As the signs of death are cleared from Middlebelt Road, the surviving relatives and friends of victims from Northwest Flight 255 and the workers who salvaged the bodies and plane parts now must repair themselves, emotionally.

Passengers from Rochester, Canton Township, Troy, Livonia, Plymouth, Franklin, West Bloomfield and Bloomfield Hills were among those who perished in the plane.

The complete passenger list has not been released pending identification of remains by relatives.

There are few answers this week, including what caused the deaths of at least 157 people in the plane and on the ground in the fiery crash of Flight 255 shortly after its takeoff from runway 3C. The modified DC-9's momentary ascent quickly stalled, as its left wing listed into the Avis Rent A Car building on Middlebelt Road.

Moments later, as smoke billowed and metal-melting fires raged, Middlebelt Road under I-94 became a mass grave. When daylight came, hundreds of volunteers, police officers and firefighters saw vividly the carnage scattered for a mile about them. The yellow bags used throughout the night to cover bodies appeared brighter after an early morning rain.

HOWEVER, THERE was something merciful about the Sunday crash. Not only were dozens of homes and businesses spared, but a 4-year-old girl miraculously survived. The burned, broken body of Cecilia Cichan of Tempe, Ariz., reportedly shielded from fatal harm by her mother's body, was the only living thing pulled from the wreckage.

Werner Spitz, chief medical examiner of Wayne County, said it's one of the worst plane crashes he's ever worked on because of "its size number of people killed - and the massivity.'

"It's a very slow process. We've positively identified about half of the victims. We will complete our identification process by late Thursday or

The investigation into the cause of the Sunday night crash of Northwest Flight 255 to Phoenix will take a long time. The legal aftermath will take longer.

Attorneys familiar with such cases estimate "at least two years, maybe longer."

One of the first accident liability cases to come from the disaster perhaps the first - is expected to be filed this week by attorney Richard Schaden, partner in the law firm of Schaden, Heldman, Lampert, Katzman and Tiecher of Birmingham and Denver, Colo.

Before Harry Brown boarded Flight 255 Sunday he visited his _4year-old daughter who has been hospitalized since a May car accident.

"Most of his time was spent going to the hospital and feeding her, Brown's wife, Sarah, said. "He told her he was leaving for a t ip" and wouldn't be gone long.

Their daughter, Sharon McLaughlin, had finally awakened from a coma, Mrs. Brown said, but she can't talk or walk. The Browns, Canton residents for about 10 years, have taken care of her 3-year-old son since the accident.

AFTER BROWN, 51, visited his daughter, his wife drove him to the airport. But before they parted, she said something "checked" in her mind and she walked to the back of the car to give him a kiss and say: You be careful. I love you.

"He said: 'I'll be careful. I'll call you tonight.' He called every night when he was away on business.

Instead a call came at 3 a.m. Monday confirming her husband was one of the people killed when Northwest Airlines Flight 255 crashed Sunday evening. By that time Mrs. Brown, who was unsure about the flight number, was convinced her husband was on the plane.

"I dropped him off at the airport and came home. I was folding clothes and watching TV. There was a news flash that a plane had

At the high point early Monday morning, more than 300 law enforcement officers from some two dozen agencies were on duty at Detroit Metropolitan Airport and in nearby neighborhoods working in the aftermath of the crash of Northwest Airlines Flight 255

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara said Wednesday that while he was "generally very pleased" with the way public safety officials responded to the crisis, portions of the county's plan for dealing with major disasters may be changed to make it more efficient and possibly cut down on costs.

"We'll face that after (the county's role in the investigation is completed)," McNamara said.

He said areas in the disaster plan facing review included the number of "call-outs" for assistance to local police and fire departments, security and "other areas," which he declined to address specifically.

The man responsible for coordinating police and fire coverage in major emergencies at the airport, Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano, defended the extensive show of manpower as "absolutely necessary, · considering the circumstances."

Ficano called criticism of the expenses involved in having such a large number of officers called to the scene unwarranted. He said the sheriff's department followed closely the predetermined disaster plan in deciding how to handle the crash in which at least 157 people were killed.

Because Ficano was out of town when the crash occurred, Undersheriff Warren Evans was in charge of directing police and fire activities at the crash site Sunday night. Officials from the National Transportation Safety Board took over coordination of the investigation at 2:30 a.m. Monday

OAKLAND COUNTY Sheriff John Nichols. whose department sent 18-20 officers to the crash site Sunday night at the request of the Wayne County Sheriff's office, agreed with Ficano

"When there's a life-and-death situation involved. I don't think you should worry about whether or not something is cost-effective," Nichols said. "They (county officials) can crucify me if they want to, but if we can lend our resources to help out in a crisis, we will."

Werner Spitz, chief medical examiner of Wayne County, said at a press conference Tuesday that his working conditions are excellent.

"The county supplied everything I requested," he said.

Spitz said county officials called an hour or so after the crash and asked what he needed. "I have never seen a county react so fast I have everything I need." he said

Figures for overtime and other expenses incurred by the sheriff's department while handling the crash were unavailable Tuesday. The dewas tracking down looters who made it to the crash site before security was completely set

As the coordinating agency, Ficano said the sheriff's department responsibilities included organizing the search for victims, cordoning off the crash site and setting up traffic control with the help of municipal agencies

The decision on how many local police and fire departments to call in and how many of those officers will be needed is also made by the sheriff's office

The majority of local police of'icers took part in traffic control.

By the time local fire departments arrived on the scene, the main blaze caused by the crash had been extinguished. But local firefighters said they helped bring several smaller fires under control, hosed off the roadway, which was covered with flammable jet fuel, and helped ocate victims buried in the debris (see separate story on this page).

After the NTSB took over the investigation. Ficano said some sheriff's deputies participated in the "grid teams" that combed the crash site for evidence for the federal investigation

MOST OF the departments responding to the scene Sunday have participated in seminars sponsored by the National Emergency Training Center in Ammitsburg. Md., about 75 miles northwest of Washington

In fact, officials at the center said firefighters from Detroit and Farmington were among those attending a two-day emergency preparedness course at the center's National Fire Academy last weekend

The center also offers an Integrated Emergency Management Course that deals with community and law enforcement coordination for large scale disasters and major special events, including the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles

The two-week course includes classroom instruction and two simulated disaster exercises held on the campus, according to Phil McDonald. course director

While each kind of emergency has different causes and effects there are certain actions and re sponses that can be applied in all sit uations." McDonald said "The first thing that has to be done is establish who is in charge and set up a command center

He said other steps include deter mining the need to alert local hosp tals, decisions on whether an evacu ation of the area is necessary, whi releases casualty information and whether or not a "state of emerger. cy" should be declared

'How can you not react?'

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

Yes, they are professionals who often deal with death. That doesn't mean they grow accustomed to it. medical workers called in to do their jobs after the crash of Northwest Airlines Flight 255, Sunday, said they never felt more humanly fragile than when they went home Monday morning.

"One hundred and fifty bodies just laying there - in pieces," said Paul Bush, battalion leader for the Westand Fire Department unit at the crash site. "How can you not react to a sight like that?"

On duty with Bush were Westland firefighters Mark Wilhite, Sgt. Ronald Anderson, Sgt. Thomas Bennet and Capt. Marvin Liberty. All had similar reactions to the human wreckage intermingled with debris from the DC-9 over I-94 and Middlebelt Road.

Police officers from Canton Township. Redford Township and Westland used the same word - "grue-Many of the local police, fire and some" - to describe what they saw.

"It was a gruesome sight, it's hard to believe there was so much devastation," said Joseph Bommarito. a 19-year veteran of the Redford Township police department.

"AS MUCH blood and guts as we see, this was still upsetting," he said. "Seeing the children was the most upsetting."

Bush said the large number of bodies, with only one survivor requiring rescue, was perhaps the most frustrating part of the entire experience.

His expertise as an emergency medical technician wasn't needed. just his talent for being able to cover up a corpse with a yellow plastic sheet and not become ill in the process, he said sadly

The Romulus doctor who pulled the lone survivor. Cecilia Cichan, 4. burned and bruised, out from under a pile of debris said he was overcome by feelings of despair as well

When we found (the girl) in the first five or 10 minutes. I really had hope that we'd find more survivors." said Dr. John Girardot, a first-year intern at Oakwood Hospital in Dearborn. But, he said, those hopes slowly faded during the remaining 90 minutes he was on the scene.

Many police officers expressed disbelief over the looters and gawkers who hampered the rescue operation.

Travel agents deal with fears

By Joanne Maliszewski staff writer

Joan Fries was at Los Angeles International Airport when she learned that Phoenix-bound Northwest Airlines Flight 255 crashed at Detroit Metropolitan Airport on Sunday night.

Nonetheless, the assistant manager at Carousel Travel Inc., Farmington Hills, boarded her scheduled Northwest Airlines flight and headed home

"It was a little eerie when we came in, and you could see the plane and the wreckage below," Fries said. Despite the crash, which killed more than 150 people, Fries said she wasn't afraid to fly Northwest. "I figured Northwest had one (accident) and the odds (of it happening again Sunday) would be astronomical."

Like many travel agents in Oakland and Wayne counties, Fries expected many would-be travelers tc cancel their flights, particularly or Northwest, beginning early Monday morning.

Many travelers bore out the travel agents' expectations. Beginning Monday morning, travelers began canceling flights. But to the surprise of many travel agents, the number of canceled reservations was not overwhelming.

TRAVEL AGENTS chalk it up to the fact 60-70 percent of all flights from Detroit are on Northwest Airlines. Consequently, travelers have little choice. Detroit is one of three Northwest hubs.

"Because of the number of flights est of Detroit, sometimes Northwest is the only game in town," said Doug ers in the last six months.

Wilcox, manager at Farmington Travel Service. Still, some travelers are canceling mostly out of fear.

"We've had a total of three cou- said.

ples cancel. That's six tickets. Considering the high volume of tickets, that's not bad," said Mary Marthey of Book Couzens Travel at Rochester. "Two out of the three rebooked on other airlines, and the third is staying home. They're just afraid."

Following Sunday night's crash, Northwest Airlines established a new policy providing a full refund to anyone who cancels a flight. "Normally, it's a full penalty if you cancel," Marthey said.

As of Tuesday afternoon, Uniglobe Funtastic Travel in Livonia had no cancellations. In fact, they had new flight bookings, including on Northwest. "But I must say, business has been very slow today. I don't know what that means," said agent Dee Aubrecht.

THE FEW flight cancellations that Air World Travel, Westland, has had since Sunday's crash have all been for Northwest Airlines. But owner Nancy Devereaux said the number of cancellations is not considered unusual.

Kaye Britton, owner of Farmington Hills' Kaye Britton Travel Ltd., hasn't noticed a run on cancellations after the Northwest crash.

Mary Thomas, an owner at Omega Travel, Farmington, understands people's concern and irritation about flying. "The airline industry was a walking accident waiting to happen," she said. "The public hasn't been very happy with the air carri-

"We have not had cancellations because of the flight but we didn't have that much activity in the office either. Yes, that's unusual," Thomas

EVEN THOSE forging ahead and booking flights are expressing fear and concern about flying - in general, and on Northwest Airlines in particular.

"They (travelers) have mixed emotions," said Ruth Katz at Trans Global Travel Inc., Farmington Hills. "They all have something to say. Most are saying, 'Can we avoid Northwest?"

Travel agents also admit that customers have long been concerned about the airlines, particularly with flight delays, baggage and mechanical problems. Sunday's crash is just the icing on the troubled cake.

Aubrecht of Uniglobe in Livonia offers travelers a different perspective on reports of troubles in the skies. "I just tell people that once the media gets a hold of things, they chew it to death." she said.

Interestingly, some travel agents are reporting increased inquiries about other forms of travel, especially trains.

Thomas of Omega Travel said her agency received three calls Monday for train transportation. "Whether that was planned in advance, I don't know." Certainly, that many calls in one day is unusual, she said.

MARTHEY OF Book Couzens Travel of Rochester also has had inquiries about train transportation. Taking a train to Toronto is typical. But some actually are booking reservations for vacations by train, Marthey said.

Last night.

Then Steven, it is tomorrow " What's happening tomorrow, is a constant question in the mind, if not on the tongue, of today's child. OVER A 25-YEAR period of teaching kindergarten. I have observed some remarkable changes in the 4- to 6-year-old. Today's child, by the age of 5, has for the most part, traveled, attended a nursery or day care center, worked a computer, been exposed to many

"I know that, but ya know, is it children's books and operated a good sampling of educational toys, which has made him significantly more independent than yesterday's child. What troubles me is that this same sophisticated, preschool-educated child is not only entering kindergarten biting more pencils and crayons, but is acting and reacting more aggressively both verbally and physically than his predecessor

Are today's young children being subjected to too many pressures from too many sources? Are we starting them in school too early and expecting too much of them when they get there? Are we pushing them to the point of frustration because we are more concerned about intellectual development than feelings and attitudes? Has the trauma of present-day living, which seems to have conditioned many adults to think only of themselves, been transmitted to our little ones? Let's stop, take a deep breath and a good look at our own daily routines as well as our attitudes and beliefs, in order to help our children develop into healthy, thoughtful, caring individuals as well as well-educated ones

"Robert Paul Smith wrote in 1957: "We don't know how to do nothing any more. If we see our children lying on the grass looking up at the sky we feel they need motivation " Smith talks about sitting and doing a lot of thinking as a child, in his book "Where did you go? OUT What did you do? NOTHING."

We strung beads on string; we strung spools on strings; we tied each other up with string and belts and clothesline. We sat in boxes; we sat under porches; we sat on roofs; we sat on limbs of trees," he wrote.

Smith writes of standing on piles of leaves under rain dripping from eaves and in snow up to his ears. He says he skipped and hopped and jumped, not going anywhere, just skipped and hopped and jumped. He sang and whistled and hummed and screamed

What I mean, Jack, we did a lot of nothing. Let's face it, we still do it, all of us grownups and kids. But now, for some reason, we're ashamed of it," he writes.

CHILDREN REBEL against parental insistence on too many activities in varied ways. Many, I have found over the years, complain to the teacher.

I remember a beautiful child named Lisa I had a few years ago telling me that she was tired all the time because her mother had her in ballet and tumbling. She didn't feel like doing her school work, yawned frequently and talked to me about her mother's dreams of what she would be able to do when she grew up because of her talents. Lisa had been encouraged to take piano lessons soon, she told me, so that she could play well for people when she was older. I know that Lisa was tired of just listening to these great expectations

I am concerned about too much parental insistence and assistance in children's sports at too early an age. I hear "my dad says," or "my mom says, I'm gonna take soccer (example)." When asked if they know what that is, the answer is often vague.

