Recovery system

Center helps addicts kick old habits

BY BRAD KADRICH

The kids — on this day there are six of them — sit in a semi-circle, gathered around Ed Spitsbergen, eyes cast mostly on the floor. Members of a support group at Growth Works, they've encountered the day's toughest question so far: Who's going to start?

Lee, a 17-year-old from Livonia, fidgets with his hands. He wants to "take time," group lingo for talking about his problems. Justin, seated next to Spitsbergen, nibbles on his fingernails. The others in the group, including Stephanie, the only girl, are quiet.

Finally, Lee starts, and the group visibly relaxes. It's another step on the road to recovery, perhaps the biggest step for these young people, all enrolled at Growth Works, the Plymouth-based center for drug and alcohol counseling.

"It's probably one of the most important supports," Lee said. "It's a better environment to talk about things that might not be talked about at other support groups, like AA."

That's the basic idea behind Growth Works, founded in 1971 to deal with children — the bulk of their clients are between 14 and 18 years old — with drug or alcohol problems. Most of the clients are referred to the center either by parents at the end of their rope or by the court system.

Growth Works draws clients from all over western Wayne County. The center offers a variety of programs designed for early intervention for kids at risk. Groups meet after school or in the early evening, times convenient to the youngsters seeking help.

Much like watching a curious toddler's every move, parents of teenagers need to be just as aware and just as protective.

"Parents need to ask and watch, they need to be aware of everything their kid is doing," said Maryellen Rehse, director of youth services for Starfish Family Services. "They need to be supportive, but watchful. Parents should not be afraid to be too intrusive, they may save a child's life by doing that."

The signs of alcohol abuse in teens are sometimes subtle and gradual, but knowing what to look for can promote early intervention and treatment, according to area counselors and social workers.

Parents often do not recognize or admit their child has a drinking problem for about two years, explained Dale Yagiela, executive director of Growth Works in Plymouth. By that time, the emotional, social and physical damage has progressed. Dependency and addiction accelerates faster in young people than in adults.

Teens can become dependent on alcohol and drugs within six months of continued use, where it typically takes 10 to 20 years for adults to reach full dependency, according to information from a publication entitled, "Pride Parent to Parent," distributed by Hegera Programs.

Salvation Army honors Caviston at dinner

BY BRAD KADRICH
STAFF WRITER
bkadrich@oe.homecomm.net

For years, Tom Caviston worked behind the scenes to get things done for the Plymouth Salvation Army and other civic groups in town.

At the Salvation Army's annual dinner Wednesday night, Caviston's memory will be front-and-center.

Caviston, who passed away in November after suffering a heart attack while returning from the Michigan-Michigan State football game, will receive the Others Award, one of the Salvation Army's highest honors. His wife, Nancy, will be on hand to accept it.

It'll be the first Others Award handed out by the Plymouth contingent since Carl Lampton in 1984.

"Tom was my go-to guy in terms of special projects," said May Stephen Hull, commander of the Plymouth Salvation Army, which also serves Canton, Northville and Belleville. "He'd always say, 'Tell me what you need, and I'll get it.' It wasn't about him getting the recognition. It was about getting the job done. That's one of the things I appreciated most about Tom."

That's how Caviston, who was 62 when he died, operated all over town — behind the scenes. He was instrumental as a member of the Plymouth Ice Festival board in making that event international, getting Russian and Chinese carvers to attend.

He was a key member of the Colonial Kiwanis Club, helped out the American Cancer Society and frequently entertained residents at Opportunity House, the home for developmentally disabled adults.

Caviston was so instrumental in helping others that the Plymouth Salvation Army on Wednesday will unveil its first Tom Caviston Award to honor civic involvement.

"I'm so proud and overwhelmed by the thought that he'll be remembered that way," Nancy Caviston said. "He was not the type to see kudos, so I think he would be embarrassed. But he'd also be honored and he would love it."

Salem OKs rezone for JCI

■ In a move that could help one of Plymouth Township's biggest taxpayers move out of the area, the Salem Township Board of Trustees granted rezoning of property Johnson Controls is eyeing at Ann Arbor Road and Napier.

BY DOUG JOHNSON

Johnson Controls Inc. won a 4-2 split decision from the Salem Township Planning Commission Thursday night.

Saying that this was "a step forward" for Salem, commission chairwoman Paula Hornback was joined by three others voting yes on rezoning 367 acres of land at Ann Arbor Road and Napier.

Also voting yes were Michael Skinner, Meros Kaercher and Pam Sebort. Jim Kress and Sue Bejun voted no.

Kress and Bejun were critical of the plan during the four-hour meeting where the commissioners grilled JCI officials on everything from corporate ethics to pending cases with the Environmental Protection Agency.

Court gives Prose suit new life

The Michigan Court of Appeals has ruled that a $100 million civil rights lawsuit filed against the City of Plymouth by Plymouth businessman Tom Prose does have merit and should go to trial.

According to Juan Mateo, attorney for Prose, the May 9 ruling eliminated former Plymouth mayors Don Dismuke and Joe Koch, as well as former city manager Steve Walters, as defendants. However, Plymouth police Lt. Ed Ochal, former police chief Bob Scogins, former Community Crier owner W. Edward Wendover and his wife, Sally Repeck, remain as co-defendants.

The state portion of the lawsuit, as well as a similar suit filed in federal court, contends the city, along with the members of the police department and others, conspired to falsely arrest

Teachers endorse candidates

BY TONY BRUSCATO
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

The Plymouth Canton Education Association is attempting to be a major force in getting three candidates elected to the Board of Education June 10.

"We have 2,000 MEA (Michigan Education Association) members who live in the district," said Chuck Portelli, president of the PCEA. "If our members come out and vote, we can get the candidates we endorsed elected."

The PCEA, which represents more than a thousand Plymouth-Canton teachers, is part of the MEA 2A Coordinating Council, which also includes employee groups representing paraprofessionals and the custodial-maintenance workers.

On Wednesday, the council voted to endorse Joanne Lamar and Carol Saunders, both of Plymouth Township, for the two, four-year seats being vacated by trustees Susan Davis and Darwin Watts. The council is also endorsing Marcy Staley of Canton Township, who is seeking election to the one-year term. Staley has held the position since December, when she was appointed by the Board of Education when Steve Guile resigned after moving out of the district.

"We felt Lamar is a good supporter of the schools and will give a whole new perspective to the board," said Portelli. "We don't want the Board of Education to be a cookie-cutter board, in which they look and act the same."

"Saunders brings 40 years of public education experience," said Portelli of the former teacher and Starkweather Education Center adult education coordinator. "She knows the business end of education, and will be able to make educational decisions alongside educators."

"From an employee point of view, we felt comfortable with Marcy's (interview) answers, and she doesn't have an agenda," added Portelli.

All but one of the 11 candidates attended 20-minute interview sessions with members of the council, plus filled out written questionnaires, on issues such as board policies, tenure, charter schools, the district's budget and employee rights.

It's obvious the PCEA considers this an important election because of the all-out effort to get its membership to vote for its candidates.

"We believe it's an important election, and we'll send out mailers to the 2,000 MEA members who live in Plymouth and Canton," said Portelli. "We will also set up a phone bank to call our members on the Saturday before the election, and on Monday (June 10), the day of the election, reminding them to get out and vote."

"The PCEA relationship with central administration is a good one, and we don't want to go back to when Chuck Little was superintendent and we couldn't get information and answers. We were always battling," added Portelli. "We think these three candidates will help us get there."

Other candidates seeking election to the four-year seats include Richard Ham-Kucharski, Clifford Hill, Mark Horvath, Robert Nelson, Sailesh Patel, William Pratt and Phillip Sugg. Also seeking the one-year term is Debra Madonna.

Memorial parade

The Plymouth Memorial Day Parade is set for 7:30 a.m. Monday, May 27. It starts at Theodore and Main. The parade, which will move down Main to Ann Arbor Trail, then turn left and gather at the band shell at Penniman and Union, will feature a rendition of the Star Spangled Banner by the Plymouth-Canton Community Marching Band and a reading of In Flanders Field.

Featured speaker will be Michigan Air National Guard Brig Gen Carol Fausone. Following the general's remarks, there will be a rifle salute as a tribute to all veterans.

Participants are expected to include local elected officials and many Girl Scout and Boy Scout units from the area. The parade is co-sponsored by the Plymouth VFW Post 6695, Plymouth American Legion Post 112 and 391 and the Plymouth-Canton Vietnam Veterans Chapter 528.

Real estate workshop

For the first time in recent memory, several of the area's real estate professionals are banding together to offer a free, interactive public workshop on how to sell a home without a realtor.

For three hours Tuesday, residents of Plymouth, Canton, Northville and Livonia can learn about the ins-and-outs of the "For Sale by Owner" process. The workshop, from 6-9 p.m. at St. John's Golf and Conference Center, will cover a variety of topics ranging from assessing personal financial and tax situations to preparing, marketing and showing the home to ultimately closing the sale.

"The 'FSBO' process can seem completely overwhelming when taken en total," said Mark Savitskie, event coordinator. "We're here to help people break it down into something less frightening."

Wanted: Election Day help

BY ALICE ASHMORE
STAFF WRITER

The surge of growth in Canton has the township clerk's office scrambling for additional election workers.

There's no such worry, however, in Plymouth.

While Canton is scrambling to find about 50 more election inspectors for the August and November elections, the City of Plymouth is ready to handle the load.

"Actually, we're in pretty good shape right now," said deputy clerk Deborah Panagiotides. "We normally put about 10 people per precinct."

She said the city always has sign-up sheets available for people who are interested in serving as election judges.

In Plymouth, precinct chairs earn $145 for their service, and election inspectors are paid $110.

"We would like to get that increased," Panagiotides said.

Sandy Groth, Deputy Clerk for Plymouth Township said she is always on the lookout for election workers.

"Right now we have a list of about 150 inspectors, but the reality is that we are always looking for new inspectors," she said.

The township even has an application for inspectors posted on their website www.plymouthtp.org.

Groth said the job is ideal for retirees, stay-at-home moms and students who are age 16 and older.

Plymouth Township pays their election judges $130 per day, and the precinct chairperson receives an additional $25 and a co-chair earns an additional $15 per day.

"I would like to encourage people to become election judges," Groth said. "It's a good learning experience and a great way to serve your community."

Under a change in election laws, inspectors are not required to live in the community in which they serve, but must reside in the same county as the community," Groth said.

Canton Township finds itself looking for a lot more election workers. To qualify to be an election inspector, you must be 18 years of age, a registered voter in Wayne County, able to fluently speak and write English, and perform simple math calculations. Students that are age 16 and older are also able to serve, but they must be supervised by other inspectors.

"We're in need of about 50 more election inspectors for the August and November elections," said Terry Bennett, Canton Township clerk. "We have seven new precincts, and need 35 individuals for the August (primary) election and 42 for the November (general) election."

The job also requires a sense of dedication. "It's a long day," Bennett said. Election workers typically start their day at 6:30 a.m. and may work as late as 10:30 p.m.

An election inspector in Canton will make $125 per day, while a precinct chairperson, who has supervisory duties, is paid $145 per day.

Training for the job is required by all municipalities.

"In Canton Township we pay $20 to attend training," Bennett said. "Several classes are scheduled between now and the elections."

Plymouth Township pays $15 for training.

"We generally train the week before the election, one in the day and one in the evening to accommodate everyone's schedule," Groth said.

Bennett offered words of praise for Canton's election workers.

"We have a lot of dedicated workers we depend on. They provide a great service."

To contact the Canton Township clerk, call 734-394-5120, the Plymouth Township clerk can be reached at 734-354-3224, the City of Plymouth clerk's office number is 734-453-1234, ext. 225.

Tune time: Members of the Our Lady of Good Counsel Children's Choirs belt out a song during their "I Hear America Singing" concert Wednesday night.

Choir debuts 9-11 tribute song

They came, they saw, they sang. More than 180 voices of the Our Lady of Good Counsel Children's Choirs got together Wednesday with the University of Detroit Jesuit School Boys Choir and local Academy Award winner Pamela Conn for a tribute concert at OLGC.

Conn, a Plymouth native, composed a new piece in response to the Sept. 11 tragedies, and it got its debut at Wednesday's concert. The piece, titled Children of the Earth, featured arrangement by Mark Radeke and percussionist Chris Fricke.

"It was a thrill to hear the music come to life with the voices for whom it was written, right here in our hometown," Conn said.

The U-D Jesuit Boys Choir, under the direction of Cindy Stimpfen, joined the Counsellor's Youth Chorale (and alumni) and the Junior and Senior Singalongs in selections by Z Randall Stroope, George Cohen, Irving Berlin, James Mulholland and other composers.

State Rep. John Stewart, (R-Plymouth Township), led the ensemble in a rendition of God Bless America.

Symphony offers special on passes

The Plymouth Symphony is now offering a $110 "Early Bird Special" subscription passes for the 2002-2003 season until May 31. Each special includes a five-concert season subscription and a Pops 57 Concert Pass. The $110 cost represents a $30 savings.

The season includes the "Pastoral Pleasures" Opening Night (Oct. 12), which highlights guest composer and flutist Gary Schocker in a stunning performance of his work Green Places. The symphony also ventures into the monumental Mahler Symphony No. 1.

The PSO celebrates "Urban Voices" (Nov. 16) with the premiere of University of Michigan Composer Felicia Sandler's Rosie the Riveter and Gershwin's An American in Paris. Take a break from the winter blues and ring in 2003 with "Baroque Treasures" (January 11, 2003), a Canton Chamber Orchestra Concert of music by Baroque composers and a contemporary jewel from American composer Ellen Zwilich.

"Organ Mania" (Feb. 8) will inaugurate the new Our Lady of Good Counsel Church Organ and feature organist Dr. Michele Johns. Selected PCEP Middle School Orchestra musicians will return for their third Side-by-Side performance with the PSO. The season closes with concertmaster Juhana Athayde's performance of Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto on the PSO's Grand Finale "Troika! A Celebration of Russian Music" (March 8) including the luscious Shostakovich Symphony No. 5.

These programs are supported by funding from community contributors and the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs, a partner agency of the National Endowment for the Arts.

In addition to tickets for five symphony performances and a seat at the Ballgowns & Baseball-caps POPS Benefit (April 11), season subscriber benefits include substantial savings on and reserved seating for special event concerts (Nutmcracker & Pops), priority notification for all events, ticket exchange privileges and ticket insurance.

After May 31, season subscription passes will be available for $70 for adults and $60 for seniors and college students and do not include tickets to the POPS concert. For more information about the early bird special, individual concerts, sponsorships or volunteer opportunities, please contact the Symphony Office at 734-451-2112, e-mail plymouthsymphony@aol.com, or visit our Plymouth Symphony Web site at www.plymouthsymphony.org.

OVDA passes resolution dispelling annexation talk

By TONY BRUSCATO
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

The Old Village Development Authority, in an effort to make peace with city commissioners, unanimously passed a resolution Thursday night indicating it has never discussed Old Village being annexed by Plymouth Township, and doesn't support the idea.

However, despite their support for the resolution, there are indications OVDA board members Matt Cardwell and Peter Bunting may be removed from the board to which they were appointed. The two caused a stir last week when they discussed with township officials the idea of Old Village being annexed by the township because of what they consider the lack of attention by the city commission to Old Village.

Mayor Pro-Tem Colleen Pobur, along with commissioner and former OVDA liaison Michele Potter, attended the meeting in an attempt to dispel the notion that Old Village has been forgotten.

"For any resident of the city to suggest the city is neglecting the neighborhood known as Old Village is preposterous," said Pobur, after reading a list of Old Village improvements since 1998. "Every neighborhood in this city is important to us, and we continue to maintain that posture. We've been very concerned about some of these remarks that have been made. We consider them to be very confusing. This is a disruptive thing for the whole community."

Both Bunting and Cardwell insisted they weren't representing the OVDA in their conversations of annexation.

"For me personally, it's something that I'll continue to look at as long as it seems like there's anything there," said Cardwell. "Right now, I see a commitment out of the commission to Old Village, and that's what we're really looking for here. Nobody really wants to leave the city."

"This is just an option. Nobody is saying we're doing it," said Bunting.

OVDA board member Avis said the talk of annexation has harmed "this group, Old Village, and our relationship with the administration and city commission not knowing what their vote really means when they have an attitude that they would really like to pick up and move out of the city into the township."

Board member Catherine Doughty said that as representatives of the OVDA, when Bunting and Cardwell expressed opinions that are "at cross purposes with the goals and objectives of the board, and ultimately the City of Plymouth, then you either need to reconcile those views with the board, or resign your appointment."

There are no indications either Bunting or Cardwell will resign from the OVDA board. However, commissioners have voiced their concerns, both publicly and privately, about the lack of cohesiveness on the OVDA board. There are hints the pair might be replaced before next month's OVDA meeting.

As she left Thursday's session, Pobur indicated there will be evaluations of the city's boards and commissions, and those who are appointed to serve on them.

