Study group to weigh township goals

By Doug Funke staff writer

Plymouth Township? What of the quality of life here over the next 20 years'

Some township officials believe it's better to consider possibilities in advance rather than wait and react to circumstances as they arise.

A committee of residents and representatives of business, industry and government has been proposed to explore goals of township government over the next two decades.

We're expanding rapidly. We're getting more people moving in," said Trustee Abe Munfakh, a committee member

What do we want? What do the citizens want? Do we want more services? Less services? Do we incorpo-What will the future bring to rate into a city? Do we want to encourage economic development or isn't it needed?

> So far, the committee consists of Munfakh, Supervisor Maurice Breen, Planning Director James Anulewicz, Gregory Williams, a planning comnussioner, and Marcia Buhl, a corporate affairs manager for Michigan Bell

ALSO EXPECTED to be appointed are an individual who has lived in the township at least 10 years, a person who has lived here two years or less and representatives of retail and manufacturing businesses They face an interesting, two-fold challenge. Anulewicz said.

"It's kind of stepping back and assessing what your goals are, what your strengths are, what your shorttalls are, if any. After evaluating, you determine specific recommendations

It should go beyond that, he added. All too often, somebody comes up with recommendations, but doesn't tell you what you should be doing to implement those recommendations.

Munfakh said he looks at the commattee as more than just another study group

If I thought it was just an intellectual exercise. I wouldn't serve,'

THE QUESTION of cityhood vs tewnship government status, which Munfakh believes will be considered, has a definite effect on residents. Cities almost universally offer more services at a higher tax rate than tewnships

A survey of area manufacturers spawned the committee, as did periodic discussions of goals and objectives among Anulewicz, Breen and Munfakh.

Committee work is expected to begin in earnest this fall and continue until next spring.

Informal hearings would probably be less intimidating and more fruitful than formal public hearings, Munfakh said.

We want all ideas anybody might have," Munfakh said. "We want evervbody's ideas so we can melt them together in a melting pot and hopefully come up with a good plan for the community.

Who can really tell whether we're going to be living here 20 years from now? We could be. If we are, how do we want to find the community'

Sale of surplus school parcels nets big profit

By Doug Funke staff writer

The Plymouth-Canton Community Schools will realize a sizable profit if the sale of three surplus pieces of property totaling 3312 acres materialize

The school board Monday accepted conditional offers on 13.7 acres on McClumpha just north of Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth Township, 10.2 acres at Haggerty and Warren in Canton, and 9.6 acres on Barchester near Miller School in Canton.

Over the years, the school district paid $135,950 for those parcels. If the three sales go through, the district will gross a profit of $365,050 plus interest.

The school district acquired the McClumpha property in 1973 for $85,000. Hoedel said.

Belovicz said he would prefer an industrial zoning on the Haggerty property. "I want to get in and do something fast," he said. "We're playing with real money.

Adams, 62 who has been a process server for 20 years, sports an unmistakable white beard and tattoos on his forearms. That beard leads to one of several stories on people's reactions to receiving a summons

"One said one day. You look like Santa Claus I said, yeah, I've got a gift for you.

The lady was hard to catch, so he (her husband) said if you see her car parked behind the garage, she's here So I went by and I seen the car I went over to the house. He said 'Just a minute, and I looked out the corner of my eye and here she ripped out the side door in just her bathrobe and hair all wet

I chased her right down the street and she says to me. You look like a fool, what you're doing.' And here she was all in her bathrobe.

Plymouth school officials this week also learned of the death of James K. Symonds, a former director of buildings and maintenance.

Mr. Symonds, a Westland resident, died last Saturday. He was 49.

Mr. Symonds, a U.S. Army veteran, coached junior baseball in Plym-cies enabling buyers to walk away from the transactions. The most-important contingency is the ability to obtain land use (zoning) designations for desired development.

Melvin Belovicz of Southfield offered $152,000 for the Haggerty property and $115,000 for the Barchester parcel

HIS OFFER on the Haggerty property hinges on a rezoning to light industrial or office use, and the Barchester parcel on permission to build houses in a planned unit development

Belovicz was the only bidder on each.

The school district acquired the Haggerty parcel in 1958 for $20,000 and the Barchester property in two separate purchases in 1969 and 1971 for a total of $30,950, said Raymond Hoedel, associate superintendent for business

The school board accepted a bid of $225,000 from Arthur Gerish, a Plymouth developer builder for the McClumpha parcel even though another bidder, Selective Group Corp., had offered $250,000.

A larger down payment and fewer contingencies asked by Gerish apparently turned the tide in his favor

School officials indicated they would help relocate a cooperative nursery now leasing an old building there for $1 per year.

Belovicz said he wants to build 30 to 50 houses of about 1,500 square feet each on Barchester. They would be priced from $80,000 to $90,000, he speculated.

'I hope to have it open - models next spring

GERISH SAID he plans to build a minimum of 37 houses of about 2,300 square feet each on the McClumpha property. They likely will be offered for sale from $125,000 to $140,000, he said.

Gerish, too, anticipates building next spring.

Private development will add to the tax bases in Plymouth and Canton. It will also generate property tax revenue not available when properties are publicly owned.

In all, five surplus properties were advertised for sale last month.

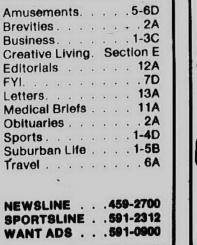

Number one, long-range plans do not call for any use for them any more," said Hoedel. "Number two, the (real-estate) market is better now than a year or two ago."

The other two parcels - 18 acres on Maben and 15.1 acres on Proctor, both in Canton — have generated no offers to date.

We'll continue offering them for sale." Hoedel said.

Although rain postponed the balloon race and limited the number of spectators viewing the Sixth Annual Mayflower Hotel Hot Air Balloon Festival, local business promotions tied to the festival were termed a sale. Of 10 to 15 business owners big success.

Scott Lorenz, co-chairman of the festival, said the weather - rain on Friday and Saturday, along with 20 mph winds on Sunday - "was definitely a problem.

We're a bit disappointed in the weather, but what can you do?" he asked. With 50 of the 60 planned entrants able to compete in various races, however, the festival was still successful, said Lorenz, who is general manager of the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth.

Although the rain Friday normally wouldn't be enough to cancel a scheduled flight, Lorenz said lowclouds and limited visibility prohibited the ascent that night. Competition opened when the skies cleared late Saturday and Ray Pini, piloting which will present them to a future the Captain Cutty's balloon, won first prize in the competition, sponsored by Eastern Airlines.

With rain falling Saturday morning, shoppers still flocked to downtown Plymouth at 5 a.m. for the Early Riser Inflation Sale.

Mike Ball, promotion chairman with the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce, estimated that 5,000 to 6,000 turned out for the participating in the sale whom Ball had contacted, "They were all very pleased with the weekend." One store reported its best sales day ever, he added.

A combined American Airlines-New York Air race Saturday was won by Lorenz and co-chairman Gordon Boring.

Man collects more than deposit refund

A man reached into a cash register after it had been opened by a clerk at Beyer Rexall Drugs on Ann Arbor Road Monday and made off with a handful of bills, the clerk reported to Plymouth police

It was later determined that nearly $250 was stolen.

The man was described as white, in his mid-20s, 5-foot-8, 150 pounds with brown hair. He was wearing a beige or gray T-shirt, jeans and work boots

The clerk told police that the man entered and walked to the rear of the store at approximately 1:10 p.m. to turn in some empty pop bottles.

He then went to the front counter, police accounts indicate, put some change on the counter and asked for his deposit refund.

The clerk then opened the register, she said, and the man reached inside and grabbed the money. He was last seen walking west in front of nearby storefronts.

ornery with them because that will put them on the defensive right away. The job is to get the paper served and leave, don't hassle them."

Adams oversees a part-time staff of five. Together, they serve 70-80 summonses per week. Fewer summonses are served between Thanksgiving and the first of the year.

According to Adams, this is because fewer people start court actions during the holiday season. As a courtesy, summonses are not usually served between Christmas and New Year's Day. A resulting upswing in the number of summonses to serve in January and February makes that the busiest time of year for Adams and his staff, which includes his son, John.

IN ADDITION to serving eviction notices to tenants who don't pay rent, Adams sometimes must put tenants' belongings in the street, as the court orders. At times, Adams has called on one son's high school football team to help move those belongings.

Adams has an office in the basement of his Plymouth home. He heads to the 35th District Court to pick up summonses three times each week and picks up summonses from 12th District Court in Livonia twice each week.

Although addresses are sometimes listed on court papers, he often goes to the post office to track down addresses.

"Evenings, if you took a percentage, are your best time of service," because that's when people are usually home, Adams has found. The process server tries not to serve people at work, to save them the embarrassment.

"Overall, people are all right; they know you're coming. And like I say, I didn't run the bill up. If you have a reversed situation where you're serving for them against somebody, then you're a nice guy. But when you're doing it the opposite, then you're a bad guy."

Thursday, July 17, 1986 O&E Tough races fuel Hertel's campaign

By Terl Banas staff writer

This is another in a series of profiles on the Democratic candilates for Wayne County executive. .

Whether he planned to or not, John Hertel had created an analogy between his race for county executive in August 1986 and a tough Class A boys' football championship he played for Detroit's Denby High School in November 1963.

Reminiscing, he said the odds were against his team. Outsized, but not outsmarted, they stood ready facing opponents who averaged 240 pounds "and not one of our guys was over 200. Everybody said this team was too small to win."

"So you know what we did?" he asked, proceeding to describe a play that called for spreading out the of-fensive line, taking advantage of some "fast runners" on the team, and insuring that the other side "just couldn't close up the holes.

'And that's just what we're doing in this campaign," he said. "We don't have the power, or the money, but we have determination and innovation."

HERTEL, the 39-year-old chairman of the Wayne County Commission, Harper Woods east-sider, and 14-year political veteran, is in the midst of a one of his toughest campaigns yet.

Now serving his second, consecutive commission term, Hertel said, if elected, his agenda will include strengthening the diverse county by unifying interests, promoting eco-nomic development and working to prevent social ills such as birth defects and juvenile crime.

'I'd really make an effort to unify the county. One-fourth of all the state reps and senators come from Wayne County, for instance. You've got to convince them that by fighting amongst yourselves you're not going to get anywhere."

One example of a common concern worth lobbying for is mandatory sentencing of convicted felons as crime is a major concern, he said.

Along with that, he said, is an "innovative" approach to corrections that would have Michigan return to a prison farm system, such as that found in Ohio. Cheaper to develop than prisons, he said prison farms also provide a healthier environment for first-time offenders.

ON ECONOMIC development, he said the area should take a regional approach. "As long as its in southeast Michigan, people in Wayne County will benefit with jobs," he said

Late last year, Hertel began lobbying Washington lawmakers to designate the Wayne County Port Au-thority and Metropolitan Airport as a military receiving center, a plan he still promotes and says would cause significant economic impact. As for the county's approaching $30 million deficit, Hertel said he would use the same cost-cutting ap-proach for Wayne County that he and former senate colleague Patrick McCollough used in Lansing.

The Michigan Efficiency Task Force used 70 private industry efficiency experts, who worked as volunteers on assignment to the state for six months. Together they drafted department by department rec-ommendations that Hertel said saved Michigan $200 million in 10 vears

In Wayne County, Hertel'said he would appoint 50 volunteers "to identify waste and make a public report" beginning next September.

Hertel got his political start as a high school civics teacher entering a race for the Wayne County Board of Commissioners when it had 27 members. He was elected for the first time in 1972 at age 25, then the youngest office-holder on the commission.

But he left after nine months to run in a special senate seat election for nine years, he returned to Wayne County government in 1982 in time to take part in the charter reform movement.

BILL BRESLER/ staff photographer Hertel stands awaiting the upcoming August primary.

Hertel talked about that return and his support of eliminating the road commission, and placing authority for roads in the county executive's office.

'The first thing, I wanted to do was go after the biggest target of all and and won. Serving in the state Senate that was the road commission," he said. In eight months a ballot proposal was fashioned and the commission placed it before the voters, and it was approved. "As far as I was concerned, when that happened, the back of the old Wayne County government was broken.

After winning re-election in 1984, Hertel formed a new coalition of suburban and Detroit commissioners and became chairman.

county election '86

HERTEL TAKES credit for of the AFL-CIO. "I wasn't wealthy, I streamlining commission operations with a rewriting of the rules which he did with legal assistance from his political ally Milton Mack, D-Wayne, an attorney. Eliminated was the socalled committee of the whole, considered cumbersome. Then in 1985 the two joined forces to eliminate the office of the county drain commission. After a lengthy debate, the com-mission agreed to place the proposal on the November-general election ballot

In another controversial move last year, Hertel, a member of the Huron-Clinton Metropark Authority (HCMA) advocated turning over two of the county's parks to HCMA.

HE SAID the move is necessary because of the county's fiscal problems. But comissioners from western Wayne County along with county parks director Eric Reickel oppose the plan.

The HCMA has since the put the issue aside until the fall.

In his 14-year political career Hertel has never lost a race int some wins have even surprised himself Raised on Detroit's northwest side, Hertel was the eldest of three sons who chose political life.