When asked how they feel about taking the sport, the answer is often, 'I don't know. My dad (or mom) says it's gonna be fun." I don't see the when I watch these small chil-'fun' dren on the soccer field behind my house early Saturday morning. standing on wet grass, waiting, yes, waiting quite a while sometimes, for their part in the game to take place.

I hear comments such as "when is the ball going to come down here?" I see dancing on the field and picking dandelions. I see looks of frustration of the faces of the children and on the narents who on the sidelines, at least have their blankets and Thermos of coffee to keep them warm in the early morning hours. A kindergarten mother confided to me one day that she didn't know what she was going to do with herlittle guy who it seems was really gung-ho about the game at first and was not now. She didn't know whether to take him out or leave him

She had paid the fee when she thought that he wanted to be involved but found later that he only wanted soccer because his friends were enrolled in it. Besides that, the second time on the field, while he was bending over to tie his shoelace. his teammates ran over him. After an outburst of lears, he had firmly stated to Mom that he was not going back.

The kind of play that young children need allows them to be active participants in their own growth and learning. It allows them to be creative, to explore, to be imaginative," to live in a magic world, to be independent and most of all to have space to think and do for themselves.

of the road, her brother, who had just returned from San Francisco and is an uneasy plane rider, got sick from the sight of death and destruction.

"I knew there was nothing I could do," she said. "I knew those people were dead. I started praying for those peoples' souls. I just started praying those people didn't feel any pain.

"I was full of goose bumps," said Pytell, owner of Limousine by Fredrick in Canton.

"The plane was beside us, and it crawled over the road. The black Geri Pytell of Canton Township smoke was so intense you couldn't see anything."

Bruce was in the Hertz agency lot when Flight 255 took off and as he has done many times since he started working at the airport in January, he watched as the plane began its climb skyward.

"You could tell it was having trouble reaching altitude," he said. "It was swaying from side to side."

Bruce realized the aircraft was in trouble by the time it crossed Lucas Drive. Most planes using that runway are 11/2 to two times higher when they clear the airport perimeter, Bruce said.

First indications of the tragedy were found across the street from the Avis lot. The National Transpor-When she pulled the car to the side tation Safety Board, which has the task of determining what happened, found a 41-foot-tall light knocked down in the National car rental lot on the south side of Lucas Drive.

Bruce believes that may explain the hot, downed power line across Lucas Drive that limited accessibility to the area immediately after the crash

WHILE JOHN Lauber, head of the NTSB team investigating the crash, said preliminary reports show no "in-flight fire" or "uncontained failure" of either of the plane's two engines, Bruce disagreed.

By the time the aircraft was over the Avis car lot, fuel was spewing from the left side of the plane, he said. Seconds later, a fire started in or near the left engine. All of a sudden there was a mini explosion.

"It was leaking fuel like it had ruptured a gas line or fuel tank and there were flames," he said. "They were following the fuel to the ground like a flamethrower."

The flames started the Avis carreturn building, its gas tanks and cars on fire, he said.

As the plane lost altitude, it cocked to the left and disappeared from Bruce's sight as it dipped behind the Avis building. Bruce said there was a sound like "loud thunder" when it hit the ground.

Seconds later, there was a loud explosion.

Kim Morgan of Westland, an Avis dispatcher, was in the building when the plane crashed. She and fellow employees were alerted to pending disaster by a rental customer who shouted for them to get out.

The charred and broken brick on the of the front Avia building belies the extent of the devastation caused by the crash of Northwest Airlines Flight 255 Sunday evening.

they saw looked "like a bomb went off," Bruce said. The air was very hot and smelled of aviation fuel, he added.

Bruce said the shock has yet to set in He normally works days at the agency, but traded off with another manager to work the Sunday afternoon shift. He had hoped to head home at 11 p.m. to catch up on his sleep after a quick overnight trip to Charlevoix for a rock concert. As a result of the crash, none of the agency's midnight shift made it to work and Bruce worked throughout the night and his regularly scheduled day shift Monday.

Shortly after the crash, it was business as usual at Hertz with a twist. Planes were coming in and people were renting cars, but no one seemed to know how to get out of the area, Bruce said.

"The shock hasn't set in yet," he said Monday night. "I never thought about a plane crash until then. They're usually higher when they go over, but I could tell by what was happening there was nothing anyone could do.

Gawkers flock to crash scene

By Brian Lysaght staff writer

Harold Smith of Westland used binoculars to peer at debris a quartermile away, beyond the orange and white, wood and metal barricades that police put up on Middlebelt and Smith roads near Metro Airport.

Smith shared the field glasses with his brother-in-law, Dan Schultz, who lives nearby on Middlebelt. "Remember, Dan, how there used to be grass on the hill by that viaduct," Smith, squinting through the lenses, said to his brother. "Well it aid't there anymore. It's burnt to hell and back."

Nearby, about a dozen workers, on break, stood near the Federal Mogul plant on the corner. Some talked among themselves. Others looked down Middlebelt toward a wrecked car and shared a pair of binoculars.

As planes roared overhead, gawkers came and went. The group included adult couples, kids on bikes and a father pulling his son who sat

Parker, whose wife works at the airport National Car Rental, admits he has been nervous living near the airport. Flight 255 would have flown over his house, he said.

"I wanted to ask the landlord to lower the rent because we're living in a danger zone," he said, half-smil-

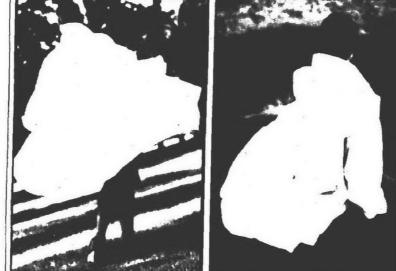

ANOTHER MAN, carrying a motorcycle helmet, said he rode his bike from the eastside. He declined to give his name.

"I heard there was people down here stealing stuff," he said. "Man, that's crazy.

Police arrested seven people for looting at the crash scene.

Gary Stollak, a clinical psychologist and Michigan State University professor, said the most troublesome gawkers are those who travel distances especially to see damage.

Theirs is more than just a passing

Following the explosion Bruce got on the phone to tell someone to call WCS (the Wayne County Sheriff's office) and ran like hell to the back of the lot." Garage employees also rushed to the rear area.

"When I saw it, the plane was ground," Morgan said. "It was on fire in the sky.'

THE HERTZ employees were prevented from getting near the crash site because of a chain-link fence along the rear of the lot, but what in a battered, red, "Radio Flyer" wagon. They talked of rumors, theories and news reports.

THOUSANDS OF gawkers flocked to the airport Sunday evening after Fight 255 went down in flames. Police set up dozens of roadblocks and chased curiosity seekers from the scene

Psychologists, of course, offer various theories on why people are drawn to the scene of a disaster. Some say it's simply curiosity, others say gawkers seek to overcome their dreary lives.

Alvin Parker, 27, walked to the barricades from his home on Smith Street. He had stories about the plane crash.

"We had been home about 10 minutes when it hit," said Parker. "(My wife and I) thought it was a tornado. She grabbed one kid, I grabbed the other, and we headed toward the basement.

interest, Stollack said. This group includes people who "lead lives of quiet desperation" and are seeking thrills.

Still others live helpless, impotent lives, and enjoy seeing people hurt, Stollak said.

"At the lowest level, these are people who go to see pit bull and chicken fights," he said.

Still others seek status in attending such tragedies. They can tell stories to friends afterward, he said.

SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGIST and Oakland University professor Ronald Hansen had a different view. He said: "In fact, I don't know why people are drawn to such things."

But he said part of the attraction is the movement and interesting activity.

"People are drawn to that because of its novelty," Hansen said. "It's not necessarily a negative thing either."

Northwest Airline crews on their daily flights aren't discussing the details of last Sunday night's disaster at Metropolitan Airport. But it's on their minds like a recurring nightmare.

"I think all of us are feeling what everybody went through on that aircraft during those last few moments," Northwest Capt. Robert Brunson said Wednesday.

But they're not talking about it while they're flying, "at least not initially.

Brunson has ever been associated with. It's difficult to describe how he and other crew members are being affected, he said. "Obviously, it's very sobering.

"I THINK WE all forget the possibility that something like this can happen. We kind of push it back in our own minds. It takes something like this to wake you up. You say 'Yes, this is a very serious business we're involved in and . . . this can happen.

"I heard a passenger comment yesterday that 'now we really appreciate nice landings and nice flights." "

Brunson said one thing that struck him "last night on the way back from Dallas/Fort Worth was how respectful everybody was being to us - passengers, crews from other airlines, everyone. Maybe it was my imagination, but it seemed like there was a certain softness."

Northwest employees and their families spent Sunday night and Monday frantically trying to find out how many of their colleagues had been passengers on Flight 255.

EXPERTS AGREE that the days and months to come will bring painful flashbacks, denial and prolonged depression to lives touched by the accident. Responses will vary, from firefighter to grieving mother, from sheriff to orphan. But all must now confront the fiery death of friends and family as a fact of life.

"The gradual awareness of the loss will begin to penetrate," said psychiatrist Elliot Luby of Southfield.

"And you may see rage toward the airline, toward God, and that's frequently accompanied by guilt.

"For those people who lost an entire family, it is just too shattering to know what their reaction will be."

In the hours after the tragedy, counselors and clergy began to console the families and "debrief" the professionals working to fill the makeshift morgue at the Nomads Flying Club hangar.

Caudill, marketing public relations manager of Dayton International Airport, flew into the Detroit area Monday morning to find out how airport officials were dealing with the media after the Northwest Airlines Flight 255 crash.

The person she wanted to talk to was Mike Conway, the airport's public relations director. But by 7.30 p.m. Monday, she had yet to see him. Caudill contacted airport adminis-

"The first thing I have to find out is does anybody else want one. My neighbors say yes. I think it's an absolute must. McClumpha Park couldn't be more perfect for it."

McCourt moved to Plymouth from a suburb of Chicago.

"Our community was probably the size of Livonia and we supported two public pools. I have three small kids - 7, 5 and 4 - and nowhere to take them swimming.

"There's the Colony Swim Club. They have quite a waiting list to join and it's expensive. The other alternative is Murray's Lake. It's a beach, not a pool. It's kind of far out.

"KIDS DON'T want to be in an indoor high school in summer. They want to be outside."

An outdoor pool would attract virtually all segments of the community - families with young children, older kids who want to swim competitively or hang out and adult exercisers, she added.

Lawsuits pending in airliner tragedy

"We're preparing the action now," Schaden said Tuesday. "The people aren't protected in the investigation process. Filing a lawsuit early gives us access to the investigation team."

New Jersey-based Associated Aviation Underwriters, the lead insurer for Northwest Airlines, already has "a team of about a half-dozen claims people here, have established a command post at the site and are standing by, lending its support in whatever way it can," said a spokesman from the Detroit area office of the company in Troy.

Attempts to reach Peter McGee. director of claims for the insurance firm, were unsuccessful,

MOST OF THE CASES resulting from Flight 255 will be settled through negotiations rather than by jury verdicts or court judgments, according to attorney Pamela Shea. Shea, who has represented the victims of aviation industry accidents in the past, is a partner in the Bloomfield Hills law firm of Beier, Howlett, Hayward, McCann, Jones, Kingsepp and Shea.

"In my view, Northwest has a very substantial liability as a result of this," said Shea. "I don't know the cause of the crash, but the fact is that all of the people on that plane were innocent victims. Clearly there's a responsibility that flows from Northwest to its passengers."

About 80 percent of all lawsuits are resolved through negotiated settlements "and this kind of litigation isn't really any different. Although sometimes it takes quite a while, two years or more," Shea added.

Attorney Rockwood Bullard III of Lyon, Colbert and Bullard of Rochester, has represented defendants in air disaster cases in the past There will be many other defendants, such as the companies that made the parts for the modified DC9, he predicted.

Schaden said he hadn't yet decided whether to file his lawsuit or lawsuits in state or federal court. Bullard said he expects many of the cases from the crash to be filed in Wayne County Circuit Court.

"I WOULD BE SURPRISED to see litigation in a case such as this concluded in less than two years." Bullard continued. "I would also be surprised if there wasn't a concerted effort on the part of the airline to contact all of the victims' families to make an effort to settle and also to do everything it can to help them."

The amounts sought in aviation disaster lawsuits "depends so much on the person or persons killed," said Schaden. "For instance, if you're survived by a wife and three or four children, with a work expectancy of 30 years and making $50,000 a year. the loss in wages alone would be $1.5 million

"But if you married no one, sired no one and had no job, the non-economic loss to his parents might range from $30,000 to $500,000."

In the case of the Briggs family, Schaden said the amount that will be sought hasn't been determined. "We're still investigating." The Briggs family, formerly from De troit, wase returning home to Arizona after a vacation in Michigan.

Don Briggs, 43, was director of the General Motors proving ground in Mesa, Ariz. His wife, Sharon, was in her early 40s. Their children were Matthew, 14, and Megan, 8.

Bell said family members went to the airport Sunday as soon as news reports began broadcasting the disaster.

"In the beginning, it was very frustrating," she said. "The media seemed to get more information than us. We walked around in a fog.

"Then we came to appreciate the 5 o'clock news. It gave us something physical to identify with. To accept something like this, you need to look at things."

On Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. Bell made another trip to the Wayne County Medical Examiner's office in an attempt to identify the remains of their son. Funeral arrangements

Balloonists avoid new Island Lake port

By Penny Wright special writer

Efforts to turn Island Lake State Recreation Area into a busy launch site for hot-air balloons have netted little response. Chief reason: costly liability insurance.

Park manager John O'Dell said only one area balloonist has registered to use the site located in Livingston County south of 1-96.

The balloonport is not flourishing as expected, and we are disappointed with the turnout. We had hoped that spectators could count on seeing halloons launched at regular intervals," O'Dell said.

The balloonport, Michigan's first state park launch site designated for hot-air balloons, opened on June 7 with a well-attended dedication ceremony

"About 350 spectators and 20 to 25 balloons were at the site. Even though weather conditions kept the balloons from lifting off that day, we saw a tremedous interest in using the site," said O'Dell.

"LIABILITY INSURANCE is the main obstacle to using the balloon-port," said Waterford Township balloonist Joe DeRosa. He is president of the Southeast Michigan Balloon Association.

DeRosa praised the Department of Natural Resources for turning the three-acre Meadow Site into a wellmaintained launch base complete with a covered picnic shelter, restroom facilities, fresh water and parking spaces. But he said DNR's policy regarding liability insurance was causing balloonists to fly elsewhere.

Besides requesting the purchase of a $25 annual permit, the department requires balloon pilots to add Island Lake Recreation Area to their insurance coverage before using the site. That requirement is similar to asking you to put me on your car insurance policy," said DeRosa.