"It's important that the people who represent the city on boards and commissions have the city's best interest at heart," she said.

school, preferring getting high to learning

He came to Growth Works the same way a lot of kids do, after his parents got tired of his drug or alcohol use and his attitude, and issued an ultimatum. They told him to clean up his act, or be on his own.

Joe chose the former. Now 23 and a graduate of Western Michigan University, ask him if he'd be on that doorstep to success without Growth Works, and Joe's answer comes easily, and quickly.

"No," he said. "My drug and alcohol use got to the point where I had dropped out of high school. If I had continued, I'd never have re-enrolled. My parents said come (to Growth Works) or be on my own. I wasn't capable of doing that. I was a drug addict and an alcoholic. I didn't have the skills to do anything."

"Get help or get out" is a pretty typical way parents deal with drug abuse by their children. At least, Dale Yagiela has found that to be true in 30 years of dealing with the consequences. That's why most of the kids come through the door, resistant though they might be to the idea, at least at first. According to Yagiela, most of them start the program figuring they'll find a way to beat the system.

Resistant and recalcitrant at first, kids act out and try to disrupt the program. The more militant ones will try to get meeker clients to follow their lead, an act counselors quickly put to rest.

All about image

"It's important to get kids to recognize they aren't going to run the program," said Yagiela, Growth Works' first employee when the doors opened 30 years ago. "It's about their image. They have to decide early on whether they want the image of a recovering addict or the image of a thug."

According to Joe, there is a little part of every addict who recognizes they need help and want to change.

"What this place did, and what recovery does, is nurture that part of you," Joe said. "It's a rare case that someone does that on their own. Usually, it has to be some outside force that shows the addict how rotten life has become."

In group, the addicts get a chance to be with, and talk to, their peers. There's no single person really any different. They're all addicted to drugs and/or alcohol, and they all are struggling with recovery. They've worked hard on setting up a support system, changing friends and habits.

Growth Works is a voluntary program — even those referred by the legal system can leave — designed to get addicts to start changing their ways. They learn they can't still hang around friends with whom they "used," can't do the same things they did to get to that point to start with.

"They come initially guardedly and grudgingly," said Spitsbergen, the center's program director. "They think they can find a way around it, and we know that. We have to get a sense of how the kids think. (Then) You begin to change their associations."

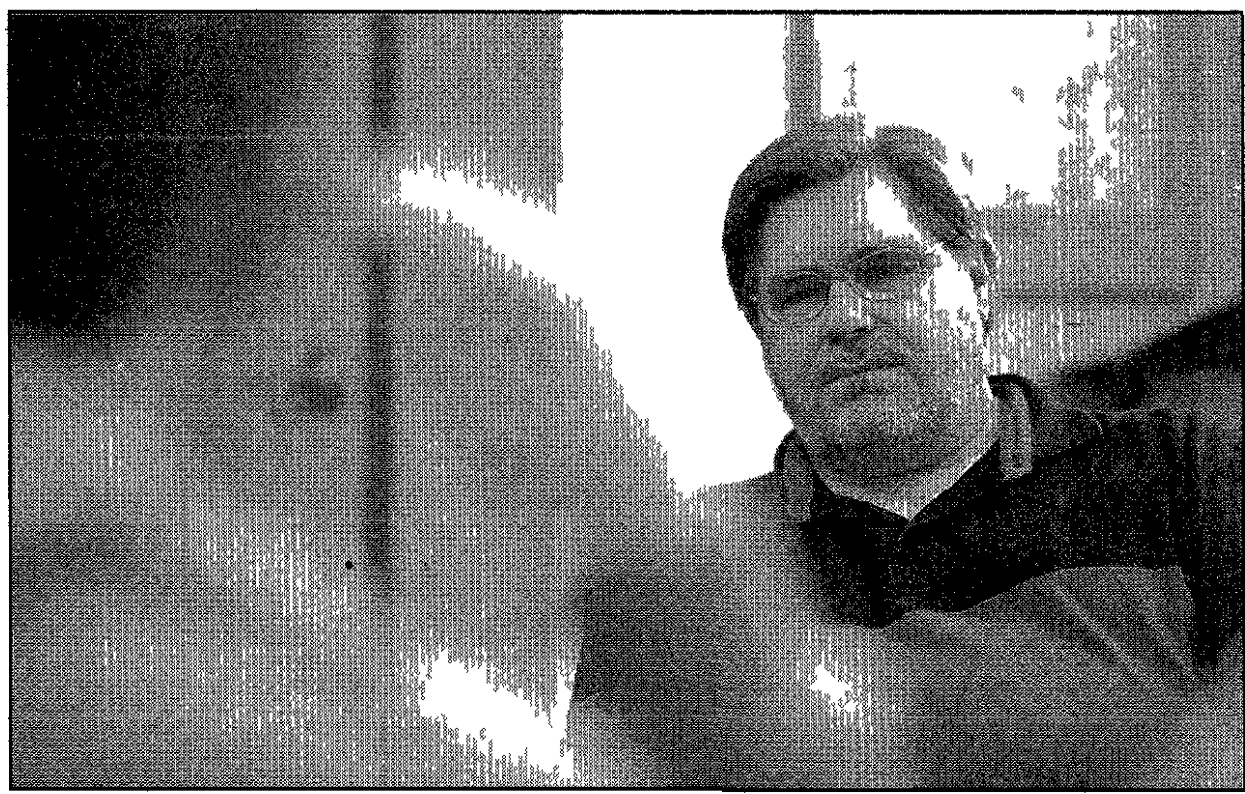

A new path

And get them to make new ones. In group session on this day, the six clients are all new friends. They do things together, they talk to each other. One offers another a place to stay if his mother moves. Others talk about sharing phone calls and internet messages.

It's a key asset of the group. "I think it helps because we're all kids here," said Justin Dean of Garden City. "I have people to hang out with and talk with who are going through the same things. It just feels good."

Not always, though. On this day, Lee has said something that angered Jeremiah, a 16-year-old from Garden City. Jeremiah had wanted to take time, and something Lee said upset him, almost to the point of not talking.

Almost. But the support system worked, and Jeremiah and his group-mates wound up getting Jeremiah's problem out in the open. He's able to express his feelings and, though he wasn't looking for it, got an apology from Lee.

"You have to really work at getting them in touch with their feelings," Yagiela said. "When you start getting remorse about the losses in their life — school, athletics, relationships — then you're moving forward."

They move forward pretty well, if statistics mean anything. Somewhere near 75 percent of Growth Works clients leave sober, and stay that way.

"It was real hard at first, because of course I didn't think I had a problem and I didn't want to be here," said Lindsay, a 19-year-old about to start her junior year at Eastern Michigan University who went through the program at age 15. "I realized it's not ever going to work my way. I finally got scared of where my life was at."

Joe recalls the daunting task facing him once he decided to get sober. It hasn't been all moonlight and roses. He credits

Growth Works with helping him learn some of life's hardest lessons.

"At first it's hard, because there are a lot of changes you need to make," Joe said. "Friends, places you hang out, you have to rebuild the relationships you've broken with family and friends."

"It's pretty hard to do at first," he added. "Getting sober is a lot harder than staying sober. (But) after you do that, it's a lot easier."

Arthritis Today JOSEPH J. WEISS, M.D. RHEUMATOLOGY. 18829 Farmington Road, Livonia, Michigan 48152. Phone: (248) 478-7860. CLAUDICATION. The medical community says intermittent claudication. This term refers to the experience of walking and feeling sharp pains in your legs usually your calves. The pain disappears if you stop or sit down for a few minutes. When you start walking again you do well for a half block or more then the pain comes back in the legs and you must stop again. What you are experiencing is claudication—the inability of the leg muscles to obtain the blood supply needed to continue activity. Resting ends the requirement for the extra blood supply as repose temporarily stops the need for muscle activity. Blood supply to the muscles is compromised as the leg arteries are narrowed by cholesterol deposits. You may mistake pain in the area of the knee or calf as coming from your knee joint and believe you are getting the arthritis changes that accompany old age. Your doctor may think you are showing evidence of the condition spinal stenosis which can give similar leg pain. However in spinal stenosis you do well climbing stairs, going up hill or riding a stationary bike. In contrast if you have claudication from narrowed leg arteries the same activities quickly bring on pain. Modern doppler equipment can confirm the diagnosis at a reasonable cost and with no discomfort to you. Treatment may be through diet or cholesterol lowering medications. A variety of surgical interventions are available also. Claudication is not a condition you must endure. Recognition is the greatest obstacle to cure. www.drjweiss.yourmd.com

There are five steps to dependency for teenagers experimental or fun use, regular use, rebellious use, uncontrolled use and full addiction

As teens progress through the stages of addiction, the warning signs become more apparent

- school grades drop
- hanging around different friends
- defiance to rules and responsibilities
- defensive attitude toward authority
- problems at school
- mood swings
- loss of energy and initiative
- disguising substance abuse
- decreased interest in normal leisure activities
- change in physical appearance and hygiene
- becoming more secretive and less communicative
- missing curfew, making excuses
- increased dishonesty
- isolation from old friends and family
- weight changes
- abusive behavior
- getting into trouble with the law
- family possessions missing
- old friends, family and school staff noticing the changes

Believing that kids will go to treatment programs on their own is a complete myth, Yagiela, of Growth Works, one of the largest teen substance abuse treatment programs in the state

"They end up here because they're crashing and burning and their parents are recognizing it," he said

About half of the clients at

Growth Works are referred by the juvenile justice system or the schools

Who is at risk?

Kids who are most at risk for turning to alcohol are those who spend a lot of time unsupervised spend most of their time "hanging out," rather than participating in constructive activities, those who receive little affection, attention and encouragement from their parents and those who have inconsistent, abusive or permissive discipline at home

Low self esteem, lack of social skills and family history of alcoholism are also factors that put a child at risk for alcohol dependency, according to information from "Pride Parent to Parent"

Parents aid prevention

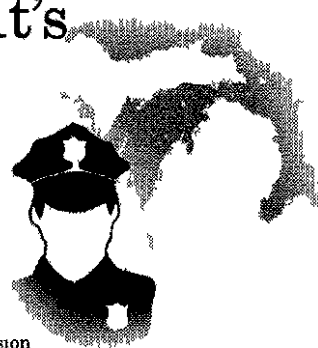

Parents can help prevent alcohol abuse in their children by fostering a warm, open relationship with their child Spending time together, talking about issues confronting their teen, setting and enforcing clear rules about drugs and drinking and teaching by example are ways parents can help steer their teens away from the dangers of alcohol

Teenagers will often show they do not want their parents to ask questions, enforce rules or be involved in their lives, but Rehse, from Starfish Family Services, said they actually do want those things

Firm rules and discipline can ease the peer pressure, said Rehse

"It helps keep them out of trouble," she said "And, it helps give them a way out (When turning down alcohol, drugs or tobacco)

Zero Tolerance: It's Michigan Law

Did you know?

- State law mandates that any alcohol whatsoever contained in the body of a person under 21 years of age is illegal
- There is no "responsible" drinking for people under 21
- A police officer can administer a breathalyzer any time any place to those under 21
- Refusing to take a breathalyzer test may result in driver's license seizure a $200 fine plus court costs and two points added to offender's driving record
- Any "under 21" violation will remain on the offender's driving record for seven years and any additional offense during that time is considered a second offense which carries higher fines and penalties

The law for people under 21

- 1 Driving a vehicle with any amount of alcohol in the body is illegal Consequences 30 60 day license suspension up to 45 days of community service up to $250 in fines $125 license reinstatement fee and substantial auto insurance rate increase or suspension
- 2 Purchase or possession of alcohol Consequences include $100 fine plus court costs court ordered community service substance abuse assessment at offender's expense loss of driver's license on second offense
- 3 Use of fake I D to buy alcohol Consequences include mandatory suspension of driver's license for 90 days substance abuse assessment at offender's expense substance abuse education and treatment $100 fine plus court costs and 90 days in jail

4 Transporting or possessing unopened alcohol in a motor vehicle operated by a person under 21 Consequences include auto impoundment for 15 30 days $100 fine plus court costs and 90 days in jail

5 Transporting or possessing open or empty alcohol container in the passenger area of a vehicle Consequences include $100 fine plus court costs and 90 days in jail substance abuse screening at offender's expense alcohol education or treatment at offender's expense

6 Allowing a person to drive your vehicle after they have been drinking Consequences include 90 days in jail and a $500 fine plus court costs

(Information provided by Hegura Programs Inc)

they can say, 'You know my mom, she would kill me'

Availability of booze

Alcohol is the most widely accessible drug for teenagers, said Yagiela It's common for teens to loiter outside of party stores and ask patrons who appear to be old enough, to buy them beer or liquor

Yagiela said teens often drive to party stores in Detroit, where they know the store owner will sell them alcohol even though they are not of age

Often, parents will provide teens with alcohol, usually under the condition that the kids not leave the house

Furnishing minors with alcohol is a criminal offense, punishable by a $1,000 fine and up to 60 days in jail In the event a person under the age of 21 should die as a direct result of the alcohol, the adult who purchased or provided the alcohol could be charged with a felony and face $5,000 in fines and up to 10 years in jail, according to Michigan state law

Hull wouldn't have it any other way He recalls the first Thanksgiving of his tenure, when another civic group decided late in the season they couldn't do baskets for families at Thanksgiving, and asked the Salvation Army to pick up the slack

Since the Army hadn't budgeted for the program, Hull wondered whether it could be pulled off Enter Caviston

"He said, 'tell me how much you need and I'll get it,'" Hull remembered "I think we figured out we needed about $3,000, and shortly after that, here comes Tom with more than enough checks to cover it He was the first one to step up and help"

Jim Jabara knew Caviston for nearly 20 years, having met through a mutual friend Jabara, also one of the area's most active civic supporters, sponsored Caviston into the Kiwanis Club, for which Caviston later became president

Three years ago, Jabara brought Caviston onto the Salvation Army Advisory Board, to which Jabara had belonged for more than 30 years Jabara had fought for some 10 years to get the board to meet at 7 30 a m rather than the 8 a m start time it had been using

That was apparently a little early for Caviston, who convinced the board to switch back to 8 a m at his second meeting

"He was a do-er," Jabara said of Caviston "He would grab the ball and run with it It was like instant friendship We were like brothers"

Nancy Caviston met her future husband in the mid-1960s, when both worked for the same company They dated for 18 months before Caviston asked her parents for their permission to marry her With permission granted, Caviston bent down on one knee and popped the question

And the marriage lasted 35 years It was full of memories and friends, many of whom will be on hand Wednesday night when Nancy accepts the posthumous award in her husband's honor, and helps hand out the first award named after him

"He was a humble man," Nancy said "He wouldn't have wanted all those accolades He just would have wanted the good work continued"

Prose three times for crimes he didn't commit
 "I'm not surprised at the Court of Appeals ruling," said Prose, a Northville Township resident "We think the federal case will go forward at the same time, too"
 In the first ruling, Wayne County Circuit Court Judge William Giovan ordered the two sides to proceed to trial, while denying a motion for summary disposition by attorneys representing the defendants, which would have blocked the lawsuit

 The Court of Appeals obviously agreed with Giovan
 "The trial judge said there was significant evidence and the lawsuit should go to trial since a jury could find that the police and the others could have conspired to falsely charge Dr Prose," said Mateo "We're very pleased, and confident the federal court will appreciate what two other courts have discovered"

 No trial date has been set in Wayne County Circuit Attorney Gus Morris, of Cox, Hodgman & Garmarco in Troy, who is representing the city, was unavailable to comment on the ruling and whether the city will appeal the ruling

 In March, Morris filed a motion to dismiss the state lawsuit
 In the $100 million federal lawsuit, U S District Court Judge John Corbett O'Meara denied Prose's motion for summary judgment in March, dismissing all claims by Prose

Instead, O'Meara granted all the defendants in the lawsuit summary judgment, which cleared them of any damages
 However, Mateo filed a motion to reconsider, and O'Meara has ordered both sides to present their cases
 The next step in the federal case, should O'Meara rule against Prose, would be an appeal to the U S Sixth Circuit

Court of Appeals in Cincinnati which Prose said earlier he would do
 In the lawsuit filed Sept 18, 1999, Prose claimed there was a violation of his civil rights when he was charged with disorderly conduct by Plymouth police in connection with his legal battle with Wendover sit well with Plymouth Township officials, including supervisor Steve Mann, who has waged a public fight to keep water and sewer from the development

 Both Canton and Plymouth township planning commissions have opposed the plan, as well
 "JCI will bring prestige to the township," Hornback said "I am an advocate of good development for Salem Township"
 Hornback pointed out that very few Salem residents had voiced objections to the proposal
 Kress was toughest on JCI, reviewing pending and past cases before the EPA
 "JCI will be a generator of hazardous waste," Kress said "This (EPA records) doesn't give me a warm feeling about JCI's commitment to cleaning up at its facilities and sites"

 JCI corporation council Patrick Nettesheim said that manufacturing was not contemplated at the Napier site, and that "we take these environmental obligations very seriously"
 JCI has a division that does use hazardous chemicals in the making of car batteries, JCI officials said
 "There will be no 'wet' processes on this site," JCI attorney Todd Fink said "We will meet or exceed all rules We will take every precaution"
 "We must assess the environmental impact of this plan" Kress said, noting the JCI operation will sit at the headwaters of the Rouge watershed

 Commissioner Bejin said she was not happy with any aspect of the plan
 "I have a huge concern about the waste water plant," she said "I'm not convinced it is the right thing to do We're just not ready"
 When told that the planned private sewage disposal plant was reliable and safe she responded sharply
 "I am not worried about that I am worried about what's in our ordinances You're a little early We don't have all our ducks in a row"
 She was referring to a growth management plan section that appears to ban private waste water plants

 JCI expects to hook up to the Detroit water system at Napier and Ann Arbor Road, to use the streams to handle storm water, and to use their private sewage plant as an interim measure until sewer lines become available
 Sewer service could come from the Ypsilanti Community Utilities Authority
 Bejin also said she is concerned about the multiple uses planned at that site and wanted the application to be more specific JCI attorney Fink wrapped up the JCI answers with a promise "The community will be very proud of this development We are here for the long haul"

 The planners' recommendation now goes to the Washtenaw County Planning Commission, and then to the Salem Board of Trustees, where final say resides
 JCI is a world-wide, Milwaukee-based manufacturer of car interiors, car seating, batteries and controls
 The company was founded 125 years ago as a maker of thermostats
 The firm currently has buildings in Plymouth Township
 JCI hopes to start construction this fall and move in by the following fall or winter

Help is available for problem drinkers

BY STACY JENKINS
STAFF WRITER

When the occasional, experimental beer at a wedding reception has progressed to sneaking around for a shot of alcohol every day, it's time to get help.

