Plymouth leaders talk 2014 goals

By Matt Jachman

Top officials in the Plymouths have sketched out broad visions for the coming year, from beefing up Plymouth's police force and downtown parking availability to increased economic development and capital investment in Plymouth Township.

Some of the goals, such as parks improvements in the township or a police officer dedicated to alcohol enforcement in Plymouth, would have high visibility and immediate impact if achieved, while others, such as settling up the outstanding pension costs incurred by the fire department the communities once shared – a Plymouth City Commission goal for the third straight year – might be ho-hum to all but municipal government wonks.

In Plymouth, the city commission adopted six goals for 2014 during a Jan. 6 study meeting.

"If we could get to some level of success for each one of them, they're transformative goals for the city," Mayor Dan Dwyer said during a recent interview.

In Plymouth Township, Supervisor Richard Reaume sat down last week to outline his administration's 2014 goals; the legislative groundwork for several of them has already been started.

Economy tops list

Increased economic development efforts led Reaume's list and he said he wants the township to capitalize on the comeback in the automobile industry. A number of major auto suppliers have facilities in the township.

"That helps the whole area," Reaume said of the revival. "The jobs rippled through the local economy."

Reaume said his economic development focus will be reaching out to automakers and Tier 1 suppliers, which, he said, need the kinds of big industrial spaces the township can offer. At the same time, he said, he wants more business diversity; the life sciences, for example, is a promising, perhaps recession-proof, area in which the township has had success.

Investing around $2 million in the township's recreation spaces – Township Park, Lake Pointe Soccer Park and Hilltop Golf Course – is also high on the list. Reaume described a lot of the planned work as maintenance that was deferred during the Great Recession or taking steps to meet the needs of people who use the facilities.

Local leaders upbeat on Snyder's speech

By Brad Kadrich
 Staff Writer

Gov. Rick Snyder used his annual State of the State speech Thursday to paint a rosy picture of a state on the comeback trail.

In the final address of Snyder's first term, the Republican governor talked – in less specific detail than some would have liked – about improvements for schools, municipalities, veterans and the environment. Much of his speech was spent on improvements in the state's economic status since he was elected in 2010.

"We had a broken system in Michigan," Snyder said. "We've become the comeback state, but our work is not done. It's about keeping your foot on the gas."

Snyder cited gains in employment, personal income and population growth, among other measures, in his hour-long speech.

'Spirits are up'

State Sen. Patrick Colbeck, R-Canton, said the governor's speech "provided clear evidence" Michigan is making a comeback after "years of decline known as the 'lost decade.'"

"Our residents are now finding more and more well-paying job opportunities. ... As a result, more of our family members are now staying in Michigan, to the delight of many parents and grandparents," Colbeck said. "Our population is finally growing again. Property values are up. New home sales are up. Our spirits are up."

Plymouth Township Treasurer Ron Edwards attended the speech at the state capitol as guest of state Rep. Kurt Heise, R-Plymouth Township, and said he liked Snyder's renewed call for more than $1 billion of additional annual spending on the state's roads.

"To me, the roads are our biggest issue," Edwards said Friday.

Otherwise, the speech left Edwards rather flat.

"I'm looking to see what they might do for municipal governments and I didn't really hear anything in regards to that," he said.

Adversaries 'cordial'

Edwards called the event "an interesting process" and "a very positive night" and said it struck him that Democratic legislators received Snyder coldly when he listed benchmarks of the state's progress,

Firm looks at district transportation issues

By Brad Kadrich
 Staff Writer

Plymouth-Canton administrators have said the district is responsible for transporting more than 10,000 students some 1 million miles a year with its 124-bus fleet.

On Tuesday, the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education approved the spending of some $44,000 to hire a transportation consultant to come in and help district officials figure out the best way to deliver those services.

The consultant, Annapolis, Md.-based School Bus Consultants, is expected to be on the ground as early as this week looking at every angle of the district's transportation operation.

By the time the group is finished – a final report is expected by the end of March – the district could make decisions ranging from changing or eliminating bus routes all the way to finding a new contractor to provide transportation services.

"They're going to provide us some recommendations around evaluating our current operation," said Brodie Killian, the district's deputy superintendent for business and operations. "We're going to look at everything – route locations, the organizational structure, the contractor, our contract. The goal here is to create a state-of-the-art, technologically advanced program that's cost-effective and broadens services."

Superintendent Dr. Michael Meissen told board members transportation was one of the areas looked at in the recent systems analysis that was done in the district.