"Nobody knows what adding the park to their insurance will mean in terms of costs and liability. Becuase it is a questionable subject, people are shying away." he said, noting DNR waived the insurance requirement for the dedication.

DeRosa said insurance is the biggest problem in the balloon industry. With only 4,000 balloons insured in the country, and only one definite insurer handling the policies, balloonists are very nervous about this whole issue

OTHER AREA balloonists expressed similar views about using the Island Lake balloonport.

SEMBA member Terry Stanton of Novi said many area balloonists are balking at the insurance requirement. "I've talked to a dozen balloonists who say, 'No way am I going to name another party on my insurance policy."

Stanton indicated he would use the site if the insurance requirement were waived. "It's a perfect place for my launches and they've done a great job providing a good spot," he said.

Livonia balloonist Jon Barberis said the park's insurance policy is unusual.

anything for launching," he said $13,000-$17,000 new), other major Most balloonists launch without expenses of the sport were insurance, propane fuel and gasoline for the chase vehicle, Boring said Boring was optimistic the insurance issue will be resolved, and eventually the Island Lake balloonport will get more use

"It's a very good site with easy landing places. Balloonists try to fly over scenic areas - lakes, forests, farms - with good landing sites. As more development takes place, I think the balloonport will be used," he said.

Island Lake manager O'Dell is also optimistic about the balloon-port's potential Though recognizing that insurance is a stumbling block.

THE BIG STORY from Sunday's tragedy is obvious. In lives lost, it is the nation's second worst air crash. No longer is Metro the only large-city airport without such a disaster. (Previously, Michigan's worst airplane crash wasn't even at Metro: it was nearly 30 years ago at Tri-City Airport near Saginaw where the death count was one third of Sunday's.)

Some questions must be answered in the wake of Sunday's crash and the spate of calamities and near-disasters that have beset the air travel industry in recent years.

Let's try saying 'hats on' to corps

HE PLYMOUTH FIFE and Drum Corps is in need of some $40,000 for new uniforms.

The corps uniform (which will cost about $500 each to replace) is a replica of that worn by George Washington's Life Guard (1776-1783). The current uniforms were purchased through a federal grant available for the 1976 Bicentennial.

The corps uses 10-hole wooden fifes and hand-made rope tension snare and bass drums. The music played by the corps spans the 17th through 20th centuries

Founded in 1971 as the first fife and drum corps in the Midwest, the Plymouth Fife and Drum Corps has earned a reputation as a seasoned musical company.

The corps is made up of students, ages 12-18 from the Plymouth-Canton area, who are dedicated to preserving the heritage and art of fifing and drumming.

DURING A SINGLE season, which runs from April to September, the corps travels 7,000 to 8,000 miles to communities in Michigan and other states giving 50 to 60 performances.

The corps has performed in Washington. D.C., New York, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Canada. This year, as in years past, the corps entertained in the villages and towns along Michigan's shoreline.

Members recently returned from a one-week trip in Massachusetts, which also included Ontario, Canada and New York. At Fall River, Mass., the corps played five performances in one day. The corps also was the opening act at Boston College for a show honoring Polaroid's 50th Anniversary and featured the Pointer Sisters and Steve Allen. At Plymouth, Mass., the corps delivered a proclamation from Plymouth Mayor William Robinson.

O&E Thursday, August 20, 1987

Every spring, the group holds a Bowl-A-Thon to raise money for traveling expenses. This year they raised $6,000. It costs about $12,000 to go on a tour, and the corps' annual budget is about $26,000. Because much of the 45 members' fund-raising efforts are to meet tour costs, the raising of money for new uniforms depends on the community for support.

IN PROMOTING the fund-raiser, the corps has performed for local service clubs and will send out a mailing to 500 people.

So far, not that much has been raised but some service club pledges are still anticipated.

The corps, which will gladly accept all donations, has put together a list of suggested donation and what each will purchase: one uniform, $500; coat, $250; hat, $100; pants, $75; vest, $50; and jabot (a trimming attached to the front of a blouse, bodice or shirt) $25.

Checks can be sent to: Plymouth Fife and Drum Corps Uniform Fund, P.O. Box 176, Plymouth, MI 48170. The chairman of the fund-raising campaign is Ron Loiselle of Plymouth, a business consultant and former city commissioner.

If you have lived in Plymouth for just a little while, you have seen the corps perform in parades and at Plymouth Fall Festival. You may want to express appreciation for the group's musical skills, dedication, and finesse in representing Plymouth throughout the state and nation.

Instead of saying "hats off" to such a fine group, consider buying a hat. Make it "hats on" instead.

DID YOU THINK it was spontaneous?

Most colleges in Michigan and many across the country will jack up tuition this fall by substantial amounts. This occurs after several years of 0-5 percent increases.

As this tale unfolds, keep in mind:

 Michigan public colleges still charge some of the highest tuitions in the nation.

• The current rate of consumer inflation was 2 percent percent last year and less than 5 percent this year.

WAYNE STATE University set an example during the recession by freezing tuitions. It upset other schools, but President David Adamany, correctly, saw tuition as a real barrier to low-income students.

Gov. James Blanchard twisted arms in 1983-86 to persuade public colleges to hold tuitions to the rate of inflation. He sought to use increased state revenues from a) the improving economy and b) the '83 temporary personal income tax increase, to pump an increasing proportion of Michigan's resources into education.

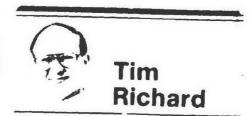

And the voters rewarded him accordingly in 1986.

So what's happening this year? The University of Michigan-Dearborn got a 6-percent increase in state funds. But it saw fit to boost tuition and fees 7.9-8 percent. Chancellor William Jenkins' reason: "Faculty salaries are our number one priority for the seventh consecutive budget cycle.'

Even good ol' Wayne State goi 6.1 percent more from the state and saw fit to increase tuition 5 percent.

MICHIGAN STATE is due for 6.1 percent more from the state, and Western Michigan University 6.6 percent more. Both are increasing tuitions in the 9-percent ballpark.

Closer to home, Oakland Community College kicked tuition up 11.5 percent.

Vice Chancellor Anthony Jarson argued that OCC's operating costs per student and total tuition are still below neighboring districts. He had to settle for a 5-1 vote from the board of trustees and flak from student groups.

Some OCC officials see raising tuition as a good-faith way to prove they've exhausted every other revenue enhancement method before asking voters for a property tax increase. Others abhor the idea of a property tax increase.

Schoolcraft College, where voters approved a general purpose tax increase last year, lifted tuition just 2.5 percent. Nevertheless, some trustees kicked up a fuss.

MY POINT is that college officials give lots of different reasons but always the same answer: a tuition increase. I'm suspicious.

One reply you hear is that umpteen percent of the students are getting scholarships or federal aid anyway. That doesn't wash.

Read the U.S. Constitution, whose 200th anniversary we're celebrating this year. There's not a word about education's being a federal responsibility. and the Reagan Administration has cut those programs.

Read the Constitution of Michigan, whose 150th anniversary we're also celebrating. There's a lengthy article on educational responsibility.

It was odd that so many colleges raised tuitions by such big percentages all at once. I can't figure it out yet. But I have a hunch the trend is bad.

Great Lakes ships have own kind of beauty

ALTHOUGH HOBBYISTS come in many shapes and sizes, I long have shunned such identity in the belief that physical and/or mental exercise - often involving tools - is part and parcel of such dedication.

But it's said that to every rule there's an exception, and my ears perked up when Bill Luke and Ed Schwartz described their own particular breed of hobbyists as "essentially a bunch of lazy guys who like to sit on the shore and watch the boats go by."

It was an understatement, of course. What binds these two and their more than a thousand fellow members of the Marine Historical Society of Detroit together is their fascination with the lore of the Great Lakes.

What they really are is historians, albeit amateur volunteers, who translate the passing parade of vessels that so many of us take for granted into volta umes of information and pictures of ships that have sailed on the inland seas since La Salle's Griffon, the first sailing vessel ever launched upon the Great Lakes, went down in 1679. No trace has ever been found of ship or crew.

So up to date is their research that it was from the recent June edition of the organization's journal, edited by the Rev. Peter Vander Linden of Westland, that I learned the U.S. Navy frigate USS Stark, attacked in the Persian Gulf May 17 with the loss of 37 lives, was visitor here two years ago, docking during the 1985 Freedom Festival in Windsor's Dieppe Park.

SCHWARTZ and Luke, who steered me into these literary waters, both are long-time Birmingham residents. Schwartz is the current president of the society, Luke is a past president and now treasurer.

As a further biographical tidbit, Schwartz is owner and president of Great Lakes Laboratories Inc., in Livonia, manufacturing chemical cleaning products for industrial, household and institutional use. Luke, who retired in 1975 as vice president of the Detroit Bank & Trust Co., calls him "Mr. Suds."

This society was founded in August 1944 when a group of people interested in Lakes traffic and its history were drawn together, even though very few owned any kind of a boat themselves. My informants say that still is the case.

The present roster lists enthusiasts on both sides of the American and Canadian border from Quebec and Montreal to Duluth and Chicago, and all major cities in between. Dues are only $15 a year and if your interest lies in the same vein an application to Luke at 20255 Wellesley Blvd., Birmingham 48010, will get prompt attention.

Let me caution you, however, the emphasis is on U.S. and Canadian vessels with a positive link, through construction or ownership, to the Great Lakes, not on the visiting "salties," as Schwartz and Luke are wont to call them, which come prowling inland from shipping lanes of the world's oceans.

CONVERSATION with such devotees is dotted with references to ships that have floundered, such as the palatial Eastland, which rolled over and pinned 812 passengers inside shortly after leaving her Chicago dock in 1915, to the tragic loss of the Edmund Fitzgerald and all her crew Nov. 10, 1975 on Lake Superior

Despite the tragedies and mysteries of the deep, to say nothing of depletion of the commercial Lakes fleet due to various economic factors, the love of the grandeur of it all endures. If a single vessel and finality of the era she represented is mourned, it's the South American. Remember her?

Until October 1967, she regally sailed the Great Lakes for more than half a century, carrying more than half a million passengers between Detroit, Chicago, Montreal and Duluth. Her name came to represent an elegance that no longer exists.

"Now she's rotting in terrible disgrace, beyond repair, at Camden, N.J.," Luke told me.

A history of every boat ever built on the Great Lakes and ultimately lost in enemy action is one of the upcoming projects for these men and their jolly mates. Their work can be characterized by Schwartz as "a fun hobby and it's cheap.

If Longfellow was right when he wrote of "the beauty and mystery of the ships, and the magic of the seas," as he was quoted in "Great Lakes Ships We Remember," count me in ... particularly if it means just lazing on the shore.

Border officials' actions racist

To the editor:

I am writing to express my outrage at what I interpret to be clearly racist treatment by U.S. immigration officials at the Detroit-Windsor border.

A few days ago I went to Windsor for the evening with two friends. As usual we were stopped at the border on the way home and asked our country of citizenship. We were all U.S. citizens.

We were then asked for identification. We all had our driver's licenses. We were asked our country of birth. One of my friends was born in Detroit, the other in Taiwan. I was born in South Africa. When I said I was born in South Africa we were told to pull over and go into the immigration office.

My friend, a white male born in Detroit, was not questioned further than his country of citizenship and place of birth. The immigration officials, however, did not believe that my Taiwanese friend or I were American citizens. We gave her several pieces of I.D., year and place of naturalization, and any other information she wanted. The only thing we did not have was our proof of citizenship - our naturalization certificate.

We were told that the computer system was down, so our naturalization could not be verified; therefore we had to prove to them that we were American citizens. I told the officer, as I was informed during my naturalization process, that as an American citizen I was not required to carry proof of citizenship when crossing the Canadian border. She agreed with me but said the officer outside did not believe I was an American citizen so, therefore, it was my burden to prove to them that I was an American citizen.

I told her I had been living in the United States for 15 years and that I was a student at the University of Michigan. She said that doesn't tell her a thing about my citizenship and that I may have to stay there, perhaps all night, until I prove to her that I am a citizen of the U.S. My Taiwanese friend crimination of people of color.

and I were harassed for 45 minutes before we were released.

I am appalled at the racist treatment I received at the immigration border. Simply because I am not white and Anglo-Saxon, my word cannot be taken concerning my citizenship. As a nonwhite, I am expected to carry proof of my citizenship, whereas a white American is not. The next time we gasp when reading a story about black South Africans being forced to carry passbooks by the repressive South African regime, we should stop and consider our own officials.

The fact that I have no discernible accent should be irrelevent. However, it causes me to wonder whether persons of color with foreign accents might be treated even more harshly. I realize this is a minor incident compared to how non-citizen, Spanish-speaking immigrants are harassed, both on the borders and within the borders, since the new immigration laws. The treatment I received is reflective of an overall trend of increased harassment and dis-

It angers me when I read in the newspapers the reference to third world non-Americans as aliens but no such reference to European immigrants. This reference, with a very negative connotation, means being treated as less than human. I got a taste of this last weekend at the Detroit-Windsor border when my Taiwanese friend and I felt like dehumanized aliens. The use of this term itself is racist in that it is used exclusively for those of third world countries.

At a time in our country when racial tensions are high, one might hope government officials would be sensitive to the feeling of minorities, especially those working in the immigration office and dealing with people of color continually

The treatment I received at the immigration office will do nothing to ease tensions in this country. As a minority, I expect the same rights and privileges as any other American citizen. But it's obvious that that does not hold.

Tax shift or shaft? State school proposal in trouble

By Tem Henderson staff writer

Three local legislators said they doubter a plan to restructure financial support for public education will become law, but they agreed with area school superintendents that something needs to be done about inequities in the property-tax system

The latest proposal to restructure support for education was announced this month by a subcommittee of the state Board of Education's school finance commission.

Under the proposal, a statewide school tax would be levied on industrics and other businesses. Currently, these businesses only pay taxes to local school districts.

The proposed statewide tax system would be accompanied by a sales tax increase from 4 to 6 percent. If approved, the changes would produce a property tax decrease for homeowners

Because the proposal calls for a state sales tax increase, it requires approval by state voters.

"I'M STRONGLY OPPOSED to the plan. It's just a warmed-over tax-base sharing scheme," said State Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville. "Those communities that have welcomed industry will have to share and.

their tax base with the bedroom communities that have not."

He said he was leery of state funding in all districts because "where state funding goes, state control follows.

Currently, the state guarantees each school district money per stu-dent based on a complex formula. If communities do not have a sufficient tax base, the state puts them "in-formula," and gives them money to meet a minimum per student funding level. Districts with better tax bases are "out of formula," and receive no state support.