Teens who are heading down the road to alcohol dependency have many options for prevention, intervention and treatment in western Wayne County.

Experts remind teenagers and their families that drinking alcohol is often more serious than it being "just a phase" during the high school years. Recognizing the signs of abuse and knowing about the treatment options is critical in stopping the downward spiral.

Where to go for help

Growth Works, of Plymouth, specializes in adolescent alcohol and substance abuse intervention and rehabilitation. With an average 60 kids, from all around western Wayne County enrolled, Growth Works is one of the largest youth drug treatment programs in the state, said Dale Yagiela, executive director.

Growth Works offers three phases of out-patient treatment

Intensive treatment entails assessment and counseling for three hours, three days a week.

"In the early stage we attend to their denial and often it's confrontational," said Yagiela. "We get them in touch with the misery and pain their abuse has caused them."

As the youth progresses through treatment he or she may graduate to the next two phases which entail group therapy for three hours, twice a week, then for two hours, twice a week.

A separate program is tailored especially for parents, said Yagiela. The program entails group therapy for parents of chemically-dependent teenagers. The basics of addiction and ways to deal with it are topics addressed.

Treatment and rehabilitation is a timely process that can take up to two years, said Yagiela. The sustained sobriety rate for Growth Works clients is 55 to 75 percent, he noted.

The Westland-based Hegira Programs, Inc. operates a variety of substance abuse programs for youths ages 13-17. Hegira Programs offer services at seven locations throughout western Wayne County.

Intensive outpatient treatment is offered for adolescents at the Livonia Counseling Center, through Hegira Programs Inc. The highly focused treatment services include assessment, drug screening, individual, group and family treatment, community support and resources, individualized treatment planning and aftercare planning and referral.

Traditional outpatient services are offered for teens at the Livonia Counseling Center, Northville Counseling Center, Oakdale Recovery Center in Canton, Behavioral Diagnostic Center in Wayne, Romulus Help Center and the Hegira Westland Counseling Center.

Services include assessment and evaluation, 24 hour emergency access to services, individual treatment plans, community support and resources, drug screening and long term after care.

Hegira also offers prevention services, geared toward adolescents and teens. Drug and alcohol awareness programs, conflict resolution, tobacco education, summer camps, adult and parent groups and young mother assistance are covered by the Hegira Prevention Center programs.

Starfish Family Services offers counseling and treatment for adolescents, teens, adults and families through its Lifespan Clinical Services, located in Garden City, Canton and Livonia.

Treatment services include counseling for depression, anxiety and stress, relationship concerns, blended family and parenting issues, emotional, physical and sexual abuse, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, chemical dependency and after-care and crisis assessment and emergency stabilization.

Planning, theme, keys to graduation parties

It would seem this year we have had more than our normal amount of calls regarding graduation party information.

Many people are planning on producing their own parties but are seeking a little help from catering companies and restaurants to supplement what they are doing.

This year, I am also in the ranks of hundreds of parents planning a graduation party. Even with all my experience in party planning, there is certainly an element of stress when you are planning one in your own backyard.

I mean how many really special days do you get to plan for in a lifetime? Graduation is certainly up there with the top five. Planning is the key to success with your very special graduation day!

Clearing times and dates with friends and family well ahead of time is a wise idea.

Some fun ideas might include picnic foods to be served cold so that you can prep ahead and not be fussing over food instead of enjoying with your guests.

You may find many of your guests may arrive at the same time if the time frame is to narrow. If space is an issue, you may want to break up the arrival of your guests by having a larger window of opportunity for your listed party hours.

You may even consider sending out two sets of invitations, perhaps family and closes friends at the beginning and then school friends a couple hours later. Don't forget to get those invites out at minimum three weeks before your party date!

A graduation is a wonderful occasion to do something fun and creative. To achieve a good theme you do not have to be too clever. Take some time and talk to your graduate, if they like summer cookouts and being at the lake perhaps a beach party with some fun props like beach balls, inexpensive colored plastic sunglasses, fun tropical drinks in bright plastic cups with festive straws can accent the occasion.

Recipes, food ideas page B3

Of course it is important to have virgin varieties of beverages for your entire underage guest list. What are your child's interests? Theater, music, sports or accomplishments that your child has achieved can be a good starting point.

The theme could be as simple as playing off their high school or upcoming college colors. The first step is to pick an idea and build on it.

Food is certainly an important key factor in any event. Most menus will be influenced by other factors such as location, time of day, length of party and theme.

Often I will have a client tell me "Well it is just a drop by sort of thing and we don't need real food, just snack items." I don't know if I agree with all that.

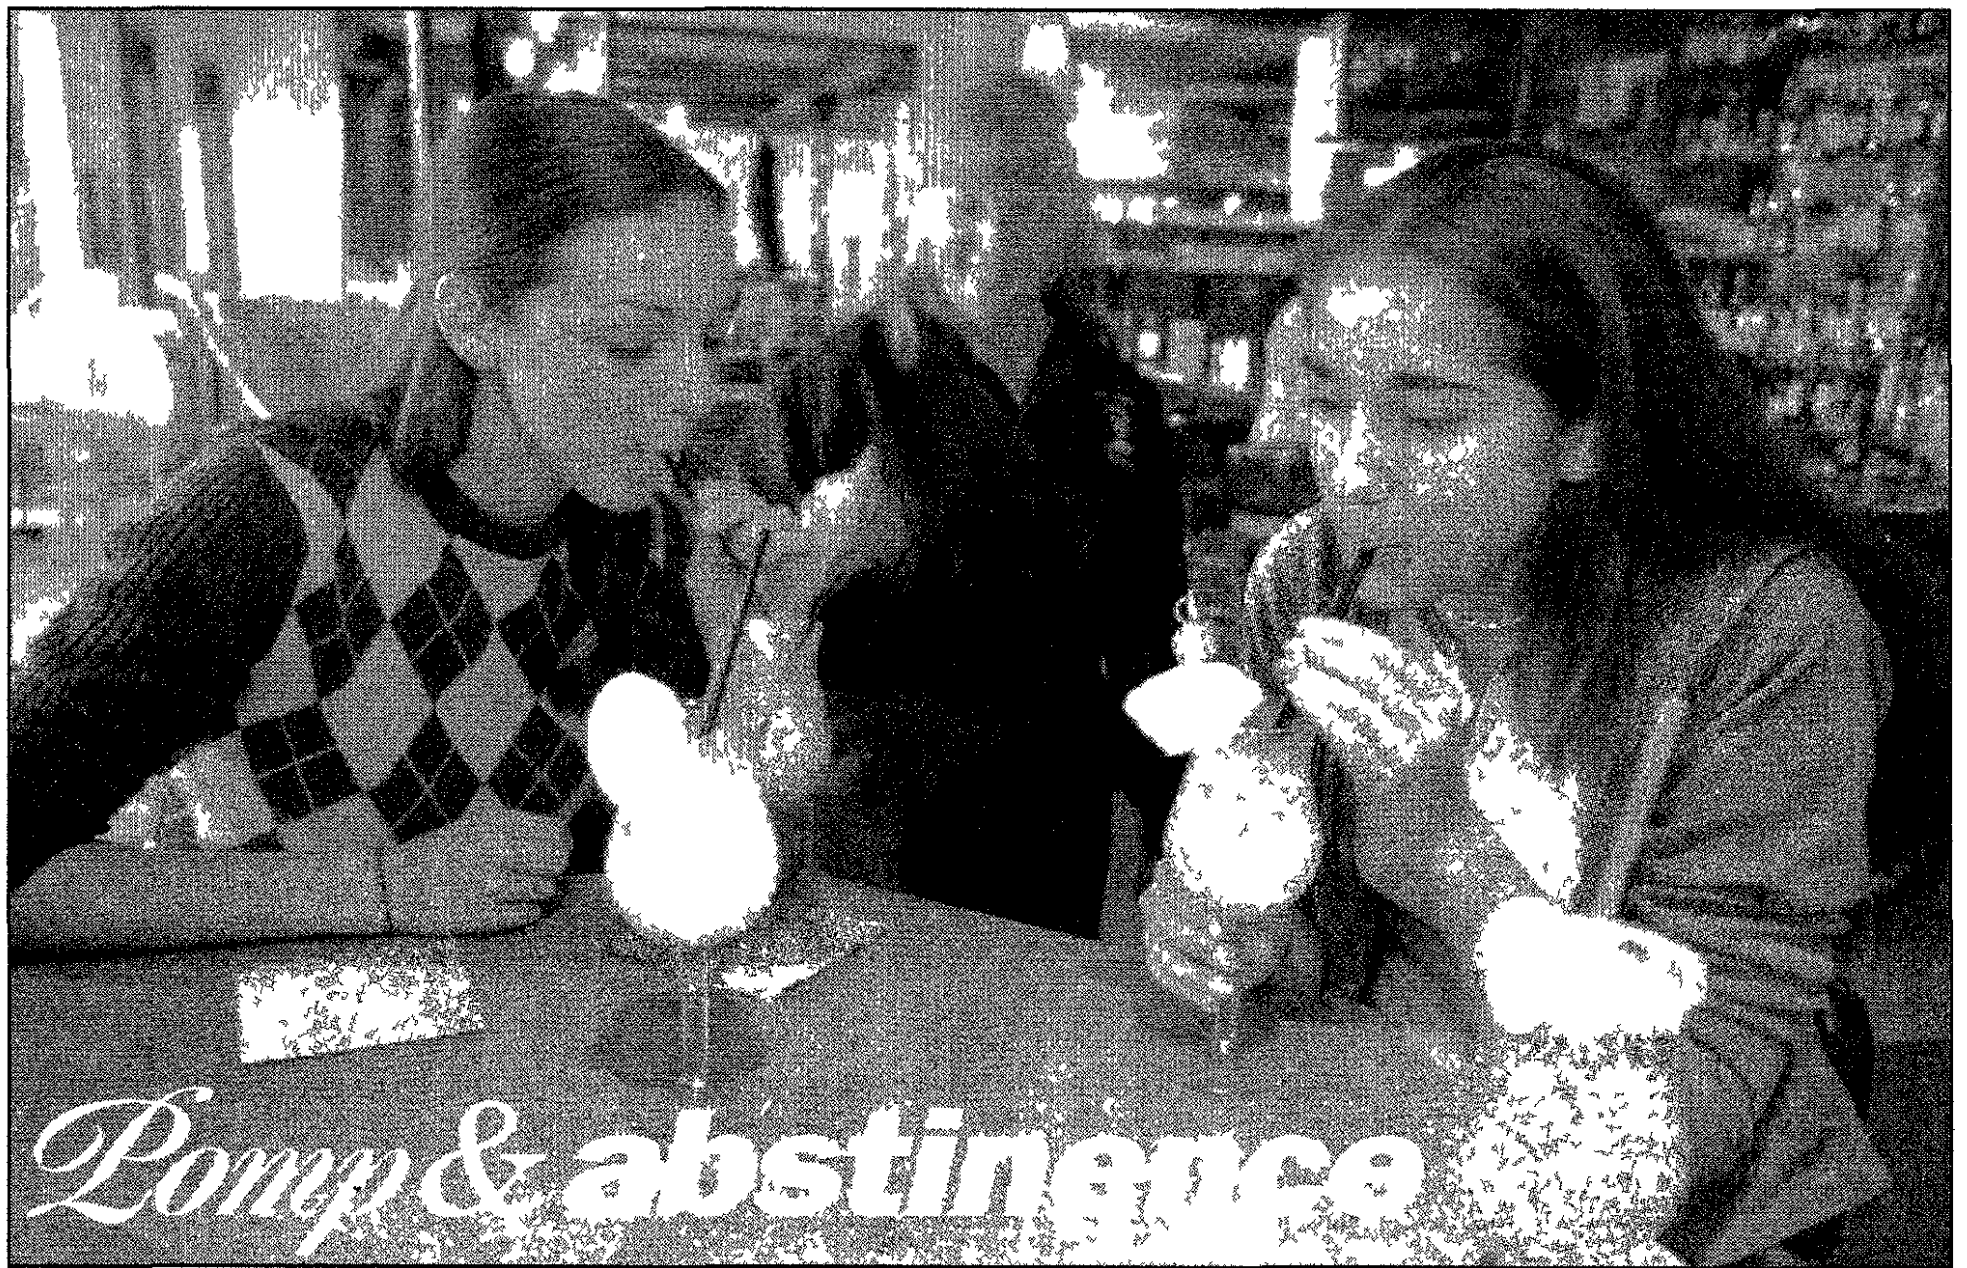

Unless you are specifying on your invitation, snacks, or dessert, I believe most people make the natural assumption that you will be serving food of substance that they might call lunch or dinner.

The last thing you would want is someone leaving your party hungry, especially if you are serving alcohol.

Some fun ideas might include picnic foods to be served cold so that you can prep ahead and not be fussing over food instead of enjoying with your guests.

You can always supplement whatever you make with a few purchased items to help alleviate work as well as

Alcohol not needed at these grads' parties

BY LANA MINI
lmini@oe.homecomm.net

Fresh squeezed lemonade with real sugar is a perfect drink for Libby Parks — the president of Garden City High School's Students Against Drunk Driving.

Even easier, a fresh bottle of water with a twist of lime is fine too. The 17-year-old student said one thing is certain regarding the beverages that will be served at her graduation party next month — only adults will be permitted to sip on the wine coolers. Parks has been involved with SADD since her sophomore year and plans to major in special education and psychiatry. Her feelings against drinking and driving are strong.

Her boyfriend, Tim Varner, is vice president SADD at Garden City High and there will be no alcohol at all at his graduation party.

At their school last year, about 50 students participated in SADD. This year there's at least 150 teens who pledge not to drink alcohol at prom or graduation parties. Still, that doesn't mean they won't have interesting beverages.

Smoothies, Slurpees, juice and sherbet punches — all without alcohol — were suggested by local students and chefs.

A graduation party is a celebration of K-12 success, but it's also a kickoff into adulthood. Emily Darnbrook, of Livonia, has grand plans for her future and she won't let alcohol ruin them, she said. She plans to attend Albion College where she'll major in political science. Darnbrook is SADD president at Farmington High School and said she and her family already discussed what they'll serve at her graduation party. "We're sticking with the basics too," Darnbrook said. "Pop and water, but I love Shirley Temples with cherry grenadine and Sprite, so maybe we'll do something like that too."

Darnbrook said she believes many students will stay sober at prom and graduation because this year fourth- and fifth-graders wrote the Farmington High School seniors pleading with them to not drink and drive.

"The letters really work," Darnbrook said. "And, we can have a good time without alcohol."

Keeping it fun

A refreshing strawberry daiquiri with real fruit — minus the booze — would please most students, said Redford Union High School senior Ashley Kinzel. She's not having a big graduation party, but an elegant dinner with family instead. A virgin daiquiri or soda suits her fine. Kinzel plans to major in secondary education and helping students say sober is an important issue for her, she said.

Liz Roberts hopes her family will rent a Slurpee machine for her big party.

It's better than alcohol of course, the Farmington High School student said, and it would add a fun twist to the family bash. If she can't convince her parents on that, she'll still create a unique event by making cherry cola for her guests.

"Not the canned stuff," Roberts said. "I mean real cherry cola with cherry syrup."

The ambitious student is already a law clerk and has brainstormed fun ideas for her party. There won't be a

The world is his dandelion

Vegetarian author/forager has no problem finding food

BY J.M. HIRSCH
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

The only time most people forage for food is when the cupboards are bare and they find themselves scrounging through the refrigerator, struggling to turn a can of peas, moldy bread and ketchup into dinner.