The consultant costs will be paid from the transportation budget and from other money identified in the 2013 bond proceeds, Meissen pointed out. Hiring the consultant, he said, would help the district figure out how best to make

Price: County veers toward emergency manager

By Darrell Clem
 Staff Writer

Sinking deeper into a $200 million budget hole, Wayne County is sliding toward state intervention and likely faces an emergency manager unless drastic measures are taken to shrink spending, a local official said.

"I think it's going to be very difficult to stave off an emergency manager," said 10th District Wayne County Commissioner Shannon Price, who represents Canton, Plymouth and Plymouth Township. "Are we heading there? Yes. Can we stop it? Possibly."

Wayne County faces a situation similar to Detroit, barring a willingness to slash spending, restructure collective bargaining agreements and sell off assets such as a wastewater plant, Price said – issues that are contentious, at best.

His blunt assessment comes midway through his first two-year commission term. Price, R-Canton, shared his views with the Observer during an interview at the Canton Coney Island.

Price said efforts to make the Detroit Water and Sewerage Department more accountable, partly by creating a new three-county authority, could begin to reel in spending.

"I think the new authority will help stabilize rates and give more representation to suburban communities," he said.

Price also said halting a county jail project amid spiraling costs – and finding an alternative plan – should help.

Price's forecast wasn't entirely gloomy. He said strides have been made to improve financial transparency, return more parks millage dollars to local communities, force county elected leaders to become more frugal and secure much-needed money for 10th District road improvements.

lawns during the baseball games" at Township Park, Reaume said. The upper parking lot there is slated to be rebuilt and expanded from 158 spaces to 270.

A $625,000, 4,500-square-foot all-weather pavilion and an amphitheater of between 250 and 350 seats are also being planned for Township Park, projects that some Board of Trustees members have questioned.

The township has sold $1.9 million in bonds to help raise money for the improvements and also plans to use federal and state grant money, private donations and money from a Wayne County parks and recreation tax.

More investment

Other Reaume goals for 2014 are:

- » Improving government transparency and communications with constituents, including updating the township's website and putting more forms and township documents online.

"I believe we are already one of the most transparent municipalities in the area," Reaume said.

- » Investing in equipment for the Plymouth Community Fire Department, including ambulances, fire trucks, protective gear for firefighters and medical equipment.

Several methods of paying for the equipment are being discussed, including a temporary millage, perhaps as short as one year.

In Plymouth, adding to the 15-officer Plymouth Police Department has been a much-discussed but never-adopted goal in the past, but came to the forefront this year. Dwyer said the idea is to have an officer dedicated to patrolling establishments with liquor licenses, thus freeing up personnel for more neighborhood patrols.

Different ways of raising money for a new officer – or even two – are being considered, including grants or a possible millage that would be decided by voters, Dwyer said. "We don't have the money," he said.

The city commission has also thrown its support behind the movement for a Plymouth Arts and Recreation Complex that would be shared by the city and the township. PARC backers' idea is to transform Central Middle School, once it closes as a school in 2015, into a community center with an auditorium, swimming pool, art studios, gymnasium, fitness center, athletic fields and more.

"That would be the biggest event to happen in this community since I don't know," Dwyer said. The mayor said he likes that the proposal isn't being government-driven, but rather appears to have grass-roots origins.

The PARC movement may have hit a snag last week, however, when the township Board of Trustees voted 4-3 to not enter into any authority-type agreement with the city for almost three years. PARC supporters say they will look for alternatives.

Parking – and money

The commission's other goals are:

- » Increasing the availability of parking in the downtown area. A land-purchase deal that would have meant a sizable public lot near downtown fell through last year and officials are looking at alternatives. "We're literally starting from scratch," Dwyer said.

- » Finding a way to keep funding the local street improvement program, which is reaching its borrowing capacity under a tax levied to support it. The program is extremely popular with residents, Dwyer said.

- » Settling issues – primarily the pension costs owed – arising from the city's departure at the end of 2011 from the Plymouth Community Fire Department.

"I don't have any doubt we'll work it out," he said. "We just need information."

the operation more effective.

"The spotlight is on in that area," Meissen said. "(We're looking) at how can we get kids to and from school and other kinds of expanded services."

The firm's first order of business, according to Killian, is to help the district complete a fleet management review. As part of its work, the consultant will evaluate enrollment trends and route locations and help the district evaluate the type of technology it wants on the buses.

