Just back from the Red Wings victory parade where his Briefcase Drill Team performed, Fred Hill's attentions are now focused on the new, improved July 4 parade.

The Plymouth Realtor's ideas for a truly grand parade -sponsored by the Plymouth-Canton Jaycees - are nearly all nailed down. They include a fly-over by four Air Force F-16 jets at 200 feet and a slew of attractions ranging from bands and clowns to a Marilyn Monroe look-alike. And don't forget that 7:30 a.m.

About 400 tickets are available for bleacher seats at Penniman and Main and Church and Main. In the bleachers, there will be pre-parade entertainment and a personal parade pack including a visor, shaker, flag, rubber nose and megaphone

A Plymouth man will have everyone seeing red beginning at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 17.

However, there is no need for alarm as Matt Lee shows off his fire truck collection and shares information found in his third book, "The History of Fire Apparatus." He simply wants to drive home the history of fire engines.

The History Channel will spotlight this self-proclaimed "local guru," in the first segment of a three-part, one-hour series called "Wheels of Survival."

For those burning to learn more about fire engines, Lee is your man. At least that is what a New Jersey collector told inquisitive cable television executives looking for someone to host the fire engine

The 53-year-old Ford executive, thrned fire truck collector, wasn't surprised when the television exec-

Don't cut recreation, township trustees told

BY KEVIN BROWN

Recreation opportunities need to be maintained, two residents told Plymouth Township trustees at their meeting Tuesday.

Plymouth Township's government is paying for a survey now underway to determine just how much recreation should be provided in greater Plymouth. The survey also asks residents how it should be paid for, by government or by user fees

Kathy Barile, with the Plymouth Hockey Association, told trustees she's concerned about cutbacks at the city-run Plymouth Cultural Cen-

"I am a non-resident as far as the city is concerned," she said, adding this means higher fees to pay for her two sons activities

Further, she said the city is raising ice rental rates at the cultural center. Barile said the hockey association buys at least 45 hours per week, and will now pay $800 to $1,000 more for ice time.

She said parents are concerned with talk the city could dump the ice arena. I wondered if there was anything in the works for a joint recreation department?" she asked.

The Public Information Research Group In Michigan says its campaign staff will be going door to door to seek support for their effort to stop what they say is an industry campaign to roll back the Clean Air Act.

Specifically, they said they'll ask the public to write postcards to U.S. Rep. Lynn Rivers, D-Ann Arbor, urging her to "Stop the Rollback."

"To reduce the devastating and widespread illness caused by air pollution we must enforce the Clean Air Act and strengthen health protections," said Jim Moore, an American Lung Association director who is working with PIRGIM on the campaign.

Rooting out corporate thieves his specialty

KIMBERLY A. MORTSON STAFF WRITER

Jack Bologna writes about fraud, embezzlement and theft. Not the author of mystery and crime novels like that of Elmore Leonard and Ann Rice but as an authority cautioning readers to the schemes and practices executed by white collar criminals.

"I write to portray the serious and light side of this business," said Bologna.

A profession, said Bologna, that without some degree of accountability, leads to the successful misappropriation of funds from corporate employers in the accounting and securities

Beginning in 1955, Bologna first became acquainted with the practice of corporate fraud as a criminal agent/investigator for the Internal Revenue Service which routed him to a number of big cities across the country including Nashville, New Orleans, Washington D.C. and

Following a seasoned career with the IRS, Bologna was recruited by several other governmental agencies to research and detect in-house embezzlement. He said typically an PEOPLE employer would suspect an employee or employees to be involved in illegal fraud or theft of company revenue.

"It was my job to investigate and determine the validity of those suspicions.'

Bologna said 30-40 percent of the time the evidence wasn't strong enough to prove an employee was guilty of fraud, theft or embezzlement.

"Crooks aren't always dumb," said Bologna, "especially white collar criminals who tend to be better educated, artful frauders."

The Plymouth resident said improvements in computer technologies have only "complicated the corporate issue from the evidence standpoint."

Technology helps criminals as much as it helps us," said

A gradual transition from investigations to education led Bologna to a teaching position at Sienna Heights College where he remained until his retirement in early January. Over the last 40 years he has co-authored and independently written 10 books and nearly 100 technical articles on fraud, embezzlement and thievery in the accounting, internal auditing and corporate security industries.

"I guess you're born into an interest in this," said Bologna. "I have enjoyed sharing some of my perspective and experiences and have been happy to contribute to the field. I write to be meaningful to other people, not myself."

Bologna, battling Parkinson's Disease at the age of 68, says he's changed his writing style over the last few years as age catches up to him.

"I need a fair amount of quiet to write," said Bologna. "I didn't used to though - with six kids in the house it wasn't easy to find Parkinson's Disease, a degenerative illness that effects muscle rigidity, has taken only a marginal toll on Bologna's productivity. Currently working on his eleventh book regarding embezzlement he also authors two monthly newsletters, Forensic Accounting Review, financial fraud and Computer Security Digest, computer related fraud.

I plan to keep working and continue writing," said Bologna "I'm quite willing to work."

been concerned with youth skate boarders and roller bladers downtown. "If we cut some of the recreation programs we have, where are these kids going to go?" she asked.

"When people move into a community they look at the recreation there is," Gross added.

Lee's fleet of fire apparatus was so numerous in past that he "had more than Plymouth Township at one time." The count

Central Middle School Choirs earn First Division ratings at festival

Students in the Central Middle School Choirs recently competed in the District 12 Southeast Michigan Choral Festival held April 10.

The festival is sponsored by the Michigan School Vocal Music Association and awards choirs on their music reading and excellence in both music literature and performance quality.

Central Middle School Choirs are under the direction of Patrice Pedersen. She participates in the festival annually. About 40-50 schools participate representing the southeast corner of the greater Detroit area.

Pedersen states, "I am very proud of the students. They did very well again, receiving the best scores ever. I continue to hear praise from the Eastern Michigan University Music Department through directors who heard the performance. Central students worked hard and found that by doing the work, the results show.

Central students received straight First Division Ratings with comments from judges, such as, "I love your face! You seem to enjoy what you are doing. Glorious!!" And they commented, "nice dynamics. Congratulations for singing in German - great job".

Pedersen also stated, "It is rare for choirs to receive all perfect scores as my sixth-graders did this year. I participate as an adjudicator for the MSVMA and go to other areas in the state to judge their festivals. Central students were exceptional."

Seventhy-five members of the Sixth Grade Treble Choir performed Marienwurmchen by Brahms and Jubilate Deo by Pratorious/Wagner. The Girls' Honor Choir consisting of 66 students performed Aftermath by Whitecotton and Niska Banja arranged by Page.

Lieutenant retires after 26 years on the force

BY M.B. DILLON STAFF WRITER

There was never any doubt what Michael Gardner would be when he grew up.

"When I was in kindergarten, I drew pictures of police cars with my crayons," said Lt. Gardner, who after 26 years with the Plymouth Police Department is retiring.

His role models were uncles. One was an officer with the Detroit police, the other with the Michigan State police.

"As a kid, I had respect for police officers, but also held them in awe. It was something I aspired to do," said Gardner, who along with fellow officer Curtis Hill - also retiring - was honored Wednesday at a city hall luncheon.

A graduate of Redford Union High School and the Detroit Police Academy, Gardner was hired by the Detroit Police Department and worked there for a year under chiefs Patrick Murphy and Johannes Spreen.

"There was still a lot of racial conflict three years after the Detroit riots," said Gardner, who walked a beat. "It was very educational. I learned about how unfortunate the racial conflict was and how senseless it was. But I didn't feel like I could do anything about it."

Gardner heard about an opening in Plymouth and landed a job he enjoyed enough that he never thought about leaving.

After a fulfilling career and rising to the rank of lieutenant, Gardner, at 48, says he's ready for the next chapter in his life: handling the business end of his girlfriend's copy writing and graphic design business.

"This job is a job for young people," he said. "People think Plymouth is a quiet community. The same things happen here as anywhere else, but not as often. There are conflicts with families, relatives and friends. That's not something that is immediately traumatic as a bad auto accident, but when you deal with it on a continuous basis, it wears on you after a while.

"Not everyone who starts out in this business makes it to retirement," said Gardner, who served as president of the Kiwanis Club of Colonial Plymouth in 1991-92. "The attrition rate is high because of the stress put on police officers. There are problems you encounter with marriages, substance abuse ....all kinds of things can go wrong during a career. A lot of people able to stay this long don't have their health. Or they're suffering from emotional distress. I'm still healthy; I try to take care of myself. There might be some who'd dispute this, but I feel I'm still mentally stable.'

On one of his last days on the job, Gardner reminisced about his years in Plymouth. Gardner recalled two major fires and a couple murders.

A blaze on Penniman Avenue in the 1970s destroyed several shops, and a $5 million fire at a packaging company on Sheldon Road ranked Plymouth just behind Detroit in that year's ranking of devastating fires.

"We had a murder at the old Nelson Hotel on Mill Street near the railroad tracks, which is no longer there," recalled Gardner. "A woman was murdered by an acquaintance, and the building was set on fire at the same time. A man died in that fire. We made arrests and got convictions in both those murders."

A 1982 murder case Gardner will never forget involved a young woman "who left Plaza Lanes, and was murdered shortly afterwards by a man who was bowling there. As I was investigating the report of the missing woman, I had a hunch it was foul play, and that the woman was someplace nearby.

"That feeling had some presence to it. On the basis of that, Chief (Carl) Berry authorized me to locate a helicopter to conduct a search by air. We took off from Willow Run. As soon as we came into this area, the pilot asked where I felt she was."

Gardner directed the pilot to a field across Joy Road from Mettetal Airport. We looked down, and there she was, stabbed and bludgeoned."

Because the victim's body was located so quickly, police were able to obtain evidence that resulted in an arrest. "The perpetrator had blood on his shoes that matched that of the victim. He'd been previously convicted for sexual assault and was suspected in the disappearance of other women," said Gardner.

While Gardner was glad to see the Wyandotte man behind bars, "an unfortunate anecdote is that he's done his time and is out," said the lieutenant.

Something Gardner expected but didn't experience were frequent physical confrontations. "I felt I'd come under physical attack much more than I did," he said. "Even among criminals, there's a certain amount of respect for a police officer in uniform. And it's pretty well-publicized that officers are better trained in defensive tactics than we used to be. Most officers maintain a higher level of physical fitness than they used to."

Gardner, who's worked under six police chiefs, says he'll miss some things about police work and the camaraderie of his fellow officers. The proud father of two college graduates - Robert, 29, and Daniel, 26 - Gardner plans to have a little fun on the links after moving from Northville Township to Brighton.

"I bought a new set of clubs and I hope to do some golfing," he said. "Because of everything going on and the weather, I haven't had a chance to golf much. I'm really looking forward to that." He says he doesn't plan to disappear from Plymouth entirely. "I'll be around," he said.

Honored for service: Officer Curtis Hill holds a plaque, presented upon his retirement.

Officer has found work as policeman rewarding

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND STAFF WRITER

Since he was a youngster growing up in Detroit, Curtis Hill always wanted to be a cop.

"You know, it was probably one of those childhood deals. You see a policeman and a fire-fighter and that impresses you," said Hill, 50, whose last day as a patrolman with the Plymouth Police Department is June 15, Father's Day.

Hill started with the department on Father's Day in 1969, 28

Last Wednesday, the department gathered at a small luncheon in city hall to honor Hill and retiring Lt. Mike Gardner for their many years of service to the community.

Hill reflected on a significant change in community policing over the years. "It's the caliber of the officer. The requirements are a lot more difficult. In order to deal with the changing laws, you pretty much have to have a college education. I didn't go to college, so it was a little more difficult for me to adapt."

Shortly after Hill got out of the Army, where he served as an M.P. for two years, he applied at a few police departments, including Detroit and Plymouth. He's never regretted choosing Plymouth.

"I guess working in a community like this you get a chance to meet people in a different light than working in a big department. Big departments are so busy keeping up with the increasing crime problems," he

Hill appreciates the autonomy his job has allowed him. "I like the ability to use discretion in my job. The chiefs I've been associated with felt if you are doing your job, the production end – the ticket quota – wasn't involved."

While Hill has written a fair number of tickets in his career, he doesn't believe in issuing one every time he pulls someone over. "If you can accomplish the same thing with a warning, then it works," he said. He was quick to add, however, that his good will depends upon the driver's attitude. Bad attitude, bad ticket.

Hill said he doesn't concentrate on the sensational moments of his career – the murders, armed robberies or fires. "All my career is... I just look at the happy times, the good times, the people and the public I work with. I don't even consider the other stuff."

Looking back, Hill said he could not imagine doing anything else but police work. "I couldn't visualize myself in any kind of a factory job. I think I would have gone nuts, not being able to be outside, not to have the freedom to make decisions."

Retirement parties are occasions of humor, and of course the inevitable "doughnut" question came up. "I'm certain I had my share of donuts, but it wasn't a priority on my break," said Hill.

Hill also took a bit of goodnatured razzing from his fellow officers. "He's trouble. We won't miss him at all," joked Sgt. Steve Hundersmarck.

On a more serious note, he added: "He's very community oriented. He's the type of person who would listen to the radio when he was off duty and come in and assist us. He will be missed."

Hill plans to take it easy for the summer, maybe do a little fishing, work around the house and spend time with his 7-yearold daughter. Ob glo on

Unit cites increase in auto theft

BY LEANNE ROGERS STAFF WRITER

The economy is strong, so Sandra Miller is a bit puzzled by the big increase in cases handled by the Western Wayne Auto Theft Elimination Effort (WWATEE)

"We've seen a great increase in insurance fraud. It's kind of strange in a good economy," said Miller, a Michigan State Police lieutenant who heads the regional auto theft unit.

Part of the increase may be due to the popularity of leasing vehicles, she said.

We don't have any statistics on this but when lease cars get high mileage, people don't want to turn them in," said Miller. "They will say a thief did the high mileage on the vehicle. Also some people claim there was a hold-up of the vehicle. We usually find that was fraud."

Officers have a new weapon to combat fraud thanks to a change in state law that has someone convicted of making a false police report subject to a sentence equal to the crime reported. For example, someone falsely reporting an auto theft would be facing the four-year sentence that comes with an auto theft conviction.

We've had some prosecutions under that. The Wayne County prosecutor's auto theft unit has no problem authorizing on that," said Miller. "There was no sense in doing a lot of investigation into false police reports when they were only facing 90 days.

Now it's pretty serious."

The auto theft unit started 764 new investigations in 1996 up from 536 cases in 1995. The number of vehicles recovered also increased from 351 in 1995 to 477 in 1996.

A long-running investigation came to fruition earlier this year with a raid on Miami Motors in Detroit and the arrest of seven people on conspiracy charges. Part of this case, with a weekslong preliminary examination. are a Romanian auto theft ring that had also been under inves-

This case was so large that WWATEE devoted a great deal of personnel and resources to the investigation, Miller said, so that it looks like that had been the unit's main focus.

