Rec agreement one step closer

■ City Manager Paul Sincock and Township Supervisor Steve Mann are expected to discuss the merger with Langworthy, Strader, LeBlanc & Associates Inc. of Royal Oak, a recreation consulting firm.

A recreation program that is run cooperatively by Plymouth and Plymouth Township and eliminates non-resident fees for Plymouth Township residents could be part of a new community-wide recreation master plan.

A recreation sub-committee, consisting of three elected officials from each community, moved a step closer Thursday to a joint recreation program. The group agreed to develop a community-wide recreation master plan that will encompass ideas from the current recreation plans of each municipality.

City Manager Paul Sincock and Township Supervisor Steve Mann are expected to discuss the recreation merger with Langworthy, Strader, LeBlanc & Associates Inc. of Royal Oak. It's the same recreation consulting firm that helped Sincock develop the city's current master plan.

"We already have a great recreation department," said Dan Dwyer, city commissioner. "We could have a better program if we pool our money."

Township trustee Ron Edwards said he ran for office to improve recreational opportunities, and he'd like to see it done as soon as possible.

"The question is, are we going to be smart enough to put our resources together and save money, like we did with the fire department and the police

Plymouth youth is near-perfect on ACT test

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

Just like hundreds of other Plymouth-Canton high school juniors last April, Abe Thurtell of Plymouth Township took the ACT Assessment test, a qualifying examination for college-bound students.

After completing the exam, Abe, a member of the Salem High School class of 2002 with a 3.2-grade-point average, walked away feeling "the test seemed fairly easy."

Apparently, it was.

Thurtell was one of only nine Michigan students, and 71 nationwide, to achieve a score of 36, the highest possible composite score. ACT officials report 389,000 students from across the nation, including 30,000 from Michigan, took the same test last April.

"I was quite surprised," said Thurtell, 18, of Plymouth Township

Junkyard transformed into garden center

BY KURT KUBAN

kkuban@oe.homecomm.net

In the shadow of an I-275 overpass, a property of colorful flowers and cascading waterfalls has risen from what was once a graveyard for old, junked cars.

The four-acre site on Schoolcraft just west of the freeway in Plymouth Township, which used to be the old City Auto junkyard, is now a garden and landscape supply center called Plymouth Rock and Supply.

According to siblings Bill, Jim and Linda Welsh, who own and operate the business, it took a monumental effort to convert the land into the well-manicured business it is today.

"We had to haul out 50,000 tires and take them to a recycling company up in Warren. We also took out a school bus and lots of old car parts. In all, we hauled 19 semi loads of trash out of here," said Bill Welsh, a Detroit native who now lives in Plymouth Township.

Stray bullet hits township home

A woman reported to Plymouth Township Police officials that her home was hit with a stray bullet sometime last week.

According to the police report, the woman, who lives on Chestnut Court, found a small piece of "shredded copper" in her carpet while she was vacuuming June 15. Not thinking much about it, she threw it out in the garbage.

However, the next day she found some drywall fragments on the floor in her dining room. After further inspection, she realized a bullet had gone through her aluminum siding and entered her house.

An officer was dispatched to the location to investigate the damage. He described the hole as "oblong shaped." He felt the hole was caused by a small caliber bullet, and appeared to be coming from a skyward direction.

The woman told the officer she reported the incident because she felt her neighbors also could have been victims. She thinks some kids in the neighborhood are responsible for the incident. She said several white male youths from the area have hit her house with paintballs in the past.

The officer interviewed neighbors, but nobody reported hearing any gunshots or noticed any damage to any other homes.

Driver busted with drugs

A 35-year-old Plymouth man was arrested on numerous charges June 16, including drunk driving and fleeing arrest. Plymouth Township police also allegedly found suspected marijuana on the man.

According to police reports, a passing motorist called police about 6:15 p.m. after seeing the man slumped over the wheel of a pick-up truck near the parking lot of the Standard Federal Bank at the intersection of Haggerty and Ann Arbor roads.

By the time officers arrived, the man had exited his truck and was fleeing across the bank parking lot. After officers commanded the man to halt, he jumped over a concrete wall into a backyard on Marilyn Street. When an officer pursued on foot, several neighbors pointed out the direction the man had fled.

Another officer located the man nearby and made the arrest. Officers described the man as having bloodshot eyes and slurred speech. When they searched him, they found a plastic bag containing a small amount of suspected marijuana in his back pocket.

Police also found a number of suspected marijuana "roaches" in the ashtray of the man's truck, which was impounded. Preliminary drug analysis on the substance was positive.

The man was arraigned June 21 in the 35th District Court.

PLYMOUTH PIPELINE

Roadwork

Paving projects by the county continue in Plymouth Township this week. Last weekend the county paved a small section of Ann Arbor Trail west of Haggerty to the I-275 freeway in front of the new Miller Park. Thursday the road crews started on Ann Arbor Trail between Beck and Sheldon. The county is also working this summer on Northville Road from Five Mile to Mill, on some sections of Joy Road near the high schools, on the Hines Park bridges on Plymouth Road, and on Haggerty at Hines Park, where workers are building a new bridge.

VIP award

Isbister Elementary School volunteer Helene Neely received the Volunteer in Public Schools Extra Miler Award at the board of education meeting, June 12.

Neely was cited as an outstanding example of volunteering at Isbister. She is a quiet, behind-the-scenes volunteer who is always ready to help and gives of herself to raise money for the PTO with the Meijer bucks program and SCRIP bucks program.

Fellow parent Adrienne Bodnar said:

"Fund-raising is not all that Helene does. She has served as PTO president, works on the Fun Fair, the Book Fair and numerous PTO committees. Helene does what is needed, when it is needed. She also has helped Isbister by serving on many interview committees. Helene is a helpful, hardworking, yet humble volunteer.

"As a classroom parent, she is willing to serve in any capacity. On short notice she helps with science projects; and shares her love and knowledge of quilting to reinforce geometry skills. She is willing to fill in as a chaperone if a parent is suddenly unable to accompany the class and if copying, bookbinding, or more cupcakes for the class are needed, she will take care of it."

Bodnar also said: "I must add that her personality and fine example of a helpful, caring person is what I value the most. I know that she has just the needed word for a child with a problem, or any need. I do not know of anyone who is more deserving of the VIPS award."

Neely received a certificate of recognition, a pin of the Flag of Liberty and Learning, and a dinner gift certificate, all presented by board member Judy Mardigian.

Rec employees

The National Recreation and Park Association announced today that two City of Plymouth employees have passed the required classwork and testing to become Nationally Certified Playground Safety Inspectors.

The certification is offered only to those employees who complete an intensive, multi-day classroom and field study session, then pass an exhaustive written exam.

City of Plymouth assistant director of municipal services Mark Hammar, and Municipal Services inspector and foreman Bernie Olsen each passed the national testing program and are now certified playground safety inspectors.

"Recreation is priority for our city commission and part of that priority is to provide a safe environment in our neighborhood parks," City Manager Paul Sincock said. "We are very pleased to have two members of our staff that have met the criteria for the program."

Concerns about playground safety have taken on more of a priority ever since the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission first published safety guidelines in 1981. Over time, rules have become stricter and the National Recreation and Park Association developed the inspector certification program.

ADVANCEMENTS IN FOOT CARE

Canton Foot Specialists

WHO SHOULD WEAR ORTHOTICS!
Orthotics are custom-made inserts which fit into your shoes. Superficially they look like arch supports and some actually provide minimal arch support. Orthotics actually change the way you walk. They allow the foot to supinate at the proper time in the walking cycle.
Orthotics are universally acknowledged as being useful in the treatment and prevention of many foot problems such as bunions, heel spurs and shin splints.
Orthotics prescribed by podiatrists should be custom-made for your foot type and problem. Many over-the-counter devices are available, but their benefits are not reliable. Every foot is unique and a one-size-fits-all device doesn't usually provide much relief.

Charter Academy students come to aid of earthquake burn victim

BY CAROL MARSHALL
STAFF WRITER
cmarshall@oe.homecomm.net

STAFF PHOTOS BY PAUL HURSCHMANN

Helping hands: Kindergarten students hand pictures they had drawn and colored to visitor Hector Castro of El Salvador.

Three hundred children surrounded the square, and in unison chirped, "Hola, Hector!"

The children of Canton Charter Academy offered their 12-year-old friend from El Salvador, Hector Castro, a welcome and a check for $1,400.

"My kids raided their piggy banks as soon as they heard about Hector," said Kim DeGraaf, wiping proud tears from her bright blue eyes.

DeGraaf, a school secretary and mother of two Canton Charter Academy students, said her children told her Hector's story a little more than a month ago.

Hector's tale

Her first-grader Josh and her fourth-grader Hilary told their mother about the boy who was playing outside one day last winter, and was perched atop a brick wall when an earthquake struck, devastating his town.

Young Hector Castro fell into a burning trash pit so deep he couldn't climb out until after 90 percent of his body was covered with severe burns.

Hector was treated in El Salvador for the burns, receiving painful skin grafts. He lost his legs because they were burned too badly to save.

His parents, who earn $120 a month, and four siblings had no resources, and the family lives under two plastic tarps.

"They didn't have much before and now they're even worse off," said Principal Claudia Williamson.

It was while he was being treated that he met Ohio couple Don and Karen Manley, whose daughter, Elizabeth Kose, teaches at the academy.

The Manleys were in El Salvador on a church mission trip, scheduled before the January earthquake. While visiting a hospital, they met Hector and knew they had to help.

"He was such a happy boy, even in the hospital," Kose said. "He was smiling all the time." The Manleys knew the only way to help was to bring Hector to the United States for medical treatment.

Four weeks ago, they brought the boy and his mother to their Ohio home. His mother returned to El Salvador to remain with her other children.

Lessons unplanned

Kose told her students about Hector during a lesson about compassion, and she said once the students got wind of the boy's story, they were called to action. The students went to the task of raising money to help Hector's family.

Kose said $1,400 may not sound like much in the suburbs, but in El Salvador it will nearly build a house for the Castro family.

"It only costs about $3,000 to build their house," she said. "We wanted to make sure that when Hector gets to go home, he has a house to return to."

DeGraaf said even though her children knew about Hector and broke open their piggy banks to help him, they didn't at first quite understand what it meant to live through such a tragedy.

"I told them one day in carpool to imagine they're just out playing soccer one day, and then something happens. And they can't. And they don't have a house," she said. "As soon as they understood, they got real quiet. Then they started talking about what they could do for him."

Deborah Svrcina's fourth-grader, Dallas, told his mother, "Mama, this is a terrible thing that has happened. We just have to help him."

So, Svrcina raced for her wallet. Dallas raced for his wallet. Even 4-year-old Molly Svrcina got out her money to add to the collection.

Julie Laurette reported that her first-grader asked if he could give Hector the $150 in his piggy bank.

"He said, 'I don't need Rollerblades that bad,'" said Laurette, adding her son has been influenced by the school's curriculum, which includes values training.

"Our whole school is based on compassion, moral values and ethics," she said. "This is just amazing."

Hector has been fitted with one prosthesis leg, and is undergoing physical therapy before receiving the other one.

Kose said after Hector's voyage home this fall, he will remain in the hearts of all her students.

Kose said the rest of community is welcome to make donations to help Hector. They can be mailed to: Hector Castro, c/o Children's Wishing star, 320 Pheasant Run Place, Findlay, OH 45840. For more information, call (419) 424-0979.

Wheeling: Don Manley of Ohio pushes Hector Castro in his wheelchair at Canton Charter Academy recently. They were on their way to the Toledo Zoo with a first grade class taught by Manley's daughter, Elizabeth Kose.

Road sting

Plymouth residents among those issued detour tickets

BY CAROL MARSHALL
STAFF WRITER
cmarshall@oe.homecomm.net

A man holds a sign that reads, "Turnarounds $1.00" at a dead end on Canton Center Road, which is under construction.

Canton Police surprised and infuriated about a dozen Canton Center Road motorists Monday when they issued $85 traffic citations.

"We're ticketing people that are in violation of the traffic codes and jumping curbs," said Canton Police Sgt. Jerry Hardesty. "I think it's a problem of people understanding what the situation is. We've got a road that's closed. We've got construction workers out here trying to work and we're concerned about their safety. And we've got business owners concerned with all these people driving in and turning around on their property."

Officers were dispatched to the location just north of Ford Road, on the first business day of the Canton Center Road closure.

Disregarded directions

Southbound motorists either didn't see or ignored several road signs between Warren Road and the closure.

"There was a woman with the construction company waving us through" said Plymouth Township resident Christine Ingersoll. "We were paying attention to her. I didn't see the signs. Neither did anyone else."

North of Warren Road, a sign reads, "Detour ahead." At Warren Road, a Wayne County Roads sign advises drivers the road is closed at Ford Road, and points to the detour route. At Hanford, a sign affixed to a barricade reads, "Closed to through traffic."

Some drivers continued southbound until they were forced to stop at the closure.

Hardesty said the road construction company workers and nearby business owners called the department to complain about motorists trying to avoid the construction by jumping curbs and turning around in their parking lots.

Canton Police Officer Jeff Besseeen pointed to tire tracks where drivers had jumped curbs, driven across grass and ruined landscaping trying to drive around the construction.

Traffic trap

Ingersoll said drivers were tricked into the parking lot northeast of the road closure.

"I was trying to get to Ford Road. I saw the guy in front of me pull into the parking lot and talk to an officer there who was flagging people into the lot. So I pulled in behind him. He told me to pull over," she said. "When he came up to me and asked me for my drivers license I told him I was on the phone with the newspaper and he told me, 'You can go now.'"

At the site Monday, two officers said nobody was flagging motorists into the parking lot.

However, Officer Mike Tulip, who was on the scene for more than seven hours, said he was directing drivers on Canton Center Road into the lot, where they were later ticketed.

"They shouldn't have been down there if they didn't have any business they were doing there," Tulip said. "We were getting yelled at by the property owners, the business owners, the construction guys, then the drivers too."

Plymouth Township resident

Jessica Geiser of Plymouth Township said she had every right to be there, even though she also received a ticket.

She said her bank is at Canton Center Road near Hanford, and after she went to the bank, she was trying to get to Classy Chassis because they were having a special on car washes.

"I have receipts with the time on them from my bank," she said. "And I told them where I was going. That officer lied to me when he said they were ticketing people who were not doing business. They were ticketing everybody."

She said the officer who wrote her the ticket told her she could contest it in court, and she plans to do so.

Canton Police Capt. Laura Golles said officers will continue to issue tickets to motorists who ignore the posted signs. Violations are classified as civil infractions and are subject to fines and driving record points.

Canton Center Road will remain closed for eight weeks, which will allow for reconstruction of two bridges.

dispatch?" he said. "If we can get the schools to cooperate, that would even be better."

Currently, Plymouth Township is working with Plymouth-Canton Schools on a $350,000 project to improve recreational facilities at seven schools located within the township. It's part of an effort to help bolster recreation opportunities for township residents by improving existing playgrounds. Mann told city representatives that project will move forward, even as township officials are discussing a joint recreation master plan with the city.

After meeting with the consultant, the sub-committee is expected to hold a number of public hearings to receive input from sports organizations, booster clubs and residents. "We've got to hear what the people want to do," said Sincock. Those ideas will help mold a master plan, which will then help determine the costs for programs and facilities, and who will pay for it.

"I don't want a millage or separate taxing authority," said Mann.

Edwards said many communities with top recreation programs ask residents to pay for recreation.

"In the better communities, like Dearborn and Livonia, people vote in millages for recreation," he said. "With a good recreation program, our property values go up, and we have a more desirable community."

Commissioners and trustees appeared to be in agreement to eventually stop charging Plymouth Township participants nonresident fees for sports programs run by the city.

after getting his results. "The English part was a little tough, though."

According to the results, Thurtell missed one of the 75 English questions, two of the 60 math questions, and none of the 40 reading or 40 science reasoning questions.

"For purposes of comparison, the average composite score for the national high school graduating class of 2000 was 21," said Kristin Crouse, communications assistant for the ACT. "Only one in every 8,000 test takers achieves a perfect score."

Thurtell said he plans to major in computer science, with minors in math and physics. In his spare time, Abe enjoys reading math books.

"They have deductive logic, are totally conclusive, and when you prove a theorem it's true forever," he said.

Thurtell said his short list for college includes the California Institute of Technology, University of California-Berkley and Oberlin College.

Abe's father, Joel Thurtell, said, "I didn't understand the significance of it at first, but after talking to Abe's teachers and seeing how few perfect scores there were, I began to realize how amazing it was."

business in 1999, but was strictly a supplier to landscape contractors. This year, however, the Welsh family has expanded its operations to meet the needs of home gardeners as well.

One of the big additions is a nursery full of trees, shrubs and flats of flowers. The family brought in longtime plant retailer Ken Perrella, who has been in the nursery business for more than 30 years. Perrella said his objective is to offer the best plant stock available.

"We're really trying to develop this into more of a retail business, as opposed to just wholesale," he said.

Healthy plants

"Our number one goal is to sell quality, clean, healthy plants. They might be a bit more expensive here than the prices offered at some of the big chain stores. But in the end it pays off because our product is better. Our customers will be happy with what we have to offer," Perrella said.

All plants come with a one-year guarantee.

The store also carries a full line of waterfall and pond products, including construction materials and aquatic plants. Close to a dozen water features dot the property, providing customers with ideas about design and layout strategies.

And as the name suggests, Plymouth Rock sells all kinds of specialty rock material, including fieldstone, Michigan granite and outcropping stone.

In shadow of I-275: Plymouth Rock offers landscaping supplies and materials at their location on Schoolcraft Road in Plymouth Township.

"We bring in the rock materials from all over the United States," Bill Welsh said.

Not only does Plymouth Rock sell landscape materials, the expert staff will also design and install any type of landscape project.

"We will walk you through the whole project, from start to finish," said Bill Welsh.

According to Welsh, business has been down somewhat because of the construction project on the I-275 overpass, which has impeded traffic on Schoolcraft. However, he feels business will pick up once the community gets a chance to see the positive changes that have been made to the property, as well as experience the professionalism of the staff.

"We love it here in Plymouth. We really like being part of this community, and we plan to be here a long time," he said.

Plymouth Rock and Supply is located at 40111 Schoolcraft and is open seven days a week. For more information about store hours or products contact (734) 451-5500.

No new leads in case of missing Canton girl

Canton Police were still seeking leads Friday in the disappearance of a Plymouth Canton High School student, who hasn't surfaced anywhere or contacted her family in 10 days.

Police were tight-lipped about the status of the search for Angelica Jennifer Montero, 16, of Canton, saying only that there were no new developments as of Friday afternoon.

On Wednesday, a southwest Detroit home where Montero and another Canton teen apparently spent time on June 14, was badly damaged in a fire. The incident was labeled as a "revenge fire" by Detroit Police Arson officials. Canton Police and the Detroit Police Gang Unit had executed a search warrant on the home, on the 4800 block of Trenton, the previous night.

Montero's mother, Trinidad Estefan, said she last heard from her daughter in a June 14 phone call. Anyone with information on the whereabouts of Angelica Jennifer Montero may call Canton Police at (734) 394-5400.

Dems critical of GOP rush on House redistrict plan

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

"They should be ashamed of the way they have handled this," state Democratic Party chairman Mark Brewer said of the manner in which Republicans approved a new district boundary plan Thursday, June 21, for the House of Representatives.

"Privately, many of them are," Brewer insisted. "Several of them came to me afterward and said they were ashamed ... of course, they voted for it."

The House of Representatives voted 57-51, in a strictly party line ballot, to approve a plan for reapportionment of House districts. Under the Constitution, districts are redrawn every 10 years after the U.S. Census is completed. Senate and congressional districts were not included in the plan.

What Republicans have to be ashamed about, according to Brewer, is that the plan was not unveiled publicly by the author or GOP leaders until the session in which it was passed. Public release of district plan did not come until after the vote, and it was posted on the party web page at www.gophouse.com later than afternoon.

"And the maps were so bad, with so little detail, that you couldn't analyze what they were doing in the urban areas. That's not public disclosure at all," Brewer said.

Rep. Andrew Richner, R-Grosse Pointe Park, had an opportunity to unveil the plan two days earlier, on Tuesday, June 19, at a committee hearing on the topic and chose not to, Brewer said. Instead, GOP members said there was no consensus Republican plan.

'They were lying'

"They were lying," he said. "He had been showing that plan to other Republicans for several days. There is no way they could draw up a plan with 110 districts in that short amount of time and get all 57 members. What? They want us to believe they just unveiled it in caucus and everybody agreed to it? Don't believe it."

Instead, GOP members had reported out a Democratic plan offered by Rep. Nancy Quarles, D-Southfield. Democrats said it was a ploy and predicted the plan would change as soon as it hit the house floor.

Republicans, for the most part, are not responding to the criticisms. Richner and House speaker Rick Johnson, R-LeRoy, did not respond to phone calls.