Brothers Dennis and Curtis serve as a U.S. congressman and state representative, respectively.

When he ran in his first commission race, he had to beat an incumbent who had a built-in power base as a former metro Detroit president wasn't well-known and I wasn't an attorney, so a lot of people said, 'Why are you even running?'

*5A

IN THAT summer campaign, when he and friends painted homemade lawn signs, he was living up to a childhood aspiration of serving in public life.

Winning that election, he served long enough to decide one commis-stoner out of 27 (the number of comissioners before the new charter was approved) wasn't going to make much difference. So, he jumped at a chance to run for state senate in a special 1974 election.

Less than a year later he waged his second senate campaign, beating 19-year incumbent Stanley Rozycki in a newly drawn district. (Rozycki today serves with Hertel on the county commission.)

While in the state Senate, he wrote the law to establish a state commission overseeing the state's toxic substance problems and the PBB cleanup; sponsored a truth-in-advertising law that required item pricing; and sponsored the two-year mandatory gun law.

A political science professor at Lawrence Institute of Technology, Hertel plans to build on the strong Democratic base of his east-side district in this race. That, coupled with support from the rural areas of the far west side of the county and a portion of the Downriver area, could generate the "30 percent that's going to win this thing," he said. The test will come on Aug. 5.

"We are extremely pleased that almost 100 lives have been saved during the law's first year," said Connie Soma, director of the Michigan Coalition for Safety Belt Use. We hope all Michigan motorists see the positive effects of the law and buckle up.

The Michigan Coalition for Safety Belt Use is an alliance of health and medical associations, safety and insurance groups, law-enforcement organizations, state agencies, and private organizations dedicated to promoting the use of safety belts as a means of saving lives on Michigan roads and highways. The State Police report also revealed a decline in traffic fatalities for this year's 78-hour Fourth of July holiday weekend compared with the previous 78-hour Fourth of July holiday period in 1983.

Of the 19 fatalities reported for the 1986 holiday period, 14 were not wearing their safety belts.

During 1983, there were 21 fatalities reported for the same 78-hour period

In addition to Michigan, 26 states and the District of Columbia have passed safety-belt use laws.

A critical shortage of blood, especially type O, has the local American Red Cross Blood Services worried.

Unless blood donations increase significantly over the next week, hospitals will be asked to postpone elective surgery until the blood supply improves.

Asking hospitals to postpone elective surgery is the last option the local Red Cross will use in an effort to ensure that emergency blood needs can be met.

The long July 4 holiday weekend made a bad situation even worse. No blood was collected on July 4, and only 202 units were collected over the holiday weekend.

BLOOD DONOR centers of the Red Cross in western Wayne County are located at 29691 Six Mile, Livonia, and 23400 Michigan, Dearborn.

Appointments to donate blood can be made by calling 494-2800 or tollfree 1-800-552-5466. Red Cross said it appreciates appointments but also welcomes walk-in donors. All centers have evening and weekend hours

Blood donations started to decline in early June. Donations since then have averaged about 725 per day rather than the 950 to 1,000 units needed to meet the needs of area hospitals. Red Cross blood regions across the country are experiencing similar donation problems.

BLOOD CAN be denated by anyone between the age of 17 and 70 who is in good health and weighs a minimum of 110 pounds.

Thousands of mailgrams have heen sent to regular donors and telephone recruitment has been stepped up in an effort to combat the shortonom DURING OUR than a year ago.

According to the records of the church of Ste. Anne's, there were 363 baptisms, 70 marriages and 216 deaths at Ville d'Etroit between 1750 and 1760. Both English and French Catholics attended Ste. Anne's, and, at this early date, many Protestants were also baptized and married there.

There was no other church for many hundreds of miles. The beloved Ste. Anne's was the people's citadel of civilization in the wilderness, deeply respected by Catholics and Protestants.

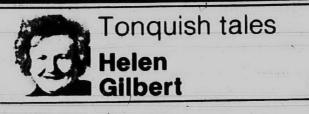

At this time, all the area later known as Michigan Territory was largely unexplored. Joliet and Marquette explored the Mississippi in 1673 from their base in Michigan.

LaSalle and his men built Fort Miami (St. Joseph) in 1679, and in 1680 made a thousand fhile journey through the hinterlands of Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

Another great explorer, Daniel Greysolon, Sieur Duluth, explored Michigan at this time, and helped to open the West beyond Lake Superior to the French. The French paid their dues. They knew the wilderness beyond the perimeter of d'Etroit, but to them civilization centered in Paris, Quebec, and Montreal. Detroit was the last barricade between them and the hazards and dangers of the almost unknown wilderness.

AS WE LOOK on the busy river, we glimpse many canoes, a few perogues (wooden dugouts made from tree trunks), and dozens of batteaux loaded with trade goods. Three canoes near the bank south of the fort contain some Chippewa who are spear fishing

Their hand-carved weapons have sharp points made of stone. The fish are so plentiful in the river that sometimes they capture two or three with one swift thrust of the spear.

These Chippewa, like the other Algonquin - the Potowatomi and the Ottawa - are wonderfully skilled in fishing, hunting and trapping.

Rounding the bend in the distance, we see the brave flag of the French fleur-de-lis on a field of white silk fluttering in the breeze above a long war canoe.

Standing at the helm is our old friend, Captain Antoine Beaubien. His canoe and the seven that follow him are loadedr to the gunnels w soldiers returning from the Ohio Valley. These are the soldiers Major George Washington saw at Fort Le-Boeuf

Beaubien is bringing several urgent messages to the Detroit Commandant, Pierre Joseph Celeron, Sieur do Blainville, who is completing his second tour of duty as commandant. (He will be remembered as the captain who planted lead plates aiong several rivers of the Ohio Valley proclaiming France as the rightful owner of the territory. Today, Celeron is commemorated in the name of Celeron Island, a little island near the entrance to Lake Erie.)

THE MESSAGES are from Philip

Part of this prosperity was a re-sult of Governor La Galissonier's edict of 1749 which promised farm tools, chickens, a sow, gun powder, and lead to those who would occupy a farm at Detroit.

But that year only 46 came, and the next year, 1750, only 57 took advantage of the offer. Some of these people were shiftless and lazy, They accepted the benefits and then ran Joncaire, Sieur de Chabert, of Fort Venango, and from Legardeur de St. away. Pierre, commandant at Fort Le-Boeuf. The letters tell of the British

THE NEW GOVERNOR, the Marquis Duquesne, renewed the offers and promised to sustain the settlers at d'Etroit for two or three years. So what Captain Beaubien and his men saw was evidence of a new prosperity for the village on the strait. Most of the new settlers in Detroit were men without families, and they complained of loneliness and a desire to share their lot with others. Commandant Celeron wrote to Montreal asking them to send young women to be wives for the settlers. At this time, many young men took Indian brides, and the records at Ste. Anne's testify to this fact. Very few of the young women came from Montreal.

The soldiers of 1754 were also citizens. They were not regarded as garrison troopers confined to barracks, but were free to cultivate a small tract of land each was given upon his enlistment. This tract was outside the fort.

There the soldier could make a garden, build a little house and call himself at home. Some of these soltliers' lots on the east line of Randolph Street in today's Detroit can still be traced on the old maps although more than 200 years have passed since they were first surveyed.

A SOLDIER had to supplement his small wages with gardening, barter, hunting, trapping and fishing. Today, these activities are regarded as entertaining amusements or hobbies. To all citizens of Detroit in the 1750s, they were absolute necessities. Every man and some women had an old flintlock blunderbuss, a deadly weapon at a short distance, and it seldom missed its mark.

Gunsmiths, blacksmiths, armorers were important occupations in those days. The "smithy" was never without employment.

Let's walk though the village and see how the place is laid out. We will begin at the fort, for it is the center of all activity, and all distances are measured from it.

Today, Detroiters may read a large explanatory marker on the south side of Hotel Ponchartrain across from Cobo Hall. History buffs and others who would like an interesting and informative summer trip may explore the Detroit Historical Museum on Woodward near the Detroit Institute of Arts.

They have an excellent diorama of early Detroit on the first floor, and many floors of priceless relics and memorabilia. The marvelous museum of Fort Wayne should also be included in any summer tour of Detroit

We will continue our walk through the fort in the next edition of Tonquish Tales.

ARLEM-BORN Bill Lucas speaks the same language they speak in the farmcountry town of Lapeer: "Moral values - ethics - family values.

The Wayne County executive spoke Tuesday morning to a dozen ministers representing the Michigan Association of Christian Schools in Calvary Baptist Church and underscored as many common links as he could.

"I was part of the public school system in Harlem. My children were not," said Lucas, who with wife, Evelyn, saw to it that all six Lucases went to Catholic schools. "My grandchildren will not be," he said as the churchmen nodded approval.

"Nothing will benefit the public school system-more than competition" from the 100 independent, church-affiliated private schools, Lucas said.

"IS IT FAIR," asked one minister, "to make us pay our competition?" - a reference to parents who pay state and local taxes to public schools and also support their private schools

"I've paid all along," Lucas replied, indicating he favored no tax break for parents who pay private school tuition.

"But a voucher system could work very well," he said, alluding to an idea long touted by conservative columnist William F. Buckley Jr. Under it, the state would issue parents vouchers, which parents could spend at the school of their choice - be it public or church-related,

It illustrated the apparent distance Lucas has come politically since the early 1960s when he was a New York vice squad cop and Fordham University Law School senior and was recruited by the late Democratic Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy into federal service.

From the Justice Department, Lucas went to the FBI and its Detroit office, where then-Wayne County Sheriff Roman S. Gribbs hired him away in 1968 as undersheriff. Lucas succeeded Gribbs as sheriff by appointment in 1969, was thrice elect-

"Nothing has been done in 31/2 years on those subjects," he said.

"COMPETITIVE" was a theme he hit again at a luncheon meeting of the Lapeer Rotary Club.

Pointing to headlines in the local weekly paper about a drug-related murder, Lucas laid out his concept of a "crime tax" - the cost honest homeowners and business people pay in property insurance, security alarms and private guards, "over and above what we pay govern-ment," for protection from crime.

"Michigan leads this nation in the number of walkaways from prison. Last year, 1,800 inmates just walked away," he said.

It struck a responsive chord in Lapeer, where an unpopular state pris-on is under construction.

With adequate prisons, crime costs can be brought down, Lucas said, and with reform of the tort system, lawsuit costs can be cut down for health care providers, local governments and taverns.

THE WAYNE County executive said his liability insurance bill for Metropolitan Airport rose from $100,000 in 1983 to a current $1.6 million - for less coverage.

"Nothing has been done for a fouryear period," he said, scoring Blanchard for "lack of leadership" on tort reform. Lucas called the Legislature's recently passed compromise bill to cap "pain and suffering" damages "unusable - that's the politest word I can use." He promised to address the subject if he's elected governor Nov. 4, particularly if the House as well as the Senate is Republican.

A Rotarian asked, "Is there any light at the end of the tunnel on cocaine?"

Lucas traced the history of narcotics use - its appearance in his native Harlem, its adoption by social trend-setters, the shifts from one drug to another as dangers were discovered.

"I was extremely surprised to learn that Bill Lucas has apparently decided to avoid the League of Women Voters' debate. It appears that Bill Lucas is unwilling to face the voters of this state and explain his position on the issues," Murphy said. Murphy is Oakland County executive. Lucas is Wayne County execu-tive. They are among four candi-dates squaring off in the Aug. 5 primary for a chance to face Democratic incumbent James Blanchard on Nov. 4.

All candidates participated in se-lecting the date of the televised debate and were represented at a meeting to review the ground rules, Murphy said.

Business index edges up again

For the second month in a row, the Michigan Business Activity Index (MBAI), a measure of economic activity, rose two points, reaching a level of 133 in May, according to Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit

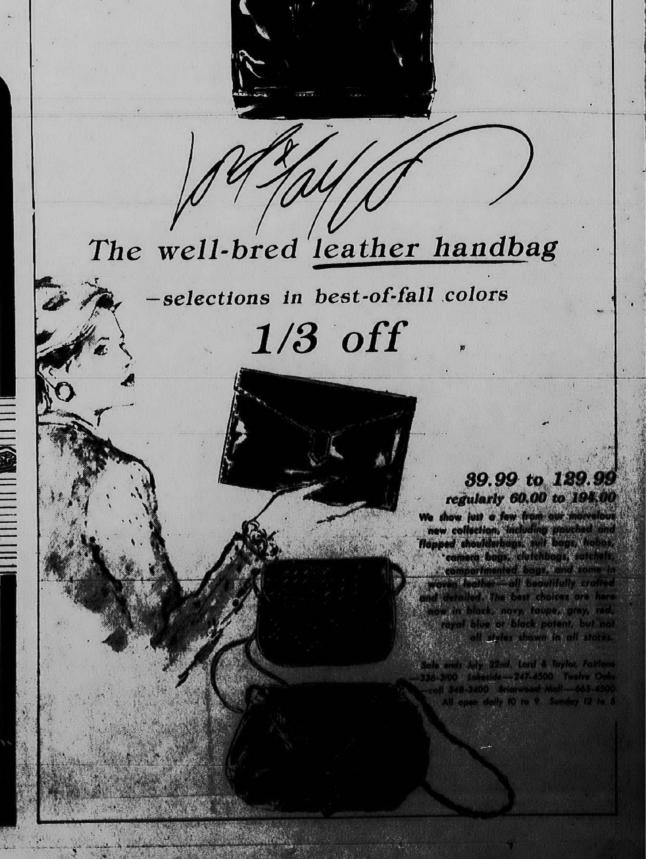

The index now stands 3.9 percent above the level of one year ago, and for the first five months of the year it is 4.2 percent ahead.