"Wildman" Steve Brill prefers to do it the real way.

This self-taught foraging expert heads back to nature daily to find his food. And when he goes out to eat, he isn't bringing back burgers and fries

He's feasting on plants most people consider weeds.

Now he's ready to teach you to do it, too. His new book, The Wild Vegetarian Cookbook (Harvard Common Press, 2002, $29.95), contains more than 500 recipes using plants you're not likely to find in a grocer's produce section. He lists more than 150 of such wild plants in detail.

Brill is talking about milkweed (tossing it with pasta), acorns (serving them refried, similar to beans), and purple-spore puffball (a type of mushroom he serves fried and baked with dairy-free Parmesan).

For Brill, the world is full of food. Most people don't realize that many of the plants they try so hard to rid their yards of not only are edible, but can be turned into delicacies with little effort.

Foraging for food may not be common in the United States, but Brill says people around the world rely on it for stocking their pantry with seasonal greens and other goodies.

"Anywhere but America," he said recently, talking by phone from his home in Mamaroneck, N.Y. "The Germans, the Italians, the Chinese, the Indians. Any culture where TV and entertainment aren't the only ways to live, foraging is still common."

Brill, who has been vegan since 1990, got turned on to foraging back in 1979. "I was bicycling, riding past a park in Queens, New York, near where I lived, and there were these ethnic Greek women picking something in the park," he said. "I asked them what they were doing and it was all Greek to me. But I came home with grape leaves and I was excited to have something I could drop of alcohol for anyone under age. For her adult relatives and parent's friends, however wine will be served.

Ice Blocks - Ice blocks and rings melt slower than traditional ice cubes. You can prepare an ice block days in advance. Simply use a container large enough to suit your needs. Loaf pans, cake rings and even mixing bowls can be used. Food coloring can be added to the water before freezing. Cleaned fresh fruit, slice or whole, can be added to the ice block or ring before freezing as well. Make sure the mold is solid and frozen throughout before using. To remove from mold, simply place the container in hot water until the ice is free. Carefully place ice block or ring in punch bowl (to avoid overflows).

"Maybe I'll make smoothies," Roberts said. "Mango, guava, strawberry. Something fun."

For those big parties on a hot summer day, a ceremonial bowl of punch served in a watermelon rind bowl can help create a light-hearted attitude. Marco Conte, of Marco's Fine Dining in Farmington, shared several recipes for readers to try. Conte - the parent of Roberts - mixes sherbet, ginger ale and fruit juices together in one big bowl of punch. In a fruit rind he mixes ingredients like pineapple juice, Seven-Up and fresh fruit bits.

Like her chef dad, Roberts seeks interesting ideas.

Fruity drinks are popular among teenagers. Darnbrook said a non-alcoholic strawberry daiquiri is as good to her friends as one containing rum.

"I think the taste is the same," she said. "I'm not opposed to adults who have an occasional drink - but I am opposed to drinking for the goal of getting drunk."

Her best friend, Eliza Hutchinson, who is the publicist for her school's SADD chapter, also plans to avoid alcohol during graduation.

For them, soda and water are just fine.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GRILLED CHEESE AND TOMATO PANINI WITH CRISPY APPLES

- 2 slices thickly cut sourdough bread or a 6 inch hoagie or submarine roll with some of the inside removed
- 1/2 cup shredded or sliced sharp Cheddar cheese
- 1/2 cup whole peeled, canned tomatoes drained and halved lengthwise (2 large tomatoes)
- 1/2 medium tart apple such as a Granny Smith, unpeeled and sliced thinly

Sprinkle half of the cheese evenly over one of the bread slices. Arrange the tomato halves over the cheese, covering the bread slices evenly. Top with apple slices. Sprinkle with the remainder of the cheese. Top with the remaining bread slice.

Heat a nonstick saute pan and spray lightly with vegetable oil. Place the sandwich in the pan and weigh the top down by pressing a plate over the sandwich, topped with a can. Saute over low heat for 3 or 4 minutes. Turn the sandwich over and repeat the process until the bread is golden brown and the cheese is melted. Slice into two and serve immediately.

No matter what food party plan you adopt for your graduation celebration it is important to be organized and work ahead. The checklist might include: Invitations, Rentals, i.e. tent, chairs, and tables, Beverages as well as equipment and ice needed to serve drinks, Food, be it catered or done at home, a pre-plan will keep you out of the kitchen and with your guests.

cook with." From there, Brill's fascination with found food flourished. But grazing on public property wasn't always easy. In 1982 he began giving foraging tours in downtown New York. Four years later, he made national headlines when he was arrested for eating a dandelion in Central Park. The charge? Removing vegetation. A month later the city dropped the charges and, instead of prosecuting, offered Brill a job as a naturalist, to lead teaching tours showing other New Yorkers the bounty that grows around them. Brill acknowledges that not everyone will be comfortable foraging. That probably has to do with the fear of eating something that will cause a slow, painful death. But, he said, common sense and a good field guide are all that are needed for safe and successful foraging. "Learn a small number of easy-to-recognize plants really well and you will build up your knowledge and do this safely," he said. "Don't pick near heavy traffic or near railway rights of way where they spray, and always wash everything first." There is one area where Brill's book, chock-full of tempting and unusual recipes, is lacking — there are no illustrations to help the novice forager differentiate between the yummy and the deadly. Coincidentally, he has written a field guide, Identifying and Harvesting Edible and Medicinal Plants in Wild (and Not so Wild) Places (Morrow, 1994, $21.95), which he recommends for this purpose. Not everything in Brill's book, which is organized by season, is unusual. Some of the recipes call for ingredients such as berries that can be found just as easily in grocery stores as in the backyard. For an easy early-spring dish that doubles as great weed control for the lawn, try Brill's curried dandelions. Be certain not to use dandelions from lawns or fields that have been sprayed with herbicides or insecticides. Dandelion leaves are best when they are very young. Bitter even then, they become distasteful as they age. The best leaves are harvested well before the plants flower.

CURRIED DANDELIONS

(Preparation time 25 minutes)

- 3 tablespoons oil (corn, peanut, sesame or olive)
- 9 cups common dandelion leaves
- 4 1/2 teaspoons chopped garlic
- 1 1/2 cups water
- 3/4 cups drained soft silken tofu
- 2 tablespoons mellow (light colored) miso
- 1 1/2 tablespoons lime juice
- 1 1/2 tablespoons curry powder

Heat the oil in a large skillet over a medium flame. Add the dandelion leaves and garlic, and saute for 10 minutes. Stir frequently to prevent the garlic from burning. Meanwhile, combine the remaining ingredients in a blender and puree until smooth. Add the puree to the skillet and bring the mixture to a boil. Reduce the heat to low, cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Makes 6 servings. For another wild spring edible, try cattails, which grow in marshes and wetlands and look like, well, cats' tails. Brill said the immature flower heads on cattails can be harvested when green in the early spring and cooked like corn on the cob. Because this comes out a little dry, he suggests serving it with a sauce. Try eating the tender white shoots in the following recipe, too.

CATTAIL FRIED RICE

(Preparation time 15 minutes)

- 1 tablespoon toasted sesame oil
- 1/2 cup peeled and chopped cattail shoots
- 1 cup shallots, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, chopped
- 3 cups cooked brown rice
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon chili paste or 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper

Heat the sesame oil in a large skillet over a medium flame. Add the cattails, shallots and garlic and saute for 5 minutes. Add the remaining ingredients and cook until the rice is hot. Stir frequently to prevent sticking. Makes 4 servings. Recipes taken from "Wildman" Steve Brill's The Wild Vegetarian Cookbook, Harvard Common Press, 2002, $29.95.

Try these party dips with corn chips

FRESH GUACAMOLE

- 8 ripe avocados cleaned and diced medium
 - 3 limes
 - 1 tablespoon red hot Tabasco sauce
 - 1 tablespoon fresh chopped cilantro
 - salt and pepper to taste
- Mix all ingredients together. Serve these fun summer dips with fresh oven baked or fried corn chips spritzed with lime and salt.

BLACK BEAN CORN SALSA

- 2 cups of cooked black beans
- 1 small diced red onion
- 1 teaspoon minced garlic
- 3 fresh tomatoes diced
- 1 tomato quartered and oven roasted

- 1 cup fresh corn oven roasted
 - the juice of three limes
 - 1 tablespoon white vinegar
 - 1 tablespoon cumin
 - 1 tablespoon salt
 - 1 tablespoon fresh chopped cilantro
 - pinch cayenne pepper
1. Prepare vegetables as directed above.
 2. Oven roast the corn and tomatoes. Sprinkle them with olive oil put under broiler in oven until golden brown approximately 3-5 minutes.
 3. Puree roasted tomato in food processor.
 4. Mix with remaining ingredients and adjust seasoning.

■ A plan for set up and presentation of the food. This is where having a theme idea will really help. For example, a barbecue could be draped in traditional gingham linen or checked clothes and wicker baskets. Even using the school colors and draping colored linen over empty boxes or stacked books to give you height and levels will make you look like a party planner extraordinaire! ■ Don't procrastinate! Get out there and buy beverages, plastic ware and other essential items early so you are not running at the last minute. ■ Bakery orders placed for special cake and/or pastries. ■ Don't forget about some things to pay homage to your proud graduate. Items such as a photo wall, display trophies and awards fun posters and such will add a very personal touch to your party environment. A simple centerpiece with different photos protruding from the centerpiece (with photo holder sticks) representing all ages of your graduate's life is always a winner! ■ Don't forget to take precautions and have a drinking policy in place. If you pre-plan and use a little creative thinking you are destined to have a graduation party full of wonderful memories! Chef Kelli L. Jong tells Planned Parenthood audience women's rights are being taken away

BY JUDITH DONER BERNE
SPECIAL WRITER

Feminist author Erica Jong remembers girls who disappeared from her New York City high school class into the wilds of New Jersey, $250 and a hidden pregnancy in hand

"Sometimes they came back bleeding. Sometimes they were hospitalized."

"That's why we must tell our daughters and our granddaughters what those days were like," she implored the more than 350 people attending Thursday's eighth annual Planned Parenthood fundraising luncheon at the Ambassador Hotel in Southfield. "One of the saddest things for our daughters is the amnesia of history they suffer from. We face the problem of undoing the ignorance of our own history."

The fund-raiser, held under tight security, comes at a critical time for Planned Parenthood of Southeast Michigan. A bill that threatens state funding for Planned Parenthood clinics has been passed by both houses of the Michigan Legislature and sits on Gov. John Engler's desk. "Once again we're under attack," said Planned Parenthood CEO George Stokes, a Rochester Hills resident. "Let your voices be heard and urge our governor to do the right thing and veto it."

Four politicians in Planned Parenthood's very tight corner were introduced. They were former Gov. Jim Blanchard running for the Democratic nomination for governor, state Rep. Pan Godchaux running for the Michigan Senate, Birmingham school board trustee Shelli Weisberg, running for Godchaux's seat, and David Fink, challenging U.S. Congressman Joe Knollenberg.

Jong is no Jon(g)ny come lately to Planned Parenthood. "Speaking for Planned Parenthood is a no-brainer," she explained. "I started donating to Planned Parenthood when I got out of college." She has also served on its advisory council.

She made literary and social history 30 years ago with her first novel, Fear of Flying. Written in 1973 at the height of the women's movement, it was an explicit account of a woman exploring the full range of her sexuality. She is the author of eight other books and seven volumes of poetry.

Today, it looks as if women have sexual freedom, but they don't, she told the audience. "We have an overt display of sexuality but behind it is deep sexual hypocrisy. Programs like Sex and the City and girls bearing their midriffs and wearing rings in their belly buttons give the cosmetic feeling of freedom. But the underpinnings are being snatched away."

"It's the unfinished revolution," she said. "All of you in this room are courageous pioneers. It's hard to fight for a cause that people think has already been won. Girls think they are already free. They don't understand that great forces are conspiring to take away the rights they already have."

She urged women who care about reproductive rights "to recapture the language" that Right to Life has stolen away. "You are the most pro-family people on the planet," she said. "You are advocating that a child come into the world as a miracle for parents who are prepared to be parents."

Jong described her own difficult decision to have a baby at 36 as a life-altering experience.

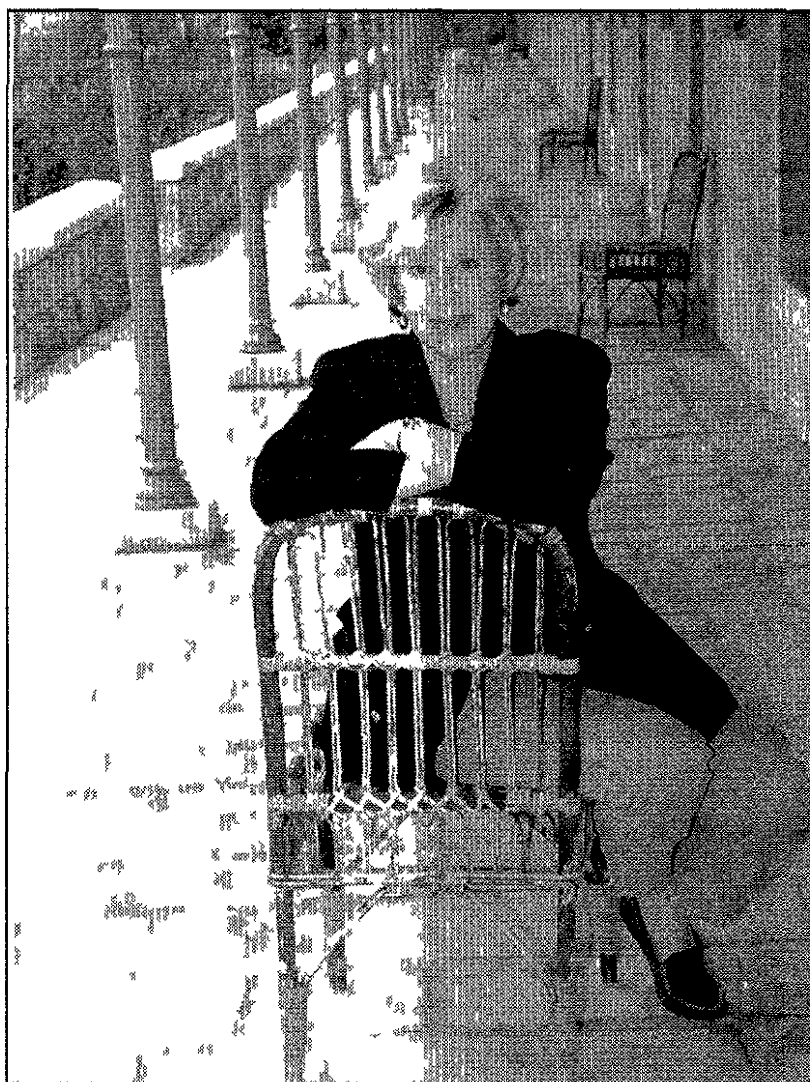

"Reproductive rights made me able to have a child when I was ready." Daughter, Molly Jong, 24, has written her own first novel, Normal Girl. It describes the battle of a young New York City woman to overcome too much money, promiscuity and drugs.

Although she was fighting a cold, Jong graciously stayed to chat with anyone who approached her and to autograph copies of her latest work, What do women want? Bread Roses Sex Power.

Planned Parenthood public affairs director Sandra Gillis found it "refreshing" that Jong gave "a hardball message at what she could have considered 'a women's luncheon'."

"I thought she did a wonderful job," said Naomi Foa from West Bloomfield.

"She's a little tamer than I expected," added Mary McHale, a Grosse Pointe resident. "I remember reading Fear of Flying in those wild times."

Fight for rights: "It's the unfinished revolution," Erica Jong says of the issue of women's freedoms

Adding a personal touch: Monte Nagler "lives" with numerous photographs in his home - his as well as many others. Here is one from Nova Scotia that proudly hangs in his house.

Living with photographs a gratifying choice

FOCUS ON

NAGLER

As students in my photography classes all know, I'm constantly stressing the importance of having photographs hanging in their homes or offices. I firmly believe that anyone with an interest in photography can greatly benefit from what I call, "living with photographs."

Begin with some of your own pictures. I know that all of you have some favorite slides or prints tucked that you can't wait to get out and brag about when ever a friend or relative stops over. Well, why not permanently display these favorites? Perhaps it's that dramatic sunset you just took on your last vacation or it's the shot of your child that captures that special expression of childhood delight.

Whatever the case, it's easy to get pictures up on the wall. Just take those prized slides and negatives to your photo dealer for the enlargements. Any 35mm shot will blow up fine to 11 by 14 without losing quality. Many dealers, local frame shops, even large discount stores will stock pre-cut mats and frames that

See related story page B7

You'll be proud of that special grouping of your favorite pictures and will be grateful you took the time to assemble them.

As your interest in photography increases, you'll find yourself wanting other photographs to live with. It may be that memorable shot you fell in love with at the art fair or that striking poster you couldn't resist at the bookstore.