Rep. Bruce Patterson, R-Canton, did explain why he felt the Quarles plan should be replaced with the Richner plan.

"The Democrat's substitute breaks 10 more municipal boundaries than the proposed Richner plan. It also shifts 39 more municipal units than the proposed Richner plan. In many instances, it is obvious that the statutory ... rules were violated to favor a Democratic incumbent or for some other partisan reason. For example ... by removing Republican municipalities from the 106th District, it clearly gives the Democrats an advantage."

Patterson listed a number of districts he believed had been "gerrymandered" by Democrats.

"It is exactly that kind of political gerrymandering the rules were designed to prohibit," Patterson concluded. "Many more examples could be given."

Quarles said she believed her plan would give the parties a 55-55 split in districts with political leanings to their advantage. Brewer analyzed the Richner plan as having 65 Republican districts and 45 Democratic districts.

Speaker Johnson issued a public statement in reaction to the passage of the plan.

"This is a good first step," he said. "I'm pleased we have passed a plan that complies with the statutory requirements."

Fewer minority districts

Brewer would disagree with that. Although Republicans did accept one amendment to restore a Hispanic district in Detroit, Brewer concludes the plan will have fewer districts with a large minority voting base, essentially eliminating one in Detroit. That would be a violation of Voting Rights Act.

Brewer also said that "compactness" is a part of the Apol standards, which requires that districts be drawn as square as possible. He noted that under the Richner plan, the 65th district in Jackson meanders from Lenawee County to Eaton County. The 81st district in St. Clair County included the north section of the county and a southern portion, but the sections are connected by only a sliver of land.

"Everything you see in there is to draw the districts to Republican advantage," he said.

But Democrats were most critical of the way Republican passed the plan.

"The 403-page bill describing House districts was not available for review by the public," Rep. Mark Schauer, D-Battle Creek, said. "In fact, it only became available to House members after the start of House session. This process is wrong, and the resulting outcome is bad public policy. Redistricting strikes at the heart of American representative democracy. This redistricting plan is in bad faith with the public we represent."

Plenty of time

Rep. Nancy Cassis, R-Novi, contended there had been plenty of time of public comment. She said the House speaker had put out a public notice two weeks earlier calling for comment and plans from the public with a June 18 deadline. Cassis said public comment had been minimal and no one from the general public had submitted a proposed apportionment plan for consideration.

Both Patterson and Cassis have said public input on the plan can still be given, by constituents contacting their lawmakers through phone calls and letters to their offices.

The apportionment plan, House Bill 4965, must now be reviewed by the state Senate.

As drawn, districts would be:

In Western Wayne, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth and the City of Wayne would be drawn into one district. The 21st District would consist of Van Buren, Belleville and Canton. Westland, Garden City and Inkster would be drawn together in another district.

In Oakland, Rochester and Oakland Township would be drawn into one district. Another district would include townships from Addison to Holly, as well as Rose and Orion. Waterford, northern West Bloomfield and Orchard Lake would become the 43rd District. Independence, Springfield, White Lake and Highland becomes the 44th. Milford would be included in a district with Brighton and Howell. Southern West Bloomfield and Commerce become the 39th. Novi, Wixom and Lyon Township would be drawn together. Farmington and Farmington Hills get their own district.

Schoolcraft honors McDowell

BY TIM SMITH
STAFF WRITER

Richard McDowell will receive quite a send-off later this week – his final one as president of Schoolcraft College.

A by-invitation-only retirement reception is scheduled from 5-7:30 p.m. Thursday at the McDowell Center, with a formal program slated for 6 p.m. Participating will be family and friends, invited members of the public, college teachers and students, business leaders, state, county and public school officials. Invited to the program are superintendents from Livonia, Plymouth, Northville, Clarenceville and Novi, the five districts that comprise Schoolcraft.

There also will be a separate brunch program on Friday, a chance for the Schoolcraft faculty and college officials to wish McDowell good luck as he retires after 20 years building Schoolcraft into one of Michigan's top community colleges. McDowell retires effective Sunday, when his successor, Conway Jeffress, takes over.

Among those looking forward to this week's festivities is Sharon Braun, director of College Centers at Schoolcraft's Garden City-based Radcliff Center.

"He's a dynamic leader and he has been an inspiration to all of us in supporting the community and students," said Braun about McDowell.

Some of McDowell's top accomplishments over the years include: being named Livonia's First Citizen of the Year in 1996; being cited by the University of Texas as one of the country's top 50 community college presidents; spearheading the revenue-making Seven Mile Crossing commercial development project.

Thursday's farewell will include brief speeches from dignitaries, displays of memorabilia about McDowell's career and food prepared by the renowned culinary arts program.

New legislation cracks down on telephone solicitors

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Legislation intended to crack down on telephone sales operations – creating a statewide "do not call list" and enacting a code of ethics for phone solicitors – may be popular with members of the state House of Representatives. Several bills in the package passed in votes of 100 or more to 1 recently.

But at least one thinks lawmakers are being hypocritical.

"Politicians and most charitable organizations would be exempt from these new restrictions, despite the fact that they make up a significant portion of the unwanted phone solicitations. I fail to see how the legislature distinguishes between the unwanted calls of a politician and those of a business," said Rep. Leon Drolet, R-Clinton Township.

"All citizens go shopping, but only a bare majority will ever show up at the polls," he continued. "If the unwanted discussion of commercial transactions in a private home is to become a crime, then consistency would dictate that the unsolicited advocacy of politics should become a capital offense."

Rep. Laura Toy, R-Livonia, disagrees.

"I led a consumers issue task force two years ago," she said, "and phone solicitation was a huge problem everywhere we went ... People have a right to decide if they want to receive solicitation calls. This package addresses the concerns of Michigan residents and strengthens the usefulness and clarity of phone sales for those who rely on it."

'Do not call'

The five-bill package regulating solicitations won approval in the House of Representatives Thursday, June 14. It now heads to the Senate for review.

House Bill 4042, which would create a state "do not call" list through which consumers can sign up to block calls from telemarketers, was approved in a 99-1 vote. All local lawmakers supported the measure, except Rep. Paul DeWeese, R-Williamston, who was absent for the day. Drolet was the sole dissenting vote.

HB 4154, requiring solicitors to give the name of the company from which they are calling and give a phone number for return calls, was approved 100-1. HB 4250, establishing a "code of ethics" for solicitors, was passed 102-1. HB 4632, making the bill a part of the Michigan Consumer Protection Act, was approved 100-1.

Only HB 4631, requiring publication of instructions on how to get on the "do not call list" in phone directories, drew any additional opposition.

Reps. Mike Bishop, R-Rochester, and Bob Gosselin, R-Troy, voted against that piece of the package, but it still passed 95-9.

Drolet had several other complaints about the proposal.

"Few of us enjoy the uninvited intrusion of telemarketing calls," he said. "However, behaving rudely and disrespectfully should not be against the law. Cluttering up our criminal and civil codes with prohibitions and regulations dictating what can be spoken over phone lines is a disproportionate and undemocratic response to this problem."

A group of lawmakers have introduced bills to add politicians, charitable organizations and public safety unions to the "do not call list." House Bills 4861-63 are sponsored by Reps. Mark Schauer, D-Battle Creek, Ken Bradstreet, R-Gaylord, and Buzz Thomas, D-Detroit. So far, they have not received consideration.

Telemarketers who would be exempt from new regulations would be those that already have an ongoing business relationship with the prospective customer. Businesses with fewer than 25 employees are also exempt.

The package would require telephone solicitors to be licensed.

On the plus side for businesses, the act authorizes legal action to enforce sales contracts made through phone solicitations, if the business can show it has been in compliance with the law through each step of the sales process.

Opportunity took Wolcott to Groves

When Brian Wolcott took the job as Plymouth-Canton director of athletics six years ago, he always hoped that when he left, things would be improved. He believes he accomplished that. Now he'll switch from an administrative role back to something with more teaching.

BY C.J. RISAK

A step back or a step forward?

Brian Wolcott hopes his latest career move will be both. Wolcott will officially leave his position as the Plymouth-Canton school district's director of athletics in August and take a step back, returning to the school he worked at prior to accepting his current position six years ago.

Wolcott will be dean of freshmen students at Birmingham Groves come this fall. He'll also be able to teach some classes, something he says he has missed.

"The bottom line, why I'm leaving, is that I get to teach again," Wolcott said Thursday. "It's an opportunity to work first-hand with the kids."

He insisted those were the major reasons for his decision, but added other factors played a role.

For one, his return to Groves HS and teaching should help Wolcott achieve another of his goals: to become a school principal. He did apply for the position at the under-construction Plymouth HS, but didn't get it.

"I do want to be a principal," he admitted. "This was a piece of the puzzle I was missing."

For another, Wolcott could see what was coming with the opening of the new school. The school budget did not include money for a building athletic director, which meant Wolcott was expected to become the Plymouth HS AD.

And his current position? It would be terminated. Wolcott would become the senior AD; Canton's Sue Heinzman and Salem's Tom Willette would retain their current positions.

Just who would absorb Wolcott's other duties was unclear. Indeed, school officials were expected to meet last Friday to try and determine some of the whos and whats.

Such uncertainty made his decision to accept the position at Groves easier, but Wolcott insisted it wasn't the overriding reason he decided to leave.

"Sure, there's a lot that needs to be done," Wolcott said of the problems fac-

All-Observer soccer stars are the state's best

His isn't the most elaborate of styles. Don Smith likes the direct approach.

"We don't really play the long ball (game)," the Plymouth Canton soccer coach said. "We do a combination. I take the most direct route — get the ball into scoring position and score."

Call it simple if you like, but this is certain — it works. In Smith's 15 years as Canton's girls coach (he's been the boys coach for 13 seasons), he's guided the Chiefs to three state championships, including this past season (he also has another state title with the Canton boys team).

His accomplishments have earned him the Observer's coach of the year honor.

Complicated passing schemes aren't something Smith will incorporate. "I stay very close to the basics," he said. "I don't want to make it too difficult."

He'll also use all the resources available to him. No team will have a larger varsity roster than Smith's — this past season, he carried 25 players on his team.

And most of them will see action. Because if there's one thing Smith insists upon, it's hard work — offensively, defensively and in the midfield.

Of course, talent is the key to any team's success, and Canton had plenty of it, starting with Anne Morrell, Michigan's Miss Soccer the past two years and one of the top players in the nation. Then

But Smith analyzes the rest of his talent well, too, blending it with the standouts. Canton was expected to do well this season; the Chiefs were ranked nationally going into the season, but got off to a slow start.

Part of the problem was finding a suitable replacement for graduated sweeper Abi Morrell. Janine Guastella was Canton's top returning defender, and a top-level basketball player, too. Smith figured with her all-around athletic ability, she could make the adjustment.

But switching her to sweeper weakened the defense overall. Smith recognized this five games into the season, so he put Lindsey Lasher in at sweeper and moved Guastella back to her natural position, as a marking defender.

It worked. After a 2-2-1 start, Canton went 16-1 to finish 18-3-1; in their six playoff matches, the Chiefs gave up just three goals, posting four shutouts.

Indeed, the Canton defense allowed just nine goals in its last 13 matches, with eight shutouts.

So it's apparent the Chiefs, and Smith, got just what they deserved.

ALL-OBSERVER 1ST TEAM

Anne Morrell, Plymouth Canton, senior: What more can be said about a player of Morrell's stature? Maybe this final action said it best.

At the end-of-the-season soccer team banquet last Monday, Canton school officials announced they would do something that had never before been done in school history: They would retire Morrell's No. 7.

Certainly every other honor has been bestowed upon her. Twice named Miss Soccer as the state's top player (last year and this), Morrell finished her career with 137 goals, the second-highest total ever by a Division I player. Forty of them came this season, with eight assists; 13 of those goals were scored in Canton's six-game playoff run, which culminated in a state championship.

Morrell was the first-ever player to be a four-time all-state selection. In the fall, she'll attend the University of North Carolina.

Smith's description of Morrell moments after the Chiefs had clinched the state title was a fitting summary to her talent: "Every team has a player they go to. Ours is just a bit better than everyone else's."

Melissa Dobbyn, Livonia Stevenson, freshman: Despite missing six games due to illness, Dobbyn put up impressive numbers as a freshman with 14 goals and 17 assists.

She was voted first-team All-WLAA and third-team All-State (Division I).

Dobbyn is a member of the under-15 state Cup champion Michigan Hawks.

"Stevenson seems to get a cycle of premier goal scorers and they're in good hands the next three years with Melissa," outgoing Stevenson coach Jim Kimble said. "Melissa draws a lot of attention when she's on the field. She's most dangerous inside 30 yards."

Kellee Mullin, Plymouth Salem, senior: Mullin seemed like a highlight-film type of player, according to her coach at Salem, Joe Nora. But there was more to this senior forward than just scoring impressive goals at opportune times.

"She was one of those hard-working players," Nora said of Mullin, who was an all-WLAA conference selection.

The hard work is what got her the goals when they were needed most. "Her nickname on the team was 'Sniper'," Nora added. "Anytime we needed a goal, she'd get it."

Mullin finished with 10 goals and three assists despite a leg

Warriors take league's lead

MSHL HOCKEY

Brandon Kaleniecki (Livonia) scored three goals Thursday to lead the first-place Warriors to their second victory in as many nights and third straight in the Metro Summer Hockey League.

The 3-0 Warriors also had two goals apiece from Matt Van Heest (South Lyon) and Joe Moreau (Farmington Hills) and Brian Sutherland (Plymouth) in their 12-6 rout of the Broncos (1-2).

The Warriors led 8-1 after two periods at Suburban Training Center in Farmington Hills before the Broncos showed some life with a 5-4 scoring edge in the finale.

Eric Hawkins (Redford), Jim Spiewak (Northville) and Jeremy Majszak (Canton) added one goal apiece for the Warriors, who lead the MSHL by half a game over the Wolverines.

Charlie Ciufettelli (Inkster) had two goals and one assist for the Broncos.

Dave Moss (Livonia) broke a 1-1 tie with the first of two goals Wednesday, and the Warriors pulled away to a 9-3 win over the Wildcats.

The Broncos led 5-1 after one period and 6-2 at the end of two. Hawkins also scored two goals, and the winners had solo tallies by Van Heest, Moreau, Spiewak, Ryan Yost (Livonia) and Majszak.

Jeremy Zemach (West Bloomfield), Chris Fairbanks (Milford) and Andy Weidenbach (Farmington Hills) put the puck in the net for the Wildcats (0-2).

Wolverines 12, Whalers 3: Varujan Arman (West Bloomfield) scored five goals Thursday to spark the unbeaten Wolverines to their win over the Whalers.

James Crank (West Bloomfield) had three goals and two assists and Krikor Arman (West Bloomfield) had four assists for the winners.

The Wolverines are 2-0 and half a game behind the Warriors. The Whalers, who slipped to 1-1, trailed 5-0 after one period and 8-2 after two.

Huskies 4, Bulldogs 3: Mark R. Pietila (Milford) scored the winning goal with 1:38 remaining in the game Thursday.

John Pietila (Iron Mountain) got the Huskies started with their first goal late in the second period. Josh Daavettila (Brighton) and Phil Pietila (Iron Mountain) scored ahead of Mark Pietila in the third.

Both teams are 1-1.

injury suffered late in the regular season that hampered through the state playoffs. Still, her ability to rise to the challenge is what her coach will remember — one goal in particular:

"It was a full-volley, out of the air off a corner kick," he said. "That's her style. She's like Allen Iverson — she does so much but makes it look so easy."

Amanda Lentz, Plymouth Canton, senior: It will be strange next year to see Canton without Morrell and Lentz on the field. If Morrell could be described as the knockout punch in the Chiefs' lineup, then Lentz was the set-up artist, providing the jabs and hooks that led to the finishing blow.

An all-conference selection and a four-year letterwinner, Lentz followed her all-state performance of a year ago by being named to the state's Dream Team this season.

It was a well-deserved honor. She was second on the Chiefs in scoring, collecting 14 goals and adding a team-best 24 assists.

And like her noted friend and teammate, Lentz doesn't back down from contact. In Canton's state semifinal win over Brighton, Lentz went into the air with a Bulldog defender in an attempt to head the ball. Instead, the Brighton player headed Lentz, delivering a blow that could be heard on the sideline and sent Lentz to the turf.

She regained her senses quickly, however, and despite the noticeable welt on her head, Lentz returned to play in the second half.

This fall, Lentz will attend and play soccer at Penn State.

Michelle Esparza, Livonia Churchill, senior: A three-year varsity player, the midfielder made All-WLAA and second-team All-State (Division) this season.

Esparza had nine goals and six assists.

"Michelle is one of the toughest players to run through or around the midfield," Churchill interim coach Dave Hebestreit said. "She also had a knack for scoring set-piece goals.

"She's very coachable and has been a solid player. She's fast and has a good touch."

Esparza, who carries a 3.93 GPA, is headed to Grand Valley State.

Lindsay Gusick, Livonia Stevenson, senior: Will go down as one of the most acclaimed players in school history after finishing her career with 101 goals and 45 assists.

This season, the offensive midfielder scored 33 goals and had 15 assists as the Spartans finished 14-4 overall.

She was a first-team All-Stater four straight years and a Dream Team selection her sophomore, junior and senior years as the Spartans won a state title and had one runner-up finish.

Gusick made All-Western Lakes four consecutive years.

"I've had the luxury of coaching some great soccer players, but Lindsay is the most complete athlete I've ever coached," Kimble said. "She is a pure soccer player and a great athlete. We've had two Miss Soccers (Andrea Sied and Allison Campbell) and that puts Lindsay in good company."

Gusick, a member of the state Cup champion under-18 Hawks, is also a member of the under-17 U.S. National Team.

Gusick, who also excels in the classroom (3.7 GPA), is headed to the University of Virginia.

Lorianne DeDomenico, Farmington, senior: A four-year varsity starter for the Falcons, DeDomenico was the top player on a team that was 15-7 and had the second-most wins in school history.

She was more of a playmaker in past years, but she became Farmington's leading scorer this year. The senior midfielder led her team with 20 goals and also had 14 assists.

DeDomenico was named to the All-WLAA and Division II all-state third team this year. She was a four-time, all-district player and an all-regional selection three times; she received the John Cotton Award as Farmington's best female athlete.

"Lorianne was a calm, cool and collected player," coach Steve Montgomery said. "Under pressure she does a good job controlling the ball. She really knows the game of soccer and loves to play it.

"She's an outstanding leader on and off the field. Her knowledge of the game is impressive, which makes her a coach on the field.

"She'll be missed and very hard to replace. We'll miss her big smile and her laughter."

Marissa Sarkesian, Plymouth Salem, freshman: Perhaps the most amazing thing when considering Sarkesian's attributes is that she just completed her freshman season.

"For a freshman, she played with the composure of a senior," said her coach, Joe Nora. "In high pressure situations, she would calm us down."

Sarkesian finished as her team's leader in scoring, collecting 11 goals and eight assists. She was selected to the WLAA's all-conference team and was a third-team all-state choice.

"That was a lot of pressure to put on a freshman at center midfield," said Nora. "She handled it tremendously well.

"I look forward to her leading us for the next three years."

Dana White, Livonia Stevenson, senior: Was moved early in the season from forward to defender and never complained after scoring 30-plus goals her first three years.

"After we lost the Bishop Foley game we made wholesale changes and Dana sacrificed her senior year to try and win a state title," Kimble said. "She's a forward, but it turned out to be a good move for us."

White, who carries a 3.896 GPA, is headed to play Division I soccer for Stony Brook University (N.Y.).

The second-team All-Stater is a member of the under-17 state Cup champion Michigan Hawks.

Janine Guastella, Plymouth Canton, senior: Guastella proved her mettle time and again for Canton — both during the season and before it.

Early the 2000 season, Guastella suffered a torn ACL that required major surgery and a lot of rehabilitation if she ever planned on playing sports again. A standout basketball player — she'll attend and play for Grand Valley State in the fall — Guastella worked hard to rehab her knee.

She returned to play basketball for Canton last fall, earning all-Observer honors, and was back on the field as a defender for the Chiefs this spring. She was an all-division selection.

Although her coach, Don Smith, thought her athletic ability would allow her to play at sweeper, her talent as a marking defender was even greater.

"She was definitely our most determined marking back," said Smith. "She always had to mark the finest (player) on the other team."

Guastella did it well. Four of Canton's six playoff games ended in shutouts for the Chiefs.

Jill Dombrowski, Plymouth Salem, senior: Your team wins 13 games, and 11 of those are shutouts. That's doing your job in goal.

For the second-straight year, Dombrowski was the Observer's and the WLAA's top keeper. In Salem's 13-5-1 season, she had a 0.84 goals-against average, to go with those 11 shutouts.

And as much as she likes soccer, her sport of choice is volleyball. She'll attend the University of Albany this fall on a volleyball scholarship.

