSU suits Silverstein just fine as things at Toledo were quite the opposite.

"If you dropped a fly ball in the outfield and came to bat and struck out, you'd be out of the game," said Silverstein on life at Toledo. "That's how it is there.'

"He's been driving the ball real well," noted Gust. "I think he's happy. He's playing back home."

Happiness is something Wood is feeling on the mound right now. Last season, the Livonia Franklin grad was 4-3 as a starter after an unblemished 6-0 mark in his freshman year.

Wood, who's registered 36 strikeouts in 23 innings work this season, wants to regain his form which earned him all-GLIAC honors in his freshman year.

"I'd like to make all-league," said Wood. "I threw better last year but the breaks went my way in my freshman year."

THE BREAKS Wood's been dealing to opposing hitters are earning him respect. Along with a fast ball, the right-handed starter has been throwing a pitch that looks like a slider but breaks like a curve. It's called a "slurve."

"I don't know what to call it," said Wood, who's 3-0 so far this season.

"(The hitters) don't like facing him in batting practice," said Gust. "Catchers don't like catching it either. They know they're in for a long, hard day. They get battered around a bit."

The Tartars have other arms to keep them going, including relief pitcher Kevin Diaz. The right-handed Bishop Borgess grad picked up two saves in three appearances on the team's spring trip.

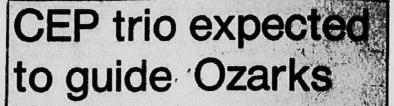

If WSU is going to compete in death valley with Saginaw Valley and Grand Valley, the Tartars will need a helping hand from everyone. Then, maybe, they'll really have something to dance about.

whose posted a 1.58 earned run average in four relief appearances.

The pitching corps, though, have taken a beating during the early going. Miller said his team's record in the Florida sun was deceiving.

"We didn't get a chance to get outside before we went to Florida. . .It was just a matter of us getting accli-mated outside," Miller said.

Miller said he expects Notre Dame and Xavier to provide the most opposition in the MCC North. Oral Roberts, ranked No. 5 in the nation, should have the South division under control.

Not to fear, the Plymouth-Canton Michigan-Point Lookout Missouri baseball connection is still alive and well.

Although no one made the trek from Canton or Salem high school to the School of the Ozarks last year, three ex-Centennial Educational Parkites figure prominantly in the baseball plans for 1986.

In case you didn't know (and you really should by now), the School of the Ozarks has been one of the most successful NAIA baseball programs in the country. Since 1981 manager Dr. Bobby Smith's teams have posted a 147-63 record and have won 30 or more games in three of those five seasons

And one of several keys to the teams' success has been a steady diet of players from the Plymouth-Canton community.

Three players from the area are expected to play leadership roles for the Bobcats this season. Fred Rumberger, from Plymouth, and Mike Battaglia, from Canton, both played high school ball for Fred Crissey at Plymouth Canton. Todd Riedel played for Brian Gilles at Plymouth Salem.

RUMBERGER, A senior, is the only four-year starter on the Bob-cats' roster. The first baseman his only four-year starter on the Bo .346 last year with two home runs and 25 RBI. He is a two-time all. Ozark Collegiate College. Conference pick.

Battaglia, a junior left-hander, had a superb season a year ago. He was 8-3 with a 3.34 ERA. In 67,3 innings of work he fanned 58 batters. He was 5-2 his freehman year. He, too, was named to the allconference team.

Riedel, a junior who will switch form second base to shortstop this season, hit.262 last year. He was named one of the team's cocap-tains. He has been an ideal lendoff hitter for the Bobcata. He dress is walks last year and led the tear with 16 stolen bases with 16 stolen bases.

The Ozarks were 31-18 a mar ago and are expected to contend for the District 16 title this season. The team has again invaded Michigan's wealth of baseball tai-

Coaches split on 3-point rule

By C.J. Risak staff writer

Is nothing sacred?

Those might have been among the first words out of Oakland University coach Greg Kampe's mouth when he heard that the NCAA men's basketball rules committee adopted the three-point field goal for next season.

The others probably weren't printable.

"I don't like the rule at all," he said. "I was shocked and surprised that they passed it. They never even asked the coaches' association about it.

"I think someone's screwing up a pretty good game." A semicircle will be drawn on the court 19 feet 9 inches from the center of the basket. Any shot made from outside that line will be worth three points.

SEVERAL CONFERENCES, including the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (GLIAC), of which OU is a member, experimented with the three-point field goal during the 1982-83 season, but few kept it. That's why the rule was greeted by surprise by many coaches.

"Anytime you can shoot from the top of the key and get three points for it, it's going to change the game," said Kampe. "If you can hit 40 percent of your shots from there, it makes it worth the risk. If you hit four-of-10 from there, it'll be just like going six-for-12 inside the line."

Defenses are what Kampe figures will be altered the most. "It's going to take the zone defense right out of the game," he predicted. Since he advocates a man-to-man defense, he admitted, "I like that."

BUT WITH OU graduating its two best long-range shooters in Rob Skinner and Craig Tonti, the new rule comes at a bad time.

"We've been recruiting more toward good athletes than set-up shooters," the OU coach said. "I still think the way to win is by going inside and by having good athletes. The two years I've been here, we've been small. Now we've finally got some size and what happens?

There are some GLIAC teams Kampe figures will cash in. "It's going to help make Lake Superior State, a team that can really shoot, an instant contender," he said. "Northwood, too. Teams like that are going to benefit right away."

The rule's intention was twofold:

to help unclog the lane area of the court and to give the little man a bigger hand in the outcome. But Kampe figured the distance wasn't great enough. He thought a 21-foot circle would make it a greater challenge and make outside gunners think twice before launch-

Of the players returning next year for the Pioneers, Johnny Johnson, Scott Bittinger and Rob Alvin are the best pure outside shooters.

WHILE KAMPE condemned the new rule, Schoolcraft College coach Rocky Watkins endorsed it. Watkins was certain that SC, which competes in the NJCAA, would adopt it.

"We follow the NCAA rules to the letter," he said. "I like it. I think it's going to put some excitement back into the game.

"A team's going to have to have two or three players with that kind of range. (Defenses) won't be able to sag inside anymore, they're going to have to come out and cover people. I thought they needed to do something for the little guy."