"Most of the increase came from greater steel production and higher car sales," said David L. Littmann, vice-president and senior economist of the bank.

He noted that auto sales continued to benefit from the industry's financing-incentive programs. But Litt-mann added that the overall index would have risen more impressively in May had it not been for slippage in motor vehicle production, as well as some of the employment series. The MBAI is compiled monthly from 10 different measures of Michigan economic activity by the Eco-nomics Department of Manufacturers Bank, is seasonally adjusted and corrected for inflation, and is expressed on an index basis in which 1982 equals 100.

Besides who stands the best chance of victory, the key issue is which of the two is better qualified to serve in the U.S. Congress if elected in the fall. The Observer Newspapers has interviewed both challengers and believes that Don Grimes of Ann Arbor is the best candidate on both counts - he can run a stronger campaign against Pursell than can Baker and would make a better congressman if elected.

Dean Baker, also of Ann Arbor, is an economics assistant instructor who is working on his doctorate at U-M. The younger Baker is not to be confused with the Dean Baker who is a Republican U-M Regent who once ran for the U.S. Senate nomination.

Baker can take pride in playing a key role in convincing Ann Arbor residents to approve Proposal A this spring and he advocates a change in U.S. policy in Central America. But that limited role, election is for members of nomics, is not congressional material. each party to nominate the Baker smacks too much of being a onecandidate they believe has the issue candidate although he certainly is

Grimes, on the other hand, ran in the 2nd Congressional primary two years ago and made an impression then on crats living in the party regulars. In fact, he made enough of an impression that this year the lead-2nd Congressional District, which ers within the Democratic Party are lining up behind his candidacy and putting their money behind Grimes. and Plymouth,

The main reason is that Grimes, a research economist at U-M, knows how to campaign in a district as diverse as the 2nd District and will not waste his efforts in digging in against a popular inlenge incumbent cumbent.

> Grimes also is informed on the issues, on how people in the 2nd think and what they want, and on Pursell's record.

> Grimes also has a mind of his own and can come up with fresh ideas rather than merely reciting campus rhetoric. An example is Grimes' proposal that the endangered guaranteed student loan program be replaced with direct federal loans to students, which would be collected by the IRS via a surcharge on the income tax. The IRS would be quite efficient in collecting the loan and students would benefit because the IRS administration fee quite likely would be much cheaper than the bank's interest rates.

The Observer was impressed with Grimes in 1984 and feel that experience as a candidate and the intervening two years has matured him as a politician. We endorse the candidacy of Don Grimes and recommend him to all Democrats of the 2nd District.

League guide helps inform

KEEP TUNED to your hometown paper next Monday when we publish the League of Women Voters' Q&A with the gubernatorial candidates.

And be sure to stay alert. The candidates slipped in a few dandies. I've had a look at the advance copy.

You'll do a double-take at the reply from Gov. James J. Blanchard, who boasts: "I brought Michigan's income tax rate back down to 4.6 percent, and I have indicated that if federal tax reform passes, we may be able to lower the rate even further.'

Blanchard brought down the state income tax rate to 4.6 percent ?! And how did it get above 4.6 percent in the first place?

Now, all. the major gubernatorial candidates are married, but only one lists "married" as part of his/her autobiography. And it happens to be the only candidate who has been married three times and divorced twice - Chrysler. Most reporters would never have made anything out of his lengthy marital history if his campaign brochures hadn't displayed his family. Chrysler's campaign problems are largely selfmade, much as his entourage may scoff that the Free Press is pinko.

Here's another clue: Which 1982 candidate for Wayne County executive avoided nearly all joint appearances with other candidates in the primary?

Here's yet another clue: Which 1982 Democratic nominee for Wayne County executive hid out from a debate before the Redford Township Chamber of Commerce with the alibi that there had been a threat on his life?

Why, Bill Lucas, of course. Lucas avoids questions like the plague. He's best at looking pretty for cameras. He can't deal with tough policy questions.

Now is the time of a political wonderland

IT IS THE political season. There are 18 shopping days until you must choose your candidates for governor, county executive (in Wayne County), state senator (in some areas), state representative, county commissioner and judge.

Going down the homestretch, Gov. Blanchard and his crew got an idea. They reckoned that one good way to get favorable publicity would be to announce a tax cut.

Blanchard Monday announced that because a tax amnesty program had proven successful and because of a budget surplus it was possible to cut the state personal income tax from 5.1 percent to 4.6 percent 90 days earlier than planned.

Now this is the kind of thinking that gets votes, no doubt about it, unless you remembered that Blanchard was behind the tax raise that got the rate up to its present 5.1 percent and even higher.

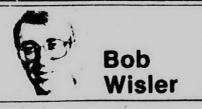

It takes as certain amount of chutzpah to take credit for lowering the tax rate that you originally raised, but such is the stuff that campaigns are made of and this is a time when we live in a kind of political Wonderland

AS CAMPAIGNS go, the ones going on these days are not much different than the ones that have gone on before. But as usual the political writers are claiming that the major races are dull and ignoring the less-than major races.

Invariably the only campaigns that get decent coverage are the contests for governor, or the gubernatorial nominations, or a contest for U.S. Senate, if there are any, which this year there aren't.

The race for the Democratic nomination for Wayne county executive has rated a few stories. Candidates for the state Legislature, county commission and judicial office are on their own.

Inevitably all the candidates reach the same conclusion: They can't win votes through the news stories, so they have to depend on advertising, knocking on doors, passing out literature and hoping they can enlist people who will urge other people to vote for them.

THE HIGHER the office, the more the candidate depends on advertising. The candidates for governor rely heavily on 30-second commercial messages and they save their messages for the last few weeks of the campaign. Expect a blitz in the days ahead.

But what can a candidate say or have said about him in 30 seconds? Not much, so the ads start resembling cola commercials with a few punch lines about jobs, crime and good government thrown in.

From such messages we are supposed to choose our governor.

The lesser candidates push paper the last few weeks of the political season. The mailboxes will be stuffed as the Aug. 5 primary draws near.

ALL THAT ANY candidate can hope for is that the recipient will look at the candidate's photo and read a few words of the literature. The best promotion material has an engaging photo and a few slogans so that no one gets bored reading

Many candidates know voters won't even read the literature that is stuffed in their mailbox, so they put up side of the road signs or lawn signs with only their name and perhaps a slogan on it. They hope that if a voters sees the name often enough he, or she, will choose that name when the curtain slides shut.

A few well-intentioned souls sometimes get together and stage candidate forums. The candidates mostly get practice talking to each other. The audience is made up of followers and loyalists who are beholden to one candidate or another. Hang on candidates, it's only for a few more weeks.

Unless you're newly arrived from Mars, you know that it was Blanchard's idea to hike the rate to 6.35 percent in 1983. It was a courageous and correct act. But for him to take credit for bringing it down - well, now, that's a whopper.

SKIP OVER Henry Hank Wilson, the LaRouche Democrat, unless you want a few guffaws over the way he's going to implement Reagan's Star Wars defense plan at the state level. But spend a bit of time with Dick Chrysler's response.

GUESS WHICH candidate is the only major gubernatorial candidate in 20 or so years who failed to answer his League of Women Voters questionnaire.

Here's a clue: Who was the one-time Wayne County sheriff who ducked out on a vacation abroad when a county board committee wanted to hold hearings on his budget?

Murphy's answers contain not an ounce of swamp gas that I can detect. Agree or disagree with their opinions as you will, Engler and Murphy are straightforward.

It has been a bad primary campaign. Most candidates are spending their time raising money to buy television commercials aimed at the idiot end of the voter spectrum. Many are making appearances, but few are talking to live voters.

For those of us who want to know how the candidates intend to govern us, the League guide will be helpful. No chance for Kennedy-style "image" making there.

We can cripple terrorism

SO IT WAS a pipe bomb and, this time at least, it didn't go off.

The story had little impact - a few paragraphs soon to be forgotten. The bomb was found near the swimming pool at the Jewish Community Center in West Bloomfield Township.

If the explosive would have detonated, if someone had been killed, the story would have been big - very big. Probably would have gotten on the wire. People around the world would have read about death and destruction in West Bloomfield, Mich. It would have fit in with the day's headlines - car bombs in Spain and Lebanon, shootings in South Africa.

But the bomb didn't go off and, for a little while at least, we can fool ourselves into believing that we are somehow different from the rest of the world, more civilized.

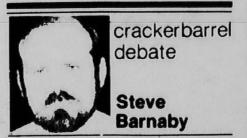

In truth, we are the same - sometimes fearful, sometimes hate-filled, other times compassionate and loving.

The unexploded-bomb incident soon will fade from our memories, replaced by more pressing data.

But we should remember. It will happen again. After all, hatred and fear are diseases we have yet to cure.

Center officials would like to believe, or maybe pretend is a better word, that the bomb's placement was unrelated to anti-Semitism. Maybe, maybe not.

You really can understand why they would prefer to believe that the bomb was a coincidence. After all, the image of some nut huddled in a dark and dank cellar making a bomb just for you is pretty tough psychological medicine to swallow.

Better it be a coincidence. At least it's easier to digest. You feel less vulnerable, less violated.

BUT WE JUST CAN'T blame the shrouded terrorist for the problem that haunts today's society.

We must give ourselves a hard look. Witnessing fear and hatred is an everyday part of a journalist's job. Most frightening is the hatred heard in the voices on the street.

And it goes far beyond singling out just one ethnic or racial group. Somewhere, somehow, this mentality of hatred and fear has been built into our society. The feeling is pervasive - if a culture is different it must be wrong. Sure, we almost are accustomed to reading about synagogues being defiled with swastikas. Every year, every newspaper circulating in an area with a Jewish community finds itself reporting the sickness

But it doesn't stop there.

Some people hate Jews. Others hate Arabs, Blacks, East Indians, American Indians, Orientals, Poles, Maltese, Armenians, Greeks, Irish, English - you name the group and somebody hates them.

EDUCATION IS NO BARRIER. Perfectly intelligent people can be incredibly irrational when it comes to people they hate.

· I've been shocked to find people I otherwise respect turning into mental vegetables when talking about "those filthy pigs." You fill in the blank.

But that's what's frightening. Only part of the danger rests with the maniacal mind contemplating the explosion. The biggest risk is in ourselves - being unaware that we spread hatred and fear by harboring and grooming our prejudices in our thinking and conversation.

It's not enough to accept "almost" every group. To keep the terrorists in check, we must master our own hatred and fears.

After all, the next bomb could explode. The bloody results could be your loved-one's remains.

Mailing puts Liberty hoopla in perspective

Blessings on thee, Esther Hulsing, Hers is a name that will ring a bell with many of you in Eccentricville and Observerland because of her leadership in southeastern Michigan Scout and educational matters.

Right now I'm willing to award this magnificent matron no worse than third behind the win and place duo of impresario David Wolper and fund-raiser Lee Iacocca in bringing home to John Q. Citizen what all the hoopla and fireworks were about during Liberty Weekend.

Mrs. Hulsing is the elected clerk of the township in which Mother Goose and I live, and in our mailbox on Saturday, July 5, were our application forms for absentee ballots for the Aug. 5 and Nov. 4 elections.

IF THERE WAS a personification of what all the New York Harbor celebration was about, what it meant to the millions in this nation who can trace their heritage to the Old Country, and the message it sent to populations that are politically captive even today, it was in those two envelopes.

They were our invitations to vote as free people.

Being a suspicious, cynical sort, I asked Mrs. Hulsing if there had been an edict "from on high" within the framework of Michigan politics to see that these symbols of freedom were delivered throughout the state on the same day. Her answer was negative.

Her insistence of coincidence is belied, however, by a lifetime of dedication to the good of her fellow citizens. She has grown from a pig-tailed, pony-riding child of the Montana prairies to giant community stature as wife of a retired GM executive, and poetic license allows me to challenge her contention-I think she had July 5 mail delivery in mind all along.

If I were asked (which I haven't been) about preference of voting procedures, I'd go with the "vote by mail" idea every time. You kids will have the privilege when you reach 60, or can qualify under such other provisions of Michigan law as "being confined to jail awaiting arraignment or trial."

Thursday, July 17, 1986 U&E?

QUITE SOME elections ago (circa 1972, b.m. - which meant "before merger") Observer editors were invited to write opinions on the elective process, and my own pushed for the mail idea. It never got anywhere beyond introduction to a Congressional committee.

Tim Richard, the senior brain of the editorial page, is the only person likely to have saved that edition with at least half a dozen divergent position statements, and I wish in his dotage ol' Tim would dig it from the files and see how those ideas mesh with 1986.

IP.Unia

In the foregoing, I have given credit to Esther Hulsing for her subtle tribute to Liberty, because she is my family's governmental contact. Maybe in your case, you had an elected clerk who sensed the same wonderful opportunity of timing. I hope so.