"She keeps the ball out of the net, plain and simple," was her coach, Joe Nora's, description of her. "Going into a game with Jill in goal, I felt we were ahead by a goal. She's that kind of player.

"She'll ve tough to replace."

Dombrowski is also a scholar-athlete and was voted Salem's Female Athlete of the Year.

ing the school district. "But you know, there always is. Sure, there are going to be hiccups until the new school is on-line.

"But that's short-term. It's to be expected. The decision I made, I made because it was right for me."

Many of his colleagues aren't happy with his choice. "I'm very, very sad to see Brian go," said Heinzman. "He's a wonderful boss, and he has great vision and character. He's going to be missed."

Salem school principal Gerald Ostoin concurred. "He will be missed," Ostoin said.

There are plenty of fond memories Wolcott will take with him, although they don't necessarily deal with wins and losses.

Wolcott was pleased with several improvements made during his tenure, from the new gym floors at Salem (including wooden ones on the upper levels, which are now being installed) to the open atmosphere created between parents' committees and advisory groups and the student handbook for athletics.

"We've worked real hard to communicate with them," he said of the advisory and parents' committees. "And we continue to work on our facilities."

Then there's another part of his position that is often overlooked, as the person in charge of the district's physical education department.

"We've revamped our physical education curriculum," Wolcott said. "It's solid now, more consistent. I think it is improved, and a lot of that credit goes to the teachers."

As for varsity athletics, Wolcott takes minimal credit. "They were successful before I got there," he noted. "But the question you always ask yourself, 'Are things better than when I got here?'

"I think they are. And that's not meant as any disrespect for the person who was before me. But you always like to believe that you leave a job in better shape than when you took it."

At any rate, Wolcott will be around to see what happens. Although he will teach in Birmingham, he has no plans to move his family.

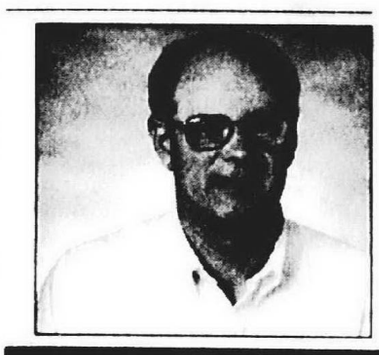
NATURE NOTES



TIM NOWICKI

Color is lure for flowers

One of the most striking colors in the fields today is a rich magenta. It comes from two kinds of plants, thistle and vetch. Both grow in abandoned fields and along the edge of a meadow and forest.

These two plants demonstrate that summer is a season of colors. It is prefaced by colors of late spring flowers, but a rainbow of colors can be seen all summer long. Most of this color comes from flowers and the butterflies that frequent those flowers.

One reason plants have such intense colors is to "attract" insect pollinators. Insects, like butterflies, may not see a flower color as you and I do.

Because they can see ultraviolet light, reflected light can be perceived very differently. They may see a flower as all black, or all white, or black and white in a target like pattern.

We see a color that the plant developed over the years because it attracted the most pollinators. Fortunately for us, these colors can be very beautiful, like those of thistle and vetch.

Thistle is generally recognized by its sharp, prickly, spiny leaves. If you have ever walked into some plants, you will immediately do the back-step, or side-step, accompanied by very vocal ouches.

Those spines inflicting pain saved Scotland according to legend. During a battle between the Danes and Scots, the Danes were told to take off their boots as they walked quietly at night to attack the Scots.

When some of the Danes stepped on the prickly thistle plants, their screams of pain alerted the Scots of their attack in time for them to defend themselves. That is why the thistle is Scotland's national flower.

Though often considered an invasive weed plant here in southeastern Michigan, thistle is still a beautiful plant. Nodding thistle, which can be seen towering six feet above the ground, has a large flower head two inches across.

Each flower head is made up of many small little flowers growing in a cluster. Since each little flower has nectar inside, several kinds of insects can be seen nectaring at the flower.

Clear-winged moths that resemble bumblebees nectar during the day and can be approached quite closely. Larger hummingbird or sphinx moths can also be seen during the day sipping nectar.

Look carefully at these larger nectar eaters because some may be the actual hummingbird. Thistle's red color is very appealing to hummingbirds.

Bull thistle is another species that also has a magenta colored flower, but it has a flower that resembles a deeply sculpted vase with a widely flared opening. Both species of thistle will become sources of "down" for American goldfinch nests.

After the flowers have been pollinated, each seed will have a fluffy "down" attached to it which will serve as a parachute for the seed.

A vine-like plant that can form dense clusters of magenta colored flowers is purple vetch. Its flowers look similar to those of a pea because it is in the pea family. Leaves of the vetch resemble a locust tree leaf.

Unlike nodding and bull thistle, purple vetch is native to North America. It is a beneficial plant because its roots have bacteria associated with them that convert nitrogen into a useable form by plants. Orchards were once planted with vetch to help improve the soil.

Next time you drive the outlying roads, direct the passenger to look for these striking flowers so you can stop and take a look at their beauty. It will be worth a quick stop.

Where, when, why too often get lost

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

With empty eyes and a gaping mouth, an old, lacquered muskie head is perched like a gargoyle on the bookshelf in my office.

When the sunlight hits it just right, the dull, dried, bronze-skinned creature turns almost copper in color — appropriate since the regal trophy was taken from Schlatter Lake, at the tip of the Upper Peninsula's Keweenaw Peninsula, better known as Copper County.

Dead longer than I've been alive, the toothy predator still conjures up questions of it's existence when new acquaintances first lay eyes on it:

"How big was it?"

"What did he catch it on?"

"Where's the rest of it?"

"Why's it so ugly?"

Questions — and I've heard them all before.

It's the answers that prove elusive — as missing as the remainder of the fish-head's body.

All that's left is the head, from the gill-plate forward.

It was never mounted – folks didn't do much of that back then. Instead, Dad dipped it in a pail of lacquer and hung out to dry in the summer sun.

It was dried with the mouth wide open, which I suppose makes it look even more menacing than it was when it was alive and feeding on anything else in the lake.

From top to bottom the mouth measures a whopping six inches, and another five from side to side. There is a full three inches between the eyes...this truly was a huge fish.

As family legend goes, my late father caught the monster one summer day while fishing from shore. He and his native American pal "Noukie," would venture out often on fishing excursion from the little mining town of Mohawk where Dad's family owned a cabin.

Schlatter Lake, Lac La Belle, Lake Fanny Hooe, and Bruneau Creek were household words while I was growing up.

Back when the fish was caught there were no roads leading into Schlatter Lake. The only way to get there was through the woods — about a four-mile hike, if legend has it correct.

With trophies like this one lurking in the crystal waters, who could blame them for wearing out a pair of sneakers a year on the long, rugged treks.

That also helps explain why there is only the head of this fish remaining today to foster the tale: who'd want to carry a 25 to 35 pound muskie four miles through the woods?

The legend has become fuzzy over the years so the exact date of the catch, the lure used, and the highlight of the fight remain a mystery.

My best guess is that it was taken around 1949-51, well before my Mom and Dad were even married. It was possibly caught with a red/white Dardevle, a popular spoon at the time. I've got Dad's old tackle box and there are a couple BIG Dardevles and a huge Red Eye in there. I've often wondered if one of them was the lucky lure.

The questions remain and all I can do now is speculate as to their answers.

I've vowed to not make the same mistake with my trophies. On a suggestion from a friend and colleague, I've started making little fact cards that I attach to the back of my trophies.

There's one for my biggest buck, a wide-racked, 9-point taken on Nov. 10, 1989 with a bow and arrow in Lapeer County. Due to circumstances, I've explained further on the card, I had to wait until the following morning to recover the deer.

It was the longest night of my life, but the wait was well worth it when my buddy Danny Poole and I recovered the massive buck at daybreak along the edge of an overgrown cornfield.

Then there's one about my first turkey, a tom with an eight-inch beard, taken in Montmorency County in 1990. He crossed two pastures in the early morning light only to hang up 70 yards away.

After I'd thrown at him every call I knew without much success, a live hen began cutting right behind me and the ol' boy couldn't pass up the seductive melody. He ran right in to my decoy.

Ironically, I shot that bird within 10 yards of where my older brother John shot his first buck back in 1967, as duly recorded.

Dates, hunting/fishing partners, and highlights of the chase all get recorded, then I glue or tape the three-by-five file card to the back of my mount.

They help remind me of days gone by, and they'll also answer those never-ending questions that will inevitably get asked after it's time for me to move on.

13-year-old already rolling top scores

TEN PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

Ronnie Sparks, Jr. is all of 13 and bowls in the Wednesday Youth Doubles League at Country Lanes in Farmington.

And don't become jealous because he rolled a perfect game last week, his second 300 of the summer (the other coming in May).

Not bad considering that Ronnie has only been bowling for three years.

Meanwhile, his mixed team took first in the YABA City and State tournaments. His all-boys team captured the YABA City tournament, while his partner Adam Silverman finished second in Boys Doubles in the State YABA.

His Saturday Wonderland Lanes team in the Livonia Parks and Recreation League took the Parks and Rec annual tourney.

His team also took first place in The YABA Team Challenge at Ypsi-Arbor Lanes.

Not jealous yet?

In the Wonderland Lanes YABA League, Ronnie took the triple crown with high game (289), high series (769) and highest average (215).

Not bad for a 13-year-old.

Ronnie also helps coach the little guys, the bumper bowlers who are just learning to bowl at Wonderland Lanes.

He was first introduced to bowling by his grandfather, James Langston who at age 75 still carries a 174 average and helped Ronnie get started.

A lot of credit goes to his proud mother Catherine, who is just like a soccer mom, driving here and there to leagues, tournaments, practices and wherever.

She remembers how Ronnie reacted after the second 300.

He shouted: "I know I did it, I just canit believe it."

Ronnie, who will enter ninth grade this fall at Westland John Glenn High School, has already garnered a couple of scholarship prizes and hopes to win some more as he plans to enter Michigan Junior Masters Competition (MJMA) this coming season.

•Anybody else quit smoking after last week's bowling column?

•The challenge is on, and perhaps a new bowling tradition for greater Detroit is born.

San Diego vs. Detroit.

San Diego, Calif. has been the home of the Joe Norris Trio League and now there will be a Joe Norris Senior Men's Trio League in forming the Detroit area at Thunderbowl Lanes in Allen Park.

Ronnie Sparks, Jr.
A pair of perfect games

It is planned that the winning teams from each league will face off against each other for the annual championship.

In past years, there would always be a representation from that city by the Pacific to bowl in our annual John P. Gavie Tournament at Thunderbowl.

It was first inspired by the late, great Norris who always enjoyed coming back home to bowl in his favorite event.

Joe was often accompanied by his good friend, Archie and later, more would come in for the event.

Last year there were 15 senior bowlers from San Diego here for the Gavie, including Norris, for his final appearance in Detroit.

Those interested can call Vickie Ingham at Thunderbowl (313) 928-4688. Bowlers must be at least 50 years of age to be eligible. This will be an exciting new format based on average.

•California, here I come.

While this topic was about San Diego, I will be in northern California as you are reading these pages today.

Just a short visit to my son, Don, who left the nest to seek his fortune in San Francisco.

He promises to take me to one of the area's most unique bowling centers to try out its lanes.

The airfare is complimentary due to the successful fundraising effort last Fall with the Evergreen Childrenis Services.

•The awards dinner of June 14 for the Detroit Women's Bowling Association and the Greater Detroit Bowling Association featured the Presentations of the GDBA 2001 Masters Championship Award to Mark Moore.

The GDBA 2001 Senior Masters Championship award went to Scotty Laughlin, while the GDBA Bowlers Achievement Award to Farmington Hills resident Mark Voight.

The GDBA Meritorious Service Award went to two individuals, Mike Lucente and radio sports personality, Tom Mazawey.

The rest of presentations were to both organizations All-City teams and the DWBA Queen, Altramese (Mickey) Webb, with a 220 composite average.

Her court consisted of Sonja Butler with a 219.5 average and Angela Wilt of Westland with 217.0.

The All-City teams were announced here a few weeks ago and Bowling Woman of the Year honors went to Adeline DeBiasi, co-proprietor of Taylor Lanes.

The PBA Pro Bowler's tour returns to Taylor Lanes this October after a one-year hiatus.

Plymouth residents go right to source for art appreciation, cuisine

BY DOUG JOHNSON
STAFF WRITER

Last year Al Larson, owner of Frame Works in Plymouth, and his store manager, Susan Gallas, decided to offer something special to do with art and art appreciation.

The result was a personalized, escorted tour to Paris last month, attended by 18 people, most of whom were from Plymouth and Canton.

"Ernest Hemingway said it best. 'Paris is a moveable feast.' Experience the City of Lights and you'll fall in love with its fantastic food, its culture, its joy of life," said Gallas, who lives in Livonia.

Larson, who lives in Plymouth, offered the tour to customers on a mailing list generated by his store on Penniman. He also owns frame stores in Livonia and in Canton.

Gallas said the tour concentrated on French art and culture. "Our Hotel Burgundy was centrally located making it an easy walk to The Louvre, Tuileries Gardens, Paris Opera and of course shopping."

Gallas said among the memorable experiences were an excursion to Monet's Gardens at Giverny, a private gallery showing at Galerie Tamenaga, touring the Museé D'Orsay and an evening tour of the Chateau Vaux-Le-Vicomte, where after sunset 2,000 candles were lit in the chateau and surrounding gardens.

"We will always remember the suburb dining experience at Le Grand Vefour, recently feature in Gourmet magazine. Some of our group took a cooking class at the Ritz," Gallas said.

The tour was organized and conducted by David Groen, veteran traveler and retired Livonia Public Schools French teacher.

Star signs with Seattle

BY PAUL BEAUDRY
STAFF WRITER
pbeaudry@oe.homecomm.net

Last Friday, Justin Ockerman left Garden City and the well-ordered portion of his youth behind.

He traded the safety of home, friends and family for the chance to live out his dream.

Ockerman, the sixth-round draft pick of the Seattle Mariners on June 5, signed with the club on June 15 for a $150,000 bonus and a college tuition package.

"It feels real good now," said Ockerman. "I'm real happy to be playing . . . very anxious and excited."

The next chapter in Ockerman's life and the first in his new career will be in the Mariners' rookie camp in Peoria, Ariz., where he'll report for conditioning and fine tuning.

It wasn't an easy choice. The Mariners came up $30,000 from their original offer. And colleges seeking the 6-10 pitcher/first baseman/center/good-guy's services were still making late pitches for his talent.

"Actually, more colleges have called me since then saying they're still interested in me for baseball, basketball or both," said Ockerman. "A couple of them told me that if I went there, I could play both baseball and basketball."

The Mariners first made Ockerman an offer on June 11 – two days after the Cougars were eliminated from the Division 1 regional by Farmington. But it wasn't his only offer.

"Since the draft, I've heard from Boston College, Eastern Michigan, Xavier, Detroit-Mercy and Michigan for basketball and Michigan, Clemson, Central Michigan and Detroit-Mercy for baseball," said Ockerman.

Some athletes in his position would have played the colleges against the pros in an attempt to drive up whatever he could get as a baseball signing bonus. Not Ockerman. While he could have used college basketball or baseball as leverage, he chose not to – even though his grades and test scores were more than enough to get him just about anywhere he wanted to go. He took just two visits to colleges – an unofficial one to Michigan and an official visit to Oral Roberts in Tulsa, Okla., for baseball.

"I don't regret doing things that way," said Ockerman. "Things have turned out pretty well for me. I'm still getting calls with basketball, but I wanted to look into baseball."

Actually, Ockerman has just two regrets with the way things have gone.

The first, he laughs about – "I wouldn't have given up a homer to Chris Chesney in that Farmington game."

The second, he's more serious about.

"I do wish my mother was here to see this," said Ockerman, whose mother, Cindy, died in 1993 of complications from an enlarged heart. "It was the week after (Boston Celtics star) Reggie Lewis died of the same thing. It would have been great for her to see this. And it's been hard because she can't share in any of the glory or the sorrows, for that matter.

"But my stepmother, Debbie, has been really supportive of everything. My dad (Ken) has helped me through the whole thing. And Alesha (a sophomore at Garden City) has been great. She's doing well in her sports and that's great."

Before signing, he sought out advice on what to do with his future. After he was drafted, he called Casey Rogowski – the former Catholic Central standout, now playing Class A ball with the Kannapolis (N.C.) Intimidators, a farm team of the Chicago White Sox.

"He told me to do what I wanted to do and just have fun with it," said Ockerman. "He had no complaints and it's great being able to do what you wanted to do. The one thing he did tell me is to live off your paycheck and not off your bonus, and to be sure to pay your bills and grow up quick. But I grew up fast when my mom died."

There was also the physical side of growing up too. Ockerman was always the tallest one in his class, but a growth spurt between his seventh and eighth grade put him over 6-3. Some kids have problems handling the sudden change in their bodies.

"But my dad and grandpa and uncle worked with me to make sure that didn't happen," said Ockerman. "We worked on drills to make sure I wasn't clumsy or gawky."

It worked. There isn't anything clumsy or gawky about him. He runs the basketball court well for a big man and does the same thing on the base paths.

While everyone in Garden City knew about him, Ockerman first burst on the high school scene as a sophomore. People talked about the 6-8 pitcher and he wound up being selected to go to an all-star camp in South Bend, Ind.

"It was where I hit 90 mph for the first time," smiled Ockerman.

It's where the scouts first noticed him and began their two-year traveling road show when ever and where ever he pitched.

"It was kind of neat," said Ockerman. "The attention is nice, but other guys on the team would get looks from colleges and scouts too. Maybe they wouldn't have that opportunity."

Helping others is his style – on the bench and in the community. He's was a member of the school's DARE program as well as the KICK program, "where we go into the junior high and help show them that high schools isn't as scary as they might think."

This year, Ockerman became the first student to receive the Principal's award and the Senior Award, as selected by the teachers. And he gets a charge out of watching some of the crowd when he pitches.

"I think it's great watching the little kids," said Ockerman. "It's so cool. I remember when I was growing up, watching the older kids play and looking up to them. It's so cool watching a bunch of little kids looking up to you."

You can count the days left in this stage of his life.

Instead of pitching in the annual high school coaches All-Star Game at Comerica Park on July 9, he'll be working on his mechanics and trying to succeed at the next level.

What ever he does decide to do, he knows change is in order.

"I would have gone away from home no matter what I had done – college or with the Mariners," said Ockerman. "It's sad to go, but it's time to start going out and living out my dream."

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

Exhibit inspires team spirit in workplace

One glance at all the paintings, sculpture, ceramics, photography, and jewelry is all a visitor needs to realize Exhibit Works hires a lot of creative people. That probably should come as no surprise. The Livonia company is one of the nation's largest exhibit design firms, producing displays for auto and trade shows as well as museums. Two of their most recent projects included creating informational signage and interactive activities for the National Amphibian Conservation Center at the Detroit Zoo and a Space Station for the St. Louis Science Center in Missouri.

What is remarkable is several of the employees in Exhibit Works third annual show received little if any art training. Unfortunately, the public won't be able to enjoy the fruits of their labor. Viewing for the two-week exhibit is only open to employees.

"They have the freedom to show what they want," said Steve Hough, who oversees design for Porsche, Volkswagen and all of the other accounts. "It's kind of to let people know what co-workers are doing. I've had so many people tell me they enjoy it. It's an opportunity for the company employees to show how creative they are. Several painted ceramics at the Bee's Knees in Northville. We wanted to give people the opportunity to do something that they wouldn't have done. You don't have to be an art person to get involved."

Variety

Variety is key to this art exhibit. Receptionist Cheri Wallace shows travel and flower photographs while Todd Fee, an engineer, built a wood and fiberglass kayak.

said Todd Fee. "I make clocks and watches and jewelry. I'm now working on a 6-foot tall Eiffel Tower from steel."

Father and son show off their talent in the show. Don Fee paints delicate watercolors of dock and canal scenes. One of the first employees hired by Exhibit Works' founder Dominic Silvio in 1979, Don Fee is vice president of design.

Fee started doing watercolor in architectural school at the University of Detroit many years ago. The tranquil painting of a canoe tied up to a dock was the result of a watercolor workshop Fee gave at his historic 12-acre farm in Milford. A canal scene was created after returning home from a business trip to Europe.

"It's so great having the show because it gives people not just from design the opportunity to show their creative side," said Fee. "It's wonderful to see how much pride people take in what they've done."

Letting her imagination go

Irene Levangie glows when she talks about the sparkling silver and bead jewelry she creates in her spare time. An account assistant for Ford, Levangie taught herself to make jewelry from books about a year ago. She has no art background except for classes taken as a student at John Glenn High School in Westland.

"I began doing it for myself and as gifts," said Levangie, a Westland resident. "Now I'm making bracelets for a co-worker to give as gifts to bridesmaids after she saw the jewelry.