Watkins also disagreed with Kampe that the rule would mark the end of zone defenses. "It's not going to keep people from playing zones," he remarked. "It's going to loosen things up a lot, though, Of the 10 players who could return for SC next season, Watkins figured there were two "with that kind of range — Mike White and Zollie Stephens." And the SC coach did agree with Kampe that the line might not be distant enough.

"Nineteen-nine — that's kind of close," he admitted. "Mike White can hit from the top of the key all day, if no one's in his face."

THE NCAA rules committee made two other changes. Game officials can consult television replays if necessary to correct mistakes in timing, scoring and the alternating possession arrow. The rule's adoption was greatly due to the clock controversy at the end of the Kansas-Michigan State regional game.

The second rule change does away with the hash marks at the side of the court, which the offensive team was required to cross in a specified time. It will be replaced by the five-second count, which can be called anywhere in the offensive

Both were welcome changes. And, certainly, neither will harvest the controversy that the threepoint shot will.

Ladywood duo pick colleges

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Sue Laliberte and Cathy Schram, two players off Ed Kavanaugh's Livonia Ladywood state Class B championship girls basketball team, made their college commitments this week.

In both cases, Laliberte and Schram see a few similarities between their high school coach and their new college coaches. Wednesday, Laliberte signed with Western Michigan and Schram with Northwood Institute.

For Laliberte, it's WMU coach Jim Hess which reminds her a bit of ## girls basketball

"He has a philosophy like Mr. Kavanaugh that basketball is a yeararound game," said Laliberte, who averaged 16 points and 10 rebounds a game last season as the Blazer's center. "He believes in playing in the summer a lot."

Northwood coach Lori Hyman also reminded Schram of Kavanaugh.

Schram, a guard who averaged 11 points a game last season. "They have some of the same coaching techniques also."

Both went through the recruiting process. Schram had most of the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference schools after her along with the University of Dayton.

Laliberte, who at first wanted to go out of state, had Indiana and hearing initially she wasn't planning to stay in Michigan. AT BOTH SCHOOLS where Laliberte and Schram will be attending, there's a high-turnover rate expected. They figure they can get in some immediate playing time.

And, coming from a program like Ladywood's, they don't count on the transition to college ball being too difficult. But they expect to have to

Canton an arm's length from success

By Chris McCosky staff writer

Max Sommerville is a quiet man. You talk to him in person, he speaks in tones just above a whisper. Talk to him on the phone, you can barely make out his words.

And, as the old adage suggests, his team reflects the personality of its coach. Last year, Sommerville's Plymouth Canton softball team quietly had itself a nice season.

The Chiefs finished with a 10-10 record and were runners-up to Walled Lake Western in the Western Lakes's Western Division.

Although three starters have graduated - all-Western Lakes pick Monika Benedict, Margaret Gilligan and Leslee Fidge - the heart of last year's team is intact.

Seniors Diana Knickerbocker, Laura Darby and Beth Butzow - all three were all-Western Division picks - are back, along with seniors Laura Flascamb and Kristina Wines.

DARBY, WHO hit right around the 400 mark a year ago, is the team's shortstop. Butzow will start in left field. Flascamb and Wines hold fort at second base and first base, respectively

softball

The key to the team's success could rest on the capable shoulders of Knickerbocker. She will be called upon to take over the mound duties. Canton's ' success, according to Sommerville, may hinge on how often Knickerbocker throws strikes.

"I think we will be a decent team," said the eight-year veteran coach. "It will all depend on our pitching. Knickerbocker threw about three or four games for us last year, and she was pretty wild. But her control seems to be better this season. We'll have to wait and see."

Darby may see some mound duty this season, as may sophomore Laurie Madsen. But the bulk of the load will be carried by Knickerbocker.

OUR HITTING looks pretty good," said Sommerville. "Maybe not as good as last year, though. Our de-fense should be good, also. It all boils down to pitching." Sommerville's infield is set with Wines, Flascamb, Darby and junior third baseman Lara Bowerman. But he is a bit concerned about who'll replace Fidge behind the plate.

"Absenteeism has been a big problem for us," he said. "If the person I think will catch is there, it'll be junior Kelly Lingenfelser."

Yvonne Livernois, a junior, may also see duty behind the plate.

Two-thirds of Sommerville's outfield is also in order with Butzow in left and sophomore Kelly McCumber in center. Juniors Laura Mathias, Susan Adams and Livernois are in the running for the other spot. Players who will serve in a utility role for the Chiefs are juniors Peggy Najarian and Vicki Ferko.

"Livonia Franklin looks like it might be the power of the league," Sommerville said. "I don't know about our division. It'll be us and Walled Lake Western again, I would say.

The Chiefs open at home Monday against Farmington.

Denny Mikel dropped a bomb on his North Farmington softball team Tuesday

Just three days prior to the start of the 1986 season, Mikel informed his troops that he was resigning as their coach.

"It's kind of a family-motivated thing," said Mikel, who has never had a losing season in four years with the Raiders. "I have three young kids, a wife who works full time and I was coaching three sports. It was just too hectic. Something had to go and it was softball."

Mikel said he will continue to coach the team until a successor is hired.

"I anticipated problems long be-fore the season began," said Mikel, explaining why he made his decision so close to the start of the season. "But you always like to think you can work things out. While I was away last week (he spent a week with his family in Indiana), I spent a lot of time with my family. I had the chance to really reassess the things I was doing.

"I KNOW this is a bad time. It would have been easier if I had made the decision earlier. But there really is no good time to make decisions like these. Just when you do make up your mind, you have to go for it.

Mikel stressed that he was not, in any way, disappointed with his team or with the school administration.

"It was strictly a personal decision," he said. "It's never easy to give up something you love doing. But with the new league, we'd be playing three times a week. I wouldn't be getting home until 7 p.m. every night. It just wasn't fair to my family."

Mikel has daughters 16 and 7 and 3-year-old son. His wife teaches full time.

Mikel said he plans to stay on as the assistant boys and girls basketball coach at North.

Athletic Director Ron Holland will post the job opening throughout the district. If in 10 days no one applies, the job will be offered outside the district.

HE 1986 GIRLS TRACK season has already arrived, but it may take awhile before another series of records will be broken.