"The biggest things we're interested in are safety components, but we also want to make sure we get the right video and global positioning systems," Killian said. "Maybe wi-fi makes sense as we move toward that digital era, but it may be cost-prohibitive. We will be exploring all new technologies."

The move does not mean the district will change its policy of privatizing its transportation system. While the district will likely continue to own its buses, Killian said the consultant will also evaluate the current delivery model, up to and including the quality of the contractor, Michigan Educational Transportation Services.

The district has had some problems with the company since it privatized a few years ago, including a recent dearth of drivers.

"Part of their evaluation is going to be is the current delivery model of an outsourced driver the right one or is there a better model out there?" Killian said. "We believe it's time to re-evaluate. It's beyond just the contractor. ... Is our routing software up to date? Is our technology in the bus garage up to date? Is the utilization of GPS and cameras and other new technologies?"

If a change in contractors is made, Killian said, a premium will be established on keeping Plymouth-Canton bus drivers on their routes, with whatever vendor has the contract.

"A big part will be the whole delivery model and in that is an evaluation of METS," Killian added. "It is possible METS won't be with us. Our bus drivers are well-valued and provide a critical service. Any driver who is truly committed will be able to stay with us."

Killian said the $44,000 cost of the consultant can be more than justified – and more than off-set – by the potential savings that could be included in the final analysis.

With a transportation budget of some $6.5 million, each of the district's 124 routes costs some $53,000, according to Killian.

"We want to strive for a better, safer and more-efficient system and that alone justifies the expenditure," he said.

COUNTY

Price had pushed for a spotlight on Wayne County spending. He said strides have been made by placing much financial data on www.waynecounty.com, prompting Sunshine Review, a nonprofit pro-transparency group, to raise the county's letter grade from D-minus to B.

"We're not where we need to be, but to go from failing to a B is a huge accomplishment," Price said.

On other issues: » Despite criticism from officials such as Wayne County Prosecutor Kym Worthy, new state legislation hailed by Price means Worthy and other officials would have to file lawsuits demanding more funding through the Court of Appeals.

Critics say the measure lessens the chances of victory by elected officials and hampers their departments from doing their jobs.

Price disagreed: "It's one way to try to reel in spending that is out of control."

» Price vowed to push for a larger share of parks millage dollars for local communities, saying the 10th District gets only $192,000 a year, or 15 percent of the taxes it pays. He has chosen to divide the money proportionately among Canton, Plymouth and Plymouth Township, allowing local officials to choose projects rather than having him pick "winners and losers."

» Price said he fought to restore $75,000 a year for a Wayne County therapeutic recreation program that serves disabled residents from 11 communities at Canton's Summit on the Park. Canton Township Treasurer Melissa McLaughlin has called it "a very effective program."

» Price, working with local officials, said funding has been secured for road projects, including the widening of Beck Road to three lanes between Warren and Ann Arbor Road in 2015, a traffic signal this year at Beck and Saltz and the impending widening of Cherry Hill west of Canton Center to accommodate two new schools.

Price also pledged he is working with county officials to try to improve road-clearing efforts after a recent snowstorm fueled widespread complaints.

but that lawmakers in both parties were "quite cordial to one another" in receptions after the address.

Among other things, Snyder pledged:

- » An extra $65 million for the Great Start early childhood education program to eliminate the waiting list for low-income kids.

- » Expansion of Meals on Wheels and in-home programs for seniors, with more measures aimed at seniors to be announced in a special message this year.

- » Requiring more financial information from local governments and school districts as a way of providing early warnings of local units heading into financial distress.

- » Funding to fight invasive species, particularly the Asian long-horned beetle, which is heading north toward Michigan and threatens the state's hardwood trees.

Future focus

Those were all part of what Heise, who is in his second term, called a "very upbeat, positive speech."

"(Snyder) has a great record to talk about ... frankly I think he could have done even more to talk about Michigan's turnaround," Heise said. "There's a really positive story to be told and I think the governor told most of it tonight."

"But it wasn't all just positive," Heise added. "It was also laying out a continuing vision for helping children, for reducing crime, for improving the job market, for making sure we have early childhood education."

Call for civility

At the start of his speech, Snyder called for more civility and recognition that "differences are a positive." Although he didn't use his name, Snyder was apparently talking about recent anti-gay and anti-Muslim remarks made by Republican National Committeeman Dave Agema. Snyder said Michigan residents should "work to bring people together, not divide them."