Well, why not purchase them? Often a modest investment of dollars will pay off in big dividends of satisfaction.

You'll also discover that living with photographs will keep your level of photographic interest and excitement high. And having pictures to look at constantly will serve as a teaching device. The more you look, the more your knowledge and understanding of photography will increase.

People I know who "live with photographs" tell me how beneficial it is and how their pictures help keep the "creative juices" flowing and their appreciation of photography growing.

Try it for yourself. You'll be glad you did. "Living with photographs" is gratifying indeed.

Needle arts lovers can pocket guide

A pocket-sized reference guide for needle arts enthusiasts arrives this month at Michigan bookstores.
The Needleworker's Companion by Bloomfield Hills author, TV host and nationally known expert, Shay Pendray, covers the basics as well as advanced techniques of needlepoint and embroidery.
Interweave Press of Loveland, Colo., publishers of the well-indexed, spiral-bound book, designed it so that stitchers who want to keep its information at their fingertips can carry it in their needlework bags.
Author Shay Pendray produces and hosts Needle Arts Studio, seen on major public television stations since 1998, and on 87 stations of The Family Network. Her show covers step-by-step ways to create beautiful and useful needlework art, from knitting and crocheting to needlepoint and embroidery. The show appears at 7 a.m. Saturdays on WTVS, Channel 56, and 2 p.m. Fridays on WFUM-TV, Channel 28.

The show's popularity is a reflection of families' growing interests in crafts work under the stay-at-home, cocooning trends in post-9/11 USA.
Needlework triggers the body's relaxation response, says a recent study by the Mind/Body Medical Institute at Harvard Medical School.
They discovered that the repetitive motion of knitting, crocheting and embroidery lowers blood pressure and heart rate.
Pendray bases her new book on 30 years of expertise and insights. It contains more than 200 illustrations and step-by-step instructions.

The author has owned Needle Arts, Inc. in Dearborn for the past 30 years. The full-service retail store specializes in needlepoint, threads and Japanese embroidery.
The book is on sale in the craft sections at Border's, Barnes & Noble, and Waldenbooks as well as through needlework or craft stores. It can be ordered by phone at 1 800 813 3103 ($19.95 plus a $5.50 shipping and handling charge).

DIVERSIONS

Haunting story grabs you like nightmares do

The Life Before Her Eyes by Laura Kasischke (Harcourt Inc $24)

BY VICTORIA DIAZ SPECIAL WRITER

The Life Before Her Eyes is the kind of book that rivets you to its pages as you read, then haunts you after you have closed its covers

VICTORIA DIAZ

Its language and Chelsea author Kasischke's powerful prose are perhaps the man attraction (This is evident not just on each page, but in almost every paragraph or sentence)

In addition her ability to tell a briskly paced story, her talent for painting arresting characters, and her sensitive perceptions of the human condition all combine beautifully to make Kasischke's book a literary jewel

The story begins in a rather unlikely spot - the ladies room of a Midwestern high school. Two best friends, Maureen and Diana, are doing the things that best friends often do together: giggling, gabbing, sharing a mirror

Suddenly, they hear strange sounds outside in the hallway. Horrified as they realize that a massacre is taking place in their own high school, the girls are in each other's arms when a boy named Michael Patrick pushes open the door of the room and swaggers in, brandishing a gun. Kasischke makes us experience that gun. We can see it, up close and personal. And before this scene is concluded, we know its sulfur and oil scent, too. "Which one of you girls should I kill?" the boy asks, pointing the gun at each by turns. "I'm going to kill one of you which one should it be?"

Here are Blue Moon ice cream, school cafeterias smelling of pizza and steamed carrots, classrooms scented by the humid, private alcoves of the human body, the water in the school drinking fountain nauseatingly warm, like human fluids' houses trimmed in 'gingerbread' and adorned with pretty wicker furniture

Soon, we find ourselves in a small town not unlike Ann Arbor

Diana is living in a storybook-pretty house on a street called Maiden Lane Living with her are her loving husband, a college professor, and their small and lively daughter, Emma

Diana is a fit, fine, 40-year old 'soccer mom.' She is also an artist of sorts who teaches at a local community college. On the surface, her life seems to be just about as good as it gets

But it isn't long before we are reminded that surfaces can be highly misleading. Underneath, something is very wrong and strange here. The perfection itself seems odd and wrong somehow. We can feel that in our bones. Diana seems to feel it in her bones, too. Only she's not altogether sure why. And neither are we - not in the beginning, anyway. Kasischke's format twists, moving us from the present day to 20 years earlier to the present day and then back again. And because of her exquisitely careful attention to detail, each turn feels vaguely dreamlike and reflective, though utterly convincing. In fact, each seems to grab at us in the way that nightmares or visions reach out and grab

Here are Blue Moon ice cream, school cafeterias smelling of pizza and steamed carrots, classrooms scented by the humid, private alcoves of the human body, the water in the school drinking fountain nauseatingly warm, like human fluids' houses trimmed in 'gingerbread' and adorned with pretty wicker furniture

Here is a nun, wearing a traditional black habit. "Only her small pale hands and her powder white face could be glimpsed underneath it. The illusion was of 'bodilessness'."

Though this is a serious story about the nature of evil and death, The Life Before Her Eyes is ultimately, and in a very real sense, a celebration of life. It's a fine book to read during any season, but most especially the present one

N.C. county library bans Blair Witch Project video

(AP) - Henderson County's library board has removed The Blair Witch Project from its collection the first time in 12 years that the board has banned a book or film from its shelves

'It was very poorly done and I found nothing of interest in it at all.'

Maxine Mays - Henderson County library board member

While the vote to remove the critically acclaimed movie was unanimous, two members of the board abstained

A committee made up of board member Maxine Mays and library staff members Kate Conlon and Brenda Hind reviewed the film. Mays was one of the two board members who abstained

Though Mays said she and the two library staff members who reviewed the video did not particularly enjoy it, they felt it should remain in the library because of its popularity

'It was very poorly done and I found the excessive use of

I found nothing of interest in it at all," Mays said. "The point is, why do I get to say what other people can see?" she asked board members, who responded that she was elected as a board member to do just that

In defending the decision, board member Stan Shelley said the film is offensive because of its repeated use of obscene language

'I found the excessive use of vulgar language to be objectionable. Shelley said "I do not think it should be in the library."

Board members agreed that they did not have enough reasons to keep the film in the library but did not say who initiated the complaint against the movie

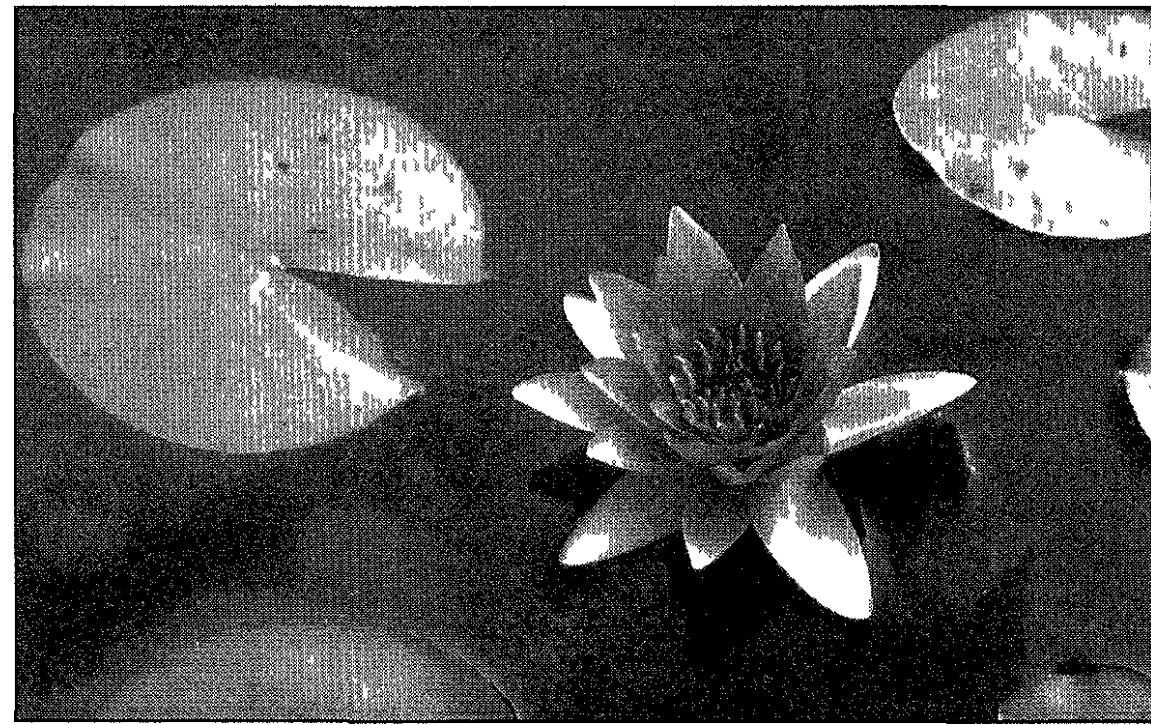

Since Aug 11 2000, The Blair Witch Project has been checked out 69 times, library director Bill Snyder said. The movie is rated "R" and is about three student filmmakers who in October 1994, disappeared in the woods near Burkittsville Md, while filming a documentary about a local legend, the Blair Witch'

The book of the same name will remain in the library, Snyder said

Water wonderland

Aquatic addition: A water garden was recently installed at Wonderland Mall in Livonia by Elegant Environments Inc of Brownstown. The garden, measuring 8 by 11 feet, is complete with a variety of eight different aquatic plants and five large, fancy-tailed goldfish - one of which has been named Pinky by some of the local children because of the pink spot on its head. The garden features a two-drop waterfall that runs at a rate of 2,700 gallons an hour and can be heard from up to 50 yards away. It took about 24,000 pounds of material and 46 man hours to complete the project.

Nagler on exhibit

Laurel Park Place in Livonia will host an exhibit of Observer & Eccentric photo columnist Monte Nagler's art from May 28 to June 11.

An artist reception will be 6-9 p.m. Friday, May 31.

Monte Nagler began photographing seriously after studying with Ansel Adams.

"It was during that period of intensive work that I realized that making photographs is a way to experience beauty instead of just looking at it," Nagler says. He believes that photographers should communicate feelings that are inside them. Through their photographs, a photographer should be saying "This is what I saw and felt and I'd like to share that!"

Nagler's photographs, which have won numerous awards, are found in many private and public collections including the

Detroit Institute of Art, the Center for Creative Photography in Tucson, The Brooklyn Museum; Nikon Int., The Ford Motor Co., General Electric Corp., Daimler Chrysler Corp., General Motors Corp., BASF Corp., Compuware and IBM Galleries and agents throughout the country also represent his photography.

Nagler is a noted writer, lecturer and teacher of photography. He has conducted many classes and seminars throughout the states. The nationally syndicated photography columnist is also the author of How To Improve Your Photography Vision and Statements Of Light.

Laurel Park Place is at Newburgh at 6 Mile (East of I-275) in Livonia. Hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday - Saturday, and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday. Nagler will be in attendance from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. daily.

BOOKS

Familiar friends fill new children's books

BY SAMANHTA CRITCHELL
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

Young children are drawn to the familiar. They like to eat the same foods, sing the same songs and wear the same shirt as often as their parents allow.

They also can't get enough of their favorite characters. Kids will read about a character, then watch him on television and then take the stuffed-animal version to bed.

Popular characters featured in new books include Bob the Builder, the Rugrats and Paddington Bear.

Paddington expands his appreciation of the great outdoors - and of his neighbors - in Paddington Bear in the Garden (HarperCollins, ages 3-8, $12.95). The story, in which Paddington even takes off his trademark red hat as he works up a sweat gardening, is by Michael Bond and illustrated by R.W. Alley.

Paddington then is forced to think on his paws after his marble gets mixed with the cement at a nearby construction project. His creativity pays off in the form of the most beautiful rock garden he and the National Garden Day judges have ever seen.

Biscuit, a golden-colored puppy, has two fun-filled days in Biscuit Meets the Neighbors and Biscuit Goes to the Park (HarperCollins, ages 2-6, $4.95 each) by Alyssa Satin Capucilli, with colorful illustrations by Pat Schories.

Biscuit and his pal Daisy the kitty roll out the welcome mat in the Neighbors story. They also dig up the yard as they fetch flowers for their new friends.

In the Park story, Biscuit and Puddles his scruffy sidekick, decide they'd rather chase butterflies and kites than the baseball they brought with them.

Barney, the purple dinosaur, is featured in four new books, including Going to My Big Bed (Scholastic, ages 1-4, $5.99), which is part of the Little Lessons series. In the story, Barney tucks his friend Emily into her big bed for the first

Afraid that she won't be the center of attention at her school's Career Day, Angelica tells her Rugrats pals that her parents are spies in Secret Agent Dad (Simon Spotlight, ages 3-7, $3.50). Angelica makes sure she's within earshot of her classmates when she asks her father on her makeshift shoe phone, "The Secretary of Steak says Mommy's on a special spyment right now in Tim-Buck-Tooth?"

By the end of the book, by Sarah Willson and illustrated by the group at Idea Plus Design Works, only Angelica's rival Susie figures out the truth.

Aspiring carpenters can get a head start with new Bob the Builder board books in the shapes of a saw and hammer.

Bob wearing his signature yellow helmet, makes a picnic table and bench where he enjoys his lemonade in Bob's Busy Saw and in Bob's Busy Hammer, he has a whole house to build (Simon Spotlight, ages 3-6, $5.99 each).

The Chubby Puppies that kids might know from the toy store are now starring in their own series of books. Springtime in Chubby Town and Summer Picnic (Scholastic, ages 4-8, $3.50 each) introduce the plump puppies in tales centering on seasonal fun. The stories by Olivia Barham are illustrated in a curvy, colorful style by Cary Rillo. Other titles featuring familiar faces include:

■ Clifford Goes to Dog School (Scholastic, ages 3-8, $3.95), written and illustrated by Norman Bridwell. Clifford, learns he's not quite cut out for obedience lessons.

Also Clifford's Busy Week ($3.50), in which Clifford and Emily Elizabeth retrace their steps looking for Mr. Squeaky, Clifford's toy mouse.

■ Good Night, Dora! (Simon Spotlight, ages 3-6, $5.99), written by Christine Ricci and illustrated by Susan Hall. Dora the Explorer says goodnight in English and Spanish to all her friends in the neighborhood.

■ Magenta Gets Glasses! (Simon Spotlight, ages 3-7, $3.50), written by Deborah Reber and illustrated by Troy Dugas. By the end of the story, Magenta, from the Blue's Clues series, clearly sees that going to the eye doctor and getting glasses aren't so bad.

■ Baby Blue's Clues and Faces and Feelings (Simon Spotlight, ages 1-3, $5.99 each) encourage infants to explore their bodies and emotions.

■ Maisy's Fire Engine and Maisy's Train (Candlewick, baby preschool, $4.99 each) written and illustrated by Lucy Cousins.

Maisy the mouse rides in high style no matter where she's going. In the first book, she rescues a cat stuck on the roof, and in the second, she's off to the country.

TRAVEL

Hawaii's a heavenly destination, but Maui's the best

BY THE THREE OI BAGS
SPECIAL WRITERS

First, the bad news, "you have to leave to come back home." That's the answer Tom and Wendi Sparkman, former Livonia residents who recently moved to South Lyon, gave in unison, when asked if there was anything at all they did not like about Hawaii.

Their introduction to Hawaii was in November of 1997, when they honeymooned in Maui. Since then they've gone two additional times, and are packing their bags for trip number four, this month.

The Sparkmans like the island of Maui best, and they're not alone. According to Wagonlit Travel in Plymouth it's the number one island destination in the world.

Maui has an ideal combination of lush scenic nature, plenty of sporting opportunities, ideal weather conditions and great island entertainment.

Tom and Wendi Sparkman have lots of insider tips about Hawaii, and fortunately for us, they're happy to share them.

According to Tom, everyone should experience the road to Hana "it's one of the most beautiful roads in the world," he said.

"Driving in Hawaii is like having your own travel channel - the windshield is a big TV," he added.

"Don't stop at Hana when you take the road to Hana" cautioned Wendi. "Some people get to the city of Hana and think its time to turn around, but the Seven Sacred Pools are just past Hana."

"The problem is, you sign rental agreements saying you can't go all the way around well you can go to the Seven Sacred Pools. That's actually the turning around point."

Depending on the time of year, the pools are varying degrees of fabulous.

"When we went in November, every single one of them was full of water," said Wendi. "People were swimming in them, and the plants were lush."

"Don't expect Hana to be like Las Vegas, either," warned Tom. "It's just a little town. The road is the attraction."

