DOUBLE DATES: A brother and sister with the same birth dates ended up having children born on the same day. Kathy and Barney Judge of Plymouth had a baby girl, Emily Elizabeth, at 11:50 p.m. on Aug. 3. Barney's sister Cathy Giczewski and husband Norbert of Livonia had a baby boy, James Norbert, at 6:27 p.m. Aug. 3. Cathy, 30, and Barney, 29, were both born on Sept. 14. Their mother, Betty Judge of Plymouth, had commented before the new arrivals, "Wouldn't it be funny if you had babies on the same day?"

JOB APPRECIATION: Robert Rorabacher has been honored for 25 years employment for Plymouth Township with a proclamation from Gov. Blanchard and a proclamation from Plymouth Township. Rorabacher worked for the township as a carpenter and handyman from 1946 to 1950. From 1962 until the present he held the following jobs: Department of Public Works crew leader, acting director, chief building inspector, superintendent, inspector foreman, assistant superintendent and volunteer firefighter.

WANTED: STUDENT ARTISTS: The Plymouth Community Arts Council once again will sponsor the Student Booth as part of its Artist and Craftsmen Show on Sept. 12, 13 of Plymouth Fall Festival weekend. Students in Plymouth-Canton are invited to sell their artwork and crafts, with 10 percent of the proceeds going to the PCAC. In recent years the Student Booth has featured an assortment of handwork including painting, jewelry, dolls, stenciled items, woodworking, leatherwork, straw flowers, even hand-cultivated live green plants. The Student Booth is a popular exhibit at the show, says Aileen Burcham of the Arts Council, and students who have participated have enjoyed the great reviews given their work. "We encourage you to come and display your talents," said Pat Mackiewicz, who is working with Burcham on the show.

For registration instruction, call Mackiewicz at 459-3816 or Burcham at 455-5666, preferably after 5 p.m. Items for sale will be received at Central Middle School after 4 p.m. Friday, Sept. 11.

CHAMBER MUSIC: A string ensemble will be performing classical music from noon to 1 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 12, in Kellogg Park as part of the Music in the Park series. Laura and Alicia Rowe, violin and cello players respectively, are sophomores and seniors at Southfield Christian Academy. Both are active in chamber music groups, belong to the Livonia Youth Symphony and perform throughout the metropolitan area. The series is sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

GRID PACKAGE: The Hillside Inn in Plymouth, touting itself as the official U-M Football Headquarters for the 1987 season, is offering a dining package including chartered bus service to Ann Arbor. For games with a 1 p.m. kickoff, a champagne brunch will be served from 9-11 a.m. with the bus departing 11:30 a.m. If kickoff is 3:30 p.m., a free cocktail and cold buffet will be served from 11:30 to 1:30 p.m. with the bus leaving at 2 p.m. Upon return, fans will enjoy a prime rib or Canadian walleye dinner. Price of the dinner package is $45. Reservations are necessary. For information or reservations, call 455-3003 between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Peace pole

Future of marker remains uncertain

The future of a six-foot wooden peace pole, planted in Kellogg Park last week for a nuclear disarmament/peace rally, remains uncertain.

"I was led to believe the pole was to be permanent," said Glenn Davis, a Plymouth resident who co-ordinated the rally.

Davis said he was notified by city manager Henry Graper the day of the rally that the pole would be removed the following day and that the two should meet "to determine a more appropriate place" for the memorial. The meeting between Graper and Davis was scheduled for today (Monday). The pole still is up for now, thanks to a successful appeal to Mayor William L. Robinson.

Graper reportedly was out of town late last week and unavailable for comment.

WHILE SOME assumptions apparently were made about the pole prior to its erection, nothing, it seems, was spelled out in writing.

A DPW crew erected the pole

'One pole certainly isn't going to destroy the city's image. It's a symbol of something everyone wants.'

— Mayor William L. Robinson

supplied by rally organizers near the veterans memorial rock.

Mark Hammar, assistant DPW director, said he selected the spot after Davis told him the pole had been approved and Graper had suggested that site.

"I got no indication from them (organizers) or anyone else how long it was supposed to be in place," Hammar said.

Rally organizers want the pole to be a permanent fixture, preferably where it now stands.

"Any visual symbol that reminds people on a daily basis that our world is in peril and it's necessary for everyone to work for peace any way they can, it's important to have," said Anne Reynolds, who helped Davis coordinate the rally.

The city currently has no formal policy regarding the placing of monuments, said Paul Sincock, assistant to the city manager.

CONCERNS ABOUT what other loosely-organized, non-permanent groups might want to erect as monuments and insurance liability have been acknowledged by city administrators.

The city commission may determine the pole's fate.

Robinson said he personally has no problems with the peace pole, but then said that his voice is only one of seven on the commission.

Restoration planned for Geer School

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

If buildings had feelings, a lonely Geer School would shed a lot of tears.

The two-room schoolhouse, which for more than 100 years was alive with the sound of laughter and learning, has sat boarded-up, slowly deteriorating under graceful trees on a country road in Superior Township.

A group of individuals with ties to Plymouth-Canton Community Schools hopes to reopen Geer in the fall of 1988. Until 1982 Plymouth-Canton schools used the 107-year-old building as an elementary school. District fifth graders would spend a week at Geer, with teachers following a curriculum reminiscent of the 1880s.

They've selected an architect and are planning fund-raisers to earn the $100,000 needed to restore the structure. Already they've raised about $8,000.

RATHER THAN simply renovate the building on Ann Arbor Road at Gotfredson, it was decided to restore it to its original condition.

"We really wanted it to be part of living history and brought back to the period of the time, rather than a building you could go out and build today," said Elaine Kirchgatter, Geer School Committee member and a former Plymouth-Canton school board member.

"Fortunately we live in a community that has a good feeling for history and tradition.

"Money was tight in the 1880s, and you can see a lot of love went into the building of the school," added Kirchgatter. "Architects think it's lovely. Our school is in sound condition, and in better shape than other buildings of the same vintage."

Architects bidding on the job are impressed with the building's fine lines, its sturdy brick walls, (wooden schools were prevalent late in the last century), tongue-and-groove decorative wood paneling, and plaster and oak walls.

Plans call for removal of the non-original west wing and lowered ceiling, and for the installation of a new roof. A picket fence probably will be built, and a potbellied stove and gaslight lamps installed.

A search is under way for old-fashioned desks, and the long-lost Geer School bell to be housed in the cupola.

Access not hurt by fairness ruling

The ruling abolishing the Fairness Doctrine for broadcasters will have little practical effect here, said an executive of the cable TV company which serves Plymouth and Canton.

"The idea behind local access is to provide a local forum for those who can't afford or can't get access to commercial television," said Frederick Collman, general manager of Omnicom of Michigan.

The Fairness Doctrine, established administratively by the Federal Communications Commission, requires that broadcasters, among other things, present all sides of controversial issues.

The FCC abolished that portion of the doctrine last week.

"Anyone can get on our access channel," Collman said. "We have equipment. We'll book time. We want to protect our asset for the community, so we ask that people know what they're doing."

OMNICOM WILL provide free training in how to use equipment and edit tape, said Maria Holmes, program director.

Persons who want to produce a show won't be charged a broadcast fee if their purpose is to "introduce a concept or thought into the commu-

They sell tomatoes amid urban sprawl

By Diane Gale
staff writer

So, you think Canton has lost its country flavor.

Don't let those tall buildings and highfalutin' development plans fool you.

Produce stands still crop up along roadsides this time of year.

And even though the farms are receding more and more toward the outskirts of the township's 36 square miles, they still stand in their serene glory — only a stone's throw from burgeoning subdivisions and developments.

Bulldozers and concrete can't squash the image of a community that once claimed the title of "Sweet corn growing capital of the world." You'll find some holdouts who say the title still fits.

IF YOU'VE been hankering for some of those yellow kernels — selling locally for about 10 cents an ear — and other fresh farm-grown delights yours for the choosing, you don't have far to go.

At Ernie Costantino's family farm, sweet corn remains the best seller at the roadside stand on Cherry Hill west of Beck. His family's farming tradition in Canton goes back to his grandfather in 1942. High taxes could push the family out of the farming business, he said.

Costantino, a Plymouth-Canton high school teacher, said development in the area is "good and bad" for the farming business.

"Urban sprawl is good for this because there's a market for the commodity. So, for the roadside stand it's great. But it's bad for taxes and the kids riding through the farms."

The stand offers: sweet corn, $1.25 a dozen; green beans, 60 cents a pound; broccoli, cabbage, cucumber, zucchini, green pepper, sweet yellow peppers; red and white potatoes.

This is an early year for crops, Costantino said.

Business at the stand "runs in spurts," he said. "When the roadside traffic is heavy, business is heavy. When the roadside traffic is slow, business is slow."

ACROSS THE street, Susan Ferrari runs her stand. She said her husband, Victor, has a full-time job but he loves to farm and "watch things grow."

"He couldn't live without doing it. Even if we moved, we'd probably have a garden."

Proceeds from the stand, Ferrari said, help to pay some of the taxes.

Group plans to restore school

NO TAXPAYER money will be used for the restoration. Instead, the committee is seeking grants and donations from folks willing to give of their time and money. Committee members also are collecting old photographs, books, rulers, lunch pails, maps, flags and other memorabilia.

Several fund raisers are in the works. Numbered Pewabic tiles depicting Geer School, fashioned by local artist Julie Bohnhorst-Dotson, will be sold at the Plymouth Fall Festival committee member Janet Campbell said.

Other proposed fund-raisers include an October historic home tour with a stop at Geer School, an old-fashioned fashion show and luncheon, the giving away of an antique quilt at Fall Festival, the sale of Geer School cookie cutters and the giving away of a miniature-dollhouse-sized Geer School during the Plymouth Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

Kids will be able to take part with a "Cheer for Geer" pencil sale after school opens.

DONNA KEOUGH was active at Geer when sons Shane and Shawn attended school there.

To her Geer "was a very special place where every family knew every other family. Kids worked with each other and the older ones watched out for the little ones, just like they did in country schools," said Keough, also a committee member.

It was family togetherness that promoted that type of thing. It's not as evident in schools today."

Those interested in tax-deductible donations may make checks payable to the Educational Excellence Foundation, earmarking funds for the Geer School Restoration. The mailing address is P.O. Box 449, Plymouth 48170.

New transit service offered

Dissatisfaction with the quality of a discount taxi service for senior citizens in Plymouth has prompted a switch to a new provider who also can serve handicapped people.

While 24-hour service won't be available through Alternative Community Transportation, city residents at least 60 years old and the handicapped of any age qualify for the discount rate.

Previously, service for the handicapped wasn't available and users had to be at least 65 years old.

A rider will be charged $1 for the first four miles, then 50 cents per mile each way. Two or more people from the same pick-up point to the same destination each will pay $1 per complete trip regardless of length.

THE SERVICE is available 6 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Friday and 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Discount shuttle service will be provided anywhere within the city of Plymouth, Northville, Northville Township, Livonia, Farmington and Farmington Hills.

Rides will be provided on demand (474-6222). Handicapped people needing help are asked to reserve 24 hours in advance.

Discount shuttle service will be provided anywhere within the city of Plymouth, Northville, Northville Township, Livonia, Farmington and Farmington Hills. Discounts also will apply on trips to medical facilities in Plymouth Township and the Northwest Skill Center and Tri-City Therapeutic Center in Westland.

The city subsidizes the discount shuttle with money provided by the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority.

Sharon Thomas, housing director in Plymouth, said she believes demand will pick up with Alternative Community Transportation.

"SERVICE HAD declined so much due to dissatisfaction, we didn't have a gauge to go on," Thomas said. "I probably had 30 phone calls yesterday morning from people who were interested."

Plymouth Township, which opted out of the dial-a-ride program earlier this summer, still is investigating an alternative provider. The Plymouth Community Van, a separate transportation program in the city and township, will continue to operate as it has. People at least 62 years old can book a ride (455-7873) anywhere in the city or township a day in advance.

City residents will pay 25 cents each way. The township completely subsidizes rides for its residents. The van doesn't have a wheelchair lift.

nity or cover a community event," she added.

Prospective producers seeking access to Omnicom's two local programming channels are asked to contact Holmes (459-7321) during business hours.

Omnicom has about 20,000 subscribers in Plymouth, Canton, Northville and Hamtramck, Collman said.

Although uncommon, some individuals have cited the Fairness Doctrine in requesting air time on cable TV, Collman said.

THE DOCTRINE has been a sore point with some broadcasters who complain they should be given the same First Amendment rights to free expression that newspapers and magazines enjoy.

Broadcasters also say fear of complaints to the FCC causes some in their ranks to back away from controversial material.

Proponents of the doctrine claim it ensures that minority viewpoints will get a fair airing.

The battle over the Fairness Doctrine will now shift to Congress, which passed a bill making the doctrine law earlier this year. However, President Ronald Reagan vetoed that legislation.

Limited broadcast frequencies spawned the Fairness Doctrine. It has been used by the FCC when evaluating license renewal requests.

The case resulting in modification of the Fairness Doctrine involved a complaint from a peace group that wanted the opportunity to respond to a nuclear power ad paid for by a utility in Syracuse, N.Y.

Tomato sellers abound here

Four chickens are a recent addition to the farm. A Westland man came by and asked if Ferrari wanted to take a chicken. Another man dropped off three more. The Ferraris enjoy them — and the eggs they produce — so much, the couple is thinking about adding more.

Other old-time country sights have been surfacing a lot lately.

Like the three foxes that were spotted last week. One was at Haggerty and Warren, another at Beck and Warren and the third (or maybe it was the same one) at Koppernick and the railroad tracks, according to Canton Police Sgt. William Lenaghan.

Not far from where one of the foxes was spotted, Dwight Wilkin plows the land his family has been farming since his grandfather started farming in 1909. Now Dwight and his wife sell produce from their roadside stand on Beck north of Warren. He also hauls produce out of state.

The biggest sellers are sweet corn, tomatoes and melons.

"Farming in Canton is really going downhill," Wilkin said. He blames the decline on the ever-growing subdivisions and "kids running through" farms and destroying crops.

Things are so bad he's planning on moving.

"Makes you sort of sick. It's going to be hard to move. The neighbors are here, family are here and our friends are all here."

"I'll keep farming. I'm too stubborn to quit."

Pole's future uncertain

"As far as I'm concerned, it can stay up there forever," Robinson said. "One pole certainly isn't going to destroy the city's image. It's a symbol of something everyone wants."

A petition drive urging support of the monument is under way, Reynolds said. The city commission next meets Aug. 17.

"I FEEL the commissioners are presented with our reasons why it should be kept and people in Plymouth feel the same way, they will embrace it enthusiastically," Reynolds said.

"I don't think they want to be the first community in the country to take it out once it's in," she said.

The peace pole, described as "an enlightening rod" by one of the marchers at last week's rally, is inscribed with the phrase, "May peace prevail on Earth," in English, Russian, German and Hebrew.

Seniors prepare for their olympics

By Arlene Funke
special writer

John Frazee isn't sitting around collecting cobwebs.

The 81-year-old Canton retiree plays softball, volleyball and golf. He has been a competitive runner and also plays bocce ball, a type of lawn bowling.

Frazee soon will join an estimated 600 senior citizens in competition at the eighth annual Michigan Senior Olympics. The statewide event will be held from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 15, at the Orchard Ridge campus of Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills.

"I consider myself in fair shape," said Frazee, who retired from a steel fabricating plant at age 75.

"You have to overcome a lot of things in order to stay in shape," Frazee added. "Last year, I broke my elbow but I kept playing."

FRAZEE HAS COMPETED in several Senior Olympics events over the past few years. He and his colleagues explode the myth that senior citizens are vegetating in their collective rocking chairs.

Senior Olympics activities encompass a wide variety of sports and leisure pastimes. They range from softball, running and swimming to ballroom dancing and checkers. Other categories are track and field, table tennis, cycling, basketball, archery and golf putting.

"We started with this program to dispel the myth of elderly (weakness)," said Marye Miller, co-chair of the event. Miller is employed by the Older Persons Activities Center, which serves Rochester, Rochester Hills and Oakland Township.

"They are more physically fit than

'We have seen how people deteriorate after retiring. Physically, we are both better than we were before we were retired.'

— Frances Anderson

people think they are," Miller added. "What we didn't realize was how competitive they have become."

The Senior Olympics is sponsored by Michigan Blue Cross/Blue Shield, the Michigan Parks and Recreation Association, the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission and the Coburn Clinic.