WHAT'S NEW IN RHEUMATOID ARTHRITIS

In this case, what's new is something old. Moreover, the innovation does not depend on the discovery of another drug, or a recent insight into what causes rheumatoid arthritis. Rather, this treatment takes medications already used in rheumatoid arthritis and arranges them in a different way.

At the moment, the usual standard for treating rheumatoid arthritis is to start with methotrexate and if that doesn't help enough, add an anti-TNF medication such as Enbrel, Humira, Cimzia, Remicad, or Simponi. In most instances, methotrexate alone does not control joint inflammation, but in combination with an anti-TNF works fine. Drawbacks to the regimen are 1) the cost is high, and 2) the risk exists of infection with unusual organisms such as tuberculosis, histoplasmosis, legionella and listeria.

The new regimen uses three old medications: hydroxychloroquine (Plaquenil), methotrexate and sulfasalazine (Azulfidine). The advantages of this regimen are 1) the low cost- a year of these drugs is less than the cost of one month of methotrexate plus an anti-TNF; and 2) the effect on the immune system is smaller than with an anti-TNF- there is no added risk of infection with tuberculosis, histoplasmosis, legionella or listeria.

The drawback is obtaining patient compliance. Taking hydroxychloroquine means 2 tablets a day, methotrexate requires the patient to take up to 8-10 tablets over a 24 hour period once a week (an injectable form exists), and the usual dose of sulfasalazine is 4-6 tablets daily. Quite literally that is a hard regimen to swallow.

However, European patients have done it for ten years which shows it is possible and that in treating rheumatoid arthritis the approach works.

Canton senior wins STARS award

By Brad Kadrich
 Staff Writer

Canton High School senior Claudia Montgomery just wanted to help people. Needing a community service project for her National Honor Society program, Montgomery found a perfect partner and a satisfying way to help.

Montgomery used her winter break to collect coats, hats, boots and other items and worked with PBJ Outreach, a metro Detroit outreach program, to get those items delivered to homeless people in Detroit, where PBJ does a lot of work.

For her efforts, Montgomery, daughter of Colleen and Tom Montgomery of Plymouth, was honored Tuesday by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education with its Students with Tenacity Achieving and Reaching Success award.

"PBJ goes to Detroit and gives people food, clothing and a smile," Montgomery said. "I really enjoyed seeing how much they appreciated it."

Soliciting other NHS members for donations and distributing some 250 fliers asking for help, Montgomery managed to collect, among other things, 103 winter coats, 143 pairs of boots, 35 wind breakers, 54 pair of pants, 30 hats, 20 pairs of gloves, a dozen sweaters and 42 tops.

PBJ Outreach goes every Saturday morning to provide food, cold and hot drinks and clothing to approximately 250-350 homeless people.

PBJ spokesperson Fran Crowe told board members Tuesday she was "wowed" by Montgomery's effort. Crowe called Montgomery's donation was "the largest student donation ever done for

"She blew me away," Crowe said. "When she pulled up with four carloads of items, I almost fell over."

Board members were suitably impressed.

"I am in awe," new board President Judy Mardigan said. "They say it takes a village, but sometimes it takes one person. This was amazing."

Canton officials revise street repair policy

By Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

Canton residents who petition the township to create special assessment districts for street repairs are expected to have better cost estimates – and a potentially longer payment plan to ease their financial burden – under new rules adopted by township officials. The changes, approved Tuesday by the Canton Township Board of Trustees, come as four more subdivisions – Bi-Parkview Estates, Carriage Park condominiums, Windsor Park and Meadowbrook – have indicated a possible interest in fixing streets, officials said. Road projects already are moving ahead in the Wethersfield condominium complex, southwest of Palmer and Haggerty, and in Lexington Square, a subdivision southeast of Cherry Hill. Municipal Services Director Tim Faas said the revised policy contains the following components: » Subdivisions would pay a $2,500 engineering fee to obtain a more precise estimate of costs before they begin to circulate petitions, rather than after. «That’s always been a concern when you ask someone to sign a petition not knowing what the cost will be,” Faas said. “This takes some of the uncertainty out of it.” » Canton could initiate road projects after receiving petitions for $500,000 in work rather than $1 million. That is expected to result in a shorter wait for subdivision street repairs due to the lesser amount for bonds. » Subdivisions could have a 15-year payment schedule, rather than 10 years, if the amount they owe for work exceeds $10,000 per property owner. » The new policy adds more involvement in the process from the township’s bond counsel, finance staff, treasurer’s office and assessor. Supervisor Phil LaJoy said the last policy was adopted in 2008, but talks about revisions emerged last year as the Wethersfield and Lexington Square projects came to the forefront. Faas said the aim is to help subdivisions have a better handle on their expenses prior to circulating petitions. That way, he said, residents could make more informed decisions about supporting or opposing projects. A majority of property owners has to sign petitions supporting a special assessment district, or SAD, before the process can begin. Faas said the bulk of SADs pertain to street repairs, especially in aging subdivisions. However, residents also may petition the township for projects such as water mains and sewers. The township is expected to revise pamphlets that are given to subdivisions and residents seeking a special assessment district, so they will better understand the process going into it.