The Sparkmans encourage

Travel tips

- Take a video camera.
- Consider which time of year will accommodate activities you want to participate in.
- Check the internet for package deals.
- Expect to pay about 25 percent more for everything on the island during whale watching season.
- Scuba dive at Black Rock (near the Sheraton, on Maui).
- Don't rent scuba equipment at the beach. Go into the village and save big.
- Plan on at least 10 days for your trip (two days dedicated to travel).
- Take the helicopter trip at least once.
- Don't limit whale watching to charters. Try any beach you see people gathering. (Charters do have fun amenities, however.)
- Don't visit more than two islands during a two-week trip. Too much time is wasted boarding airplanes, renting cars and checking in and out of hotels.
- Use lots of sunscreen, especially when snorkeling. Ten minutes in Hawaii's sun is equal to one hour of Michigan's.
- Take the road to Hana. Purchase the audiotape to hear directions to important stop off points.
- Don't expect a lei to be placed on your neck unless your package specifically promises that. (But, you can purchase one for about $10.)
- Leave formal wear home. Dress is casual. Shorts and a polo shirt is the perfect outfit.
- Attend a luau, in spite of how "touristy" the locals say it is.
- Watch locals windsurf. (Maui is the windsurfing capital of the world.)
- Don't surf at locals only beaches. However, you are welcome to watch the locals there.
- Get to know locals and ask them for tips about what to do.

travelers to stop at the Shell gas station just before the road to Hana to purchase a cassette tape that walks travelers through the most scenic spots.

The tape includes vital details, like "stop at mile marker 13, pull over 13 feet, walk back and you'll see a 100 foot waterfall," said Tom.

Without the tape you might drive right by some spectacular sight, and wonder what the big deal about the road to Hana was.

In addition to soaking in the natural beauty of the island, there are a number of other activities to enjoy. Take for example golf.

"It's a golfer's paradise," said Tom. "Every hole you're on is like a signature hole. There are whales jumping in the background on one hole. There's a move star on the next hole. It's just a crazy place."

Speaking of whales jumping whale watching is one of Maui's biggest attractions. Excursion boats take tourists out into the ocean and stop near mating prides. However, the Sparkman's witnessed a full breach, (a whale jumps entirely out of the water, does a complete flip and splashes in, backside down) while walking along a private beach.

"We just got off the road, and sat on a tree that had fallen down to watch the whales," said Tom, grateful for the experience. "Some people go there all the time to see whales, and never see a full breach."

However, if parasailing is your passion, skip the whale season (late December through early April), because parasailing isn't done during whale watching season.

"You can't be going with the boat and then have to stop for a whale," explained Wendi, who was hesitant to parasail at first but now considers it one of her fondest memories. "I was petrified. The only reason I went up was because they let us go tandem (together). It was awe some."

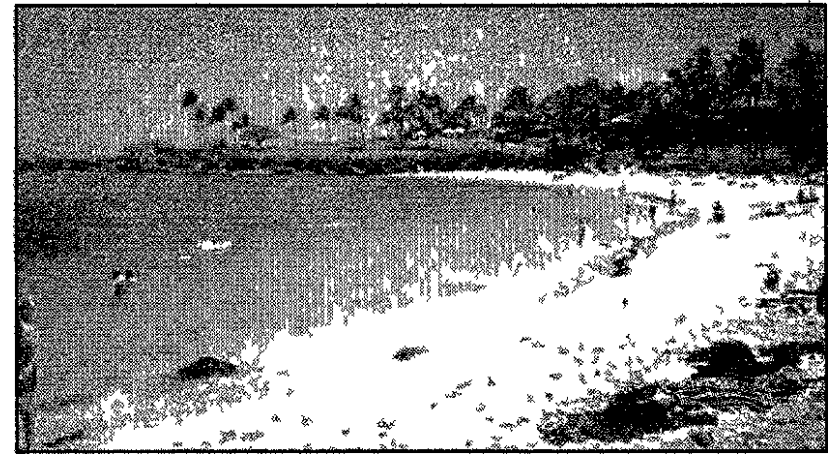

The island is home to some of the most famous restaurants in the world, including Longhi's, recommended by Al Michaels, of ABC Sports, as the place to request your last meal from, if you ever wind up on death row.

In addition to fish so fresh, "they'll tell you the name of the guy that just caught it," the Sparkmans urge travelers to try Longhi's Chocolate Soufflé.

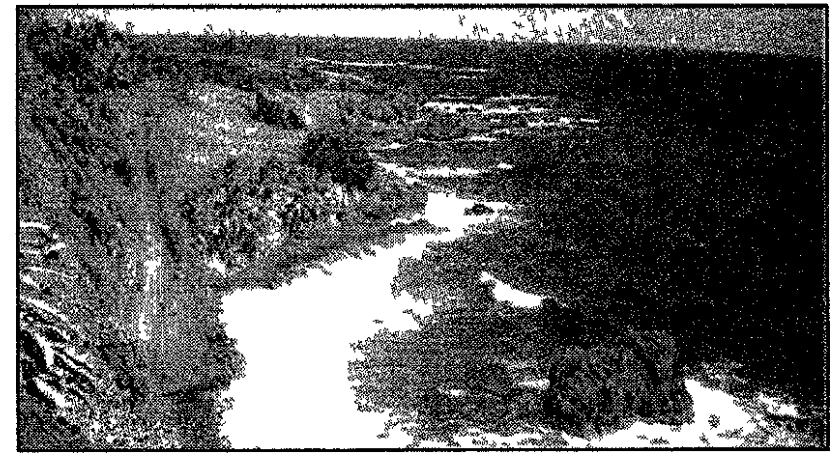

"It's to die for!" said Wendi. "You have to order soufflé a half hour before you want it, because it takes that long to prepare," said Tom.

The Sparkman call Hawaii "heaven on earth." Now, if only there were no return flights.

Pretty drive: On the road to Hana, you'll see lots of scenic spots including this beach.

Beautiful beach: Kapalua Bay Beach on Maui is America's number one beach.

Bryan Kay, a catcher at Siena Heights from Plymouth Canton HS, was also honorable mention all-conference.

■ The season ended early for Ben Tucker, a pitcher at Kalamazoo College from Plymouth Canton HS, thanks to an elbow injury. But Tucker still made his mark for the struggling Hornets.

Tucker, a junior right-handed pitcher, finished third in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association in earned run average at 2.49. He had a 1-2 record in the MIAA with 24 strikeouts in 25 1/3 innings before his season ended prematurely, he was 3-2 with a 1.60 ERA overall.

Rocks still best

Salem finishes in 4th, Canton is 5th in WLAA

North Farmington's last Western Lakes Activities Association Tournament in boys tennis had the same result as the previous five.

The Raiders went out as champions Tuesday by winning their sixth consecutive title on the Livonia Stevenson courts.

"Considering we're moving to the OAA (Oakland Activities Association) next year and this was our final conference tournament, the guys wanted to go out with a North Farmington victory," coach Mark Shenton said.

The Raiders scored 26 points, well ahead of second-place Northville (21). Stevenson was third (17), followed by Plymouth Salem (14) and Plymouth Canton (11). See final results.

Though they had a number of players to replace from last year's team, the Raiders managed to go undefeated through the WLAA dual-meet schedule.

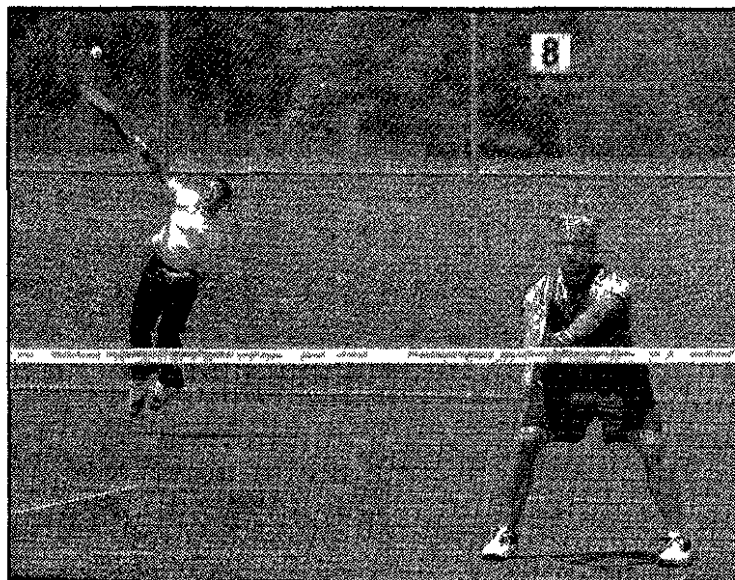

"The new people who filled in spots in the lineup stepped up and won matches, and the returning players, most of whom are in different spots, were very successful," Shenton said.

North dominated the singles flights, winning three of the four championships, and freshman Mike Kaufman was a semi-

North knocks out Salem; Agape wins

North Farmington needs one more win Monday to clinch the Lakes Division softball title in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

The Raiders put themselves in position to win the championship for the second time in three years Friday with a 5-2 victory at Plymouth Salem.

North improved to 7-2 in the division with one game remaining at home against Westland John Glenn. The Raiders are 21-7 overall. Salem and Walled Lake Central have three losses apiece in the division.

Beth Danielewicz pitched a four-hit victory and was 3-for-3 at bat with a double and a run batted in. She struck out nine and walked one.

Maura Kessler was 2-for-2 and scored two runs for the Raiders. Emily Jaffe hit a two-run single, and Alissa Melvin chipped in a hit and an RBI. Brynn Allen, the courtesy runner for Danielewicz, scored two runs.

"The girls were really focused today," North coach Dave Brubaker said. "We executed sacrifice bunts and we got some key hits with two outs that drove in runs.

"That told me the girls came ready to play and were focused on what they had to do."

Jill Posler pitched a complete game for the Rocks, allowing seven hits and six walks. Salem (14-9) had one hit each from Alycia Murawski, Kelly Jaskot, Amy Szawara and Janesse Chapman. Murawski and Jaskot knocked in the Salem runs.

Agape 6, Lutheran East 5: Abby Duncan collected her second run-scoring hit of the game in the bottom of the seventh inning, driving in the game-winning run Friday against Harper Woods Lutheran East in a game played at Griffin Park.

Canton Agape Christian improved to 9-13 with the triumph. East fell to 0-12.

Duncan ignited the Wolverines' four-run first inning with a two-run single. They made it 5-0 with a single run in the second, but the Eagles kept chipping away at the lead, eventually tying

Chiefs crush North

Plymouth Canton rode an 18-hit attack to a five-inning mercy victory, 18-6 over North Farmington in a Western Lakes Activities Association baseball game Wednesday at North.

The win boosted the Chiefs' overall record to 16-6.

Everyone got into the offensive act for Canton, with Mark Hanson and Nick Musselman each going 4-for-4 at the plate. Hanson scored four runs and drove in three more, slugging a two-run home run to highlight a six-run fifth inning. He also had a double. Musselman had four RBI and scored two runs, collecting a triple in the fifth.

Other offensive standouts for the Chiefs were Chris Pirch, who collected two hits including a two-run homer in the third, Mike Toma-

Bucks' rally leads to an OT victory

Nine minutes into the second half of the Mid-Michigan Bucks game against the West Michigan Edge Wednesday in Holland, the Bucks' slow start took a turn for the worst.

SOCCER

The Edge, which beat the Bucks in three of their four United Soccer League meetings last year, got a goal from Junior DeBarros to take a 1-0 lead. After losing the final 20 minutes of their season-opener against Indiana four days earlier to the weather, the Bucks wanted something more out of this meeting.

And they weren't getting it, particularly from an offense that came into the season as the squad's strength but had shown little in the first match-and-a-half. Fortunately, there were still 36 regulation minutes left in the match against the Edge, and that was enough for the Bucks to forge a tie and force overtime — which worked to their advantage when Phil Presser

S'craft center signs with Canisius

BY BRAD-EMONS
SPORTS WRITER

Schoolcraft College center Yaku Moton-Spruill became the fourth Ocelot to sign with a Division I basketball school last week

RECRUITING

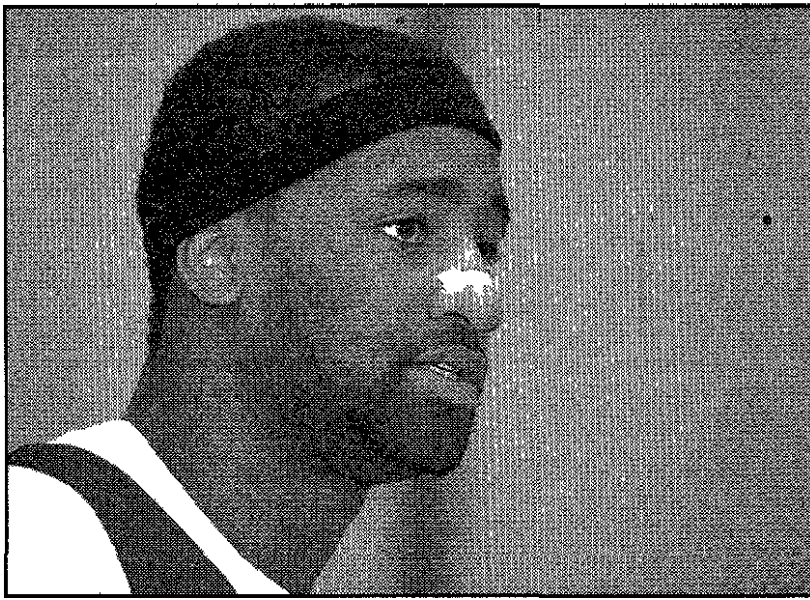

The 6-foot-8, 260-pound Moton-Spruill is headed for Canisius College (Buffalo, N.Y.), member of the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference. The Golden Griffins are coming off a 10-20 season under coach Mike MacDonald (68-77 career record).

Other Division I Schoolcraft signees to date include point-guard Rulon Harris (Detroit Mercy), forward Mike Williams (Western Michigan) and back-up center Delvar Barrett (Ohio University).

Moton-Spruill, who graduated from Westland John Glenn High School, averaged 14 points and five rebounds per game as the Ocelots finished 35-1 and placed third in the National Junior College Athletic Association Division I tournament in Hutchinson, Kan.

Moton-Spruill, who helped Schoolcraft to a No. 1 ranking during the regular season, also received looks from Bradley, Houston, Western Michigan and Oregon.

"I liked what they had to offer, it's an opportunity to play and be an inside post-presence," said Moton-Spruill, who transferred

Yaku Moton-Spruill

"I liked what they had to offer, it's an opportunity to play and be an inside post-presence. They (Canisius) have been in the semifinals and finals of the conference tournament the last four or five years. If the looks (passes) to the post will be there, I feel I can be an impact big man."

to Schoolcraft last year from Paris JC (Tex.). "They (Canisius) have been in the semifinals and finals of the conference tournament the last four or five years. If the looks (passes) to the post will be there, I feel I can be an impact big man."

Moton-Spruill must complete two classes this term — biology and psychology — to earn an Associate's Degree at Schoolcraft. Once the classes are completed and passed, he'll be eligible to play at the Division I school in upstate New York.

The Glenn grad, who plans to major in Sports Management, took his only official visit (May 2-4) to the Jesuit school in Buffalo.

"I'm sold on school, the campus is beautiful and I've got my snow shovel," said Moton-Spruill, joking about the area's annual heavy snowfall.

In Moton-Spruill's final game as an Ocelot, he scored a team-high 20 points as Schoolcraft defeated Wabash Valley (Ill.), 111-86, for third place in the NJCAA tourney.

"The thing I liked about our team is that we were never satisfied," Moton-Spruill said. "We always wanted to go one step higher. None of the guys had really played together, but we jelled as a team so quickly."

"We were picked second in our conference and that was a big motivation for us. We took it as a slap in the face."

Moton-Spruill showed promise as sophomore at Westland John Glenn before transferring to play his junior year, sitting the bench behind several high-profile players at national prep power Mount Zion Christian Academy (Durham, N.C.).

He returned to Glenn for a lackluster senior year and then signed with Paris JC where he appeared in just 13 games.

But this season he found a home on Haggerty Road under the tutelage of coach Carlos Briggs.

"He's the best coach I've ever known," said Moton-Spruill, who made second-team All-Eastern Conference and honorable mention All-Region 12. "He's a former junior college player himself and he knew what it was like to be in our situation. He really coached from his own experience."

Salem blanks Franklin; Chiefs roll

Three first-half goals were enough to carry Plymouth Salem to a 3-0 victory over Livonia Franklin Wednesday in a Western Lakes Activities Association soccer match Wednesday at Franklin.

The win gave the Rocks a 7-3-4 overall record. The Patriots are 9-4-2 overall.

"We played a nice game of possession in the second half," said Salem coach Joe Nora. "We knocked it around and had some good chances."

"Overall, from start to finish, we played really strong. It was probably our best full game of the year."

Macy Lepper scored Salem's first goal, on an assist from Sara Schupra. Jordan Falcusan made it 2-0, Marissa Sarkesian assisting, and Sarkesian then scored with Falcusan assisting.

Heather Jones was in goal for Salem in the first half, Kristen O'Beirne took over in the second half.

The shutout was the fourth-in-a-row for the Rocks. "I like the momentum we're creating," Nora said.