Competition is by gender, in five-year age increments. Anyone 55 and older may take part. Spectators are welcome. Competitors pay a $2 registration fee, plus $1 for closed events, which include runs, bocce, archery, tennis, track and field, cycling, swimming, horse shoes and table tennis.

THERE IS NO charge to enter open events, which include art and crafts, shuffleboard, basketball free throw, golf putting, Frisbee throw, checkers and dancing.

Most participants are active in senior citizen groups in metro Detroit. Others come from Grand Rapids, Flint and other areas of the state, Miller said.

"When I first started playing softball, I could barely hit the ball," said competitor Frances Anderson, 69, of Livonia.

Anderson has embraced sports as a way of keeping fit. She and her husband Martin, 73, a retired auto worker, have taken part in Senior Olympics in previous years. They were unsure if they would participate this year.

"We were in the 50-meter walk," Anderson said. "It's about one mile, walking as fast as you can."

Other categories in previous years included softball, in which participants would try to hit the ball a far distance. Despite allergies which cause breathing difficulty, Anderson also enjoys swimming and volleyball. She plays in a senior citizen softball league and manages a team sponsored by Little Bill's Trophy Shop in Redford.

"I'm in the water exercise program at Schoolcraft College," she added. "I'm sure it has done much to make me stronger all over."

"We have seen how people deteriorate after retiring," Anderson said. "Physically, we are both better than we were before we were retired."

JUDY BOND, 74, of Canton, has had to curtail some of her activities since suffering a heart attack two years ago. In previous years, dating to 1983, she competed in the Senior Olympics running events.

"This year, I'm going to play in golf and bocce ball," said Bond, a retired executive secretary who has always been sports-minded. "I played golf for many years. I used to shoot in the low 80s. Golf and baseball are my two loves. When I can't play, I root."

Joan Jasin, 62, of Canton is an accomplished swimmer. She recently returned from the first National Senior Olympics competition in St. Louis, where she took part in several swimming events.

Jasin is a longtime member of the Garden City women's synchronized swim team which competes around the country.

"I won two medals at state Senior Olympics last year," Jasin explained. "That qualified me to go to national. The whole experience was wonderful."

Jasin said her performance was affected by an auto accident which injured her hip and arm. "I'm just being careful," said Jasin, who plans to take part in two swimming and one walking category at the upcoming state competition.

Jasin, a part-time bookkeeper in her husband Carl's heating and air-conditioning business in Garden City, attributes her stamina to a 10-mile-per-week running regimen.

Several seniors said they enjoy the fellowship and sense of accomplishment associated with the competition.

"People tend to see seniors as frail," Miller said. "That's why people don't want to get old. They are pretty fit and agile. They just want to be part of it."

Public services chief keeps county moving

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Russell Gronevelt, Wayne County's acting public services director, has no trouble determining his office's jurisdiction.

If it moves, or if people move over it, then he's responsible. Gronevelt coordinates relations between Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara and the county divisions of airports, public works and parks. His office also oversees all non-sheriff's department cars and trucks, the county park system and all county buildings.

It's quite a jump from his previous job as director of Livonia's public service department.

"Back then, if there was a problem, I could just hop in my car, and in five minutes, I'd be out there," Gronevelt said. "Now, that could be a half-day trip or more."

As he sees it, his job is to pull the various departments together into a streamlined unit.

"Because the county's so big, it's important that we establish a system for doing things," he said. "Ed McNamara calls this a major league DPW."

Despite the county's financial crisis, the wolf isn't at the office of public services' door. Roads are being maintained, Gronevelt said, and service continues at Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport and at Willow Run, the other county-operated airport.

"THE COUNTY'S budget problems are happening within its general fund, but roads and the airport are financed through other sources," he said.

State gasoline taxes and license fees go toward maintaining county roads. The county is also paid for maintaining highways and trunkline routes such as Grand River and Telegraph roads on the state's behalf.

Landing fees, paid by the airlines, maintain the airports.

But it's not all silver lining. The

"The trick is getting the most out of what you have."
— Russell Gronevelt
acting public services director

parks department, Gronevelt said, is feeling the pinch.

But Gronevelt said he has experience in stretching budgets to meet citizens' needs.

"Even in Livonia, we never had enough money to do everything everybody would have liked," he said. "The trick is getting the most out of what you have."

GRONEVELT SPENT 18 years as a Livonia city employee.

"In that time, I'd say I had about a dozen jobs," he said.

Prominent among them was a stint as administrative assistant to then-Mayor Edward McNamara.

He also served as a city project engineer and city superintendent of operations, in addition to other posts. This year, when McNamara became county executive, he brought Gronevelt with him.

Originally, Gronevelt was to have been director of roads. But after a few weeks on the job, he was moved up to his present post. The county commission is expected to act on Gronevelt's appointment as director before the end of the month.

"I'm going to be 40," he said. "And it was time for reassessment. As much as I liked my job in Livonia, it wasn't something I felt I'd spend the rest of my life doing."

Though the director's job is mostly a low profile one, the office will have a high profile in the next few weeks — sprucing up county roads for next month's visit of Pope John Paul II and beginning repaving work on Rogell Drive, the main road around and through Metro Airport.

Gronevelt holds a bachelor's degree from Michigan Technological University and a master's from Wayne State. He is a Livonia resident.

Getting tougher Prosecutor's office aims to curb automobile thefts

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Wayne County is stepping up its fight against auto theft.

A $250,000 state grant will help the county prosecutor's office create an auto theft task force. The grant is expected to allow Prosecutor John O'Hair to assign as many as five assistant prosecutors to auto theft cases.

"Basically, we'll be able to supplement what had been inadequate efforts in that area," said John Thompson, prosecutor's office spokesman.

"Right now, there's one assistant prosecutor working in the area. With the state grant there could be as many as four or five," said Thompson, deputy chief of special prosecutor office services.

County commissioners approved the grant Thursday.

Though reported auto thefts declined in both the state and county last year, experts say auto theft remains a major problem.

There were 43,300 auto thefts reported throughout the county last year. The figure is equivalent to one theft for every 33 registered vehicles. There are 1,421,330 vehicles registered in Wayne County, according to state records.

"Statewide, there was $432 million in auto theft reported last year," said Beth Hall, whose agency monitors state auto theft statistics. "That's a lot of money any way you slice it."

Hall is executive director of the state Automobile Theft Prevention Agency. Her agency is distributing the $250,000 grant.

Detroit reported 31,913 auto thefts last year, most in the county and roughly 45 percent of all auto thefts reported statewide. That figure however, was 5,738 below the number of Detroit auto thefts reported in 1985.

"Actually, auto theft is up every where but Detroit," Hall said.

In addition to distributing grant money, the agency monitors auto thefts throughout the state. According to its records, the following numbers of auto thefts occurred in each local community last year:

- Livonia - 1,098
- Westland - 726
- Canton Township - 225
- Garden City - 155
- Plymouth - 24

Figures weren't available for Redford or Plymouth townships.

Theft ring leaders, chop shops and those who deal in stolen auto parts will be targeted for prosecution, Thompson said.

"It's our opinion that there's a finite number of people who make up the problem," he said. "It's our job to put them behind bars."

Apartment residents confronted by prowler

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Three incidents involving a man lingering around a sliding back door have been reported by women living in Canton Commons apartments.

The latest case was the most serious.

At about 11:25 p.m. Aug. 5, a woman said she heard knocking on the sliding door of her apartment. She opened the door thinking it might be someone she knew. A man swung the door open and asked: "Do you want company?" according to Canton Police information officer Dave Boljesic.

She said "no" and tried to shut the door. The man pushed the door open, entered her apartment and started ripping her clothes off.

THEY STRUGGLED and she broke free, running toward the front door screaming. The man — described as about 30 years old, 5 feet

5 to 5 feet 8 inches tall, medium build with brown collar-length hair and a thick brown mustache — fled through the back door.

In a separate incident about 12:30 a.m. July 25, another woman apartment dweller heard a noise outside her kitchen window. She looked through the glass doorwall and saw a man. He fit the same description given in the latest incident.

She apparently scared him off when she looked out at him, Boljesic said. The woman told police she had seen the man in Canton Commons before but didn't know who he was.

At about 11 p.m. Aug. 4, another woman in Canton Commons said she heard a knock on the doorwall. A man, again fitting the same description as the initial suspect, was standing at the doorwall.

The man said: "I know you're alone," Boljesic said. He fled after she screamed. This woman reported seeing this man before and making an earlier police report.

Canton Police are asking anyone with information about these incidents to call 397-3000.

IN A SEPARATE case, a 27-year-old Plymouth woman was arrested for drunk driving after she stopped her car and slumped over the driver's wheel going northbound on Canton Center at Warren.

The woman's blood-alcohol level was listed at 0.52. In Michigan, 0.10 is considered legally drunk.

The woman's two children, 4 and 6 years old, were waiting outside the car.

Police received the call from a motorist who reported the incident about 12:30 p.m. Aug. 4. When Canton Police and emergency rescue units arrived, the woman was unconscious.

They rushed her to Canton Oakwood Hospital where she was treated and released.

Uniforms are 'immuralized'

The new competition and marching uniforms of the Centennial Educational Park Marching Band will be seen on the walls as well as on the field. The uniforms will be distributed to the band this month during band camp and will be seen by the public at the first home football game Friday, Sept. 11, and then during the Sunday of Plymouth Fall Festival at the bandshell. The competition uniforms of the drum line last week were painted in a mural by students on the wall in the band room of Canton Phase III. Shown near the mural are Lesley and Grant Carmichael who painted the mural.

Daffy court case settled

The flap over Daffy the duck ended quietly Thursday as Daffy's Westland owner pleaded guilty in 18th District Court to unlawfully owning a pet duck.

Judge Gail McKnight agreed to a suspended sentence for H.B. Shaw since Daffy has been living with a family in Canton Township since the controversy erupted last month. Canton laws allow ducks to be kept as pets in single-family homes.

Shaw, who was boarding the duck at his Westland home as a pet for nephew Michael Shopshear, could have been fined a maximum of $500 and sentenced to 90 days in jail for violating the city ordinance.

The legal battle over Daffy began earlier this summer when one of Shaw's neighbors filed a complaint with ordinance officials.

The neighbor claimed Shaw was violating the city ordinance which confines farm-yard animals to property that is at least half an acre in size and at least 20 feet from the any adjacent residences.

Ducks are considered farm animals under the ordinance.

But Shaw, whose property fails to meet the ordinance's requirements, argued a local pet store sold him the duck as a house pet. The store shouldn't sell animals which don't meet city codes, he said.

Ordinance officials had originally given Shaw a June 29 date to find another home for the duck. When the deadline passed with no action, Shaw was issued a citation and later arraigned on the charges.

Activities set for handicapped

The newly formed Western Wayne County Therapeutic Recreation Program, sponsored by recreation departments of Canton and Plymouth, announced this week a number of activities planned for handicapped young people.

On Monday, Aug. 10, a trip will be taken to Greenfield Village, leaving at 9:30 a.m. and returning 3:30 p.m. from the Canton Municipal Building parking lot at 1150 Canton Center Road just south of Cherry Hill.

The charge is $3.25 for ages 5-12 and $6.50 for ages 13 and older plus $1 for transportation. Bring a sack lunch. The trip is limited to 40 people. People may register by calling 397-5110, ext. 298.

The program also is offering ice skating lessons from 4:50 to 5:20 p.m. on Tuesdays Sept. 8 through Oct. 27 at the Plymouth Cultural Center. The cost is $15 per session and the lessons are limited to the first 10 people (any disability) who sign up. For more information or to register call Kathy Donnelly at 455-6620.

A PICNIC AT Maybury State Park

will be held Sunday, Aug. 16. Families of handicapped people will meet at 1 p.m. at the picnic area of Maybury State Park on 8 Mile west of Beck. The park entry fee is $2 per car. Bring a dish to pass.

The therapeutic recreation program will provide drink, eating utensils, and charcoal. A bike trial, fishing pond and playground are provided within the park. Bring your bikes, fishing equipment, Frisbees, etc. (no alcoholic beverages). For information call 397-5110, ext. 298.

Then on Saturday, Aug. 22, the agency is sponsoring a trip to the Belle Isle Zoo. The bus will depart the Canton Municipal Building parking lot at 9:30 a.m. and return about 3:30 p.m. The charge is $1.50 per person which includes transportation and admission to the zoo. Bring a picnic lunch. To sign up call 397-5110, ext. 298.

THE WESTERN Wayne Therapeutic Recreation Program also is offering horseback riding lessons through Winshire Farms on Wixom Road near Charming Road for handicapped individuals.

The first class will be at 7 a.m. and the second following at 8 a.m. Lessons will begin Tuesday, Sept. 8. The charge will be $25 for eight weeks. There is a limit of four to five students per class. Application forms may be picked up at Canton Parks and Recreation Center, 1150 Canton Center Road or by calling 397-5110, ext. 298.

An ice skating party for handicapped persons will be held from 2-4 p.m. Friday, Aug. 14, at the Plymouth Cultural Center on Farmer in Plymouth. Refreshments will be available.

A dance program for handicapped children also is being planned. Before details are finalized, though, the leaders involved need to know how many are interested. Send your name, address, phone number, child's name, age and disability to Canton Parks and Recreation, 1150 S. Canton Center Road, Canton MI 48188.

That information will allow planners to determine how many classes to offer and what age ranges to include. The classes will be held at the Dimensions and Dance Studio on Starkweather in Plymouth.

County sells land

It wasn't the big land sale involving property in Northville Township — that one's still tied up in committee — but Wayne County has disposed of about 10 acres in the city of Wayne.

City officials will pay $70,000 for the former Wayne Yard, an open lot near Michigan Avenue.

"It was a parking lot for county road commission workers," assistant city manager John Zech said. The property could soon be sold again for private development, he added.

The city is also leasing five acres behind its municipal offices for a nominal fee — $1 a year.

"It's a five-year lease that we obviously hope will go on forever," Zech said.

The property includes a Rouge River flood plain and cannot be developed, Zech said. "We hope to have it landscaped and maybe put a trail through it," he added.

County officials were more than happy to see the land sold and leased.

"It's land we wouldn't have used anyway," assistant county executive David Katz said. The contracts were unanimously approved by county commissioners Thursday.

Meanwhile, the county is still tallying up its land holdings.

"There were drain commission land holdings, road commission land holdings and county general fund land holdings," Katz said. "Right now, we're just trying to find out what we have."

The future of a marketing plan for 1,040 county-owned acres in Northville Township could be decided Thursday, Aug. 27. The county commission's economic development committee will decide whether to recommend the plan.

700 road projects under way

AP — If you think there's a lot of construction and maintenance work on Michigan highways this summer, you're right.

The Department of Transportation said Friday there are about 700 projects on the state highway system alone, not counting county and local roads.

"Motorists are right if they think we've got a lot of jobs going on out there," transportation director James Pitz said.

"The volume of work seems bigger than usual because we're concentrating on preservation and improvement of existing highways, rather than building new ones," he said. "The projects are highly visible and many unavoidably cause some inconvenience to motorists."

This year's work will result in improvements to nearly 600 miles of the 9,500-mile state highway system, which includes all Interstate and U.S.- and M-designated highways. About 140 of the 4,000 bridges in the state will receive work.

10 colleges self-insure on liability

Oakland University and nine of Michigan's other public four-year colleges and universities have formed a cooperative self-insurance pool to provide liability coverage.

The cooperative program will provide improved insurance coverage at lower costs, the group said. Each participating institution has a deductible equal to its expected annual losses, and will pool their risks for major losses.

The new program stems from 1985, when liability costs more than doubled and coverages were reduced, officials said.

Other members, as of July 1, are: Central Michigan University, Eastern Michigan University, Ferris State College, Grand Valley State College, Michigan State University, Michigan Technological University, Northern Michigan University, Wayne State University and Western Michigan University.

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

SC to host program on special ed

A reception for parents of special education students will be held Saturday, Aug. 22 at Schoolcraft College.

The program seeks to combine information about special education programs with prize drawings and entertainment, organizers say. It is co-sponsored by the college and United Cerebral Palsy of Metropolitan Detroit.

Schoolcraft marketing students Deborah Nairne of Redford Township and Judith Quayle of Livonia have arranged the program.

The event begins 1:30 p.m. in the college's Waterman Center. Schoolcraft is at 18600 Haggerty.

1907 railroad wreck claimed 33 dead, 100 injured

(Part 4)

Most of those killed in the collision between a passenger and a freight train just west of Plymouth 80 years ago had been in the smoking car, just behind the locomotive.

Shortly after 2 p.m. on July 20, 1907, the day of the tragedy, a baggage car containing the dead and some of the injured headed for Ionia, the town from which the excursionists had departed in high spirits a few hours earlier.