With only the echo of New York fireworks remaining, we still have on our calendar the Aug. 5 primary and Nov. 4 general election. Please stay awake for both. If you don't, a day later you'll have to blame it on Guy Fawkes, more of whom as November nears.

Twenty lashes for Chris McCoskey for not doing an article on Andrea Dewey, the young girl who placed fifth on vault and 20th all-around at the United States Gymnastic Foundation National Competition in Boca Raton, Fla. Don't you people realize what that means?

I am sick to death of seeing high school sports put on a pedestal while kids who opt for private club sports get little or no coverage. Girls like Miss Dewey train 12 months a year and probably spend anywhere from 15-25 hours a week in the gym. Their competition schedule involves travel all over the state of Michigan, as well as many other states, during the months of November through May or June.

My guess is that Miss Dewey is also a good student since most all of these girls have learned to make every minute count. They are organized mentally and physically. To be able to keep up this pace makes these girls exceptional in my eyes, and I haven't even described the tip of the iceberg.

Qualifying for nationals is not like qualifying for the high school state meet. The private gym competitor must

If that is met, she goes to a state meet where she again tries to get an even higher score to qualify for regionals, which in Michigan's case means competing against the top girls from Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois and Indiana. She must requalify at a higher score again to go to Eastern Nationals and then again to nationals. If this sounds exhausting, keep in mind that this represents only a portion of the meets these girls compete in.

We really enjoyed the live music provided by the Plymouth Symphony and... the fireworks display in the lovely setting of the Township Park. However, the evening was marred by the presence of people who selfishly insisted on setting off "fireworks" of their own, especially those illegal ones which "fly, whiz, etc." and land wherever.

While nervously watching the flight path of each one and especially fearing for our children's safety, we saw a few almost land in people's laps while groups of children ran to "get to it first." Fortunately, we saw no injuries, but obviously in the midst of a crowd is not the place to set off fireworks.

County launches parks study

By Teri Banas staff writer

A 19-member citizens task force was launched this week to research and recommend funding remedies and development possibilities in the Wayne County parks

Wayne County parks. The task force will examine a wide range of questions including a dedicated parks millage and turning over a portion of the seven-park system to the Huron-Clinton Parks Authority.

"We've done all we can do cosmetically. If we can really win this parks system back, we have to come up with some ideas," said county executive William Lucas in making Monday's announcement.

Chaired by Northville Township supervisor Susan Heintz, the citizens group includes residents with a variety of backgrounds, including several people who work in parks and recreation, one prominent downriver industrialist, an educator, lawyer, accountant, banker, one elected official and others with governmental or quasi-governmental experience

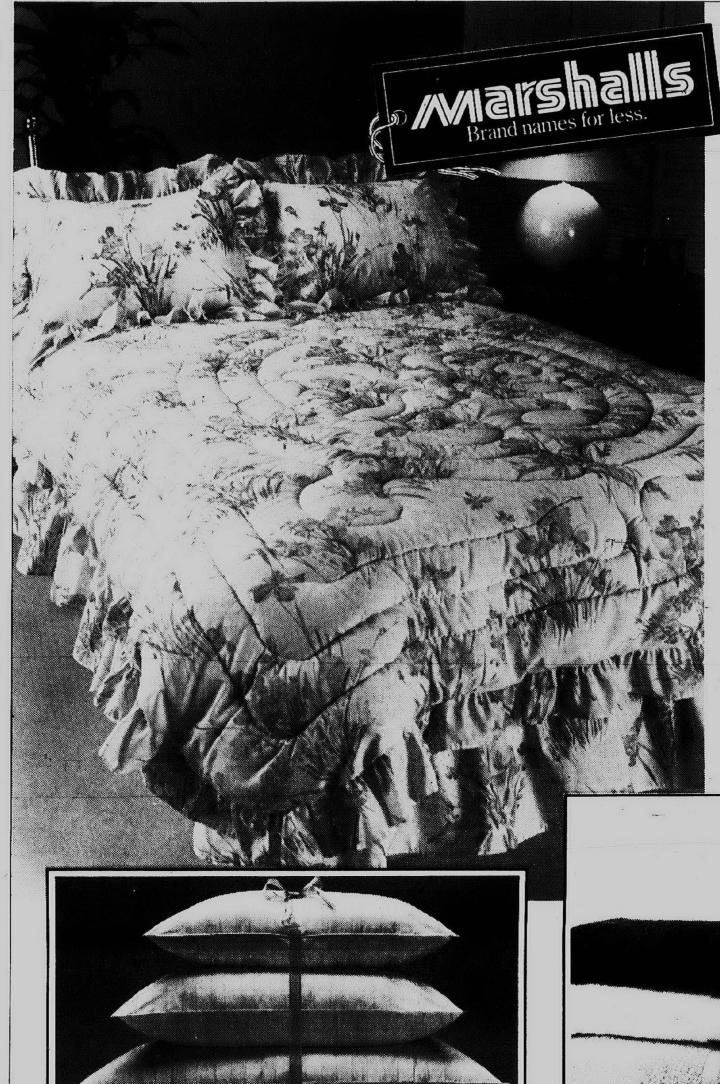

ONE LUCAS appointee, Birmingham's Alan Swormstedt, does not live in Wayne County. Swormstedt, who works for the accounting firm of Deloitte, Haskins & Sells, was, picked because he has "worked in Wayne County all of his life," said a Lucas aide. The task force is made up of those with Democratic and Republican ties.

Selected by Lucas and the county commission, members of the task force have no deadline for finishing their research and returning with a recommendation. Lucas said the decision to keep the task force's deadline open-ended was "deliberate." He said it did not appear that the members could conclude their work in time for placing a funding question, if that were decided, on the upcoming November ballot

In making the announcement along with Lucas, Brownstown Township commissioner Curt Boller referred to chronic battles between suburban and Detroit commissioners over parks funding. He said park funding continued to be in immediate "jeopardy."

He was less skeptical than Lucas, though, when he said "depending on the speed they work" a millage issue could appear by November.

ON HER role, Heintz, who is a Republican candidate for county commission in the 10th District (Livonia-Plymouth-Northville) said: "It's going to be a lot of hard work but my love of the parks goes way back."

Heintz once headed up the Rouge River Watershed Council which covers the river basin that the Middle Rouge Parkway runs through.

The Wayne County parks, established in 1919 and now spanning 4.200 acres, are supported by $2.5 million from the county's general fund supporting the operating of the Middle Rouge Parkway, which runs along Hines Drive in western Wayne County and makes up the bulk of the park system, as well as a boat launch at Elizabeth Park in Trenton and the Warren Valley Golf Course in Dearborn Heights

LUCAS TOLD Heintz and the others to leave "no stone unturned" in their work

Greenspace to someone born and raised in a concrete jungle is something very near and dear to me," Lucas said

Parks Director Eric Reickel, who was not present Monday, has been a strong advocate for a separate parks millage and has made several public appeals to that effect in the last year.

This week, he said he continued to be "not optimistic about my funding for 1987. I'd like to know, where is the money coming from? You know where parks sit in the pecking order, dead last," he said about budget allocations.

Beside Heintz, Lucas appointees to the task force include: Charles Horn, Woodhaven recreation director; Lorenzo Browning, former Grosse Pointe mayor, Michael Legg, chairman of the Wayne County 2nd Congressional GOP party; Heinz Prechter, downriver publisher and industrialist; Swormstedt; Nancy White, president of the League of Women Voters; Gerald Smith, executive director of the Franklin Wright Settlements; Lyle Van Houten, Dearborn Heights mayor; Louise Mathis-Frazier, curriculum supervisor with the Detroit Public Schools.

The commission appointees are: Leonard T. A RAP SESSION in the office the other day led to a competition on who could tell the most gruesome horror story about car repair shops.

. Each of us walked away thinking he/she won. Since knowledge is the fruit of experience we all left better prepared to face the next car mechanic

We agreed it's a mistake to mimic the sound your car is making unless you enjoy entertaining bored mechanics. Contorting your face and emitting strange noises kills all efforts to establish respect as a knowledgable car owner.

Saving there's a squealing noise under the hood usually gets the point across just fine.

It's also effective to make it known the car isn't worth more than $400, and the junk yard is a real option if the repairs are even close

Interestingly, the bills for cheap cars are usually less than those for newer cars when the junk yard option is remote

LIKE MOST things, time has quelled our fury, and we were even able to laugh about our encounters

Once I took my car in for a wheel alignment. Three days later I went to the shop, paid the bill and started driving home. After two blocks my biceps ached trying to keep the car on the road and I was convinced they hadn't done a very good job.

I drove it back to the shop and explained the problem. You'd thank they'd be apologetic and embarrassed. They were neither. In fact, they refused to return my money

After waiting in a long line and explaining the story six or seven times. I was informed they wouldn't return my money, because the manager wasn't in. It was amazing how quickly he appeared when my voice reached unhealthy decibe! levels

I DIDN'T know that in 1976 a state law was passed that gave car owners rights. I would have felt better knowing that my misery wasn't going to go unnoticed - I

If you want to find a good repair shop look for a facility with a lot of customers, according to local mechanics

The first thing right off the top is to look for a place that's busy, and if they're not most likely there's a reason," said Dennis Wheeler, owner of Denny's Service in Plymouth. He added that there are exceptions like new business owners who are building their clientele.

A facility that has been in the same location for a long time is another sign of a reputable business, he said.

Dave Nix, a mechanic at Mel's Auto Clinic in Canton, suggests looking for a "shop that has decent tools and a busy crew.

are costly and probably should be done only in cases when there is an expensive repair involved, Wheeler advised. And in those incidents the customer should consider the cost of the car and whether it's worth the money

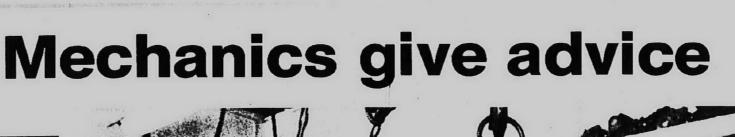

In "a lot of cases" a second opinion is a good idea, because mechanic can make a quick decision

If a car makes a noise just when it starts in the morning or at other specific times the customer should explain these patterns to the mechanic.

Leader lives example of Girl Scout motto

By Susan Buck

Veteran Girl Scout leader and director Peggy Seery is the epitome of the Girl Scout motto, "Be prepared."

The outgoing Canton Township resident who has been active in Girl Scout activities for 12 years, surveys situations and takes action before anyone knows there is a problem _____

When a Girl Scout unit partaking in day camp at Northville Township's Maybury State Park recently was missing a stake for a diping canopy, it didn't take long for Seery to grab a clothespin and use that instead

It's a simple incident but demonstrative of the emphasis Seery places on flexibility

The Girl Scout motto is 'Be prepared,' but it really should be, 'Be flexible," she said. "Girl Scouting gives the kids a lot of decision-mak ing skills. They make choices and they learn to abide by the fact that their choice doesn't always win. That's the most important thing about scouting, the girls learn decision making and develop leadership skills

Watching her enthusiastically bustle around the day eamp, which has been in existence for eight years, and lending assistance at a moment's notice, it appears that she is trying to make up for time lost during her childhood.

This year 200 girls will attend the day camp over a two-week period.

We (Girl Scouts) have volunteer and paid professionals. One of my volunteer jobs is supervising and appointing leaders for the cadet and senior troops. I'm also a member of the board of directors and a trainer and a member of the executive training committee

Seery became active in the Girl Scouts when her daughter, Ellen,

Lutheran church seeks unity

By Janice Brunson staff writer

N JANUARY 1988 the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America will commence worship services, the result of a six-year effort on the part of 5.3 million members.

Three existing Lutheran denominations, the Lutheran Church in America (LCA), the American Lu-theran Church (ALC) and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches (AELC), will have completed a merger process that began in 1982

The merger is but one of many that Lutherans in America have tackled since first establishing churches in the New World some 300 years ago.

Then, church membership was based on ethnic heritage and today's denominations still reflect this trait. The 2.9 million LCA members are of primarily Swedish and Danish ancestry. The 2.3 million ALC members are primarily of Norwegian and Finnish descent and most of the 500,000 AELC members have German backgrounds.

REFLECTING A historical national trend toward unity, mergers between Lutherans have become possible with the passage of time that has faded ethnic differences.

The present merger is the largest ever attempted by Lutherans. It means a single, stronger church that, in the words of the Rev. James Spilos of Holy Cross AELC in Livonia, will provide "greater' ministry throughout Christiandom."

He also noted the merger recog-nizes the "Lord's desire that the Church of Christ be one."

There were other reasons for the merger as well, according to the Rev. Reginald Holle, director of the ALC in Michigan. Speaking from his office in Southfield, Bishop Holle said the three denominations have "shared cooperative efforts for years and there are no major differences in theology

Since 1978, he added, all three de-nominations have used the same hymnal, "The Lutheran Book of Worship."

But a merger of this magnitude was not without obstacles that required massive compromise from each of the 60 delegates who served four years on the Commission for a New Lutheran Church, hammering out a new church constitution that would be acceptable to members of all three denominations.