"Some of the insurance companies think it's too difficult to collect on commercial vehicles but that's short-sighted," she said. We benefit them, too. We don't pick and choose. We investigate everything. We have a case right now involving a tractor trailer. Heavy construction equipment is

High school journalists learn at Focus:HOPE

BY M.B. DILLON

Ever since Canton High School teacher Matt Watroba learned of Focus: HOPE's High School Journalism Olympics, he's made sure that Plymouth-Canton Community Schools has participated in the April competition.

He's wanted students to experience - in his words - "what can happen when people with vision make things happen.'

Watroba's efforts have paid off, as a few Plymouth-Canton students have won scholarships. Erica D'Angelo, a junior at Canton High School and news editor for the high schools' CEP Perspective newspaper, was chosen from the field of 200 as one of this year's 15 semi-finalists.

Situated near the site of the 1967 Detroit riots, Focus: HOPE is a civil rights organization devoted to feeding the hungry; educating top-flight engineers; and supplying parts for the automotive industry.

It was co-founded in 1968 by Eleanor Josaitis and the Rev. William Cunningham, who died

"He said he went to college to major in physical therapy, but didn't like it," she said. "He got tired of not having a job.

He lives in the neighborhood, and that's how he found out about Focus: HOPE. He was so proud of his progress. He programs like Focus: HOPE's (affiliated with universities and industry) would be the future.

"I was so much in awe of everything they manage to do there," said D'Angelo.D'Angelo and her parents attended the Focus: HOPE awards ceremony last month

"No one goes unnoticed," she said. "Even my parents were asked to stand up and say who they were. That's why people go back; people get respect and recognition.

"They have an excellent facility, and all they ever ask is that you carry the message with you."

The message is the organization's mission statement: "Recognizing the dignity and beauty of every person, we pledge intelligent and practical action to overcome racism, poverty and injustice.

And to build a metropolitan community where all people may live in freedom, harmony, trust and affection. Black and white, yellow, brown and red from Detroit and its suburbs of every economic status, national origin and religious persuasion we join in this covenant."

Said Chapin: "A lot of good things are going on at Focus: HOPE. It makes what everyone says is impossible possible. They're taking people with no hope and giving them skills so they can take care of them-

Weller said she noticed at Focus: HOPE "how people had hope in their eyes, and how happy they were that there is something like this helping them get through." Weller interviewed Cunningham, expecting him to be a corporate CEO type.

"Focus: HOPE is huge. But he was down-to-earth, relaxed and funny," she said. "You could tell he was someone who would want to help and give hope to everyone. He was really a cool, nice Campagna wrote about the food program "and how they make everyone feel comfortable. It's not an atmosphere of charity. People who have a lesser chance are doing something for them-

Sameck was impressed with Focus: HOPE's location; expansiveness; and its Center for Advanced Technology. "It's a college well-respected by the Big Four," he said.

Watroba, who's also a popular Detroit-area folk singer, has volunteered his talents at Focus: HOPE fund raisers along with musicians Ron Coden, Phil Marcus Esser, Josh White Jr. and Orthea Barnes.

"I do it because the spirit there so amazing," Watroba. "Father Cunningham was the kind of guy who would shake your hand and look right into your soul.

People were in fear of being around him, because sooner or later, he would enlist you to do things. He had a way of getting people to take action.

Court ruling to prompt review of special ed costs

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

Lawmakers and local school officials will be taking a hard look at special education costs now that the Michigan Supreme Court has told state government it no longer may short-change local districts.

Western Wayne County officials have put together a book showing that an ever-growing percentage of their students are being assigned into ever-costlier special ed programs.

The state next fall will put up about $5,460 per pupil, but that's only an average. Regular classrooms cost only a fraction of that to operate.

A special education resource classroom, however, costs an additional $4,500 to $6,000 per pupil. A special education classroom placement costs an additional $8,000 to $12,000.

And if a youngster is assigned to full-time residential placement in the Michigan School for the Blind and Deaf, the cost runs to $100,000 per pupil.

Special ed is costly, says MAISL, because the pupil-teacher ratio is lower; support services are needed from psychologists, occupational therapists

Matters are coming to a head. The Supreme Court on June 10 found the state was shorting 84 mostly suburban school districts on several mandated costs - special ed being the largest - in vio-lation of the Headlee amendment to the Michigan Constitution. Total cost is estimated at $500 million to $3.5 billion.

MAISL's chart shows that state funding of special ed plummeted from a 1975 level of 45 percent to 15 percent in 1980, when the suburban districts filed suit. Today state funding is in the 5 percent range.

Faygo 'Remembers When You Were A Kid' this summer

ummer is finally here, and when we're thirsty, some of us will reach for a Faygo. In a 1996 Media Audit, we discovered our readers are more likely, than the market as a whole, to drink Faygo pop.

Started in 1907 by Ben and Perry Feigenson, two Russian immigrant brothers in Detroit, Faygo Beverages Inc. is celebrating its 90th anniversary this year. In those days, the brothers could hardly afford a bag of sugar. Pop was only sold in the summer, so during the winter the brothers worked as fish and bread peddlers. Pop then retailed for three cents a bottle or two for a nickel, and due to the lack of modern refrigeration, was almost always consumed at the point of sale.

The brothers would spend one day bottling, then close their storefront at Hastings and Wilkins to sell pop from a horse-drawn wagon to stores, auto plants and businesses throughout Detroit competing with more than 100 other pop businesses in the area.

Early flavors were based on recipes for cake flavorings brought by the Feigenson brothers from Russia. Many of the current 43 flavors are inspired by fruits. In 1908 the popular flavors were strawberry, orange, lemon and root beer.

Redpop was called Strawberry Soda until it was renamed in 1970.

Faygo introduces four or five new flavors a year, which are named by Faygo's staff at the plant on Gratiot in Detroit.

Drinking Reapop or Rock & Rye makes you "Remember When You Were A Kid." This song, featured in Faygo TV ads in the early 1970s. will be featured in an upcoming series of 90th anniversary commercials. Look for the Faygo Kid and other characters from vintage Faygo ads, too.

"I loved Faygo as a kid," said Chef Brian Polcyn, owner of Five Lakes Grill in Milford. Polcyn prepared a multi-course Faygo luncheon in honor of the company's 90th anniversary.

"For the past 50 years, people have been calling with new and unusual dishes made with Faygo," said Stan Sheridan, Faygo Beverages Inc. president. Polcyn's recipes will be printed in a commemorative book, which also includes recipes by other chefs and winners of Faygo's 90th Anniversary Recipe Contest. The book will be available free with a proof-of-purchase beginning this fall.

Faygo was purchased by Ft. Lauderdale-based National Beverage Corp. in 1987.

Guy food: Mark Tallon of Canton, and his son, James, enjoy cooking together.

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND STAFF WRITER

Yo, guys, happy Father's Day. What's

If you're like Mark Tallon of Canton, a lot is cooking, but the recipes are usually simple, not exactly light on calories, and sometimes the results taste better than they look. "Not exactly the prettiest thing in the world, but that's what it ends up looking like," said Tallon, as he stuck a bowl of his infamous "Hockey Dip" under my

"I've always done breakfast, the pancake king, you know. Once in a while it's kind of nice to do the whole dinner.' While Talon dreams of Alaskan king crab legs - "at least a pound" - he's content with a good steak, mashed redskin potatoes and a country biscuit with cheese. And for dessert? "Philadelphia vanilla ice cream. That with fresh blueberries, about a teaspoon of sugar sprinkled on that, a little bit of Cool Whip, and you got it," he said, his eyes glassing over. Thirteen-year-old James Tallon occasionally helps his father in the kitchen, browning hamburger and cutting up vegetables. But James, who dreams of his grandma's apple "dump cake," in addition to crab legs, does a pretty good job cooking solo.

"I make lots of stuff, but it usually comes out Cajun," he said. Fine, James, just keep the toast plain.

What is it about men and chili, especially Brian Konley's chili?

"I use Canadian whiskey in it," said Konley of Plymouth Township, a supervi-sor at Ford's Sheldon Road plant. "They ask me to bring it into work. It's always requested."

Konley, who describes himself as a "grill man," started cooking when he was very young. "My parents worked. I started dibble-dabbling." When he married Kathy, he dibble-dabbled even more. "I would do potato salad, chicken soup and spaghetti sauce. Kathy's grandmother from Italy taught me how to make the sauce. But it's Konley's chili that has made him famous. And it's more than the whiskey that gives it its bite. "This guy I work with, his wife is from South Africa. They brought pepper seeds from there. They gave me the peppers, and another guy got the seeds. He grows them." Konley said you can substitute Jalapeños. Just don't be afraid to use

"My specialty, and all my wife's girlfriends rave and rave, is my chicken noodle soup," said Cox. "I even roll out my own noodles." Cox, who describes himself as a "connoisseur of good food," also makes a great marinade for beef with crushed pineapple and maple syrup. Cox is looking forward to giving wife Karen a break in the kitchen now that he's retired. "I hope to surprise her several times a week with a nice dinner." He shouldn't have any problem coming up with ideas since his friend Swanderski gave him a cookbook he wrote.

"It was just a conglomeration of things," said Swanderski, whose mother owned a catering business. "I do a lot of Polish cooking.'

Swanderski does all the cooking at home - every day, every single meal and he doesn't like his wife Michelle to meddle. "Because she'll say, Why did you do that?' I'll tell her you ate that three weeks ago and you loved it!" he said.

Swanderski loves breakfast and nominated his "Sunrise Breakfast" as a great way to begin Father's Day. "Serve it with crisp home fries, golden toast and fresh brewed coffee. It will be the best breakfast you ever had," he said. Not only does Swanderski cook, he guys. We love you all. Happy Father's Day.

Michelin star chefs match wine and food in Birmingham

This May, Birmingham's Forté gained a prestigious, Guide Michelin two-star as its sister restaurant. Forte's chef Keith Famie adopted twin brothers, 32-year-old chefs Jacques and Laurent Pourcel, in his kitchen. All participants in the day's events learned to match wine and food much bet-

The wines are those of Fortant de France, a high-quality varietal wine producer from southern France. Fortant wines range in price from $8 to $9.50 per 750mL bottle and include Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc, White Merlot, Syrah Rosé, Syrah, Merlot and Cabernet Sauvignon. The cuisine is that of the Pourcels with recipes from their Michelin two-star restaurant Le Jardin des Sens in southern France's city of Montpellier. Translated from French, the restaurant name is "the garden of the senses." The Pourcel's food, so well-harmonized with the Fortant wines, was a true awakening of the

Le Jardin des Sens was established by the Pourcel brothers in 1988 after they had both graduated from culinary school and trained in French Michelin star restaurants. The very next year, the restaurant received a Gault et Millau listing with two toques. In 1990, the Pourcels got their first Michelin star and by 1992, it was elevated to two. They've since expanded the restaurant with a luxury hotel and are now listed in the Relais et Chateaux guide and the Maitres Cuisiniers de France (French mas-

"Then we select about four wines that we think will be a harmony with the dish. We make the dish and taste the wines. The key is to be sensitive to the acidity in the wine and in the food. If the food doesn't have good acidity, then you can add some lemon juice or a little vinegar to push the level up. If you don't, the wine's acidity will overpower the dish. If the wine's acidity is too low, it's hard to make a

PROFESSIONALLY-WHITENED TEETH

Tooth-whitening procedures performed by the dentist utilize bleaching agents that differ substantially from drugstore formulations. Thus, the dentist can whiten teeth that have become stained, discolored, or darkened to an extent athome bleaching kits cannot be expected to match. One type of in-office bleaching procedure, known as chairside bleaching, uses an oxidizing agent that is painted onto the teeth, after which its whitening effect is activated by a special light. Three to four visits, each taking up to an hour, are necessary to complete the work. Nightguard bleaching, on the other hand, makes use of a custom-fabricated mouthguard holding bleaching gel that is worn according to the dentist's recommendations. At your next appointment we'll be happy to discuss if tooth-whitening is an option for you. At LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, we are professionals who want you to look and feel your best. Today's technology enables us to make your teeth better looking than ever before. When is the last time you had a complete dental exam? Call us at 478-2110 and we'll gladly answer any questions you may have. We're located at 19171 Merriam Road. Come smile

Olive oil, butter, sea salt, pepper and dry thyme Juice of one lemon

In a small skillet, sauté onions in one tablespoon olive oil. Add olives and anchovies. Reduce heat to low and allow mixture to cook over very low heat to blend flavors. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Preheat oven to 350°F

Roll out dough to 1/8-inch thick. Cut into six 3 to 4-inch cir-

Slice two of the tomatoes and reserve six best slices. Seed and dice all remaining tomatoes.

Spread filling on each unbaked crust and lay a whole unskinned tomato slice on top of each bread dough round. Sprinkle with thyme, season with salt, sprinkle with olive oil and season with pepper. Bake on a cookie sheet about 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, in a medium skillet sauté shallots and garlic in one tablespoon butter. Add diced tomatoes and wine. Season with thyme. Cook mixture until liquid is reduced by half. Add fish stock, mix and add olive oil to taste. Whisk in some butter to thicken and season with salt and pepper.

In another small pan, cook 12 unskinned garlic cloves in a mixture of water and olive oil until garlic is softened.

In a non-stick skillet, large enough to hold all the monkfish, sear the fish in olive oil for about 8 minutes. Turn fillets frequently. Season with salt and pepper. Remove fillets from skillet and cut each lengthwise.

To serve: Place a tart on each of six plates. Top with split monkfish fillets. Add the whole, cooked garlic cloves to the plate as garnish. Serve sauce on the side of each plate. # Share the gift of good health with Dad

Whether your dad is a traditional "meat and potatoes" man, or someone who has taken nutritious eating to heart in recent vears, Father's Day is a wonderful opportunity to show how much you care about him and his health. Plan a special meal that uses some of his favorite foods in a healthy way that is downright

If dad loves beef, present him with zesty beef medallions, prepared by cutting 1/4-inch slices of select eye of round (a fourounce serving contains just 6 grams of fat). Brown the pieces for one minute on each side in a skillet coated with non-stick cooking spray, remove and place on a platter to keep warm. In the skillet, prepare a light, spicy gravy by sauteing 1/3 cup sliced spring onion; then adding 1/4 cup water, 2 tablespoons white wine and a 1/4 teaspoon instant beef bouillon granules. Stir 1-1/2 teaspoons flour and 2 teaspoons Dijon mustard into 1/4 cup plain nonfat yogurt and add to the onion mixture, stirring constantly until thick and bubbly. Serve the medallions with a steamed carrot and potato duet and round out the meal with feather-light angel food cake and fruit sorbet.