On the way, the train passed another headed in the opposite direction and waiting in a siding. The eastbound train carried Ionia relatives of the victims who were trying to get to the scene of the accident. It was later reported that the Ionians were bitter, claiming they were unnecessarily delayed.

Young Walter Ebert of Plymouth, who had helped carry stretchers bearing some of the dead, watched as one of the wreckers loaded a demolished locomotive onto a flat car. The Saginaw wrecker remained at the scene for three days.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD Lovorne Sly and her sister, eight-year-old Elizabeth, could hardly wait for the chores and supper to be over at the Sly farmhouse on Five Mile between Haggerty and Bradner in Plymouth Township.

Finally, at 5:30 p.m., father Silas Sly hitched Prim, the black driving mare, to the surrey. The family headed west on Five Mile Road.

Silas Sly tied the horse to a fence at the corner of Napier and Five past and present

Sam Hudson

Mile. The Slys walked north on Napier to the scene of the accident. Lovorne recalled what they saw.

"The coaches were smashed and jumbled. The red parlor coach seats were set up on the banks. The wreckers were hoisting the debris. Swarms of people were quietly moving about and talking to old friends."

When the Slys returned to the wire fence where the horse had been tied, they found that she had kicked at a neighboring horse and broken her thigh and tug.

"A kind neighbor," Lovorne recalled, "got in her buggy with a top and presently handed out some long corset strings. Pa used them to mend the thigh and tug. He held Prim to a fidgety walk on the way home."

LONG INTO the night, people sat in Plymouth's Kellogg Park, or stood on street corners, talking about the disaster that had taken the lives of so many Ionians.

All night long, the sky was lit by the burning of the wrecked cars whose bodies were built of poplar and whose beams were of yellow pine.

Had a long-dead philosopher, from another Ionia, been able to speak across a gap of more than 1,900 years, he might have told the stunned people of Plymouth that "fire is the primary substance out of which all things have emerged and into which all men must return." For Heraclitus, even the soul is made of fire.

The final tally was 33 dead and 100 injured. Included among those killed were conductor E.J. Pixley and fireman Charles Knowles of the passenger train. Knowles sustained a fractured skull and died on the relief train near Plymouth. Engineer Alvord suffered a sprained ankle. Engineer Wilson Rogers of the freight train was scalded and bruised.

On July 26, the Plymouth Mail reported that instances of miraculous escapes were numerous. "One couple past 70 was in the coach thrown high into the air. They helped themselves out, walked to Plymouth and ate dinner at the Commercial Hotel."

The Michigan State Telephone Company set up temporary phones on a pole near the wreck and let the survivors phone their families without charge.

Some of the survivors, who had been traveling in the rear coaches, did not realize the awfulness of the wreck. They sat on the bank and ate their lunches while those nearest the crash worked feverishly to extricate the dead and the dying.

Deputy Sheriff Vandecar took a large quantity of articles belonging to the injured and the dead to the Plymouth Village Hall. Some looting was reported. Dr. Kenyon of Plymouth lost his $18 cuff links, set aside as he administered to the injured.

The splintered wreckage of passenger cars remain following the train wreck just west of Plymouth in July 1907.

A front page story in the Detroit Free Press on July 21, 1907, had a statement from Wilson Rogers, engineer of the freight. From his hospital bed, Rogers said that he lost his orders and forgot about the excursion train.

Freight conductor Hamilton is reported to have said, "I suppose they will hold me responsible for this."

A jury was impaneled to investigate the wreck. The inquest was held in Northville. Reporters from newspapers throughout the Midwest were present at the daily sessions. During the inquest, it was brought out that the freight train order was telegraphed from Detroit to Plymouth at 2:26 a.m. on July 20. This order, copied and filed by night operator Calvin R. Sayles, was turned over to day operator William Cassidy upon his arrival at work. It was Cassidy who delivered the order to conductor Hamilton.

ARTHRITIS AND THE INTESTINAL TRACT

Ulcerative colitis and regional enteritis are conditions in which there is inflammation of the lining of the intestinal tract. Individuals with this diagnosis are prone to a joint problem called: the arthritis of inflammatory bowel disease. This arthritis involves the shoulders, hips, knees and back, and is distinct from rheumatoid arthritis which spares the back and focuses on the joints of the hands, wrists, and feet.

The interaction between joints and the gastrointestinal tract occurs because the inflamed intestine permits substances normally contained within it to enter the bloodstream. These substances elicit an antibody response by the body. If the individual is unfortunate, that antibody also reacts against the person's joints, initiating the process of inflammation.

Treatment for persons with this type of arthritis is difficult, as therapy must encompass both the bowel problem and the joint condition. In a few individuals the bowel disease clears in time, but the arthritis lingers and appears episodically as pain and swelling in the back, shoulder or knee.

Archeology's a challenge

Puzzle pieces missing in our wet climate

Michigan is one of the most challenging places for making archaeological discoveries, said John Colling, new head of the Michigan Archeological Society.

According to Colling, weather conditions in the state make finding ancient artifacts difficult.

"Unlike desert areas of the world where many ruins are preserved intact, in Michigan we find only bits and pieces of the tools and objects used by prehistoric people," he said.

"Trying to reconstruct the lifestyles of these ancient people is comparable to doing a jigsaw puzzle with most of the pieces missing."

COLLING, communications manager of the Southeast Michigan Travel and Tourist Association and a Northville Township resident, has recently assumed the presidency of the 500-member society.

The organization has 10 permanent chapters throughout the state including four in southeastern Michigan — Detroit, Royal Oak, Ann Arbor and Monroe.

Members range from professional archaeologists to people with no formal background in the field.

"The society is very interested in seeing that archeology in Michigan is done correctly. Our group is dedicated to the proper development of knowledge about the early inhabitants of the state," said Colling.

A FORMER journalist and radio news reporter, Colling has been active in archaeological circles for 15 years.

He has participated in excavations throughout southeastern Michigan and directed the two-year Gaskill Site excavation in Clinton Township of Macomb County. Currently, he is working toward a master's degree in anthropology at Wayne State University.

"This field is absolutely fascinating. Unlike space and underwater exploration it is a threshold of discovery available to all of us," said Colling.

"Amateurs have made great finds. One member of our society found a projectile point — a 'Clovis' — in Sterling Heights that dates back to the Paleo-Indian Period. The Clovis is one of the earliest tool types in the New World."

ARCHAEOLOGISTS separate the time span of prehistoric occupation in Michigan into three periods: Paleo-Indian, Archaic and Woodland.

Projectile points, more commonly known as arrowheads, found in fields and earth mounds across the state reflect the lifestyles of these times.

The Paleo-Indian Period (around 12,000 B.C. to 8,000 B.C.) was the time just after the last glacier receded. Michigan had a nearly sub-arctic climate. People hunted big game such as caribou using thrusting spears. Some large projectile points found in the state date back to this earliest period.

At the time of the Archaic Period (8,000 B.C. to 600 B.C.), climate improvements brought smaller game to the area, and hunters used medium-sized points on throwing spears and darts.

The Woodland Period is divided into the Early (600 B.C. to 200 B.C.), Middle (200 B.C. to A.D. 700) and Late (A.D. 700 to contact with Europeans in the 17th century). Bows and arrows with smaller points were used. Pottery was first manufactured in this period.

COLLING BELIEVES two ingredients are necessary for those seriously interested in archeology — curiosity and patience.

"Looking for artifacts takes hard work and long hours. When we are out on a 'dig' and someone finds something that has been undisturbed for some 3,000 years, everyone stops and shares the moment of discovery. That makes it all worthwhile."

Chapters of the Michigan Archeological Society participate in excavations during the summer and hold program meetings during the winter months. Anyone interested in joining the society can contact John Colling during working hours at 585-8220.

John Colling, president of the Michigan Archeological Society, displays his own collection of projectile points — arrowheads and spear points. "Amateurs have made great finds," he said.

Interest rates on Adjustable Rate Mortgages are the lowest ever at Standard Federal.

15-Year ARM
7.25% Interest Rate
9.57% Annual Percentage Rate*

30-Year ARM
7.50% Interest Rate
9.79% Annual Percentage Rate*

Before you buy or refinance your home, consider the advantages of our Adjustable Rate Mortgage (ARM).

Many of our ARM loan customers have saved a lot of money in mortgage interest costs over the past few years. And, at present interest rates, borrowers are finding our ARM loans to be an even better bargain. The first-year interest rate on our 15-year ARM is now only 7.25% compared to much higher rates on fixed-rate loans. What's more, with the 2% annual and 6% lifetime interest rate caps that we have placed on our ARM loans, you'll pay less interest and have greater principal reduction over at least the first four years of your loan.

The lower initial interest rates on our ARM loans result in lower initial monthly payments. And, the lower monthly payments mean that it will be easier for you to qualify for the loan that you need to buy or refinance your home.

So, come to any Standard Federal branch office and learn more about our ARM loans. We'll help you find the loan that is just right for you.

*All annual percentage rates are calculated based on a 2% loan discount fee, a loan amount of $50,000, a 20% down payment, and monthly principal and interest payments of $456.43 for the 15-year loan and $349.61 for the 30-year loan. These estimated annual percentage rates are subject to increase or decrease on an annual basis after the loan is closed based on the formula set forth in the loan contract.

Celebs share their favorite poultry dishes

With all the recent hoopla on the disadvantages of chicken, I was surprised to find a copy of the "Celebrity Chicken" cookbook cross my desk.

A call to the editor, Don Maxwell, piqued my interest in learning about the more than 575 different ways to prepare the poor fowl presently suffering from a rash of bad publicity after a CBS "60 Minutes" segment.

Cookbooks cross my desk daily. Press releases hype how certain books are destined to "change the culinary habits of today's cook." Most of the books, unfortunately, are full of recipes as old and unexciting as last week's meatloaf.

This book, however, is different. Bound in a wipeable spiral ring hard cover, I found myself leafing through every page looking to see how notables like Dinah Shore, Hal Linden, Jimmy Carter and Jerry Lewis prepare their favorite chicken recipes.

If "star gazing" doesn't intrigue you, you will also find sumptuous recipes detailing the cooking secrets of such notable chefs as Paul Bocuse, James Beard and Paul Prudhomme. Ever wonder how chicken magnate Paul Tyson (Tyson Chicken Processors) prepares his favorite fowl? It's in there.

You might say that when buying chicken, "chicken parts are chicken parts are chicken parts," right? Well, contrary to popular belief, there are various chickens available on the market for different uses.

The best known are fryers, which are usually bought "cut up" and are meaty enough to be used in casseroles and for frying.

Stewing chickens are not as meaty but are raised so that when cooked, usually in plenty of liquid, they offer a full flavor that is sure to complement dishes like paprikas, soups and, of course, stews.

Roasting chickens are usually bought whole, and lend themselves best to cooking like a turkey. They are used on the barbecue, in conventional ovens and on the rotisserie. They can be stuffed with anything from bread to nuts and fruit.

When it comes to soups, nothing beats the necks and backs, full of bones to impart a tasty chicken flavor. Nowadays, serious cooks can even buy processed chicken soup bases that when added to soups, stews and gravies, give a flavor of chicken even when the real stuff isn't used.

Ah, but when using these bases, the real chicken flavor is supplemented with MSG, salt and other flavorings; so folks looking to restrict their intake of sodium should read soup base labels carefully.

The Janes family was raised on chicken. We ate it at least twice a week and are still alive and kicking — although my personal consumption has dwindled and has been replaced with more fish. But let's face it, you just can't beat a great barbecued chicken, slow roasted over coals flavored with mesquite and hickory chips.

Even the dieter can give thanks to the chicken for low calorie concoctions that, after removing the skin, can be prepared without fat and can still be as tasty and flavorful as the Colonel's.

If the "60 Minutes" report still hangs like a shroud in your memory and finds you making novenas waiting for the word that chicken is once again safe to eat, you might want to check out these alternatives. Most natural food co-ops and health food groceries carry organically grown and processed chickens. Chickens can be bought from kosher grocers. On a visit to the local farm market, you can choose a live chicken and observe it through slaughter and processing.

So before we find ourselves running around the yard yelling "the sky is falling," don't give up on feathered fowl. Remember when tuna was the latest food scare? All of these accusations regarding unhealthy processing are sure to increase the monitoring by agricultural officials.

Till then, Bon Appetite!

Editor's Note: The cookbook "Celebrity Chicken" is not currently available in the metropolitan area but should be by fall. It is available by sending $25 check or money order to: "Celebrity Cuisine" P.O. Box 1419 Eugene, Ore. 97440-1419.

Chicken has been on the hot seat lately because of a "60 Minutes" report that detailed salmonella contamination in the poultry industry. But Susan Templin, a home economist with the Food Safety and Inspection Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, said proper handling and thorough cooking will ward off salmonella poisoning.

Bacteria scare boosts sales at health-food stores

By Arlene Funke
special writer

Some people are swearing off chicken because they fear salmonella poisoning from poultry.

Others are buying their birds from health food stores or specialty butchers because they believe those chickens pose less of a threat.

One private, non-profit consumer group called Community Nutrition Institute has charged that one-third of all birds produced in federally inspected plants is contaminated with salmonella, a bacteria that causes abdominal cramps and diarrhea.

Susan Templin, a home economist with the Food Safety and Inspection Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, said proper handling and thorough cooking will ward off salmonella poisoning.

"It isn't just chicken," Templin said. "Any raw animal product is going to have bacteria. Thorough cooking will kill (bacteria)."

SALMONELLA AND other organisms causing food poisoning can be spread when slaughtered birds are put through eviscerating machines and contents of intestines are spilled onto the meat.

Community Nutrition Institute leaders are calling for a boycott of chicken. The TV program, "60 Minutes," also did a report on the contamination issue.

"After the 60 Minutes" show, we were inundated with calls for a month or so," said Templin, based in Washington, D.C.

The Food Safety and Inspection Service operates a toll-free hotline to answer consumers' questions about meat and poultry safety.

Ted Zak believes the chicken he sells are cleaner and more healthful. Zak is owner of Betty's Grocery, a health-food store in Birmingham.

The salmonella scare has boosted his business.

"It's about tripled as far as chicken is concerned," Zak said.

Zak buys his chickens from Amish poultry farms in Indiana. The birds are shipped to a plant in Detroit, where they are cleaned by hand, Zak said.

Few people can resist the aroma of a gently sizzling chicken cooking on an outdoor barbecue grill. Yum!

According to the Wayne County Cooperative Extension service, slow cooking is the secret to good barbecued chicken. Most beginners try to cook too fast, resulting in a piece of chicken that is charred on the outside and raw inside.

Start with good quality chicken, experts say. Wash chicken and pat dry prior to cooking. The back, neck, liver, heart and gizzard don't barbecue well.

Many types of barbecue sauce can be used, according to individual preference. In general, they should contain vinegar, fat and seasonings. Mix ahead and keep hot, stirring frequently.

Start fire around 20 minutes before time to start cooking. After the charcoal is ignited, spread it evenly under the grill and place chicken on grill, skin side up. Watch closely to make sure chicken doesn't burn, turn and brush with sauce every 2-4 minutes, according to the extension service guidelines.

Chicken can be kept hot for some time by putting it in a covered container as soon as it is done. Total cooking time for barbecued chicken is 60-75 minutes.

To test for doneness, don gloves and grasp the thigh joint between the thumb and finger of the left hand. Grasp end of drumstick with right hand and turn. Chicken is done when the legbone in the drumstick turns freely from the meat.

"THE CHICKENS are raised by Amish (farmers)," said Zak, a Sterling Heights resident. "They haven't been given steroids to increase their growth. The Amish grow their own corn (for feed) naturally. They never spray it (with chemicals)."

Cameron Meats of Ferndale sells a wide variety of Amish-grown chicken, turkey, beef, lamb, sausage and eggs and canned goods.

"They (chicken) are killed by hand," said owner William Schmidt of Hamtramck. "There are no chemicals. We were doing well before (the publicity). This just added customers to it."

The Good Food Store in Livonia also touts its chicken, which is shipped frozen, in parts.

"They are specially fed organic berries, wheat and corn," said Good Food Store spokesman Joe Petro, a former Livonia resident who now lives in Westland.

"They aren't kept in cages, all cooped up in the dark," he added. "They aren't injected with hormones."

The extent of bacterial contamination in poultry is unclear, with estimates ranging from 35 percent to 60 percent nationally.

According to a Food Safety and Inspection Service pamphlet, it is "not technologically possible" to eliminate all bacteria on all carcasses. The salmonella bacteria exists in all forms of raw animal product.