ONE QUESTION surfaced almost immediately, that of authority. Would the new church place authority with local congregations or at the denominational level? Holle said the ALC has traditionally focused more authority on congregations, whereas the LCA and the AELC view their denominations as one unit.

The question was resolved in favor of both perspectives. The constitution refers to an "inclusive fellowship," while simultaneously guaranteeing each congregation the right to accept or reject a denominational directive.

William Lindholm, minister of Holy Cross LCA in Livonia, identified other problems of a more complex nature that are facing the merger. Lindholm served as secretary on the merger commission until its final meeting this past June. He said, "80 percent of the problems have been resolved but certain issues remain that will require restudy by the new church."

Notable among these, he said, is the question of ecumenical commitment. According to Lindholm, the ALC has moved to establish relationships with reformed denominations, something the LCA finds hard to accopt. The LCA, on the other hand, has established relationships with Catholic and Episcopal churches. "The issue will not stop the merger, but it has definitely caused a little snag," Lindholm said. He said he still has problems with the quota system contained in the new constitution which mandates that all denomination activity con-tain a mix of 60 percent laypersons, of which 50 percent must be female and 10 percent must speak a primary language other than English.

LINDHOLM HAS no problem with the spirit of the quotas, but he and others wanted to add the words, "intentional commitment," in the event quotas could not be met. What happens if they are not met, Lindholm said, "remains a puzzle."

Since the quota system is part of the constitution, it is conceivable the work of a committee or board may have to cease unless quotas are met. Whatever their differences, Lutherans in America have a history for making mergers work. The two largest denominations at present, 1 ALC and the LCA are, themselv the result of mergers between diff ent denominations during the 196 During this past decade of declini church attendance, both deno tions enjoyed stablized membersh The goal of most Lutherans, cording to Lindholm and Holle, ICI merger between the new Lutheran church and the Missouri-Synod and the Wisconsin Synod.

These two denominations represent a combined membership of an estimated 3 million Lutherans and until now, both have remained fiercely faithful to what Holle describes as their "very conservative" ways.

"A merger with them," he said, "is definitely in the far future."

Void of loneliness can be filled

My youngest son has graduated. He has left and is working far from home. Like all parents who love their children, we think of him and we miss him.

There is something else. His father as well as his mother feels the emptiness. It is an experience all loving parents have. We fill our lives with children and things and then they are gone. When they leave we feel the empty space. When we go on vaca-tion, or retire, the job is gone and we feel the emptiness.

Loneliness, emptiness are signs of two truths. The void is ultimately filled with our relationship with God. A wise person once said, "Our desire for intimacy is ultimately a desire to be close to God." So the voids we experience in life are connected with the void which finally only God can however, create the possibility of emptiness. Miguel Unumuno, in his book "Tragic Sense of Life," struggled with this realty: If we love only finally to lose this love, then all of life is tragic. Yet if we love and our losing directs us to greater love, then it is in a way also a blessing.

MY SONS have left home. I having lost someone close we can in faith trust that love will grow and increase, then we believe in a miracle that is in all of life. This miracle is at the heart of the spiritual life. Love is never destroyed. If we keep faith in love, it can only grow and continue. It is a pattern in all life: to love and then lose. If it is a pattern devised by a loving God then it is a pattern which must lead to a blessing.

is not counted by job, children or achievement. People and tasks fill our lives. We find much of our identity here. We feel empty when we lose them. My wife and I sometimes go north to simply "be." It is difficult. Our instincts are trained to work. We are tempted to go about relating and doing things that are useful. We are anxious to go to visit someone. We think about all that needs to be done.

William Caldwell, president of the national Urban Land Institute, said he is seeing more examples of good development than ever before.

Home refinancing is just a start

If you have taken advantage of low interest rates and refinanced your home mortgage, the next step may be to review your other outstanding loans.

Take a look at your credit card finance charges, auto loans, home improvement and tuition loans. It may be wise to pay off higher-cost, short-term loans or borrow from a less expensive source to refinance long-term debts.

Make a list of all your loans, including the amount, interest charge and length of each loan. Single out the most costly - those requiring high interest rate payments. Also list those you believe you might be able to pay off completely.

Credit-card loans probably top one of your lists. Although credit card interest rates have come down recently, many consumers may still be paying on purchases or cash advances with rates as high as 20 percent. It may be wise to dispose of that loan completely by borrowing from a less expensive source or using part of your savings.

For example, let's say you are paying 20-percent interest on a $1,000 credit card loan. You are also building a savings account at your local bank or savings and loan, which is paying 7-percent interest. If you are in the 40-percent tax bracket, you probably will pay about $120

practically speakino

in interest this year after taxes. Your savings account is only yielding $42 after taxes for every $1,000 saved. If you can afford to reduce your savings, take $1,000 and pay off the credit card debt to save $78.

If you don't have enough money to pay off the credit card debt now, try to pay off the loan as early as possible. The quicker you do this, the less it will cost you over the long term.

THE SAME strategies also apply to auto loans, home improvement loans, vacation loans or any type of installment debt. If you don't have enough money in savings to pay off a loan, consider the following as a source for cash:

• Company pension plans many pension plans allow employees to borrow against their plan accounts, often up to half the value of their non-forfeitable retirement benefits. Interest payments to these plans are tax deductible.

• Credit unions - Because of their non-profit status, credit unions — Michigan Association of CPAs often offer their members interest rates lower than commercial interest rates.

• Insurance companies - Borrowing against the cash value of your life insurance has proven to be an effective way to make a low-interest loan.

• Brokerage houses - Individuals can use their securities as collateral for borrowing from brokerage houses at interest rates often lower than commercial rates.

Because interest rates are lower now than a few years ago, any loan at reasonable rates is likely to save you money when used to pay off an older loan with a high interest rate.

A third strategy would be to consolidate installment debts by taking out one loan to repay all or some of your loans. The key is finding a loan with low enough interest rates to offset any origination or other fees and save you substantial money in the long term.

Those who expect to refinance a home mortgage can consolidate existing loans at the same time. If you refinance for a higher principal than you actually need, you can use the extra cash to pay off a few of your more costly loans.

Developers build on public's confidence

By Susan Steinmueller staff writer

Developers now have a concrete way of knowing how they are judged by the American public.

All they need do is study the results of a recently published Gallup Poll of 1,000 people across the country. The two-phase study also included a group of "opin-- elected and appointed municipal, state ion leaders" and national officials.

The poll was commissioned by the Urban Land Institute based in Washington, a non-profit, national organization that is dedicated to improving land use development and planning in the United States through research and education. The 10,000-plus membership is composed of developers, architects, public officials, planners and real estate consultants.

President of the institute is William Caldwell, president of Troy-based Caldwell American Investments.

The industry had never tried to do a study on how they are doing," he said. "It was the 50th anniversary of the ULI, and with that as a landmark date, they decided to attempt it.'

THE POLL included questions about Americans' perceptions of the duality of life in cities, their perceptions of local communities, neighborhoods and housing, of urban developers and local policy-makers governing urban development.

Some of the findings are:

• The majority of the public, or 81 percent; say their housing is excellent or good.

· Most (81 percent) would not like to move to the downtown area of the large city nearest to them, while 57 percent of opinion leaders might consider moving.

 Most (66 percent) blame local residents for neighborhood deterioration. Relatively few (12 percent) blame local government or poor housing construction (10 percent).

 Only a slight majority (51 percent) believe zoning and planning boards are attuned to public interests.

• Almost four in 10 (38 percent) polled say their community will improve over the next decade, 44 percent believe it will stay the same, and 15 percent expect it to decline. Southerners were the most optimistic about their cities' futures; Easterners and Westerners were more pessimistic.

 Although developers enjoy an overall favorable image, 74 percent of both the general public and opinion leaders say that developers do not pay sufficient attention to the environmental impact of their work.

That the public was critical of developers concerning the envronment was not unexpected.

Caldwell said that the industry has had a "somewhat cloudy reputation in the past" for reasons that include residents becoming upset when zoning changes occur in their neighborhood.

He added that poor development in the past may have added to that reputation.

About 10 years ago people began to pay attention -I guess you could say we deserved it (the negative reputation). I saw so many examples of poor development nationwide

Most people polled (66 percent) blame local residents for neighborhood deterioration. Only 12 percent blame local government or poor housing construction (10 percent). -

"As far as ULI is concerned, it has raised a red flag."

BUT CALDWELL believes that developers have changed

"I am seeing more examples of good development than ever before," he said.

"About 10 years ago, developers began to realize it was important to the financial viability (of a project).

'We think we are doing better, but it's been a communication problem in conveying it to the general public. I think the way we are going to go is that we will be more communicative with the public.

Still, the issue is difficult to deal with.

The word 'environment' is so ambiguous," he said. "Environment means a different thing to everybody you talk to.

Caldwell believes that the quality of architecture has improved with the advent of the "post-modern style" of office building, originated in Houston by architect Philip Johnson. Those buildings often have roofs and shapes different from the traditional "cigar box" shape, he said

The quality of office buildings' public areas has also improved and tends to feature more open space and art work, he added.

HOW DOES HE explain that people do not want to live in downtown areas?

"I think it's a case where cities have not rejuvenated and revitalized the downtown enough to interest people to live there. The hardest part of renewing a city is to provide housing."

Caldwell has a personal interest in the rejuvenation of Detroit. His company is developing Harbortown, a multi-phased residential development on the riverfront. Phase I is pegged at a cost of $40 million.

Located about 11/2 miles from Detroit's Central Business District, the 48 acres between the Detroit River and Jefferson Avenue will feature townhouse condominiums and apartments with tennis courts and a swimming pool. Extensive landscaping, tree-lined roads, bridges, walkways and a chain of three lagoons leading to the river are also planned.

'People said, 'No one will live in Harbortown.' We have been open just a few days and already 23 people have signed up.

He said he had to dispatch his secretary to help with the applications.

You can mind your conscience and look after your finances by seeking out mutual and money market funds that steer clear of investing in companies whose policies you oppose.

According to the Eastern Michigan Environmental Action Council (EMEAC), a number of mutual and money' market funds have been started that offer investors a chance to avoid supporting certain industries and assisting others

"Each individual has her or his own idea of what constitutes a 'responsible' investment," an EMEAC newsletter said. First, you have to decide what you want your money to do for you through investment, and which social goals are most important to you. IF THE STOCK goes down 20 percent and you sell, you would get back just $1,200, less commissions and interest, and thus would lose 40 percent of your money

My guess is that we will have a generally rising market for several years, less the normal periodic adjustments, and that margin buying can be helpful.

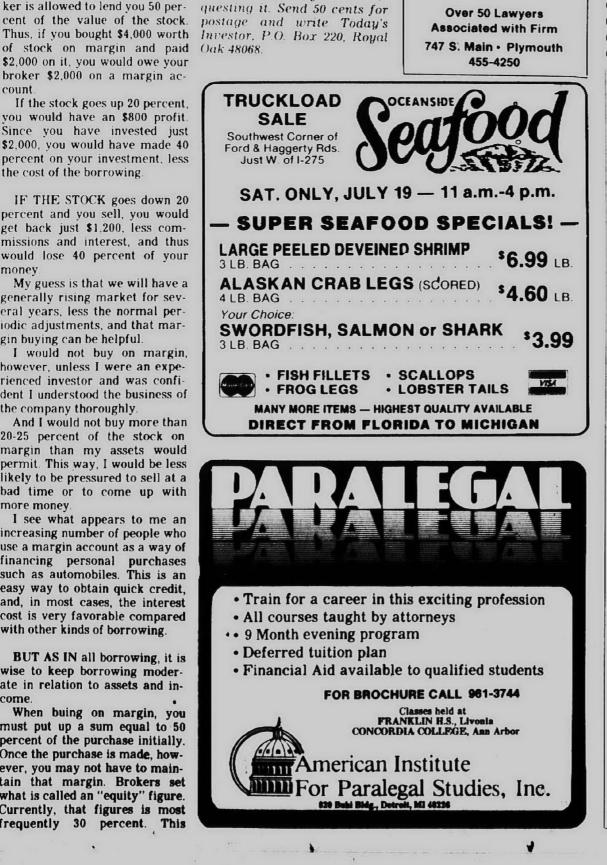

I would not buy on margin, however, unless I were an experienced investor and was confident I understood the business of the company thoroughly.

And I would not buy more than 20-25 percent of the stock on margin than my assets would permit. This way, I would be less likely to be pressured to sell at a bad time or to come up with more money.

I see what appears to me an increasing number of people who use a margin account as a way of financing personal purchases such as automobiles. This is an easy way to obtain quick credit, and, in most cases, the interest cost is very favorable compared with other kinds of borrowing.

BUT AS IN all borrowing, it is wise to keep borrowing moderate in relation to assets and income.

When buing on margin, you must put up a sum equal to 50 percent of the purchase initially. Once the purchase is made, however, you may not have to maintain that margin. Brokers set what is called an "equity" figure. Currently, that figures is most frequently 30 percent. This

House budget has $143 billion in red ink

Here's how area lawmakers were recorded on major roll-call votes before the current Congressional recess for Independence Day.

HOUSE

THE 1987 BUDGET - By a vote of 333 for and 43 against, the House approved a fiscal 1987 budget containing no major new taxes and projecting spending of $995 billion and a deficit of $142.6 billion for the year. that begins Oct. 1, 1986.