For the pasta lover, thrill him with a vegetable-rich pasta primavera. Steam chopped onions, broccoli florets, mushrooms, zucchini slices, carrot slices and peas until tender. In a separate pan, saute two minced garlic cloves in a teaspoon of sesame oil, add a cup of chicken broth. the steamed vegetables, and sliced cherry tomatoes; season the mixture with oregano and marioram and simmer for five minutes. Serve the vegetable sauce over cooked spaghetti with a bit of grated Parmesan cheese. Include a fresh loaf of Italian bread and finish with a dessert of low-fat frozen yogurt topped with rosy fresh strawberry

If Dad appreciates fine cuisine, create an elegant chicken with orange sauce. Bake skinless, boneless chicken breasts and, while they cook, create the savory sauce by combining 4 teaspoons cornstarch, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, 1/8 teaspoon ginger, 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon, I cup orange juice and I tablespoon lemon juice in a small sauce pan. Bring the mixture to a boil while stirring constantly, and simmer for one minute. Remove the sauce from the heat, add an 11-oz. can of drained,

The $7.1 billion budget bill was sent to the House for concurrence in Senate amendments. But House agreement is unlikely because on May 28 majority Democrats voted to keep all three facilities open.

So the bill will go to a conference committee - three senators (two Republicans and a Democrat) and three representatives (two Democrats and a Republican) to iron out differences. Geake, as chair of the Senate appropriations subcommittee, is likely to be a member.

Given the deep divisions between the chambers, however, the conference committee is likely to have a tough time. Lawmakers hope to adjourn before the Fourth of July. The new fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

Schoolcraft College trustees were literally fit to be tied May 28.

They deadlocked, 3-3, on a recommendation to delete two academic probation and dismissal policies from the college's policies and procedures manual. They will revisit the issue June 25 when administrators will report on the implications of such an action.

Before the tie vote, administrators told trustees the policy was duplicated elsewhere, but once the vote was taken, trustees indicated they wanted more information before acting on it again.

Administrators wanted a probation policy removed which places students on academic probation if their gradepoint average falls below 2.0 after completing 15 credit hours. Those students must meet with a counselor before registering for each semester until that student maintains a cumulative grade-

A second policy calls for students to be dismissed if they fail to reach the 2.0 grade point average after 30 hours. A student may appeal the dismissal to the dean of instruction, or a further appeal may be made to the Academic Probation and Dismissal Committee.

Administrators said the deletions of the two academic policies and three other policies were proposed to eliminate items that were duplicated in the manual or existed in the student catalog. But the change was questioned by trustees Steve Ragan, Richard DeVries and Brian Broderick.

Ragan wondered what the implications would be for trustees or future college boards if trustees removed the

"Normally we do these on face value, but we've had a lot of these," Ragan said. "The cumulative effect is we're removing ourselves from a large area." Ragan asked whether the catalog policies could be changed without board approval, hence bypassing trustees on the academic policy if that were to hap-

Schoolcraft president Richard McDowell responded that sometimes the policy wording is not up to date or they do not comply with the law.

"Many of these are word changes," McDowell said. "The changes have been rather minor. We're really not changing the direction or scope of what we're Trustee Richard DeVries agreed with McDowell, but added that the academic policies "were a little different" and believed the college needed a policy in the manual on academics.

Conway Jeffress, vice president of academic instruction, said students still can appeal dismissals, all the way to the board if necessary.

Board vice chair John Walsh said he was "comfortable" leaving the decision on academic policy to educators and administrators. "Perhaps Steve (Ragan) is right. If we delete this, what is it being replaced with. But I'm very comfortable leaving it to the staff."

But Ragan added: "I always have concerns about voting with the absence of other information.

Then the board voted, 3-3, with Walsh, board chair Patricia Watson and trustee Carol Strom supporting the deletion of the two academic policies, while trustees Ragan, DeVries and Brian Broderick opposed it.

Trustee Mary Breen was absent. Broderick said he had "full faith with administrators, but there should be something in the policy book that refers to procedure.' Strom asked if the administration could return with some kind of policy. We'll take another look at it and come back," McDowell said. The college's cabinet of McDowell, Jeffress, Butch Raby, Schoolcraft's vice president of business services, and Sandra Florek, dean of marketing and communication, will meet to compile information for the board for the trustees' next meeting.

"We went back through that (policies and procedures manual) and deleted those things that were covered in other places," Florek said. "Students still have a final recourse with the board of

Later, Watson said the academic poli-cies were outlined in a admissions policy in the procedures section of the man-

"The (college) handbook also represents a contract the student has with the college," Watson said. "Most of us don't want a change in the policy, but much of the requested changes repre-sented duplication."

That information was not immediatey presented to trustees, but Watson believed it would be clarified for the next meeting. Students can check the academic procedures regarding probation and dismissal in the new student catalog for 1997-98 - also received recently by college officials.

Wayne County Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, will lead the Wayne County Commission's Task Force on Townships.

The task force was created at the urging of McCotter and Commissioner Bruce Patterson, R-Canton. It is the first commission task force aimed at town-

"The purpose of this committee will be to ensure that the county is fully and fairly providing all of the services to which townships are entitled," McCotter said.

BEAUTY AND THE BEST

Better take care of summer skin

BY JEFFREY BRUCE

It is tempting at this time of the year to go outdoors and soak up as many rays as possible. It feels great, puts thoughts of winter behind you, and besides, you're getting lots of Vitamin D into the body, right?

But times are changing, thanks to the depleted ozone layer and much more information about the effects of the sun.

I don't want to spoil all your fun, so let's see if we can tackle this sensibly. Not everybody wants to sit inside the whole time, and those who go outside don't want to be covered from head to toe with protective clothing.

If you are enjoying outdoor activities, make sure you reapply sunscreen every couple of hours or after coming out of the water, even if you are using waterproof lotion. Experts tell us to use a minimum SPF of 15, but if you are spending a day at the beach, I would suggest a higher number than that. You will still get a healthy glow, but with a bit of luck, no burn.

If you are wearing a full face of make-up, do not feel that you are totally protected. Check the list of ingredients, ask the person selling you the products, make sure that there is some form of protection in the items you are using. Whether they are in fashion or not, and thankfully they usually are, wear as many big brimmed hats as possible. If you don't want liver spots or aging marks, don't forget the backs of your hands and neck.

To get some expert advice I spoke with Dr. Lisa Manz-Dulac of the East Side Dermatology Clinic. She gave me the same advice that has been written about, advice that we probably don't want to hear. However, with skin cancer rates growing rapidly, it pays to heed her warn-

Most people, according to Dr. Manz-Dulac, do not recognize the warning signs, even though these signs should be easy to detect. We also forget that exposure to the sun is accumulative, and that the most damage is done by burns before we reach the age of 18. For most of us that is too late, but not for our children and grandchildren. Do not forget to pay particular attention to their skin.

One of the secrets of healthy skin, not only in the summer months, is moisture. Not only in the sense of using plenty of moisture lotions after you have been in the sun, although that is very important.

Do not forget to drink as much fluid as possible. In the summer time you are unaware of how much fluid the body is losing due to perspiration, exhaling while doing activities, etc. In order to keep the body replenished, to flush toxins out, and to give the cells of the body, including the face, nourishment, keep water as close

My favorite trick is to freeze a couple of plastic bottles with water overnight, and when going out either to the beach, playing sports, or even just riding around in the car between appointments or errands, keep sipping the water as it defrosts.

Apart from keeping those damaging rays away from your eyes, big sunglasses also stop you from squinting which can lead to those old friends, the crow's feet. Even on overcast days, the glare is strong enough to wear glasses. Think of the money you'll save on plastic surgery later. It has been very popular for a few years now to slather fruit acids, or alpha hydroxy acid, as it is properly known, on the face in order to get rid of wrinkles. You have probably been warned by your doctor that you cannot go into the sun. They mean it!

Dermatologists have also been taking note of the fact that a lot of you, and you know who you are, are using too much of these products. Some women have been found to be using more than one product at a time. Other women are not adept at using the correct amount of one product, thinking that a little more will give better

If you are one of these, be prepared to encounter problems such as turning red, itching, burning and stinging at a much higher rate

I would be remiss if I didn't thank Greg Allowe of the exquisite Townsend Hotel in Birmingham for hosting my personal makeovers the past three months. For those of you who couldn't book an appointment (we were completely sold out) I am now scheduling September dates. For more information please call 1-800-944-6588. And remember, sunscreen!

Marketing downtowns means special events

Main Street shopping districts and their savvy promoters use festivals, fairs and frequent shopper programs to lure families away from Friday nights in front of their television set - especially in the

Last summer, downtown Birmingham merchants launched a children's theatre series on Friday nights, and families who'd otherwise be home "nesting," filled the streets, ice cream shops and delis.

"It was wonderful," said Gail Got-thelf, director of the Principal Shopping District (PSD). "Likewise for our Night on the Town, Jazz Festival, and Art Fair."

Downtown Rochester promotions director Kristi Trevarrow, reports similar success during her town's Dancing In The Streets series, the annual Summer Sidewalk Sales, and the Art-N-Apples festival.

"These events are so wonderful because they bring out friends and neighbors to enjoy the summer, have some fun and discover what's new in the community," she said. "The town's merchants also get the chance to show off their products and services to many new people."

Judy Downey of the Farmington Downtown Development Authority, said her town also uses special events to introduce new customers to the shops and restaurants along

"We have our concert series, our winter and summer fun series for children, a Halloween festival and a holiday event," she said. "We also have a Farmer's Market on Saturday mornings to bring folks into town, and of course our Founders Festival in July is always the big celebration.

Downey said she focuses her energies on the special events and keeping a "strong merchant base" downtown so Farmington "does not suffer the loss of retail in 10 years.

"It's up to each individual store to do their own marketing as well, like offering customer discounts and frequent shopper rewards. Many of the stores, like the Bon Ton Hallmark Shoppe do. So do our chain stores.'

Gotthelf said although the merchants are considering offering designated senior citizen shopping days, holiday shopping days just for kids, and customer appreciation days,"Birmingham is not a coupon/discount town."

We see more opportunities in special events that draw new customers to the area to see what we have to offer, than handling discounts," she said. "Maybe retail dollars aren't immediately generated from a special event, but people from surrounding areas walk by our windows and make plans to come back and shop.

Madonna's teacher prep program gets seal of approval

Madonna University's standards for teachers and teacher preparation has been recognized by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

Madonna University has received official notification that its advanced level teacher education programs have been accredited and its existing programs at the initial teacher preparation level will continue to receive NCATE accreditation.

These accreditations are in place through the year 2001. This five-year period is the maximum period an institution can be accredited. Madonna's teacher education program was first accredited by NCATE in 1972.

NCATE is recognized by the U.S. Department of Education as the only accrediting body for schools, departments and colleges of education. On-site visits, document review, and accreditation decisions are all carried out by professionals from the education community, including teachers and teacher educators as well as education policy makers and school specialists.

Representatives from NCATE and the state of Michigan visited the Madonna campus in November to review the teacher preparation program and the four master's programs in education.

Now celebrating 50 years of academic excellence, Madonna University began offering teacher education programs in 1947 when it first became a four-year liberal arts college. Advanced degree programs in education were initiated in 1988.

"Our teacher education program at Madonna University plays a significant role in producing teachers of quality who possess a humanistic dimension which is directly aligned with the University's mission and so needed in today's challenging educational environments," said Robert Kimball, chairperson, department of education.

The University recommends students for both provisional certificates and the Professional Education Certificate, as well as additional endorsements to existing certificates. Students may complete requirements for either elementary provisional certification (K-8) or secondary provisional certification.

On the graduate level, education programs are offered in Catholic school leadership, educational leadership, learning disabilities and literacy education.

"NCATE accreditation signals to all of the University's stake holders that our program meets the highest standards of excellence," said Ernest Nolan, vice president for academic affairs. "Since teacher education was one of the University's founding programs in 1947, it is fitting that, 50 years later, the University has been acknowledged as a leader in the field of education."

Parks offer family fun

Art/flowers are forever

n Jeanne Hutko's mind, flowers, art and music all have one thing in common, they last through the ages. Hutko is co-chairing the second annual "Flowers are Forever" Garden Walk noon to 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 24. The walk, sponsored by the Trailwood Garden Club of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association, combines with the opening of a floral art show and sale at the Plymouth Community Arts Council. Together, the two events celebrate the everlasting nature of flowers and art and their ability to renew.

Admission to the art show is free. Tickets for the garden walk are $6 in advance, $7 the day of the walk and available in Plymouth at Good's Nursery, Saxton's Garden Center, Picadilly's, and the arts council office at 774 N. Sheldon. In case of severe weather, the walk and opening will take place the following day. For more information about the walk, call Jeanne Hutko at (313) 459-5285 or Georgia Randinitis (313) 459-7146.

"It's a day to renew your spirit," said Hutko. "Flowers are just like art and music. That's how we came up with the title 'Flowers are Forever.' They may die or lie dormant in winter but in spring the flowers are alive just like arts and music."

Designing gardens

Hutko thought the walk could serve as a way to introduce the community to the newly renovated home of the arts council. After visiting gardens ranging from English and American Cottage styles to woodlands, art afi-

Departing: DIA director Samuel Sachs in Rivera Court at the DIA. The Fresco that adorns the walls of the court is called Detroit Industry and was created by Diego Rivera.

KEEPER OF THE DIA PASSES THE TORCH

BY FRANK PROVENZANO STAFF WRITER

n mid May, Detroit Institute of Arts director Samuel Sachs II announced his resignation to accept the top position at the prestigious Frick Collection in New York. Amid the current financial crisis at the DIA, Sachs' pending departure adds to the uncertainty about the institution's future.

At the time, Sachs speculated that his resignation could be a "catalytic event" to draw attention to the DIA's dire situation. Weeks later, that seems prophetic. Late last week, the Detroit City Council reversed its position and agreed to consider proposals for a nonprofit organization to run the DIA. (Currently, the City and the Founders Society jointly operate the museum.)

Sachs called the Council's decision "a most important first step in the process" of addressing how the DIA will come up with funding to cover an $8 million budgetary deficit. The move, according to Sachs, may symbolize the type of political partnership and optimism to draw donors and broaden public

Unfortunately, a potentially catastrophic situation awaits if the DIA cannot attract additional long-term, stable funding. Frankly, few at the state or county level are taking the lead to resolve the DIA's long-term financial dilemma, much to the dismay of the 46,000 Founders Society members, many of whom live in Oakland County and Western

A proposed tri-county cultural millage to support the DIA has yet to gain wide backing. Many public officials, recalling the funding controversies of the National Endowment for the Arts, maintain that the arts should seek their own private funding.

In what is expected to be one of his last interviews as director of the DIA, Sachs' final words resound with urgency and warning. He wonders if public officials can put aside partisan interests to figure out how to save one of the country's greatest cultural treasures.

Talking with the O&E from his Detroit home in Palmer Park, Sachs, 61, has the self-assuredness of being in control of his destiny. He's obviously proud that he's given "110 percent" during one of the most tumultuous periods in the museum's 112-year history.

But now, he's clearly ready to move on. The question, of course, is whether the DIA can move on with-

O&E: It's been about a month since you announced your resignation. Any second thoughts or second guessing?