AGRICULTURE Department studies indicate holding food at improper temperatures is the most common food safety mistake enabling bacteria to multiply and cause foodborne illnesses. The pamphlet says that persons most susceptible to illness from salmonella are those with weakened or undeveloped immune systems — the newborn, ill and elderly, malnourished, some cancer patients and AIDS patients.

"Meat or poultry should not be left more than two hours at room temperature," Templin said.

"And even less if you are outdoors."

According to Templin, proper handling of the meat is essential, and "the less handling the better." Always rinse poultry in running water before cooking.

Garden vegetables are ready for picking early this year, thanks to some tricks played on us by Mother Nature.

"Practically everything is ripe now," said Lois Thieleke, a home economist with the Oakland County Cooperative Extension Service.

"The whole harvest season has been moved up slightly because of the early spring and hot weather but it depends when you planted."

Many people were optimistic, feeling there would be no frost after April 1 and they were correct, Thieleke said.

"Many had their gardens in by the first of May or earlier and that is unusual," she said. "The normal time is the middle of May or later."

Garden vegetables are ready for picking early this year, thanks to some tricks played on us by Mother Nature.

"Practically everything is ripe now," said Lois Thieleke, a home economist with the Oakland County Cooperative Extension Service.

"The whole harvest season has been moved up slightly because of the early spring and hot weather but it depends when you planted."

Many people were optimistic, feeling there would be no frost after April 1 and they were correct, Thieleke said.

"Many had their gardens in by the first of May or earlier and that is unusual," she said. "The normal time is the middle of May or later."

Horticulturist Vera Sullivan of the Wayne

County Cooperative Extension Service says we are seeing harvests two to three weeks ahead of the normal schedule.

Corn was ready for picking in mid-July and isn't normally ready until August, Sullivan said.

"There will be time for a second planting for cool season crops like lettuce, peas, cauliflower, spinach and cabbage," Sullivan said.

And whether you are picking the early vegetables right out of your garden or stopping at the roadside stand, Thieleke says the best way to eat them is raw and fresh.

"The best thing in the world is to wash it off and eat it raw," she said. "That is when the nutrients are there in full power. When you cook or refrigerate, you will get some nutrient loss."

Thieleke says one good way to make use of the raw produce is to make a potpourri and marinate it in Italian salad dressing. It can be used as a snack, for dinner or for a cocktail party. It will keep in the refrigerator for a few days but not for weeks, she said.

Thieleke also recommends microwave cooking for vegetables to retain nutrients and keep vegetables crunchy. She suggests cutting raw corn off the cob and stirfrying it along with fresh green peppers and onions for another tasty summer dish.

"That is the ideal way to eat in the summer," she said. "We can cook vegetables all winter."

Christine Venema, home economist with the Wayne County Cooperative Extension Service said, "The limit to what you can do with your produce is your own imagination."

She recommends using broccoli and cauliflower in cold salads or as relishes with a yogurt or sour cream dip. Snow pea pods go well with dips or in stirfry or in salads, she said.

For something different with sweet corn, which most people boil, she recommends soaking the ears, husk and all, in cold water and then putting them on the grill for 30 minutes. Let the husks cool a little before you handle them, she said.

Although Sullivan says some vegetables like peppers and tomatoes stop their production in very hot weather, as soon as the weather cools, ripening begins again.

The American Institute for Cancer Research recommends tomatoes as a great source of vitamins C and A, both of which have been associated in research with lowered cancer risk.

Vine-ripening is best because the more direct sunlight a tomato gets during its growth period, the more vitamin C it will contain. Picking tomatoes to ripen on the window sill will not improve vitamin content. The Institute says they will lose vitamins if not stored in a cool place, preferably with the stem end down.

Templin also recommends

- Wash chopping boards and utensils used with raw product afterward. Utensils that touch raw product shouldn't be used with the cooked.
- Wooden cutting boards used with raw meat or poultry shouldn't be used to cut bread or vegetables, because the bacteria can dehydrate and remain dormant in cracks.

Templin said. Bleach cutting board after use, or switch to an acrylic board that can be cleaned more easily.

When barbecuing, some people like to partially cook or microwave chicken to slash cooking time on the grill. Do this only if the meat is to be transferred to the grill immediately

Cook thoroughly. Poultry should be cooked to an internal temperature of 180-185 degrees Fahrenheit. "If people aren't using a meat thermometer, the first clue (for doneness) is if the juices run clear," Templin said.

The boycott planned by Community Nutrition Institute apparently is gaining little support from consumer groups.

A coalition of 21 other consumer groups has urged in a letter to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, that all fresh meat and poultry be labeled with cooking and handling instructions to reduce the risk of salmonella and other microorganisms that cause food poisoning

THESE WARNINGS would include instructing consumers to cook the meat thoroughly and to wash hands, dishes and implements with soap and water immediately after contact with raw product.

The National Broiler Council, which represents the poultry industry is launching a new voluntary program to help educate consumers about proper handling, including labels.

Michael Jacobsen, executive director of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, one of the groups in the coalition, supports labeling

But he said the first line of defense against food contamination should be clean farms and processing plants.

The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Food Safety and Inspection Service, operates the toll-free Meat and Poultry Hotline from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays, call 800-535-4555 for specific questions about safe handling and preparation. Booklets, entitled "Safe Food Book" and "Safe Food To Go" may be obtained free by writing to the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo 81009.

The versatile tomato goes with eggs, cheese, fish, poultry and almost any meat, and can be seasoned with a myriad of herbs and spices.

Cold vegetable soups can be a refreshing change of pace in the summer, and gazpacho is always a popular refreshing summer treat.

GAZPACHO

- 2 ripe medium tomatoes
- 1 small cucumber, or 1/2 medium
- 1 green pepper
- 6 scallions, white part only

- 2 cloves garlic
- 2 cups tomato juice
- 1/2 cup water
- 2 teaspoons olive oil
- 1/4 cup bread crumbs, preferably fresh

- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon paprika (optional)
- hot pepper sauce to taste (optional)

Worcestershire sauce to taste
Black pepper to taste
Peel tomatoes and cut into large chunks. Slice cucumber lengthwise, scrape out seeds and cut into large chunks. Cut pepper and scallions into chunks and add with garlic, tomaatoes and cucumber to blender or food processor; liquefy.

Add tomato juice, water, oil, bread crumbs, lemon juice and paprika; blend well. Taste and season with more lemon juice, hot pepper sauce, Worcestershire and pepper to meet your preferences.

Refrigerate until very cold. Taste again before serving and adjust flavorings as needed. This will produce four 1-cup servings, each containing only 70 calories and some three grams of fat.

For a fast and easy way to peel tomatoes, cut out the stem core and place the tomatoes in a pan of boiling water for 10 seconds. Remove from water with a skimmer or slotted spoon, cool under cold water, and remove skin with paring knife when cool enough to handle.

For an especially festive presentation of this soup, have small bowls of several different chopped vegetables (onion, pepper, tomatoes, celery) and croutons for each person to add as garnish as they wish.

MACKINNON'S BAKED CHICKEN CRABS

12 ounces boneless chicken breast, divided
4 large shrimp
2 strips bacon
1 egg yolk
1/2 cup melted butter or margarine juice from 1/2 lemon
1 tablespoon dill weed
1/2 teaspoon celery salt
Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Pound chicken breasts to flatten. Place two shrimp, one on each end of the chicken breast, and roll breasts around them. Wrap one piece of bacon around the middle of each chicken breast (with shrimp peeking out each end, to appear like crab legs). Season with salt and pepper. Place on a baking pan and bake for 20 minutes. To prepare sauce, place egg yolk, dill weed and lemon juice in a metal bowl and using a wire whisk, whip over low heat or boiling water until semi-thick. While whipping, add melted butter or margarine slowly. If too thick, add a little warm water. Pour the sauce over the cooked chicken crabs.

BRIAN MULRONEY'S CHICKEN PAPRIKA WITH GNOCCHI

Chicken paprika:
1/2 cup olive oil
1 onion, chopped
2 chicken breasts, boned
1/2 tsp. chopped garlic
3 tomatoes, peeled and chopped
1 red pepper, peeled and diced
1 green pepper, peeled and diced
1/4 cup chopped celery leaves
4 Tbsp. paprika
Salt and pepper

1 bay leaf
1 cup dry white wine
2 cups chicken broth
2 Tbsp. cornstarch
In a bowl, mix all the ingredients except the liquids and cornstarch. Mix well with your hands to ensure penetration of the oil and the seasonings. In a large frypan, brown the chicken breasts in a little butter. Add the white wine, gradually, stirring to make a sauce. Mix cornstarch with the liquids and add to the chicken mixture. Cover and cook over low heat for 30 minutes. Serve with gnocchi.

Gnocchi:
1 1/2 pounds boiling potatoes
1 cup flour
Salt, pepper and nutmeg
2 Tbsp. shallots
Parmesan cheese
1/2 cup bacon bits
Cook potatoes in their skins in salted water. As soon as they are cooked, remove the skins and mash the potatoes while still hot. Add most of the flour and all the remaining ingredients. Take a small amount of the dough mixture and roll into a sausage shape on a floured surface. Cut the roll into pieces 3/4 of an inch in length. Take a fork and shape it by rolling it over the fork. Cook the gnocchi in boiling salted water for 10 seconds. Cool in running water. Melt 1 tablespoon of butter in a saucpan and add gnocchi, salt, pepper and fresh Parmesan cheese.

Keep cool with skillet suppers

On a sultry summer day, dinner from the supermarket salad bar sounds tempting. Resist the urge and "toss" together a simple skillet supper designed for warm weather appetites instead.

Summer one-pot meals share their winter counterpart's easy cleanup and need for few accompaniments. What makes them lighter and quicker to prepare is their creative pairing of fresh summer vegetables and lean meats such as veal.

Thin strips and small cubes of veal from the loin or leg are ideal for skillet dishes, with strips particularly well-suited for stir-frying. Larger pieces such as leg cutlets and round steak need to be pounded until thin. Or, save a preparation step by purchasing veal cubed steaks.

Veal cubed steaks come from the leg and are easy to recognize by their square or rectangular shape and light pink color. Because they have been tenderized mechanically, they can be either sauteed or braised in a matter of minutes.

For Savory Veal Cubed Steaks With Garden Vegetables, the steaks are quickly browned, then seasoned with thyme, garlic, cumin and cayenne pepper. The seasoned steaks are arranged atop a garden-fresh combo of onions, yellow squash and zucchini and braised in dry white wine.

A meat-vegetable skillet dish requires little more in the way of an accompaniment than a crusty loaf of French or Italian bread. If the spirit moves you, brush thick slices with melted butter and sprinkle with fresh herbs or a little grated Parmesan cheese and briefly run under the broiler. Wedges of can-taloupe topped with a berry sorbet make for a fruity, frosty finale.

Savory Veal Cubed Steaks With Garden Vegetables

Preparation time: 10 minutes
Cooking time: 8 to 10 minutes
1/2 teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
1/2 teaspoon salt, divided
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/2 to 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper

2 teaspoons vegetable oil
4 veal cubed steaks, 4 ounces each
1 small onion, thinly sliced and separated into rings (about 3/4 cup)
1/2 cup thinly sliced zucchini (1/2 inch thick)
1/2 cup thinly sliced yellow squash (1/2 inch thick)
2 tablespoons dry white wine
8 cherry tomatoes, halved (about 1 cup)

Combine thyme, 1/2 teaspoon of the salt, the garlic powder, cumin and cayenne pepper; set aside. Heat 1 teaspoon of the oil in large non-stick skillet. Add veal cubed steaks, two at a time, and brown 3 to 4 minutes, turning once. Transfer to plate and sprinkle evenly with seasoning mixture. Keep warm. Cook onion in remaining 1 teaspoon oil in same skillet over medium heat, stirring frequently, until softened, about 1 minute. Remove skillet from heat. Add zucchini, yellow squash and wine; sprinkle with remaining 1/2 teaspoon salt. Arrange cube steaks on top of vegetables. Cover tightly and simmer gently 3 minutes. Add cherry tomato halves. Cover and continue cooking until tomatoes are heated through and squash is Beat the heat with a quick and easy summertime skillet dish. Ready to serve in 20 minutes, Savory veal cubed steaks with garden vegetables pairs light and lean veal with fresh summer vegetables and zesty seasonings.

Kickers figure in GLIAC race

By C.J. Rieak
staff writer

Well, if nothing else, some Observer & Eccentric-area athletes should get a kick out of the new-look Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference football race.

New-look as in the addition of Northern Michigan University, a team with a 31-4 record against GLIAC schools. And new-look as in the loss of Michigan Tech and Northwood Institute as league members. Tech will continue as a member in other GLIAC sports, but not football.

NMU's addition was greeted with high regard by the league's coaches at Wednesday's 13th annual Football/Volleyball Media Day in Grand Rapids. The Wildcats finished second in the coaches' preseason poll, just behind two-time defending champion Hillsdale.

Hillsdale got three first-place votes to two for NMU. Grand Valley State was third in the balloting (one first-place vote), with Saginaw Valley State fourth, Ferris State fifth and Wayne State sixth.

THE LOCAL ATHLETES most likely to make a major impact in the GLIAC will do it with their feet. Saginaw Valley State coach George Ihler was pleased with last year's performance of place-kicker Chris Piazza, a junior from Westland John Glenn, who hit 19-of-22 extra points and six-of-seven field goals.

"Piazza was very consistent," Ihler said. "He (tied) a school record for (consecutive) extra points. We're looking for big things from him."

If Piazza had a weakness, it was distance. His longest field goal was 30 yards.

"From 40 yards and in, he was excellent," Ihler said, "but he didn't have the distance. He's been working on a weight program, and he's added some yards to his distance."

At Grand Valley State, punting was often an adventure in 1985 before the arrival of sophomore Doug Lee from Bloomfield Hills Lahser.

"In my first year (1985), we had five punts blocked," GVSC coach Tom Beck said. "Lee at least didn't have any punts blocked (last year)."

Lee suffered the same problem as Piazza — a lack of distance. As a freshman he averaged just 35.2 yards.

"He did not have that good of an average," Beck said. Beck said freshman punter John Carter could pressure for the starting job.

WAYNE STATE isn't expected to accomplish much in the conference. The Tartars have a new coach in Joe Horn (former coach Dave Farris resigned June 9 to accept the coaching position at Petoskey High School) and far fewer scholarships (some 11 compared to 40 for its GLIAC rivals), which means depth is a definite problem.

What WSU does have is senior place-kicker Craig Motzer of Rochester Hills. Motzer connected on seven-of-11 field goals and all 12 of his extra points in '86 before breaking his leg in practice at midseason.

At Ferris State, coach Keith Otterbein (from Southfield-Lathrup) was pleased that this season, the Bulldogs won't be looking for instant help from any incoming freshmen — except in kicking.

"Our kicking game is wide open," he said, "but we have two prospects who could help right away in (place-kicker Tony) Svaluto (from Westland John Glenn) and (punter Mike) Panasuk. I hope they can do the job for us."

At Glenn, Svaluto booted nine field goals as a senior and had 15 for his career. He'll battle freshman Brian Peterson for the starting position.

WSU WON'T be relying on just one local athlete (Motzer) in its lineup. The Tartar defensive line is anchored by junior noseguard Marty Altounian (6-foot-1, 230-pounds) of Livonia (Bentley) and junior defensive end Tony Beaune (6-3, 240) of Livonia (Stevenson).

At linebacker, senior Steve Gregor (6-1, 210) of Livonia (Bentley) is on the outside and senior Greg Zunker (6-0, 225) of Rochester is on the inside. Junior Craig Pasini (5-11, 180) of Rochester will start at free safety.

SF rebounds from loss

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Considering the pressure of a big tournament, the strain of playing baseball in 90-degree heat and the fact it already had one strike against it, South Farmington could easily have folded up after a horrible, opening-game experience Thursday.

But Farmington rebounded from its humiliating loss to the Long Island (N.Y.) Tigers in the first round of the National Amateur Baseball Federation's Junior World Series and remained alive in the tournament by eliminating APS Computers of Maumee, Ohio, Friday morning.

Farmington pitchers walked 15 batters in a disastrous fifth inning as a tie ballgame became a nightmare and resulted in a 14-8 loss Thursday at Northville.

It was a new day and a different story Friday as Farmington put one in the win column with an 11-4 defeat of Maumee, which lost Thursday to Dixie, a team from Lexington, Ky.

THE DOUBLE-elimination event, which included teams from Redmond, Wash., Reisterstown, Md., and host Northville, continued through the weekend.