Hopeful hosts forum on 7th Senate district

By Brad Kadrich
Staff Writer

Plymouth attorney John Stewart, who spent six years in the state House of Representatives representing the 20th District, feels as though not enough voters have enough information about the newly redrawn boundaries of the state Senate 7th District. This dearth of information is of particular importance to Stewart, who plans to run for the 7th Senate seat this fall (he’ll have to get through an August primary first). The seat is currently held by Republican Patrick Colbeck of Canton. So Stewart, term-limited out of the state House in 2006, has organized a community forum later this month at the Plymouth District Library. The forum is scheduled for 5-6 p.m. Monday, Jan. 27, at the library, 223 S. Main. “It’s just an informational meeting on the new 7th state Senate District,” said Stewart, who ran for the seat as an independent in 2010 and lost to Colbeck. “It’s not a debate, it’s an informational meeting.” The meeting will be moderated by John Creasy, a public school teacher from Livingston County and vice president of the Citizens Against Government Overreach. Stewart said he invited Colbeck and Canton Democrat Dian Slavens, the current state representative for the 21st District who has announced she’ll also seek the 7th Senate seat. The state Senate 7th District has included, until now, the cities of Belleville, Flat Rock, Gibraltar, part of Northville, Plymouth, Rockwood, Trenton and Woodhaven, along with Brownstown, Canton, Grosse Ile, Huron, Northville, Plymouth, Sumpter and Van Buren townships. The district has since been redrawn to include the Plymouths, Canton, part of Northville, Northville Township and the cities of Wayne and Livonia. Slavens said Thursday she was forced to decline Stewart’s invitation because of a previous commitment. Colbeck said he’s heavily involved in budget work. “I’m focused on problem-solving, not politicking right now,” he said.

Woman killed in one-car freeway crash

By Matt Jachman
Staff Writer

An Ann Arbor woman died Thursday from injuries suffered in a one-car crash on M-14 in Plymouth Township. Kimberly Bauer, 53, was pronounced dead at Botsford Hospital in Farmington Hills after being rushed there Thursday, said Lt. Mike Shaw, a Michigan State Police spokesman. Police are awaiting autopsy results and a final report on the accident investigation. The crash occurred just before noon on eastbound M-14, just west of Sheldon, Shaw said. The subsequent investigation and crash reconstruction closed a stretch of the freeway until about 3 p.m. Bauer, Shaw said, was driving a Toyota Prius and was apparently going too fast for road conditions when she lost control. The car went into the ditch in the freeway median, he said, and rolled over several times. “She wasn’t belted in at the time, so she was ejected from the vehicle,” Shaw said. There were no passengers in the Prius and no other vehicles were involved in the crash, he said. There were no preliminary indications that drugs or alcohol played a role in the crash, Shaw said.

W-W trustees pick Walker to lead school board

By Sue Mason
Staff Writer

The Wayne-Westland Board of Education has picked Shawna Walker to serve as its president for 2014. A member of the board since 2008, Walker replaces Carol Middel, who decided to step down. Walker moves up from the job of treasurer, which she had held for two years. “This is a new seat for me. I’m sure I’ll make some mistakes along the way,” the Westland resident said during the board’s organizational meeting last week. “Thank you for trusting me to lead you.”

Walker

Middel, who had indicated at the board’s December meeting that she would not seek a third term as president, replaces John Goci as secretary. “I served 2½ years as president, some days were diamonds, some days were rocks,” the Canton resident said in vacating the president’s seat. “However, more days were diamonds.” The board also decided to keep Thomas Buckalew of Wayne as vice president and tapped Frederick Weaver of Westland as treasurer.