Sachs: Second thoughts, probably not. Second guessing, yes. You always want a sense of closure. I'm very proud of what we've accomplished in the last 12 years. I wish I could've helped us get over this current hurdle so people would feel like the museum is on much more solid ground. The statements we've been making about the impending financial disaster are very real and imminent. If something isn't done it's going to be very unpleasant.

The simple solution of having the Detroit City Council take appropriate action (streamlining the management structure of the DIA) isn't the fix, but a step toward a fix.

O&E: If the Detroit City Council had decided to accept bids (earlier than last week) for a nonprofit organization to run the DIA, would you still have decided to accept the Frick Sachs: With this offer that I received - even in the best of times - I wouldn't have refused. The Frick is the real gem of American museums. Superb in every aspect. Beautifully located. The activities at the Frick revolve around keeping the flame of quality. Plus I'll be working with the extraordinary adjunct, the research library.

O&E: When some people heard about your resignation, they thought, "He's jumping from a sinking ship." How do you respond to these critics?

Sachs: The immediate response is that they don't know me. I don't think anyone could claim that I'm bailing out after being here for 12 years. It's not inappropriate at this stage of my career to seek another opportunity regardless of whatever the situation (at the DIA).

I'm in no way regretful about the last 12 years. For the last six years, some people have said to me, "Why are you staying here?" To me, that's the more interesting question.

O&E: What are your proudest accomplishments during the last 12 years?

DIA volunteers gear up for Egypt exhibit

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN STAFF WRITER

If you love Egyptian art and have a few hours to spare, the Detroit Institute of Arts has the ticket for you. In order to manage the crowd of 250,000 visitors expected to attend "Splendors of Ancient Egypt," the museum is seeking volunteers for a one-time only program. Special Egypt Volunteers who work at least one shift during the exhibition will be allowed to purchase two admission tickets for the price of one.

Dianne Abel, assistant director of development for volunteer services and special events, estimates the DIA will need to fill 3,000 volunteer positions for one of the largest exhibitions of ancient Egyptian treasures to visit the United States in "Splendors of Ancient Egypt" opens July 16 with more than 200 masterpieces including jewelry, mummy cases, statues, wall carvings, ceramics from the pre-dynastic period to the seventh century A.D. The exhibit creates a panoramic view of the pharaohs, political unrest, technical achievements, and afterlife with objects drawn from the collection of the Roemer-Pelizaeus Museum in Hildesheim, Germany.

According to Abel, this is the first DIA exhibition to use timed tickets due to the fact the museum is expecting between 800 to 1,000 visitors per hour.

This is such a huge project, we need community support," said Abel of Beverly Hills. "Splendors of Ancient Egypt' is three times our regular exhibition size and varies from jewelry to a two-ton sarcophagus.

Sachs: The British, instead of calling us curators, call us keepers. That's a good name. You keep this valuable treasure as a learning place, a place to go to repair your soul.

I came in 1985 and everyone said that it wasn't the museum's finest moment. We changed the relationship between the city and city government. It's much more of a partnership. We changed the relationship with donors and made changes to run the DIA as a solid business. For the past 12 years, we've never run a deficit. We have no debt. We've ended every year, including the year (1991) we took a $7 million cut, with a surplus. Now that's a triumph of management.

We've done this with the formidable assistance of the Founders Society. Last year, our volunteers gave in excess of 75,000 hours of service. (Since 1985, Founders Society membership has doubled to 46,000.)

We've renovated the Pre-Columbian gallery, the Korean and Japanese galleries, the French 19th-century gallery, the Dutch and Flemish, the Rivera Court, the Great Hall. Then there's been a new roof, air conditioning, new handling equipment. Much of it done with city bond money. (In 1988, the city passed a $25 million bond authorization. To date, the city has sold about $18 million )

The big problem, however, is that the exterior walls of the building need serious treatment. That's likely to be a $60 million

O&E: What are the consequences of the foreboding talk about the DIA's future?

Sachs: When we drastically reduced our schedule in 1991 many people thought we were closed. Attendance dropped precipitously. We had to cancel many exhibits. Since then, we've turned it around.

Many institutions that want to partner with us, no longer see us as a stable partner. People wonder why the great exhibits don't come to Detroit? If you want those things to happen here, we need some (financial) stability.

We've had six years of stability with the Partnership for Renewal (which has raised about $27 million). Because of good management, we've been allowed to run (on those funds) for six years. That's brought us the Egyptian exhibit.

But the future of the DIA's stability requires predictable funding.

O&E: How close are we to a catastrophic situation - closing the museum or cutting back the accessibility to the Sachs: We have said this over and over again. As of June 30, 1998, we don't have the $8 million we need. "Hello!" How can we be clearer? The only hope is either regional funding, which is highly unlikely in a short period of time. Or to mount an emergency bridge fund.

Do we go back to the public and say we need more help from many of the same people who supported the Partnership for Renewal. I don't think that the mood in the giving community is sufficiently encouraged by the prospects of the DIA that they'll easily vote with their dollars to extend the bridge. I think it's going to be very hard going. Unless there's some kind of political breakthrough.

In the long run, the DIA cannot extend itself on this bridge. There must be stable, predictable funding. A regional tax, I believe, could do that.

O&E: What are the prospects of regional fund-

Sachs: They're good. But we're sitting here wondering what, when and how, particularly when Oakland County's executive came out against it. It's worked in other communities. In Denver, regional funding for the arts has been extremely successful. It creates a support fund for the symphony, the zoo, the DIA as well as small and emerging arts organizations

When you talk about taxes, most people have big numbers in mind. We're talking about it costing $25 a year (per taxpayer). How many people spend that much and more to go to a professional sports game?

O&E: Why hasn't the general public fully realized that the future of the fifth largest art museum in the country is threatened?

Sachs: The arts are a tremendously convenient target. Politically, bashing the arts is a bril-

You have a (state) administration that says it believes in job creation, education and tourism, the DIA and the arts are all of those. The DIA is the number three tourist attraction in the state. It ought to be an integral part of any educational system.

I'm concerned about the appreciation for the arts on a governmental level. There's all this furor about the National Endowment for the Arts. In 30 years, the National Endowment has given hundreds of thousands of grants and maybe six to eight have been controversial, and somehow the whole thing is threatened. What does it save the taxpayer? 64 cents (per person). France, Germany and Canada spends $10 to $40 per person (on public money to the arts), and in the US it's 64 cents.

We need creative people so we can compete worldwide. Where does inspiration for creativity come from? The arts.

O&E: In a recent article, The New York Times referred to the sterling, well-financed new Museum of African-American History and the financial woes and crumbling facade of the DIA to highlight the conflicts of race, class and labor in Detroit. Do you agree?

Sachs: Detroit has a difficult role. The DIA is written into the city charter. It's been suggested to have a charter referendum to amend the chart. Right now, the city council doesn't have any oversight over the DIA, other than budgetary. That's where the difficulty comes in. The mayor appoints the Detroit Arts Commission. But it doesn't mention the council.

Since the city put actually a negative amount into the DIA, budgetary oversight has been an oxymoron. (The city charges the DIA for police protection.) If you amend the charter, and the DIA is a free-standing entity, like the AA museum, maybe they'd feel more comfortable.

Most museums across the country are run by nonprofit boards, including museums that used to be - or still are - municipally owned.

O&E: Years from now, when the history of the DIA is written, how do you think your tenure will be characterized?

Sachs: (Laughs) Some will say, "Good riddance to him." I hope they say it was a period of solidification, of bringing credibility and respectability back to the DIA at a time when it desperately needed to have its entire community aware of its tremendous value. I'm hopeful about the acquisitions that I've made. Most talk about my predecessor William Valentiner as having built the collection. But we haven't done badly in the last 12 years. (DIA endowment has increased from $20 million to $70 million.)

I hope they'll remember the exhibitions. Not least is the Egyptian exhibit (opening July 16 through January), which will be one of the truly memorable events in the DIA history.

son, the special Egypt volunteers are critical to the everyday operation of the museum.

"It will take about double the amount of volunteers because it's a very extensive exhibition occupying 18 galleries and some 19,000 square feet," said Lazzerin, a Bloomfield Hills resident. "The volunteers are very important because without their assistance, the museum would have to close the other galleries during the exhibition."

There is no special criteria for volunteers and unlike the regular Gallery Service, you need not be a DIA Founders Society mem-

"We're looking for anyone willing to give their time from high school seniors, to couples, retired and working people," said Lazzerin. "It's important for Detroiters and suburbanites alike to realize the importance of the exhibition. It enhances the museum's reputation to host the exhibition, plus they'll have a lot of fun. Hopefully, people who haven't visited the museum in a while will consider volunteering. It's a wonderful chance to see the exhibition first hand

Antoinette Bryant is excited about volunteering to work in the galleries during the exhibition. This is the first time, the Farmington Hills resident has volunteered at the DIA. Bryant has visited Egypt several times, once as part of an African American heritage study tour with Egyptologist Dr. Asa Hillyard of Georgia State University.

"I volunteered because I think people should be able to see and learn about this great African civilization that came out of the Nile Valley," said Bryant.
"Although I haven't seen any of the artifacts, I've seen artifacts in museums around the country. The exhibition should be educa-tional for all of us, not only children but adults. For years, Elaine Beresh of West Bloomfield thought about devoting a few hours to the DIA and other arts organizations, but works full time. The Special Egypt Volunteers program gives her the opportunity to accommodate her busy schedule.

"The exhibition triggered my decision to volunteer and I thought this was absolutely perfect way to start," said Beresh.

delivered, well-placed punch in In the title story, a young runaway named Elise finds herself stranded one afternoon with three small children when she promises to sit with them while their mother looks for a job. The mother never returns. Perhaps, like Elise, she has run away also. In this disturbing story, set though. It is enough to know this young runaway's aloneness and growing panic on this particular muggy afternoon in this small odorous apartment with these monstrous little boys and their needy, infant sister. We hang on every word of this story about damaged lives because we care so much about its characters from the abandoned children whose "energy unspooled crazily and spilled all over," to the highstrung mother who "seemed to flicker in the dark," to the solitary Elise, moving through her life like splintered, buoyant flotsam after some terrible shipwreck. In "The Dentist," a sexually promiscuous writer experiences a strong attraction toward her 'mild, pale, middle-aged" dentist. As her fixation grows - and he does not return her feelings she decides to see a therapist, who tells her that the dentist sounds "like a fairly typical man perhaps a little bit frightened and immature." He may be "fairly typical," but Gaitskill's dentist is never stereotypical. And though he may appear slightly stiff, he is never the least bit wooden. In a cast of characters that (again) simply glows with life, this pale dispenser of pain and novacaine utterly beams. You can particularly hear his grunts as he wrestles with that stubborn wisdom tooth, almost smell the sweat as he starts to perspire from the effort. Gaitskill brilliantly enhances this vaguely nightmarish tale by occasionally adding the odd spot of cartoonish color.

All the stories in this collection emphasize life's contradictions, with Gaitskill's characters trying for connections, either offering a kind of rescue, or groping for one. But the twisting currents of everyday existence get in the way, and reaching out is fraught with risk. Sometimes souls are dashed against the rocks. "The Girl on the Plane" is a story about a loquacious salesman who reaches out to a travel mate, but repels her with a story from the emotional baggage he's brought on board. In "Tiny, Smiling Daddy," a father seeks to know and understand a lesbian daughter who, at his own hands, has grown into a stranger. In 'Comfort," a mother is badly injured in an auto accident, and loved ones attempt to soothe each other in the midst of the crisis. Their aloneness, however, remains distinct, their efforts doomed by their own singularity.

Along with memorable characters and rather stunning perceptions about life in general (and our times in particular), Gaitskill fortifies these stories with a kind of gritty detail that brings these scenes to life instantaneously - from a "minute pistil of broccoli" on a dirty plate, to a "tiny green tear" tattooed beneath a woman's eye, to "the dull ruffle of toilet paper unraveling from its roll.' The concluding, rather rambling story, "Stuff," centers around a woman approaching middle-age who searches for identity through heterosexual and gay relationships. The lead character's tendency toward over-analysis and second-guessing occasionally grows tiresome, and this story stumbles into implausibility here and there. but Gaitskill's nimble talents pull it off, anyway, leaving her fans in disappointment that every fine thing must come to an

Vodka, Tears and Lenin's Angel By Jennifer Gould (St. Martin's Press, $30)

"The Russians were easy to bribe," my dad often told me while explaining how he escaped from the Soviet Union in 1945. Having eluded the Nazis in '39, he fell into Soviet hands and was sent to a prison camp in Vorkuta, Stalin's gulag 100 miles north of the Arctic Circle. After the war, he obtained his release in exchange for a promise to remain in Russia. But freedom beckoned, and cigarettes and chocolate bars easily purchased hiding places on trains that headed toward the Fifty years later, my dad would not be surprised to learn that little has changed, despite the fall of the Communist regime. Today, in Russia, "anything can be bought for the right price," maintains author Jennifer Gould. Currently a staff writer for the "Village Voice" and freelancer for numerous publications, Gould also speaks from experience. In 1992, the 24year-old journalist left a good job at the "Philadelphia Inquirer" to travel to Russia so that she could see history in the making. At the time, this gutsy young woman had no job waiting for her, no Russian-language skills, and only a single contact - a friend of a friend - to help her get settled.

Recipient of the prestigious Canadian Council Grant, Ms. Gould tells the story of her 4year adventure in her book: "Vodka, Tears, and Lenin's Gould arrived in Russia when everyone was convinced that emerging capitalism would soon bring about an era of freedom and prosperity in the FSU, the Former Soviet Union. Demo-cratic "firsts" were announced with great fanfare: the "first" stock exchange, the "first" priva-tized factory, the "first" McDon'Vodka, Tears, and Lenin's Angel' leaves no doubt about Gould's considerable talent and intelligence. For the most part, her insights are profound and truly impressive for one so young.

ald's, etc.

But it wasn't long before disillusionment set in. Seventy years of communist rule and mindset (privilege, status, paranoia, dependence) were hard to reverse. When old laws were repealed, new laws to assist budding capitalists and foreign investors failed to take their place. Quoting Georgian leader Ioseliani, Gould writes, "We're moving from feudalism to capitalism, gaining freedom and individual rights - before there are laws for people to abide by."

Shortly after her arrival in Moscow, Gould found a full-time job with the "Moscow Times," an English-language newspaper for expatriates, diplomats, and business executives. Her first reports focused on social welfare. She investigated the disenfranchised: the homeless, sick, and elderly. She visited the runaway children living in train stations or abandoned houses and the "troublesome" teens drugged to submission in psychiatric hospitals. She interviewed "swallows" like Marina Oswald Porter, young women once used as communist agents of "sexpionage."

As Gould's acculturation and language skills increased, so did her social and professional contacts. She met Russian and foreign millionaire "biznesmeni." artists and entertainers, and political leaders of various persuasions. In 1995, she accompanied fascist presidential candidate Vladimir Zhirinovsky on an 8-day boat trip down the Volga interview him for "Playboy. The interviews revealed a perverse and self-destructive man, a would-be potentate who admits that his brand of madness reflects the qualities of a "sick, abnormal country."