Trying to sort out the area's top teams will be difficult. But sorting out the area's top individuals will not.

Westland John Glenn's one-woman show will be presented again by senior Karen Opp, voted Observerland Trackwoman of the Year in 1985.

Opp anchored the Glenn 3,200meter relay squad that finished second last season in the state Class A meet.

With only 14 teammates, Opp will have to carry the load again for first-year coach Cathy Momeyer.

Farmington Hills Mercy's Terri Ford, the area's top sprinter last season, also returns, along with Livonia Ladywood junior Joan Arndt, an outstanding middle distance runner.

Other All-Area picks returning include Livonia Churchill sophomore Karen Kantor, a standout distance runner, and Sue Naster, Redford Bishop Borgess' discus/shot put king.

Here is a preseason look, team-byteam, at girls track in the Livonia, Westland, Redford and Garden City areas.

BISHOP BORGESS

Sprinter Londreanne Washington and All-Area high jumper Sambia Shivers were lost to graduation, but coach John McGreevy isn't fretting. Junior high jumper Cheri Johnson has already eleared 5 feet, 4 inches indoors. Sue Naster is sure to top her marks of 37¼ and 117-2 in the discus and shot put, respectively. Freshman Michelle Gayney leads a talented distance group that also includes junior Kelly Dooley and sophomore Michelle Gross.

High jumper/hurdler Andrea Jackson also appears to be strong.

"Our goals are to win our league, the regional and Observerland," McGreevy said. "But it depends on how our young kids develop."

WESTLAND JOHN GLENN Maren Opp, who clocked a 58.6 last season in the 400-meter run, is in peak shape to run four events again, according to first-year coach Cathy Momeyer.

Karen ran a 2:25.0 (800 meters) split at the Huron Relays, but she's capable of a 2:15," Momeyer said.

The Glenn problem is numbers. Only 15 girls are out for the team.

"The girls we have will be OK," Momeyer said. "We have four or five in the field events, but I'm not sure what they can do.

"We lost quite a few kids to jobs. We're a small team and I knew when I took over that we'd be small, but not this small." Some of Glenn's supporting cast includes distance runners Ginger Rowland and Pauline Eldridge, shot put/discus thrower Stacy Graham and sprinter Tonnya Patterson. Graham is expected to fill the void in the throwing events left by two-time All-Area pick Anna Parish

WAYNE MEMORIAL

"From what I understand, the difference between last year's and this year's team is that we have quite a bit of speed this year," said first-year coach Joe Gras-ley. "I've seen a little bit of talent, and I think we'll be competitive in the league (Wolverine A)."

The 30-member Wayne team is led by senior sprinter Dian Buckhalter, who did not run last season. She will be pushed by the speedy and versatile Sabrina Moore, who also hurdles, throws the shot and high jumps; Raini Beliger, a sprinter/ high jumper; Monique Kozorosky, a sprinter/long jumper, Tricia Williams and Connie Eldridge.

In the middle-distance events, senior Kathy Jacobs leads the way with depth provided by Lisa Kunz, Jackie Brusseau and Lisa Kitze.

GARDEN CITY

The Cougars are also loaded in the sprints with the return of senior Missey Ward, a second-team All-Area choice last year in the 300 hurdles.

Other holdovers for coach Chris Jonik's 20-member team include Nikki Stubbs, Pam Salter and Debbie Babb. Two sophomores, Marcia McKenzie and Anjanette Lankford, give GC more depth in the sprints.

Garden City has already a seventhplace finish at the Spartan Relays and an eighth place at the Huron Relays in the 800 relay to its credit.

Big things are also expected from junior high jumper Marla Evans.

REDFORD UNION

Jim Millen is optimistic about the Panthers' chances in the NSL. We have some depth for a change, said the first-year coach. "It looks real good for us. We're stronger in the distance events and weaker in the field events. It's going to be quite a competitive league. Nobody to be quite a competitive league. No is going to run away with it. Edsel Ford is strong on paper and Dearborn is strong, too."

Second team All-Area shot putter Nancy Brichford is the only notable loss to graduation.

Key returnees for RU include Janis Bilinski and Audra Hunter, distance; Heather Armstrong and Michele Zaremberg, middle distance; Jody Taylor and Ann Jacobson, hurdles; Teresa Kaczor and Amy Gustafson, discus; Barb Brum-field, Meredith Beg, Jennifer Overgard, Joann Killinger and Karen Sitarski, sprints.

LIVONIA LADYWOOD

Bob Zimmerman cringes at just the uttering of the phrase. Nonetheless, the all-too-familiar rebuilding year has docked in the Ladywood camp. And there's an outpouring of new faces as 20 of the 30-member team are first-year tracksters.

Only middle-distance runners Joan Arndt, an All-Area pick; Corinne McNamara and Janine Kloc, along with sprinting sisters Monica and Karen Gall return with any experience. "I hate to classify this as a rebuilding year," said Zimmerman, in his third year as Blazer coach. "We're just kind of sorting things out."

With 20 newcomers, that's plenty of sorting. Ann Marie Thomas has emerged as a promising distance runner but the rest remains to be seen.

Sue Naster Borgess

But still, Zimmerman thinks his group, which finished with a 4-3-1 dual-meet mark, can be competitive in the Catholic League track circles.

"It seems like everyone is in the same boat this season," he said. "It should come down between (Farmington) Mercy and (Redford Bishop) Borgess. We should be somewhere in the middle."

REDFORD ST. AGATHA

Somebody better knock the Aggies off that Catholic League A-East Division first-place perch. Redford St. Agatha plans to be sitting there again after this season. Coach Pat Opipari, who lost only two seniors (Colleen Murphy and Julie Belleville), has good reason to believe the Aggies can do it again in 1986.

The biggest void is finding someone to replace Murphy, a state finalist in the mile. Of the two-mile relay squad, of which Murphy was a member, there's a pair of qualified replacements. Freshmen Chris Foley and Cindy Brown are both looking to see some time on the two-mile relay

Also there's a good stock of returnees including Teresa Robinson (hurdles), Janet Sypniewski (high jump and discus), Sondra Curaba (distance runner), Laura Opipari (middle distance), Jenny Belle-ville (hurdler and high jump) and Laura Picano (middle distance).