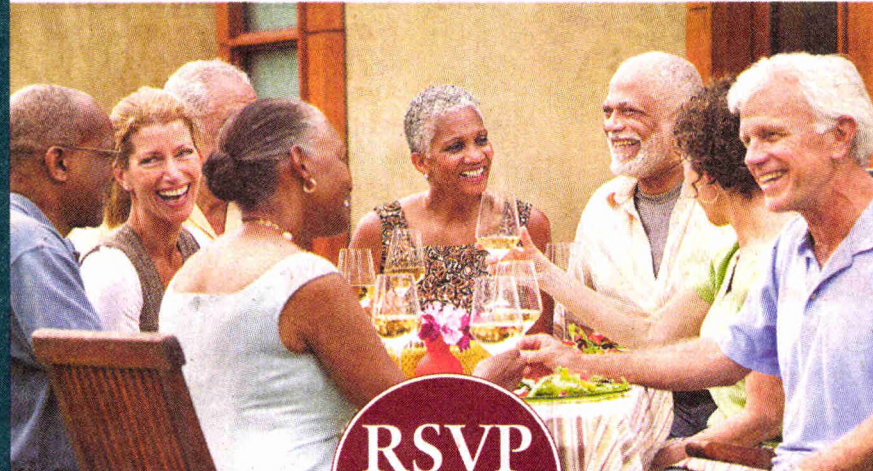

Trustee Charles “Trav” Grffin, who opted not to seek a board office, congratulated the new leadership team, telling officers that he looked forward to working with them. “We’re here to work together, we’re here to do that,” he said. “I’m look forward to working with the board and school officers for the betterment of this district.” Goci also offered his congratulations to the new officers, telling them, “You have a huge task ahead of you.” Obviously disappointed after failing to win the president’s seat, he and Trustee Sally Madison had cast dissenting votes for the four nominees.

Schools search for alumni nominations

Wayne-Westland's John Glenn and Wayne Memorial high schools are putting out a call for nominations for their respective alumni awards.

The Faculty Council at John Glenn is seeking nominations for the recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award. The graduation ceremony now includes the presentation of the award to a graduate who has gone on to achieve excellence.

People can nominate a John Glenn graduate who has earned distinction in their field of endeavor following graduation by contacting Karen Duhl, counseling secretary at John Glenn High School, in writing at 36105 Marquette, Westland, MI 48185 or by phone at 734-419-2332. The deadline is Feb. 21.

The Faculty Council will review all applications and select the nominee to be honored with this year's commencement ceremony May 31.

Wayne Memorial also is looking for nominations for its Distinguished Alumni Medal.

"We have had many outstanding people graduate from Wayne Memorial," Principal Kevin Weber said. "Many have contributed significantly to the betterment of society on a local, state, national or international level. The Distinguished Alumni Award is our way of honoring an outstanding graduate on an annual basis."

This award also has become a part of the annual commencement ceremony of Wayne Memorial High School. Each winner is awarded a medal with the school seal.

"This is an opportunity for our current graduating class to hear first-hand from a former alumnus who has made his/her mark on society," Weber said.

Nominations can be sent to Pam Rawson, secretary to the principal, at Wayne Memorial High School, 3001 Fourth St., Wayne, MI 48184 or by phone at 734-419-2206.

An announcement of the winner will be made in mid-May and the recipient will then be honored at commencement May 31. Nominations are due by Feb. 24.

Steve Luxenberg, the author of "Annie's Ghosts," will be at Schoolcraft College on Thursday, Jan. 30, as part of the Great Michigan Read. DAVE TRUMPIE

Schoolcraft's Pageturners host author Steve Luxenberg

Pageturners, Schoolcraft College's book discussion club, will host a special Meet the Author event, featuring the author of Annie's Ghosts: A Journey into a Family Secret, the book selected for the 2013-14 Great Michigan Read project.

Detroit native and associate editor of the Washington Post, Steve Luxenberg, will discuss Annie's Ghosts, what inspired the book and his insights into the writing process with students, faculty, staff and the community during his visit at 1:15 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 30, at the VisTa-Tech Center on the college's main campus on Haggerty, north of Six Mile, in Livonia.

Annie's Ghosts is part memoir, part detective story and part history. As the author tries to understand his mother's reasons for hiding her sister's existence, Luxenberg takes readers on a journey into his mother's world of the 1930s and 1940s, where he explores how a poor immigrant family manages life with a child who has special needs.