The Livonia Public Schools, for example, are out of formula Plymouth-Canton, Garden City and Wayne-Westland are in-formula.

State Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, said she opposes the plan.

"Ninety percent of property taxes are kept right here in Livonia," she said. "As soon as we start shifting to a sales tax, the money goes to the state of Michigan's general fund."

Bankes said that property taxes remain a federal tax deduction and that Livonia homeowners ranked first in the state last year under Michigan's homestead property tax rebate. Sales taxes are no longer deductible under federal law, she said.

STATE REP. JUSTINE Barns, D-Westland, said she feared state control of local school insues if the state's role in school funding grows. She said she favored sections of the proposed tax plan.

We need to lower residential property taxes," Barns said. "And there has to be some reform (in spending on pupils from district to district).

She said she has mixed feelings about a sales tax increase.

"People used to say a sales tax was regressive, that it taxed things people needed the most," Barns said. But most of the states are higher. I just don't know whether it's a fair tax or not. I haven't seen enough on it, yet. There's no legislation in place and no analysis of it."

State Rep. John Bennett, D-Redford Twp., said he could support an increased sales tax, but that a statewide tax on businesses with a redistribution of money to school districts was, "the kookiest idea I ever heard in my life. It sounds good on paper and it sounds good to the news media, but it won't work."

All the legislators said they doubted the proposal would become law. They said it probably would not survive legislative scrutiny and even if it did, voters would not approve it.

"I don't see it (a sales tax increase) as a viable solution because people won't vote for it," Bennett said.

"I'd be surprised if any such pro-posal passed the legislature," Geake said.

The plan now goes to the full finance commission, where a report for the Board of Education will be drafted. The board will consider the plan and decide whether to lobby the egislature for passage of the plan.

LOCAL SCHOOL administrators said a new method to finance public education is needed.

"There's no question we're going to have to do something. There are great inequities," Plymouth-Canton Superintendent John Hoben said.

'It doesn't make much sense for us to spend $3,200 a student and Southfield can spend $6,000 . . . Almost any method of financing schools has flaws. The question is, which is the least flawed? Property tax is fairer than a sales tax. A sales tax taxes the poor more than the rich. It's not proportional." But Dennis O'Neill, superintendent of the Wayne-Westland schools, said, "I think it is a step in the right direction. It's a way to get more equity in funding throughout the state, but it's not a perfect solution."

Michael Wilmot, superintendent of the Garden City schools, said, "I strongly support any effort to bring equity, but I'm leery until I see more details."

Athletes have plenty of spirit

By Julie Brown staff writer

Western Wayne County was wellrepresented at the recent Seventh International Summer Games of the Special Olympics.

A Wayne-Westland softball team brought home the bronze medal for third place in the international event. The games were held July 31 through Aug. 8 at the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College in South Bend, Ind.

"It was fantastic," said Susie Pidsosny, Special Olympics area direc-tor for Wayne County. "The kids all just really had a super time."

The Special Olympics program provides opportunities for athletic competition and achievement among mentally retarded people. The winning Wayne-Westland team included 14 players ranging in age from their mid-teens to early 20s. Each member of the coed team received a bronze medal.

Coaches for the softball team were: Bill Devonker, Shelly Phillips, Charlie Hallman, Marlene McGee and Carol Painter.

PIDSOSNY WAS able to attend the games in South Bend for several days. The opening ceremonies for the international event were impressive, she said; seeing the spirit displayed by the athletes was also impressive.

"You can't help but share in their enthusiasm."

The approximately 5,000 athletes at the international event represent- upper age limit for Special Olympics ed all areas in the U.S. and some 70 other countries

"They don't speak the language, but when they get together they have a way of communicating," said Pidsosny, a Canton resident.

The relative closeness of South Bend made it possible for more local people to attend and to cheer for the local athletes, she said. This was Pidsosny's first time at an international competition; she plans to attend others.

Suburban Wayne County had some 25 or 30 people at the international event, including coaches and people who went "just to go and see what was going on." Michigan had some 90 athletes who competed at South Bend, representing the 33 geographical areas of Michigan Special Olym-

Athletes competed in a number of areas, including track and field, gymnastics, weight lifting, basketball, soccer and swimming. Exhibitions were held in equestrian events, volleyball and table tennis.

ATHLETES ALSO participated in individual skills tests, receiving medals for first through third place and ribbons for fourth through eighth place. Individual skills tests were in such areas as base running, throwing a ball, hitting and fielding.

"Every athlete that attended came home with something," Pidsosny said. Special Olympics athletes participating in the games at South Bend were 8 and older; there is no competition.

The Wayne-Westland softball team was the only team from western Wayne County at the international competition. A great deal of community support made it possible for the local athletes to attend, Pidsosny said.

Members of the winning team are: Donnell Dukes, Jennifer Tamas, Theresa Collins, Roy Mohrlock, Aaron Shackelford, Marlana Miastkowski, Kelli Dayle, Gary Wierzbicki, Michael Woodman, Neal Woodman, Michael Lundy, David Paul Reed, Crisstie Gwizdak and Chris Savage.

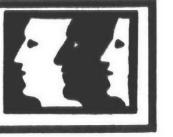

The number of Special Olympics athletes who can participate in international events is limited, according to Pidsosny. If a team from suburban Wayne County hadn't attended, the area probably would have been limited to one or two individual athletes.

The Wayne-Westland team had won a gold medal at the state softball tournament in 1986, Pidsosny said. The team's name was then drawn from among those placed in a hat: the local athletes were pleased to have been chosen, as were volunteers and staff people involved in Special Olympics.

We had a fantastic time." Pidsosny said. "I'm really pleased that our team was allowed to go."

(Volunteers are needed for Special Olympics in Wayne County. For more information, call Susie Pidsosny, 981-2300.)

Goals

Covering papal visit is a dream come true

By Loraine McClish staff writer

REAMS DO COME true. Goal setting works All you've ever heard or read about visualization or guided imagery is valid

Sharon McDonald dreamed, set the goal, visualized herself as an interviewer of national celebrities and the reality out-did the dream when she was chosen as one of four reporters to have exclusive coverage of Pope John Paul's visit here in September for Catholic Television Network

'I didn't receive any instructions at all from the archdiocese (of Detroit) They're letting me be as creative as I can be They're just turning me loose. I'm going to have pretty much free rein of how 1 am going to do this, from the time he arrives until he leaves (Friday and Saturday. Sept 18-19)," said McDonald, who is known to cable television viewers as the hostess of "Community Upbeat."

I visualized inteviewing a national figure --- hardly an international figure I have friends who are worried whether or not they're going to get tickets to see the Pope in the Silverdome and out of the thousands of Catholic women in Detroit I was asked to do this Visualize yourself as successful in whatever area you want and you will be. It works," she said

Added to McDonald's elation is the possibility that the programming produced here will be shown nationally or internationally through Catholic Television Network

Added to that is the anticipation of working with television crews from NBC. ABC and CBS.

Added to that is more free rein for month of gathering pre-visit human interest stories that will fit into the package when it is produced.

A few ideas germinating for stories she will tape in August are interviews with those who will come here to see the Pope from long distances at financial sacrifice; what role the auto companies will play in providing transportation; interviews with NOW (National Organization for Women) members who are planning picket demonstrations throughout the visit.

"COMMUNITY Upbeat" got its start at MetroVision in Farmington Hills less than four years ago and within a short period of time steadily grew in popularity to be seen regularly in Farmington and Farmington Hills, Bloomfield Hills, Birmingham, West Bloomfield, Southfield, Novi, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth, Canton and Westland.

When the weekly interview-show was picked up by Catholic Television Network, about a year ago, it spread throughout southeast Michigan MetroVision gives a "conservative estimate" of its reaching 500,000 homes

The show is produced sometimes at MetroVision in Farmington Hills. sometimes at MetroVision in Livonia and sometimes at Pastoral Telecommunications Center, owned and operated by the Archdiocese of Detroit. and until recently used only by the Catholic clergy.

McDonald, a member of Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church, was the first layman to produce a show at Pastoral

What we do on 'Community Upbeat' all comes under the umbrella of the church. We promote community involvement. We do a lot of educational work, giving insight, helping viewers understand what's going on behind the scenes in a lot of non-profit, charitable agencies. We help get the message across. We just finished a program on cystic fibrosis, what it is, what the foundation is all about," she said. "That's all part of the work of the church.

When McDonald uses the word 'we" she is speaking of "Community Upbeat's" three-member team. McDonald is journalist and on-camera interviewer. Her behind-thecamera partner since the show's onset is Denise Swope. Terry Kelley, a documentarian and feature film producer, joined the two last year for their biggest venture up to that time, a longer than four-hour video on cleaning up the Rouge River, and stayed on board.

McDonald calls the show "educational, informative, positive, upbeat, with the goal to motivate people to get involved in their community. She adds, "Everything we do is done with a positive attitude.

McDONALD'S dream began with "a sort of mid-life-crisis-what-am-Igoing-to-do-with-my-life-now musings," she said

The Farmington Hills resident majored in both communications and education while in college, but never got around to using any of her communications know-how until she volunteered as a writer for MetroVision four years ago

She taught at St. Michael Elementary School in Southfield. She taught science to students in the Plymouth-Canton system for two years. Last year she designed the television studio for Clarenceville High School, produced some public service announcements for the Clarenceville Schools, and conducted the first twoway television teacher-training program in the area between teachers in Clarenceville and Livonia, with the cooperation of MetroVision.

This fall she will teach Clarenceville High School's first class of students in television production.

She says she has never worked harder and never enjoyed life more. Juggling two careers is not a prob-

The musical talents of St. Agatha's parish in Redford Township will be well represented in the hours before the papal mass at the Pontiac Silverdome Sept 19

Friends, a contemporary Christian choir will perform for at least 45 minutes prior to the late afternoon mass

We look at it as a spiritual revival day. We re excited from that standpoint." said Mark Radeke, music director for St Agatha Church and arranger and keyboard player for the Christian contemporary choir

Musicians culled from St. Agatha include drummer Yves Levesque, a parishioner, kindergarten teacher Lorelei Darga, principal flautist, and guitarist Joe Hassell, a maintenance worker

FRIENDS LEAD vocalist, the Rev. Joe Dailey, currently chaplain at Western Michigan University, was formerly assigned to St Agatha Church

Dailey and Radeke, of Farmington, are the core of Friends, which has produced two albums and has a third one scheduled for release next January

Friends was formed in 1972 when Dailey was studying for the priesthood at St. John Seminary in Plymouth A guitarist and songwriter, he met two women vocalists through the University of Michigan chorus and the three collaborated on Friends first album, "Happy Are the Children of the Lord Radeke, also studying for the priesthood at St. John Seminary, met Dailey in 1974.

"He wrote the words and the melodies. I gave them harmonic structure and played keyboards." Radeke said

THROUGH THE years, Friends has played several Catholic benefits - often with the faces of the choir changing. But always. Dailey and Radeke were at the core

In 1976, when Radeke chose not to to the Archdiocese of Detroit who a become a priest, he took the musical director's job at St Agatha

"(Dailey) and I never lost touch, Radeke said In 1976, Friends second album 'Speak To Your People" was produced Rounding out the vocalizing for the Silverdome gig will be the Rev. Bernard Hall, pastor of St. Jeseph parish in Muskegon; Pat Madden-Roth, involved with the music ministry in Albion, and Michelle Rego, director of music at St. Andrew Cathedral in Grand Rapids

Frank DiBlasi, director of the Oakway Symphony, will play trumpet The Rev Don Heydens will play bass. Licia Carlson, a 17-year-old violinist Radeke "discovered" performing at a funeral, will play with

"SHE'S A phenomenal talent, certainly up and coming." Radeke said. Friends was asked to perform before the papal mass by Bishop Dale Malczek, a regional bishop assigned overseeing the entire Michigan pa pal visit.

"The clergy respect what we do, said Radeke

Friends may perform for as long as 90 minutes, sometime between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Worshippers (an estimated 95,000) are expected to start filling the Silverdome about 10 a.m. Entertainment is being coordinated by Detroit personality Phil Marcus Esser

Radeke says despite the sensationalism being built around the event. he hopes the music of Friends will reach the faithful

"Our purpose is to help build the spirit," he said. "(Our program) will be primarily liturgical music with lots of audience participation. It's an honor to be involved It's a significant event in the lives of Catholics and Christians in Michigan."

For those not attending the papa! mass. Friends has tentatively scheduled a concert date at St Agatha in mid-January, to coincide with the release of the group's third album

Myths encourage use of handguns

the choir

In recent weeks, we have marked with shock and pain the deaths of little children caused by home accidents involving handguns. Meanwhle, crime and violence continue to take their toll of victims. Of all the concerns of our time, crime is the most pervasive source of anxiety for Ameicans in major metropolitan areas

If we hope to make Detroit and all other cities of America safe for their residents, then we must redouble our labors on behalf of controlling the proliferation of handguns.

Changing attitudes must accompany revised legislation. There is a widely held belief that handling a gun is a sign of maturity It is not manliness. Many fathers believe that every boy should know how to shoot. Guns often provide anxious adolescents with a sense of power that they are unable to discipline or control. One-half of all the crimes committed at gunpoint are perpetrated by people under the age of 19.