Curaba, Opipari and Picano were on the Eagles' relay teams. last year's two-mile contingent. (sprinter), Laura Daniels (distance runner), Kris Swaintek (middle distance

"I think if we're hurting anywhere, it's in the sprints," said Opipari. "We loaded up in the middle distance and distance events. "I don't know what other teams have,"

he added. "I expect us to repeat as champions.

"I don't like to brag about that. But if (sprinter), Kim Baumgartner (sprinter and discus/shot put) and Nancy Steinthe teams are like they were last year, I

Speedy Tatum gets Zebras moving

Wayne Memorial is off to an impressive start in boys track.

The Zebras took fifth place out of a field of 53 in Saturday's Spartan Relays at Michigan State University.

On Tuesday, Wayne drilled Gar-den City in a dual meet, 100-35. The 880-yard relay team of Alvin Allen, Wayne Roberts, Eddie Jordan and Darin Tatum finished second at the Spartan Relays with a time of 1:34.6.

Tatum, Allen, Roberts and Bret Thirjung garnered fourth in the sprint medley with a time of 2:37.2.

enth in 3:34.5. The distance medley team of Tolson, Jordan, Thirjung and Darnell Hill grabbed sixth in 10:58.4.

IN THE DUAL MEET, Tatum stoled the show by winning the 100meter dash (11.7), 200 dash (23.4) and 400 run (53.9).

Thirjung took the 1,600 and 3,200 runs in 4:52.0 and 11:03.0, respectively.

Other Wayne individual firsts were taken by Allen, high jump, 5-8; George Lumpkin, discus, 127-11¼; Steve Valetti, long jump, 18-¼; Ken Slotkowski, pole vault, 11berger (middle distance runner).

LIVONIA STEVENSON

(+6D)(F)6

Paul Holmberg knows he has the pico-es. It's just a matter of putting them into the correct place. Dual meets shouldn't be much of a problem as the Spartans were 5-3-3 in that department last season. Yet, there's still holes to be filled.

still holes to be filled. Replacements must be found for All-Area long jumper Amy Rosman, a sprinter who ran in all of the relay events, flue Tatigian, a distance runner, and Chris Schemanske, who tossed the discus and was a high jumper. Gradue-tion took them all away.

But the turnover is matched with some new faces, like Amy Kasmarick (middle distance runner), Sherry Roese (sprinter), Jeanne Magoulick (sprinter), Lorration Meloche (sprinter) and Pat Bagley (dis-tance runner)

Antioche (aprimie) and a sprinter, is a transfit from Livonia Bentley. "We've got pretty good numbers," sall Holberg, who has 55 girls on his team. "If we find the right people to fill in for wise left due to graduation or transferred, we'll be all right."

we'll be all right." On top of that, there's a good number of people back from last season. The team's top three hurdlers, Karen Millen, Kim Smith and Susan Geiz, are all back. Michele Economou (distance runner), Shella Taormina (middle dis-tance runner), Shawn Snyder (shot pui) and Laura Beaune (sprinter) also return.

LIVONIA CHURCHILL

Livonia Churchill won't fly out of the gate, but the Chargers will catch up and beat teams two miles down the road.

The distance events should be the Chargers forte this season. Carol Sulick and Karen Kantor, both all-area cross country runners, are back along with Sta-cy Wolfe in the distance events. Kantor's st time last season in the 3,200 run was 11:44.96.

"Distance is our strongest area because they are consistent," said Churchill coach Carol Mulkiten. "They've ran together for awhile and they're more a family-type group.

group." Gretchen Loyd (sprinter) and Colleen McPhee (hurdler) also return. With the returnees, there's some new faces. Jenifer Danner (sprinter/hurdler) and Colleen Kelly (sprinter) looked to be the most promising of the group. Mulkiten admitted field events will by Churchill's weak not this season Homen.

Colorful mix Abstracts, figures work together

By Corinne Abatt staff writer

Talk about self-discipline. Pat Bover of Birmingham somehow knew she must give up her first love, figure painting, and instead do abstracts if she was to really advance in figurative work the way she wanted to.

If that sounds hard, it was. But, it took her where she wanted to go. The result is a one-person show at Troy Art Gallery opening tomorrow with a 6:30-9 p.m. reception.

Boyer has always been ambitious for herself in the art world. She has a strong sense of color and continuity, which was recognized when she was a student at what was then Society of Arts and Crafts in the early and mid-1960s.

She returned there - now the Center for Creative Studies-College of Art and Design - two decades later because, "I wanted exposure downtown. I became intensely involved with abstracts. I wanted to leave the figure. I had always concentrated on the figure, but I got frustrated."

She said that on her return to downtown Detroit, she was involved with young artists for three years. Later when she returned to figure work, she shared a model with several artists and found, to her delight, that the figurative and the abstracts played off each other.

AND AS SHE talked about the relationship between the two in the Troy Art Gallery, she said she may be working on several drawings or paintings in both areas at the same time, experiencing a compatability rather than a conflict between the two.

"Abstracts are my work (from the standpoint of) looking into my own soul, my own mind. The figures are my response to people.

She said the abstracts heightened her awareness of herself and that, in turn, increased her awareness of the people around her. And her return to school added another dimension

The second time at CCS, three years, I spent a lot of time doing studio work. You can get very insulated out here (the suburbs). I'm very uncomfortable just being comfortable. I worked with Aris (Koutroulis) mostly. He gave me a studio right away and I went to work. I needed that atmosphere and the young people who put you on the spot."

There is a slow smile suggesting she liked being challenged.

SHE IS showing a variety of works on paper in the Troy Art Gallery show - oils, pastels, watercolor, acrylic. Most of the works are mixtures. All show a refined sense of color that is exciting, but a little more controlled and a little less flamboyant than in previous times.

However, with control, the figures have become freer, the lines longer and looser. There is a delightful spontaneity about these people. Her several male nudes, however, seem to possess a controlled energy about to be unleashed.

Boyer hasn't lost her sense of the bizarre or her sense of humor, but there's a maturity here now that signals she has developed additional inner resources. She's moving beyond reflecting the people she's studied with (granted there are some illustrious ones) to becoming her own person artistically. A look at a book of small drawings she's done which symbolize the events in her life suggests that both abstracts and figures will move toward stronger, simplier forms.