"Vodka, Tears, and Lenin's Angel" leaves no doubt about

Gould's considerable talent and intelligence. For the most part, her insights are profound and truly impressive for one so young. We can only wonder what projects and books lie ahead for this already accomplished author.

But Gould's loyalty to a man whose ideology blatantly failed and ruined the lives of millions of innocent people is puzzling, to say the least. Nicknamed "Lenin's Angel" because of her political sympathies, she writes. 'Russian communism 'may have' (quotations are mine) turned out to be a totalitarian tool for continued, state-sanctioned oppression, imperialism, and anti-Semitism, but in theory it wasn't so bad. There's a lot of good to be found in reading Lenin."

What good is there in communism, Leninist or otherwise? The problems in Russia today are, after all, not the fault of democracy and capitalism, but of a system that taught people dependence instead of selfreliance and replaced the incentive of lawful profit with that of fear. My Dad left Russia with no illusions. He'd been there as a victim, not as a starry-eyed witness. For him, communism, Leninism, or whatever you call it, was "The horror! The horror!"

"I'm especially excited about the show this year because of the artists we have," said Murphy. "Last year, we had 62 artists. This year, we'll have close to 100: a blacksmith, jewelry maker from Louisiana who uses natural materials, and a husband and wife from Indian River who make decorative model boats that serve as coffee tables and book shelves."

There will also be booths featuring the art works of Canton Seniors, and local high school students. Canton Project Arts, the township's official arts council, will have a booth offering information about the organization and their activities

'I think people will be surprised not only by the size but the different arts and crafts we'll have," said Murphy. "Something new this year is Plaster Works, a new Canton Township business rented a tent. They'll have unpainted ceramics, paints and brushes and the kids will be able to paint dogs and cats and other figurines right on the spot."

Canton watercolorist Susan Fisher is one of the artists displaying work. Fisher returned to painting four years ago after a 20-year hiatus to raise a family. Since then, she exhibited in Henry Ford Community College's Women Artists exhibition in 1995 and other local shows. This is her first art fair.

David Geistler of Garden City will bring his award-winning woodcarvings of birds. The lifesize versions are true to color. Fairgoers may recognize Geistler's work from a display of his birds in the Golden Fox Club House at Fox Hills Country Club in Plymouth.

While the adults are browsing through the fine art, kids will have fun creating hats and other craft projects at the Kids Art Workshop sponsored by Canton Parks and Recreation.

"The Kids Art Workshop is something we've done every year," said Bob Dates, Liberty Fest chairman and Canton Parks and Recreation supervisor. "Paul LaTour is coordinating the workshop. He has an unbelievable imagination and makes it a fun event for the kids to make something. In 10 or 15 minutes, they come out of the tent with a completed project.'

Mary Brecht Stephenson is one of six watercolorists featured in the show along with Kay Rowe of Canton; Donna Vogelheim and Marjorie Chellstorp, Farmington Hills; Johnnie Crosby, Northville, and Joanne Porter, Saline. Stephenson is a former assistant curator of 20th century art at the Detroit Institute of Arts. Exhibition co-chair Lin Ware invited Stephenson to show after seeing her work in the Michigan Watercolor Society's 50th anniversary exhibition at the Detroit Institute of Arts and then visiting the Detroit artist's studio.

"I've always loved to paint flowers and I love to garden," said Stephenson as she spoke about her work during an interview at the arts council. "Flowers and fruit both have symbolic meaning of the beautiful things

San Francisco has surprises for old friends

BY JUDITH DONER BERNE

Count us among the people who have lost their hearts to San Francisco, partly because part of our heart – our youngest child – has chosen to live there. Over the years, between visiting San Francisco on our own, for business meetings and, now, to see our daughter, we have seen most of "the sights." With those out of the way, it's time to discover another layer of this active, cosmopolitan "City by the Bay."

Saturday morning's Farmer's Market at the base of Market Street at the Embarcadaro finds us shoulder to shoulder with San Franciscans, recycled bags in hand. They're purchasing among other items fresh produce, flowers and not just sour dough but all kinds of breads. "These are the best beans in the world," one native confided, as he persuaded me to take a package of Phipps Country Western Heirloom Bean Soup, recipe and seasoning included, back to Michigan with me. Coincidentally, I'm finishing the last of the batch as I'm writing this.

San Francisco is a walking city, but if you jog you need to find some part of it that isn't all hills. That's the Embarcadaro, which runs alongside the waterfront. You used to have to watch your step very carefully, because when San Francisco lost most of its commercial shipping business to nearby Oakland, the working pier area fell into disrepair. Within the last couple of years, however, most of the walkway was repaved, widened and adorned with a horizontal stripe of aquamarine tiles mirroring the water beyond.

Another flat surface is, of course, the Golden Gate Bridge. You obviously have viewed it, and maybe have crossed it on your way to Marin and/or the wine country. But, it's nice tto take the time to run or walk along its pedestrian lane, a 3-3/4 miles round trip. The danger is that even though the weather may be clear and mild as you look out the window of your hotel, it could be a whole other story at the bridge. No matter how warm it is, you'll seldom see a San Franciscan without something with sleeves wrapped around his or her waist, ready at a moment's notice for both the changeable and wide variety of weather within the city. The neighborhood known as the Mission, for example, is reputed to get the most sunlight. Although San Francisco is

Although San Francisco is diverse, its neighborhoods are distinct. The Mission hosts a large working-class Hispanic population as well as Filipinos and blacks. But even in the couple of years we've been observing it, it has undergone gentrification. Cutesy coffee houses and upscale restaurants are moving in next to Formica -countered Tacquerias and Chinese eateries that, oddly, also sell doughnuts. And housing prices are on the Still, there is a distinct contrast as we walk up the hill to Noe Valley, where tony boutiques, small groceries, yogurt shops and an unusually high density of children's clothing and toy stores signal this as an area where young professionals are moving with their families.

The University of California at Berkeley as well as Berkeley itself is worth exploration. You can take the BART (short for Bay Area Rapid Transit). The University of Michigan of the West as we call it, or "Cal" as they call it, is certainly hippier and more diverse than Ann Arbor. Our daughter, a U-M graduate, pronounces it "edgier." It will be interesting to re-visit in a couple more years to see the effect of the repeal of affirmative action - if it stands. The campus, enhanced by a scenic river and stands of redwoods, is prettier than U-M. Plus the weather allows for all kinds of outdoor gathering places of which one is the famous Sproul Plaza, site of the Berkeley sitins of the '60s. Of course, U-M has the Diag. But it was the steps of the Michigan Union where President John F. Kennedy first announced formation of the Peace Corps. Cal has its equivalent of Burton Tower, Sather Tower also known as the Head for the Berkeley Hills for breath-taking views of San Francisco Bay. They give rise to incredible homes, although the area can be dangerously dry in summer and subject to fire. As we hiked a section of Tilden Regional Park, it was fun to see large numbers of young mothers, with babies in knapsacks, also out for an afternoon hike.

If you haven't been to San Francisco in a couple of years, you might note some new "sights" such as the recently relocated public library and Museum of Modern Art. The library has an interesting staircase, designed by New York artist Alice Aycock, that you must ascend to the upper floors to view. The MOMA, so far, is worth seeing more for its architecture than its collection or exhibitions.

The MOMA, the Center for the Arts and two more museums moving to the area – the Jewish and the Mexican – are a part of the South of Market (SoMa) redevelopment. They frame Yerba Buena Gardens. This pocket-sized park with its delightful man-made waterfall and sloping hillside is a perfect spot to catch your breath and make plans for your next trip to

CONSTRUCTION NOTES

AAA Michigan suggests considering alternate routes through the construction zone again this summer on I-75 through Toledo (see accompanying map). There is a potential for long delays, especially during rush hours and holidays. Here are suggested alternate routes: Take I-275 or I-75 south and exit at southbound U.S. 24 (Telegraph Road). Follow it into Toledo until it rejoins I-75 at the Phillips Avenue-Telegraph over-pass. If you're going south of Toledo, then take I-75 south. If headed east or west, take I-75 south to the Ohio Turnpike (I-80/90). If coming from western Michigan or Ann Arbor area, take U.S. 23 south to Ohio, then take I-475 south. If you're going south of Toledo, continue on I-475 to rejoin I-75 south of Toledo. If headed east or west, exit at Ohio Route 2 (Airport Highway, exit 8). Turn left (east) to Reynolds Road (U.S. 20). Then turn right (south) to the Ohio Turnpike (I-80/90. AAA Michigan advises that many Ohio roads, including the Turnpike east of Toledo, will experience summer construction and possible delays. Members can check their local branch offices for updates.

Rain began to fall between games of an Adray Metro Baseball Association double-header Friday night at Livonia's Ford Field.

Livonia Adray coach John Moraitis wasn't hoping for a Game 2 rainout, but having a 3-2 victory over Hines Park in the first game already made the night complete.

"I had lost three by one run, it's about time I win one," said Moraitis, whose team improved to 3-4 overall.

Results of the second game will appear in Thursday's Observer.

Describing the all-Observer girls golf team is quite simple, really. Title contenders.

Individually, they were superb. No argument there. But equally impressive was the effect they had on their teams. Farmington Hills Mercy won the Salem battled throughout the season for supremacy in the Western Lakes Activities Association. Stevenson ended up winning that battle, thanks in large part to the performance of Kelly Kristy. As for Salem - well, the Rocks survived on the play of their Katies, Katie Murinas and Katie Collins. Murinas finished as the area's top performer, earning individual allstate honors with a fifth-place finish at the state tournament.

Those three teams were easily the best in Observerland, which is why

In her four years, she played in every varsity dual match and was the medalist in 27 of the 35. She again earned all-WLAA honors this season, finishing third at the conference tournament She was also sixth at the state regional tournament at Sylvan Glen with a 93.

Kristy averaged 41.9 strokes per nine holes in dual matches and 43.3 overall per nine holes as a senior, marks that made her medalist in nine of 10 dual matches and earned her Stevenson's Brieske Award, presented to the school's female athlete of the year.

"Kelly's record helped our team to its second season with no dual match losses," said Spartan coach John Wagner. "She has set an excellent example for her teammates in every aspect: Her work ethic, skills and char-

Garden City's Marty Vasas brought both his sons, Matthew, 13, and Justin, 10, to meet Mar-

"I like Mark because he always drives clean," Vasas said. "Some drivers bump people off the track, but never Mark.

"I was down in Adrian two years ago (before an MIS event) and waited three hours to get his autograph. I just like his image. L started watching him on TV and it got me started. And now my wife (Cynthia) yells at me whenever I watch a race on TV because I stop everything I'm doing and never get my chores done around the house.

Vasas, a true-blue Ford racing fan, works out of the Mazda lant in Flat Rock. His two sons however, admit to being fans of Terry Labonte and Jeff Gordon.

"I'm a Ford guy all the way, our plant was just bought out by them," Vasas said. "But I won't take it out on my kid,s even though those guys (Labonte and Gordon) drive G.M. cars."

Gene Emerson, 44, of Redford, is also a huge Martin fan. The Texas native, who has dabbled with Busch Grand National crews out of Houston, often travels the Winston Cup circuit. He just returned from a trip from Charlotte and the Coca-Cola World 600. "Mark's a class act, you never hear anything negative about him," Emerson said. "He pretty much stays out of the limelight. He's a family man. I never miss a chance to see him.

Emerson once suffered from a perforated ulcer, losing so much blood that he nearly died.

"I owe a lot to the good Lord and Mark," Emerson said. "He works out and stays in shape. And I try stay healthy by being in the best shape I can. He serves as a source of inspiration."

Happy day: Fans of all ages came to see Martin, with all sorts of things for him to autograph.

"Katie finished in the top-10 in every tournament this year,' said Salem coach Rick Wilson. "Katie's strength was her length off the tee and her consistent allaround game.

"Katie was also always ready to go when the bell rings. She is a mentally tough competitor who continued to maintain a strong demeanor in every competition.'

Murinas will attend Vanderbilt University in the fall, and plans to make the Commodores'

Katie Collins, senior, Plymouth Salem: Okay - there were a couple of downs this year in a career full of ups for Collins. But perhaps the best measure of an athlete is how they respond to

Collins had really one off day, and unfortunately it came at the state regional tournament at Oak Pointe. A team co-captain, she had the best nine-hole average among the Rocks (42.9); her 18-hole average was mighty impressive; too (87.0).

As far as responding to adversity, after an uncharacteristic 96 at the state regional, Collins bounced back immediately, firing an 87 to place second at the WLAA Tournament.

The four-year letterwinner's ability was more than evident earlier this season, when she placed fourth among 120 golfers at the Brighton Invitational (also at Oak Pointe), shooting an 82.

Jennifer Borowiec, sophomore, Farmington Hills Mercy: It's takes a lot of talent to be a team leader as a sophomore - and Borowiec has it.

She was, in basic terms, always in the running. Her best performance of the season was at the Oakland County Tournament: Borowiec shot an 80 to earn medalist honors

There were plenty of other impressive outings, however. She shot an 85 at the Catholic League Tournament to earn medalist honors, shot 89 to place

Smith more than made her mark for the Marlins, however.

The team captain, Smith "helped lead the talented sophomores to victories at the Oakland County, Pinckney and Catholic League tournaments,' said Kowalski. "Kristen has improved each year, and I look forward to one more year of success with her on the team.

Smith averaged 48.0 strokes per nine holes, and came up with consistently strong scores at several major tournaments. Her 92 at the Catholic League Tournament was worth a fifth-place medal; she also shot 96 at the state regional at Sylvan Glen and had a 103 at the state tournament.

Mid-May is the time when many species of migrant birds return through southeastern Michigan on their way to northern breeding grounds.

Colorful warblers like the blackburnian with fiery orange, black and some accentuating white will be passing through from their wintering grounds in northern South America. Blackthroated greens, bay-breasted and black-throated blues are just a few more spectacular warblers that can only be seen for a short time of the year in our

Some of these species will be feeding in the trees around your yard, so be on the lookout. Or keep your ears open for unusual sounds that might cause you to look up at some of these passing jewels. But not far away are some areas where migrants concentrate.

In Dearborn, the University of Michigan manages a natural area as part of the Ford Fairlane Estate adjacent to the Fairlane Towne Center.

Julie A. Crave's new book, "Birds of Southeast Michigan: Dearborn," reports that 247 species of birds have been identified on the property and another 16 in the nearby area.

This approximately 500-acre area is part of the Rouge River floodplain. It's an oasis in a sea of concrete.

Because it's the only area in the vicinity where birds can stop and refuel on their journey, many different species can be seen there.

Julie A. Crave's new book, "Birds of Southeast Michigan: Dearborn," reports that 247 species of birds have been identified on the property and another 16 in the nearby area. That's about 60 percent of all the species that have been identified in Michigan. Not bad for 500 acres.

Metro Beach Metropark near Mt. Clemens is another hot spot for birding. The area adjacent to the nature center is wooded with low lying areas containing water in spring. This prime birding area is also next to the lake where waterfowl can be seen just a short distance from the woods.