Artists capture the heart of Detroit in paint

Marilyn Wheaton would like to see artists painting colorful sights like Eastern Market, Belle Isle, Greektown and Hart Plaza six months out of the year. And as director of the City of Detroit's Cultural Affairs Department she's doing something about it. Earlier this spring Wheaton's department approved a grant for 32 artists from 16 southeast Michigan communities to capture the heart of Detroit over four weekends in May and June. The results of their creativity goes on exhibit June 29 at the Scarab Club in Paintin' in the Streets, a partner program for Detroit 300, the city's year long birthday celebration.

"It exposes people to the artistic process," said Wheaton, a Detroit 300 commissioner and former director of Concerned Citizens for the Arts before it became ArtServe. "Particularly on Detroit's 300th birthday it's important for the public to pay attention to Detroit. The simplest activity makes people aware of what's around them. They might not notice it when they're walking around but when they stop and look at an artist painting it makes them think about the architecture and the history of the city."

Margie Guyot was in her element while Paintin' in the Streets near the Detroit Institute of Arts. The Farmington Hills artists studied plein-air or outdoor painting at Scotsdale Artists School in Arizona. She's exhibited work at the Scarab Club and Lawrence Street Gallery in Pontiac.

"I like the [illegible] sunlight and shadows," said Guyot, who will have a one-woman show at the Munson-Williams-Proctor Arts Institute on the extension campus of Pratt Institute in New York in September.

Belle Isle

"I see things, light reflecting off an object, colors. I like to paint bright shiny objects. There was a 1967 Chrysler parked on Belle Isle. That was my favorite location. Everyone was just working, so into their painting. It was just great to be around other people who love what they do. I gained a greater appreciation of Belle Isle, the peace and tranquility."

It seems Belle Isle fascinated several of the artists including Sylvia Perle. The West Bloomfield artist is best known for her abstract sculpture of dancers at the corner of Merrill and Pierce in Birmingham.

"They were just setting up for the Grand Prix so it was kind of fun," said Perle, one of the artists exhibiting in the group show Impressions of Detroit in the Fisher Building in November. The show is sponsored by the City of Detroit and Detroit 300. "Everybody sat around with easels. I really enjoyed the interaction with people who went by, especially near the Whitney Hotel when we painted on Woodward. At the conservatory on Belle Isle, women who were doing the planting were happy we were there. I hope they do it again next year."

Attracting attention

Everywhere the artists painted people congregated. Greg Stephens, co-organizer of Paintin' in the Streets, attracted crowds of onlookers in Greektown.

"At any one time 30 to 60 people gathered around the drop cloth," said Stephens, a Royal Oak painter. The opening of Stephens' solo show

YOUNG MUSICIAN

Pianist on the road to conquering academic world

Prodigy: Joshua Cullen, a 16-year-old Livonia pianist, is off to study for a master's degree at The Juilliard School in New York City.

Joshua Cullen seems like a typical teenager arguing with his mother about taking a road trip. Ramona Cullen argues he's too young to be traveling alone to strange destinations. That might be true of most 16-year-olds but the Livonia pianist began traveling to Europe to perform in concert at age 9 after making his debut with the Livonia Symphony Orchestra the year before.

Granted his father Calvin was along to chaperone the young pianist. And it's not like he's never traveled by himself. Since his father's death last June, Cullen flew to Chicago after misplacing the passport he needed in order to perform in the Czech Republic in two days. Cullen's played with the Czech National Symphony the last four summers. Besides the trip will help prepare Cullen to attend The Juilliard School in New York City.

Road trip

"I'm planning a huge road trip starting with the Oberlin Piano Festival July 23-29 in Ohio, then to the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York, and then on to hear opera at a festival in Cooperstown, New York then back home before leaving for Juilliard," said Cullen.

The visit to Eastman could be bittersweet but probably not. Cullen received scholarships to attend graduate school at Eastman in addition to ones for Juilliard and the University of Michigan School of Music from which he graduated with a bachelor's degree in May. With Juilliard on his resume, Cullen will be able to open doors to the concert world that might otherwise remain closed. Nevertheless, choosing the "right" school was difficult.

Cullen was just 13 when he began attending the Ann Arbor-based university, a place where he discovered not all pianos sound alike. Just a few short years ago the Steinway Concert Grand filled the living room of the Cullen home. Today, the six-foot long black piano stands under a chandelier in the dining room while a Petrof Baby Grand takes its place next to the sofa.

"There's 20 different pianos at U of M," said Cullen. "What a difference it makes to prepare for a concert on different pianos. They're different in terms of sound and volume. American pianos are mellow with a rich and deep sound. The Petrof (made in the Czech Republic) is a brilliant sound."

Summer reprieve

Even though Cullen practices one to three hours every day and takes piano lessons with Logan Skelton at the University of Michigan, he isn't preparing to perform in Europe or anywhere else for the first time in years. He proudly states, "I'm taking the summer off. It's a huge burden doing concerts especially when I'm going to school."

"This has got to be one of the happiest summers I've ever had. I'm giving myself time to relax," continued Cullen who played at the White House in December after Hillary Clinton heard him earlier last year at a reception in Michigan. "When I get back into performing depends on what Juilliard is like. I'm not looking for management right now.

"I'm just really excited about my teacher at Juilliard – Jerome Lowenthal. Arthur Greene, my teacher at U of on the second floor of the Scarab Club coincides with the July 6 reception for Paintin' in the Streets.

"Kids would walk right up to the edge and you'd create this dialogue," said Stephens. "That was the part I liked the most – creating a dialogue in a family. The parents would start talking about the whole creative process. You get some great questions from kids. But the best part of the entire project was seeing the enthusiasm of all the artists, and curating all of this work. I've always loved the urban setting. Detroit has such great Art Deco skyscrapers. When you get downtown and see what it has to offer, it generates that enthusiasm."

Jillian Omand knew the effect outdoor painting would have not only on artists but also the public from the first Paintin' in the Streets she organized with Stephens in Royal Oak in 1999. Put 12 artists in front of Isamu Noguchi's fountain in Hart Plaza or at Eastern Market on Flower Day and the outpouring of creativity is boundless. It made all of the time Omand spent writing the grant and photographing the entire project worth it.

"The artists got into it so much they requested another weekend," said Omand, project director. "Greektown and Eastern Market brought out the most people. Taking it to the streets is what helped bring out muralists and teachers as well as gallery owner, self taught, degreed and commercial artists of all ages from a Wayne State University student to a World War II veteran.

"It was a multi-generational event. I photographed what they were doing so I got to see all the work. I literally hunted them down, went and found them on site and saw the work in progress."

Exhibit opening

Omand expects nearly 70 pieces of the art will be for sale when the exhibit opens June 29 with a preview. The official opening, July 6, is scheduled to coincide with First Friday at the Detroit Institute of Arts, located across the street from the Scarab Club. The evening, in addition to the Paintin' in the Streets and Stephens Images of Detroit exhibit, will include urban folk music by Audra Kubat and the contemporary sounds of Ethos.

"As a person who wrote the grant and the photographer for the project it did my heart good when the road was blocked and being painted for the Grand Prix on Belle Isle that artists still found it," said Omand. "The artists really wanted the fellowship, and we want to continue to make an impact in the art community. This is something Greg and myself plan to produce every year. We would love to do Paintin' in the Streets spring, summer, fall and winter."

"I enjoy it. For me it's relaxing, something to sit down in the evening to do to be creative and let your imagination go."

Matt Perkins has been using his imagination for the last four years at Center for Creative Studies. An intern in Exhibit Works design department, Perkins plans to look for work in Detroit as an architectural or exhibit designer after graduating from the Industrial Design program at CCS in December.

His "San Andreas" concrete, steel and glass floor lamp was inspired by an earthquake in California, while the deserted Fisher Body Plant in Detroit triggered four eerie black and white photographs.

"I find it fascinating going to these places and imagining what happened there, people who worked there," said Perkins. "It's a quiet escape from whatever's outside of it."

Perkins uses the technique of exposing film to artificial light to cast a green hue on photographs of the train station in Detroit. "Shadows Upon Time" is surreal. Painted his senior year in high school in Albany, Ore., the work features his 1965 Thunderbird and Buzz Aldrin walking on the moon.

"Erin Harvey's assemblage is as surreal as Perkins' painting of the moon. "To Be Continued" revolves around an old door and objects found at the Ann Arbor Recycling Center, garage sales and resale shops. A 1950s television is courtesy of a friend who found the vintage tube when he purchased a house in Detroit. A one wing angel perches in the middle of an old lantern on one side of the door, a child's tool box decorates the other.

"Like a lot of my art work, it evolves," said Harvey, Exhibit Works marketing coordinator. "It's about transitions in life and having faith, about luck and trying to find your destiny."

The work helps Harvey to connect with co-workers who never realized she was an artist. Harvey, who earned a bachelor of fine arts degree from Sienna Heights College in Adrian, is planning a solo exhibit in Plymouth in fall.

"Being a marketing coordinator a lot of people don't know my artistic background and that I still do it," said Harvey. "Because of the show people get to know you a little bit better though your artwork."

Bringing co-workers together is one of the reasons Hough and Janet Dunbar organize the exhibit, now in its third year. Dunbar created the poster to inform employees about the exhibit by using Adobe Illustrator on a Macintosh. In addition to producing art on computer, she also paints and does pastels.

"There's so many creative people here at Exhibit Works," said Dunbar, a graphic designer from Livonia. "It doesn't have to be fine art. It's been a kick to see what people come up with."

"It's a team building project," said Hough.

Sounds like an idea other businesses might want to try.

M and Lowenthal are good friends and admire each other very much. Greene has been wonderful, given me a lot of support but I'm looking forward to getting a new perspective."

One of the reasons Cullen decided to go to Juilliard is to study with a different teacher. Another is that Skelton, who would have been his teacher this year at the University of Michigan, sent Cullen three videos of performances by internationally known pianists, all performing at Lincoln Center in New York City. Before long, he "started thinking everything was happening there."

A mystery

"Juilliard was this mystery to me," said Cullen. "Up until 5 o'clock the day before the papers had to be received, I was against going. I was comfortable at U of M and promised an assistantship teaching college students then that fell through because they thought I was too young to teach college students, that they wouldn't listen to me.

"I even called Juilliard to tell them to disregard the papers and they said they'd return my deposit. I told them I was not ready to come to New York and then I received an e-mail from my teacher at Juilliard that said Juilliard was like a fanciful box of chocolates with some liqueurs, some marzipan. We began corresponding back and forth about the new music I should be working on over the summer. I've been looking at Bartok, Schumann and Brahms. I'm real familiar with Beethoven, Mozart and Chopin. I pictured myself being there but didn't want to be told where to go. Now it's my decision.

"I'm looking forward to playing chamber music which is relatively easy for me to understand, and I'm looking forward to being there in Lincoln Center."

For the first time in his life Cullen is free to decide the direction his music will take – something he wasn't able to do until his father's death from pancreatic cancer. Calvin Cullen studied to be an opera singer and knew Joshua had the talent to become a first-class pianist so he arranged for Joshua to play with the Moscow Philharmonic at age 9 and to record Beethoven's third concerto with the Czech National Symphony conducted by Paul Freeman. He instilled a sense of professionalism in his son that is still with him.

"So much I didn't realize was happening until my dad wasn't around anymore," said Cullen. "A lot of fund-raising went on that I didn't realize like finding the money to go to Japan for the last three winters."

At least Cullen won't have to worry about the $21,000 tuition for Juilliard. The $7,000-$8,000 for housing and meals will be his only expense, one he plans to pay for with his summer job at GMAC Real Estate in Plymouth. Cullen keeps the computer system up and running there. On his days off, music plays a major role in his life just as it always has.

"I've had more time to do research," said Cullen pointing to the music scores stacked on shelves behind the Steinway. "I've been looking at what they call Authentic Editions. First printings had many mistakes. Scholars over the last few years have been studying the original scores and revising or authenticating them."

All this knowledge will come in handy whether Cullen decides to teach or perform, or both. But first he plans to earn a doctor of musical arts' degree after earning a master's from Juilliard.

"Performing is first, teaching second, and teaching students who want to be performers," said Cullen. "To teach you have to be a performer yourself."

Looks like a whole new world is opening up for Cullen. Now if he can just convince his mother to let him take that road trip.

"I can't believe you're against the road trip but in favor of me living in New York," Cullen said to his mom. She counters he'll be living in a dorm next to The Juilliard School and Lincoln Center.

Then she turns and winks.

"I'm excited for him. I think it's going to be fun. School is there and the dorm is right on campus."

For the past several years, Chelsea's Sleeping Bear Press has been churning out some of the most impressive children's books to come around in a long time.

Legendary

The series of legend books, which started with The Legend of Sleeping Bear, now number four, with the latest release of The Legend of the Lady's Slipper.

Written by Kathy-jo Wargin and illustrated by Gijsbert van Frankenhuyzen, the hardcover book is a suspenseful tale of a young maiden's run through the forest to save the people of her village.

The legend is believed to be from the Ojibwe people of the northern Great Lakes, and the author notes that she heard the tale when she was a young girl in northern Minnesota.

The book focuses on Running Flower, a young maiden who is dearly loved by her people and has a deep respect for them and the land. When an illness threatens her community, and her mother, Running Flower sets off across the frozen land to find medicine in a distant village.

Through her struggles, Running Flower never loses hope, and her strength and determination are remembered each spring with the emergence of a sea of beautiful Lady's Slippers.

Artfully illustrated, van Frankenhuyzen captures the icy tones of Midwest winters and the bright radiance of summers by the fire.

The story is one of both sadness and hope, but ultimately, it is one which shows the strength and power of love.

American history

In A is for America, author and WDIV, Channel 4 anchor Devin Scillian digs into the history of the United States to bring a rhythmic tale of the country's most famous people, places, and ideas.

Cutting a large swath through the nation's history, A is for America tells about the gold rush, independence, jazz, veterans — everything from America to Zane Grey.

Illustrations are often a montage of images, such as the letter "P," which combines Rosa Parks with popcorn, Pike's Peak and pilgrims. It's a stretch, but for the most part, artist Pam Carroll keeps things simple, and uses some special effects to keep the pages turning.

The book is heavy on alliteration, which is great for keeping kids' attention, but hard if you're the one wading through the sea of tongue-twisters.

Each letter tells a short story, and the margins give details for those who want to go a bit more in-depth. For example, the letter "J" covers Jamestown, James Monroe, Thomas Jefferson, Jackson Hole, Wy. and jazz. Each of these is defined in the margin in greater detail.

A is for America is definitely a book that can grow with your child. Toddlers will enjoy the detailed illustrations, young elementary students will appreciate the prose, and older elementary students will recognize the wealth of history available in this book.

A is for America is one in a continuing series of alphabet books from Sleeping Bear Press. M is for Mitten and L is for Lincoln are other popular favorites.

To order any of these books, call 1-800-487-2323 or visit www.sleepingbearpress.com They are also sold in area bookstores.

There's help for consumer problems; file a complaint

SHOP TALK

NICOLE STAFFORD

I want to thank all the readers who wrote and e-mailed their thoughts on my skirmish with terrible customer service.

After over a year's worth of battling with the furniture company that sent me a damaged couch, I now refer to the experience as the couch saga.

I'm happy to report the couch was picked up in the evening at my convenience during the last week of May.

Still, I'm certain the couch saga won't be my last encounter with poor customer service.

I say that for two reasons: your letters and the epilogue to my story.

Yes, yes, there's one last insult to injury to report.

But first I'd like to address some of your comments. Many of you said you'd like to know the name of the furniture company and couldn't understand why I wouldn't reveal it in the newspaper.

I'd love to tell you. And, make no mistake, I'm telling everybody I know personally. But as a reporter, I must be fair.

It's not fair to reveal the name of the company in connection with my personal experience alone.

Do a bit of research

I will say this: It's a good idea to familiarize yourself with any company before making a major purchase. Ask friends, co-workers, family and acquaintances for recommendations.

If you're without leads from people you know, do some research. Call the Michigan Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division and ask them whether the company has had complaints filed against them. Ask them how many and then request the number of complaints filed against their major competitors.

Here's another good idea courtesy of a reader who responded to my last column. Visit Planet Feedback, a consumer complaint web site located at www.planetfeedback.com.

The site enables users to read complaints posted by angry and dissatisfied consumers. Users can also send a letter of complaint to Planet Feedback. According to the reader who wrote to me about the site, results were "almost instant."

How to file a complaint

Many responding readers asked that I reprint information about the Consumer Protection Division and how to file a formal complaint with the department.

And, based on my own experience, I strongly recommended doing that, if you're unable to resolve the problem by working with the store or retailer on your own.

The department's employees were not only helpful and pleasant but downright encouraging. Once more, my complaint resulted in an apologetic phone call from a corporate manager and the promise of a full refund on my couch.

You can reach the Consumer Protection Division and retrieve useful information either on the phone or on the Internet.

If you're looking to discuss your problem, obtain advice and review your options, call them at (517) 373-1140 or toll-free at (877) 765-8388. If you're going to file a complaint, request that a form be sent, unless you'd prefer to obtain it on-line.

The Michigan Attorney General's web address is www.ag.state.mi.us. Go to the link "File a Complaint" on the left side of the page. You can download a complaint form to send by mail or file one on-line.

There's also a link to information from the consumer protection division.

More to the story

Now, are you ready for my epilogue? It's a real slap in the face.

Well, a week or two after my couch was taken away (by an independent delivery company), I received a certified mail notice.

And, yes, it was a letter from my favorite furniture retailer.

Was it an apology? Was it a cashier's check for my troubles and lost time? Or was it just a notice that the couch had been received?

No, it was none of the above. It was a letter threatening legal action if I failed to return the cash amount I had recently been refunded, due to my inability to comply with the company's attempts to pick up the couch.

Local shoppers get on a bus for all-day tour of local resale shops

Two jumbo buses rev up in a run-of-the-mill parking lot in front of Nicole's Revival Designer Resale Clothier on Newburgh Road in Westland.

It's an unlikely sight at 9 a.m. on a Friday, especially since, rather than kids on their way to Cedar Point, there are women outside the tour buses.

A bona fide load of them, giving off a kind of twitchy energy that only women can.

The ladies form lines, winding impatient snakes away from each bus. One or two men are in the mix; most men would surely admit they're ill-equipped to co-exist with the particular brand of female energy at work here.

These ladies, about 75 of them, are going hunting. Hunting for bargains on an all-day bus tour of Detroit area resale shops.

"We're here to get bargains at fantastic costs.We're here to get bargains with very little money changing hands," says Louise Warnke of Clinton Township who came on the tour in search of tailored suits at bottom-of-the-barrel prices. Warnke joins her sister, Katherine Moran of Grosse Pointe Shores, and friends Mollene Levin and Adrianne Gendelman, both from West Bloomfield.

While all four women have different tastes and reasons for going on the tour, one sentiment unites them, indeed, all the shoppers: the thrill of the hunt and the glory of a bargain.

"You're beating the rap," says Warnke. "I'm not making Lord & Taylor rich, I'm making myself rich!"

Ready, set, go: Nicole Christ (left), a resale shop owner and the tour's organizer, along with helpers Dominique Battle of Westland (center) and Twyla Roper of Detroit, prepare a bus load of bargain hunters for a one-day resale shopping tour across metropolitan Detroit.

With the cost of women's wear reaching new heights and reasonably priced classic apparel getting more difficult to find every day, many women consider resale the best way to get the wardrobe they want.

Nicole Christ, owner of Nicole's Revival and an avid resale shopper herself, organized the more than 150-mile bus tour with stops in DeWitt near Lansing, Milford, Keego Harbor, Royal Oak and Livonia.

Christ, who opened Nicole's Revival in 1994, has hosted dozens of tours, including one in Europe. Currently, she's planning a tour in Chicago for November and another in Europe for fall 2002. She's also waiting to hear from the Oprah Winfrey Show. Producers are interested in having her be a guest.

"This is just really happening," says Christ of the tours and the search for recycled, bargain merchandise. "It's the thrill of the hunt kind of thing."

As the tour progresses, shoppers enjoy a bag lunch, swap resale stories, compete for prizes and talk about their favorite retailers, as treasures – bought dirt cheap – slowly and surely pile up in the bus.

A Louis Feraud summer tweed jacket for $2. A full-length mohair coat with sash for $16. A yellow quilted, two-piece suit from Neiman Marcus for just over $9.

"I don't necessarily think women like to resale shop. They just like to shop and they like the resale shop environment," says Warnke, admitting today's ambitious quest for bargains borders on insanity. "Originally when we were cavemen, we went out gathering wood. Maybe this is a throwback to that. We like to find things, hunt, gather. Maybe it fills a primitive need."

Birmingham theater project seeks mural artist

Uptown Entertainment is seeking an experienced Michigan artist to create a mural for the interior wall of the new Uptown Palladium 12 theatre, located at the corner of North Old Woodward and Hamilton Avenue in downtown Birmingham. The theater is currently under construction and set for completion in late October.