C.D. STOUFFER

Pat Boyer considers the watercolor at lower left a transition piece that leads into her new work such as the colorful abstract directly above it. The abstracts,

Rearranging space can provide more room

Your present home can be rearranged to provide more room than you ever thought possible, according to Sally Clark and Lois Perschetz, two decorating writers who recently wrote a book on space-making ideas they have discovered over the years.

The title of their book is selfexplanatory: "Making Space: How To Decorate and Renovate to Get the Space You Need from the Space You Have."

Most people assume they must do without needed space or move, ignoring the space they already have, the two women say.

Instead, they suggest you look for extra space along the walls, at ceiling height or in the corners of rooms. If necessary, create what you need by building or buying two freestanding closets along one end of a room and using the space between for shelves, a desk or table, a sofa or bed.

Our goal has been to show it is possible to improve space, explained Perschetz.

The solutions we show work in all types of homes, added Clark, who are both former editors of House Beautiful Magazine.

To householders and apartment dwellers who find their possessions over-running their space, the two women offered some room-by-room suggestions for improving the situation.

"Approach your home in terms of needs instead of focusing on the traditional use of the room," said Perschetz

For example, in a dining room, move the table out of the center of the room over to one side. This frees the room to become something more than the rarely used setting for holiday dinners that it is in most homes she said

Moving the table makes it possible to bring bookshelves or home electronic equipment and some seating and convert the room to a family center. With careful planning, you'll still be able to use the room for holiday dining by moving some of the new furniture to one side.

If you don't have a dining room, but want one, look for a spot that can be converted. One person whose home is illustrated in their book carved a dining. room out of a fover by using a dropleaf table that seats six comfortably when opened.

In the bathroom, the space most often wasted is the area above the shower head and below the ceiling. The two suggest you build shelves above the tub for towels and other items

Both admitted to pet peeves against standard bathroom vanities. "They are too small," said Clark, Instead, she suggested mirroring the area above the sink and building more commodious shelves to one side.

If two bathrooms would relieve the morning rush, but there isn't room or money enough to cover their construction, try adding a second lavatory and toilet and continuing with only one tub. By creating a second small half-bath that connects to the existing tub, you've solved the problem and used less money and space than a second full bath would require.

Using wall space more creatively is also a way to get more mileage out of your kitchen. They suggest employing products such as grids or pegboard to hang utensils out in the open. An overhead pot rack accommodates pots and pans and makes them more accessible. It also frees valuable cabinet space for other items.

They see three possibilities when dealing with a tiny kitchen. Depending on your decorating taste, you could opt for floor-to-ceiling cabinets and no clutter. Or, you could outfit the kitchen with niches and nooks so there is a place for everything. A third idea would be to use kitchen utensils as accessories. Hang plates on cabinet door-fronts, suspend herbs from the ceiling, display knives and other utensils in decorative pitchers.

In a high-ceiling room, opt for establishing two levels of activity. You can build in and carpet platforms that open to reveal storage or stack mattresses one, two and three high to create a series of seating "steps."

Unused spaces exist in every home, they said. Look for them under the stairs, in corners or in narrow hallways which can be likely resting places for narrow pieces of furniture.

Under the stairs, for example, you could install a bunk bed for occasional quests, a small half-bath or a household desk and telephone center. In the corner of any room, you can wedge in a triangular cabinet, tabletop or series of shelves.

unorganized planting. Curt Peterson, Extension horticulture specialist at Michigan State University, suggests looking at the landscape as an extension of the home. It includes public, private and utility areas and may include special use areas, such as a pet run. vegetable garden or volleyball court. Well thought out landscaping can help define use areas, frame desirable views and screen out unattractive vistas, as well as enhance the general appearance of the property. The first step in planning the landscape is to make a scale drawing of the property with the major features clearly marked - walks, drives, buildings, utilities, shade trees, etc.

andscaping begins with a plan

Careful landscape planning can increase your family's enjoyment of your property, add to the value of your home and decrease the time and money costs of planting and maintaining the landscape. A carefully planned landscape also tends to look better than an

Then analyze your family's needs and wants and determine how the present landscape does or does not meet them throughout the year. Does the prevailing wind fill the driveway with snow? Are the garbage cans the dominant feature in the view from the dining room window? Is the charm of the old mulberly tree fading faster than the mulberry stains on the carpet - and on the dog? Would you like to have a flower or vegetable garden, a grassy area where the children could play, a patio or deck, or storage for a recreational vehicle? Would you like to spend less time maintaining your home grounds and more time enjoying them?

"The next question is, will plants do the job for you in the landscape?" Peterson says. "Perhaps a living snow fence of shrubs in the proper place could redirect blowing snow for you. Establishing a utility area in a less prominent place in the yard and screening it with shrubs or a section of fence could improve the view at mealtime. And a fruitless, high quality shade tree could replace the mulberry."

Before you start looking at plants, however, you need to determine what limitations the planting site places on your choice. The growing conditions on a site - whether the spot is low and wet, hot and sunny in the summer, shady, exposed to the wind and sun in winter --- will limit your choices in plants.

"Certain plants have very strict arowing requirements." Peterson says. "Others are more tolerant, but most have a fairly limited range of light, moisture and soil conditions in which they do best. A common, inexpensive plant in a site that offers it optimum growing conditions will do more for the landscape than an expensive, exotic, poorly adapted plant that is just barely surviving." Other considerations in the planting site are the location of overhead and underground utilities, the need for an unobstructed view (of play areas for young children, for instance, or of the street and approaching traffic for drivers exiting the property), ease of maintenance, space available and proximity to the house and other structures.

By the time you've thought through these considerations, you can begin to consider types and families of plants and decide what ornamental characteristics are important to you. Mature size, shape, color of foliage, presence of foliage all year round. interesting bark texture or color. flowers, fruits and potential pest problems are among the traits to consider

"Select plants with the characteristics you need to meet the goals of your plan," Peterson advises. "Make sure the plants you select fit the environmental conditions you have identified on your planting site, and make sure they won't interfere with overhead or underground utilities or home maintenance chores. Make sure, too, that plants will have room to develop. Drastic pruning to keep a plant within bounds is no substitute for choosing a smaller plant better adapted to the site."

he garden corner:

There's nothing like a breath of spring to start the gardening questions rofling in. Extension specialists at Michigan State University answer some timely questions about vegetable gardening, lawns. landscape plants and related topics:

What are the first crops I can plant in my garden in the spring?