Annie's Ghosts is a story about family secrets, personal journeys, genealogy, mental disability and illness, poverty and immigration. It is a story of re-framing one's self-understanding once a family secret is revealed, providing insight into how our identities are shaped by learning something shockingly new about our history.

Two additional student-led book discussions will be held at 4 p.m. Monday, Jan. 27, and at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 28, in the Bradner Library on the main campus. Pageturners also will host a movie screening of Stories We Tell at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, Jan. 29, in Liberal Arts on the main campus.

Stories We Tell is a documentary by Sarah Polley that explores her family's secrets - including one related to Polley's own identity - and looks at the relationship between Polley's parents, including the revelation that the filmmaker was the product of an extramarital affair.

Upcoming Pageturners book discussions and events will focus on The Great Gatsby in February and Picking Cotton in March. All Pageturners events and activities are free and open to the public. Copies of the selected books are available at the Schoolcraft College bookstore at a discounted price.

For more information about Pageturners, go online to sites.google.com/site/scpageturners/.

Wayne-Westland offers in-district Schools of Choice for 2014-15

Wayne-Westland Community Schools will offer district residents a Schools of Choice program for the 2014-15 year for students in kindergarten through 12th grade.

The Schools of Choice program provides parents the opportunity to move their child from one school to another within the boundaries of the school district provided there is room available in the school. Transportation to and from the school of choice must be provided by the parent or legal guardian.

School district residents who would like their child to attend an elementary, middle or high school other than their school of residency must submit a 2014-15 Schools of Choice application, which will be available in every Wayne-Westland school by Friday, Jan. 31. The applications will be accepted in the Pupil Accounting Office at the Board of Education, 36745 Marquette, Westland, between Jan. 31 and March 3.

Applications received according to the time lines will permit, if space is available, selected students to begin the 2014-15 year in their school of choice. If more students apply for a grade/building than there are openings, a random selection process will be used to select students. The names of students not selected will be placed on a waiting list for 2014-15.

Current Schools of Choice students must reapply to remain eligible for the program next year.

After the deadlines, Schools of Choice applications will be accepted until Aug. 28 at the elementary or middle school the parent/guardian would like the child to attend. These names will be added to the 2014-15 school year waiting lists on a first-come, first-served basis. Building principals will use the waiting lists to notify qualified students of an opening. Building principals will be allowed to place Schools of Choice students only through Sept. 19. No Schools of Choice placements will be made after this date.

A Schools of Choice student can be moved back to his/her home school if an overcrowding situation occurs within the first 10 weeks of the school year. After 10 weeks, the student will be permitted to remain in the school for the remainder of the school year, provided all other conditions continue to be satisfied.

W-W STUDENTS SCORE BIG WITH AUTO SHOW POSTERS

By Sue Mason
Staff Writer

The graphics design program at Wayne-Westland's William D. Ford Career Technical Center is continuing its winning ways in the North American International Auto Show high school poster contest.

Three students at the center took home four of 16 awards given out in the annual contest, which drew a record 989 entries from 73 high schools from around the state.

The William D. Ford students swept the 12th-grade awards, taking first, second and third place. Jennifer Tigani, a senior at John Glenn High School, had a first for the contest, winning first and second place in the 12th-grade awards. She received $750 in prize money. Ron Malmsten, a senior at the Tinkham Alternative Center, received $100 after placing third in the 12th-grade awards. Veronica Peterson, a junior at John Glenn, received $250 for her second-place finish in the 11th-grade awards.

"I was very happy with the entries we submitted this year," instructor Steve Paulsen said. "We submitted about 25 posters, all of which were well-designed and could have been winners. Many of the posters were also entered in Scholastic Art Awards and I'm sure they will do well as a strong addition to students' portfolios."

The NAIAS 2014 chairman Bob Shuman, a General Motors automotive designer, a College for Creative Studies instructor and a State Farm Insurance representative judged the posters. All winning entries are posted on the official NAIAS website, naias.com, and are on display at the auto show at Cobo Hall in Detroit now through Jan. 26.

The prizes ranged from $1,000 for the Chairmen's Award, which went to Lindsey Simon, a 12th-grade student at Romeo Engineering and Technology Center in Washington, to $100 honorable mentions at the 10th-, 11th- and 12th-grade levels. There also were awards for Designer's Best of Show-Digital, Designer's Best of Show-Traditional, Most Creative, Best Use of Color and Best Theme awards. Shuman selected the winning entry, which is in the official NAIAS program.