This perverse definition of maturity has left its imprint on our national myths. Frontier gunmen, who were illiterate scoundrels or paranoid killers, have been transformed into legendary heroes who provide the dramatic force of our films and who offer attractive models for our children's fantasies. Our media are now creating contemporary myths in which the brutal mercenaries of the Mafia are perceived as brave soldiers carrying out loyally the orders of a wise "godfather"

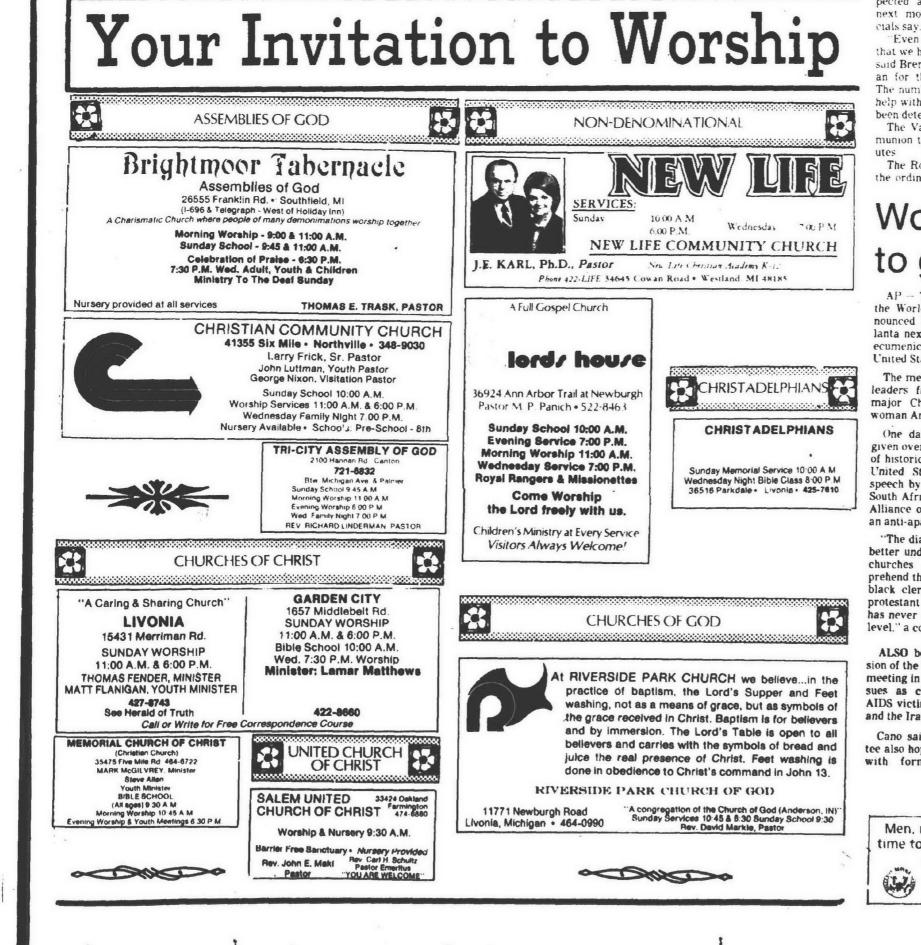

BEYOND THESE media sterotypes. Americans cling to false assumptions about guns which blind them to the desirability of outlawing such dangerous weapons The first argument states that guns protect our freedom, and the second that guns protect our homes. Neither can stand up under analysis.

The courts and the laws protect our homes. Due process guards our freedom in our complex society, it is citizen vigilance, right of peaceful assembly, the free dissemination of information, and the right to elect and remove officials that restrains the abuse of power by the government

A frequently used misleading argument is that the right to own a gun was enshrined by the Founding Fathers in the Constitution. The Second Amendment grants to each state the right to arm a militia in order to enforce law and order. "A well-regulated militia being necessary to the security of the free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

The amendment does not establish the right of individual citizens to own a gun. In this country, in our day, it is neither a constitutional necessity nor a matter of political prudence for citizens to own guns.

WHAT OF THE argument that guns protect our homes? Frightened about the rise of violent crime, many Americans have bought guns to assure the safety of their families As a consequence, they have increased and not lessened the physical danger which exists in their homes

Bullets fired at a burglar have a greater chance of wounding a child or a spouse than a thief. A gun will not go off accidentally if there are no guns at home to be played with. No one in a fit or depression will commit suicide with a gun if there is none in a dresser drawer In Detroit. more people died in one year from handgun accidents than were killed by nome-invading robbers in four

In order to combat the scourge of violence in our city and in our land. we should pass legislation limiting private ownership of handguns to those individuals who have an absolute need for them, based on occupa tion Federal legislation should be passed prohibiting the use of mails for the selling of handguns A massive eduction program should be launched sensitizing people to the destructive force of handguns. If we do not take these measures we shall find that the statistics on crime, like the stock-market index. will continue to rise Rubbi Irwin Groner is with Congregation Shaarey Zerek in the World Council of Churches announced Friday it will meet in Atlanta next month, the first time the ecumenical group has met in the United States in 18 years

World church leaders to gather Sept. 18-25

The meeting Sept. 18-25 will draw leaders from most of the world's major Christian churches. spokeswoman Andrea Cano said

One day of the meeting will be given over to a dialogue with leaders of historically black churches in the United States and will feature a speech by the Rev. Allan Boesak of South Africa, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches and an anti-apartheid leader.

"The dialogue is being held to better understand the historic black and to better comprehend the role and participation of black clergy and laity in mainline protestant churches. This dialogue has never taken place on an official level." a committee statement said.

ALSO beginning Sept. 16, a division of the WCC will hold a three-day meeting in Atlanta to discuss such issues as church responsibilities to AIDS victims, anti-apartheid efforts and the Iran-Contra affair.

Cano said the executive committee also hopes to schedule a meeting with former President Jimmy Four juveniles were arrested last week by Canton Police officers on stake out at the Canton Professional Plaza.

The surveillance team was set up because for the past several weeks there has been a rash of vandalism at the plaza, said Canton Police information officer Dave Boljesic.

The officers saw four boys begin to vandalize the building about 10 p.m. Aug. 14.

Two of the boys are age 14, two are 15, and all live in Canton. After the arrest, the boys were released to their parents pending a hearing in Wayne County Juvenile court, said Boljesic. Police are investigating whether they were involved in the other incidents.

This is the first in a series of monthly articles in which area financial planners review a local family's financial history and make general recommendations based on the volunteers' resources and goals. The information is for educational purposes only; references are not intended as discrimination or endorsements by Observer & Eccentric Newspapers or the advisers interviewed.

Having worked many years to provide for themselves and their family (which includes four children), Mr. and Mrs. B are beginning to see the proverbial "light at the end of the tunnel." Mr. B, the sole income earner, is looking forward to retirement within the next five to seven years. He and Mrs. B, ages 55 and 48, respectively, live in Farmington Hills. They have a son and a daughter in college, and two others have completed college.

Mr. B earns $55,000 per year, and the family has additional unearned income of approximately $24,000 in the form of interest, dividends, capital gains and tax-exempt income. Additionally, Mr. B is receiving a pension of $10,000 per year as a result of early retirement from a previous employer.

The B's have a mortgage on their home of $59,000, which was just refinanced to take advantage of lower interest rates. Their credit card balance is nominal. The B's have accumulated a significant amount of assets.

In addition to their residence and household furnishings, they have assets of cash and cash equivalents, and a combination of stocks, mutual bonds, single premium annuities and cash value of life insurance. Their total net worth is in excess of $700.000.

Mr. and Mrs. B have life insurance coverage of $10,000 on Mrs. B, and, in a combination of universal life, single premium endowment and retirement policies, approximately $390,000 of coverage on Mr. B. He also has a long-term disability income insurance policy, which provides benefits of $2,700 per month.

of accustomed standard of living '

FERRARA SUGGESTS that by properly allocating assets into the residuary trust, the unified credit in both estates can be used, thus eliminating estate taxes on both deaths.

"In this situation, if all assets, including life insurance proceeds (which will increase the value of the net estate to approximately $1 million), are paid to the surviving spouse, tax on the first death would still be zero because everything is being paid to the surviving spouse and is exempt under the 'marital deduction' of federal estate tax law. Without such a trust arrangement, on the death of the surviving spouse the tax would be approximately $153,000 (presuming an estate of $1 million). In the event that a living trust relationship is established, the tax would be zero.

In addition, the living trust can provide for the eventual distribution to all beneficiaries, including any distributions to children upon the death of both Mr. & Mrs. B. The children's trust can provide for immediate distribution of gifts if it is felt that the children are capable of handling such amounts of money, or can provide for a payout of income and principal over a specified period of time. Any special needs for particular children could be taken into account, as well as provisions for distributions to grandchildren in the event that one or more of the children died before their parents.

Ferrara recommends that the husband and/or spouse be the trustee and control the trust assets. A decision will need to be made as to who the successor trustee will be after the deaths of the husband and wife. Often a family member is used as a successor trustee, although it is common to use a banking trustee if it is desired to have an independent, professional administrator.

'The living trust can also aid in avoiding probate," Ferrara said. "If assets are titled in the name of the health, education and maintenance trust prior to death, those assets are not subject to the probate process." SO-CALLED "testamentary trusts" (trust provision within the will) do not avoid provate, but instead may increase the time of probate. "Because the testamentary trust is within the will, the estate is subject to probate. The probate process cannot be terminated until all provisions of the testamentary trust are completed, which could be a long time in the case of payment provisions for small children," Ferrara said.

To the extent that the gross estate exceeds $1.2 million (that amount of assets which can be protected by the unified credit of both spouses), it may be desirable to consider implementation of an irrevocable life insurance trust. One of more of the life insurance policies could be gifted to the irrevocable trust, which would have provisions for the payment of principal and income for the benefit of the surviving spouse and children of Mr. B. If Mr. B survives for at least three years after transfer of the policies, the proceeds of the policies would not be includible in his estate or his wife's, and would avoid estate tax on the deaths of both. During their lifetime, the life insurance policies are of little use to the couple, so they would be appropriate assets to give up in return for the substantial estate tax avoidance.

Trusts can minimize fedeal estate taxes, avoid probate, and provide for an orderly transition of assets to heirs and beneficiaries, but should be analyzed and discussed with experienced legal counsel," Ferrara said.

In the opinion of the planners, Mr. & Mrs. B have done an excellent job in accumulating assets for their long-term financial security. They suggest taking steps to protect this accumulation especially from the ravages of inflation and estate taxation. By making these adjustments, their financial security is enhanced, and they should be in even better shape in the future.

Both have wills, but no other estate planning documents. They have been paying for college costs for their children through Uniform Gifts to Minors accounts. The major concerns that they have indicated for their financial future are:

- providing for retirement;
- reducing income tax liability;
- building wealth;
- hedging against inflation;
- providing security for family.

Mr. B said he has ample time to manage his financial affairs, and his investment temperament would be characterized as relatively conservative. He has said that he has no desire to become involved in such highrisk investments as options or commodities.

He asks: "What is the proper balance of investments for me? Am I overly weighted in insurance investments and bonds? Should I balance my stock and bond portfolio?"

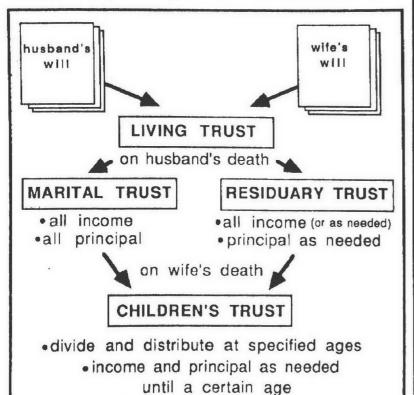

CERTIFIED financial planner Dan Boyce of the Center for Financial Planning, Birmingham, responds to these questions.

"I am concerned about the heavy concentration of assets in the bond market, particularly at this stage of federal estate taxes at death (or for gift taxes during lifetime) which will protect $600,000 of property from transfer taxes. In addition, any assets given by the person who died to a surviving spouse pass free of estate tax by virtue of a "marital deduction.

The implementation of a living or "revocable" trust with proper funding can avoid such estate tax. Mr. B is aware of such trusts but is unsure of how they work. Alan J. Ferrara of the law firm of Couzens, Lansky & Roeder of Southfield explains: "The living trust is designed to provide for both a 'marital trust' portion and a 'residuary trust' portion to the surviving spouse. (See diagram.)

The marital trust portion can be put under the full control of the spouse. The residuary trust portion also would be available for use as needed by the surviving spouse. But because there are minimal restrictions placed on the use of assets in this residuary trust, this portion would not be included in the estate of the surviving spouse. The restriction states that the surviving spouse can receive all income from the residuary trust, and also have the use of whatever principal is necessary for RANKIE LAINE has come a long way since he started out as a jazz singer. The vocalist, who turned 74 years old this year, still sings jazz, one of his favori'e things, but is better known to the public for his pop songs and even country-western hits.

"Who the hell knew I would become a big country-western favorite," said Laine cheerfully, by phone from his home in San Diego All of Laine's styles of singing will be on tap at 8 p.m. Saturday when he shares the stage with anothe: pop classic singer. Patti Page at the Meadow Brook Music Fest.val

"My first hit was Thees My Desire." he said, recalling the year he became a familiar name to the record-buying prolic 30 years ago "I was a jazz vocalist at the time I broke through. I was known as the first white soul singer that sang black, in '947. My roots were jazz-oriented.

In 1955, Elvis Presley came on the music scene, and he was called the first white singer who sang black

That same year, jazz musician Buck Clayton and Laine did an album "Jazz Spec." "It was one of the first 12-inch records on Columbia." Laine said. "It was a sensation in jazz, but Columbia wanted me in pop.

should have been better ironed out before the premiere.

For instance, a good deal of dialogue is lost due to inaudibility the sound is loud enough, but somehow just not refined enough in areas to allow comprehension.

The film is a little heavy-handed in the application of religious/Christ imagery and references. We see a crucified, bleeding statue of Christ four times throughout the film in various shots, ranging from long to close-up, apparently to emphasize the relationship of Jake the loner/ outcast to Christ.

Another example is the long, drawn-out battle scene of the townspeople of Sleepy Rock, who have pitted themselves against each other, instead of banding together against the plague.

THESE SCENES are underscored by the "Glory, Glory Hallelujah" refrain from "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and seem to emphasize a medieval mentality concerning purging evil through killing, as in The Crusades.

Indeed, the inhabitants of Sleepy Rock, garbed in their protective dark plastic garbage bags, head to toe, look a lot like medieval knights in armor wielding knouts and swords instead of their modern day counterparts known as Saturday night specials.

Cat lovers may also take some offense at the fate of certain felines in the film - another slightly overdone, yet inconsistent symbol - a throwback to Salem witchcraft days when cats, especially black cats, were hunted because of their association to witches.

finding evil would be acceptable, except that an indiscriminate tabby and calico get thrown in amongst the black cats, thereby diluting the symbol

On the positive side, "The Carrier" has some very commendable photography, most notably the stark, almost supernatural, or heavenly. lighting seen in doorways when Jake enters or leaves a room, as well as in an outdoor scene when he tells Treva that they should leave town In another scene filmed in a stable, the lighting is almost Kubrik like as if illuminates Treva (Jake's would-be girl) as she enters the stable

A lot of "mise en scene" (all that $. in the scene) of "The Carrier" is" reminiscent of the cult classic "Night of the Living Dead," most notably near the end of the film when the warring factions are trying to knock down the door of the white farmhouse containing what's left of the uninfected townspeople.

STEVE DIXON, the black doctor, trying to keep everyone calm, is also a parallel to the young black man in 'Night of The Living Dead." who battled the diseased corpses who came back to life to feed on the living.

Special effects in "The Carrier." most notably the disintegration scenes, are displayed very well, as are the acting/singing talents of Kimberly White as Eleanore, and Marina Seeman as the extremely terse and bizarrely named Aunt Syphillus.

Jake, played by Gregory Fortescue, is believably natural, while Treva, played by Stevie Lee, starts the . film a little hard-edged but promising. It seems as if she might have been given a little more dialogue to express her character better.