In the vegetable garden, radishes, lettuce, spinach, carróts, onions and peas are the first crops to be planted from seed. Calendula (pot marigoids) and sweet peas can be planted in the flower garden as soon as the soil is dry enough to work. The cole crops cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, etc. - can be set in the garden as transplants in mid-April in central lower Michigan.

is there any real advantage to planting tomatoes much before mid-Mav?

If you warm the soil before planting by covering it with plastic and protect the tops of the plants against frost and cold temperatures, you may be able to start harvesting tomatoes earlier than usual. Warming the soil is critical --plants with their roots in cold soil won't grow. You can use either black or clear plastic to warm the soil, but black plastic will also control weeds by blocking the light from reaching the soil and germinating weed seeds.

Warming the soil can also promote quicker germination of both cool weather crops and large-seeded warm weather crops, such as beans, sweet corn and squash. Planted in cold, damp soil, these seeds tend to rot rather than germinate. Because the chances of losing early planted warm-Conception and the state of the weather crops to frost are high — you have to forget to protect them only the same to try early clanting nce — If a wise to try early planting th only a few plants or a short row of eds rather than risk an entire planting and your whole harvest. If you do lose the first planting, you still have plenty of time to replant.

Redwood knockdown chair is easy to build

Redwood knockdown deck chair is simple to build

Put it together one way to relax in it, then pull it apart and turn it the other way for space saving storage. This ingenious knockdown redwood deck chair is easy to build using clear all heart redwood. The rewards when the project is completed are a comfortable seat that's easy to store and that won't be ruined if it's left out in the weather

Materials needed are:

	amt.	size	length
back legs	2	2x6	40 inches
seat legs	2	2x6	36 inches
seat, back slats	14	3/4×2	20 inches
top handle slat	1	3/4×4	20 inches
support slats	2	3/4×2	171/2 inches
flathead woodscre	ews and	plugs	5

To assemble:

1. Make full size template for back and seat legs; cut. Cut all slats to size.

2. Make full size template for top slate; cut. Drill 1/2 inch holes to locate outside edges of handle opening. Cut interior with sabre saw or keyhole saw

3. Round corners and edges of all slats and legs. Sand.

4. Drill 1/2 inch round counterbore plug holes for screws: (a) 1 % inch in from end for back slats: (b) 3 34 inch in from end for seat slats; (c) 3/4 inch in from end for supports. Use 2 screws on top slat. support slats, and from and back seat slats. NOTE: The easiest way to free wood plugs from the board is to pry around them gently with a screwdriver until they pop out. Often plugs are deep enough so they can be sliced to make two plugs from one cut

5. Locate and screw bottom support slat on face of back legs 11inch up from bottom. Locate and screw supports and back slats so there is 15 inches between inside of leas

6. Locate and screw top support slat on back leaving 3 ¼ inch between slats.

7. Locate and screw back slats starting with top handle slat, leaving 1/2 inch between slats

8. Locate and screw 8 seat slats starting with outermost slat and leaving 1/2 inch between slats. There must be 14 1/2 inch between outside of leas. 9. Install plugs, let glue dry thoroughly.

Test for fit of sections; if pieces bind adjust by sanding. Sand plugs and finish.

Spring do-it-yourself projects

Tennyson expressed that in spring a person's fancy turns to thoughts of love. But he didn't mention that your thoughts may have turned to Do-It-Yourself projects around your family's

There is repair work, clean up, planting and building projects, to name a few. Or, perhaps this spring is set aside for building a new deck or greenhouse in your backyard.

If you haven't cleaned out your workshop all winter, spring is an opportune time to get rid of the buildup of scraps and waste. It's also important to clean and condition tools regularly. For hand tools, a rustinhibiting product should be applied to protect blades.

Once the weather has warmed, you may be tempted to get outside for family fun. In addition to the regular activities, turn ordinary work into an event. If you have smaller children, you might create a game out of picking up the yard, or challenge other family members by encouraging them to repair the doghouse and give it a fresh coat of paint. If play equipment, such as a swing or sandbox is installed. cleaned or repaired first, you should have little problem keeping youngsters out of the way so you can concentrate on larger undertakings.

New additions can help turn an ordinary yard into a modern garden. Build a deckoff the back or the side of your house, for example. Or build a gazebo or greenhouse. It's often most helpful to start projects before cleaning the yard and doing repair work. You will save yourself from cleaning up twice.

Remodel with lighting

Remodeling of residential homes today is "big business" and becomes ever more popular with homeowners as they outgrow their present home, and find purchasing a new and larger residence more and more costly.

The alternative, of course, as young children grow to teenagers and need more bedroom and study area, as the lady-of-the-house wants to add more appliances like a microwave oven in the kitchen or a laundry room on the first floor instead of in the basement, as the need for additional, and separate, entertainment and hobby areas expands, or a family takes elderly parents to live with them, is extensive remodeling.

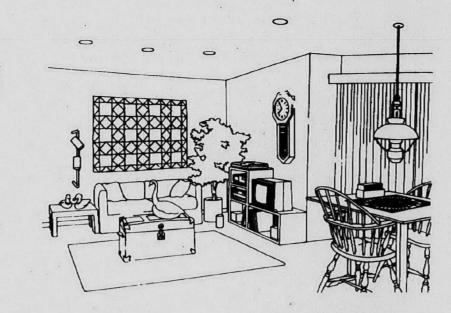

It is at this point, while still in the talking and planning stage, before blueprints are drawn, that a home lighting inventory and reassessment should be undertaken. Lighting is one of remodelings most overlooked elements.