The mural project will encompass 1,514 square feet on a slanted wall that extends to the theater's two lobby levels.

The budget for the project is $50,000, with an expected completion date of October 15, 2001.

The Uptown Palladium 12 Theatre owners and local architects will juror the project.

Artists interested in painting the mural may send photos or slides of current work, along with a current resume by June 29, 2001 to Uptown Entertainment at: Uptown Entertainment, c/o Sharon Arend at 2211 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Michigan, 48201.

Artists are encouraged to submit concept proposals for the uptown Palladium 12 theatre mural.

Uptown Theatres are open to artistic styles, from classic to modern art.

For questions or concerns regarding the mural project, artists may contact uptown Entertainment at (313) 983-6176.

Uptown Palladium 12 will be an upscale, first-run movie theater featuring 12 state-of-the-art auditoriums. It will project an updated, sophisticated look using classic materials found in theaters of the past.

Lush silver leaf, rich mahogany and cherry woods, classic terrazzo, granite and marble, along with custom-made light fixtures and ornate carpeting, will create an ambience of elegance and contemporary style.

The mural will be the focal point of the interior lobbies.

Located in downtown Birmingham, Uptown Entertainment will include Uptown Birmingham 8 and the new Uptown Palladium 12, opening in Fall 2001.

Stage set for summer fun at Niagara-on-the-Lake

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, is a town made for summer. If the annual Shaw Festival never existed, the town would still be a favorite vacation destination.

Often called the most beautiful town in Ontario, NOTL is perfectly situated where the Niagara River meets Lake Ontario. Sailboats crowd its marina and the marina at Youngstown, N.Y., across the river. An old fort sits at one end of town, a lakeside golf course at the other.

A beautiful wooded park with a winding bicycle trail leads along the river and Niagara Escarpment to the mighty Falls. On the other side of the Niagara Parkway are vineyards.

The town caters to the tourist trade with its Victorian-era buildings restored with Disneyesque neatness, centering around the beautifully restored, and very pricey, Prince of Wales Hotel. The town has other fine hotels and B&Bs in what were once fashionable summer mansions.

The town's history dates to the 1700s and the housing styles range from the late 1700s to more recent times.

The town's summer feel is captured in several productions this year at the Shaw Festival, dedicated to plays created during the long life of the philosophical Anglo-Irish playwright Bernard Shaw or about that period (late 1800s to 1950s).

Here's a sampling:

Peter Pan

What could be more summery than J.M. Barrie's magical play about the flying boy who refuses to grow up.

Director Christopher Newton creates a lively, colorful fantasy that just touchs on the poignance underneath. In a departure from standard practice, Peter Pan is actually played by a boy rather than an actress.

Dylan Trowbridge gives Peter a modern look and a playful swagger as he enters the Darling nursery in search of his shadow.

Of course, you know the story. Peter takes Wendy, John and Michael Darling to Neverland where Wendy becomes mother to the Lost Boys, who fight with "wild Indians" and nasty pirates, led by despicable Captain Hook.

The usual touches are here. Tinker Bell is a flash of light in the real world but a svelte, flying acrobat in Neverland. Hook is stalked by a crocodile who after savoring his severed hand has developed a taste for Hook. Hook's only defense is that the croc has swallowed a clock that goes tick-tock.

The flying sequences, engineered by a stage flying company called Foy and choreographed by Jane Johanson, are wonderful fun. Johanson filled in as Tinker Bell and gave a show of skillful flying. The staging of the Mermaid's dance is a cute bit of nonsense for adults.

Sue LePage's childlike, abstract set is a perfect Neverland. The croc slithers from the side of the stage with glowing eyes. Hook's ship is a suggestion of ramps, perfect for sword fighting.

Jim Mezon, a natural ham, is a blustery, bumbling Mr. Darling and a wicked, prancing Capt. Hook, getting the most out of each character. Goldie Semple does double duty as the no-nonsense Mrs. Darling and the courageous Tiger Lily.

The Darling children and the Lost Boys are all 20 somethings, which somehow seems very appropriate.

The children in the audience were hooting, hissing and clapping. Enough said!

The Mystery of Edwin Drood

This year's chamber musical at Shaw's Royal George is also summery, a recreation of an English music hall entertainment concocted by American singer-songwriter and playwright Rupert Holmes.

"The Mystery of Edwin Drood" is based on Charles Dickens' last, uncompleted, novel. Rather than playing it straight, Holmes has a rollicking time turning the serious mystery into a musical revue by a late 1800s music hall troupe and inviting the audience to solve the mysteries.

The performance begins with troupe members going into the audience, engaging audience members with wisecracks and flirtation. It's loud, boisterous and fun.

Neil Barclay is the chairman of the theatrical troupe and a wonderful guide through the proceedings. Barclay is a dead-ringer for Teddy Roosevelt and has tons of jovial bon hommie.

Edwin Drood, a young man betrothed to the lovely Rosa Bud, turns up missing. Was he murdered by the severe John Jasper who lusts for Rosa Bud. Or was it someone else? Or was he murdered at all?

These are the questions on which Holmes hangs a variety of song styles from lover's plaints to bawdy singalongs (the cast can hardly wait to do "Off to the Races.") The songs aren't great but they are pleasant and the funny songs work well.

In a bit of Brit tradition, Edwin Drood is played by a woman, Blythe Wilson, a part called the Principal Boy in British theater. She has a strong voice and winning presence.

Standout performances come from Corrine Koslo as Princess Puffer, madame of a brothel/opium den, Tracy Michailidis as Rosa Bud, Michael Querin as Jasper and Guy Bannerman as the mysteriously underwritten Bazzard.

At the end, votes are taken and the cast enacts the version the audience chooses. Dickens would probably approve.

Picnic

The darker side of summer is explored in William Inge's "Picnic," at the tiny Court Theatre.

Inge was the spokesman for middle America and the yearning for something more. "Picnic" is set in a small Kansas town on Labor Day. Everyone is getting ready for the town picnic/dance when a drifter shows up and stirs up some suppressed sexual energy.

Director Jackie Maxwell has assembled a fine cast in a good production that captures the essentials of Inge's work, especially his care in giving full value to each person. The production falls short in never capturing the heat, the sexual passion that motivates the characters to do what they do.

Mike Wasko is perfect for Hal Carter (he bears a strong resemblance to William Holden who played the role in the movie version). Wasko nails all the charm and raw sensuality.

Hal makes a play for Madge (Fiona Byrne), his old fraternity buddy's girl. Byrne plays Madge sweetly but only suggests the frustration she feels.

The pivotal dance of Hal and Madge never builds up steam (as it does in the Joshua Logan movie version between Holden and Kim Novak).

There are fine performances by Lisa Norton as tomboy sister Millie, who is wiser than her years; Mika Shara as the boyfriend, who while essentially decent has a tinge of the snob; Goldie Semple as the angry spinster Rosemary; and Jim Mezon as her reluctant suitor Howard.

Laura

"Laura" is a stage version of the famous Otto Preminger movie, you know the one where Dana Andrews falls in love with a portrait of Gene Tierney, who is presumed dead only to show up very much alive.

This is a production that wants to succeed as a "stage noir." It fails miserably. The attempts at "atmosphere" seem silly. The acting is wooden, which is not the same as the staccato rhythms of Raymond Chandler (check out Humphry Bogart, for instance). The staging of the climactic showdown is clumsy and confusing.

Ben Carlson is extremely stiff as the clueless detective. Jane Perry is irritatingly abrasive as Laura. Worst of all is Michael Ball as Waldo Lydecker. He captures Lydecker's fey quality (based on Alexander Wollcott) but never his sophistication. He rattles off his final speech like a machine gun. (He is to play a similar part in the festival's production of "The Man Who Came to Dinner.")

By the time the mystery is solved, nobody cares.

KITCHEN KAPERS

KEN ABRAMCZYK

Don't raise a stink: It's only garlic and it's darn delicious

Oh, I see you put garlic on that, too." Her voice wasn't mean or nasty, she just spoke in a matter-of-fact tone. It was my wife.

We were eating leftovers. The shrimp was warmed in garlic butter, and a small piece of leftover monkfish lay a few inches away in a lemon-dill sauce. On top of the monkfish sat a few minced chips of garlic like they were just along for the culinary ride.

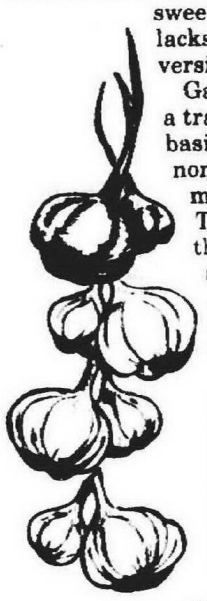
"Hey, it's only a little bit. Just enough to give it some flavor," I replied.

When I read Renee Skoglund's accompanying story on Italian cooking, I started thinking about pasta and, of course, garlic.

I've gotta crush

I can't help it. I love garlic. I try to use a little, but once I start crushing the cloves and mincing them, it's like a great garlic demon sits on my shoulder and says, "Put in a little more, just a little more...." I gladly oblige.

For me, garlic cooked in a garlic roaster with olive oil and thyme is a mainstay with any pasta dish. The garlic softens into a squeezable paste, and the taste mellows, even slightly sweetens. Roasted garlic lacks the bite of the raw version. It is delicious.



Garlic marries well in a traditional pesto with basil and pine nuts or a non-traditional form of marjoram pesto. Throw tomatoes in there and dinner is served.

Marvelous marinades

During this time of year, garlic works wonderfully in marinades for barbecue dishes. This lovely culinary gem makes foods sparkle.

Think about it. Is there a more versatile food used in so many sauces, salads, spreads and appetizers and with pork, beef, chicken, lamb and seafood? What would Caesar salad be without the garlic clove rubbed on the wooden salad bowl? Or Italian or Polish sausage without the minced offerings of garlic?

A few years ago while fishing with friends in the Upper Peninsula, I marinated chicken quarters (yes, we didn't catch much fish that day) with a paste mix of crushed garlic, rosemary, kosher salt, pepper, onion and poultry seasoning with apple cider vinegar. The chicken was delicious, but I have yet to repeat that performance here over a gas grill. The original version was cooked slowly over the coals of an apple-wood fire. Maybe the food simply tasted better because of the big open sky, primeval forest, and clean air.

Garlic should be used in marinades for shish kebob. Cut up a nice sweet onion and skewer the beef (or lamb, if you care to splurge) along with mushrooms, green pepper and cherry tomatoes in a burgundy-soy mix with dried onion soup mix and garlic. Grill and put on a bed of rice, and you're in business.

Or take a flank steak and marinate it in Italian dressing overnight with a few (OK, several) crushed cloves of garlic. Sear it to seal in the marinade and cook it rare. Your guests will declare you a genius.

Sure, you've been to parties where there's some party pooper who complains about the garlic taste of the food. Yes, large amounts of raw garlic can be irritating to the digestive tract. And yes, garlic breath can be offensive to the meek. Many avoid garlic for fear of offending a relative, neighbor or, heaven forbid, a hot date.

Café Cortina chef experiences the heart of Italy

Company: Adrian Tonon and Chef Jeff Hoffa prepare a special family meal during their visit to Italy.*

BY RENEE SKOGLUND
STAFF WRITER
reskoglund@oe.homecomm.net

It's a cool, rainy morning, but inside the kitchen of Ristorante Café Cortina in Farmington Hills, temperatures are rising as Chef Jeff Hoffa fires up the burners in preparation for the lunch crowd.

He maneuvers a huge pot of cooked pasta over to the sink, topples the contents into a colander and splashes them with cold water. A cloud of steam rises. One false move could have resulted in a serious burn.

"I've been cooking 12 to 14 years. Now cuts and burns are very rare. We're down to one a year," he says.

What isn't rare is all the delicious calamari, gnocchi, ravioli and veal dishes Chef Hoffa prepares on a daily basis. Only now, thanks to a trip to northern Italy in April with Rena Tonon and her son, Adrian Tonon, owners of Café Cortina, Hoffa hopes to infuse his creations with a bit more authenticity and passion.

"We're really trying to make this like your typical kitchen in Italy. We want you to feel like you are in another country."

But more passion? Is it possible? The compact, lively Hoffa, who trained under the famed Jimmy Schmidt of the Rattlesnake Club, bursts with passion. Ask him about Italy and his hands – no, his whole body – gesture animatedly as he relives the sights, smells and tastes.

"In Italy the rosemary plants are growing on the side of the road like trees," he says. "I'm saying, 'Wow, is that rosemary? It's wild, man."

Special touch: Chef Hoffa prepares a tray of ravioli for the evening's dinner menu at Café Cortina. He uses a special flour from Italy that makes the ravioli as smooth as velvet.

Fresco, fresco, fresco

The Tonon family maintains a homestead in Carpesica, near Treviso in Venice. The home is set against a backdrop of mountains and is surrounded by a vineyard and patches of scoppetini, a small, grass-like herb that tastes like a cross between Swiss chard and spinach. It's used in preparing risotto dishes.

Adrian Tonon brought back some scoppetini seeds to plant in Café Cortina's famed backyard garden.

Gathering herbs: Chef Hoffa and Tonon of Café Cortina gather sprigs of scoppetini on the grounds of the Tonon homestead in Carpesica.

Authenticity in taste has been the hallmark of the restaurant, which celebrates its 25th anniversary this year.

It was time for Hoffa to visit Italy, said Adrian. "Just for him to go and experience it with his eyes, taste the flavors with his palate.... Words can express just so much and then you must feel it, live it. You just can't replace that."

Hoffa didn't just experience Italy, he had a love affair with it. The duck breasts imported from France were huge, the fish looked as if it was just caught, and the dairy products were simply the best, he said. "The cream is very thick and tastes just like it come out of the cow. And the eggs were so fresh. Everything just tasted richer."

HERBED RISOTTO (CARLETTI)

- 1/4 cup onion (finely chopped)
- 1 cup Arborio rice
- 2 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
- 4 cups chicken broth
- salt to taste
- fresh ground pepper to taste
- 1 cup fresh carletti (you can use most herbs)
- 2 tablespoons butter

Heat olive oil over medium heat in a pot that will hold the rice and broth.

Next, add onions and stir until they are translucent.

Then add the herb of your choice. (If you are using basil or rosemary, [illegible] cup of chicken broth and cook herbs until all the flavors and aromas have been released.

Put in rice and stir. Allow rice to get coated with the herb mixture before adding the broth.

Pour enough broth in the pot to cover the rice. Allow to cook while stirring or about 5 minutes.

When rice has absorbed all of the broth, add another cup. You want to add just a cup at a time as you may not need all of the liquid.

Finish with salt, pepper and butter.

Garnish with fresh grated Reggiano Parmigiano.

Serves four.

ESPRESSO SEMI FREDDO

- 3 cups heavy whipping cream
- 6 eggs
- 1-1/2 cups sugar
- 1 cup espresso

First make the espresso so it has time to chill.

Next whip heavy cream with 1/2 cup of sugar until cream stiffens. Be careful not to overwhip. Must be of a smooth consistency.

Vineyard alchemy thrives at Cinnabar

FOCUS ON WINE
BY RAY & ELEANOR HEALD

Fourteenth century alchemists believed they could transform ordinary metals into precious silver and gold with the aid of the mineral cinnabar. As one might image, this purple-red compound of mercury and sulfur was highly coveted.

While time proved this get-rich-quick scheme wrong, the magic of alchemy exists in the mind of scientist turned winemaker Tom Mudd, proprietor of Cinnabar Vineyards & Winery in California's Santa Cruz Mountains.

Before he was bitten by the "wine bug," Mudd, a civil engineering Ph.D., was a researcher at Stanford Research Institute (SRI) International, specializing in laser spectroscopy of aerosols.

Like many proprietors before him, he caught the wine bug by first picking some grapes at harvest parties. Then, he planted a one-acre vineyard as a hobby. To learn to make wine better, he enrolled in enology and viticulture classes at the University of California Davis.

When interesting research projects dried up at SRI, Mudd decided it was time for a career change and went in search of the perfect place to plant a non-hobby vineyard. From a helicopter, he spotted a Santa Cruz Mountain ridge top. Not bothered that it sits right on the San Andreas fault, he thought that the climate, soil and elevation were perfect.

In the summers of 1984 and 1985, 22 acres of Cinnabar estate vineyards were planted. The earthquake proof winery and three caves were completed in 1987.

Mountain advantage

Aside from the fact that Cinnabar in the Santa Cruz Mountains overlooks Silicon Valley, there are distinct advantages garnered from the struggle to grow wine grapes in a mountain region. It is generally impossible to bring irrigation to mountain vineyards, so the vines are dry-farmed, using a survival of the fittest mentality.

Once vines that survive have sunk deep tap roots to access water, they also benefit from the special mineral content – the alchemy thing. Mountain sites frequently enjoy a long growing season, often extending into mid-November.

Mountain-grown grapes have small berries and a high surface to volume ratio that translates to intensely-flavored wines.

Although Cinnabar produces a chardonnay and merlot from grapes sourced in California's Central Coast and uses a generic California label on a reserve chardonnay and a red wine blend called Mercury Rising, the best wines carry the Santa Cruz Mountains appellation. For a taste of the mountain with a touch of alchemy, these are the wines to look for:

■ 1998 Cinnabar Santa Cruz Mountains Chardonnay $23 showcases tropical fruit accented with apple, pear and spice hints. The wine is crisply styled for seafood and poultry, yet finishes with a deliciously

Wine Picks

Mountain vineyards in California are not the place to grow sauvignon blanc. But there are plenty of spots where this grape scores in spades. It's a perfect summertime wine with shrimp, mussels, sole, scallops, sea bass, chicken, game hens or roast turkey. Try:

■ Richer sauvignon blanc styles: 1998 St. Supery White Meritage Napa $20 and 1999 Beringer $12.

■ Crisp, zesty sauvignon blancs: 2000 St. Supery $18; 2000 Geyser Peak $10; 2000 Peter Echo Ridge $9; and 2000 Montevina Fume Blanc $7.

And the Parmesan cheese? "That region (Treviso) seemed to have the creamiest, most blended form of parmesan I every tasted," he said. Ahh, spoken like a chef in love.

Simplicity

Hoffa loved the wood-burning stoves that are an essential part of many Italian kitchens. The counter-level grills are fed coals from the central fireplace. When the coals are ready, Italian cooks simply shovel some over to the grill.

"It's insane, man, I'm telling you, it's insane," he said about the taste of food cooked over wood rather than coals. "Wood heat doesn't give food that overwhelming smoke flavor. It gives you more of the natural taste of food. There is no masking the flavor of fish."

Italians use few electric appliances but lots of those little silver, double-chamber espresso makers that sit directly on stove burners. "They keep two or three going at the same time," said Hoffa, his fingers imitating the percolating action. "They just don't make coffee for someone, they make it the right way."

And non-stick pots? Hardly ever used, not even for risotto, he said. "It's not the pot that cooks, it's the cook who uses the pot."

"I think Chef Hoffa was just impressed that we go out in the vineyard, grab something and come and cook something," said Rena.

■ Chef Jeff Hoffa loved the wood-burning stoves that are an essential part of many Italian kitchens. The counter-level grills are fed coals from the central fireplace.

An Italian kitchen

In her book, Ciao Italia – Bringing Italy Home, author Mary Ann Esposito says the basic necessities for a well-stocked Italian pantry are dried pastas, extra virgin olive oil, anchovies, onions, fresh garlic, good plum tomatoes, capers, and wine vinegars.

Hoffa would make one addition: fresh lemons. "The juice helps balance flavors," he said, especially for fish.

Although Italians prefer their olive oil straight, it can be infused with garlic and herbs, like cracked pepper, red pepper flakes or sage. Just make sure you infuse properly, said Hoffa. Heat the olive oil over low heat for approximately 10 minutes. This will flavor the oil as well as prevent the added ingredients from forming mildew when the oil is stored.

"Good" tomatoes aren't necessarily fresh tomatoes. They can be canned. Can you really make a delicious sauce with canned tomatoes? "Absolutely," said Hoffa. "Sometimes it's better to use canned tomatoes, but look where they come from. California or Italy produce the best."

Hoffa, whose wife Diane is the pastry assistant at Confectionately Yours in Livonia, has been passionate about cooking since he first helped his mother make spaghetti sauce at age 15. He can't imagine life without pots and pans, pasta and pesto.

And he can no longer imagine making ravioli without the very fine flour he brought back from Italy.

"It makes my ravioli taste like velvet," he said.

In a separate bowl, whip the eggs with remaining sugar for two minutes. The mixture should be moderately thick.

Place the bowl over a mild hot water bath and continue whipping. The mixture should increase by about two-thirds in volume. It should have a thick consistency. It will be slightly warm.