Bernstein is, undoubtedly, among the most successful contemporary American composers, if one measures success by recognition and exposure. For the most part, the fate of contemporary composers depends on the willingness of prominent conductors to perform their work. Bernstein overcame this hurdle by becoming a prominent conductor himself and one may wonder whether Bernstein's music is successful because of its quality or because of its promotion. While the role of effective promotion can't be denied, one is forced to acknowledge the quality of Bernstein's music after being exposed to it on many occasions.

Writers in spotlight

The Michigan Festival will present a gathering of Michigan Writers on two weekends, Aug. 21-23 and Aug. 27-30, on the campus at Michigan State University in East Lans-

Featured poets, fiction and screen writers with a Michigan connection will include Carolyn Forche, Donald Hall, John Woods, Gary Gildner, Philip Levine, Stuart Dybek, Jim Cash (Top Gun screenwriter), Diane Wakoski, Ed Hirsch, Charles Baxter, Lee Upton, Paulette C. White and Bill Bamberger.

A feature of the festival will be an open reading, where aspiring writers can read their work after the scheduled writers on each weekend. A small press book fair also will be in progress.

Evening readings are at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays of each weekend, with an afternoon reading at 3 p.m. Sundays, starting the open reading. Anyone may bring their own, original poetry fiction to read.

A Theodore Roethke Weekend" this Friday-Sunday focuses on the work and life of Saginaw poet Theodore Roethke. A film on Roethke and a panel discussion ensue Saturday afternoon. The next weekend will honor Ernest Hemingway with similar Saturday afternoon events.

Michigan Writers and all other Michigan Festival activities throughout its 10 days, Aug. 21-30, may be attended if you buy a $6 festival button before the festival and $8 at the gate.

Buttons are available at all TicketMaster outlets statewide and Quality Dairy stores in the Greater Lansing area.

The Michigan Writers component of the Michigan Festival is made possible through grants from the Michigan Council for the Humanities through the National Endowment for the Humanities as a part of Literary

Is there 2nd title in Salem's future?

Ken Johnson has a tough act to follow - his own.

He coached the Plymouth Salem girls soccer team to the Class A state championship last spring, and it would be quite a feat if he were to do the same with the boys squad this fall.

But, as every soccer fan in the area knows, the competition the Rocks will meet along the way will be formidable, and much of it, as with the girls team, will come from Salem's Western Lakes Activities Association rivals.

The reason for optimism is the fact that the Rocks return a veteran, senior-dominated outfit from a ballclub that finished 14-3-3 and was third in the league behind Livonia's perennial powers Stevenson and Churchill.

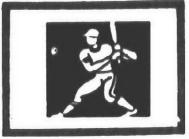

SALEM RETURNS seven of 11 starters, including mid-fielder R may Balconi, defender Mike Ulaszek and 5. " Dave O'Malley - three of the 10 seniors on Johnson's 16-man roster.

A key loss from last year's team is Mike Zarretti, an all-league player at his center mid-field position, but Johnson has filled a big hole there by moving Balconi from the right side.

The Rocks have a veteran defense in front of O'Malley, but he is just as tough on opposing scorers with his effective goaltending.

Chief offense gets overhaul

By Dan O'Mears staff writer

Coach Mike Morgan figures defense is where it's at in the highlycompetitive world of Western Lakes Activities Association boys soccer.

Plymouth Canton might have some big holes to fill offensively, but it's a situation in which Chiefs, being in better shape defensively at this early stage, can survive until they do

"We play in such a tough league, you definitely have to concentrate on defense," Morgan said. "If teams can't score against you, they can't beat you.'

Canton lost its entire front line of forwards Steve Rudelic, Pat Fredric and Dave Dahlberg to graduation, and that trio accounted for 90 percent of the goals the Chiefs scored last year.

WHILE MORGAN will have to do a rebuilding job up front, the offensive situation may not be as dire as it seems since Canton has an abundance of halfbacks, making the midfield positions a team strength.

But senior co-captains Jim Hadde, a fullback, and Todd Nichols, the stopper, head a defense that will play a pivotal role, especially early in the campaign while the new offense is getting its feet wet.

Senior Dan Nashlon also will start again at fullback, and junior Bill Teller brings back experience to the position. But the Chiefs will have to find a replacement for graduated goalie Dean Barberio. Junior Marty Adamian is the leading candidate to fill that void

"He's quick," Morgan said, "and he's improved his distribution, getting rid of the ball effectively once he has control of it.'

THOUGH THE Chiefs will be without two-time, all-league halfback Scott Morgan, Canton remains strong at that position since everyone else returns.

Junior Jeff Tutor has been a starting mid-fielder since his freshman year while Rick Menary and Jamie Nesbitt, also juniors, were the other regulars. In addition, Andy Shiner, John Cortese and Jamey Nesbitt return from a team that was 8-6-3 and finished fifth in the WLAA last season - the first time in three years the Chiefs didn't win a division title.

"We've got a lot of experience even though it's a young team," Morgan said, "and we have some size, which we haven't had. We have size in the fullback spots, and we have bigger forwards than we're used to having.

Steve Marshall, one of only eight seniors on Canton's 25-man squad, and junior Jerry Staszel are the only returning players with experience at forward

BUT THE Chiefs may have received the offensive help they needed in a pair of transfer players. Junior Dave Presley sat out last season after switching from Plymouth Christian, and sophomore Nick Stankevitch is a newcomer from Sterling Heights Stevenson. In addition, freshman Quang Quach could be a surprise at forward.

"There's some hidden strengths here," Morgan said. "I think we'll hold our own. We'll be in every game, but Churchill, Stevenson and Salem are as good as they've ever been.

O&E champion

Farmington's Zonder wins tournament

By C.J. Risak

staff writer

The seed of uncertainty, planted a year ago, was nourished and blossomed in this year's Observer & Eccentric-Whispering Willows Womens Golf Classic Saturday at Whispering Willows.

Last year, it seemed certain that tournament newcomer Erica Zonder would win the title in her first try with no trouble. A front-nine 34 seemingly put her in command, and a four-stroke cushion with three holes left cemented her position.

That's when disaster struck for the youngster, then entering her junior year at North Farmington. Zonder bogeyed the last three holes, and former champion Ann Lauer finished birdie-par-birdie to win by a stroke. On Saturday, Zonder again had a lead - this time two strokes heading down the tourney's backstretch, and again Lauer was her pursuer. When Zonder put her drive at the par-three 15th on the green 35 feet from the cup, and Lauer's tee shot was well right of the green, it seemed Zonder's lead would expand.

THE KEY word is seemed. And, as Saturday's tournament proved, nothing is predictable in the O&E Classic.

It took Zonder four putts to finish at 15. So, even though Lauer bogeyed the hole, she picked up a stroke and, when she smacked her drive at 16 well over 200 yards, dead in the middle of the fairway, and Zonder hit hers short and right, it seemed another collapse by Zonder was imminent

Wrong again. Zonder took fewer putts over the last three holes - just - than she did at 15, finishing three with three-straight birdies to claim her first O&E title with a 78.

Lauer, a Birmingham native who also won the O&E championship in 1983, was second for the second time with an 83. Patricia Waldecker of Livonia finished third with 84.

"Last year," Zonder said, "it was like, after I shot 34 (on the front nine) I just wanted to get in the clubhouse. I really don't know what I was thinking."

This year, Zonder didn't waste much time thinking about her putting at 15, which narrowed her lead to one stroke. "I didn't let it bother me," she said. "I was still one up and I just thought, 'Make her catch me.' The last three holes were all parable. I wasn't going to beat myself."

NOT THIS time, anyway. The shots Zonder thought won it for her were her second and third at the parfive 16th. Lauer was in perfect position; Zonder knew it when she hit her second shot, a five-wood. The ball traveled 200 yards to within 60 yards of the green.

As solid a shot as that was, Zonder's next was even better. Her wedge left the ball 18 inches away from a birdie, a putt she sank moments later.

Meanwhile, Lauer was struggling. Her four-iron second shot went way right, leaving her 40 yards from the green with a sand trap in between. Her pitch was about as good as she could hope, but the ball still rolled 20 feet past the cup. She two-putted for par, but still lost a stroke and was two back.

If 16 hurt Lauer's chances, the par-three 17th ended them. Again, Lauer's eight-iron tee shot left her in better position than Zonder. She was

Spartans say no to steroids

IRST THING COLLEGE roommates learn is sharing. It grows from necessity. born from being thrust into a new environment surrounded by strangers, to something bordering on duty

Dave Houle and Mark Nichols have been roommates at Michigan State for quite awhile And they've learned to share, although what they've shared isn't your normal freshmen-type stuff.

Houle, from Plymouth Salem, starts at offensive tackle for MSU. Nichols, from Birmingham Brother Rice, is a starter at defensive tackle. Considering their positions, it's not surprising they are among the biggest, strongest Spartans.

But Houle and Nichols - each beginning their senior seasons - have more than their room number, sport and size in common.

BOTH CAME to MSU as undersized linemen. Projects, coaches like to call them. The kind of player that forces a recruiter to project how big he'll get in three, four years

Houle said he weighed just over 200 pounds when he graduated from Salem, Nichols said he was 208. Houle now tips the scales at 285.

Nichols is 261. That kind of growth leads people

Nichols responded to the same question by saying, "It's a lot of talk. If people knew how much time Dave and I put in in the weight room, they wouldn't say it."

ONE THING is certain - no one would dare say it to their faces. Houle is huge. When he signed with MSU. I was surprised Houle played tight end at Salem. He didn't seem to have the speed to play the position in the Big Ten And he didn't look like he could bulk up enough to be a lineman

"It's bad enough getting football title.

Few such proclamations are emanating from East Lansing or anywhere else this year. Maybe because Yarema (from Birmingham Brother Rice), the Spartan quarterback, and Ingram, a wide receiver and firstround pro draft choice, are graduated. And maybe because White was less than spectacular, gaining 633 yards rushing after topping the nation with 1,908 as a sophomore.

And maybe because, even with such a renowned cast, MSU was only

Going into last season, though, it was apparent the team had a weakness. The secondary seemed vulnerable. With John Miller (from Farmington Harrison) and Todd Krumm (from West Bloomfield) at cornerback and Paul Bobbitt (from Southfield-Lathrup) and Dean Altobelli at safety, the Spartans lacked speed.

WHAT THEY had, basically, was four safeties in the secondary.

"That's exactly what we had," admitted Miller at Saturday's MSU Media Day in Spartan Stadium. "I played (cornerback) the whole year. but I didn't start to get comfortable there until the middle of the year."

Although neither Miller nor Krumm were suited to play corner, they did well enough. Krumm finished with a team-high five interceptions, including one he returned 44 yards for a touchdown against Notre Dame. Miller was second on the team with three interceptions.

said. "I think our defense will be the best in the Big Ten."

Now a junior, Miller has adapted well to the switch. Instead of being paired one-on-one against a fleet wide receiver, he'll move inside and rely on reading offensive sets and using his size (6-foot-2, 202 pounds) to stop running plays.

Strong safety has been called a hybrid; a player needs a linebacker's size and a safety's speed and reaction.

"There are things I have to improve on," admitted Miller. "My run support has to be a little better. And I still have all the secondary duties to take care of."

But the shuffling of players should not be a problem, Miller figured. "We're going to jell right away," he predicted. "Todd's the only one who didn't play much in the spring and he's so adaptable, he should have no

MSHL's streak broken in 13-1 setback

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

The Wildcats extended but couldn't maintain the Midwest Summer Hockey League's winning streak against its Chicago rivals last weekend

In its annual two-game series with the Windy City Summer League champion, the MSHL winner had swept the last two, and the Wildcats made it five straight Saturday with a 7-4 victory over the Demons.

But the streak was halted - no. smashed - on Sunday when the Demons regrouped to inflict a 13-1 defeat on the Wildcats in the Skokie (Ill.) Skadium.

The weekend had an ominous start when the MSHL entourage was vicflooded the Chicago area. Coaches

BUT THOSE troubles were forgotten Saturday when the Wildcats, who earned the right to represent the MSHL by winning the league title a week ago at the Plymouth Cultural Center, broke open the first game with a four-goal second period.

With the score tied 1-1, John Smith put the Wildcats ahead to stay with a gcal set up by Mike Stahley, who to tap it in.

Peyer, who plays for the University of Illinois-Chicago, had two goals and an assist to pace the Wildcats, and Kevin Alexander, Stahley and Paul Mitter had one goal and one assist apiece.

DESPITE allowing two third-period goals, Craig Mooney played well in goal the second half, making key saves on other plays that helped preserve the Wildcats' lead.

The series, however, ended in disaster when the Demons, behind the goaltending of Jim Webb, not only made a comeback but thoroughly dominated play the next day. Webb had been in goal for the first game, but he was a lot tougher Sunday, again playing the whole game and turned away 42 of the Wildcats' 43 shots on goal.

Fall

Veterans abound on Salem club

ALONG WITH Balconi, Ulaszek and O'Malley, sophomore Jeff Gold helps provide Salem with the all-important quality of strength in the middle. He started at the center/ striker post as a freshman and is expected to be an offensive leader again this fall.

Senior Dennis Reynolds is the right winger and rounds out the cast of returning starters. Tim Stahl was on the Salem varsity as a sophomore, but spent last year in Germany as an exchange student. As a senior, he completes the forward wall as the left winger.

Assisting Balconi with the midfield duties will be junior Mark Lipke and senior Don Koontz. Lipke plays the left side, and Koontz, the back-up goalie last year, has won a starting job as the right mid-fielder.

"We'll be very competitive," Johnson said. "If we have an injury-free season, we could have a real good year. I'm looking forward to it."

AS IN PAST years, Johnson expects to be fighting Livonia Stevenson for supremacy in the Lakes Division. The Rocks, who were ranked 11th in the state at season's end, tied the Spartans 2-2 and lost the rematch 2-1 when the game was stopped because of lightning.

Furthermore, the difficulty of the first few games will tell a great deal about the kind of season Salem will have.

Putting first, Zonder knocked her ball straight in for her secondstraight birdie. With all hope for victory slipping away, Lauer missed her chance at birdie, paring the hole.

WITH A THREE-STROKE advantage, Zonder played 18 cautiously. hitting her tee shot right (instead of toward the fence - and out of bounds - to the left). Lauer outdrove her adversary, but Zonder's iron approach shot trickled onto the fringe of the green while Lauer's carried over it.

"I just wanted to get it down in two from there," said Zonder. She did better than that, sinking the 50foot putt for another birdie. Lauer bogeyed to finish five behind.