"They definitely put (the loss) behind them, especially once they got into the game," said Farmington coach Lou Pirronello of his team's recovery from Thursday's debacle and its performance Friday against Maumee.

"This team feels like it is one of the best teams in the tournament. When you face elimination and get a few runs up, that definitely helps you relax."

Just as the fifth inning was Farmington's downfall against Long Island, it proved to be the decisive at-bat for them Friday at Novi High School.

AFTER surrendering eight runs on just two hits in the fifth the previous day, Farmington scored five times in that inning Friday, giving it an 8-2 lead and chance to ease the strain on its pitching.

Jeff Skinner's two-run double was the big hit of the inning in which Farmington sent 11 batters to the plate. That chased Ted Hartford, the second of four pitchers used by Maumee, from the mound after only 1 1/2 innings.

Reliever Tony Gallaher promptly hit the first two batters he faced, Sean Hill and Joey Venturini, to fill the bags. He then walked lead-off hitter Mark Stokes to force in the fifth run before getting out of the inning. Paul Pirronello's sacrifice fly and Rob MacDonald's RBI single had started the fifth-inning scoring.

GALLAHER retired Farmington's first two batters in the sixth, but it

Broncos on scoring tear

Coach A.J. Baker finds it difficult to explain his hockey team's recent offensive prowess, but that isn't what concerns him.

What does is the desire to see it continue, especially since the Broncos face a showdown with the Wolverines tonight for a conference title in the Midwest Summer Hockey League.

In first-round action, the Broncos advanced to the Bakes Conference final by pouncing the Huskies 9-6 Thursday, and the Wolverines improved their season record to 10-0-2 Tuesday with a 5-3 defeat of the Falcons.

In the Eagle Conference, the Wildcats eliminated the Lakers 11-8 and will face the winner of Sunday's game between the regular-season champion Spartans and the Bulldogs.

THE BAKES Conference game is slated for 7 p.m. followed at approximately 8:30 p.m. by the Eagle Conference finalists. The championship game is set for 7 p.m. Wednesday. All games will be played at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

Baker's Broncos scored in double figures the two games prior to their nine-goal playoff victory, giving them a total of 33 goals in their last three games.

hockey

Baker recalled a game earlier in the season when his team scored in double figures and needed the big output just to win.

"We turned around and lost the next two," he said. "It was as if we had shot ourselves out in that one game."

"FOR SOME reason, we're on an offensive rampage, which we're going to need when we come up against the Wolverines."

The Broncos also hope to reverse a troublesome trend in their season series with the Wolverines. The teams tied in their first meeting, the Broncos suffered a 6-5 loss in the second contest and the Wolverines won a 10-2 blowout the third time they played.

Dave McAulliffe got a goal in every period and lead the Broncos' offensive charge against the Huskies. He scored a hat trick and added an assist.

Huskies coach Danny Belisle, who suited up for another game, had two goals and an assist, and Sean Skinner helped out on four Huskie goals.

THE SCORE was tied 1-1 after the first six minutes, but Leif Gustafson scored the game-winning goal as the Broncos, on their way to a 4-1, first-period lead, went ahead to stay.

The Huskies tried to rally with a four-goal second period, but Baker's team maintained its lead by adding three scores in the middle stanza.

The Wolverines had a much tighter game in turning back the Falcons. With the score deadlocked 3-3 after two periods, the Wolverines scored twice in the finale to win it.

Kevin Alexander broke the tie with a goal at 7:33 of the third period, and Frank Martani added an empty-net goal in the final minute.

IN THE opening period, Brian Krygier and Scott Dresch put the Falcons in front 2-0 before the Wolverines rallied in the last minute to tie it. Alexander's goal was followed by Todd Beyer's score with :29 left in the period.

"Defensively, we should be better than last year," Horn said. "Depth will be a problem — especially on the defensive line. That's the hardest thing to find in Division II, a defensive lineman who can run. With Altounian and Beaune back, we're solid but thin. And Zunker at inside linebacker should do very well."

On offense, sophomore John Jessing (6-6, 205) of Troy (Athens) will start at tight end after catching seven passes for 66 yards as a freshman. And junior wide receiver David Lee (5-7, 145) of Garden City, who caught 11 passes for 145 yards, and sophomore guard Chuck Crespi (6-2, 225) of Livonia (Redford Catholic Central), will be key reserves.

AT SAGINAW VALLEY, Ihler figured his defensive line would be one of his team's strong points — until senior starting tackle Phil Jean (6-3, 265) of Garden City (West) was ruled academically ineligible two weeks ago.

That opened up a spot for junior Michael Korzetki (6-4, 230) of Wayne (Memorial).

"He was strictly a back-up before," Ihler said of Korzetki. "Now he's going to get an opportunity, with Jean's departure. Now there's a place for him."

"We've got him pencilled in as our starting nose guard."

The same holds true for sophomore free safety Rod Hurst (6-0, 185) of Southfield, who intercepted three passes last season.

"We bounced (Hurst) around at cornerback and safety last year," Ihler said. "Now we've got him where we think he belongs."

On the offensive line, Ihler is counting on junior guard Doug Mac (6-0, 250) of Wayne (Memorial) to provide leadership.

"That's an area we have to grow up a lot," Ihler said. "(Mac) is the veteran of the group, and I think we have a dandy in him."

League champion Hillsdale is expecting more solid play from senior flanker Scott Sugg (6-3, 185) from Bloomfield Hills Lahser, who led the Chargers with 38 catches for 436 yards and three touchdowns in '86.

At Grand Valley, senior Tom Mitchell (6-2, 240) of Bloomfield Hills (Birmingham Brother Rice) will start at center.

"He was a back-up the last two seasons, and he's undersized weight-wise, but he's a very good athlete," Beck said.

Last season, Mitchell filled in at tight end against Missouri-Rolla and caught a nine-yard touchdown pass.

Sophomore defensive end Scott Taylor (6-1, 218) of Birmingham (Groves) led the Lakers in sacks with six and will be a starter this season.

took him six more to get the third out. In the meantime, Farmington put the game out of reach with three additional runs when P.J. Green laced a two-run single and then stole home in a successful double steal.

"We won the coin toss today, and I opted to bat first just for that positive, get-ahead, feel-good frame of mind," Pirronello said. "In every game of the tournaments, we've batted first with the exception of (Thursday's game)."

Establishing a comfortable lead also enabled Pirronello to adjust his pitching plans to Farmington's advantage.

Rick Friedrich started and pitched the first 2 1/2 innings, getting the win when his teammates scored twice in the third for a 3-1 lead. But he got into trouble in the bottom of that inning when he walked three batters, the last with the bases loaded and one out.

PIRRONELLO called on hard-throwing Shayne Rea, a postseason draft choice from the Waterford ballclub, and he struck out Mamee's next two batters to get Farmington out of the tight spot. He gave up two hits in the fourth, but added two strikeouts and got out of the inning unscathed.

Then, in the top of the fifth, Farmington had its big inning, and Pirronello decided to pull Rea and save him for a late Friday-afternoon start against Redmond.

"I was definitely Captain Hook today," Pirronello said. "I didn't think Rick had quite the zip on his fastball like he normally has, and I think he was just a little bit tired."

"Plus, I know Rea can close the door. He was clocked at 88 miles per hour, and most 16-year-olds haven't seen that kind of speed."

MARK STOKES came in from center field to replace Rea and complete the victory. He allowed only one hit in the final three innings. The final three frames probably would have been scoreless as well had his teammates not committed three consecutive infield errors, which loaded the bases to begin the fifth inning.

Thursday's loss could have been devastating as Farmington contributed to most of its woes with nine walks and a bases-loaded error in the fifth inning.

"There were so many two-out, two-strike pitches that would have closed the door, and it just wouldn't have happened," Pirronello said. "One more strike would have stopped that rally, and that's what is disheartening."

"When you give up 15 walks, you'd better score a lot of runs. Fifteen walks is just like 15 hits, they had 21 hits."

"OUR PITCHERS had good control during the season," he added. "I think the pressure of the first World Series game got to them a little bit."

Farmington pitcher Craig Murray had struggled at times in the first four innings, but South took a 6-5 lead into the fifth.

With two out and a man on base, Murray walked the bases full and was replaced by Venturini, who faced seven batters and failed to get the third out.

After two RBI walks, the error at shortstop kept the Tigers alive in the inning. That was followed by Long Island's only hits, singles by Joe Ficarra and Gary Martinek, which plated three more runs.

THE INNING'S third pitcher, Dennis Folwell, gave up a walk but halted the rally by striking out the Tigers' 14th batter to visit home plate.

Adding to Farmington's frustration was the fact it outlast Long Island 11-6, but 13 stolen bases and four wild pitches also contributed to the defeat.

The Tigers jumped to an early, 3-0 lead, but Farmington took over with four runs in the bottom of the second. Rob MacDonald slammed a two-run, opposite-field home run. Stokes' fly ball scored a run and Reid Gough had an RBI single.

"I thought we really had the game in the bag when we came back like that," Pirronello said. "I really thought the momentum would carry us."

"KNOWING WHO we had on the bench (in terms of relief pitching), I knew we could close the door on them, but that (fifth) inning was just a disaster."

An infield error and John Gotts' RBI single produced solo runs in the next two innings as Farmington stayed even until the fateful fifth.

MacDonald went 3-for-3 and Seahr Hill 3-for-4, including an RBI double. Gotts and Brian Dubose had two hits apiece, and Joe Taylor was the only Long Island player with more than one, going 2-for-3.

Sean Skinner of the Huskies tries to fire the puck past Bronco defender Link Bissert in Thursday's playoff game.

The Broncos won 9-6 to advance to the Bakes Conference final.

Once again, the Falcons took the lead, 3-2, on Bill Murner's goal only to have Scott Haller bring the Wolverines from behind a second time.

The Wildcats, trailing 4-3 after one period, scored five goals in the second period to turn the game around and gain an 8-6 advantage over the Lakers.

"It was definitely a shootout," said Baker, who also is commissioner of the league. "It was just a matter of who was going to score last. For such a high score, it was a very well-played game."

E.J. SAUER was on a tear for the Lakers, scoring a playoff-high five goals while picking up one assist. But that, along with Tim Olschanski's two goals and one assist, wasn't enough to overcome the Wildcats.

Dan Belisle, coach of the Huskies, became an active participant in his team's on-ice activity.

Mike Stahley notched a pair of goals and as many assists for the winners, and teammate Franz Herbert added three assists.

Mustang ballclub nets 2nd place in Westland tourney

In its first tournament appearance, South Farmington's Mustang baseball team (ages 9-10) distinguished itself with a second-place finish and runner-up trophy in the Michigan World Series July 23-26.

South Farmington's 15-man squad opened with two straight victories at Westland's Central City Park, defeating Walled Lake and North Farmington-West Bloomfield II by scores of 6-3 and 11-7. But powerful Garden City, the eventual champion, dropped South Farmington into the losers' bracket with a 6-1 setback.

South Farmington edged Walled Lake 7-6 and outslugged the highly-touted Westland I ballclub 13-10 before falling again to Garden City 5-1 in the final.

The South Farmington roster included Mike Baydoun, Garett Burch, Mark Cantor, P.J. Jacokes, Derek Jaeger, Joe Kalczynski, Nick Latra, Dan Martinez, Todd Miller, Jamey Palazeti, Jeff Rospierski, Jake Siskosky, John Vesel, Marty Wilk and Matt Wrosch. Jon Klopp, G.T. Martinez and Angelo Palazeti served as alternate players.

COMPRESSED NERVE

These cause bad backs.

Dr. Mashike making a spinal correction to eliminate the cause of back problems.

You've read these ads many times over the years. During those years we have corrected thousands of problems that could not be corrected with bottles of pills. The plain truth is pills don't fix spinal problems (commonly called back problems), they mask problems allowing them to get worse until it is too late and then it's either surgery or live with it without any hope of getting better.

There is hope with chiropractic care. Do you really think if chiropractic didn't work and work better than anything else that it would still be around after 92 years when chiropractic is a minority in the health care field?

Of course it works. It works better, faster and safer than the majority of treatments. Chiropractic is the best way for almost all spinal conditions. Be safe, let us take care of your spinal problems. Call us, we think you'll be glad you did.

CAR ACCIDENT COVERAGE No Out Of Pocket Costs To You

All Chiropractic services are covered by auto insurance. If you have an accident, no matter how minor, be sure to come in and let us check you. Even though you may not be in great pain, damage may have been done that could cause long-range problems. It's better to BE SAFE THAN SORRY. Your insurance company will pay for your health care. COMPLETELY, we bill them directly, you pay NOTHING.

WORKERS COMPENSATION (On-The-Job Injuries) No Out Of Pocket Cost To You

This type of insurance coverage pays for on-the-job injuries. Chiropractic care is covered under the Workers Compensation Law once all forms are completed and requirements are met. You pay nothing. Insurance is billed by us.

"Who are those guys," Paul Newman keeps asking Robert Redford as the pair tries to outrun an impossibly diligent posse in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid."

Vicki Rushlow's clients often react the same way.

After watching Rushlow for five minutes, they're wondering just who and what has hit them.

Rushlow is one of a couple of dozen Detroit-area residents who sing, dance or tastefully disrobe for their supper. She delivers "telegrams" for Act One Singing Telegrams, based in Taylor.

Sometimes, she said, the fun starts even before she makes it through the door.

"Last week I had a job at the City County building in downtown Detroit," Rushlow said. "I pretty much stopped traffic as I walked through the lobby."

One look at the 33-year-old Dearborn resident dressed as Mean Dearborn, and you begin to understand why.

A STUDY in black spandex, Mean Mo, as Rushlow calls her character, brings an assortment of whips, chains and other props along for each job.

But routines by Rushlow and other singing messengers aren't quite as X-rated as most people believe, according to Act One manager Darlene Donley. Stripping messengers, hired to surprise people on birthdays, anniversaries and other occasions, get down to bikini briefs but that's about it.

Sending a messenger from one of several services in the Detroit area will cost between $50 and $150, depending on the type of act and location. Messengers who remain fully clothed and balloon bouquets are available for those with more demure tastes or pockets that don't run quite so deep.

RECIPIENTS OF Eastern Union telegrams have included Lee Iacocca and former Detroit Piston Kelly Tripucka, according to Carol Parish, owner of the Detroit franchise.

While the flexible hours and interesting people they meet on the job are some of the things the city's small coterie of singing messengers cite as job benefits, many admit the motivation to bare almost all in front of a stranger is definitely not something shared by everyone.

"Hey, it's my 10 minutes in the spotlight," said David McKay of Westland, who has been doing his array of characters for the Southfield-based Eastern Union Singing Telegram service for nearly three years.

McKAY, 26, an aspiring actor, said he is "on stage" most of the time, but really "turns it up" when doing his telegram routines.

"The job naturally attracts people who are extroverted, which I definitely am," said McKay.

As proof, check the bumper sticker on the back of his car. "Yes, I am a movie star," it declares.

Among the retinue of characters in McKay's closet are the Amazon Man, Mr. Wonderful, Dr. Feelgood and Officer Goodbody. McKay said he tries to give each character a distinct personality, which isn't always easy when he has to play three or four of them in the same day.

The laid-off utility company employee walked into the Eastern Union office in 1984 "when my unemployment benefits ran out" and

Message madness

Or who's that cop in the bikini briefs?

photos by RANDY BORST/staff photographer

What's this — a policeman out of uniform? Nah, it's not "Disrobocop," it's only Eastern Union messenger Dave McKay of Westland doing his stripping policeman routine, to the delight of Diane Prellwitz.

walked out with a job as a singing messenger. He has adapted well.

McKay, who sometimes drives 1,000 miles a week to deliver telegrams, has created a dressing room on wheels in each of his three cars.

A portable closet bar, similar to the limit with hanging costumes, extends across the back seat. Stage make-up and shaving gear fill a box within easy reach of the driver's seat. The trunk is loaded with an Imelda Marcos-sized shoe collection and props of every imaginable size, shape and color.

McKay augments his Eastern Union income by working as a magician's assistant and taking virtually any other acting assignment tossed his way by the Gail and Rice Talent agency.

Quick-change artist McKay stores props and costumes in his car and often changes in parking lots as he gets ready for his next role.

BUT THE BEST "war stories" inevitably come from his work as a singing messenger, he said.

"Some of the clients don't really know how to handle all the attention, especially in front of others," he said. "I began a routine for this one woman, and she ran out of the office and locked herself in the bathroom."

"I guess it takes a pretty secure person to watch someone take off their clothes with co-workers or friends standing around."

Not all of Detroit's messenger brigade share McKay's dream of moving to Los Angeles to seek out other acting jobs, though. In fact many of the free-lancers lead pretty normal lives.