Pt. Pelee in Canada is an old standby for birders, but two other less crowded areas are on the southern shore of Lake Erie. Crane Creek State Park and Ottawa National Wildlife Refuge are great places to view migrants. These two areas in Ohio are next to each other on Route 2 about 18 miles east of Toledo. The boardwalk at Crane Creek State Park restricts travel to protect the vegetation, but a variety of migrants come down low and close to the walkway.

If you plan to be sick one day in May to view these migrants, watch the weather map and choose a day when a warm front has passed and a cold front is approaching. This condition provides winds from the south to push a new batch of migrants north. Good birding.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

While most of the attention went to the men's pro tournament last week at Taylor Lanes since it was on a national level, the ladies held a regional pro tournament at Skore Lanes.

Unfortunately, none of the guys from the greater Detroit area made it to the cut of 24 for match play. It was a much different story in the women's contest, as Aleta Sill, former-contest, as Aleta Sill, formerly of Westland and Garden City, now a Dearborn resident, came through with the championship

Winning is nothing new for Sill, as she is now the all-time leading money winner on the ladies pro tour, a member of the WIBC Hall of Fame and destined to gain election to the local Greater Detroit Hall of Fame later this year, the first time that she is eligible due to the age limit rules.

Kim Adler of Palm City, Fla., was runner-up and Marianne DeRupo who also lives in Dearborn now, came in seventh.

Sill's line score showed 2845 pins in qualifying, plus 2804 in match play where she went 7-1 while earning 210 bonus points while averaging 232. Her prize total was $1,200 which helped boost her all-time earning record.

Getting back to the men's pro tour, for those who may have missed it on ESPN TV, Richy Ward came away with the title. Ward, a powerful lefty from Ft. Myers, Fla., took home $18,000 with his second PBA victory. Pete Weber came in second and Tommy DeLutz Jr. cashed in at the No. 3 spot.

Weber and Walter Ray Williams are in a race for all-time winnings on the Men's PBA tour. Several of the local amateur bowlers took home prize money as well.

The squad winners in the Greater Detroit
PBA Pro-Am were: Floyd Gurney of St. Clair

Riviera of Saline, Steve Boyce of Detroit, Fred
Gay of Pittsford, Kathleen Lloyd of Belleville, Shandron Joyce of Detroit, Paul Koch of Harrison Township, Kim Cox of Southfield, Fely Topacio of Roseville, Sam Younce of Flint and Kit

RECREATION

Seeing the sights: Once you buy the equipment, backpacking is an inexpensive sport that can take you into the back country. There are sunsets on Lake Superior where there isn't a car in sight; vistas of forests and lakes only seen after a hard climb; and friendly foxes.

BY BRUCE KERRY SPECIAL WRITER

School's out and it's time to plan things to do during the summer.

One popular activity is backpacking. There's a trip for every-

Backpacking can be costly to get into. The equipment is expensive, but essential.

Good shoes are a necessity. A good heavy hiking shoe can cost between $100 to $200 and a light hiking shoe can cost $50 to $150, according REI in Northville.

Socks should not be cotton. Cotton retains moisture and your feet will remain wet.

Clothing should be appropriate for the season but it's recommended that you be prepared for all kinds of weather.

kinds of weather.

Clothing should be layered. It is easier to remove a layer than to put something on that you didn't bring. A hat is critical to protect you from the sun.

The most important piece of equipment is the pack. It has to hold everything you'll need.

If you're going for a day hike, you'll be using a different pack than one needed for a weeklong trip.

There are two types of packs: external frame and internal frame. Both types have their benefits.

An external frame is classified by the simple fact that it's a pack mounted on a plastic or aluminum frame.

This type of pack is generally cooler because it allows air to flow between your back and the pack.

Another benefit is that external frame packs are generally less expensive than their counterparts.

They have many compartments

They have many compartments to organize and access gear and their construction allows for good weight distribution over the hips.

Internal frame packs are generally designed for more active sports such as telemark skiing, mountaineering or climbing.

However, internal frame packs are increasingly more popular because of their stability and comfort.

Where to buy

There are many western Wayne County area stores that offer backpacking equipment.
REI has just opened in Northville. The Benchmark in Farmington has a great selection. Venture Outdoors, in Plymouth, has just moved to Five Mile at Sheldon.

A first aid kit is essential because of the wear on the shoul-

The outdoors can be unpredictable. A first aid kit can provide the comfort and necessities for an exciting hike.

A map and compass can provide security so you don't get lost.

Once you have purchased the gear that's needed for a safe hike, backpacking is inexpensive.

And you don't have to travel far.

And you don't have to travel far. Backpacking is offered at the Waterloo and Pinckney Recreation Areas.

The trail is the Waterloo-Pinckney Trail and is classified as a moderate hike, but will be challenging for beginners.

In addition, local hiking is available at Island Lake Recreation Area, near Brighton, and Proud Lake Recreation Area, near Milford. Both trails are classified as easy hiking.

Other popular areas for hiking in Michigan, are: Isle Royal National Park, on Lake Superior, the Sleeping Bear Dunes, near Traverse City and the Pictured Rocks, near Grand Marais.

Backpacking offers many variations. Individually, backpacking is not recommend. If you must backpack alone, be prepared for the worst.

With a group of people backpacking can be a great workout and a lot of fun.

Some important recommendations for group backpacking are:

■ Try to keep the group small because too many people will make the odds bigger that someone will get lost.

ON THE RUN

A chance to celebrate women's running and honor its pioneers arrives Sunday, June 22, with the 15th Annual Saturn For Women & Kids Only Challenge at Huron High School in Ann Arbor.

Events kick off with a 5K run, 5K racewalk and fitness walk at 8 a.m., followed by kids-only events on the track at 9:30 a.m.
The 5K run will feature competition among mother/daughter and sister/sister teams. Kids ages 14 and under will compete in the mile; 800 meter; 400 meter; and 200 meter. The race benefits the Breast Cancer Fund, ded-

The race benefits the Breast Cancer Fund, de icated to research, education, advocacy and patient support.

This year's breast cancer honoree is Sandy Eiler. An eight-year survivor of the disease, Eiler is chief operating officer of Eiler Communications, a Breast Cancer Fund board member, and the "mom extraordinaire" of seven kids. Sandy's husband, Larry, authored the book "When the Woman You Love Has Breast Cancer."

This year's race honoree is Ann Forshee-Crane of Okemos. Ann began running at 13 with the Michigammes running club. At Huron High, she took second in the mile at the state meet. In 1977, she became the first Michigan woman to run a sub-three-hour marathon. A wife and mother of five, Ann has directed numerous races and coaches the Leukemia Team in Training marathoners.

Trophies and prize money will be awarded, as will the Allyson Mann Spirit Scholarship. The scholarship goes to the runner who best exemplifies the competitive spirit of the late all-state runner, a 1993 graduate of Pioneer High School.

Registration fee on or before June 21 is $18. Race day fee is $20. Kids' events are $5. Entry forms are available at most running stores. For more information, call (313) 769-2926.

Standout runner Don Demetriades of Ann Arbor is among the hard-working volunteers behind the scenes of the For Women Only run. He noted that women have not always been welcome participants in the sport.

"As late as the 1967 Boston Marathon, Katherine Switzer could not even register for the race, and had to fight off male protesters in order to finish," he said. "Women's running slowly gained momentum and identity, but arguably it wasn't until Joan Benoit's victory in the inaugural Olympic women's marathon in Los Angeles in 1984 that U.S. women's distance finally secured its rightful status in the running world.

s rightful status in the running world.
"The real pioneering work," he added, "was done by runners between Switzer and Benoit. These women – despite facing obstacles no less difficult than Switzer's – took women's running from relative obscurity to the degree of popularity necessary to convince the sports world, or at least the International Olympic Committee, that the Olympics should include a women's marathon, and to convince the running world that women deserve just as much prize money as men.

"Some of these pioneers lived and ran in Michigan, including Karen McKeachie and Karen Holappa of Ann Arbor and Ann Forshee-Crane. These women not only raced and trained; they also organized, directed and publicized running events with and for women."

Wayne County can boast its share of pioneer women runners – among them Jeanne Bocci, the first Michigan woman to qualify and run the Boston Marathon in 1974; Priscilla Gilliam of Canton; Alexa Kraft, who died of breast cancer; Marilyn Morehead; Sharon Sowell; Ella Willis; Marge Peruski; Beth Trudgeon and Charlene Foster. We'll salute them as well on Sunday, and explore their stories in future running columns.

Items for On the Run are welcome. Please fax them to Brad Emons at (313) 591-7279. Emons will be the Observer's running columnist while M.B. Dillon is on maternity leave. 860

Floor plans abound at Button's Orchard

Phoenix Land Development has done very well in the Farmington community in recent years. Residential projects include Arbor Oaks, Pinecreek, Arbor Park and Pine Meadow

Now comes Button's Orchard, 14 platted lots on 10 acres off 12 Mile between Drake and Farmington roads.

"We feel it's an ideal singlefamily site," said Scott Drumm, Phoenix vice presi-

"It's very close to the 696-Orchard Lake interchange, which can obviously service folks going downtown or Ann Arbor, Canton or any of those various areas. It has easy access by 12 Mile to banks, office buildings, shopping and freeways.

"Also, we feel any piece of property in Farmington Hills is a winner due to property values as well as a fantastic school system," Drumm added.

"This piece is quaint, a small piece bordered by large evergreens in the west side. There's quite a lot of topography on the property. Seven walkout basement are available," Drumm among buyers at Button's said.

The houses in Button's Orchard will be built along two cul-de-sacs. Access will be off Yorktown street through Farmington Green Subdivision, not

All but two of the lots are offered at base price. Walkouts carry a premium of $12,500.

"I think price for square footage is a good value," said Mary Lou Breslin, sales man-

A fireplace, range and dishwasher, first-floor laundry, twocar garage, basement, full car-

Exterior materials include brick, vinyl siding and wood

"There really is a plan for anyone who walks through the door," Drumm said.

"If they want a master suite on the first floor with bedrooms up, we have the Pinecrest. If they like the great room concept, we have the Whitney. We offer the Aspen I and II. That's a ranch. We have five colonials.

The Whitney model, the most popular plan so far Orchard, can be walked through at Pinecreek off 10 Mile between Middlebelt and

Architect battles mud to complete house

Some readers have asked me to follow a project from the beginning to illustrate the entire process with its inherent ups and it was a great idea, so in addition to discussing a series of ever-changing topics related to architecture and construction, we will follow the design and construction of a "custom" home that is on the boards at my office. Four or five months ago I began reporting on updates as the project progress-

This month, we have dug a hole in the ground, and the masons have poured footing, and the block work for the basement is just about to begin.

The rain, the rain - it has finally ended. We had work to do and could not get enough consistent sunny days to take care of the tasks at hand. The mud and clay were so thick one day that I nearly lost my rubber

Delivering concrete and concrete blocks was a major problem, and we are having to put more limestone on the drive than anticipated: this is what a contingency fund is for. Who could the progress of this project, and I have known that the spring will continue to have monthly would have brought such wet weather? But with a 70,000pound truck sitting in the mud spinning its tires, you have to act quickly and decisively to avoid even bigger problems, such as making the world's biggest paper weight.

Other problems arose because the truck could not get to all sides of the project: the majority of the concrete had to be wheelbarrowed across the site: 60,000 pounds or so.

The rain and over commitments by the mason has put us behind by a month or so. In and of itself, this is not all bad, but it has really pushed the framing contractor back. This will affect all contractors from here forward: the entire schedule is needs a specific contractor that not have to be perfect, but the he will be available. My fingers are crossed, but I am not sure. It will have to play itself out, and the issues will be dealt with as they arise.

One has to hope that when one

Once the footings were poured, the exact layout was undertaken for the block work. This is an absolutely critical step because it is very difficult to make framing corrections to misplaced block

This is a tricky house with lots of corners and exacting dimensions. As both the general contractor and the architect, I feel it is my duty to make sure that these walls are correct.

Next month we should be starting the rough carpentry, and I am very excited for that to hours of sunlight, preferably in the morning because mid-day rays encourage algae growth. Select a level spot, protected from water runoff which may contain fertilizers or herbicides.

First draw your design on paper and then lay it out on the ground, using a garden hose to decide upon the shape. You'll need to measure it so you can purchase the right size liner. Don't forget to have your utilities marked before you dig so that you don't disturb buried power lines in the process.

Begin with the deepest point. A andard depth is 18 inches, but if you add fish, you will need to dig down two to three feet. The bottom of the pond should be flat, so make sure it is level. Remove all rocks, cut back roots in the basin and add about two inches of sand before putting the liner in place.

Drape the liner in the hole and Choose a site with at least four anchor the edges with weights to preserve its position and form. Use native stone, boulders or discarded brick to finish the edges. Fill the pond with water to just below ground level.

Ponds without pumps generally require more care and upkeep. You may not need a pump if you keep the algae growth and ammonia levels in check and maintain a balance between oxygenating plants and have a minimal number of fish.

A pump will keep the water circulating and therefore will cut down on constant up-keep. For a distinctive touch. try connecting a fountain or waterfall to the pump.

The filter is used to collect decaying organic matter. To assure complete filtration, locate the pump and filter at one end of the pond, then run discharge tubing to the opposite end. This will ensure that the entire pond is thoroughly filtered, Preston said.

Add one bunch of submerged plants for every one to two square feet of pond surface. Plant lilies in containers and set them on submerged bricks.

Japanese ornamental fish known as koi have become popular in water gardens, but many pond owners are content with stocking only gold fish. Plan on one inch of fish per foot of pond sur-

Simple garden architecture will enhance the flowering

By Town & Country Magazine For AP Special Features

All does not come up roses in the new country gardens of the

But the savviest of the new plant people, Anthony Barzilay Freund wrote in an article in the current issue of Town & Country, are taking their lead from America's original gentleman farmer, Thomas Jefferson, who loved the grape arbors he designed at Monticello almost as much as his octagonal dome. They are turning to garden architecture for help.

Simple structures such as pergolas, tuteurs (a stake for plants) and latticework trellises can create beautiful frames for garden areas that will flesh out into "rooms" as plants and flowers mature. Requiring no pruning or watering, garden architecture can be as basic as a ready-made fence from a local nursery or as elaborate as the rustic burlwood arbor, bridge and tree house for a rambling forest garden in Basking Ridge, N.J.

Conceived in the 19th-century Romantic style, the work "looks like it sprang up naturally from the landscape," said Trenton-based Robinson.

A more civilized approach is taken by New York landscape designer Deborah Nevins, who believes structural elements can help make gardens "more socialized places.

"Lately I've been designing a lot because people are more interested in entertaining outdoors and they want shade," she said. "Also these forms give people something to look at in winter.

Used widely, garden architecture can hide a garden's flaws and play up its strong features.