Set exercise goals for optimum benefit

Dear Myrna. I really enjoy taking exercise classes. I know that it's best to do aerobic exercise three times a week for maximum benefit, but I have a difficult time making it to class more than twice a week. Is twice a week of any benefit? Also, does it make any sense to do the floor work at home on the "off" days? I know that the floor work isn't aerobic evercise, but will it help to tone and strengthen muscles?

- Barb Hendrickson

I'm happy you're enjoying the classes.

What are your exercise goals? Besides the healthy benefit you are deriving, are you concerned with weight control? If so, aerobic classes twice a week won't do If you can't find time to attend classes, try speed walking three times a week in addition to your classes.

A stationary bike or treadmill might just do in our cold Michigan weather. Think about the time you spend at home and plan accordingly. What about watching the news or your favorite television program while aerobicizing There are stationary bikes to purchase with a book rack in front. You can read and exercise at the same time. What will they think of next'

If your goals are flexibility and strength, two classes a week will benefit you By attending classes, even just twice a week, and doing professionally instructed homework, your body will maintain and even develop the flexibility and muscle tone so badly needed.

It does make good sense to do calisthenics (floor exercise) at home Ask an instructor or myself exactly which floor exercise would be most beneficial to you personally and exactly how to position your body for proper results and safety

By attending two classes a week and doing calisthenics at home, your body will maintain and even develop the flexibility and muscle tone. Remember to stretch after each activity.

Ask your exercise expert to help. That's what we are there for - it's our pleasure (Myrna Partrich, co-owner of The Workout Company of Bloomfield Township, is happy to answer any questions readers may have regarding exercise. Please send your signed letters to: Sports Department, Myrna Partrich, 1225 Bowers, Birmingham 48012).

KRUMM AGREES. "I got in six or seven practices at free safety." the 6-2, 200-pound senior said. "And my freshman year I played behind Phil Parker. So it's been like a two-vear vacation.

"The big thing is geiting my footwork down. The only thing I'm going to miss is the one-on-one challenge."

Neither Krumm nor Miller are as fast afoot as the players who will replace them at the corners, although Krumm was clocked at 4.67 in a 40yard dash on Spartan Stadium's artificial turf.

"John and I had to rely on foot-ence will be valuable at the safety positions. "At safety, you have to be able to read (the offense)," said Krumm. "We'll be able to take control of the defense.

"Going to free safety is going to open up a whole new avenue for me. I'm going to love the new challenge."

Krumm, who was a baseball draftee of the New York Mets, opted not to sign so he could play his last year of college football. "They gave me an option," he said. "In my life, where I'm at right now, I felt it would be best for me to finish my education. And I felt I could always sign in baseball next year."

For John McIntyre and Terry Mills, the next 10 days will be more than just a sightseeing trip. Both spent the recent college basketball season sitting out under NCAA requirements. Mills, who plays for the University of Michigan, the victim of new Proposition 48 academic guidelines, and McIntyre, the former Redford Catholic Central All-Stater who will be eligible this season at the University of Missouri after transferring last summer from the University of Detroit.

The two are part of a group of college all-star players from the Sandy Sanders Summer League in Ann Arbor that will tour Scandinavia, which includes stops in Helsinki, Finland and Stockholm, Sweden. The tour is being arranged by Livonian Dennis Nazelli, who heads Young Athletes Abroad, an international basketball exchange program

For both 6-foot-5 McIntyre and the 6-11 Mills, it's a chance to make up for lost time. They will be pitted against national teams from Turkey, Finland and Sweden.

basketball

"THIS IS GOING to be serious for me," McIntyre said. "It's a chance to get back into game situations, even though we'll be playing Europeon rules

McIntyre practiced all year with Missouri, but he was allowed to play in only two exhibition games prior to the season's start.

'It's going to be fun to do all the sightseeing. but come game time I'm going to play the best 1 can," said McIntyre. "It's time I get back to playing hard and playing some defense. You don't get that playing in the summer leagues."

The much-heralded Mills, who enrolled at U-M last fall but did not practice with the team, has bulked up to a robust 235 pounds.

"I've never been overseas and this will be a great experience," Mills said. "I haven't played that much team-oriented basketball. I played in a couple of leagues and I've played in pickup games all winter, but I need to get some game experience. Right now I'm trying to get in shape."

MILLS SAID his style of play has changed for the better since his days at Romulus High, where he led the Eagles to the 1986 state Class A crown

"I've gotten stronger and I'm more of an inside player," he said. "I have a lot more stronger moves to the hoop than I did in high school."

McIntyre, whose style of play in high school was compared to Pistol Pete Maravich, says he's a different player now after a year of observing from the bench

'I've learned to tone it down and play Norm Stewart ball," McIntyre said, referring to the Missouri coach. "I take the ball in stronger to the hoop and I've learned to pull up and take the 15 foot jumper instead of always making the fancy play " Mills got a taste of "game situations" last month at the U.S. Olympic Sports Festival, going head-on against J.R. Reid, the freshman player of

Spartans win state title

The Bayloff Spartans of Livonia completed a 24-4 season by winning the F Major (13-14-year-olds) state baseball championship with a 3-1 victory Thursday over East Detroit in Dearborn

The Spartans won four straight games en route to the title They defeated Allen Park on Aug 5 for the district championship at Ford Field, 8-1 They followed this with an 8-2 win over Warren in the regional Aug 10 at Dearborn

Bayloff reached the final with a 6-3 triumph Thursday over Sterling Heights in the state semifinals also held in Dearborn

Matt Slotka, who pitched the first 4 5 innings to gain the win, and Mike Higgins who hurled the final 245 innings to pick up a save, combined to hold East De troit to just one run.

Mike Brooks tripled and later scored to give Bayloff a 1-0 lead in the second. The Spartans added two more in the fourth on a triple by Russ McQuaid, a single by Todd Brown and a triple by Higgins Morse said he hired her on the spot.

And that, she claims, is how she became involved in laminated furniture and cabinetry, working for the cabinet maker six years and learning every aspect of the craft.

Then, 14 months ago, Morse launched Designs Unlimited in Walled Lake, her own firm that specializes in the design, manufacture and installation of laminated furniture and cabinets.

GRANT FUNDS ART/DESIGN SHOW

The College of Art and Design's Sarkis Gallery North is now hosting, through Aug. 17, an exhibition of works made possible through funding from the Arts Foundation of Michigan.

The AFM recognized the achievements of glass artist Herbert Babcock, painter Marilyn Derwenkus, and sculptors Pieter Favier and Joseph Wesner in creating work that goes beyond the expected, both in size and media.

Babcock's large circular sculpture is worked out of glass and steel. Nine kaleidoscope boxes by Derwenkas each display a different technique and medium. Favier's "Center-Self-Center" is a wood and metal sculpture installation. Wesner's nine-foot-tall welded and painted steel sculpture is entitled "Motherswell."

The Sarkis Gallery is located on the college campus at 245 E. Kirby in the University Cultural Center. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday. There is no admission charge. Call 872-3118 for more information.

condo queries Robert M. Melsner

Q. I am in the process of attempting to sell my home, which I purchased several years ago on a land contract. I now find out, for the first time, that there is urea-formaldehyde foam insulation (UFFI) in the walls. I'm having difficulty selling my home because of this problem and am wondering if I have any recourse against my seller. Can you advise?

A. If you can establish that the seller knew of the condition concerning urea-formaldehyde foam insulation (UFFI) and failed to advise you of that situation or otherwise take remedial action, you may have recourse for damages against the seller for misrepresentation and/or fraud and/or the installer of the insulation.

As a practical matter, it may be advisable for you to repair the condition of your home so that you are no longer subjecting yourself to potential liability with respect to the sale of your ome to an innocent purchaser, and to otherwise protect your health. You should consult with an attorney to find out what your rights are, based on the facts at hand

It's OK to break art rules

HEN I THINK of creativity, I think of using the regular in an irregular way.

Probably the most creative stroke I have ever seen almost caused me to have a stroke. Scott, my oldest son, was four years old and he happened to find a ball point pen. The problem and the creativity arose when he could not find any paper. For some reason, Scott noticed his 2-year-old brother, Kevin.

With his creative juices flowing, Scott lifted Kevin's little shirt and voila! A pure white smooth chest and tummy to draw on. With Kevin's complete cooperation, Scott drew a huge face on Kevin's upper torso. The two pink dots made neat eyes for the face (which he later colored solid blue). The nose was just a normal nose. But, oh, the mouth! For the mouth, Scott drew around the belly button.

Without any fear whatsoever, Scott proudly presented his brother to me - and with childlike ecstasy slowly unveiled his work. Before I could react, Scott quickly showed me how the mouth could move by pinching either side of Kevin's belly button. To make a long story short, they both lived but we didn't put Kevin in the church nursery for three weeks.

THE INCIDENT leads to the following comments: If there's a rule in art, try breaking it, mix media, try different subjects. If you're too tight, loosen up. If you're too loose, tighten up. Often many who are newly introduced to art come through a maze of rules that they have either heard of or read about.

Try stepping out of the established pattern or procedure for your art. In artwork, the worse that can happen is that you ruin the picture. So big deal. You probably learned something in the process.

My most enthusiastic students are those who found they can do that which they never thought they could. Sometimes it is good to lay down your learn-to-draw/paint books and just start doing your own thing. I love to hear the stories that students and customers tell me when they tried something new or experimental.

There is a certain glow of new life and pride when someone successfully tries the untried to produce a positive art form.

Creativity is the fulfillment or follow through of the artist to make visual their mental or spiritual inspiration. So, at times often inconvenient, the artist is hit with a thought or circumstance that triggers a whole series of emotions that seek fulfillment or visual expression.

CREATIVITY IS BY definition "to produce, or give being, form or shape to." Getting inspired is only half the battle; doing something with the inspiration is the other half. Ability now enters the scene. How able are you to creatively express yourself? If you are competent in one medium, are you able to use another medium that would more rightly lend itself to your inspiration?

For example, if you are an accomplished pen and ink artist and were inspired by the softness and beauty of a sunset, would pen and ink effectively lend itself to your inspiration? So creativity is increased by competence or an ability to effectively handle all of the media.

Creativity is stifled without inspiration and unfulfilled without ability. But what most people think of when they hear the word creativity is style. Style is that distinctive manner that holds your artwork above the commonplace. Style initiates comments like, "He or she is so creative with the stroke of a brush or pen." Styles comes with practice and not with age. I have some teenage students whose style is wonderfully distinctive.

Creativity is not drawing spaceships and monsters from other planets. It is the way you represent even everyday articles. Creativity is, therefore, not what you represent, but how you represent it. Creativity is the combination of inspiration, ability and style. The creative stroke is therefore the feelings you express, the medium you choose and the way you use the medium.

So open your heart and mind to inspiration and revelation, work and learn that your ability increase and finally your own style will begin to emerge and people will one day look at your work and marvel at your creativity.

Get rid of distractions

What separates a good photograph from a ho-hum snapshot? What makes your friends and family ask to see more instead of thinking, "I've seen enough."

The answer lies in getting stopping power or impact in your pictures. One of the best ways to accomplish this is by good, effective composition.

Composition can be thought of as meaningful placement of the main subject and supporting elements in the picture including the elimination of unnecessary and unwanted detail.

The next time you look through your camera and are about to push the shutter, stop.

Yes, stop. Take a really good, second look. Examine the subject. If it's a person, see if there's a tree or telephone pole 'growing" our of his or her head. Is your subject placed in a dynamically strong part of the frame? Check all four corners of the viewfinder. Is there something there, perhaps distracting, that doesn't belong?

Good composition begins with a solid look through the camera and a calculated determination of what you, the photographer, want to record on film in the most effective way.

Here are some basic guidelines to help plan and obtain good composition:

· Consider vertical vs. horizontal. Most cameras produce a rectangular picture so try fitting this format to your subject. People and trees, for example, go up and down, so most often a vertical composition should be used. Horizons go sideways, so a horizontal format is appropriate.

BANKER G

· Move in close. Filling the frame with your subject is per haps the best way to add stopping power to your shot. This way your picture is simplified and the viewer's attention isn't dis tracted. When photographing a person or an animal, filling the frame is easily done with a telephoto lens.

· Check the subject placement. Avoid placing the main sub ject smack in the middle of the picture. Photographs appear static and less interesting this way. Rather, by placing the sub ject off center, a dynamic quality will be given to your shot that will make it much more exciting.

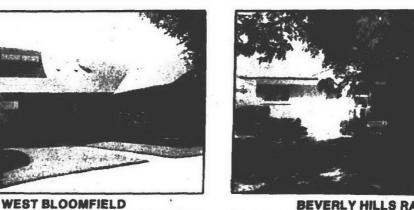

• Frame your subject. Remember to use the framing tech niques that I've recently discussed to make your photographwork more effectively. In short, be on the lookout for tree branches or an archway that will give your shot special impact

• Use lead-in lines. Elements in a picture should help direct attention toward the subject. Lead-in lines can be roads, fences streams, pathways, even parts of a building.

· Watch your horizons. Above all, make sure that they are level in your picture, not running up or downhill. Remember that a low horizon line in your shot will accentuate spacious ness, especially when you have a dramatic sky. A high horizon line will de-emphasize the sky and, instead, will suggest close ness

Above all, to add more impact and stopping power to your pictures, get in the frame of mind as you look through the frame of your viewfinder that you are now "making a photograph," not merely taking a snapshot.

FLAG OR THE STATUE OF LIBERTY.

The President takes an oath to defend something even more important than a majestic symbol of our country.

The President takes an oath to defend the Constitution of the United States. A document that has been described as the greatest leap forward for freedom in human history. A document that is the foundation of our country. And the means by which we achieve the rule of law and protect our freedom.

As we commemorate the Bicentennial of the Constitution, there is no better way for you as an American to reaffirm the principles for which our country stands than to learn more about the Constitution.

The words we live by.

Writing a classified ad that gets results-whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise- is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

1. Cive the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales représentative.

It's 1987. Do you know what your home is worth?