Allow the mixture to cool. Then, fold it into the whipped cream. In a thin stream, fold in espresso. Pour into desired mold. Cover in the freezer overnight. Serve with your favorite biscotti.

creamy texture and balanced oak accent.

■ 1998 Cinnabar Santa Cruz Mountains Saratoga Vineyard Pinot Noir $38 competes well in a flight of red Burgundies. Bright cherry fruit is accented by forest floor aromas and smoky oak. Brown spices perk up a broad spectrum of palate flavors that are completed by the right touch of toasted oak.

■ 1997 Cinnabar Santa Cruz Mountains Saratoga Vineyard Cabernet Sauvignon $35 is a big, well-structured, powerful wine full of blackberry, tobacco leaf, coffee, anise and chocolate accents. Taste one bottle now and cellar the rest of the case. It is a stunning accompaniment to roast rack of lamb with French-style flageolets beans.

Scientists are just discovering the cancer-fighting benefits of garlic, something the Chinese have known for thousands of years. Folks in Gilroy, Calif. are so fond of garlic that they hold a festival in its honor the last weekend of July. Visit www.gilroygarlicfestival.com to learn some fun facts about garlic. For instance, did you know Louis Pasteur found that garlic killed bacteria, and in World War II, it was used an antiseptic for wounds?

Garlic is good. Good for you and good for me. So let's enjoy, but if you're worrying about offending people, enjoy it in moderation.

OK, I'll use less garlic next time. Yep, only one clove. I promise. Honest...no, wait. Two cloves max. No more. That's it. I promise.....

ROASTED GARLIC

2 garlic bulbs
Olive oil
Dried thyme

Use a small fork to poke several holes in the garlic bulbs. Leaving the crispy, leafy surface on, cut bulbs in half to create two half-bulbs so that each clove has a fresh cut. Assemble in roasting dish so that the fresh cut is on top, then pour olive oil on the cloves, and then sprinkle thyme leaves. Place in oven, set temperature at 250°F and cook for 45 minutes.

Serve as a spread on your favorite bread or mix with mashed potatoes.

GRILLED FLANK STEAK

Flank steak, 1 pound
Italian dressing
Garlic, minced (at least four or five cloves)
2 teaspoons Italian seasoning or thyme
Pepper, to taste

The day before, mix minced garlic and herbs with Italian dressing. Lay flank steak in a flat glass or plastic dish. Pour Italian dressing mixture over steak. Let marinate overnight or for at least 8 hours.

When cooking, sear the outside of the steak on a grill set on high, then bring heat down to medium. Cook for about 6-10 minutes on one side, then 5 minutes the other, then check the cut for doneness, being careful not to overcook.

Let steak rest for about five minutes before cutting, so you don't lose all the juices. Cut thinly against the grain.

Serve with grilled cherry tomatoes, peppers and onions.

Finger-friendly stuffed vegetables great summer appetizer

BY DANA JACOBI
SPECIAL WRITER

Stuffed vegetables are a favorite hors d'oeuvre for warm weather entertaining. Perfect to serve outdoors, they help stave off hunger pangs and let you avoid dripping dip down your front while the grill heats up and you wait for dinner to cook.

Convenient for grownups, stuffed cherry tomatoes and little potatoes are finger-friendly choices that allow younger guests to navigate grabbing and eating an easy mouthful, too. Colorful as well as uncomplicated to make and eat, they also help us enjoy boosting our servings of vegetables, a goal most Americans do not fare well at achieving.

Stuffed cherry tomatoes are a snap to prepare. Cut a very thin slice off the bottom so they stand steady on a plate. Cut off about the top third of the tomato to make a good-size opening, yet leave a stable cup for filling. To scoop out the flesh and seeds, an espresso or demitasse spoon, or an infant's spoon, is ideal. Take care not to push the spoon through the bottom of the tomato. If you like, sprinkle a pinch of salt into the hollowed tomatoes. Set them upside down on a baking sheet covered with paper towels for an hour or two. Or, cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate overnight before filling.

Small potatoes, no more than 1 1/2 inches across, are also great to stuff. Cook them in salted water until tender all the way through, about 15 minutes. Unless they are quite small, halve them. Cut a thin slice off the bottom, and use a small melon-baller to scoop out half the flesh.

Potatoes are best when not refrigerated, so boil them only an hour or two before stuffing.

Sugarsnap pea pods, endive leaves, and cups hollowed out from thick cucumber slices are nice to stuff as well, but preparing them takes more work or they are less neat to eat. That old stand-by, stuffed celery, on the other hand, is quick and easy to produce.

Using a pastry bag speeds stuffing tiny vegetables. Select a wide tip, so anything chunky in the filling does not clog it. A cone made from wax paper also works.

A light, mousse-like salmon pâté makes the perfect summertime stuffing.

SALMON PÂTÉ-STUFFED VEGETABLES

- 4 oz. fat-free cream cheese at room temperature
- 1 cup canned pink salmon, picked through and skin removed
- 1 tablespoon low-fat mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh dill
- 2 tablespoons very finely minced red onion
- 2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
- Freshly ground pepper
- Fresh vegetables suitable for stuffing: large cherry tomatoes, small new potatoes, stalks of celery hearts, peeled cucumbers

Using electric mixer, beat cream cheese in bowl until soft. Add salmon and mayonnaise and beat until mixture is creamy and fluffy. Mix in dill, onion and lemon juice. Season to taste with black pepper. Use immediately or refrigerate, tightly covered, up to 24 hours.

Prepare vegetables for stuffing. Cut tops off tomatoes, scoop out flesh and cut a thin slice off bottom if necessary so they stand upright. Boil or steam tiny new potatoes until just tender and cut in halves if not very small. Cut thin slice off bottoms so they will stand upright. Using melon baller, scoop out about half the flesh of each potato. Cut cucumbers in half crosswise, then into lengthwise halves or quarters, depending on size.

Using tip of small spoon, create deep groove down center, removing seeds. Make fresh cut at bottom end of celery stalks.

To stuff vegetables, use small pastry bag or improvise one with waxed paper rolled into cone. Pipe pâté into cavities of vegetables, mounding to form slightly rounded tops.

Serve immediately or refrigerate a few hours ahead of time, bringing them back to room temperature before serving. (Crackers can also be used to serve pâté.)

Makes 1 1/4 cups, enough for about 24 stuffed items, using various vegetables.

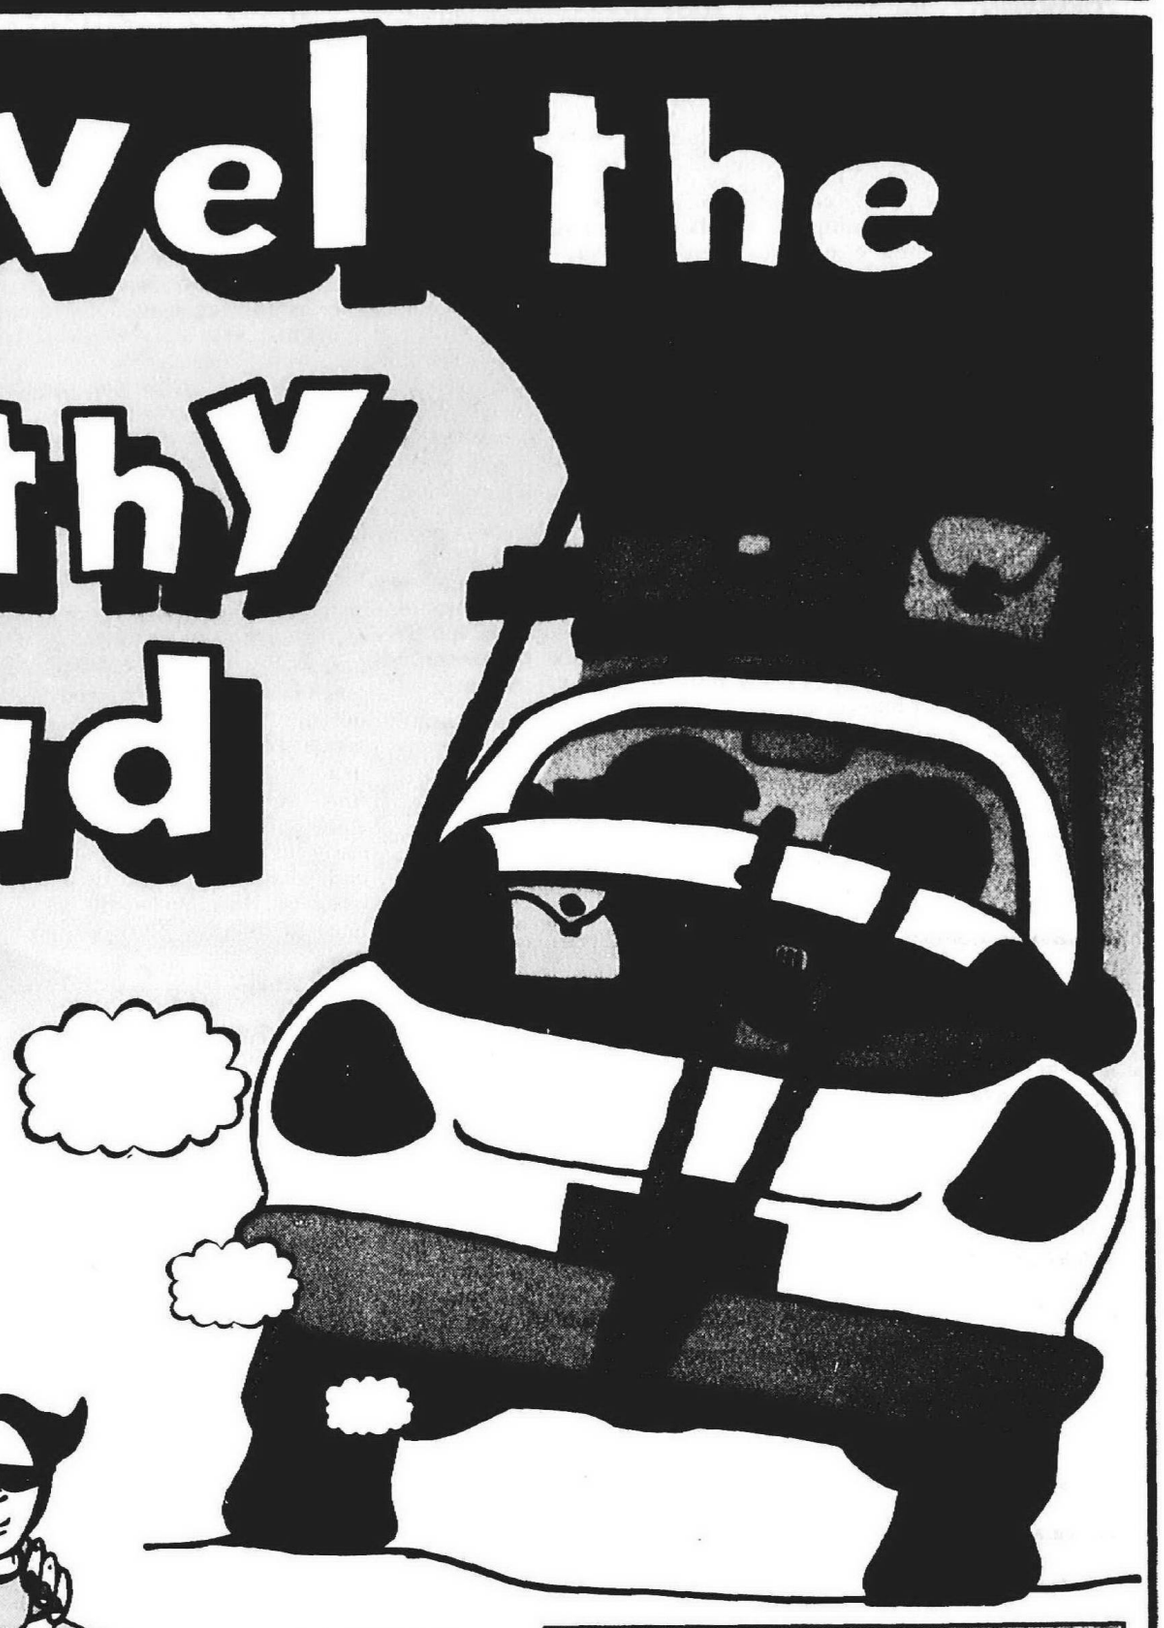
Travel the healthy road



Your bags are packed, the mail is stopped, the dog is boarded – you're ready to hit the road, but...

A recent AAA Michigan survey of state residents aged 45 and older confirms 44 percent have a health condition that impacts their ability to travel. Twenty-six percent have avoided taking a trip in the past due to health concerns. Ranking high on the list of most frequently cited health conditions affecting travel were vision problems, bladder control, heart problems, headaches and digestive disorders.

Hey, Jack, does this mean you can't hit the road? Not at all.

To help spread awareness about key issues surrounding "healthy" travel, AAA Michigan and Pharmacia Corporation have joined forces to launch a year-long, travel-health-education campaign.

The program, called Travel Healthy, Travel Happy, features a comprehensive brochure that helps consumers cope with common travel health issues such as motion sickness, arthritis, allergies and diarrhea and overactive bladder.

"It is our hope that this unique travel-health program will provide travelers with important information about how to think ahead and prepare for the everyday health concerns to better ensure a more pleasant travel experience," said Larry Dickens, director of Vendor Relations and Travel Support for AAA Travel.

Plan ahead

Consider your destination and pack accordingly. Don't forget your sunscreen, insect repellent and bottled water. Take along a small first-aid kit for bumps and bruises and remember to pack all prescription and over-the-counter medications in a waterproof container that is easily accessible in a carry-on bag.

Also, before leaving for a vacation, visit the family doctor to discuss any troubling symptoms that might impact your vacation.

Other "healthy travel" tips:

■ Motion sickness – When traveling by car, try to sit in the front seat and avoid reading. By boat, sit as close to the middle of the vessel as possible. On a plane, sit near the wing.

■ Digestive problems – To avoid diarrhea and/or irritable bowel syndrome, avoid stress, caffeine, and certain types of high-fat foods.

■ Allergies – Those with allergies should take the same precautions on vacation that they do at home. Bring an antihistamine and pack your own pillowcase for use in hotels.

■ Arthritis – Take frequent breaks to walk around and relieve stiff joints and muscles. Also, pack appropriate medications for pain and inflammation.

■ Overactive bladder – If you are subject to frequent urination (more than eight times a day) or urgency (an overwhelming urge to urinate), you may have an overactive bladder. See your doctor for treatment options that can make travel easier, or visit www.bladderinfo.com

Trip health insurance

Have you every wondered what might happen if the perfectly planned and expensive vacation you prepared gets canceled due to illness?

"You don't have to suffer the financial loss of a nonrefundable plane ticket or tour," said Dickens. "Travel insurance is an excellent way to protect your investment."

Travel insurance is relatively inexpensive and can cover trip cancellation, baggage loss, and emergency medical assistance. Trip-cancellation coverage provides compensation for nonrefundable plane tickets, tour packages, or cruise vacations in the event of an illness or injury to you, your family member, a traveling companion, or a traveling companion's family member.

Emergency medical and dental benefits cover expenses, including hospitalization, that occur while you are on vacation. Some providers also offer translators at a 24-hour emergency, multilingual hotline if you are in a foreign hospital. In addition, legal help is available. Check with your local AAA travel agent for details.

To order the free Travel Healthy, Travel Happy brochure, or for more information about trip insurance, call 1-800-AAA-MICH (6424) or visit

Hit the road with healthy snacks

When driving to your summer vacation destination with children in tow, don't throw good nutrition out the window. Reduce the number of fast food stops by planning ahead for road trips.

Registered Dietitian Dorlene Sincoff with the Heart Smart program at the Henry Ford Heart and Vascular Institute, suggests stocking a small cooler with these yummy snacks and drinks:

■ In plastic containers, pack baby carrots, celery sticks and cherry tomatoes to dip in fat-free Ranch dressing.

■ Make your own low-fat snack mix. Try mixing any of the following in sandwich bags: cereal such as Chex, Cheerios, mini shredded wheat, Kix; small pretzels; dried fruits; animal crackers; and raisins. Or try recipes such as the Heart Smart Teddy Bear Snack Mix, Hearty Party Mix or Backpack Granola Bars (found in the Heart Smart Kids Cookbook or at www.henryford.com).

■ To avoid spills, pack juice boxes. Be sure they contain 100 percent fruit juice.

■ Take advantage of roadside fruit and vegetable stands. This allows your family to include fresh fruit and vegetables in their diet and gives the kids a chance to stretch their legs and release some of their pent-up energy.

■ Note that popcorn, carrots and grapes can be a choke-hazard to small children.

Lastly, when on the road, don't substitute snacks for meals. Make sure your itinerary includes a meal stop as close to your normal mealtime schedule as possible. This will prevent hungry, cranky children.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Way to go, Livonia!

On June 15, over 400 participants gathered at Stevenson High School in Livonia for a 24-hour walk-a-thon in the third annual American Cancer Society Relay For Life. They raised a phenomenal $38,000, which will be spent by the American Cancer Society on research and fulfilling the needs of local cancer patients and their families.

The team from Livonia Public Schools raised $9,400, the highest amount of all participating teams.

"Relay for Life is our way of giving a 'group hug' to the community. It has such a profound effect on everyone involved," said Donna Clarke, area executive director, American Cancer Society, Great Lakes Division. "The community has truly embraced its partnership with the American Cancer Society, which is the number one reason this Relay continues to be so successful."

Staying fit

Physical inactivity is associated with many age-related medical conditions, such as high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes, obesity and osteoporosis. Sign up for "Forever Fit," an aerobics course offered by St. Mary Mercy Hospital's Senior Health Connection program.

Forever Fit is offered 9-10 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday beginning August 28. The class meets in West Addition B. Each class includes specific exercises for arthritis, range of motion, flexibility, aerobic endurance, strength, balance and relaxation. Music from the past plus words of encouragement will get participants moving.

Pre-registration is required. There is a $10 registration fee. Call (734) 655-8940 or (800) 494-1650 (out-of-area callers only).

HIV/AIDS

There are over 36 million people worldwide estimated to be living with HIV/AIDS, and an estimated 22 million people have died since the epidemic began. In the United States, more than 754,000 AIDS cases have been reported, with an estimated 1 million people currently infected with HIV

The theme of this year's HIV/AIDS Awareness Week, June 25-29, is "Take the Test - Take Control." The Health Department's Wayne Health Center will accept walk-ins 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for counseling and testing services. The center is located at 33030 Van Born Road near Merriman in Wayne. The services are free, confidential and anonymous.

"This is an all-out drive to get the message out that people need to be tested," says Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara. "We are encouraging anyone who has had unprotected sex or anyone who uses drugs or shares needles to get tested for HIV infection."

Studies have shown the virus that causes HIV/AIDS can be transmitted by the following risk behaviors:

■ Having sex with an infected partner.

■ Having unprotected sexual contact with a high-risk partner.

■ Sharing needles and syringes in drug injection.

■ Being exposed to blood, semen, vaginal fluids and possibly other body fluids.

For more information on HIV/AIDS and Wayne County Health Department-related services, call (734) 727-7124 or (734) 727-7125.

Infectious disease experts offers tips on roughing it in the bush

Adventure travel isn't what it used to be. Years ago explorers like Columbus and Magellan searched the land looking for royalty. Today, people rough it in the Australian Outback and chase wildlife in Africa for the mere thrill of adventure.

And the popularity of adventure travel is growing. Australia, for example, expects a record year in tourism in 2001.

While it can be fun and daring, adventure travel can pose serious health risks for those who go unprepared.

By taking a few simple health care precautions, however, you can protect yourself against diseases, insect bites, dangerous wildlife, food and sun poisoning, unsanitary living conditions and other physical elements, says Dr. Noe Mateo, senior staff physician in the Division of Infectious Diseases at Henry Ford Hospital.

"If you're going to live off the land, you have to do your homework and figure out your resources," he says. "Or, you can get good and friendly with the natives."

Consider:

■ Diseases: For most countries no immunizations are necessary. But the farther you go off the beaten path, Mateo recommends getting a hepatitis A vaccination. Hepatitis A is transmitted by contaminated food and drinking water, and by poor sanitation conditions. The vaccine provides long-term immunity after an initial injection and a booster at six months.

■ Pre-existing medical conditions: If you have diabetes, hypertension or some other medical condition that requires daily medication, determine whether special storage is required due to the heat and the cold.

Women of child-bearing age who have missed one or two consecutive menstrual cycles should receive a pregnancy test, especially if traveling more than four weeks. Bleeding from a potential miscarriage could pose significant health risks.

■ Insect bites: DEET-based repellents work most effectively against mosquitos, bees, wasps and flies. Separate sprays are available for skin and clothing application. And don't be shy when it comes to applying it. "If you have so much as a dime-sized portion of skin that hasn't been covered, mosquitos will find it," says Mateo. "How do I know this? Personal experience. And it's been written up in medical journals."