Brian Foster, a Philadelphia landscape designer whose clients include the Winterthur Museum and various Du Ponts, has used free-standing trellises to create the gentlest of barriers, diverting attention from undesirable sights. At the back of small gardens, he has built archways "that look like entrances to another 40 acres,' and pyramidal tuteurs for climbing roses that give vertical thrust to immature plant

'An exquisite garden with terracing and trellises bordering the pool can help an ordinary house achieve an extraordinary price.'

When it comes to choosing an architectural style for garden structures, most landscape designers recommend picking up on the vocabulary of the house. Nevins designed prim, white wooden trellises to complement David Geffen's Cape Cod house in Malibu. She works in metal when she wants the structure to disappear beneath flowering vines. Foster uses both materials and believes "the architecture looks elegant showing through the greenery.

The cost ranges from less than $200 for a ready-made tuteur to $40,000 to $50,000 for a custom-built pergola. But it is an investment that pays off. According to East Hampton realtor Peter Halock of Allan M. Schneider Associates:

"An exquisite garden with terracing and trellises bordering the pool can help an ordinary house achieve an extraordinary price.

It can also lend your property a sense of history it may otherwise lack. For newly built houss in Santa Barbara, interior and garden designer Douglas Bartoli creates gardens in sandstone-columned pergolas, for instance, that serve as "bridges back into time. You get the feeling that his contemporary house has been slipped into an old estate.'

These structures serve the same purpose as 18th-century follies, "where people went off and indulged themselves," Bartoli said.

"But," Bartoli says, "now they bring their cellular phones

The Oakwood Healthcare System, in collaboration with the Wayne County Health Department, has opened a new tuberculosis clinic to better serve the community. The Oakwood TB clinic will provide tuberculosis screening and/or treatment by physicians and nurses who are experts in providing care for patients with TB.

Tuberculosis is caused by bacteria spread through the air when a person with active TB coughs; it can be cured with proper treatment. A simple skin test is the only way to tell if you have ever been exposed to TB. This test is usually done on the arm, and in two to three days, a health care professional will check to detect a

If the test is "positive," further evaluation is necessary to determine whether treatment is needed. All patients receive counseling and edu-

The clinic has a special ventilation system and an onsite X-ray, pharmacy and lab. It is staffed by four board-certified infectious disease physicians who provide a wide range of clinical services. The clinic is located at 2345 Merriman, one block north of Michigan Avenue in West-

Swimming safety

In an effort to reduce the number of drownings and water-related injuries and save lives this summer, the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross strongly urges people to learn to swim and to be safe in, on and around the water when in home pools, at the lake, or enjoying a multitude of water sports.

Drowning is the second leading cause of death from unintentional injuries for youth ages 5-24, according to the National Safety Council's 1996 Accident Facts Report.

Urging people to learn water safety is part of the Red Cross launch of "Save-A-Life Summer," an educational and interactive initiative designed to reach out to families in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties with important messages about saving lives through learning how to perform CPR and first aid, how to be safe in the water and other lifesaving information.

American Red Cross "Water Safety Tips" highlight the need to know your swimming limits, how to avoid a back and neck injury when diving into the water, and signs to look for indicating Drownings can occur in home pools, community pools, lakes, water parks, bathtubs or even large buckets.

Diving accidents

With warmer weather, more people are heading to beaches, lakes and pools to cool off. Unfortunately, if they don't practice a little common sense and safety, they could also be headed toward the emergency room.

"Last year, Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan had an increased number of serious water accidents resulting in paraplegia and quadriplegia. During the summer of 1996, we treated a number of patients who sustained spinal cord injuries from jet skiing, tubing, diving and boating accidents," said Patti deBear, service line administrator, RIM's Spinal Cord Injury Unit. RIM is part of The Detroit Medical Center.

Diving accidents are the No. 1 cause of sportsrelated spinal cord injuries. Diving accidents usually result in serious injuries - more than 95 percent of the victims who hit their head on the bottom become quadriplegics. The average age of those sustaining a spinal cord injury is between Daniel Knight, an accomplished swimmer and letterman on Southwestern High School's swim team, never expected to spend the rest of his life in a wheelchair. The day after his 20th birthday two years ago, he and some friends had been horsing around in a friend's pool when Knight jumped headfirst into the shallow end. The blow knocked him out and when he awoke he was no longer able to move his hands and legs.

Knight's story is a common one. Safety experts suggest that adults should only dive into water that is a minimum of 10 feet deep, meaning that the majority of back-yard pools, which only have a depth of 9 feet, are unsafe for diving.

OVER-THE-COUNTER PAIN MEDICINES HAVE SOME RISKS

It's enough to make your head ache! HELEN FURCEAN / STAFF ARTIST

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI

ext to the shampoo, across from the cotton balls, overthe-counter pain medication looks as innocent as Mickey Mouse Band-Aids. But area doctors and pharmacists say that's

Even though the tablets don't come with a doctor-written prescription, they should be taken with caution considering the damage they can do to our bodies.

"Most people think that overthe-counter drugs are safe and by and large they are, but it's a matter of how much you take," said Dr. Michael DeRosayro, director of Multi-Disciplinary Pain Center at the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor. Until the last five or so years, many of the popular pain killers were only available in the U.S. with a prescrip-

"Many people really don't understand the possible danger of the drug," DeRosayro said, adding, however, that if you take "reasonable amount" there shouldn't be a problem."

When you search the aisles of most drugstores, the choices seem endless with box after box of different drugs. However, strip away the name, advertisements and packaging and you'll find that there are only a couple of major drugs in over-the-counter pain medication. They include acetaminophen, like Tylenol, which is aspirin-free. And, non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (nsaids), which include aspirin and ibupro-

Only during the last few years has ibuprofen been available without prescription. Over-the-counter ibuprofen is 200 milligrams and prescription strength usually comes in 400 to 800 milligrams. Even though they're often taken for the same problem, the effects on your body by the two classes of drugs are vastly different. For instance, if you take too much acetaminophen one common result is liver failure. And if you take too much of the nsaids intestinal problems occur.

Liver damage

"Probably the most common cause of acute liver failure is acetaminophen overdose," according to Dr. Grace Elta, U-M Hospital associate professor in gastroenterology. If you take six tablets of acetaminophen a day for six years, you probably won't get liver damto 70 percent.

"There are certainly people who take them and get no problems at all," Elta said.

Confusion is easy since on one hand we're bombarded with information about over-the-counter pain medication preventing other diseases. For instance, one study indicates that ibuprofen, taken for as little as two years, appears to ...strip away the name, advertisements and packaging and you'll find that there are only a couple of major drugs in over-the-counter pain medication. They include acetaminophen, like Tylenol, which is spirin-free, and non-steroidal antiinflammatory drugs (nsaids), which include aspirin and ibuprofen.

age. Individual dose amounts usually cause the biggest problems with acetaminophen. Problems occur when large doses are taken at one time, like those in suicide attempts.

However, alcoholics can take moderate doses of acetaminophen and cause liver failure, Elta said. Anyone who drinks five or six alcoholic beverages a day shouldn't take acetaminophen. Duration of use does make a difference, however, with ibuprofen, aspirin and other nsaids, because they can cause intestinal problems including ulcers, bleeding ulcers, pain, nausea and impaired kidney

"The incidences of that are extremely high," Elta said. Someone with arthritis or who has back pain, for instance, may take two aspirins three times a day. The chance of that person developing an ulcer is 15 percent and the chances of them developing gastritis, which is chronic or acute inflammation of the stomach, is 60 reduce the risk of Alzheimer's disease. Other research shows that aspirin reduces the chances of heart attack and stroke by anticlogging effects on the blood, but too much can cause intestinal problems.

Elta recommends that if you take small amounts of aspirin you get the same results lowering the risk of heart attack and stroke and are less likely to cause stomach problems. "Baby aspirin, which is 80 milligrams is sufficient for that anti-clogging effect and there's much less chance of intestinal problems," she said.

Ulcers and gastritis are usually a concern for people taking full doses and not just one a day, Elta said. However, she added that, although it's unusual, she does see patients who get ulcers after taking one aspirin a day. Many patients who are vomiting blood or have horrible stomach cramps often aren't aware their pain was caused by over-the-counter pain Patients sometimes think: "I don't take aspirin, I take another tablet." If it's an usaid it remains, in the same class and has the same effects, Elta said.

Taking too much

Another problem to be aware of. according to medical experts, is accidental overdose, especially among older patients who forget they've taken a dose and take another. They also warn patients to be aware of allergic reactions to over-the-counter pain medica-

One rule that should be remembered is "Always read the directions on the package," according to Mark Mittlestat, a pharmacist at Merriman Drugs on Merriman and Five Mile roads in Livonia: "With any pain medication, if they use more than they should it could do harm," he said. "You would be surprised, for whatever reason, how many people don't read the directions. A lot of the problems would never happen, because they are all pretty good about explaining that you shouldn't do this or that. And don't be afraid to ask a. pharmacist or a doctor if there are any questions."

Another common problem is that some people think that doubling a dose will result in better, effects, he said. This kind of confusion about over-the-counter pain medication is a serious issue, according to Debra Saul, 25, who became alarmed about the effects. of the tablets after watching a recent episode of "ER." The television patient developed a perforated ulcer after taking eight tablets. of ibuprofen a day.

"It reminded me of when I was in college and had muscle inflam-mation," she said, explaining that her doctor prescribed tablets with 500 milligrams of ibuprofen. "He warned me not to take it too much or too often," the Westland resident said. She became concerned again recently when a family member was given two different pain medications at the same time. The experts say her caution is healthy.

Multidisciplinary plan best for breast cancer patients

Henry Ford Hospital researchers have found that women with breast cancer who are treated at a full-service multidisciplinary clinic receive faster diagnosis and treatment and are more satisfied with their care than women treated by scheduling separate appointments with a number of physicians.

In a study published in the June 15 issue of Cancer, Henry Ford researchers found that the time between diagnosis and the initiation of treatment was significantly decreased between women who were seen in a multidisciplinary breast clinic and women seen by health care providers on successive appointments

A multidisciplinary breast clinic brings together all professionals involved in the patient's diagnosis and treatment. Medical, radiation and surgical oncologists, radiologists, nurses, social workers, plastic surgeons, pathologists, genetics counselors and research coordinators work as one unit, intent on providing optimal treatment.

In a multidisciplinary clinic, patients no longer have to schedule successive appointments with each specialty group. Rather, they see all the egan treatment 42.2 days after diagnosis.

health care workers at one appointment. In the study, women who were seen in the breast clinic had definitive treatment within 29.6 days, compared to women seeing a specialist in the traditional sequential fashion. Those women

Henry Ford started its Breast Cancer Care Clinic in 1994, making it the first of its kind in metro Detroit. More than 400 women are treated there each year, making it the largest breast cancer practice in southeast Michigan. The success of the clinic has led Henry Ford Health System to ppen up a second one at the Henry Ford Medical Center-West Bloomfield.

"Although multidisciplinary clinics aren't a new venture in health care, this is the first time we've been able to quantify the benefits for women," said Dr. Molly Gabel, M.D., a Henry Ford radiation oncologist and lead author of the study.

Dr. David Nathanson, M.D., a Henry Ford surgical oncologist and director of the Henry Ford Breast Cancer Care Clinics, said, "This is a most important aspect of breast cancer treatment that too often is overlooked. Having a multidisciplinary clinic enhances the way we manage and treat our patients."

Patients also are more satisfied with their care in a multidisciplinary clinic, Nathanson said. When a woman has found a lump in her breast, she wants to deal with it as quickly as possible. She doesn't want to have to make an appointment with a medical oncologist, then with a radiation oncologist, then with a surgeon and so on and so on."

Another important aspect of a multidisciplinary clinic is that a nursing coordinator ensures that the patients and families receive the proper education and support during this time.

"Every aspect of the cancer must be treated, including the emotional aspect," Nathanson said. 'As a physician, I am working with a team to treat the patient to ensure a whole and complete recovery. I can do that better by working in the multidisciplinary clinic setting."

Today might be wellspent with a few tips, some of which have been offered months ago and others which are new

The first is a standard procedure to follow when the Universal Resource Locator (URL) you type in does not work. First, of course, check for typos and make sure your "caps lock" key is not on.

Then chop off the very last element of the address on the right side and try it again. For example, a recent column had the wrong URL for a Web site on the Oklahoma bombing trial. The URL http://denver.digitalcity.com/bombing/co urtroom.htm. If you start on the right and delete "courtroom" and cut and paste the balance of the address into the open site" dialogue box, you'll connect to the site.

If that hadn't worked, though, you could delete the next right-hand element ("bombing/") and you'd be left with denver digitalcity.com which would take you to the home page of the site. Likely, links from the home page will take you where you want so you end up starting from the beginning and working back to where you wanted to go.

Other suggestions

A couple other suggestions. If the ending extension is .htm, try the URL again only substitute .html. If the Web site was created on a PC with Windows, the .htm likely is correct. But it could also be a typo. Some addresses have an ending / but try removing the slash when trouble-shooting.

At the other end, if denver digitalcity.com didn't work, try adding www. at the beginning. There's a real mixed use out there; many use www and many

Looking at the domain also is worthwhile. The URL "umich.com" for instance would correctly be changed to "umich.edu." Likewise, "oeonline.org" would be correctly used as "oeonline.com." There's a new class of domains coming out in order to expand the number of E-mail addresses and URLs, so become familiar with the new ones. Some URLs will change because the creator changed domains. This is a tip for the future.

One thing to remember when sending E-mail is that the Internet primarily is still run on a Unix platform and most documents are text. When you create an E-mail message in a commercial format, such as Word or Word Perfect, change the copy to text before sending it to any-

In your word processor environment, do a "save as" and look for the dialogue that specifies the type of file. Look for "text," "ASCII Text," "DOS text" or something similar. Then save. The formatted copy will be saved as a text file and can be read by any E-mail software on the Net.

Cut and paste

I prefer to cut and paste and enter my copy in the "message" area of my E-mail correspondence. This is easy for sender and receiver alike. Some users like to send copy as an attachment. This is fine as long as the attached copy is in text format, but sometimes requires the sender to take one or two extra steps to access the attachment. As a courtesy, make it as simple as possible. In any event, don't send the attachment as a Word or Word Perfect file.

For privacy reasons, some people encrypt their E-mail but I would not recommend doing that unless you first warn the receiver you plan on doing that. The sender and receiver can then assure themselves that each has the correct privacy software available to decrypt. And remember, unless there is a compelling reason for the receiver to go through a loop or two to decode your message he likely will hit the delete key

Finally, exercise care when typing the address. It's true that if you send an Email message you can be assured that it has been delivered if it doesn't bounce back to you. But that assumes you typed the correct address. Most E-mail software, including Eudora, has an "outbox" or directory of sent mail you can check if you suspect non-delivery. Open the outbox, find the message, open it and check the address.

The outbox also provides a file of messons, though, you will want to access this file occasionally and delete messages of no possible future use.