RUSHLOW IS the divorced mother of two children.

Then there's Mara. Mara (who chose not to give her last name) has been running around town in a belly dancer outfit since 1985 for Neat Treat Appe-Teazer Grams of Westland.

"A friend of mine took a belly dancing class, and I decided to sign up to keep her company," said Mara. "One of the girls in the class said she had been delivering telegrams to make extra money so I figured I'd give it a try."

Mara, a Royal Oak resident in her 20s, said she has a lot of fun doing her "tasteful tease" at parties around town.

"But," she said, "you'd hardly recognize me after I got out of my costume."

"I'm like the shyest person in the room."

It's all in a day's work

David McKay makes more costume changes in one afternoon than Diana Ross goes through during an entire concert tour. At least, it seems that way.

McKay, a messenger with the Southfield-based Eastern Union singing telegram service, charged around metropolitan Detroit on a recent weekday accompanied by a reporter and photographer. His itinerary went like this:

1 p.m. — McKay arrives at Eastern Union's headquarters in street clothes and chats briefly while changing into his Amazon Man costume.

1:15 p.m. — McKay as the Amazon Man (best described as equal parts Fred Flintstone, Hulk Hogan and Johnny Carson) dashes into the newly opened offices of a small law firm. He promptly goes into a 10-minute routine for attorneys David Rosenberg and Julie Nelson.

The "telegram," which was sent by Julie's brother Linden Nelson to help launch the new partnership, is replete with singing, dancing and corny, slightly off-color jokes. But no stripping.

Once over the initial shock, Nelson says she figured her brother for something like this.

R.U. Syrius

Ralph's never quite gotten over his childhood fear of water.

Wish you were here

It appears that the yellow fin tuna Susan Glazier of Birmingham is holding literally gave her a fight in the seas off Cape Hatteras, N.C. Glazier is sporting a nice black eye to prove it — or so it seems.

Glazier actually got the black eye the day before she caught the fish. She and her husband were body surfing at the time.

"A wave knocked us over, and my husband's knee got me in the forehead," Glazier said. "We went deep sea fishing early the next morning. As the day went by the shiner got bigger and bigger."

By the time she caught this 50-pound tuna the eye was a "beauty." "We thought it would make a funny picture if I held the fish," she said. "It looks like the fish put up quite a fight, doesn't it?"

Which proves that when it comes to fish stories, a picture is worth a thousand words.

Ex-EST guru finds a new Forum

By Jackie Klein
staff writer

"A new idea is first condemned as ridiculous and then dismissed as trivial, until finally, it becomes what everyone knows."
— William Jones

The Forum, a $525 version of EST for Yuppies, promises to deliver "a decisive edge in your ability to achieve" in sessions taking up two weekends and an evening.

Werner Erhard, a guru of the Me Generation, has folded the inward-looking EST (Erhard Seminar Training) of the 1970s and is cashing in on the businesslike Forum of the 1980s.

The Forum, attended by 100-250 people each, is billed as a new experience for the already successful, the already healthy, the already independent individual. Participants come from various backgrounds and professions.

Graduates of the Forum plunk down another $75 for a series of 10 seminars at the Michigan Inn in Southfield and at Mercy College in Detroit. And the yuppies in the program bring other yuppies as guests, many of them so titillated by the proceedings they agree to join the Forum.

THOSE IN THE Erhard organization, including those who volunteer their services, insist that the new courses differ sharply from EST.

"The Forum is a breakthrough into a new dimension of possibility, an inquiry into issues that determine personal effectiveness," says leader Harriett Anzig during a guest seminar at the Michigan Inn.

None of the guests is daring enough to ask what that means exactly.

Forum grads, volunteers and employees are distinguished from guests by the color of their name tags — first names only for the sake of confidentiality.

One of the volunteers explains that EST was on the cutting edge of individual transformation, more radical and controversial. It is claimed that more than half a million people completed the EST training.

But in the process, Erhard was discounted by critics as a rip-off artist, and EST was considered by many to be a voodoo-like cult with primal screaming among the gimmicks used on the road to self-realization.

ANZIG IS MANAGER of Werner Erhard and Associates Detroit Center in Southfield, one of a network of 37 offices worldwide. The company is touted as an evolutionary think tank for programs designed to maximize personal effectiveness, communication and the ability to relate to others.

'The Forum gives you tools to translate key complaints and problems into practical projects and possibilities. You can bring yourself forth as a clearing for excellence and vitality.'

— Harriett Anzig
Forum leader

The Forum, established in 1985, enjoys a better reputation than its predecessor EST. It's said to be easier, more tolerable and less confrontational.

Seminar leaders in introductions to the Forum take guests into a separate room at the Michigan Inn. They answer questions but never give away the $525 secret learned by Forum enrollees in an intense weekend and an evening.

"The Forum gives you tools to translate key complaints and problems into practical projects and possibilities," Anzig says. "You can bring yourself forth as a clearing for excellence and vitality."

Anzig uses Forum buzzwords such as empower, enable, enlightened listening, assessing, inquiry, commitment.

BEFORE GUESTS split for their own session, Tom raises his hand. He's one of the believers.

"Until eight months ago when I completed the Forum I was constantly shifting businesses," he testifies. "I was always thinking about who I could get to help. Now I'm in control."

"I didn't know what I wanted except to survive. I stayed safe if I didn't fail or succeed. Now I have options and the freedom to take risks."

Everyone applauds. Anzig congratulates Tom and goes on to say that everyone wants answers, a bottom line. But there are no answers, tips, techniques or strategies in the Forum, she says.

"The Forum is a powerful opening for rich possibilities," she says. "What killed me was everything I knew. Maybe something I didn't know made a difference in my life."

"I LEARNED IN the Forum to listen for the magic, to what's important. My breakthrough was finding the freedom to act and the possibilities. You stand in the face of resignation for the possibilities outside of it. The Forum offers moments of insight that makes a difference — a quest into what it means to be human."

The personal effectiveness program is even operating in jails through an organization called Prison Possibilities Inc. Inmates get the Forum free because PPI pays under a contract with Werner Erhard Associates. PPI is supported by donations from foundations and from individuals who have gone through the Forum.

Eugene is a former convict who went through the Forum, got involved in PPI and started a fitness program at Southern Michigan Prison. He is at the Michigan Inn seminar and raises his hand to speak.

"I MADE A COMMITMENT to lead a life free of my history as an ex-con," he says. "Who I am now is a demonstration of possibilities. I created the Fitness for Life program and raised $200,000 to put the Forum in prisons."

"Nothing can stop me from living my vision. I have the ability to see who I am, to declare my future and produce action."

Nobody can top this testimony. Karen, a graphic artist, closes the first part of the session by saying the Forum has taught her to live every day.

"If I die tomorrow I want a big funeral, and I want to look good. Our culture is centered around looking good."

An almost universal theme among the Forum true believers is the impossible relationships with their mothers before the breakthrough at the Forum. Some have convinced their mothers to part with $525 so they, too, can see the light.

MARLENE, AN ATTRACTIVE young professional, says she finally has a warm, intimate relationship with her mom, who lives out of town.

"I used to white knuckle it through every holiday when my mother came to visit," she says. "I kept clenching my teeth and saying to myself, 'She's not going to dominate me.' I learned how to communicate in the Forum. I realized my mother really wants me to be happy, and I discovered what it is to be a human being. That was a quantum leap."

Forum workers mingle with the guests during the next half hour, encouraging them to sign up for the $525 weekend and evening.

A common denominator seems to be seeing the possibility in others and helping them go for it. This takes the activity out of the self-help arena where Erhard's fame began.

The believers insist the Forum is a new experience in fulfillment and satisfaction, expanding one's horizons of possibility and of making a difference. But detractors say Erhard's nostrums create just another system of thinking, a fad that comes and goes.

Always send your condolences

Dear Joan:
The mother of one of the staff members of the organization I work for recently died. I'm low on the totem pole here and didn't feel sure about dropping this person a note of condolence. If this occurs again I'd like to feel confident I'm doing the right thing. Would it have been appropriate to drop a note to this fellow staff member?
G.E., Southfield

Dear Joan:
I really was out of line a couple of days ago with my supervisor. I criticized the way the supervisor handled something with rather vulgar language. I want to make amends to this person but don't know how to go about it. What do you suggest?
J.E., Bloomfield Hills

Never hesitate to write a condolence letter, whether you are a junior member of the staff or a senior member of management. Make a concrete offer to be of help.

You could write, "Your friends in this division are all thinking of you and wish there was something we could do to help in this time of your terrible loss. Please call on us for anything."

Apologies rarely come easy. It's always uncomfortable facing up to the fact that you've inconvenienced or offended someone. Biting the bullet and expressing your regret often will regain whatever good will you lost.

If your office relationship is informal, then make the apology face to face. Just say, "I was out of line yesterday. Please forgive me." As simple as that.

If your office is more formal, send him or her a memo saying the same thing.

Zeros come in number of forms

As mentioned in our last column, another advantage of zero coupons is that they are available in a number of forms, each with its own specific benefits.

ZERO COUPON municipal bonds: As with other municipal bonds, the earnings on muni zeros are exempt from federal income tax, and in some states, from state tax as well.

Muni zeros are issued by a variety of state, county and local government agencies, and the quality varies according to the issuing agency. Some muni zeros come with the added protection of insurance and will yield about one-half percentage point less than an equivalent uninsured bond.

With muni zeros, particularly those issued by state or local housing finance agencies, it is important for the investor to be aware of the rights of the agency to "call" — or buy back — the bond before it matures.

Some municipal zeros allow the issuer to call the bonds very early. If interest rates are declining when the bonds are called, you may not be able to find another investment with the same yield.

Municipal zeros would not be suitable to put in an IRA, since they are already tax exempt, but they would be a good choice as an investment for retirement over and above the IRA limit.

They would also be suitable for other non-tax-advantaged investment goals such as saving for a second home or a trip around the world.

ZERO COUPON corporate bonds: Issued by corporations, these bonds usually offer a higher yield than other zeros. Although they are backed by the full faith and credit of the issuing company, corporate zeros are not insured by any organization, so their quality depends on the quality of the issuing company.

There is an active market for corporates. The investor who wants the security of a bond together with the potential for trading gains may find corporate zeros suitable.

If interest rates decline, the investor may have the opportunity to realize a capital gain on the zero before it matures.

On the other hand, corporate zeros also are available in shorter-term maturities, for investors who want price protection in case of higher interest rates.

ZERO COUPON CDs: Banks and savings and loan associations joined the zero parade recently by issuing zero coupon certificates of deposit. A variety of these zero coupon CDs are offered through brokerage firms as well.

Their appeal is security — they are insured up to $100,000 by the Federal government through the FDIC or FSLIC. Because yields tend to be lower than on corporate bonds, and there is little resale market for CDs, these zeros are best suited for individuals for whom security is paramount and who plan to hold the investments until maturity.

ZERO COUPONS based on government securities: These are among the most popular investment choices of the '80s.

Because they are U.S. Treasury obligations, they are the safest of the zeros. They come in several forms, all of which make treasury investments more accessible to individuals. Treasury Bond Receipts (TBRs) and Certificates of Accrual on Treasury Securities (CATs) are among the types offered.

Here is how TBRs and CATs work. An investment firm buys blocks of U.S. Treasury bonds and places them in custody with a major bank. The firm then sells shares in the TBRs or CATs, which entitle the buyer to specific interest or principal payments from the bonds.

loose change
Marty Redilla

When U.S. Treasury bonds are bought directly, they must be bought in multiples of $1,000. TBRs and CATs, on the other hand, can be bought for as little as $50 because they are sold at a discount and represent an interest in the underlying security.

Maturities range from six months to 30 years. The U.S. government also offers its own zero coupon securities, which can be bought through an investment firm.

There is a more liquid market for these Treasury Interests (TNTs) than for other taxable zeros. They are sold in multiples of $1,000 face value at maturity.

ZEROS AS a hedge: Because a zero security will pay you a specified amount at a particular date in the future, it can be used to offset the risk in a more speculative investment. A good illustration of this strategy is a series of 10-year, high-yield unit trusts recently introduced.

The trust holds a portfolio of bonds. Thirty percent of them are U.S. Treasury zeros, and 70 percent are high-yielding corporate bonds.

Since the role of the corporate bond is to produce a high current yield, they contain moderate risk. But the Treasury zeros carry a maturity value equal to the initial investment in the trust.

Thus, even in the unlikely event that all of the corporate bonds in the portfolio default, the initial investment will be recovered.

Racers run, roll to success

By M.B. Dillon and Tom Henderson staff writers

With the air-shattering blast of a 12-gauge shotgun, the fourth annual Redford Roadrunner Classic was off.

A mass of bobbing flesh surged down Stark Road in Livonia, bare-chested leaders jockeying for position, hundreds of slower runners stringing out behind.

The temperature was in the 80s and the air so thick it was more suitable for swimming than running.

Some would triumph in their quest for personal records. Others would finish in disappointment. None would battle so hard as a young teen from Taylor, nor would they be so cheered at the finish.

By the time the runners reached the finish of the five-mile race, they were ready to revel. They swapped stories, sipped seltzer and Stroh's, dined on grilled hot dogs and worked up a second sweat on an outdoor dance floor.

SUDDENLY, LONG after the last runner had finished, the wail of an approaching siren cut through the roar. Two frantic parents, Sandra and James Bullard, hurried to the finish line to greet their 13-year-old daughter as she completed her first race; it took her a bit more than two hours, but it seemed to them more like two days.

Sherri, who was born with cerebral palsy, wheeled the course in her heavy, regular wheelchair, not the lighter, faster, more maneuverable chairs favored by the rest of the wheelchair field.

"She told us, 'I know I'm going to be last, but I want to finish,'" her mom said. The Bullards had tried to walk the course with Sherri, "but she got ahead of us," said James Bullard. "She can't do a lot of things other kids can do. But she's stubborn. She's determined."

The Bullards had left the course and joined the crowd of 1,100 in Livonia's Veterans Park only after being assured that police and a course monitor would stay with their daughter.

When Sherri finally rolled across the finish line in the dusk, hundreds had gathered, applauding and cheering. Sobbing, James threw his arms around his daughter. Sandra and son Linc, 10, wiped tears from their eyes. Around them stood dozens of veteran runners, watching and crying.

"Someone get her a beer," a wheeler yelled. "It was rough," said an exhausted but exhilarated Sherri. "My gloves wore out really quick, and I got tons of blisters. But I never thought of quitting."

Seasoned Redford Roadrunner John Goddard of Livonia was the monitor who biked alongside Sherri, once an Easter Seals poster girl.

"I've never seen determination like that," he said. "Now I know what it feels like to lead the New York Marathon with the sirens blaring."

"We just took it an inch at a time," added Goddard, who along the route received water from residents and cheers from Domino pizza drivers.

"I told Sherri, 'If I have to push you across the finish line, we're going to finish. But she said, 'No, I'm going to make it.'"

"She hopes to go to New York to do the marathon, but like we said, it's an inch at a time. You get past this one, and you go to the next one."

"She's got guts," said Livonia reserve police

'It's not exactly Boston, but we're getting there.'

officer Richard Morris. "You wouldn't catch me going that far."

"Sherri made it all worthwhile," said race organizer Tim Quinn of Redford. "That was heart rending."

THE CLASSIC, sponsored by the Redford Roadrunners on Aug. 1, had a lighter side, too.

Wheeler Jimbo Boyd of Farmington Hills competed in an eagle hat with wings tied with fishline to his chair. When Boyd raised his head, the wings flapped.

Boyd has run in a tuxedo, snorkel equipment and as Bozo. An American record holder in his classification, Boyd plans to run someday as a flasher in a raincoat.

Competing in costume "gives you a different perspective," said Boyd, a sales representative for Wright and Filippis, a chain of handicapped-supply stores headquartered in Rochester Hills. "There's no sport like this in the world, to be out there with your able-bodied friends."

Chelsea Pittman, a 2½-year-old wiry-haired bouvier, covered the course with her owner, Mary Pittman of Ann Arbor.

It's hard to say who was better dressed. Mary ran in a chartreuse and black tiger-striped body suit. Chelsea looked sporty in a University of Michigan shorts and matching collar. After the race, she slipped into a hot pink Roadrunner muscle shirt.

"Chelsea's goal was to finish," said Mary, who says daily seven-mile runs at an eight-minute pace are no sweat for her pal.

Too bad for Chelsea (who finished in a respectable 54:14) that the sign on the course that said "Win $100 — Finish Naked" came with the disclaimer: "(Just kidding)."