Canton 7, Churchill 0: Stephanie Johnson scored three goals and Christine Tople added two more to propel Plymouth Canton past Livonia Churchill Wednesday in a WLAA-Western Division game at Canton.

The Chiefs improved to 8-3-5 overall, they finish their division season at 3-0-2

Churchill is 4-6-5 overall, 2-3 in the division.

Ashley Rosaen and Katie Mills also scored goals for Canton. Danielle Shepard contributed two assists, with Kara Marsh, Erica Aherns, Molly Priebe and Mary Maloney getting one assist apiece.

Briana Wolcott started in goal for the Chiefs.

PCA 6, Zoe Christian 0: Plymouth Christian Academy ran its record in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference to 7-1-1 with a win Thursday at Warren Zoe Christian.

Sarah Roberts, Katie Polera and Rachel Rudzis each scored two goals for the Eagles, who improved their overall mark to 7-2-2. Val Boruta was in goal for the shutout.

chiefs made it 12-6 through four innings before closing out the mercy win with a six-run fifth

Harrison 15, Salem 4: Plymouth Salem played well early, but could not contain Farmington Harrison down the stretch as the Rocks suffered their sixth-straight loss in a WLAA crossover game Wednesday at Salem

First-inning doubles by Drew Ziolkowski, Steve Cox and Neil Kowalik gave Salem a 2-0 lead after one, but the Hawks scored three times in the top of the second to go up 3-2

The Rocks answered with a run in the bottom of the second on a groundout, knotting it at 3-1, but Harrison scored two in the top of the third to take the lead for good. The Hawks increased their advantage to 7-4 after five, then struck for eight runs in the sixth to invoke the 10-run mercy rule

Rickey Calleja absorbed the loss for Salem. The Rocks' record falls to 9-15 overall

CC 3, St. Mary's 1: Comerica Park hasn't seen a whole lot of winning this spring, but Redford Catholic Central will have a chance to be league champions in that stadium next weekend

The Shamrocks earned a berth in the Catholic League title game by beating Orchard Lake St. Mary's Wednesday at the CC High School field

Catholic Central is now 18-4 overall and 14-3 in league play, and will face Birmingham Brother Rice in the championship game Friday at Comerica Park starting at 12:30 p.m. Rice upended Dearborn Divine Child in the other CHSL semifinal picked up all the runs it needed in the first inning, scoring three times. Senior Ryan Rogowski singled home a run, and senior Dan Wilks belted a bases-loaded single that brought home two

Against the Eaglets, CC

Wilks started the game, but lasted 2 1/2 innings before Jeff Niemiec came in to pitch the middle innings very well. He went 2 2/3 innings and got out of a bases-loaded jam in the third inning, and ended up with the win. Jeff Schulz pitched the final two innings of the game and got the save

"Both teams left a lot of runners on base," said CC coach John Salter. "Niemiec got some key strikeouts in the third and fourth innings that helped us out"

CC won the CHSL tournament last year with a 5-4 win over Villanova, also at Comerica Park

Duncan's game-winning hit came after two batters walked and were sacrificed up a base. Andrea Hough also had two hits for Agape, scoring two runs

Amy Henry was the winning pitcher, allowing five runs on four hits and six walks, striking

Agape 12, Light and Life 2: Canton Agape Christian broke a 2-2 tie in the bottom of the fourth inning, eventually scoring 10 runs in a three-inning span to mercy Taylor Light and Life after six innings Thursday at Griffin Park

Amy Henry was the winning pitcher, stopping Light and Life on two runs, on two hits and two walks, striking out seven

Andrea Hough paced the Wolverines' nine-hit attack with a single and a double, scoring two runs and driving in two more. Abby Duncan contributed a three-run double in the fourth inning scored 20 minutes into OT for a 2-1 Bucks' win

The victory boosted Mid-Michigan's record to 1-0-1, both games also counting as US Open Cup qualifiers. West Michigan is 0-1-0

The Bucks' tying goal was scored with 14 minutes left in regulation. Substitutes Adam Heinemann (Oakland University), Stephan David, Jason Perry (OU) and Tom Eller (Schoolcraft College/Livonia Stevenson) gave them renewed life, and David

made the most of it when he one-timed a cross from Ryan Mack (Birmingham Seaholm), left-footing it into the goal

That sent the match into OT, with both sides exchanging attacks until Presser stole an errant Edge pass in the midfield and slipped a pass through to Paul Snape (OU), who returned it to Presser for the game-winner

Eric Pogue (Troy) made five stops in goal for the Bucks

Notes: The Bucks will host the Kala Mazoo Kingdom at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Saginaw's White Pine Park and the Dayton Gems at 5 p.m. Saturday at Plymouth Canton HS. Both games will be U.S. Open Cup qualifiers as well as league games. The Bucks must win both to have any chance of advancing to play in the Cup

Tickets are available at the gate for the Plymouth Canton match for $9 for adults, $6 for students. At White Pines tickets are $8 and $5. For more information call (734) 483-GOAL or email the Bucks at info@mmbucks.com

"Good" cholesterol

After only four weeks into a 12 week study people who took an investigational drug were able to increase their HDL cholesterol (the "good" cholesterol) levels by 34 per cent, according to a recent report in Circulation Journal of the American Heart Association. Also 198 people lowered their LDL cholesterol (the "bad" cholesterol) by 7 per cent.

The drug, called a CETP inhibitor, works by blocking the action of the cholesteryl ester transfer protein, which is known to lower HDL.

"CETP represents an important target because this protein plays a key role in HDL metabolism. In fact a genetic deficiency of CETP is the main reason for high HDL in Asian populations," says study author Dr John Kastelein, from the Academic Medical Center in Amsterdam, The Netherlands.

Except for some mild gastrointestinal side effects there were no major adverse effects from the new drug.

"Although these results hold promise, further studies are needed to investigate whether the increase in HDL cholesterol translates into a reduction in coronary artery disease risk," says Kastelein.

The Southeastern Chapter of the American Red Cross offers the following courses:

- Nurse Assistant Training – Teaches individuals 90 hours of skill and theory that will enable them to provide quality care for residents in long term care facilities. The program meets the State of Michigan requirements and upon completion, participants take the Michigan Nurse Assistant Aide Competency test for state certification.

- Home Health Aide Training – Teaches the necessary skills to work specifically in a private home care setting. A Patient Care Associate course also is available that teaches the cross over skills needed to work in various health care settings. The course focuses on trends in health care, EKG, vital signs, venipuncture, respiratory care, dietary needs, basic treatments and adult CPR.

Urinary incontinence

Doctors at Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak are recruiting women to test an experimental oral medication to determine its effectiveness in reducing the number of stress incontinence episodes. The investigational drug is being tested in women with stress urinary incontinence (SUI), the involuntary loss of urine that occurs if the muscles that support the bladder are weakened, and mixed urinary incontinence (MUI), the involuntary loss of urine as well as a strong urge to urinate. Participants will be compensated. Call (248) 551 0642.

A new treatment for male urinary incontinence is the focus of a clinical research trial at Beaumont Hospital. To be eligible for the study, men must have had prostate surgery. Participation in the study will last at least two years. Potential participants will be given an implant screening, evaluation of past medical history, a physical examination, and urine and bladder function tests. Call Beaumont's Urology Research department at (248) 551 3355.

Early onset drinking predisposes teens to injury, addiction

BY RENÉE SKOGLUND
rskoglund@oe.homecomm.net

Holly Bair, a trauma nurse coordinator at Beaumont Hospital, has seen her share of seriously injured teens and young adults in the emergency room, patients with "multi-system" injuries that involve long-bone fractures, spleen and liver damage, and devastating head trauma.

"It tends to be alcohol-related," she said.

But it's not always car accidents that cause the devastation, she added. "There's skateboarding off the backs of cars and falling off balconies. Things you wouldn't do if your judgment wasn't impaired."

The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism cites research done by the Boston University School of Public Health that reveals an alarming correlation between early onset drinking and likelihood of injury later in life when under the influence of alcohol. In general, teens who start drinking before age 14 are 12 times more likely to be injured than those who begin drinking at or after age 21.

"This analysis shows that for each year under age 21 that drinking onset is delayed, risk for later life injury diminishes," said Dr. Enoch Gordis, director, National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

Research by the National Institutes of Health further indicates the use and abuse of alcohol by adolescents is associated with high-risk behaviors such as drinking and driving, drug abuse, unprotected sexual intercourse, interpersonal violence, destruction of private property, and association with deviant peer groups.

Counseling: Dr. David Logan, a psychiatrist and the medical consultant to Growth Works in Plymouth, discusses alcohol use with a young client.

According to NIA statistics, in 1999, 31 percent of 12th grade students, 26 percent of 10th graders, and 15 percent of 8th graders reported high-risk alcohol use (five or more drinks on a single occasion) within the previous two weeks.

As a member of the national organization ENCARE (Emergency Nurses Cancel Alcohol Related Emergencies), Bair often visits high schools to speak about the dangers of alcohol. She tells students they're not invincible. Drinking can put you into the emergency room and change your life forever. Think before you drink, she warns.

"This is just one moment in your life. Make a smart decision and do it with a clear head."

Community awareness

Dr. David Logan, psychiatrist and long-time consultant to Growth Works in Plymouth, had a one word answer when asked if alcohol use by teens is more of a problem than school districts and the community perceive: "Absolutely."

"It isn't a coincidence that there are more fatal accidents involving teens around graduation time," he said. "But six months later we forget it was alcohol-related. We just miss the kids."

Society's willingness to confront the issue is not what it should be, said Logan. "We look askance, but we don't see the carnage, the destroyed lives, the suicides, the pregnancies."

The problem is complicated. First of all, there's easy access to alcohol in our affluent society, said Logan. "Teens can go down to the village corner and give $10 to a college kid and say, 'Buy me a six-pack.'" Second, parents are almost "a stage behind" in guessing their adolescent's alcohol use.

"If you think your kid is a weekend user, he's probably using all week. If you think they're just on cigarettes, they're usually on alcohol and marijuana also," said Logan. His advice: "Search the kid's room."

Binge-drinking especially has dangerous behavioral associations. The 2000 National Household Survey on Drug Abuse, an annual survey sponsored by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, concluded:

■ Underage persons who reported binge drinking (43 percent) were more likely to report past-month use of any illicit drug than were their peers who did not binge drink (6 percent).

Please see DRINKING, C7

Teen substance abuse facts

- Use of alcohol and other drugs is associated with the leading causes of death and injury (motor vehicle crashes, homicides and suicides) among teenagers and young adults.

- First use of alcohol typically begins around the age 13. Use of marijuana begins around age 14.

- Children who begin drinking before age 15 are four times more likely to develop alcoholism than those who begin at 21.

- Approximately 8 percent of the nation's 8th graders, 24 percent of 10th graders, and 32 percent of 12th graders have been drunk during the last month.

- A survey of high school students found that 18 percent of females and 39 percent of males say it is acceptable for a boy to force sex if the girl is stoned or drunk.

- Researchers estimate that alcohol use is implicated in one- to two-thirds of sexual assaults and acquaintance or "date" rape cases among teens and college students.

- Teenagers whose parents talk to them regularly about the dangers of drugs are 42 percent less likely to use drugs than those who don't, yet only one in four teens report having these conversations.

Critical role

Parents have more influence than they may think

Parents play a critical role in guiding their children's decisions regarding drinking, drinking and driving, drug use and sex according to new research conducted by SADD (Students Against Destructive Decisions/Students Against Driving Drunk) and Liberty Mutual Group.

The Teens Today study results released today reveal that, contrary to the popular "myth of inevitability," such behaviors are not unavoidable rites of passage in teen life. The Teens Today report also suggests strategies that parents can employ to help keep their children safe.

The original research reveals profiles reflecting behavioral trends among teens. Three specific decision types emerged among the 500 teens surveyed, reflecting the degree to which they choose to engage in destructive and potentially destructive activities. These decision types, "avoiders," "experimenters," and "repeaters," were heavily influenced by parental attitudes and behavior.

Avoiders tend to avoid destructive decision-making. Experimenters tend to occasionally engage in destructive decision-making and repeaters regularly engage in destructive decision making.

"These findings offer encouragement to parents to continue to talk to their teens about good decision-making," said Stephen Wallace, chairman and chief executive officer of the national SADD organization. "We've shattered the 'myth of inevitability' that so often mirrors parents' attitudes about teen behavior and their uncertainty about being able to influence decision-making."

According to the study, many parents either do not believe that their teen participates in destructive behaviors or think that such behaviors are a normal part of growing up. Many also believe that there is little, if anything, they can do to influence teen choices.

Yet, the data suggests that parents can take an active role in determining which decision type their teen is likely to resemble. Specifically the Teens Today findings include:

■ Avoiders are more likely than repeaters to say they have open and honest communication with their parents.

■ Teens who have open and honest communication with their parents are more likely than those who do

Underage persons who reported binge drinking were almost nine times more likely to have used marijuana/hashish and six times more likely to have used any illicit drug other than marijuana during the past month compared with underage persons who did not binge drink.

Underage binge drinkers were 11 times more likely to have used hallucinogens and six times more likely to have used psychotherapeutic drugs during the past month nonmedically than underage persons who did not binge drink.

Parents' naivete about their children's drinking habits isn't the only factor that makes them enablers. Many parents believe that drinking in a controlled situation, or drinking "just beer," is okay, said Logan.

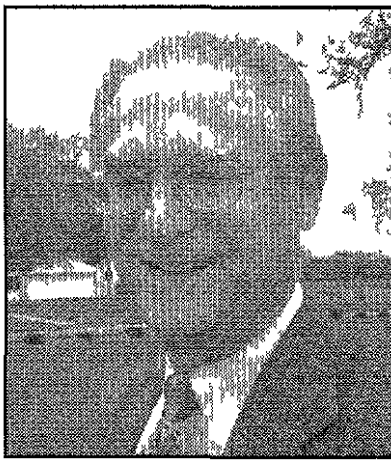

Parents who have graduation parties with only beer often find vodka bottles or noxious oxide bottles the next morning.

Parental influence

Dr. Michael Brooks, medical director, Brighton Hospital, spares no sentiment when drawing a connection between parental attitudes and children's behavior. "If you want to see what's wrong with a kid, look at

Advocate for teens: Holly Bair, trauma nurse coordinator at Beaumont Hospital, often speaks about the dangers of alcohol to students at area hospitals

Addiction specialist: Dr. Michael Brooks, medical director, Brighton Hospital, said there are few obstacles in society to prevent teens from experimenting with alcohol his parents'. Simply put, parents are children's primary influence. If parents view alcohol abuse as socially unacceptable, "it significantly decreases the likelihood that alcohol will be a problem" for their children, said Brooks. "Good parents can be involved with their kids, and still have struggling kids. But for the most part, parents are the biggest influencers of a child's attitudes." Genetics also plays a role. Alcoholism is a "polygenetic" disease, meaning there is not one gene that can be isolated and indicted as the cause, said Brooks. "There are no tests, nothing as simple as a blood test, that says this person will be an alcoholic. The only thing that prevents a genetically disposed person to use alcohol is not to use alcohol."

Brooks warns that smoking is a gateway drug. "Especially at an early age. Probably the next thing they will do is smoke marijuana and drink alcohol."

Both Logan and Brooks indict insurance companies for the loss of in-house treatment beds in hospitals and treatment centers.

"Insurance companies believe alcohol-related problems in teens can easily be treated on an outpatient basis," said Logan. "Inpatient is just no longer available unless you are extraordinarily sick."

Brighton Hospital is an addiction hospital with 63 inpatient beds located in Brighton. It recently closed its inpatient adolescent treatment ward. "We were the last bastion in the area. Now it's more of a challenge to garner resources and get treatment," said Brooks.

Lack of treatment centers for those teens with serious alcohol problems, peer pressures to "fit in," and a society that accepts teen drinking as a rite of passage is all the more reason for parents to monitor their own behavior as well as their children's.

"That's where it all starts," said Brooks.

not, to say their parents' methods of preventing them from using drugs are effective.

Teens who have open and honest communication with their parents are more likely than those who do not, to say their parents influence their decisions about sexual activity.

Teens who have open communication with their parents are significantly more likely than those who do not, to say that punishment has kept them from doing the same thing again.

"The important message for parents is that 'you do make a difference,'" said John Connors, executive vice president and manager of Liberty Mutual's personal insurance operations. "In the face of media and peer pressure, many parents feel their role in influencing their children's choices is marginalized. Clearly, this is not the case."

The Teen Today report amplifies other SADD and Liberty Mutual research indicating the importance of parent-child communication in teen decision-making and reinforces the influence parents can have by conveying their expectations for teen behavior. This new data reveals that:

Repeaters are significantly less likely than experimenters or avoiders to say that it is important to them to live up to their parents' expectations regarding drinking, sex and drugs.

Teens who have open communication with their parents are significantly more likely to try to live up to their parents' expectations.

Teens who do not have open communication with their parents are significantly more likely than those who do to say that they wish their communication with parents were different.