On a non-record vote, the Senate also approved the budget blueprint (S Con Res 120), which calls for much higher domestic spending and. significantly lower defense spending than President Reagan had requested.

Although the Congressional budget plan is essentially an advisory document, it will be watched more closely this year than in the past because of the new Gramm-Rudman-Holl ings deficit reduction law.

Virtually across-the-board spending cuts will be triggered as early as Oct. 15, if the 1987 deficit is judged to be on its way to topping the law's $144 billion limit on red ink.

Supporter William Gray, D-Pa. said that by approving the budget lawmakers "will be able to tell America" that Congress is keeping faith with the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law.

Opponent John Porter, R-III., said Wall Street and the American public eventually will see "that the budget numbers are fudged" and that deficit spending remains untamed by Congress

Members voting yes endorsed the fiscal 1987 Congressional budget.

Voting yes: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth. Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods, William Ford, D-Taylor, Sander Levin, D-Southfield, William Roll Call Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

NAVY PORTS - By a vote of 240 for and 191 against, the House adopted an amendment that blocks funding for the Navy plan to base its growing fleet at 10 or more Atlantic. Pacific and Gulf Coast ports.

Critics said the "home-porting" plan is designed in part to attract broad geographical support in Congress for Navy spending, while' defenders say it is dangerous to concentrate the planned 600-vessel Navy in too few ports.

This amendment was attached to the fiscal 1987 military construction appropriations bill (HR 5052) which later was sent to the Senate. It deleted $140 million earmarked for Navy port development at Everett, Wash., and Staten Island, N.Y

Congress will hold additional votes in upcoming months on whether to proceed with home-porting.

Amendment sponsor Dennis Hertel. D-Mich., said "it makes no sense" to base Navy vessels at Staten Island because "New York City is the top target in the nuclear age." Opponent Norman Dicks, D-Wash...

said the Navy fleet must be dispersed "so that in case of a Soviet all of our ships would not attack be in one place. That is the lesson that we learned from Pearl Harbor." Members voting yes wanted to delete the proposed $140 million homeporting outlay. Voting yes: Pursell, Hertel, Wiliam Ford, Levin, Broomfield

NUTRITION PROGRAM - By a vote of 305 for and 85 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 2436) creating a sweeping new federal program to upgrade America's eating habits and food policies. At an estimate cost of $70 million or more over 10 years, the National Nutrition Monitoring and Research Program would tie together a variety of existing federal programs that deal with what and how well Americans eat. And it would aid programs, such as categorical grants for state and local nutrition projects.

A key aim of the bill is to coordinate the departments of Agriculture and Health an Human Services, two agencies whose food and nutrition programs often have been in con-

Supporter Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., said the legislation "will not solve the problem of hunger in the United States" but will prove to be worthwhile.

Opponent Joe Barton, R-Texas. said the bill "is not bad legislation" but is unwarranted at a time of Federal austerity.

Members voting yes wanted to create the new federal nturition program

Voting yes: Pursell, Hertel, William Ford, Levin. Voting no. Broomfield.

SENATE

AID TO IRELAND - The Senate voted, 65 for and 31 against, to pro-vide 450 million in U.S. economic assistance to Northern Island, marking the first time American foreign aid has been sent to Ireland.

Also approved by the House, the money is part of a $1.7 billion fiscal 1986 spending bill (HR-4515) that was sent to President Reagan for his signature.

Its purpose is to bolster an accord reached last year between Great Britain and Ireland that some see as a step toward peace in Ulster. The mainly Catholic Republic of Ireland now can advise Great Britain on the governance of Northern Ireland. thus bolstening the rights of the Catholic minority in Ulster.

Supporter Christopher Dodd, D Conn., said "$50 million is a small price indeed if it can bring peace in Northern Ireland.

Opponent Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., said that in view of hard times on the farm and elsewhere in America. "It simply is not the time to send money to yet a new foreign aid recipient Senators voting yes favored $50 million in foreign aid to Northern Ireland. Michigan Democrats Carl Levin and Donald Riegle voted yes.

'I love a mystery' New tour packages combine wining, dining, sleuthing

An invitation was waiting for us when we arrived at our room on the 17th floor of the Hilton International hotel in Windsor. In the movies, 'Murder at the Manor'' would occur under a thunderous sky, but on that Sunday afternoon the sun was gleaming on the Detroit River and on the Renaissance Center beyond the river

It was a great day for the dastardly deed to be done. Or, as the Homicide Hosts, who produced this particular mystery weekend, would say, it was a great way to kill a Sunday.

Mystery tours have become increasingly popular in resorts, on trains and in other mysterious places nationwide. They all have the same ingredients: you sign up for the tour: the hosts stage a mystery, usually a murder mystery, with a cast of actors: you and the other guests play sleuth and try to solve the mystery.

Our mystery tour was 24 hours in Windsor, sponsored by Hilton and Homicide Hosts. The invitation waitinggin our room was to a party at Willistead Manor, a stately mansion built in 1904 by architect Albert Kahn for Edward Chandler Walker, son of distillery king Hiram Walker. The cast of characters for Murder at the Manor was all spelled out in the letter. Mr. Artemus T. Rutledge, whose money was acquired by lessthan-legal means," was throwing a party

The six people he invited were a suspicious lot: his personal assistant ney, recently fired; Geoffrey Browne, former business associte, ruined by Rutledge; Dr. Michael Willet, dismissed for living too well; gardener Julian Lane, picked up as a hitch hiker and now rumored to bethe sole inheritor; Melanie Stone, an actress wooed and then ruined by the villain

HOMICIDE HOSTESS Helen Olmstead and her husband, Donald Olmstead, who smoked a Sherlock Holmes pipe, waited for us at the appropriate time in the hotel lobby. The Olmsteads are from Howell, Mich. We learned later that the cast was also from the Detroit area.

Many of the 75 registered guests. most from the Detroit area, had come properly dressed in the styles of 1925, when the murder supposedly took place: short fringed dresses, headbands, gray fedoras, straw hats, long strings of pearls.

The rest of us stood around looking sulky and jealous in our 1980s dresses and slacks, waiting for the bus. The bus wasn't air conditioned, Sarah Rooney, who planned the par-ty, Benjamin Hart, his former attor-which put us in an old-fashioned if slightly grumpy mood on a 90-de-Willistead Manor is an impressive Tudor mansion set in 15 acres of green parkland. When "Sara Rooney," playd by Renee Blankenship of Livonia, invited us in and showed us around we were too impressed with our surroundings to start looking for clues.

We didn't even realize she was part of the cast until Artemus Rutledge appeared in his silk neckscarf and his 1920's look; we knew he wasn't just another dressed-up guest because he didn't have a name tag

We were pretty well into the wine cheese and fruit when the cast of characters arrived, suitably attired. Ben, discharged attorney, sipping from his flask; businessman Browne. whose wife had killed herself after a scandal created by his host; Dr. Willet in his white suit; actress Melanie Stone, twittering away in her beaded dress; and Julian, the villainous bearded gardener.

In real life they are Jeff Alder of Dearborn, Louis Seguin of Garden City, Bob CLosson and Michael Burden of Detroit, and Judy Williams of Westland. Director Glenn Blankenship of Livonia, who came in later to play the private detective, wasn't on our list of characters of course, because he wasn't really invited to the party, was he?

THE SCENE FROZE as we realized that the action had begun and we were in for a real killer of an afternoon. There were a few preliminaries of course: a letter dropped casually on the grand staircase, another found in a drawer, a secret panel in the wall.

It was the sound of a gunshot that sent Sarah screaming through the house and the rest of us pushing and shoving into the study. The corpse of our host, Artemus T. Rutledge, was in a chair, blood all over his chest. R game of backgammon was before him on the desk, along with a drink, a dried yellow rose, a bowl of nuts and a book opened to the story of Horatio Alger.

Detectives for a day

Guests on the "Murder at the Manor" tour gather by the stairs of the stately Willistead Manor in Windsor to hear a private detec-

the afternoon, staring at the corpse and looking for cluess, if the crazy detective hadn't stormed into the room Columbo-style, grey striped suit, brown hat and all.

The plot thickened, and occasionally sickened, as he questioned the characters and we questioned everybody. Where were you when the gun went off? Do you write with India ink? Could there have been two murderers? Was that cyanide on his breath?

When we had drunk all-the wine and eaten all the cheese we went back to the Hilton, where we chewed over the clues and awaited the next step in the action.

Dinner was at 7:30 in the ballroom. As we gorged on Veal Oscar and a dessert topped with a tombstone, we examined and re-examined

We would all have stood there for the clues. Does cyanide taste like almonds? Could Julian have been the victim's son? Was that innocentlooking girl one of the villains?

We each had to make a decision eventually, and write our solution down on a card. The last act of the mystery was played out around our dinner tables. The villain was caught and arrested. Prizes were given.

I'm not going to tell you who dunnit. If you want to join the crowd in hunting down the villain, Murder at the Manor will be presented July 20, Aug. 3 and 17, Sept. 28, Oct. 12 and 26, Nov. 9 and 30.

The price is $140 in Canadian money, $107 U.S., per person for two people sharing a room at the Hilton, and includes everything: Sunday afternoon at Willistead Manor, dinner in the Great Lakes Ballroom and a buffet breakfast Monday morning in

The normal life of a silk creation is anywhere from three to 10 years, depending upon care. Maintenance consists solely of an occasional light dusting

The cost of an average foral arrangement begins at $75. Threefoot trees begin at $150. Spread that cost over the life of an arrangement and it amounts to a very small initial investment on the part of the customer. Elliott said

SILK REPRODUCTIONS of nature have been crafted for nearly 200 years, originally made as ornaments for women's clothing and millinery. When that fad gave way to changing fashion trends nearly a century ago, artisans looked to new markets for their product.

They hit upon home decor. But it has not been until this past decade that silk accessories in home furnishing caught on with a passion among interior decorators in the United States

Elliott believes this is because the quality of the product has improved significantly the past 10 years. He defies anyone to tell him his silk foliage is not quality perfect

"I'll match my chrysanthemums to live ones anyday and then have you tell me which looks better. And I don't mean right now. I mean ALL the time."

Most days Elliott can be found wandering amidst his warehouse of silk wonders — flaming Hawaiian protea, fantasy orchids of ninted gray, sonia-colored roses, and much more — deciding the perfect combination for his latest arrangement, and Elliott one-of-a-kind.

Alas, the warehouse on Merriman Road in Livonia is open only to interior decorators and other professionals.

Graphite is media for control

T. ADAM, I want some, too." I objected as Adam poured the remaining few ounces of Kool-aid into his glass.

So he politely poured some of his into glass for me. In the small talk that followed. Adam said. "Hey, dad, did you see my hand?" At this. I looked at his hand and saw that it was pure red from his fingertips to his knuckles.

What's that?" Lasked

Casually. Adam explained. "Oh. I got that from mixin' the Kool-aid.

"But why didn't you use a spoon"" I asked. "It's not nice to stir it with your hands.

Well. I know that," said young Adam, with a light trace of irritation in his voice. "but the spoon was too short.

"Oh. I see," I said with laugh as I poured my Kool-aid back into his glass.

Even a task as simple as Adam's takes mastery. Mastery merely means control and control means practice and practice requires time and time requires commitment. Before you can easily use any media, you must gain relative mastery of

IF YOU DON'T set aside a few dollars for entertainment, they won't be there when you want them. If you don't set aside time for your family and friends, you won't find the time. And likewise if you don't set aside time for art work, it will fall to the wayside in the press of business.

The term commitment means "no alternatives. set asides or pledges." So regardless of where you spend the time, be sure you commit yourself to the time required for your artwork

Mastery or control of any medium can come about only through practice and instruction. Practice is primary and instruction is secondary. Mastery however, without instruction requires a much greater amount of time

I feel the best media to begin to learn control in s graphite or pencil. To master graphite. I also feel you must use different hardnesses of pencil The range of hardness in graphite is very useful to artists and yet it is so often neglected

GRAPHITE PENCILS range from 9B. which is very black to 9H, which makes a very light gray ine. Many artists use just one or two soft pencils 6B and 2B and obtain the required shades of by alternating the pressure on the pencil.

Even though this can produce a beautiful pencil ndering, try the use of a full gamut of grays. When only using one or two pencils, you must ightly stroke the paper to achieve a light gray. is, however, shows the grain of the paper and tells the world that is a pencil drawing

Use soft pencils (6B, 5B, 4B, 3B, 2B, B and HB) dark areas and hard pencils (H. 2H. H 4H 5H 6H 7H 8H 9H for light or white With these, you can achieve photographic in that requires viewers to ask how it was

are two two tips that will help you master. the graphite pencil medium.

First, do your basic drawing on cheap layout paper. Here is where you do all the work and take all the mistakes

REMEMBER TO LOOK at your drawing in the mirror. The reversed image will show your mistakes faster than an art teacher

Then transfer your corrected and perfected drawing to a clean sheet of good, heavy drawing paper or two- or three-ply bristol board.