The co-ed outdoor shower was crowded. New friendships were born and old ones nurtured as 20 barrels of beer ($850 worth) were emptied.

Despite the record-breaking field of 1,100 runners in the Classic, complaints were scarce.

"They had split times at every mile," said Lou Ronayne of Livonia. "I liked that, because I don't use a watch. The splits let you know where you screwed up. It was a nice run."

Dale Hart won a hand-fired mug for taking third in his age group. "I'll cherish this. I'm going to initiate it," he said. "I achieved my goals: to place and to party." And off he went to the beer table for the initiation.

Excepting Sherri Bullard, Virginia Argo of Royal Oak was the last finisher. She'd long since told fellow walker Betty Neill, who clocked a personal best of 58:51, to go ahead.

Wrapping it up in close to an hour, Argo said, "The only thing that consoles me is that someone has to be last."

For many, the only thing wrong with the event was that it ended so early.

About 11 p.m., the dance tunes stopped and runners, families and friends headed home to Windsor, Wyandotte, Hamtramck, Troy, Portage and Pinckney.

"It's not exactly Boston, but we're getting there," said Roadrunner president Randy Step.

There's a message in this madness

"Knowing Linden, I'm surprised we didn't get a stripper," Rosenberg adds.

1:30 p.m. — It's back to the office, where McKay receives instructions for his next call, a stripping policeman for a going-away party at a local restaurant.

2 p.m. — Arriving at Tequila Willie's after a quick change in his rolling dressing room is Officer Goodbody. The authentic-looking cop's ensemble is topped off with a hat, nightstick, handcuffs and a portable stereo. ("You wanna strip, you gotta have a beat, right?")

The host shows Officer Goodbody (a.k.a. McKay) to his intended "colleague," Diane Prellwitz, who is leaving for a job in New York and is being toasted at a bon voyage luncheon by co-workers Carolyn Ripper of Birmingham and Kim Jones of Canton Township.

The music is turned up, and Officer Goodbody begins a slow, sultry striptease — right down to his shiny, black G-string.

Once she realizes this is no normal bust, Diane manages to enjoy

McKay's act despite blushing occasionally.

2:45 p.m. — McKay guides his black Oldsmobile Cutlass down the Southfield Freeway while changing into white tie and tails for a musical number in the office at Thurston High School in Redford Township.

3:10 p.m. — Dressed in white from top hat to sneakers (a concession to formality, but better for the feet), Mr. Wonderful serenades secretary Alice Wendecker for her 10th wedding anniversary. The singing telegram is a present from Wendecker's 19-year-old daughter, Christie.

At first, Wendecker doesn't seem too impressed by all the attention. "You interrupted my cigarette (break) for this," she deadpans.

But after a few minutes of oozing charm courtesy of McKay, it almost looks as if she's ready to ditch her husband and run off with the Eastern Onion troubadour.

3:30 p.m. — McKay, finished for the afternoon, heads home to Westland to relax and dream up new lines, routines and characters for next time.

Transformed from "Mr. Law and Order" to "Mr. Wonderful," Dave McKay serenades Alice Wendecker, an employee at Redford Thurston High School.

MacKinnon's: Fine food, not-so-fine service

Your traveling taster visits area eateries and rates them in a 100-point scale. Up to 30 points are awarded for ambiance, which includes general atmosphere and service, 55 points for food and 15 points for price/value rating. A total count of 59 points or less indicates a restaurant is not recommended; 60-74 points signify from passing to good; 75-89 points designates very good with some extraordinary features; and 90-100 points show that a very special dining experience awaits you.

MacKINNON'S, 126 E. Main, Northville (348-1991), provides a rustic, country setting with nature prints, Tiffany lamps and a cozy brick wall. It is a pleasant setting, but there are some problems. The small restaurant squeezes tables closely together, and the proximity of other diners and their conversations can intrude on your sense of privacy.

In addition, the ventilation system has difficulty in clearing smoke entirely from other tables. Evidence of this problem can be seen on the badly stained ceiling tiles. We had a short wait for our reservation, and dinner took about 2 1/4 hours. The restaurant is open for lunch on weekdays and dinner every night except Sunday, and reservations are a must. General Atmosphere — 15 points maximum. Points awarded — 12.

We could not believe what a noticeably poor job the busman did. Dirty silverware was removed from our plates and put on the table, and water was not refilled. There wasn't even a separate butter knife which meant we used our butter knives on our appetizers. All of this may seem "picky," but it was inexcusable, especially since this is an expensive and would-be gracious restaurant. Our waiter was better — attentive and professional, but yet, he was not personal or warm enough to make us feel like welcomed guests. Service — 15 points maximum. Points awarded — 10.

The appetizers were interesting and appealing. The original French taco ($3.50), a crepe with ham, scallions and cheese, tastes just as it sounds — like a French-Mexican hybrid. The shrimp-stuffed mushrooms ($3.95) were very good; however, they are served with cheese, which was not noted on the menu or by our waiter. The country pate with cassis relish ($4.95) was the most attractively presented dish, with olives, onions and scallions. The pate was very mild, and the cassis relish seemed too heavy and sweet to be served with it. The snapper turtle soup ($3.50) was quite thick, hearty and delicious with a chili-like base.

An attractive, fresh salad accompanies the entrees; and it has a nice variety of vegetables. The Dijon dressing is quite good, but the Maurice dressing was a little overpowering. Excellent brown and white breads are provided, but they are both salted which is unusual in view of the many people who limit their salt intake. Drinks were on the light side. Before The Entree — 15 points maximum. Points awarded — 13.

The Belgian Waterzooi ($24 per person, minimum of two) came brimming with a wide variety of seafood delights including lobster, crabmeat, mussels and scallops. This attractive dish, covered by a pastry crust, is accompanied by three sauces — lobster, watercress and hollandaise. The sauces were almost superfluous, however, and our only slight criticism was that the dish was a bit too salty. The rack of lamb with black currant sauce fell short of ## a counting for taste D. Gustibus

our expectations. The lamb was tough, and it, too had been salted too heavily.

The sauteed veal with fresh pasta prociutto and boursin cheese sauce ($14.95) was extremely tasty. The veal was lightly breaded, and the sauce was rich; the pasta was delicious. We were not able to eat the vegetable terrine served, perhaps because there was no sauce over ours whereas other tables had something over theirs. The way it tasted, though, it is questionable whether the sauce would have helped enough. Entree, Vegetables and Garnishes — 30 points maximum. Points awarded — 25.

The most outstanding dessert — one that everyone at the table fought for — was the banana Wellington with caramel and walnut sauce ($4.95). This treat had everything — rich flavor, good texture, just plain "deliciousness." The chocolate mousse with Grand Marnier will please chocolate lovers. It was quite rich but with a consistency so soft it seemed like pudding. The mocha ice cream torte with fresh coffee with dark chocolate sauce ($3.50) did not have as much coffee or mocha as the name suggests, but it was very good and disappeared quickly. Dessert — 10 points maximum. Points awarded — 9.

Dinner cost about $70 per couple, with tip, and that was too much in light of the problems mentioned above. The food was very good, but atmosphere and service are equally important in a dining experience. Price Value — 15 points maximum. Points awarded — 12.

A Counting For Taste — 100 points maximum. Total points awarded 80. MacKinnon's has some fine and unusual dishes and some nice touches, but more attention to detail is needed to make it worth the monthlong wait for weekend reservations.

D. Gustibus welcomes your reaction, comments and suggestion of favorite restaurants in the Observer & Eccentric communities. Write to D. Gustibus, in care of Observer & Eccentric, Street Scene, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

RECENT RELEASES:

Once again, ladies and gentlemen, it's Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello on the beach — this time with the younger generation, their daughter Sandi (Lori Loughlin) and friends.

"The Care Bears Adventure in Wonderland" (I) (G)
Thanks to the Care Bears, Alice learns to believe in herself.

"Eat the Peach" (B-) (R) 90 minutes
Neat little Irish movie about two friends, inspired by an old Elvis movie, who build a "wall of death" motorcycle ride. Their ability to rise above failure is enabling but the film is a bit hard to follow and lacks unity throughout.

"Masters of the Universe" (I) (PG)
He-Man and Skeletor battle in live-action adventure.

"Nadine" (I) (PG)
Comedy-adventure about couple falling in love on the way to their divorce stars Kim Basinger, Jeff Bridges, Rip Torn and Gwen Verdon.

"Stakeout" (A-) (R)
Entertaining, well done police adventure with Richard Dreyfuss and Emilio Estevez as unconventional cops on night-shift stake-out for mafor criminal. Story twists and turn in clever ways, with plenty of comic relief and good dialogue but more gore than necessary.

STILL PLAYING:
"Adventures in Babysitting" (B+) (PG-13)
Elisabeth Shue is a resourceful baby sitter, but things get out of hand in this entertaining film marred by a few hokey moments. Good music on sound track, and Shue's co-stars, Anthony Rapp, Keith Coogan and Maia Brewton, turn in fine performances.

"Benji the Hunted" (I) (G)
The "loveable" mutt is still around.

"Dragnet" (C) (PG)
Ackroyd fans in nostalgic overdrive for TV's "Dragnet" will enjoy, but mostly plastic story and so-so supporting cast make this an average film. Average or not, the fans are lining up at the box office. Take is approaching $50 million at the box office.

"Full Metal Jacket" (B-) 110 minutes
Stanley Kubrick's entry in the Vietnam film wars is really two movies — recruit training and Vietnam combat. Parts don't hang together well with narrator-journalist, Pvt. Joker (Matthew Modine), poorly defined. Training scenes uncomfortably real, but combat overdone with spurting blood looking like diluted fruit punch. Very gore as bullet-filled casualties take forever to die.

"Inner Space" (A-) (PG) 120 minutes
Dennis Quaid is a miniaturized, hot-shot astronaut injected into body of supermarket clerk (Martin Short). A bit long but so much fun no one will mind weak ending. Should be one of summer's top films.

"The Living Daylights" (B)(PG) 130 minutes
Timothy Dalton is acceptable as the new-old Bond, back for the series' 25th anniversary. The story is vaguely familiar with the usual KGB operatives, heroin dealers, ugly heavies and lovely ladies. A few new twists and Bond is always fun with high-style that makes no bones about its super-hero's implausible exploits.

"Lost Boys" (C-) (R) 105 minutes
A rock-video vampire movie with Corey Haim and Dianne Wiest. Probably will succeed at the box office but I thought it was dumb.

the movies Dan Greenberg

"Predator" (I) (R)
Arnold Schwarzenegger heads commando group in Central American jungle. With over $50 million in the cash box, Arnie's a box office leader with this one.

"Roxanne" (C) (PG) 95 minutes
Steve Martin and Darryl Hannah retell Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac." Martin fans may appreciate, but film falls flat on his incredible nose. Slick contemporary setting, but story never clearly establishes why cosmetic surgery doesn't save the day. Faulted by rapid transitions from poignancy to poorly constructed slapstick. But what do I know? Martin fans continue to line up.

"Space Balls" (I) (PG)
Mel Brooks spoofs "Star Wars" with help from John Candy and Dick Van Patten.

"Revenge of the Nerds II" (I)
As far as I'm concerned, it's too bad that they're back. But good box office: $21 million plus in first 2 1/2 weeks.

"The Squeeze" (I) (PG-13)
A comic adventure starring Michael Keaton, Rae Dawn Chong and Meat Loaf. Keaton is on the lam from bill collector Chong when they stumble on murder and a million-dollar scam.

"Robocop" (B) (R) 110 minutes
Interesting film about corporate struggles to mechanize police forces of the future. Detroit, as usual, gets bad rap as crime capital. Excellent performance by Peter Weller in title role, but film is longer than it need be, and it is marred by excessive violence. But, hey, that's life. Number one at the box office.

"Jaws: The Revenge" (D+) (PG-13) 90 minutes
The story is corny and implausible, the dialogue hard to understand and the shark looks phony. Aside from that...

"La Bamba" (C+) (PG-13)
This maudlin, cliched, "show-biz" story tells of Ricky Valens' early success and tragic death in the plane crash that killed Buddy Holly and J.P. Richardson. Music is good, but forget the story.

The grading system

Each week in "Street Scene" Professor Dan will grade the movies. Sorry, guys and gals, but you never get away from grades. No matter how many times you graduate, there'll always be somebody handing out marks...

- Here's the scale:
- A+ Top marks to a film that everyone will appreciate
  - A Close behind in the excellent category
  - A- Still in running for top honors
  - B+ Pretty good stuff but not perfect
  - B Good
  - B- All right but notable deficiencies
  - C+ Just a cut above average
  - C Mediocre
  - C- Not so hot and slipping fast
  - D+ The very best of the poor stuff
  - D What can you say after you've said you're sorry, but it is poor
  - D- It doesn't get much worse
  - F Flunks in every category, truly awful
  - Z- The absolute worst — reserved for the occasional disaster that excels in shoddy filmmaking.
  - I Incomplete — The professor always has an excuse for not grading your paper and critics sometimes miss a screening.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" (A+) (G)
She's back to celebrate her 50th birthday and delight another generation.

"Summer School" (C) (PG-13) 90 minutes
Clever idea as Mark Harmon is forced to teach summer school to a bunch of losers and a sexy exchange student. Unfortunately the script, acting, pacing and directing kill the idea and leave viewers sinking in a sea of mediocrity.

"Supernatural IV" (I)(PG)
It seems like more than "IV." This time the man of steel defeats the nuclear threat.

"Sweet Lorraine" (A-) (PG-13) 90 minutes
Excellent performances by Maureen Stapleton and superb supporting cast in delightfully nostalgic story about The Lorraine, a Catskill resort in its decline.

"Withnail and I" (I) (R) 104 minutes
British comedy set in 1669 as two struggling actors take a country holiday.

OLD FAVORITES:
"Beverly Hills Cop II" (B+) (R)
More of the same as "BHC I," maybe even funnier, in spite of its glitzy, rock-video exterior. Performing beyond producers' expectations with $140 million gross in ten weeks.

"Harry and the Hendersons" (B+) (PG) 110 minutes
Fun for all the family in happy comedy about the Henderson family and their friend, the Bigfoot.

"The Hollywood Shuffle" (A-) (R)
Robert Townsend's clever satire on black actors in Hollywood is back — and it's a good thing.

"The Witches of Eastwick" (A+) (R) 110 minutes
Sophisticated comedy discusses sexual roles and relations quite explicitly. Superb performances by three lonely witches (Cher, Susan Sarandon, Michelle Pfeiffer) who conjure up a devil of a man, Jack Nicholson, who is simply great. Marred by some gross images.

Ex-Detroit cop plays 'Moonlighting' private eye

'One day a friend of mine needed a ride to an audition and asked me to join him. So, I went along and the ("Moonlighting") producers liked my looks. Luck of the Irish.'

— Dan Fitzpatrick

What do an ex-Detroit police officer, an electronics firm operations manager, a U.S. military intelligence officer and the character of O'Neil on ABC-TV's "Moonlighting" have in common?

They're all Dan Fitzpatrick, co-star to Cybill Shepherd and Bruce Willis on the enormously successful television series.

On a break from shooting the series, Fitzpatrick recently visited his parents, Ralph and Mary Ellen Fitzpatrick, at their Plymouth home.

While in town he told the Observer & Eccentric about his varied career that eventually led to a role in "Moonlighting."

"I didn't want to be a cop anymore," Fitzpatrick said, "and I wanted to live in California, so I went out there in 1979 with the idea of getting into business (he was an operations manager for an electronics firm).

"I saw an ad in a newspaper looking for actors who wanted to get into movies, so I thought I'd try it."

Fitzpatrick had been in student theater in high school in Wayne with a part in "My Fair Lady," and later at Schoolcraft College in Livonia in a production of "The Fantasticks." He also had taken some acting classes at Indiana University.

The ad Fitzpatrick auditioned for landed him a part in a now-forgotten film, but put the bug in his ear about acting.

Since then, Fitzpatrick has done some 50 feature films, including "The Best of Times" with Robin Williams and Kurt Russell, in which Fitzpatrick plays a football player.

"THAT FILM WAS the turning point," Fitzpatrick said. "From there I decided that acting was what I really wanted to do. Then one day a friend of mine needed a ride to an audition and asked me to join him. So, I went along and the ('Moonlighting') producers liked my looks. Luck of the Irish."

Fitzpatrick feels his career as a Detroit police officer has really helped him in his "Moonlighting" role as an investigator. It also helped him in several films in which he did stunt work.

Fitzpatrick was a patrol officer in Detroit's Grand River/Schaefer precinct, and the skills he learned in chase driving were invaluable experience that not many actors have.