There are many changes and additions in home lighting that can improve the home and quality of life for its occupants. If your remodeling plans are not too extensive, the base lighting system usually remains in place. Typical modifications are rewiring for better control, substituting more efficient light sources for less efficient ones, and relocating existing fixtures for better task lighting and to eliminate unwanted glare (more wattage is not always better) and shadows: lighting a formerly dark corner of a small room can make the whole room seem larger and more inviting

Structural Lighting

If your remodeling plans are fairly extensive, structural lighting is most easily, and economically, installed at this time. Structural lighting may include a lighted: soffit, cornice, cove, valance, wall bracket, canopy, toe mold, slot, top of cabinet, under counter or room divider. Recessed downlighting is a very important form of structural lighting. It is a fixture recessed into the ceiling and is very unobtrusive. The fixture may have a lense or diffuser. A lens either spreads or concentrates light; a diffuser scatters the light and hides the bulb.

Energy Consideration

Remodeling time is an excellent time to think about energy considerations in home lighting. Lighting constitutes less than 11 percent of residential electricity usage-despite the fact the average single-family home has nearly 28 lighting fixtures, as opposed to movable lamps.

Some Specifics provision for adding fixtures over the sink, under cabinets and any area where tasks are performed; and maybe, add a pendant light or chandelier over a table in an adjacent dining area.

In the bedroom, don't just put a fixture in the middle of the room. Consider lighting grooming areas at a dressing table, light for reading in bed, valance lighting to expand the visual size of the room and enhance draperies, and perhaps a chandelier or pendant over a table for late at night suppers, or catching up on tasks brought home from the office away from the distractions in other home areas. Fixtures suspended from the ceiling save all your table space for your work.

If your remodeling doesn't include restructuring walls, track lighting is easy to install and very flexible. It can be ceiling or wall-mounted and many decorative styles and sizes are available. Single, double, or triple spot fixtures are another good and flexible choice.

The downlights should be positioned over the front or back edge of the seats, not over the center. The light surrounding this special area must be dimmer so it doens't intrude. although brighter light may be in farther places in the room.

Chandellers

Nothing will more dramatically enhance a dining room than the addition of a chandelier if you don't already have one, or the replacement of an older style fixture with something new and different.

A chandelier hung over a table should be 12 inches smaller in diamater than the smallest table dimension. How high over a table used for eating? The lowest part of the fixture should be no less that 2 feet 6 inches above the tabletop. When remodeling in a dinimg room, also consider the addition of wall scones to match the chandelier.

Plants for every window

Whether your windows face north, south, east or west, you can fill them with colorful flowering and foliage plants that will grow and thrive. The key to growing attractive houseplants is to select plants that will thrive in the amount of light you have available.

Most plants won't die the minute they are placed in a window that is too dark, but without the light they need to produce food they will literally starve to death. Such plants will slowly lose old leaves and produce smaller new ones, and as time goes on will become tall and spindly. If you match the plants you grow to the amount of light you have available at your windowsill, and observe a few basic cultural practices, you will be well on your way to a windowsill garden that will grow and thrive not only from month to month, but from year to year.

The first step in deciding how much light your windowsill garden receives is to determine which way the window faces. Use a compass if necessary. North-facing windows receive the least amount of light, south the most. East and west windows receive roughly the same amount, although west windows tend to be hotter than east windows.

You must also consider how much actual light finds its way through your windows. The glass itself cuts down on light, even when the windows are sparkling clean. If your window is heavily shaded by trees, curtains, nearby buildings or a porch roof or awning, the amount of light will be reduced considerably. Curtains, even sheer ones, can effectively turn a west window into a "north" one.

If you have an unusually dark window, or a dark corner that cries for a plant, consider purchasing two identical plants recommended for a north window. Rotate the plants between the dark spot and a bright window on a weekly basis.

Supplemental lighting is another solution. Suspend a fluorescent fixture over the spot where you want the plant, and use one cool-white and one warm-white tube to provide a wide spectrum of light. Attach a timer so it will turn on and off automatically. Most plants will appreciate at least 12 to 14 hours of supplemental light per day.

Another way to provide additional light is to reflect it onto plants. White walls will reflect more light than dark ones, and a well-placed mirror can reflect a great deal of light onto plants in a room.

The amount of light available to a plant diminishes quite rapidly as you it is elegans (paddi dalhi) ...

move away from a window. Place plants as close as possible to a window without touching it. If they need to be more than two feet from an east or west window, choose a species recommended for a northern exposure

Avoid placing plants directly on top of radiators or heating ducts.

Dust on leaves cuts down on the amount of light a plant receives. The misting used to raise humidity levels around a plant doesn't wash off much dust. A better solution is to regularly give your plants a brief shower. For large plants, tie a plastic bag around the pot, covering the soil as much as possible (so it doesn't wash away), and set the plant, pot and all, in the shower under a gentle stream of tepid water for several minutes. Small plants can be rinsed in the sink. In the summer, plants can be moved outside and sprayed with a gentle stream from the hose.

Regular showers also help with insect control by washing away insects before an infestation gets started. Most can be washed away with a gentle rub. Use a soft brush for hairy-leaved plants. If you see evidence of an infestation, wash the leaves with a weak solution of white soap (one or two tablespoons to a gallon of water) with a soft sponge.

Select your plants according to the amount of light you have available, don't neglect the basics of good culture - proper watering, humidity levels, fertilizing and soil conditions and you will be well on your way to houseplants you can enjoy for years to come.

Here are some examples of houseplants that prefer light from the:

 NORTH — Asplenium nidus (bird's nest fern), Maranta leuconeura (prayer plant), Zebrina pendula (wandering jew), and Dieffenbachia sp. (dumb cane).

• SOUTH - Pelargonium sp. (geranium), Aloe barbadensis (medicinal aloe), Crassula argentea (jade plant) and Brassaia arboricola (Hawaiian shefflera).

• EAST - Nephrolepsis exaltata (Boston fern), Oxalis (shamrock), Cissus rhombifolia (grape ivy) and Clivia minnata (kaffir lily).

• WEST - Ficus elastica (rubber plant), Monstera deliciosa (cut-leaf philodendron) and Chamaedorea

itchen remodeling takes a budget

The first thing to consider in remodeling a kitchen is what's wrong with it. The second is what you'd like to add, subtract or edit to make it workable and more attractive Few kitchens in older homes have enough storage or counter space. They're dimly lit, have inadequate ventilation and inefficient appliances.

They need help!

So, sometimes, does a kitchen in a relatively new home if it doesn't suit your lifestyle. It may have been designed for a family of three, and yours is a family of six in which five of the six like to cook.