'Mastery or control of any medium can come about only through practice and instruction. Practice is primary and instruction is secondary. Mastery, however, without instruction requires a much greater amount of time. I feel the best media to begin to learn control is graphite or pencil. The second tip is not to rely on an outline to stablish a shape or form. In reality, there are no black outlines to define shapes and forms. You see thjects because they are of a different color, ape or texture than your surroundings

In graphite, you are working only in shades of so use shades of grav contrasting against other rather than defining every shape with des. If you do this, you will be pleased at how alistic your work will become.

More than any other medium, people will put heir nose right up to the artwork and look and ask what medium it is Dulling or mat spray gives the artwork such a finished look that often people all mistake it for a print.

So if you are a Jack of all media, try being a master of one. Now I think I'll go show Adam vnere a long-handled spoon is

SINCE ITS INITIAL arrival in the village, the ·Owl Night Lunch has undergone several renovation; the most recent was completed this year. Now, after a 3-year absence, the "Owl" is making a "comeback" in the village Crafts and manufactures area. Today it sports what was known as a "kitchen apartment," natural wood interior and etched owl windows - all based on research of the original Owl and cimilar lunch wagons that fed hungry customers at the turn of the century.

With the addition of this 19th-century version of a great American dining tradition, Greenfield Village adds yet another detail to its portrait of America's past.

Youth guild in festival

The third concert of the Dearborn Summer Music Festival will be held at 8 p.m. Wednesday, July 23, in the Dome Room of the Dearborn Civic Center. The concert features the Fairlane Youth Chamber Music Guild directed by Richard Piippo and the Summer Music Festival Chorus directed by Dale Olmstead.

The concert begins with the Fairlane Youth Chamber Music Guild, which will perform works by Mozart, Bach and Holtz. The Fairlane guild is a newly established non-profit educational organi-zation for young performing artists. Its primary objective is to provide young music students the opportunity to participate in a professionally directed chamber music program.

PIIPPO IS ON the faculty of Wayne State Uni-versity and is a well-known performing cellist. Vincent Lionti, violinist with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, is the assistant director.

After intermission, the Festival Chorus will perform "Liberty," a musical celebration of free-dom, inspired by the rededication of the Statue of Liberty this year.

F YOU CAN figure out why so many women athletes are suffering this type of injury, you'll have yourself a major medical breakthrough

University of Michigan head trainer for womens athletics Sue Peel was talking about knee injuries; in particular, about injuries to the anterior cruciate ligament

Doctors are performing reconstructive knee surgery at an increasing rate. Now, Peel and assistant trainer Karla Hench have seven women athletes on rehabilitation programs after reconstructive knee surgery. Michigan State University trainer Sally Nogle has between seven and 10 knee rehabilitation pa-

Drs. Ed Wojtys and Gerald O'Connor, partners at the new Ann Arbor Med-Sport Clinic, said they have performed 800 knee surgeries in the past year; between 35 and 40 percent were performed on women.

The trend is both obvious and ominous

"YES, THERE has definitely been more women having knee surgery and coming back to play," Nogle said. "I think it's because the surgery is better and because women's sports are becoming bigger.

Said Peel: "The old point of view was that women aren't going to go anywhere as far as professional sports so why risk having surgery and having a big scar? They could still play golf and tennis and things like that without having surgery.

Now doctors realize that, even though they may not play pro sports, athletics are still a very important part of their lives. It's not just women, either. We're seeing more and more recreational athletes - softball players - who are having knee surgery because they just don't want to stop playing.

The injured knee issue has hit close to home in recent years. Three of the most recognizable names in Observer & Eccentric girls basketball lore have gone under the knife. ble traits were put to the test. Kim Archer, Livonia Bentley grad and MSU star; Emily Wagner, Miss Basketball in 1984 from Livonia Ladywood, and Mary Rosowski, U-M via Farmington Hills Mercy, are all in various stages of rehabilitation.

ARCHER WAS the first to go down. She originally hurt her knee during her sophomore basketball season at MSU. She had surgery on the knee and was playing softball the next summer. Too much too soon. She reinjured her knee and went back for a complete reconstruction.

"People kept saying, 'Why get it Archer said. "In my case, it Cul? wasn't just for basketball. I love to play softball in the summer and swim. I'm just real active, and I couldn't see myself not doing those things because of a stupid knee.

Archer's rehabilitation is progressing remarkably. She is in her ninth month of rehabilitation (full rehabilitation genererally takes a year) and is already doing extended running. It is expected that she'll be ready to resume her basketball career in the fall.

"It feels great right now," she said. Now I'm scared, though. I've already had surgery. If something happens to the knee now, it's all over.

EMILY WAGNER has never lacked for courage and determination. But when she injured her knee, just four days after signing a national letter of intent to attend Stanford University, Calif., her most admira-

You just don't think about (the negative things)," she'said. "It's always in the back of your mind. Will you be able to come back to where you were? You may talk about it to a few close friends, but you can't dwell on it

It's been 15 months since the operation, and Wagner is confident that all is well. So confident, in fact, that she doesn't think she'll wear a brace.

My knee is stronger than it was before the injury," she said. "Why wear a brace? A brace is for protection, and I have nothing really to protect Both Peel and Hench think Wagner is making a mistake.

We tell our patients that their knee will never be the same," Peel said. "It will never, be like it was. You are not the same person you were before the injury. We like to say, the knee may not be injured, but it's defective. She should still wear the brace.

Brace or no brace, Wagner's basketball career appears saved. She just missed making the U.S. team for the National Sports Festival games.

'I'm still not competely comfortable on the court, but I don't think I lest the skill level I thought I might have," she said.

MARY ROSOWSKI can finally see the light at the end of the tunnel. But it's taken almost two years.

The all-state standout from Mercy was eager to begin her college basketball career at U-M, and over-eager to succeed. She worked hard las summer in preparation for the fall season. She was in the best physical shape of her life.

Then, on a freak play at the Farmington Y, she ripped her anterior cruciate ligament and entered the long, dark tunnel.

The first injury had her in a cast for eight weeks. When she was just about to return to the active roster, she was stricken with mononucleosis. A month later, she tried to play basketball, and the knee gave out again.

At that point, she tested the surgical skills of O'Connor.

"The worst part is the mental part," Rosowski said. "I lift weights at Crisler (Arena) at night sometimes, and I'll stop and watch the guys play. That's when I get sad. I miss playing so much."

Rosowski's rehabilitation has been slow, tedious, but so far successful.

"She's about 70 percent through her rehab," Karla Hench said. "She's been doing great. She's here every day for about two hours.'

Hench and Peel have made it clear to Rosowski that there is no guarantee she'll play again.

"We tell all our patients not to count on it (coming back). And if it happens, then it's an added plus," Hench said

Said Peel: "If Mary makes it back, it's a tribute to how bad she wants to play and how good a player she real-

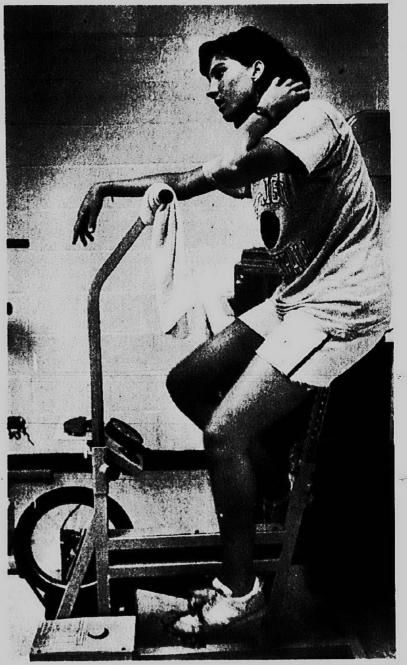

When you watch Rosowski work out, you see the fiery determination in her eyes, you sense that she will indeed make it back

BUT MAKING it back is just the end of phase one of the wounded knee saga

People with reconstructed knees face a lifetime of preventive maintenance

"That's what so many people fail to realize," Peel said. "Once you've gone through rehab, you have to keep the knee strength up or you'll be in for a lot of discomfort. A knee

The intensity was back. The confidence. The feeling that she could do no wrong

Chris Gilles is having fun playing tennis again.

It's been a long time.

Gilles, the Plymouth native and all-Big 10 standout at the University Wisconsin, virtually waltzed of through the field at the West Penn National Clay Court Amateur Tournament in Mount Lebanon, Pa

She won the singles championship, defeating Angelique Lodewyks of New Zealand, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Then she teamed with sister Wendy, also an all-Big 10 player at Wisconsin, to win the doubles crown. They knocked off Laura Glitz of York, Pa. and Anne Marie Walson of Califon, N.J., 6-4, 6-4.

The Gilleses were seeded No. 1 in both events. Wendy Gilles was seeded No. 7 in singles and helped her sister by upsetting the tourney's No. 2 seed before bowing out.

"I played well through the whole tourney, although I thought I played better in the early matches than I did in the later ones," Chris Gilles said. "I just wasn't missing anything and I was playing smart. I tried to get myself up right from the start and get early leads. I won my first match 6-0, 6-0 and my second 6-1, 6-

She said being seeded No. 1 helped her confidence

"It affected me two ways, really," she said. "It gave me confidence, but it also made me feel more pressure a little bit. I just told myself, don't win just because you're seeded No. 1.' You have to win for yourself." The win was Gilles' third national amateur title in two years.

Because she was the United States Tennis Association's No. 1-ranked womens amateur last year, Gilles was invited to play in the $10,000 USTA Women's Circuit of Michigan clay court tennis tournament at the Fairlane Club in Dearborn this week.

She was to play her first match on Wednesday

By Brad Emons

Former Redford Catholic Central all-state basketball player John McIntvre, who last month indicated his desire to transfer from the University to Detroit to Iowa State, made public last week that he has settled on the University of Michigan.

"I was set on going to Iowa State. but they (Detroit) didn't give me a done absolutely nothing wrong. They release," said the 6-foot-4 guard, who will sit out next season at U-M under NCAA transfer rules. (He will have three years of eligibility remaining )

McIntyre, unhappy with his role this past season with U-D, started 13 games with the Titans as a freshman, averaging five points per game

McIntyre announced his intentions of transferring to Iowa State in late May, but U-D coach Don Sicko hinted of possible tampering violations by the Big Eight School.

U-D athletic director Brad Kinsman confirmed Friday that McIntyre had been given a release to talk to any school in the country except Iowa State. He also said that he had contacted R. Dale Smith of the NCAA enforcement bureau with some concerns regarding alleged recruiting violations by Iowa State.

"OUR MAIN CONCERN is that there were a number of rumors of John going to Iowa State as far back as January and he (McIntyre) repeatedly denied it." Kinsman said. legitimate. Giving him a release is pending their response.

'It's not unusual for it to take over a month They (the NCAA enforcement committee) are usually inun- to work on my game," he said. "It's dated with investigative work

When contacted Friday in Mission,

Kans. Smith said the NCAA "does not deny or confirm" ongoing investigations

Towa State assistant coach Jim Hallihan, who said he knew nothing of McIntyre's impending transfer to Michigan, refused comment on the situation other than saying: "It's a shame a kid can't do something he wanted to do."

They've accused us of tampering." Hallihan added, "but we've can investigate us all they want." Held up by U-D. McIntyre started looking elsewhere.

THREE WEEKS ago McIntyre visited the University of Missouri and said "I had a real good visit.

"I was tempted to go there," McIntyre said. "Coach (Norm) Stewart is really a nice guy and they have a good team, but I couldn't go there and play against coach (Johnny) Orr (of Iowa State). They're in the same league and it just wouldn't be right.

"I feel bad for coach Orr because he hasn't done anything wrong."

McIntyre said coach Bill Frieder of Michigan contacted him and offered a scholarship.

'I decided to stay close by here," said McIntyre. "I've been going up to Crisler Arena (in Ann Arbor) to play at night. I know (U-M players) Mark Hughes and J.P. (Oosterbaan) and pretty much all of the guys. I have a let of friends that go there

McIntyre was recruited by U-M after averaging 31 points per game We informed the NCAA about a at CC. He narrowed his choices down month ago to see if our concerns are to Detroit. Marquette, Iowa State and Michigan.

Detroit routs Livonia stars By Brad Emons

staff writer

Bob Foust may never play again at Tiger Stadium, but he'll have something special one day to tell his grandchildren

The 20-year-old Livonia shortstop from the Walter's Appliance team drilled a hanging curve ball into the upper deck seats in left field Monday morning, making up for an otherwise dismal showing by the Livonia Collegiate All-Stars. They were defeated in a 7-2 loss to the Detroit Adray League in the annual Adray All-Star Game

Foust's sixth inning shot came off former Henry Ford Community College teammate Steve Jaskolski, who grinned as the Livonian circled the bases

That was the best ever." said Foust, who got a big kiss from his mother "I don't think I'll ever have a better feeling.

The homer couldn't have been better timing for Foust, who has been struggling of late for Walter's, a team which currently is looking on the outside for the fourth and final playoff spot in the Collegiate circuit.

"I'M HITTING around 300, but Fin not really having a good year." he said. "I know I can play better."

Foust is unsure about his baseball future. He may opt for another two years of play at either Tennessee Tech or Siena Heights College, or he may wind up following the footsteps ot his dad with the Westland Fire Department

I'm not sure right now," he said.

Collegians nip Class A stars

Age was no barrier Monday night the younger and less experienced Livonia Collegiate Baseball League all-stars downed veterans from the Adray Class A circuit, 5-4, in an exhibition game played at Ford Field.