Fitzpatrick's "Irish" luck, as well as his increasingly visible talents in the role of O'Neil, has kept him on "Moonlighting" for the past two years.

"O'Neil is a character they (the producers) developed as a counterpoint to the two main characters played by Cybill Shepherd (Maddie Hayes) and Bruce Willis (David Addison). He's (O'Neil) a dumb kind of guy who's always doing something stupid, like wandering through the office spilling coffee or the like. He serves as a character to irritate Maddie and toy with David."

FITZPATRICK SAID the life of an actor on a major television series has its glamour but is mostly all work.

"A typical day of shooting 'Moonlighting' starts at 5 a.m., and sometimes I don't get home until 1 a.m. the next morning. One episode usually takes about 13-14 days to shoot, but we may do overlaps (scenes from other episodes) at the same time."

Not exactly a Hollywood soiree by the pool.

"The show is shot just as if it were a feature film — on film rather than videotape. We shoot it right at 20th Century Fox, so you get to see bits and pieces of a lot of different movies being filmed. The producers wanted to go the extra mile to make 'Moonlighting' the best it can possibly be. It's a sophisticated show."

And popular too. It is in the Nielsen TV ratings' top 10.

Fitzpatrick, with his resonant, Shakespearean tones and a cool, blue-eyed gaze that could steal the hearts of diehard Newman fans, is anything but the "dumb kind of guy" the character O'Neil represents. Besides his other jobs, Fitzpatrick spent three years as a U.S. military intelligence officer.

"It was during my James Bond phase, and I thought that that kind of life would be attractive and something I would really like to do. Except when I got into it and found out there were no Maseratis and no girls. So when my three years were up, I didn't re-sign."

Fitzpatrick, who's also a Sherlock Holmes buff, says that he's happy being a character actor and doesn't have any "elitist" ideals of becoming "The Big Star," although he does admit to having an aspiration of working with Woody Allen someday.

In addition to his work on "Moonlighting," Fitzpatrick recently completed shooting on a new film tentatively titled, "Out Cold," starring John Lithgow, Teri Garr and Randy Quaid.

In the film, Fitzpatrick photo doubles and stunt drives, standing in for actor Quaid in the "rough scenes."

The film's a murder mystery that revolves around schemes for getting rid of the body. Fitzpatrick also has done photo double and stunt work for actor Charles Bronson.

Fitzpatrick and his wife, Barbara (also an ex-Detroit police officer), live east of Los Angeles and had to juggle their separate vacation time to accommodate Fitzpatrick's shooting schedule. Fitzpatrick returned to Los Angeles last week to resume filming "lighting."

5 reasons to go to Windsor next Saturday

1. Like beaches? There's over a dozen of them in Windsor's Essex County. In fact, there's over 25 miles of beachfront on our Lake Erie coast and Lake St. Clair. Get a great tan. With the waves rolling in, or just waddle your toes in the sand. Where else are you going to find beaches like these?
2. Kids of all ages love Bob-Lo. When you take the boat to Pelee Island, the ride's a little shorter and costs a little less.
3. Imagine a place where lush tropical vegetation grows in profusion. It's not the Amazon; it's not deepest Africa; it's Colasanti's Tropical Gardens.
4. Go to Windsor for the night life. Like jazz? Like rock'n'roll? How about blues or pop or anything or just a symphony? If you're looking for a little night music, you've come to the right place - Windsor.
5. You can have lunch or dinner right on the water at places like Windsor Hilton, Smully's on the River or Lakeshore Terrace (flooded down in Kingsville). Because Windsor Essex County is practically the world capital of waterfront restaurants.

Actually, there are more than five reasons to go to Windsor next weekend. In fact, no one really knows how many there are. Go to Windsor for a walk along the beach, a stroll in the park or take a ferry ride to Pelee Island. It's more than a way to get out of the house. It's a way to have a good time. Just say...

Liposuction

Doctors vacuum away fat surgically

By Jennifer Speer Ramundt
staff writer

The new, shorter skirts can drive a woman to it. So can high-cut swimsuit legs and the urge to wear shorts in this hot weather.

In fact, there are many reasons why people elect to have the fastest growing branch of cosmetic surgery — liposuction, or the vacuuming of fat cells out of the body — and they are as individual as the people themselves.

Dr. Julius Newman of Philadelphia, founder and past president of the American Society of Liposuction, said the procedure has become very popular.

"It has become the No. 1 cosmetic procedure being done today, ranking right up there at the top with nose reconstructions," he said. "There are 170,000 liposuction procedures now being performed a year."

Many women decide to try liposuction to remove what they feel are unsightly bulges in the thigh, knee, stomach and buttock areas that diet and exercise haven't eliminated, according to Dr. Joseph Stern, a cosmetic surgeon in Farmington Hills.

And though the typical patient is a female between the ages of 23 and 45, Stern said he also has many male patients. For men, Stern said breast reduction and the elimination of excess around the waist and stomach are the most common.

"This is beauty surgery," Stern said. "The bottom line in all cosmetic procedures is greater self-esteem."

STERN DESCRIBES the liposuction process as contouring. He said it is used to improve areas of the body that have genetically determined shapes and can't be altered any other way. In other words, no matter how much dieting and exercise, some thighs will continue to bulge just like mom's always did. Such thighs can be reshaped by liposuction, according to Stern.

He said this removal of fat cells has a permanent effect and can be used on all parts of the body — from the face and chin, down to the calves and ankles.

It is not a replacement for dieting and exercise, according to Stern, and all people are not candidates for such a procedure. For example, obesity is better treated by dieting since liposuction involves removing small amounts of localized fat tissue deposits only. The quantity of fat removed at any one time is necessarily limited.

The procedure can cost anywhere from $1,000 to $5,000, according to Stern, depending on the individual procedure.

Stern was a gynecologist for 25 years before he became interested in liposuction about five years ago. He now performs a variety of cosmetic surgeries, including fat grafting and breast augmentation. He said he conducts about 500 liposuctions a year, more than any other doctor in the state.

He also is active as an instructor and has conducted 11 liposurgery courses for the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery.

"I WASN'T helping women the way they could be helped," Stern said of his earlier practice. "This is really where it gets to be fascinating, when you can do a whole body." He stresses that he is not a plastic surgeon and does not do reconstructive surgery.

Dr. James Lawson, Farmington Hills plastic surgeon, performs the procedure but said he is not that enthusiastic about it and stresses it is not for everyone.

"It has to be used with judgment," he said. "The best candidates are those individuals with just slight bulges at thighs and lower abdomen."

Dr. Fanny A. dela Cruz said the procedure has become very popular among young women today.

The suction draws fat globules into the tube, and by passing the tube back and forth, fat tissue particles are sheared off and are passed into the tube to be removed. This leaves rounded tunnels in the remaining tissue.

IF A PATIENT follows the proper post-operative procedure, these tunnels will flatten out as the skin tightens, according to Stern, creating a new body contour.

Stern said recovery time is about 1 1/2 days after the surgery, which is performed in one of two operating rooms in his Farmington Hills office. He said patients can be up walking almost immediately and are encouraged to begin exercising soon after the procedure is performed.

Patients must wear a girdle-like garment continuously for four weeks after the surgery. This garment then must be worn half of the time for an additional two weeks. Stern said this helps the skin adhere to the remaining tissue and because it applies pressure, it helps prevent excessive bleeding.

An important factor in determining the final result is the degree of normal skin tension. The younger the individual, the greater the elasticity of the skin, allowing it to shrink easily and leave a smooth surface. Stern said he takes age into consideration when consulting with a patient interested in the liposuction procedure.

Stern said none of his patients has ever experienced complications from the surgery, but he does require patients to sign a consent form that lists possible complications ranging from bleeding and infection to skin irregularities and numbness.

Staff writer Carolyn Carman contributed to this article.

Surgeons debate who should do it

By Jennifer Speer Ramundt
special writer

The training of liposuction surgeons appears to be a bone of contention among practitioners of the procedure, according to a local practitioner, Dr. Joseph Stern of Farmington Hills.

As Stern described it last month, "there's a war between plastic surgeons and cosmetic surgeons as to who should be doing it (liposuction surgery)."

The debate concerns who is qualified to conduct the surgery, which was formally introduced into the United States in 1982. Doctors such as Stern can call themselves cosmetic surgeons and legally can practice in the United States without extra certification or residency training beyond their surgical certification.

Plastic surgeons, on the other hand, are board certified in their specialty. This means they have completed a residency in surgery that includes special training in plastic surgery and have passed an intensive examination.

According to Stern, there is a "turf war" between the two groups.

"Cosmetic surgeons can have training in any field of surgery," said Stern, who was trained as a gynecologist. "They bring their own aesthetic background with them. The important thing is training. If you're trained in liposuction, you're trained."

"I don't fix crushed hands or work with burn patients like plastic surgeons do, but I can make a beautiful set of breasts, a beautiful body."

STERN AGREES that surgeons who are not trained and don't have the proper equipment and facilities should not do liposuction surgery.

A spokeswoman for the American Society of Plastic and Reconstruction Surgeons said last month that the society recommends that anyone wishing cosmetic surgery use a surgeon certified by the American Board of Plastic Surgeons. Approximately 98 percent of the society's members are board certified.

The American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery does not require its approximately 1,100 members to be certified by the American Board of Cosmetic Surgery, though some are. The academy's certification procedure calls for board certification in another specialty, passing oral and written examinations, and the doctor's having conducted 1,000 cosmetic procedures in the past five years.

Band travels a rock'n' road

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

A rock 'n' roll band on tour. The ultimate excursion in self-indulgence.

Yes, Lear jets, deluxe suites, groupies, champagne and smoked salmon backstage all await. Contact your travel agent for details.

Or better yet, just ask the Hysteric Narcotics, a five-member, high-energy band that has seen the world (they've played in Canada) through their rock 'n' roll travels.

In fact, there's one perk in particular that spurs them to pack up the van and head to such exotic places as Rochester, N.Y., Buffalo, N.Y., and Providence, R.I.

"It's the free pop. Yeah, that's why we do it," said Mike Murphy, 27, of Livonia, lead singer of the Hysteric Narcotics, sipping on a complimentary carbonated beverage, a benefit of playing a bar. "It's been a well-kept secret."

BUT THAT'S the only thing the Hysteric Narcotics are holding back on. On stage, this group unleashes a hybrid set of rock 'n' roll that could knock the paint off the wall.

Currently, the group is recording its second album at Old Schoolhouse in Ann Arbor.

The Hysteric's first LP, "Batteries Not Included," on Rattscallion Records, was a relative success. The home-spun disc charted on several college radio listening polls, giving them an instant following on the campus circuit.

On this night, they're headlining at the Blind Pig in Ann Arbor. The band has been homebound while recording the album.

Keith Soucy of Livonia (bass), Mark Niemi of Livonia (guitar), Lawrence Ulrich of Birmingham (keyboards), Jerry Barterian of Detroit (drums) and Murphy, though, are getting itchy again. The road paved with free soda awaits.

So do the fine accommodations, such as the house in Rochester, N.Y., where they were invited to stay following a show. The next morning they fled into the street after being rudely awakened by a startled, screaming stepmother at 8 a.m.

"She asked where we were from, and we told her Detroit," Soucy said. "She just went, 'Aghhhh...'"

AND THE venues, well they're right up there with Caesar's Palace. Murphy described one place's interior as "looking like the outside of decrepit building."

The outside is the only part of a bar they saw in Providence. The owner left a note on the door telling the group the place was closed.

"Touring can be really good," said Murphy, "and it can be really depressing."

"On Monday and Tuesday nights, like here, the bar scene is really dead. A lot of times, you're playing out of town to two people, the soundman and the owner."

Don't let the horror stories fool you. This band enjoys what they do.

Touring outside the area is a good way to gain regional recognition. And no matter how many times the band leaves Livonia, Livonia never leaves the band.

THREE OF the five members live in the city. The band was originally an all-Livonia band before keyboardist Dave Feeny and drummer Charles Frayne recently left.

They're among the many Livonians who are known in the area music scene such as Bob "Bootsey X" Mulrooney, Terry Farmer of Let's Talk About Girls, Paul Corte and Al Skinner of the Akwa Batz.

Non-Livonians Ulrich and Barterian have since replaced Feeny and Frayne.

"We usually don't get along with people outside of Livonia," Murphy said. "Really, the band is a lot better. One thing, we get to practice more."

"There's not a whole lot else to do as a teenager in Livonia," he added, offering an explanation on the abundance of Livonia music talent. "We burned out on pinball arcades."

WHAT THE Hysteric Narcotics are trying to pin down now in the studio is a harder edge to their music. The upcoming album should reflect a more unifying edge, according to Soucy.

The band has been labeled a neo-psychedelic group in the '60s mold. But band members say that's a misnomer.

"Our music was never too psychedelic," Soucy said. "We just used a psychedelic light show. That was probably the most psychedelic thing about us."

Added Murphy: "We don't care what people call us."

Just as long as they call for the free pop.

The Hysteric Narcotics have been labeled a "neo-psychedelic" group, but group members say their hard-driving music is much harder to pin down.

Nature's sand castle

By Iris Sanderson Jones
special writer

In her other life, her winter life, Jennifer Puntenney of Farmington Hills is an assistant coordinator of visitor programs for the Exhibit Museum of Natural History at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

Her son Aaron goes to school every morning, and her husband, gastroenterologist Dr. Kenn Kurjan, goes to the office.

In her summer life, Jennifer is an interpretive ranger in the gray and green uniform of the National Park Service at Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore.

Eight-year-old Aaron runs up and down the glorious stretch of sand hills on the shore of Lake Michigan. Kurjan still goes off to the hospital, but he spends most weekends driving north.

YOU MAY find Jennifer giving out park maps at the new Phillip A. Hart Visitor Center, opened this year in Empire. She points out the campgrounds, canoeing rivers and the rebuilt Pierce Stocking Scenic Drive, which was reopened this year.

She can also be found showing visitors through the Coast Guard Station Marine Museum, giving geology lessons to kids at the foot of the Dunes Climb, leading hikes to a beaver lodge on Otter Lake, or running slide programs at a park campground.

We asked Jennifer to give us an insider's look at this natural masterpiece of sand, lakes, hills and forest, used over the centuries by Indians, lumbermen, merchant sailors, farmers and now thousands of visitors a year.

She has a lot of advice about how to use the park, but the essence is "get out of your car. Climb, hike, camp, canoe, do things your way, but get out of your car!"

The rebuilt Pierce Stocking Scenic Drive, which was reopened this year.

GLACIERS CREATED the dunes. The legend is that a mother bear and her two cubs were once driven into Lake Michigan by a forest fire. They swam and swam, but the cubs couldn't make it to shore. Sleeping Bear Dune, the shore, represents the mother; the two drowned cubs, North and South Manitou islands, lie peacefully offshore.

"Travel to the islands, explore them," Jennifer said. "You need a full day. Be in Leland at 9:30 a.m. The boat leaves at 10 for the seven-mile trip across Lake Michigan to South Manitou."

"It's a wonderful island. The Chippewa and Ottawa Indians used to hunt and fish there, and it was one of the first areas inhabited by Europeans. This is where wood was cut for steamers going through the Manitou Passage."

"If you only have a day, you see the most by taking a tour on an open-backed pickup truck for $6. The island has the remains of farmhouses, a cemetery, old schoolhouses. The tour will show you the shipwrecked Liberian freighter Francisco Morazan, which ran aground in 1960, a stand of white cedar that includes the oldest known white cedar tree in the world, the island lighthouse."

There are no accommodations on South Manitou Island but there are campgrounds for those willing to rough it a little, leaving as little impact on the wilderness as possible. You can hike the dunes, and on a very clear day you can see Wisconsin 60 miles away.

NORTH MANITOU is even more of a wilderness experience. You can backpack in and camp in a designated wilderness camping area or, with restrictions, in wild areas anywhere on the island. You cannot go to North Manitou for a day unless you have your own boat, so plan an overnight.

Jennifer Puntenney also recommends that you explore some of the less-traveled trails on the mainland.

"Try Old Indian Trail in the southern part of the park off M-22. In June you could eat your way down the trail, following the blueberries."

After a long hike, you will find yourself near the lake in a large dune area, a place full of dips and hills and covered with vegetation.

"I have taken Aaron there. If you like peace and solitude, you will love it. You will probably be the only person there, but there may be foxes around or a deer feeding on the dunes."

Another one of Jennifer's favorite places is the Sleeping Bear Point Coast Guard Station Marine Museum, which was built in 1902 as a rescue station under the U.S. Lighthouse Service, the predecessor of the Coast Guard.