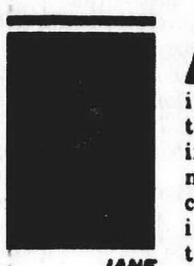
■ Wildlife: Contestants on Survivor: The Australian Outback were exposed to deadly snakes, spiders and lizards. Avoid them at all costs, says Mateo. "Scorpions like to hide in the warm, snuggling places, so empty your shoes before you put them on." To treat a snake bite, bind the wound tightly and seek immediate medical care.

■ Sun and food poisoning: Because the temperature in tropical rain forests and the Australian Outback can reach more than 100 degrees, a hat and sunscreen with 15+ SPF is necessary. Eating raw food is ill-advised. "If you're out in the bush and eating meat that's not cooked, you're just asking for trouble," says Mateo.

When it comes to water, always assume the worst. If in doubt, don't drink it. The simplest way to ensure your safety is to boil it. You also can pack a water filtering system (prices ranges from $20-$130). "It might not taste that great, but it's filtered water," says Mateo.

■ De-worming: If you've spent more than two weeks living off the land, Mateo says it's a good idea to get a medical check-up, complete with blood and skin tests, after returning home.

Learn to save, analyze on your business phone bills



JANE SYDLOWSKI

Any business can improve its bottom line through lowering its telecommunications costs. Vigilance in the area of telecommunications can also result in a better quality of service. How do you do this? Here are some tips.

Monthly service charges

Call the business office of the company that provides your local telephone service and request your Customer Service Record, or CSR. You may have monthly charges on your account that you are not aware of. In other words, you may have been "crammed."

"Cramming" is a term that means billing an account for additional services without the customer's written knowledge or consent. Call waiting or conference calling are examples of such charges. The service was never ordered, nor was it desired. Yet, you have been paying the flat monthly fee for these services to a company that billed you for them in the hopes that you wouldn't notice.

If you have been "crammed," place a call to the business office of your local provider and ask the following direct questions:

- Who gave you the authority to add these services to this account?
- Do you have this request in writing?
- When will the credit be applied to this account? The credit should be the value of your dollars spent since the first occurrence. If they tell you they can only credit you for 90 days when the charge has been appearing for longer, advise them that you will notify the Public Service Commission. The Michigan PSC address is provided below.
- What is the customer service representative's name and direct telephone number? This will allow you to follow through if the credit never appears.

Research carrier costs

Ordering long distance services is more interesting these days because you can actually select one carrier to handle local toll calls (IntraLATA) and another carrier to send long distance calls (InterLATA). In the Detroit metro area, IntraLATA means those calls placed to 313, 734, 248, 810 area codes, and soon to be more. You can select another carrier to handle your traditional long distance calls. Selecting two separate carriers for these services is called 2-PIC, or "2-Primary Inter-exchange Carriers."

Why would you do this?

To reduce costs of course. When researching carriers, two priorities surface: high quality of service and low prices. In general, depending upon the call volumes of your organization, the price per minute should range between 3 cents for high call volumes to 8 cents for smaller call volumes. Carriers will round the length of your call to anywhere between 1 second to a full minute. Never allow your carrier of choice to round to the nearest minute. Make sure that you ask for them to round to a 1-, 3-, or 6-second interval.

In order to assure high quality of service, stick with the known carriers. The same pricing can be attained from "Podunk Long Distance" or AT&T if you negotiate properly. One fun Web sight that will help you benchmark your potential rates for your location is www.chambec.com/tools/ld.html. Call the carrier of choice, which may be your existing carrier, and ask them to match the program that you just found.

Watch your monthly bills for rate- per-minute accuracy.

Since the deregulation of communication services, "slamming" has been prevalent. Slamming happens when a long distance carrier places its service on your account, thereby replacing an existing carrier without your knowledge or consent. Often the rate is extremely high – ranging between 25 cents and $3 per minute.

To remove the unwanted carrier from your account, contact your local carrier's business office and ask for its removal and replacement with the desired carrier. Do not forget to request a credit for the charges by using the same questions outlined above.

Perhaps long distance charges from your desired long distance carrier are appearing on your local telephone bill and not on a separate long distance bill. The rate-per-minute can be much higher than you expected when you originally selected this long distance carrier.

In this instance, two calls are necessary to move and correct the billing on your account. First, call your desired long distance carrier to share the account number from your local bill and to request a credit to match the contracted rate expected. Second, call your local provider to advise which company you have selected to be your long distance provider.

Protect yourself

To protect your organization from "slamming" and/or "cramming," write a letter to your local provider asking them to allow no changes to your account without your written permission. This request is technically called a "PIC freeze." If indeed this occurs after you send the letter, the collection for the over-charge is easier to attain. Be sure to send the letter via certified mail to a specific manager at the provider's business office.

Lastly, if indeed you have requested "fixes or credits" to your account because of slamming and/or cramming, diligent follow-through is required on your part. Do not accept the local provider's verbal commitment to fix the problem at face value. Monthly scrutiny of all telephone bills is required. If you are not satisfied with your service after making sincere efforts to correct problems yourself, state your complaints in writing to:

Michigan Public Service Commission, P.O. Box 30221, Lansing, MI 48909, 1-800-292-9555

Ask for help

If you're getting bogged down in telecommunications issues and costs, maybe it's time to call for help. American Megacom Inc.'s Network Services Team can audit a company's telephone records, in some instances, going as far as three years back, and secure refunds for overcharges.

Jane Sydlowski founded American Megacom, Inc. of Livonia, Michigan, in 1991 to assist companies of all sizes with their technology and telecommunications needs. To reach her directly, call American Megacom at 734-464-8888 or e-mail janes@americanmegacom.com. More information on AMI services is available by logging onto www.americanmegacom.com.

Free Internet support available for breast cancer patients

Low-income African-American breast cancer patients in Wayne County will soon be able to get information and support 24 hours a day, seven days a week through an Internet-based breast cancer information and support system called CHESS (Comprehensive Health Enhancement Support System). Round-the-clock access is crucial: during research trials, almost half of those using the system did so between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m.

William Stengle, director of the Cancer Information Service-Midwest Region housed at the Barbara Ann Karmanos Cancer Institute, is one of the researchers tracking the project. "When you have a life-threatening illness, you have trouble sleeping until you can find an answer. Providing information and support through the Internet is a great way of getting information to patients at all hours of the day or night," he said.

Internet-based CHESS covers the full range of patient concerns, with information in a variety of formats. Patients have the ability to question experts and connect with other patients both through an online bulletin board and through the personal stories of other women who have faced breast cancer. Tools in the system let patients monitor their health, make decisions, and plan and carry out changes in their lives.

Loaning computers

Beginning in June 2001, all Detroit-area breast cancer patients will be able to access CHESS, but a special study, funded by the National Cancer Institute, will loan computers and free Internet access to 70 low-income African-American women who live in Wayne County. These women also will receive free training in using the system.

A partner project will recruit 50 rural women in Wisconsin, and both groups will be part of a study to determine the impact and effectiveness of CHESS on meeting patients' education and support needs.

Patients not eligible for a computer loan can call an 800 number to get a password and can use their own or public-site computers to access CHESS.

Ellen Jones, research coordinator for the project, says the system benefits all groups of breast cancer patients. "Many people wonder whether women who have low incomes or less formal education will be interested in or able to use computer systems, but past research on CHESS found that underserved women were frequent and enthusiastic users of the system. Often, they were the ones that benefited most," she said.

When recruiting begins in June, breast cancer patients can get a referral from their doctors, or they can call 1-800 KARMANOS (1-800-527-6266) or 1-800-4-CANCER and ask for Ellen Jones. Patients not eligible for the computer loan program can call 1-800-361-5481 to get a password for access to CHESS using their own computer.

CHESS was developed at the University of Wisconsin – Madison by a team led by David Gustafson, Ph.D., Robert Hawkins, and Suzanne Pingree.

Controlled clinical trial evaluations have been funded by several federal agencies, including the National Cancer Institute, which is funding the current demonstration trial for low-income African Americans in Wayne County and low-income rural women in Wisconsin.

Novi knockout: It's all about luxury at Bellagio, as evidenced by a $3 million sales model that displays all the bells and whistles.

"Bellagio," in Italian, means a beautiful place of leisure, says developer/ builder Mark Guidobono.

And that's exactly the kind of home he intends to erect in his luxury site condominium community of that name in Novi.

Cambridge Homes plans to construct 55 homes – minimum size 4,000 square feet – over 77 acres on the west side of Beck between Eight and Nine Mile.

"This is going to be the best, this is going to be the grandest community Novi will ever see, the best community in southeast Michigan," Guidobono said.

Custom design is his specialty, so much so that Guidobono has spent $3 million building a model at Bellagio to show off all the possible bells and whistles.

"We sit down with a homeowner and get to know them, what they like. Get a personality profile. We determine what their objectives are. We have an architect on staff, a designer on staff to work with customers," he said.

Guidobono concedes that his market niche here probably is 1 percent or less of all new-home-build customers.

"This is going to be their dream house," he said.

A new home on a lot at Bellagio will start at about $900,000.

At that price, buyers can expect a home with three to five bedrooms, most with their own private baths; two half-baths; three to six fireplaces; air conditioning; four-car garage; and jet tub and separate shower with multiple heads in the master.

Other standard features include all kitchen appliances; first-floor laundry and in some cases both first- and second-floor laundries; and basement.

Floor coverings include marble, Brazilian walnut and slate, countertops granite. Brick, limestone and upgraded shingles are primary exterior materials.

"We're probably the only builder that lets you change anything you want," said Matthew Hatz, sales representative. "You can make any changes you want any time you want."

"We've got large lots here, just under one-acre homesites," Guidobono said. "A gated community is very desirable, I think. People like the privacy.

"It's a great location in relation to expressways, a great school system (Northville) and a great city," he added.

"Mark and his brother (Eric) are always on site and more than willing to meet with any homeowner at any time," Hatz said.

The Bellagio model is a story-and-a-half of 11,000 square feet including the finished lower level.

It includes a vestibule; large, walk-up foyer; library with coffered ceiling, fireplace and built-in bookcases; formal dining room; butler's pantry; and grand room set off by columns with fireplace, two-story coffered ceiling and bookcases.

The kitchen/ nook contains a large island, walk-in pantry and built-in desk. The family room also has a fireplace.

The master suite with step ceiling features separate jet tub and multi-head shower, two separate vanities and a dressing-makeup area, walk-in closet, compartmentalized commode and retreat area with a refrigerator and sink.

A large concrete deck can be reached from the master, grand room or kitchen.

Three bedrooms, each with its own bath, are upstairs as is a loft/study area.

The lower-level walk-out has been finished to include a full bath with sauna, wine cellar, theater, bar, several game areas including billiards and cards plus a large sitting area.

Special features of the home include eight-foot mahogany doors, leaded glass in windows, large crown and floor moldings, staircases off the foyer and family room and the garage designed to give a courtyard effect.

Bellagio is served by city water, sewers and sidewalks. The property tax rate is $29.73 per $1,000 of the state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction. That means the owners of a $1 million home there would pay about $15,000 the first year.

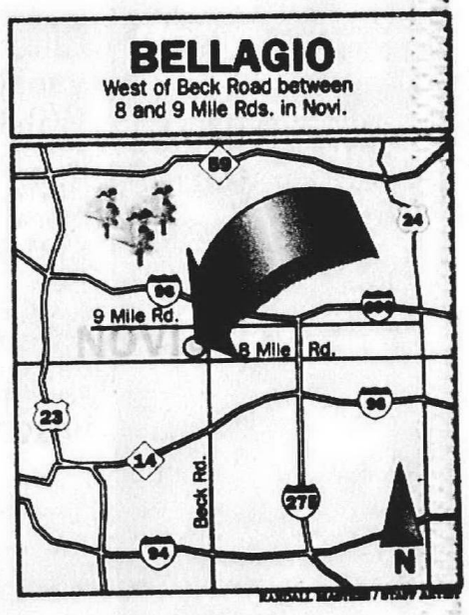
The annual association fee is projected at $1,000.

John Leone has ordered a 5,600-square-foot English Tudor in Bellagio.

"The main reason for me was the style of the homes there – 1920s, '30s Palmer Park," he said. "I really love that style. I like the unique personality of Bellagio."

Leone said he was also attracted by the extensive use of stone, marble and hardwood by the builders.

"They're really great people to work with," he said. "The owners (Guidobonos) get involved in the selection process. They're pretty honest people."



The sales office/model at Bellagio, (248) 348-3800, is open noon to 5 p.m. weekdays, noon to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Living room has potential as spa alternative

Comfort with elegance and spaciousness with many extra features describe the ranch style of the Rhapsody (338-050).

The exterior is brick with a large wrap-around, covered porch. Skylights provide creative natural light and light tubes. Disguising the garage is a brick planter under a row of large windows.

There are two doors off the entry porch. One goes to the garage with a large shop and a separate storage area. The other opens into a vaulted family room with many windows.

An entertainment center livens up the family room, while on the opposite side, a fireplace graces the dining area. Large overhead fans provide air circulation while complementing the scale of the room.

■ An entertainment center livens up the family room, while on the opposite side, a fireplace graces the dining area.

The kitchen area is very accessible with a nook that opens to the covered deck. There is an island cooktop with a raised eating bar and a large walk-in pantry for extra food storage is on the adjacent corner. A pocket door opens into the hall. A raised dishwasher has been added for ease of loading.

Convenient to the entry is the office/library, lined with shelves and a large corner computer desk. French doors provide a grandiose entrance. Adjacent to the office is a half bath with the utility area around the corner.

Two bedrooms located in the rear of the home have large walk-in closets and personal linen closets. The larger of the two could be a guest room, with a private, covered deck through sliding doors. Both bedrooms share a tub/shower combination with private half bath.

On the opposite side of the home is the unique master suite and a sunroom or living room adjacent.

The master suite opens onto the covered porch area separately through a door on the side and French doors in the rear. Numerous windows and skylights give the room extra sunlight. The bath has dual sinks, an oversized tub, shower and a pocket door entrance to the sunroom/living room.

A vaulted formal living room would be wonderful with four skylights and a half moon window overhead to brighten the area and provide extra light.

However, equally ideal would be to install a spa and use this room as a sunroom. The room is shut off from the home with the elegance of the French doors.

Insulated garage door conserves energy, too

LARRY KAUFMAN

We have discussed the ways that homeowners can improve the insulation factor of their homes – caulking around windows, insulation in the attic, foam board between the floor joists and others.

An improvement we haven't discussed is the garage door. As the largest door in your home, the garage door can be the source of energy loss and a safety hazard.

There are essentially three types of garage doors plain metal, insulated metal and wooden. The plain metal door allows a great deal of energy loss through the thin metal construction. Wooden doors provide a greater insulation factor but they are much heavier and can absorb water resulting in warping and extra weight.

Because of Michigan's harsh winters and potentially very hot humid summers I suggest the steel insulated door.

These doors are generally constructed in three layers, a foam core and two outer skins of steel. You may also see a door with a steel outer skin backed by a foam board. In my opinion the pancake construction is far superior. This type of garage door will give better comfort in both the summer and winter while saving money on your utility bills.

Generally garage doors are in two basic styles, sectional and California swingout. The sectional doors are much safer then the one piece swingout. Children have tried to ride the swingout door as it opens or closes resulting in serious injury.

If you have a garage door opener that was built prior to 1982 I recommend you replace it. Models built after this date are required by law to have a reversing mechanism should the door make contact with an object on the way down.

Since 1992, garage door openers have been required to have an electric eye installed in order for the door to work. If the beam of the electric eye is broken while the door is closing it will automatically reverse before coming in contact with an object. This beam is mandatory by law and cannot be overridden or circumvented.

Remember that all garage door openers have a power adjustment and you should adjust the opener to the minimum power required to open the door.

Because it requires more power to operate the door in the winter, I suggest you adjust the opener for winter operation and only adjust the setting as necessary. Don't set the adjustment to maximum power.

Alliance to Save Energy provides 'no sweat' tips for summer living

Looking to beat the heat without breaking the bank?

The Alliance to Save Energy offers smart, energy-efficient tips to keep you cooler and more comfortable while cutting your energy bill and pollution.

■ Tired of playing "thermostat cop" with the kids or coming home to a sweltering house on hot summer days?

A programmable thermostat automatically coordinates indoor climates with daily and weekend patterns, increasing home comfort and reducing energy waste.

■ South and west facing windows admit the most heat in the summer. Close blinds on those sides of the house during the day, or install shading devices such as trellises or awnings.

■ Help prevent potential brownouts and blackouts by utility companies by shifting energy-intensive tasks such as laundry and dishwashing to off-peak energy demand hours.

■ Attics and crawlspaces, exposed to extreme outdoor temperatures, can often reach temperatures of 115 degrees. Adequate insulation and attic ventilation can keep you from "losing your cool."

■ Cooling and heating account for almost half of the average family's energy bill. Make sure your air conditioning equipment is properly maintained with a professional tune-up – cleaning coils and checking for refrigerant leaks and proper refrigerant charging could save you the cost and inconvenience of a breakdown during the hottest days. Also clean or replace filters monthly.

■ Size matters with air conditioning, but bigger isn't always better. Poorly sized air conditioning units can unnecessarily inflate your energy costs and contribute to poor indoor air quality in your home, worsening your allergies and making breathing uncomfortable. Check with your contractor or local air conditioning system retailer to properly size your unit.

■ Look for the Energy Star label, the symbol for energy efficiency, when shopping for room and central air conditioning systems – as well as for major appliances, lighting, and home electronics – to cut these related costs by 30 percent. Find retailers who carry Energy Star products at www. energystar. gov

■ Plant leafy trees and vines around your home and install reflective tiles on your roof. These will cut your air conditioning load, reduce pollution, and fight your local "heat island" effect.

■ Go "window-shopping" at the Efficient Windows Collaborative Web site, www. efficientwindows. org. You'll learn how high-performance Energy Star windows can reduce average cooling costs from 15 to 35 percent by filtering in visible light and filtering out heat waves.

■ If you're in the market for a new home, ask your builder or Realtor about homes that can improve your home's resale value by $20 for every $1 reduction in utility costs while reducing pollution. Find participating builders and developers on the Web at www. energystar. gov/ homes

■ Take the guesswork out of energy-efficient home improvements by exploring the Alliance to Save Energy's free Home Energy Checkup online (www. ase. org/ checkup), which provides homeowners with a quick analysis of potential dollar and pollution savings, considering climate types and energy prices.

■ Sip lemonade and think cool thoughts – like how you'll be freezing next winter and longing for summer again!

For more "no sweat" tips, check out the Alliance to Save Energy's consumer Web site at www.ase. org/consumer.

Knowledge serves well when replacing central air systems

FROM HOME SERVICE STORE FOR AP WEEKLY FEATURES

Homeowners pricing replacement central air conditioning systems don't need to simmer over installation costs and contractor work schedules.

According to Paul Kersey, a heating and air conditioning expert for the Home Service Store, some preplanning and direct questions to installers will keep homeowners from becoming hot under the collar.

"The biggest thing the homeowner needs to keep in mind is to make sure the replacement system is the right size for their home," says Kersey.

Most homeowners believe bigger is better when it comes to air conditioning, but that's not accurate, says Kersey.

"Usually, they want a system that's too large and costs a lot more to operate. They just end up with more than they need," says Kersey, "because they're in a hurry to get the unit installed yesterday." A larger than necessary system may keep the temperature cool, but it won't run long enough to remove humidity, a major factor in comfort.

Homeowners should insist on a "heat loss-heat gain" calculation before installation. Most contractors don't volunteer to perform the test, says Kersey, "but there's no reason not to do it. It can be easily done in 30 minutes on a computer." Homeowners can also calculate the cost of a system using the online Project Estimator at www.TrustHSS.com.

Air conditioning units are priced by the ton. The most common is a 3-ton unit, equivalent to 36,000 BTUs. Installed prices range from $4,200 to $6,200. Kersey says a difference in quality between units is akin to "selecting a car that get 10 miles to the gallon or an efficient vehicle with 30 mpg. There are options out there."

Those options include heat pumps – units that siphon cool air or heat from the ground and air. Kersey says heat pumps work better for mild climates. He believes gas units are best suited to colder regions.

While most homeowners wouldn't know a compressor from a capacitor, Kersey says it's worthwhile for a homeowner to appear somewhat knowledgeable during negotiations.

"When the homeowner asks for a copy of the check, test and start-up sheet, it tells the contractor, 'I'd better do this job right because they're asking for it.' Just by asking for it, you'll get a better job," advises Kersey, who also suggests the buyer insist on viewing license information.

Kersey says there is a national certification for anyone who works with refrigerants. Environmental concerns have forced the issue of training and weeded out contractors who were lax on regulations or not mindful of the environment, according to Kersey.