How many people will use the kitchen is an important consideration in determining its layout. You may need two sinks, to accomodate a salad chef at the second or a bartender if the kitchen is to be an entertainment center as well as a place to prepare food.

Impatiens, fibrous-rooted begonias, tuberous begonias and coleus are probably the most popular and widely available flowering annuals for shade. Impatiens, coleus and fibrous begonias can be purchased in flats or multi-packs and transplanted after the danger of frost is past. Tuberous begonias must be started indoors in early spring.

Impatiens forms thick mounds covered with 1 to 2 inche flowers in a wide range of bright colors. Fibrous begonias tend to spread less and bear many but smaller flowers. Some tuberous begonias produce flowers nearly a foot in diameter in brilliant shades of red, pink, coral, salmon, yellow and white. Coleus is grown for its colored and often exotically shaped foliage.

Any of these would do well in a northern exposure. In an eastern exposure, where plants would get sun in the morning and shade in the afternoon, you could also plant salvia or nicotiana (flowering tobacco). Most shade-tolerant plants will do well in a site with morning sun and afternoon shade but will not thrive in a spot shaded in the morning and exposed to the hot, harsh afternoon

Two cooking centers, too, can be a convenience if one member of the family likes to bake and another to barbecue, or if the children clamor for snacks while you're preparing the main course for company. They can use the microwave, you the conventional or convection oven.

What used to be a simple enough matter of layout out an efficient work triangle - a triangle of not more than 22 nor less than 12 feet beween sink, refrigerator and range - has become complicated by the fact people are spending more time in the kitchen.

Using it more and enjoying it more requires satellite centers. A planning center, perhaps, that incorporates a computer: Where do you put it?

Take precise measurements before designing a layout based on your answers to host of questions, and scaled to your budget.

summer squash, but a hill of each type planted according to the directions on the seed packet would produce enough squash for a small army. Any suggestions?

Try planting three or four types of squash in each hill. Plant two seeds of each variety and thin to one plant of each. This will give you a good mixture in more manageable quantities than planting a hill of each type.

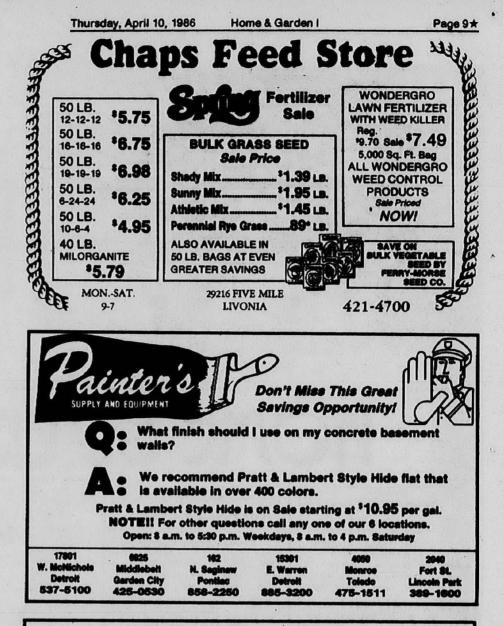

I put a complete fertilizer on my lawn last fall. Do I need to fertilize again this spring?

MSU research indicates it's better to hold off fertilizing lawns with nitrogen until late May or early June. Early fertilization promotes lush top growth at the expense of root development.

is there any advantage to buying large tomato plants for transplanting into the vegetable garden?

No. In fact, you're better off to buy smaller plants. They'll suffer much less from transplant shock and so will quickly get down to the business of establishing a strong root system to support future growth and fruit production. Large plants that have flowers and/or fruits on them at transplanting time may never develop large, healthy root systems. Their yields may be significantly lower and they are much more likely to suffer during dry weather.

V hat every home buyer should know

Whether you are buying or selling your home - and it's a hot real estate market right now - property inspection is one of the wisest investments you can make, according to a local home inspection service. "Home inspections performed by qualified specialists can take a lot of worry out of the purchase and sale of real property," says Glen R. Hadfield. president of Total Check Inc., a Southfield-based home inspection service with offices at local, regional and - coming soon - national

Martin D. Goldman, owner of the firm, feels that buyers and sellers can also garner helpful maintenance and home remodeling tips from an

"We encourage the buyer to walk through with our inspector. We provide a 20-page checklist report to the buyer at the time of inspection and encourage our clients to ask the inspector questions.

"It generally takes two to three hours to do an inspection. We don't do repairs or recommend contractors. but we do offer liability protection along with the service we provide." Goldman commented.

With the fast turnover of homes on the market today, inspection service provides both the buyer and seller with useful information on any problems with the house or property.

"Every house is different. There are, surprisingly, some perfect houses, but many times the buyers are amazed with the things our inspectors turn

"We're not there to kill the deal (the real estate sale), but let people know what needs to be done," he added. Over 500 items are checked by Total Check and some of the main areas include the roof, both as to structural soundness and any water penetration; basement and foundation; central heat system and its components; central cooling system and its components; walls, ceilings and floors as to structural soundness; kitchens and laundry areas and built-in appliances: bathrooms; living areas; garages; windows, doors and fixtures; water heaters; water pressure: electric receptacles and fixtures; insulation; ventilation; and optional inspections of any system.

"Many people buy a house on impulse and worry about the decision later. This provides an impartial analysis from which a purchase decision can be made. Your home is probably your largest investment and should be protected," said Goldman.

If someone is just thinking about selling, Goldman suggests it might be to their advantage to have a house check done. Maintenance tips, suggestions and fact sheets on a home can point out where some dollars might have to be spent on keeping the home up. Why put a lot of money into redecorating when a very real priority might be to put in a new electrical system or heating element. We're usually surprised when our plumbing or household systems fail and an inspection can give clues to trouble spots.

Goldman notes that inspectors are former engineers, architects, general contractors, builders and persons with similar background who have learned the difference between significant problems and cosmetic flaws, have developed a sense for detecting suspicious symptoms and are sufficiently trained to communicate their findings and recommendations clearly. He recommends that anyone securing an inspection service should carefully check the credentials of the individual doing the work.

"The average house of 1,500 to 1,999 square feet costs approximately $200 to inspect through Total Check," said Goldman. "Having a home inspected protects everyone."