The Livonia stars jumped to a 5-0 ad after three innings and then held off a late rally by the Class A standouts

Class A starter and loser Greg Reinhold, who worked the first two innings, was the victim of three unearned runs. A pair of errors led to Reinhold's demise

Livonia added two more in the third off-Class A reliever J.D. Demare as Don Vesling clubbed a solo homer and Kevin Ritter followed with an RBI single, his second hit of the day Vesling also contributed two hit

Meanwhile, Livonia pitchers John Poszywak, Gary Zwolinski, Chris Stout and Kirk Boyd were sharp, as the Class A stars could collect only a lead-off single through the first six inning

But in the eighth inning, the Class A stars scored four times to narrow

This might be my last season. Foust's homer was about the only highlight for Livonia stars, who played most of the seven innings as f they lacked confidence in themselves

The Livonia stars committed three errors and had two runners picked off the bases

If we catch a fly ball and run the bases a little better, it might have been a different ballgame." said Ron Hellier of Livonia Adray, the Collegiate League's designated manager. Little Caesars outfielder Tyrone Gaines, who collected two of Livonia's five hits, drove in the Collegiate League's only other run with a double, scoring Zac Childress.

COLLEGIATE PITCHERS Rick Rozman (Livonia Adray), Mark Coburn (Caesars), Gary Zwolinski (Walter's) and Dan Kopitzke (Tom Holzer Ford) all fared well during their abbreviated stints, but unfortunately for Jim Robinson (Maple Appliance), it was a rocky fourth in-Detroit, sending 11 batters to the plate, tagged the 6-foot-4 right-hander for six runs on seven hits.

Plymouth Salem High School product Todd Reidel, now entering his senior year at School of the Ozarks in Missouri, drilled a two-run double to help spark the surge.

The Dearborn Vacuum shortstop, who admitted "I felt pumped up," collected a pair of hits for the winners along with Eddie Woolwine of Adrav Sound and Tim Lau of Lakes Hydralics.

Bad knees, big problem

njury is a lifetime thing.

That is partly why doctors disagree about the necessity of knee surgery. Some doctors believe people with ligament damage will always face problems, and the only way to minimize permanent disability is through surgery. Others believe the knee can heel itself through proper physical therapy and conditioning.

Peel said of the athletes she sees with ligament damage, 50 percent can play with little or no problem.

There are just a lot of questions concerning the anterior cruciate," Peel said. "Like why some people can get along with no problem whatsoever and never need surgery. And why there are others, like Mary, whose knees are so loose they can't play at all.

Have faith

IN THE LAST 10 years doctors. through arthroscopic techniques, have uncovered vast knowledge about the knee. The anterior cruciate ligament is one of the more recent discoveries. If Archer, Wagner and Rosowski had their injuries in the mid 1970s, their athletic careers would be terminated. Period. End of discussion

Today, all three are likely to resume playing.

So give these doctors and trainers another few years to wrestle with the anterior cruciate and other mystery ligaments. All questions - like why are women so susceptible to the injury, and why can some play with damaged ligaments and others can't may soon be answered.

Director Gordon Reinhart of Westland listens and advises performers during rehearsal for "The Weeping Icon," premiering at Wayne State University at a benefit to establish a Modern Greek Chair on campus.

Director faces challenge of working with new play

By Cathie Breidenbach special writer

HALLENGE IS the companion of opportunity. Gordon Reinhart, who is directing the premiere performance of the modern Greek drama "The Weeping Icon" at Wayne State University, recognizes the freedom he has in directing a play for its first staged performance and the tension and challenge that go with that freedom.

With a new play, you're on your own. You don't have the security of tradition to fall back on, of reviews and the historical perspective of what other directors have done," Reinhart said. "On the other hand you're the one setting the precedents and you don't have the pressure that comes with directing an established play. Reinhart, a Westland resident, welcomes the bonus of having the playwright, Pearl Ahnen, work with him at rehearsals. Ahnen drives to Wayne State from her home in Brighton to consult at rehearsals and collaborate on rewrites as her play moves toward its opening Friday in the General Lectures Building on campus in Detroit.

as a cable TV talk show, Ahnen is an established non-fiction writer who has been turning more and more to fiction in recent years. Besides her play soon to premiere, she has a novel under consideration at Simon and Schuster.

AHNEN, a diminutive Greek-American whose enthusiasm is infectious, said her three-character play is a modern Greek drama dealing with classic, universal themes. Action revolves around the visit of a young, all-American woman to the trailer home of her Greek mother-in-law after the mysterious death of the man who was the younger woman's husband 'You don't have the security of tradition to fall back on, of reviews and the historical perspective of what other directors have done.'

Elaine Phillips of West Bloomfield, chair for the fund raiser, estimates that there are nearly 60,000 Greek-Americans in the metropolitan Detroit area. She hopes that as the program at Wayne becomes well known it will serve as a cultural nucleus for the 70 local Greek clubs in the area and for students of all backgrounds interested in Greek language, c Iture and histo-Reinhart, the 24-year-old director of the play, is working toward a doctorate in theater at Wayne and spent last season as an actor with the Hilberry company. "The benefit audience will be

REINHART BELIEVES that good theater is rightfully about ideas and people who are larger than life. His aim as a director is to bring those ideas to the audience by using dramatic and theatrical techniques.

"The play tells what happens between the two women. There's a clash of generations, a clash of power and an ethnic clash between the Greek woman and the American daughter-in-law," Ahnen said.

The premiere performance and afterglow sponsored by the Modern Greek Chair Committee will help establish a permanent, independently funded Modern Greek Chair at the university. Begun in 1969, the Modern Greek Studies Program at Wayne is one of the largest and oldest in the country. The fundraising committee is working to ensure the continued vitality of the

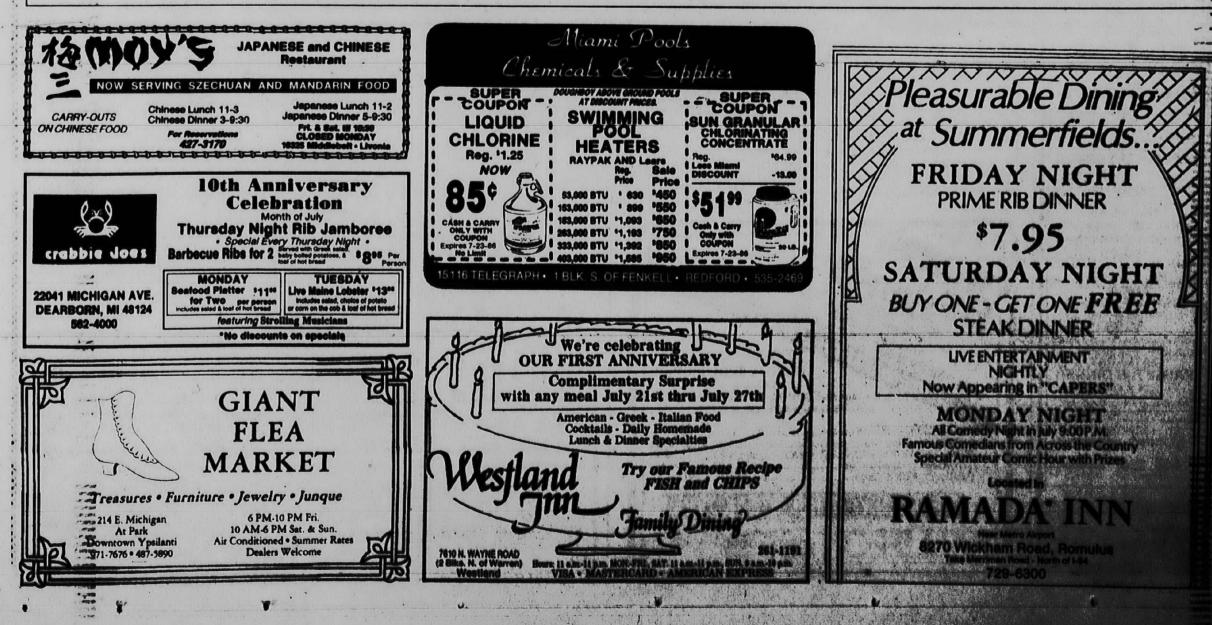

"The benefit audience will be primarily Greek and they'll under"Theater ought to be theatrical," he said.

He's tried to bring out the Greek identity in this modern family drama that he said "reminds me of 'Death of a Salesman' in that it's a play about memory — a lot is in the mind of the mother-in-law. The play's about death, forgiveness of other people and of yourself, and about getting on with life."

This was made during the craze for disaster films. This one, of course, is based on a true event, an event that is strong in the memory because of newsreel footage and a particularly vivid and emotional radio account of the disaster as it happened. The movie has its moments, especially in the grand design of '30s costumes. Good actors do journeymen work, including George C. Scott, Anne Bancroft and Charles Durning. The plot, present-ing several possible reasons for the still unexplained disaster, has its moments but in the end falls flat. The length is excessive. Rating: $2.

"Tail Gunner Joe" (1976), 11:30 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 7. Originally 144 minutes. TV time slot: 175 minutes.

Peter Boyle gives a strong performance as the pitiful Sen. Joe McCarthy. The film has a strong anti-McCarthy bias but the point of view is not unsympathetic and the period detail and understanding of politics in postwar America is insightful. Lately McCarthy has been getting some revisionist support for his cheap, scandalous red-baiting. This is a reminder that this poor, deluded man ruined careers and lives before finally succumbing to the bottle.

pleminded, message about the shared values of all humans and the stupidity of knee-jerk political reactions. But it's not the message that counts, it's the performances. Alan Arkin is outstanding as the low-key, level-headed Russian officer who wants to get out as soon as possible. Brian Keith is equally effective and low-key as the town's Andy Griffith style sheriff who never gets ruffled. Jonathon Winters, Carl Reiner, Theodore Bikel, Michael J. Pollard and Paul Ford are outstanding. Rating: $3.25.

"The Desert Fox" (1951), 2:30 Sunday night on Ch. 4. Originally 88 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

Erwin Rommel was a professional, honorable German military officer who pursued his career, unfortunately, during the Third Reich. This film is a defense of Rommel as a great man on the wrong side. It is a good combination of exciting battle scenes across the North African desert and an intriguing character study of the man who finally takes action against the tyrant he served, Adolph Hitler. James Mason is superb as Rommel; all his polish, charm and strength are put to good use here to portray a man who had all of that. Rating: $3.25.

• VETERANS PROGRAM EXTENDED

Area Vietnam-era and disabled, veterans should be aware of recent changes affecting the Veterans Readjustment Appointments program. VRA is a federal hiring program providing special, non-competitive hiring of these veterans. Originally scheduled to expire Sept. 30, 1984, the program has been extended through Sept. 30, 1986, through passage of the Veterans Benefits Improvement Act. It is not expectedthat the VRA program will be extended beyond that date.

In addition to extending the program, the act raised the entry grade level maximum from GS/WG-7 to GS/WG-9 and also provided limited appeal rights during the first year of appointment. A Vietnam-era or disabled veteran who has completed no more than 14 years of education may qualify for a VRA. (This restriction may be waived for disabled veterans.) For further information, interested veterans may call the local American Legion hotline at 453-9494 and leave a message regarding information desired.

Teacher reforms in place — UM dean

to improve the quality of teacher education are already in place in Michigan, says the president-elect of a statewide teacher education organization

A good many of those recommendations, while applicable to most of the country, are not nearly as applicable to the State of Michigan, which has always been a leader in education, especially in teacher education," said Richard W. Morshead, dean of the Division of Education at the University of Michigan-Dearborn

This is true both with respect to our education of teachers and doing research on teaching," he said.

MORSHEAD WAS recently elected the 1986-87 president of the Michigan Association of Colleges for Teacher Education, a professional organization that includes teacher education programs at 24 Michigan public and private colleges and universities.

MACTE is an affiliate of the American Association of Colleges of Teachers Education.

National reports by the Holmes Group - an organization of education deans - as well as the Carnegie Task Force on Teaching as a Profession, said that the quality of teacher education in this country needs drastie upgrading.

Virtually all (teacher education programs) in the state of Michigan have increased admissions requirements," with the average rising

Many national recommendations from a 'C' to a 'C plus,' Morshead said

> THE UM-D education dean said the state is proposing legislation that would require all teachers to be tested in basic skills before participating in student teaching.

Students at various schools are already required to take the National Teachers Exam, administered by Educational Testing Service.

Another recommendation - to eliminate undergraduate majors in education - is also largely irrelevant in this state. Virtually no teacher education school in Michigan offers an education major, per se. Students major and minor in subject areas, Morshead said.

There are few, if any, teacher preparation progams in Michigan that students can complete within the traditional four years and 120 credit hours, he noted. So, calls for an extension of education training beyond the normal undergraduate cycle are already being addressed here

"It typically takes the student longer than four years to complete a teacher preparation program in the state of Michigan. Students often accomplish this by going several sum-mer terms," the MACTE presidentelect says

Finally, Morshead said he is pleased that the Holmes group focuses attention on the importance of research in teaching. At UM-D and other Michigan institutions, the need for research directed into teaching has been long recognized.