The Teen Today research also suggests that parents who adopt "zero-tolerance" attitudes about destructive decision-making by their teens may be more effective in helping their children avoid trouble.

Teens themselves offered specific advice for parents as to how they might best help their children make healthy choices, including:

- Initiating dialogue about decision making
- Staying up until teens return home
- Enforcing curfews
- Requiring that teens sleep at home
- Calling friends' parents to ensure supervision
- Asking teens to "check in" by phone during the evening
- Enforcing consequences for misbehavior.

According to Penelope Wells, SADD president and executive director, "All of this data strongly reinforces how important a role parents can play in shaping teen attitudes and behavior. Parents who vigorously embrace that role are less likely to have teens who make destructive decisions."

Alcohol use among girls

Girls are beginning to drink at younger ages than ever before. The Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration's 1996 National Household Survey on Drug Abuse (NHSDA) found that in the early 1990s, 31 percent of new female users of alcohol were ages 10 to 14. In the 1960s that figure was 7 percent.

More sobering facts:

- According to SAMHSA's 1998 NHSDA, 38 percent of girls ages 12 to 17 reported ever using alcohol.
- The same survey indicated that nearly 7 percent of girls ages 12 to 17 reported binge drinking (having five or more drinks in a row on one occasion) in the past month.
- Overall, white non-Hispanic girls ages 12 to 17 reported the greatest levels of lifetime, past-year, and current use of alcohol when compared with black non-Hispanic and Hispanic girls. Past-month usage for white non-Hispanic girls was 22 percent, for Hispanic, 18 percent, and for black non-Hispanic, 16 percent.

Risk factors for girls who use alcohol:

- Puberty tends to bring a higher incidence of depression among teenage girls, which can trigger alcohol use.
- Adolescent girls who are heavy drinkers (five or more drinks in a row on at least five different days in the past month) are more likely than boys to say they drink to escape problems or because of frustration or anger.

Girls are particularly susceptible to peer pressure when it comes to drinking. They are more likely than boys to drink to fit in with their friends. Boys drink largely for other reasons and then join a group that also drinks.

Female gender response: Smaller amounts of alcohol are more intoxicating for females regardless of their size. Three physiological reasons may be responsible:

- When people drink, alcohol spreads into the water in their bodies. Because females have smaller amounts of body water to dilute the alcohol, they have higher concentrations of alcohol in their blood than males who drank identical amounts of alcohol.
- An enzyme called "alcohol dehydrogenase" helps metabolize or process alcohol. In males, this enzyme breaks down much of the alcohol in the stomach so less of it enters the circulatory system. In females, the enzyme is less active.

- Changing hormone levels during the menstrual cycle may affect the rate of alcohol metabolism in females.

For comparative information, see SAMHSA's Alcohol Use Among Boys fact sheet.

Sun damage

Protect your eyes this summer with a good pair of shades

Soaking up the sun? Look out for your eyes as well as your skin

While most of us know that it's important to protect our skin from the sun, we might not as readily think about our eyes. Yet the same ultraviolet rays that damage the skin can harm your eyes as well, says Dr. Michael Smith-Wheelock, ophthalmologist at the University of Michigan Kellogg Eye Center. He advises adults and children to wear sunglasses with UV protection to block harmful rays.

Prolonged exposure to the sun has a direct link to some eye conditions, including the formation of cataracts, and is suspected of contributing to others, says Smith-Wheelock. "We have good evidence that the incidence of cataracts relates to the 'dosage' or exposure to ultraviolet rays," he says. "The more exposure to sun you have, the more likely you are to have cataracts. And the effect intensifies the closer you move to the equator."

Smith-Wheelock notes that intense UV rays can actually burn the surface of the cornea. The condition, called photokeratitis, is similar to sunburn and is more likely to occur in areas where the sun is highly reflected, for example, off of water, snow, the desert, and in tanning booths.

Most eye disorders from the sun tend to affect the front - the cornea and lens - rather than the back of the eye, says Smith-Wheelock. Nonetheless, you can do severe damage to the retina, which lines the back of the eye, by staring directly at the sun. The resulting condition is called solar retinopathy, and welders wear goggles to protect their eyes from such an effect. Kellogg optician David Karl explains what you should look for in a pair of sunglasses. First check for a rating that promises to block 99 percent to 100 percent of the UV-A and UV-B rays. "More expensive sunglasses do not necessarily offer more protection - it's the UV rating that counts," he says.

"When you spend more money for glasses, you are paying for fashion and, perhaps, some improvement in the optical quality." Another popular feature, he says, is polarization, which increases comfort by cutting the glare from horizontal surfaces, like water.

"Don't forget to ask about UV protection when you buy prescription glasses," says Karl. Kellogg's Optical Shop automatically includes UV protection in all children's glasses and in most adult lenses, but not all shops offer the same coverage.

Because UV rays can penetrate the clouds, Mr. Karl says it's a good idea to wear sunglasses on overcast days. You also need protection when you're in a tanning booth, and when you're near water or snow, because reflected sun means intensified UV rays.

The University of Michigan W K Kellogg Eye Center is a nationally recognized vision care and research center. As part of the University of Michigan Health System, Kellogg provides medical and surgical eye care, including laser eye surgery, professional and public education, and performs advanced ophthalmic research. Kellogg also serves as a regional referral resource, providing specialty vision care that may not be available in other communities.

Attached condominiums: Townhouses, first floor ranches and upper ranches - 158 residences in all - will be built at Magnolia Park

Magnolia Park promotes value for price

The affordability factor gets big play at Magnolia Park in Waterford

Buyers in the attached condominium community off Hospital Road just north of Cooley Lake Road can acquire any of the three different styles of home there for less than $150,000

And some nice features, too "I think the huge selling point is square footage for price," said Kevin J O'Grady, president of In Sight Building "It's a turnkey community People have to simply bring their clothes and furniture

"The washer and dryer are installed, refrigerator, oven," O'Grady said "All have a high efficiency furnace Air conditioning is included They can move right into the condo complex and everything is done"

"People buying this are looking for a bang for the buck," added James L Daily, sales representative

"The biggest thing is not only price, but the turnkey aspect Everything is included That's really huge," Daily said

O'Grady and Daily also tout the quality of work at Magnolia Park

"We build primarily $250,000 homes (at nearby Pinecliff) and some up to $3 million," O'Grady said "We have exactly the same trades people They are extremely high quality"

"We get comments from people about the quality of drywall and painting right away," Daily said of visitors to Pinecliff

Magnolia Park has a rolling topography and is a short distance from the heart of recreation country Union Lake with public access is nearby

"It's close to lakes, that's for sure," O'Grady said "It's five minutes to M-59

"I've lived in Waterford the last 10 years, so I'm very familiar with all of its 36 square miles," O'Grady added "This is an extremely nice location, a very quiet location "I have a 6-year-old and an 8-year-old If the (Waterford) schools didn't have a good reputation, I wouldn't send my boys to them," O'Grady said

Three floor plans are available The townhouse, 1,300 square feet, with two bedrooms and 2 1/2 baths over two levels, carries a base price of $145,900

The first floor ranch, 1,100 square feet with two bedrooms and two baths, goes for $149,900 So does the raised ranch, a walk-up of 1,240 square feet on one level with two bedrooms and two baths built over the first floor ranch

In addition to the features already mentioned by O'Grady, all homes come with landscaping, deck or balcony, basement, single-car garage, main floor laundry, dishwasher and vinyl flooring and carpeting at base price

Vinyl siding and brick are primary exterior materials and a dimensional shingle is standard

Magnolia Park was designed to attract a mix of owners, Daily said

"We're getting younger couples, singles and people on the verge of retirement," he said "That's why we did ranches - for people who didn't want to do steps"

All residences have private entrances from the front door and garage

Each bedroom upstairs in the townhouse has its own bath with combination tub/shower The raised ranch has volume ceilings over the main living areas and a shower in the master

Magnolia Park is serviced by Waterford's well water system, sewers and sidewalks

The property tax rate is $28.50 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction That means the owners of a $150,000 home

there would pay about $2,150 the first year

The monthly maintenance/association fees is $125 One pet per residence is allowed

Lindsay Battin ordered a townhouse after walking through models at Pinecliff

"I thought the building outside was beautiful and when we walked through, the design was well worked out," Battin said

"It was open, a lot of storage space The bedrooms upstairs were huge The location was perfect, near to where I work

"They (sales team, builder) have been fantastic," Battin added "They're always very excited, always real helpful and real patient"

Sales at Magnolia Park, (248) 366 5054, will be made at Pinecliff, off Pontiac Lake Road east of Hospital Road, until models are completed Office hours are 1 p.m. daily, closed Thursdays

main floor space and an optional unfinished basement of 1,486 square feet

It has a country-style exterior with a covered porch accented by large windows for a more open look. The lines are clean and compact, ideal for a smaller lot in a development.

The entire center of the Oxmead is dedicated to the living area. It has a vaulted ceiling with large windows facing the back yard.

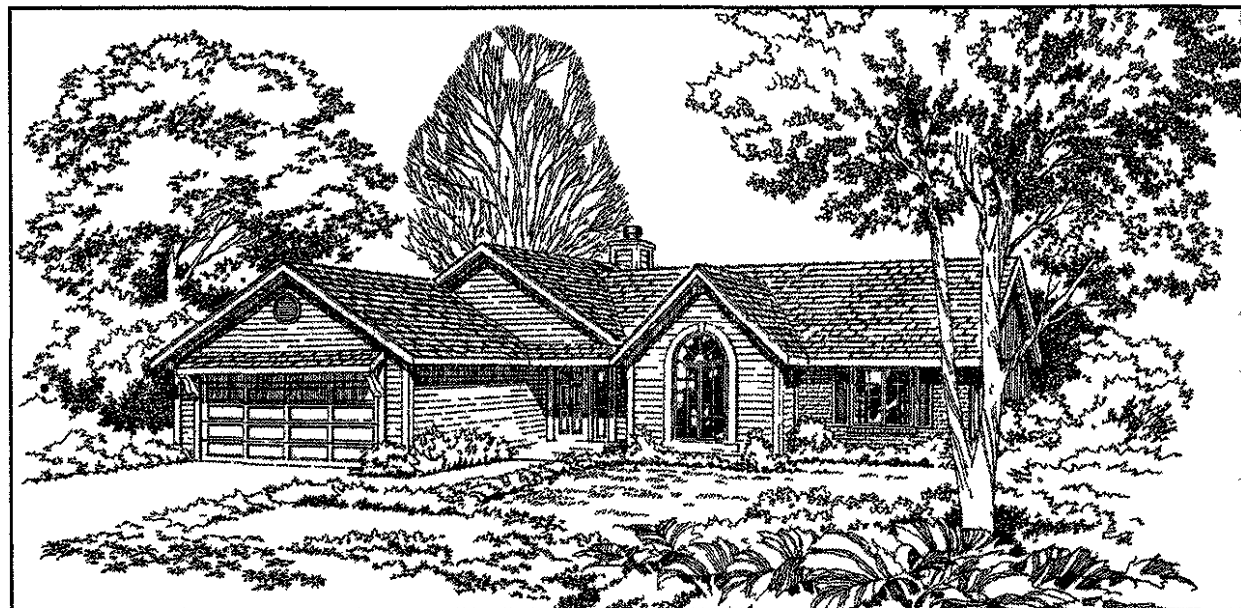

A gas fireplace is on the left side of the great room and a broom closet has been incorporated at the end of the fireplace to add as much storage space as possible.

The stairs to the unfinished basement are on the left wall right off the entry. Beyond are the kitchen and dining room.

A walk in pantry is handy to both the kitchen and two car garage for unloading groceries. An eating bar backs up from the kitchen to the dining room.

Technology helps keep everything on the level

BY JAMES AND MORRIS CAREY FOR AP WEEKLY FEATURES

We learned as apprentice carpenters that a strong back, ambition and energy were necessary to survive in this grueling trade.

We also learned our tools were of equal or greater importance. Time is money, and having the right tools well maintained makes a job easier and safer.

Except for tools for specialized tasks, our basic battery of tools has remained the same for the nearly 30 years that we have been in construction.

Those include properly weighted framing and finish hammers, a circular saw, hand saws, framing square, combination square, nail sets, plumb bob, chalk line, tape measure and carpenter's level.

Although the contents of our toolbox haven't changed much over the years, the tools don't look much like the ones we began with. Today's tools have evolved into highly engineered objects that act as extensions of one's anatomy.

They are lighter, more powerful and more ergonomically sensitive. This provides better productivity, less wear and tear on muscles and joints and superior results.

Improvements in leveling tools are many. A level is one of our favorite tools. We like our work to be straight, plumb (true vertical) and level.

There are many uses for a level, including building a fence, installing a chair rail, wainscot or other trim and hanging pictures. Levels are available in various shapes and sizes, depending upon the job.

The most common style is the carpenter's level. It comes in various lengths and has two or more fluid-filled vials that are used to establish plumb and level. It's often called a bubble level. When the bubble in the fluid-filled vial is situated between lines on the vial, the object is plumb (or level).

There are several variations of the carpenter's level.

A torpedo level is a short one (about a foot long) that is easy to handle. It is used for jobs where space is tight and where a longer level isn't required.

A line level is another. It attaches to a string line that is held taut. It is small, convenient and easy to use. The line level is suited for fence-building and other outdoor projects.

Be forewarned that it becomes less accurate as the length of the string increases, and begins to sag.

The oldest of them all is the water level. It consists of a clear plastic hose filled with water. This style of level is useful for establishing level between two distant points such as when setting forms for a foundation.

It has all but been replaced by more a sophisticated means of establishing level — a transit or builder's level.

A level isn't just for leveling a surface. It also is used for establishing plumb, a straight vertical line. This comes into play when installing a door, paneling, wallpaper or other finishes that require a plumb line.

Another means of establishing plumb is by using a nifty tool called a plumb bob. It consists simply of a weight with a point at one end that is attached to a string. The origin of the string can be high on a wall or from a point on the ceiling, while the point at the end of the weight dangles slightly above the surface of the floor.

A plumb bob is an excellent means of transferring a point from a ceiling to the floor, and vice versa.

Another tool we keep in our pouches that can also be used as a plumb bob is a chalk line or snap line. As its name implies, it is used primarily for transferring a straight line onto a surface with chalk as the medium.

The chalk box consists of a plastic or metal container filled with pigmented chalk. String is wound on a reel completely enveloped by the chalk.

When the string is extended and held taut from one point to another, the line is lifted and snaps back against the surface leaving a straight line. This is useful in installing floor tile, wallpaper and chair rail.

Thanks to technology, a job that previously took two or more tools now can be performed with one tool that is a fraction of their size and significantly more accurate.

For example, in the past when installing wainscot, chair rail or wallpaper, it took a level, a plumb bob and a chalk line.

Now you can have all three in one with a laser level, also known as a laser-line generator. This tool can cast a continuous straight line on any surface without leaving a mark.

Laser technology has been around for a while, but in recent years has become more compact, affordable and functional. Some models have a laser that will skip over moldings and uneven surfaces.

So, if you're installing wallpaper above an existing chair rail, place a laser-line generator on the floor, use the bubble to establish plumb and watch the laser line jump right over the molding to cast a plumb line where you need it with no permanent marks.

One manufacturer has come up with a laser-line generator that has spring-loaded pushpins that will allow you to temporarily anchor the device to wallboard or plaster to align objects with one hand.

This tool is as close as it gets to using a television remote control when making home improvements.

Thomas Ervin Let's Talk About Real Estate

"RELOCATING THE WORKING SPOUSE"

The buying and selling of real estate always involves a human dimension This week, we focus on one of the consequences of relocation When a family relocates to a new city because of a job transfer, the spouse who is also employed faces a difficult challenge to find acceptable job opportunities This dilemma is actually very common in today's family with two wage earners If you or someone you know is in this situation, I hope the ideas listed below may be helpful in finding new employment

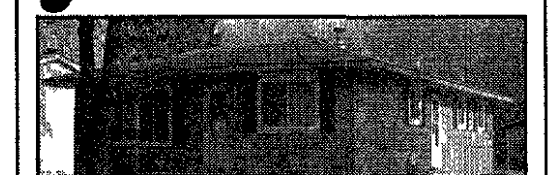

- 1 Prepare your resume as soon as you and your spouse have made the decision to relocate
2 Begin your job search while still employed, if possible
3 Check to see if your present employer has a facility, or a customer, or supplier in your new city who would value a referral from your company
4 Subscribe to newspapers in the new city before you move Most papers will mail to out-of-town subscribers This will enable you to become acquainted with the kinds of job opportunities that exist
5 Ask the personnel department of your spouse's firm for the names of search firms and employment agencies who may be able to help you
6 Ask for a testimonial letter from your employer on company stationery
7 If you are in a licensed profession, check with the appropriate state office in your new state to see what requirements are necessary in order to become licensed If you investigate early, you may be able to cut down the lead time needed to become re-established
8 Notify potential employers that your relocation expenses are covered This will help you compete with local applicants

ADVICE: When relocating, ask your REALTOR® for help Today's REALTOR® provides many relocation services