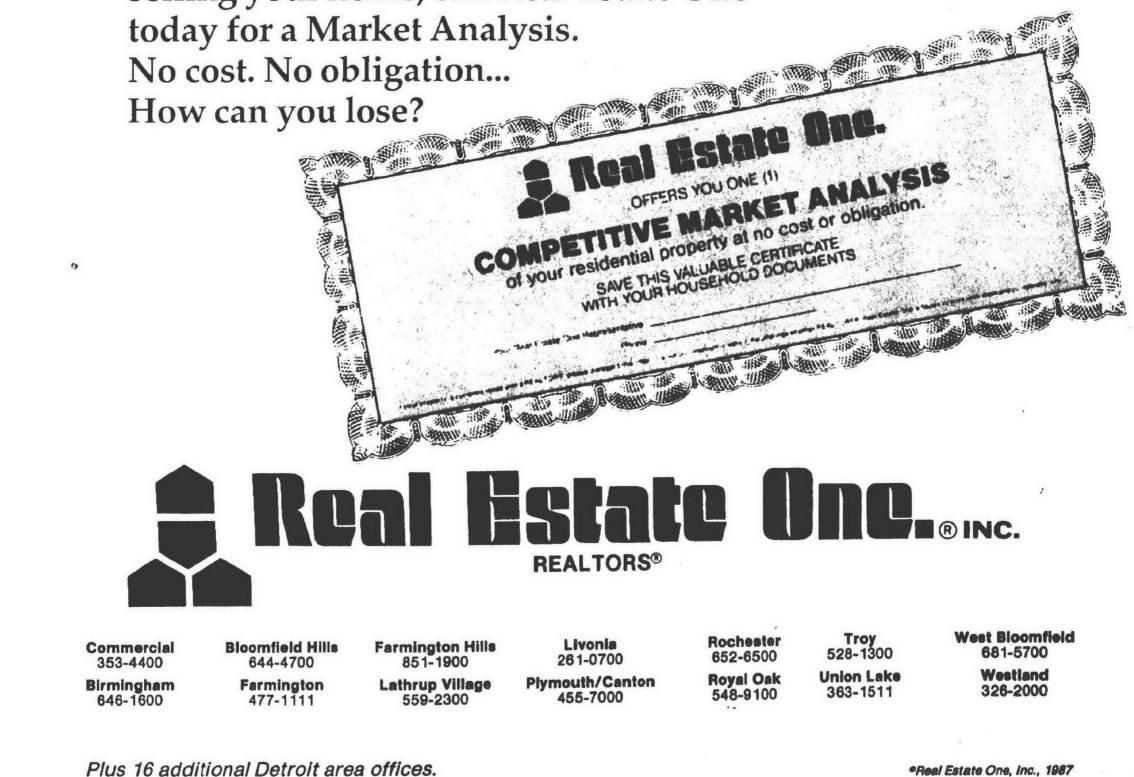

If you've ever thought of selling your home, you probably wondered what you could get for it in today's market.

Well, wonder no more. Because Real Estate One can tell you, and it won't cost a cent. No obligation either.

We'll do a Market Analysis on your home to tell you its real value. We'll study the past and current sales activity in your area and others like it. We'll learn what homes like yours are selling for. And then we'll make a detailed inspection of your home, inside and out.

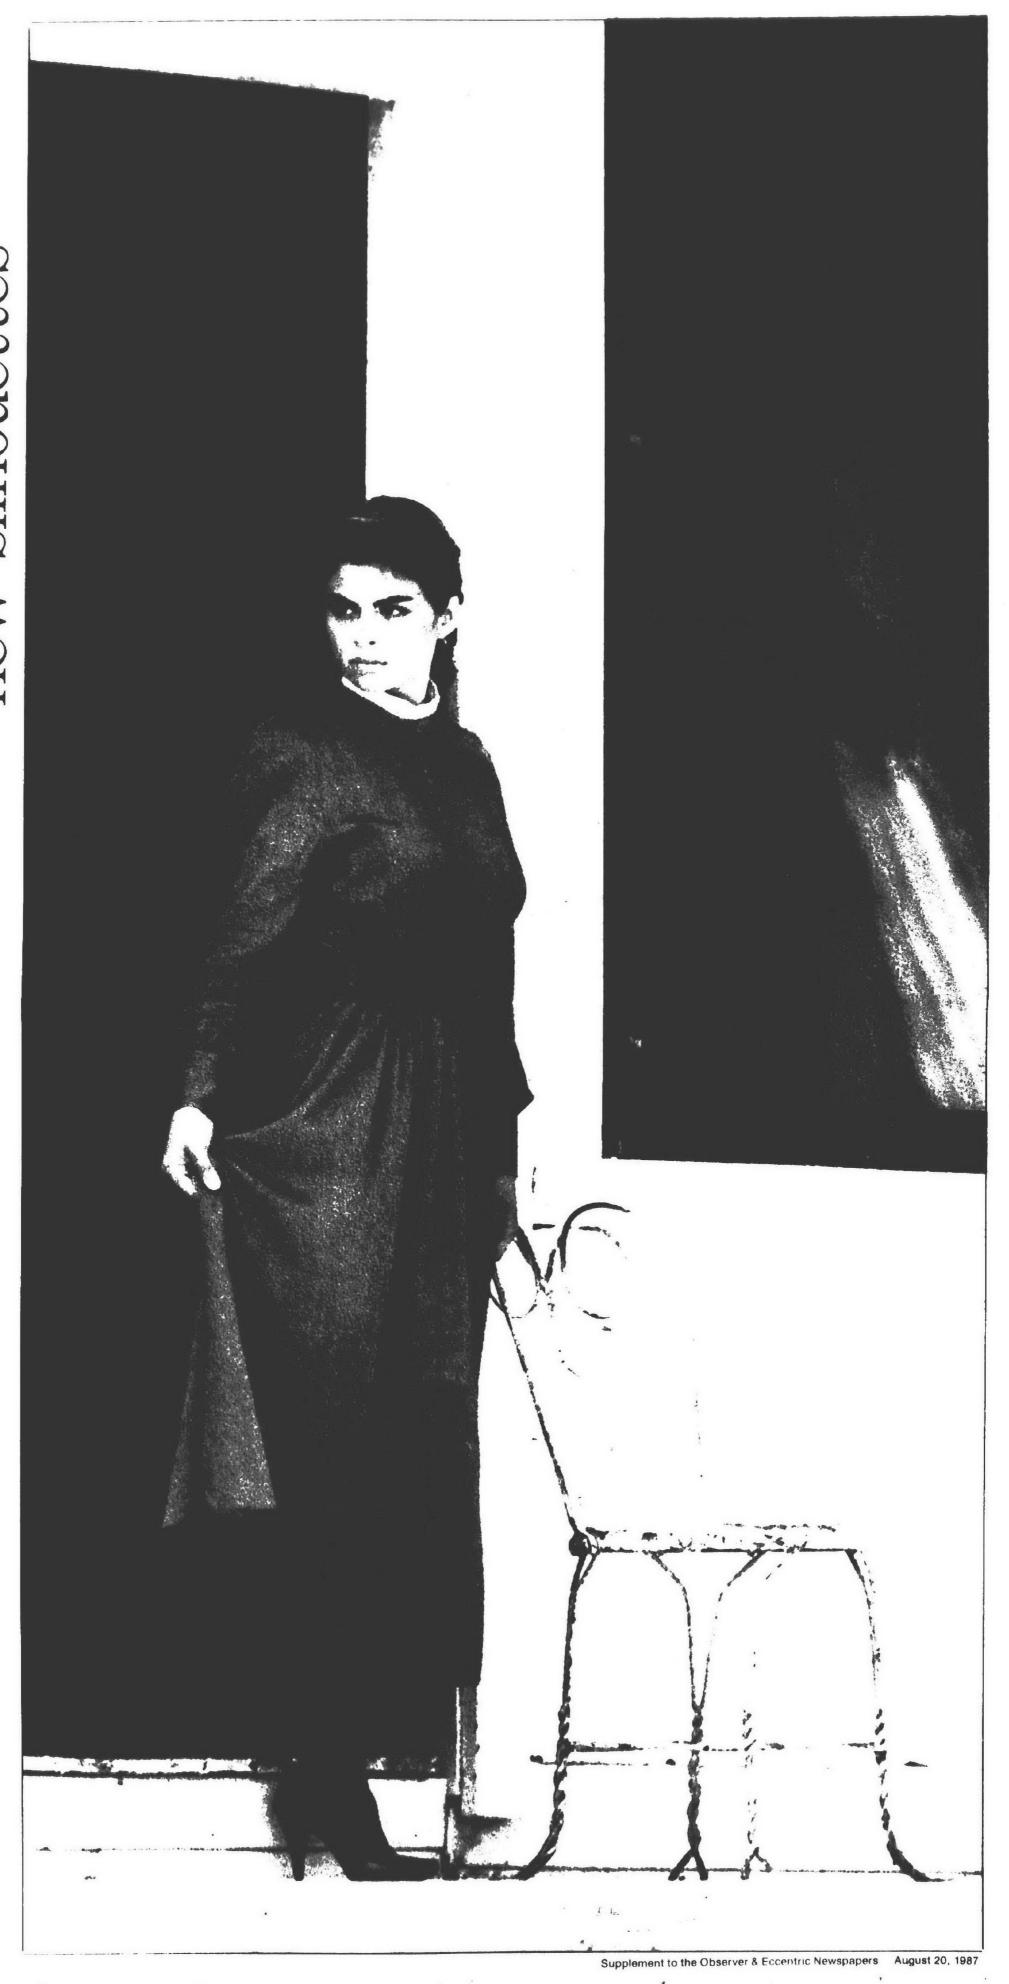

Then we'll give you a report on the bottom line: the value of your home, today.

So if you're even thinking of selling your home, call Real Estate One

new SILHOUETTES

Adding spice to some vaguely familiar shapes

By Rustle Shand special writer

HORT HEMLINES have been making headlines for months - putting most women in a quandary over skirt length Should I or shouldn't I buy shor skirts, they're asking

One of the most popular responses to that question has been. If you wore them last time around don t wear them this time around

But that's not really a good enoug! answer. Certainly, if you're young enough not to have worn them last time around, you're going to weat them this year. On the other hand, if you're old enough to have worn them in the '60s. you're not going to flaunt that fact by not wearing them now

The answer really lies in proportion, appropriateness and personal choice.

PROPORTION IS determined by body configuration - and the only way to tell if short lengths are becoming - is to try them on and let the mirror be the judge.

Appropriateness is determined by the situation in which you choose to wear either long or short Most women in business have learned that very long skirts can hamper efficiency. They get caught in the rollers of business chairs are gripped by car doors, get caught in the heel of the shoe when you rise from a chair and can trip you on the stairs

Yet, long skirts make a woman teel so very feminine and graceful. therefore, they are perfect for social occasions that call for a relaxed attitude.

Just-covering-the-knee short is pertect for business, providing the trash of leg is not too extreme in a seated position.

ABOVE THE knee is tuninew and exciting for after tive

You'll see a number of exceedingly short things in this fashion section. They re samples sent directly to us by the designer or manufacturer. created for show purposes. Most of them won't be shipped to the stores in that length. They I be coming in lackets are cropped at the wais

HE ONE element that holds a working day togther, and for that matter evenings. too, are coordinates. Sometimes they fall in the suit category easy, perfectly tailored or highly fashionable. Daytime generally means short and neat in rich brown or purple or subtle tweeds with hip-length jackets and skirts. whose hemlines barely peek out below the jacket

And sometimes it's two piece ensembles often with sweater tops and print skirts. It's the season for switchabouts and that subject brings to mind thoughts of how to plan a new wardrobe or update your current one. It all begins in the closet, according to a recent issue of Workstyle magazine

'Begin your wardrobe strategy by analyzing the contents of your closet," says Workstyle, a Kelly Services publication, in an article aimed especially at those going back into the business world and looking for a more professional image

AS YOU SORT through your clothing ruth lessly," says Workstyle separate the items into garments that are no longer usable, worn-out or inappropriate for business (or simply don't fit). clothes that you like and wear regularly, and clothes that are still attractive and usable but have not been worn often

Then, analyze the clothing you wear regularly. listing it by fabric, color, type and style. Many women, for example, like to have a suit, a skirt and two blouses, a soft sweater and a dress for wardrobe versatility

Neutral colors, such as navy, royal blue, beige, gray, black and cream, are appropriate all year long Next, try to salvage the clothing that is serviceable, but seldom worn. Try to coordinate the odd-color blouse or shirt with a favorite skirt by pairing it with a contrasting searf. for example

Pair the jacket from one suit with a skirt or slacks from another. If, after the closet clothing analysis, you find you must shop for more. Workstyle offers these tips

Beware the clothing sale. A reduced price tag can often be an incentive to buy a garment that is poor quality or doesn't coordinate with the rest of your wardrobe

Never shop when you're rushed, there's a tendency to compromise on quality or spend more than planned

Sweaters earn own niche in fashion

Will sweaters become the new power attire for women

Sweaters that look right on campus can also move to the office with just a difference in pants, skirts and accessories. said Mary Colucci, executive director of the National Needlework Association

As women become more accepted in business, they no longer feel they must conform to men's ideas of proper professional attire Instead they can opt for a more relaxed set hard-working look She suggests that knitting your own sweater can assure that the look is right for any occasion.

An angora sweater with a keyhole neck and pearl buttons goes well with casual skirts for school, she said, and can be paired with a slim skirt for commuting to work.

The newest sweater look. according to Colucci. is based on the styles of the '50s, with pearl buttons short sleeves and fuzzy textures

Another vote for sweaters at least notton sweaters comes from Ira B. Livingston. vice president of US marketing at Cotton Inc. a research and promotion company.

"Sales of 100 percent cotton sweaters, especially among women, took off two years ago during the fall selling season." Livingston said.

What we found out was that women. who normally wear sweaters directly over their skin. preferred the feel of 100 percent cotton as opposed to the scratchy feel of sweaters produced from other fibers timeless style of its own

LASSIC thoroughbreds carefully nurtured and protected, they never lose their style, they just move through fashion time and time again.

It's all part of the fashion scene that celebrates the confident woman - the kind who knows what she wants and gets it.

It's no longer. "You've come a long way, baby." It's, "Lady, you've arrived " That's the new sentiment depicting women who have successfully evolved from "A woman's place is in the home," to a substantial leading role in the market place.

In the evolvement from homemaker to equal opportunity in the workplace. fashion options have been as widely varied as job opportunities.

As Kenneth Lane, native Detroiter and internationally known fashion wag, asked during a recent visit, "They don't make house dresses any more, do they?" Not that I know of. And in the interim, her dress-forsuccess options have evolved from the narrow concept of emulating a man's suit into a wide variety of attractive, feminine modes

She has many choices Among these is the answer to the hottest question since 1970, when women all over the world struck down the fashion dictators and refused to wear the structured maxi.

Eventually, women did embrace long skirts and many are now ready for a change of silhouette, secure in the knowledge that flashing legs will not keep them out of the boardroom

But one thing is evident the miniskirt is making a comeback after being shelved for nearly 20 years and there are numerous theories on why hemlines are inching up

Calvin Klein thinks longer lengths became old and tired. Akira says women are being rewarded after years of exercise and dieting. A design teacher thinks it all may have started as a joke

"It all came out of the big '60s revival that fashion is going through," says Bill Ranticelli, a freelance designer and faculty member of the Parson's School of Design.