The homeowner's job isn't finished once the unit is installed. Many contractors are in a hurry to get to the next job and as little as five minutes to test, check, start up the system and pronounce it ready.

Kersey says this rush is unwarranted. "Many times the unit is started in five minutes, at which point the refrigerant is added and needs to be adjusted in the home. It can take at least one hour to make sure the system is working properly with the right refrigerant levels, not just the refrigerant that comes with the system." He estimates that up to 80 percent of air conditioning systems are not charged with the proper amounts of refrigerant.

MEYERS ON MORTGAGES

by GARY S. MEYERS

BUY DOWNS CAN GET YOU MORE HOME FOR YOUR MONEY
Readers Questions and Answers

What is a buy-down? Can I get the mortgage I want? I'm taking care of my heater, why is it broken? This week, The Meyers Report digs into the mailbag to answer readers' questions sparked by recent articles.

Q. My family earns $42,000 per year. Is there a guideline to tell me the most mortgage I can afford to get?

A. "The rough rule of thumb," says Dan Kaatz, Illinois Mortgage Director of Citibank FSB, "is a payment of one-third of your gross monthly income. But it's never about rates, life and mortgages are more complicated than that. There are many variables, such as down payment needs, special programs for first time buyers and even special income ratios that can stretch your buying power to 50 percent or more of your gross income. Then there are you other debts. All of this makes every buyer unique.

What you really need to do is contact a quality, name brand mortgage lender to find out what's right for your particular situation."

Q. I recently replaced my furnace filter, and not long after that the blower motor burned out. Could there be a connection?

A. The wrong furnace filter can definitely cause problems in your system, according to Bill Lea, president of FiltersUSA.com, one of the leading suppliers of genuine replacement filters. "Using the correct furnace filter," he said, "is essential to maintaining the longevity of the furnace blower motor. The wrong filter can place a burden on the motor by restricting the capacity of airflow through the duct."

If the motor has to work harder to move air through the filter, it draws more current, making the motor run hotter. Not only does it hurt the motor, it also puts a strain on your power bills.

"Be sure that the filter you are putting in matches the requirements called for by the manufacturer," said Lea.

Q. I am a single woman who owns a townhouse that two Realtors have told me that I could realistically sell for $150,000. I want to make a bid on a (beautiful!) 1920 Victorian in that's on the market for $175,000. I make only about $40,000 per year; however, one lender pulled up my credit report and said that I'm a 774 out of 800. When I sell my home, I would put 30% down on the new home and in exchange, I would want a lender to give me a 7 or 7.5% 30-yr. Fixed-rate mortgage with no (or very little) points, fees, etc. Is possible to get what I need or am I dreaming?

A. "It may be possible," said Kaatz, "depending on current market conditions. Right now we're looking at 7 7/8 or 7 3/4 percent at zero points, but if you pay points you can always bring the rate down. The actual rate depends on the actual current market conditions that day, and rates are subject to change daily for all the lenders, depending on economic conditions, economic reports, and that sort of thing."

Q. We've had a mortgage for four years, and we keep getting offers to get a refinance or a home equity loan and consolidate our debts. Is that a good idea this early in a mortgage?

A. "The first question I would ask is what rate do you have on your first mortgage?" advised Kaatz. "It may make more sense to get a home equity loan if you're going to refinance to a higher rate than on your first loan. I would want to go over the numbers and see how much you're going to save in total before deciding on whether you get a refinance or a home equity loan."

Q. I've been hearing a lot about "buy-downs" lately. Is this something that I want to get involved in, or is it going to get me in trouble?

A. "Buy-downs are getting popular these days because they allow you to prepay without any penalty," said John Ratkovich, president of American Home Finance. "If you use it right, you can get a lot more home for your money, but you have to make sure you ask the right questions."

A buy-down, Ratkovich explained, is a mortgage that starts out with a low interest rate in the first year and then goes up over the first one or two years by as much as two percentage points and then is fixed.

"The advantage," he said, " is that you can get a low rate to start and get more home. By the time the rate goes up, you can refinance before you get to a much higher rate. In a 2-1-0 buy-down, you're buying down 2 percentage points on the rate in the first year, then one percentage point the second year, and then zero percentage points off the rate for the remainder of the term.

For example, your rate might start at 6 3/4% the first year, then go to 7 3/4% the second, and then up to 8 3/4% for the next 28 years. You win during years one and two, and you suffer during the next 28 years.

"There's the alternate to that, which is the 1-0 buy-down, which might be 7 1/4% the first year, and 8 1/4% during the last 29 years. Once again, as long as you can prepay without penalty, you can refinance sometime during the second year, before it gets to be a burden."

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"MAKING THE OFFER"

When you make an offer to purchase real estate, there are many issues that you may want to clarify other than the offering price itself. Here are some of the issues that should be addressed:

Earnest Money Deposit

What kind of cash deposit will you offer to demonstrate that this is a serious offer? The agreement should also state the terms upon which the deposit could be forfeited to the seller.

Amount Of Down Payment

The seller has a right to know the amount of your down payment. A small down payment is not as reassuring to a seller as a larger amount would be. If your offer is competing against an offer from another buyer, the seller may favor the offer with the higher down payment.

Method And Amount Of Financing

If you are buying the property with the use of a mortgage loan, it should specify the type and amount of loan being sought.

Financing Contingency Clause

If you are applying for financing, a clause should state that you are not obligated to complete the purchase and should not lose your deposit if you are unable to obtain the loan.

Property Inspection Contingency Clause

Most offers stipulate that the buyer will hire and pay for an inspection of the property by a qualified property inspector. There is usually an escape clause that permits the buyer to back out of the sale if dissatisfied with the results of the inspection.

ADVICE: There are many other issues too numerous to mention. Because of all the complexities, use the services of a Realtor.

Historic homes of inventors to appear on HGTV

A series of famous American's home tours will be presented July 1-6 on the cable TV channel Home and Garden Television (HGTV).

"Homes of Our Heritage: American Inventors" begins "Homes of Our Heritage" week at 9 p.m. July 1 with a tour of six extraordinary estates inhabited by America's most famous inventors.

Each home featured during the one-hour special offers insight into the lives, personalities and aspirations of visionaries who have had a profound effect on the way we live today.

"Homes of Our Heritage: American Inventors" features:

The picture-perfect home of George Eastman, the father of modern photography. Located in Rochester, N.Y.

Thomas Edison's West Orange, N.J., estate which was the first to use the inventor's very powerful creation – the light bulb.

Morse Code creator Samuel Morse's Italian-style Poughkeepsie, N.Y., home, which catered to the inventor's creative roots with an abundance of gardens.

The Dearborn estate of Model-T creator Henry Ford, whose home reveals the revolutionary inventor's respect for traditional design.

John Deere's Grand Detour, Ill., home, which reflected the simple aspirations of the man who dramatically changed farming in America with his steel plow.

The modest family estate of the Wright Brothers, the men who pioneered flying. Located in Dayton, Ohio, this home kept these inventors grounded while allowing their minds to soar.

Other "Homes of Our Heritage" specials airing the week of July 1 include: American Heroes - 8 p.m. Monday, July 2 (featuring Charles Lindbergh and Joshua Chamberlain)

The Presidents - 8 p.m. Tuesday, July 3 (featuring Franklin D. Roosevelt and John Quincy Adams)

Homes of the Revolution - 8 p.m. Wednesday, July 4 (featuring George Washington and Abigail Adams)

American Trailblazers - 8 p.m. Thursday, July 5 (featuring Daniel Boone and Amelia Earhart)

American Authors - 8 p.m. Friday, July 6 (featuring Mark Twain and Carl Sandburg)

Grill pad protector safeguards deck

■ Grease stains and ash spots from incidental sparks are two of the most common problems experienced by those who enjoy the backyard lifestyle.

(NAPSA) – Homeowners are increasingly enjoying outdoor living year-round, using popular "chimineas" and outdoor fireplaces to take the chill out of the air.

Still, the use of decks, docks and patios peaks during warmer weather, when Americans fire up their barbecue grills, turkey fryers and chimineas.

However, cooking and entertaining outdoors can wreak havoc on decks and patios-grease stains and ash spots from incidental sparks are two of the most common problems experienced by those who enjoy the backyard lifestyle.

"According to the Barbecue Industry Association, more than 15 million grills are sold annually, and 75 percent of all U.S. households own and use outdoor grills," says Ray Shelor, national sales manager, special projects at DiversiTech.

"Add to that the growing popularity of outdoor portable fireplaces and deep fryers. If you've ever done much outdoor cooking, you know how annoying stray sparks can be and how difficult it is to remove grease stains from the deck or patio," he said.

Fortunately, DiversiTech offers a simple solution: the "Original" Grill Pad deck protector. This lightweight, fiber-cement protective blanket is placed under outdoor ornamental clay or other portable fireplaces, fryers, smokers and charcoal, gas or electric barbecue grills to protect a deck surface from grease stains and sparks or debris.

The pads have a slip-resistant, textured surface and are earth-brown in color to blend readily with most woods. With latex, water-based paint, they can be custom colored to match any décor. In addition, these deck protectors "breathe," preventing long-term water entrapment between the pad and deck surface which can damage the wood.

They are easily cleaned with a garden hose and are naturally heat- and weather-resistant.

The "Original" Grill Pads are available in 30-inch rounds and 30-inch-by- 42-inch ovals and rectangles. An oval opening near one edge serves as a "handle" that can be grasped to conveniently carry the pad when picking it up to move or put in storage.

The pads, which range in price from $24.95 to $39.95, can be found in hardware stores, home centers, mass merchandisers, discount stores, hearth and patio shops, some supermarkets and wherever grills and accessories are sold.

DREAM JOB

Drive home your weekly paycheck

BY MARGO DEWEY
SPECIAL WRITER

Want to travel around the U.S., meet interesting people, rub elbows with celebrities, get hugs and kisses from kids every day and get paid for doing it? Sounds too good to be true?

This actually describes a job opportunity that awaits thousands of people every day, and all you need is a good driving record and, in some cases, a winning personality. It's called being a driver. This describes several job vacancies now available all over the state which includes a truck driver, a chauffeur and a bus driver.

There are hundreds of opportunities awaiting individuals who have a CDL (commercial driver's license). Most job positions require the CDL, a solid driving record and self-motivation.

More than 7 million people in Michigan have some type of driver's license or CDL which means most of us enjoy driving or depend on it as a necessity.

Obtaining a CDL is fairly easy, according to Patti Hayden, analyst for the Michigan Secretary of State.

"There are several factors involved for why you would need a CDL to operate a vehicle other than your own personal car or truck," Hayden said. "First of all, you must be at least 21 years old to drive a commercial motor vehicle across state lines. You can, however, be 18 years old and drive a commercial motor vehicle in Michigan. But, if you are going to transport hazardous materials in a quantity that requires the vehicle to be marked or placarded, you have to be 21 years old."

The weight of the vehicle and the number of passengers you are carrying in the vehicle also designates the need for a CDL. If, for instance, you are going to drive a vehicle that has a GVWR (gross vehicle weight rating) of 26,001 pounds or more, then a CDL is required.

What kind of a CDL do you need? A Group A-CDL is to operatevehicles which tow a trailer or other vehicles with a GVWR over 10,000 pounds. A Group B-CDL is to operate vehicles having a GVWR of 26,001 pounds or more or a gross combination weight/rating (GVWR) of 26,001 pounds or more towing trailers or other vehicles rated at 10,000 pounds GVWR or less. Finally, a Group C CDL is to operate vehicles that are designed to transport 16 or more people (including the driver); carry 15 or less people (including the driver) transporting children to or from school and home regularly for compensation; and carrying hazardous materials amounts requiring placarding.

"We have a large percentage of drivers who have a chauffeur's license," Hayden said.

"The total number of people in Michigan who have a chauffeur's driver license is 615,465."

Being a Chauffeur can be exciting and rewarding. Mel Hardesty, a chauffeur for Metro Cars in Taylor which services not only the Wayne County Detroit Metropolitan Airport but also major businesses including the big three (General Motors, Daimler Chrysler and Ford), loves his job. In fact, he operated his own light truck and auto repair facility business for several years before deciding to become a chauffeur.

"I basically saw an ad in the paper for a chauffeur, and I applied," Hardesty said. "I was self-employed at the time and decided this would be interesting."

Hardesty applied and was hired. He began his new career as a chauffeur in September of 1994. Since then, he has become one of the most reliable, respected and requested chauffeur. His job also put him in the celebrity limelight as he has met several renowned politicians, athletes and television and movie stars including Geraldo Rivera and Jeff Daniels.

"I have to say my favorite customer was Barbara Bush," Hardesty said. "She was the nicest, most down-to-earth person. She treated you with respect and kindness."

Hardesty said the job of a chauffeur has many advantages including being able to set your own hours.

"The way Metro Cars has the scheduling set up is excellent because it allows you to accept a job on your own time," he said. "This way it's up to you just how busy you want to be. You act as an independent contractor."

A chauffeur's job is not only about driving. This position requires the individual to have a good personality, a lot of patience, some public relations skills and excellent knowledge of how to get somewhere on time.

There are several driving positions to choose from at Metro Cars.

Both men and women drivers are in demand. In fact, Metro Cars currently has 300 contracted commission drivers on hand as chauffeurs and between 80 to 90 employees who drive the Metro buses and vans.

"We have 100 luxury sedans in our Metro Car division as well as a full fleet of vans, two executive vans and one executive bus," said Vickie Jacobs, human resource manager for Metro Cars. "We have several opportunities available for anyone who has a good driving record, is at least 22 years old and has the proper CDL licenses."

With the new airport scheduled to open at the Detroit Metropolitan Airport in December of 2001 or the early part of 2002, Metro Cars is preparing to service even more customers with the continued professionalism and business savvy it is known for around Michigan.

"We cater the majority of our business to business people so we are constantly aware of the importance of making our customers feel comfortable and to let them know that they are our number one priority," Jacobs said. "That is why all of our employees and chauffeurs wear uniforms, and they are go through an intense training process."

Intense training is the requirement for becoming another kind of driver-a truck driver.

Jim Berthiaume, owner of the North Country Truck Driving School Inc. in Escanaba, offers two programs for individuals who want to drive a "big rig."

"We find all kinds of people want to drive trucks," Berthiaume said. "Men and women have gone through the course, but, I have to say we see more men taking the courses. Our youngest students are 18, and the oldest we have had is 74."

Berthiaume said there are literally thousands of job opportunities for a truck driver all over the state. In fact, once a person completes a four-week program at North Country, officials at the school assist the individual with job placement.

"Students literally have a job ready for them before they even graduate," he said.

"Being a truck driver means you have a job for life as long as you have your CDL and a good driving record. It's something you can always depend on."

The average pay for a truck driver begins at 26 cents a mile and can go as high as 32 cents, according to Berthiaume. The four-week course is for beginners, someone who has never driven a truck before. The three-week course is for the individual who has a little experience.

The four-week course includes: visual aids/combination driving techniques; safe and defensive driving in all weather conditions; HazMat./Tankers, doubles and triples; log book; map reading; trip sheets & other related documents; DOT (Federal) regulations; job applications and interviewing; and safety procedures in freight handling.

There are three major truck driving schools in Michigan. Besides North Country Truck Driving School, there is West Michigan C.D.L. Inc. in Grandville and The AmericanTruck Driving School in Coldwater.

If driving a "big rig" sounds too much to handle, there is another driving job that has many rewards. Emily Thayer has been a bus driver for in the Wayne-Westland School District for 15 years. Her motivation to drive children to school as early as 6:30 a.m. every morning for more than a decade is the hugs and special cards she gets from "her kids."

"I'm the first person of authority these kids meet to start off their day besides their parents," Thayer said. "I can make or break their day. I always try to have a positive attitude with every kid. I don't hold grudges because I know kids make mistakes. I try to keep them safe, and I let them know I'm there for them if they need me."

Thayer has had just about every route in the district. She has driven elementary school children as well as high school children. She doesn't play favoritism, however, she loves the little kids.

"They always remember you during the holidays so you get special cards or presents," she said. "I also try to have candy or little gifts ready for them. I do like the high school kids. Sometime it can be rough with them, but it's always rewarding."

Don't rely, however, on a bus driver's income to support a family, according to Thayer. She said it is better as an extra income where you can work part time and still spend time with your own family.

"I wouldn't count on it as a main income," she said. "There are always other jobs out there for drivers that can supplement what you do as a bus driver. You have to love kids to do this job. We have a lot of dedicated drivers in this school district who really love the kids and that's what makes a great bus driver."

To receive more information about obtaining a CDL license, visit a local Secretary of State office. Web sites to check out for trucking schools are as follows: www.northcountrytruckdrivingschool.com; www.your-futurestartshere.com; and www.westmichigancdl.com.

When luxury & quality matter...

Acura ups the luxo-sport ante to better compete with the Europeans

BY JAMES E. BRYSON
© AUTOWIRE.NET

Luxury in cars means different things to different people. Some like their luxury to be American-esque, a la Cadillac and Lincoln. Some like the European stylings of Jaguar, Mercedes-Benz, et al.

Still others are more prone to the offerings of the burgeoning Japanese luxury marques. Welcome to the 2002 Acura 3.2 TL and 3.2 TL Type-S.

Though luxury tastes take many forms, the most enticing from an enthusiast's perspective is the teaming of luxury and sport cars. Acura has been putting more sport into the sport/luxury segment since its inception, over a decade ago, with vehicles like the NSX and Integra GS-R. For 2002, Acura ups the luxo-sport ante to better compete with the Europeans and Americans at the game they joined in mid-play.

2002 Acura 3.2 TL

The TL is the sedan counterpart to the

CL coupe that was updated for 2001 and looks as good, if not better than the coupe (if that can actually happen!) and gives Acura a real player for the "mid-luxury" segment, in Acura's own words. Changes to the TL include, but are not limited to, freshened front and rear fascias (with integrated fog lights on all models), more insulation in the doors and improved door seals to lessen noise, vibration and harshness levels, an in-dash six-disc CD changer and engine and transmission improvements.

As a real player in the sport/luxury segment, the Type-S model is motivated by a 3.2-liter SOHC 24-valve V6 that features Honda's VTEC valve timing gadgetry, an all-new, dual-stage induction system and numerous other performance enhancements, which is good for 260 horsepower and 232 lb.-ft. of torque. The base model is packaged with a not-too-shabby 225 horsepower/216 lb-ft. motor. Both models meet Low Emission Vehicle standards, while California bound TLs are rated as Ultra Low Emission Vehicles

All that power goes through a five-speed automatic with Acura's answer to the "manumatic" craze, Sequential SportShift, along with Grade Logic Control, which enhances shifting smoothness and reduces gear "hunting" when ascending or descending steep grades.

The transmission was top-notch perfect; the shifts were Cadillac smooth and power delivery was instant-on in every situation.

The only gripe about the transmission was the manual shift mode. The gear changes were not in concert with the movement of the stick and the computer brain controlled the one-two shift no matter what input was received from the driver. We found that it was more satisfying to leave it in drive (D5, each gear had its own detent) and let the computer choose the gears while driving on tight, twisty roads.

It just goes to show that transmissions like this are little solace for those of us that want a real manual in such a powerful, well-handling car.

To help get the vehicle around tight corners in a stately manner, Acura has outfitted the Type-S with a sport-tuned double wishbone suspension (with front and rear stabilizer bars), V-rated, all-season rubber on 17 inch alloy wheels and Acura's Vehicle Stability Assist, all as standard equipment.

There's a lengthy list of standard features that come with the 3.2 TL Type-S too. Some features of note include remote keyless entry; DVD navigation system; automatic climate control; an Acura/Bose six-disc in-dash CD player; heated seats with six-way power for the driver and four-way power for the passenger; Driver's seat and outside mirror memory (the mirrors are also heated); automatic down and up for the driver's window; automatic day/night rearview mirror; power moonroof; xenon high intensity discharge headlights; speed-sensing intermittent wipers and the Homelink system.

We had a lot of fun with the DVD navigation system in the short time we had the car. It was quite interesting punching in a destination and then letting the system guide you there. It has a computerized female voice to command you and a host of graphical representations to assist further. Even if you turn the wrong way, the system recalculates its route and helps you get to where you want to go.

Safety features include driver and front passenger dual stage airbags, driver and front passenger side airbags; four-wheel ABS; front seatbelt pre-tensioners; a theft deterrent system with electronic immoblizer; emergency trunk release; Acura's Vehicle Stability Assist; front and rear crumple zones and side-impact door beams.

The total as-tested price, with no options to speak of, topped out at $33,710.00, including the obligatory destination charge, which is a great deal considering all the safety, comfort and convenience features this car offers.

We loved driving this car. It handled well in all situations we threw at it and was more comfortable than we expected. The other luxury makes must be laying awake at night, trying to think up the next best thing that might compete with the new 2002 Acura 3.2 TL and 3.2 TL Type-S. These cars are already winners in the 2002 sport/luxury class.