Most E-mail programs, including Eudora, also allow you to create special file folders to store messages by topic. Create folders like "personal," "hold," "Internet tips," "listserv name," etc. Then when a message in the index is highlighted, go to "transfer" on the menu bar and select the appropriate folder and the message automatically is transferred there. Users with old PCs like myself, with limited hard-drives, must remember that whether a message is in a folder or on the index is still resides on your hard-drive so use the delete key frequently.

He found a $185,000 condo in the trash.

Patricia Shea, vice president of Rock Homes is used to having people learn about Shire of Hamlet Village Condominiums from relatives, friends or from people who drive by and stop in.

She also gets great response to her advertisements in our New Homes section. But in her 16 years in the business, she's never had someone discover one of her developments in the trash.

But there it was, crumpled up in the waste basket at the YMCA. Our newspaper.

With a feature story about Rock Homes.

Someone had enjoyed their hometown news and then put it in the right place at the right time to be discovered by a gentleman headed for the steam room and looking for something to read while there.

He found and bought just what he and his wife had spent months looking for-a condo at Shire of Hamlet Village.

Is there a message hidden here? Could be.

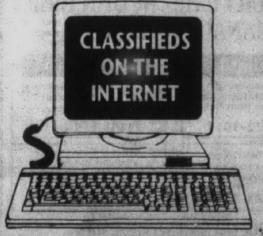

Perhaps it's that you never know where you'll find what you've been searching for.

Or maybe it's not that cosmic. Maybe it's that you will save yourself a lot of looking when you have your hometown newspaper delivered right to your doorstep.

JOBS/CAREERS

Banks look for sales skills when hiring

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source Whatever happened to the sedate world of banking? A far cry from the time when banks had what one bank executive termed "a gentleman's agreement" not to go after one another's depositors, banking today is a fiercely competitive industry.

Banks used to wait for customers to walk in," says David Furman, a senior human resources executive with First Union Corporation, a banking company with $137 billion in assets and branches in 12 states (including Georgia) and the District of Columbia. "Today," says Furman, "banks are far more proactive about going out and prospecting for customers."

Christine Omero Freenor, retail banking employment manager for the State of California for Wells Fargo Bank, agrees. "Customers need to be pursued and they need to be kept," says Freenor.

That's where customer service and sale skills come in. Both have become high priorities for bank recruiters when hiring. For teller positions, for example, Waltraud Owen, and regional manager in Northern Virginia for Central Fidelity Bank, says, "We used to look for someone who had some cash handling experience. Now, we've instituted an assessment, a great portion of which focuses on measuring sales and service abilities. Now, rather than cash handling experience, we look for retail sales experience.

For what Furman calls the "platform" side of the business, sales skills have also become a top priority. "The banking professional of the future, is going to be a salesperson in very much the same sense as someone who sells insurance or stocks," says Furman. "In fact, we've hired people with backgrounds in the brokerage and life insurance businesses. We've also hired people who have been successful selling cars and office equipment. What we're looking for are people who have a love of the sale, who like to go out and prospect and meet customers' needs. Sales skills are what's important. We can train people on the products we sell."

Freenor says a strong sales and business development orientation is extremely important for those hired to work in Wells Fargo's "in store" branches located in supermarkets. "There's a whole educational process required to help customers understand what's available in those locations," says Freenor. "Someone working in those branches needs to be proactive. They need to be able to walk up to customers and break the ice.'

The role of the branch manager in traditional banking locations has also changed to reflect today's accent on sales. Branch managers are more like sales coaches today, say Owen and Furman. The sales coaching piece of their role is a bigger part of their annual evaluation," says Owen.

"The branch manager of the future won't have to worry as much about the operational side of the business," adds Furman. In fact, at First Union, the focus on sales for managers is being built into the organizational structure. "First Union is redesigning its organiza-tional structure to enable managers to focus on sales," explains Furman. "We'll have a sales coach who oversees a sales team including several branch managers and their sales teams." To keep the transaction side of the business running smoothly, Furman says area operations managers will be designated. Each will be responsible for several teller leaders, who will in turn, each be responsible for tellers at multiple branches.

First Union has even changed the way it compensates employees with sales responsibilities. "All line positions have an incentive component," says Furman. "You're rewarded for your production. Some people find that scary. Others thrive on it. We're looking for those who thrive on it." Freenor says Wells Fargo also offers employees with sales respon-sibilities "a base plus type salary package that provides the opportunity to earn ince

Despite all the changes taking place in banking, some important traditions have stayed the same. one is the accessibility of bank careers to those without college degrees.
"For sales positions, we'll trade a college degree for a successful track record in sales." says Furman. "And although most of our branch managers probably have college degrees, you won't find positions, even at the management level, that require a college

Owen concurs. "A college degree is not a requirement although some college is preferred for management hires," she says.

International promotion also remains a strong tradition. "We still promote from with in," says Owen. The same holds true at Wells Fargo. Furman says at First Union, about 50 percent of promotions continue to be filled internally.

Sheryl Silver may be contacted by writing to her at Career Source, P.O. Box 65754. Washington, D.C. 200035-5744.

By Deborah L. Jacobs Chronicle Features

No matter how well you know your field, starting work at a new company can leave you feeling green. You don't fully understand the culture. You're not familiar with the players. You have no allies to warm you about inevitable pitfalls

Many folks figure the safest bet is to take a back seat. But while you're busy checking out your new colleagues from this vantage point, they're sizing you up. Their first response may be that you're too passive-not the dynamo they expected-and someone to push around.

Here are some ways to make the best impression when you're the new kid on the block.

Do advance work. After giving notice at one job, many people take a vacation before starting the next. Hard-earned and necessary as such breaks may be, this is also a good time to prepare for what's ahead. Have lunch with your new bosses, sit in on a few meetings, and read whatever you can about the work

Unless you're stepping into a new slot, you'll also want to talk with your predecessor. Ideally, you contacted this person before accepting the offer

Either way, your concerns now run deeper. You'll want to know which coworkers are likely to be helpful or hurtful; how to get off to a good start with your new boss; and what might differ on your watch. Tactful, but open-ended questions you can ask: Who are the people I should get to know right away? Would you describe the boss as a hands-on or hands-off man-

·Make yourself visible. Once you're on board, begin building relationships with coworkers in your own department and in other parts of the organization. The best starting point is to meet with people one at a time and ask about their work. Many individuals are happy to offer advice.

Instead of hiding behind your desk, circulate. Observe how people interact with each other, their good and bad times of the day, and who they eat lunch with. Pay attention to who the boss seems to like and how that person operates. Listen to what everyone says, but don't get sucked into office poli-

Speak up at meetings, even if it's only to ask questions. If a query comes your way and you don't know the answer, promise to look into it and respond

•Be sensitive to work styles. People have different ways of giving--and taking--directions. One boss might like frequent updates to be sure you're on schedule with a project, while another just assumes you'll deliver it on time. Some subordinates appreciate detailed directions about how to tackle an assignment, while others find the same suggestions med-

Rather than using trial and error, or imposing your own style on someone else, it's best to ask, says Debra Benton, author of the book, "How to Think Like a CEO" (Warner Books). Sample language: "I try to be aware of peoples' preferences, and over time I'll get to know yours. For the moment, can you tell me whether you'd rather I write a lengthy report, or summarize my research in a brief memo with bullet points?

*Don't be a pushover. When people are overworked or unhappy, they sometimes try to take advantage of newcomers. They may hand off work they're supposed to do themselves, withhold information, or blame you for others' mistakes.

Should that happen, it's important to pleasantly and firmly stand your ground. Not taking action-even just this once-makes you seem weak and invites similar problems in the future.

The night before my husband and I moved back to New York, our neighbors asked us over for dinner. We didn't know them well and were touched that they wanted to share our last evening in the neighborhood. As it turned out, they are starting a home-based business and wanted to pick my brain about how to set up a home

On the way to our new home, we stopped overnight with my inlaws. We stayed in my brother-inlaw's spare room, which doubles as a home office. Over dinner, my other brother-in-law was talking about wanting to strike out on his own in a home-based business.

Working hard? You're not home alone The next day, we moved to our new apartment in New York City. As we moved in, we learned that four of the five apartments in our building have home offices. We set up the apartment quickly because

I had to fly to California to speak at Work at Home Day, an event that honors the 34 percent of Californians who complete some work in a home office.

This story is anecdotal evidence of the prevalence of home offices. in case you ever feel like you are the only one working at home, you can remember these examples and consider the following statistics.

According to IDC/Link's 1996 Work-at-Home Study, 43 million people did some work in home offices during 1996. These people set up their home offices in have graduate degrees and 19 per-approximately 30 office. It also means that many households have more than one peron working at

The workers in these offices fall into the following groups: primary self-employed, 13.1 million; parttime self employed, 11.7 million; telecommuters (who work at home for a corporate boss), 7.1 million, and after-hours home offices, 11.1 million.

Wondering what kind of people work at home? The average homeworker is 40.2 years old; 56.7 percent of all homeworkers are between the ages of 30 and 49. More than 65 percent of work-athomers are married, and the group is well-educated: 25 percent have college degrees and 19 percent cent have graduate degrees. This compares to 17.9 percent and 8.8 percent respectively of the nonhomeworker population.

The number of home-based businesses in this country will increase dramatically in coming years. Baby Boomers are dissatisfied with traditional office jobs and many of retirees are looking for ways to supplement income. in a recent Gallup poll, 80 percent of college seniors nationwide said they want to be entrepreneurs after graduation. For many people, a home office will provide an affordable and convenient head-

Downsizing also contributes to the establishment of home-based businesses. For example, Novell, the networking software company, recently announced the layoff of 1,000 people. Many of these people, I am sure, have the skills, connections and resources to set up a home-based business.

Improvements in technology, specifically the Internet and phone services, make the home a viable office location. As the number of home-based businesses increases, the stigma against working with home-based professionals has diminished rapidly and is now rarely an impediment to business. Family responsibilities including child- and elder-care will also encourage entrepreneurs to operate at home

Telecommuting - working at home for a corporate boss - is the fastest growing segment of the home office market. Management is realizing that at least some home-based work enable workers to manage their workload and their personal demands.

Technology is making these changes possible. According to a recent article in Inc. magazine. telecommuters receive more and faster promotions than their counterparts who report to the office every day.

Job anxiety creates a cycle of failure

By Lindsey Novak Tribune Media

Q: I'm a welfare recipient who, more than anything, wants to be a contributing member of society by getting a job. Although I have a bachelor's degree in journalism, I feel stupid and incompetent when I work. I get so nervous it affects my concentration and I end up doing a poor job.

I've gotten fired from every job I've had. Now that I'm able to work again, the last thing I want to do is start this cycle of failure. I have tried relaxation technique, meditation and even prayer, but nothing works.

My fear is immobilizing me, but no one - counselors, psychiatrists and family members . takes me seriously. I feel as if no

DANGEROUS SUPERVISOR IS COMPANY'S RESPONSIBILITY

Q: I'm an elderly union worker who does physical labor. The only other employee present is a nonunion employee. He writes down everything I do and turns in a report to the boss the next day. We will be going to court soon because of the truck incident, but all of this harassment has raised my blood pressure and devastated me. By Anne Fracassa Avanti NewsFeatures

I can't believe the Jeep Cherokee was first introduced in 1984. That just seems so long ago.

And although there have been major interior refinements and stuff has been changed under the hood as well over the years, the Cherokee looks just about the same.

Chrysler says the 1997 Cherokee has "signifcant body refinement." Looks about the Sure, it's a little rounder around the edges anl the front grille is just a tad different. Even the wheel flares have been redesigned a little and the front windows don't have vents any longer.

Now, I'm not saying the Cherokee looks old, urrefined or 1980s-ish and behind the times. Quite the opposite.

What I'm saying is exactly what Jeep engineers set out to do when planning the 1997 Cherokee: Reain the classic design and authentic Jeep char-The other thing they accomplished was improving the quality of the Cherokee. The Cherokee I drive oh-so-long ago squeaked, rattled and roared. There's a really big difference in the old wheels and the 1997 Cherokee.

Driving the Cherokee home, I did hear a distirt squeak. Bothered me. Took me about 10 minute to find out it was the position of the kid's car sea making the noise.

The Jeep Cherokee, with its smart and classic styling, is one compact sport utility to take a gander at.

Nope. No noise. This Cherokee is really quiet on tioning and ventilation controls are right underthe inside. So quiet, in fact, I didn't turn on the stereo until the day before it was returned. The solitude was really nice.

A mention about the AM/FM stereo with cassette and compact disc. The sound that comes out of the speakers is really top notch. There are a lot of sliding and toggling choices to let you refine the sound to your liking. Nice job.

Tell you what's changed on the Cherokee. The entire interior. Because Jeep sells the Cherokee to other countries, it's built as a right-hand- or lefthand-drive vehicle. So "keep-it-simple, Sam" logic had to apply.

But it was done with a lot of thought. Everything is at the driver's fingertips. Most everything you want is in the center of the vehicle and all up high to see and easily reach. The stereo is at the top and the new heating/air condineath. Under that is a 20 amp power outlet.

Also new on the inside are new door trim panels with armrests. I drove the base model, so it didn't have any of the extras. Available, though, are new power window switches and a new overhead console with a 5-function trip computer and compass and temperature gauge.

The floor console is also new. It has a large storage compartment, integrated cupholders and a new shift lever.

The base engine on the Cherokee is a 2.5-liter 4-cylinder that outputs 125 horsepower. You're not going to win a drag race with this one.

Also available is a 4.0-liter in-line 6 with 190 horses - which is clearly the better choice. The Cherokee also has Command Trac, the standard part-time 4-wheel-drive system, and Selec Trac, the full-time 4WD system. The transmission parts, by the way, are from Japan, making this vehicle 76 percent U.S./Canadian parts content.

The base price of the Cherokee is $16,815. By the time all the good stuff was added to the test Cherokee, however, the price jumped to $22,580. And it still didn't have power windows, remote mirrors or power door locks.

What it did have was Command Trac (that means it's shift-on-the-fly, by the way), power steering, power brakes, a 20.2-gallon fuel tank, front and rear stabilizer bars, reclining front bucket seats, tinted glass and cargo tie-down loops.

The optional equipment list includes highback bucket seats, rear wiper/washer (an absolute must), skid plates, tow hooks, remote mirrors, offhighway suspension, anti-lock brakes, floor mats, an automatic transmission (this should be standard), rear window defroster, air conditioning, speed control (mounted on the steering wheel), leather wrapped tilt steering wheel and the 6-cylinder engine.

The Cherokee would be best served with one improvement: A new design for its seat belts. It has what look like adjustable seat-belt straps. I adjusted mine all the way down and it wasn't enough. The shoulder belt clipped me at my neck, which was annoying, to say the least.

The Jeep Cherokee, with its smart and classic styling, is one compact sport utility to take a gander at. The price is reasonable, it's a comfortable ride and it's all Jeep.

Write Anne Fracassa online at avanti1054@aol.com.

1997 Jeep Cherokee Vehicle class: Compact sport-utility

Power: 2.5-liter 4-cylinder engine. Mileage: 15 city / 21 highway. Where built: Toledo. Base price: $16,815.