"The record number of entries speaks volumes about interest in NAIAS and global auto industry," Shuman said. "What is especially important is that these students exhibited the creative talent that is so critical to the success of this industry. We congratulate the winning artists."

'Visually pleasing'

Tigani's first-place poster displays the likeness of the auto show in a "colorful and simplistic yet visually pleasing way."

"The winning poster was really fun to create with the colors and alignment," the Westland resident said. "It took some time to perfect the idea I was trying to portray, but with a lot of work, the end result was very satisfying."

With the second poster, Tigani wanted to do something different from the "sleek and clean automotive posters" she has seen in the past. She decided to create a poster with a "real grungy look."

Tigani plans to pursue a career as professional graphic designer and illustrator. She plans to apply to the College for Creative Studies in Detroit, as well as various other art and design schools.

"I want to work to improve my skills," she said. "I want to do something great with my art and be happy doing it."

As for the prize money, she plans to use it to either buy a better computer to do more graphic design work and digital art or add it to her college fund.

Paulsen works with students, making suggestions to improve their entries. According to Tigani, he advised her to experiment with color in her posters. He also worked with Peterson, guiding her through the technical process.

"I'm new to graphic design and still learning the software," Peterson said.

Her winning poster has a contrasting color scheme against the black background, making it attractive to the eye. It was created in Adobe Illustrator and is completely vector art.

The Westland resident is hoping to attend a visual arts college for traditional illustration and graphic design "to help my talents grow and flourish."

"I want to be successful in the future while still doing what I love," she said, adding that she plans to give a portion of her prize money to her family and put the rest in her college fund.

Play on numbers

Malmsten's poster played off the numbers 2 and 5 for the 25th annual NAIAS and was paired with the show's logo. It was created using Adobe Illustrator and Photoshop. I grouped together the 2 and the 5.

"I used two raster technical drawings of an engine to add some detail in the background," the Belleville resident said. "I went through at least five different color studies and used the selected one out of popular outsider opinions."

He added that Paulsen provided a reference image that he used for inspiration.

Malmsten hopes to start his own design and printing business. He wants to make and sell various objects from home, including clothes, posters, 3-D printed sculptures, as well as do client work.

The prize money, he said, he will "probably stuff it in a hole in a wall and seal it up for someone to discover sometime in the future when paper money may be obsolete."

Paulsen has had his students enter the contest pretty much from when it started. He has described it as the best contest there is for students of their age.

"The prize money is very generous and the recognition the students receive is a real ego-booster," he said. "I really want to express my gratitude to the Detroit Auto Dealers Association for sponsoring the contest."

Demmer Ford proud to be a partner

By Jay Grossman
Staff Writer

Jack Demmer Ford is right across the street from the Michigan Assembly Plant, in the heart of Ford country.

"We're in a perfect location," General Sales Manager Bob Faust said. "There are so many hard-working people at that plant and we're just proud of everything they've done for Ford Motor and this area."

Located at 37300 Michigan Ave., the dealership has been part of the Wayne-Westland community for over 60 years. Heading into 2014, Faust sees a bright future.

"We've had increases every year the last four years in a row – and the momentum is still going," he said. "Ford has a tremendous product lineup ... we've got a newly designed Mustang coming out in 2015 ... we've got the 2015 F-150 that's going to have an aluminum body."

"Six of our models have aggressive sign-and-drive leases: we've got the Fusion, the Focus,

The all-new Mustang was on display at the Detroit auto show. DAVID BLOOM the Edge, Escape, F-150 and the Taurus. We also have an 'early bird program' between now and May 31 in which we'll pay the last three lease payments on selected models."

It's turning into another banner year for the entire auto industry. Faust said the fact that Ford Motor managed to make it through the tough times on its own makes the recovery even better. "Obviously they've been in a position where they didn't have to have the government bail them out," he said. "Mr. Mulally has done a tremendous job turning the company around – that's helped to hire a lot of people across the street.

"The biggest problems we faced in this area are unemployment and people moving out of state, and that seems to have to come to a halt. Unemployment is gradually inching downward and people are no longer leaving to relocate elsewhere. I only see good things – there's no reason to think we're going to go backward."

As for the success of Jack Demmer Ford over the past six decades, Faust said the answer is found in the staff and the products.

"We've got an incredible amount of experience in sales and service," he said. "Our average seniority on the sales floor is 17 years, and because of that we get a ton of repeat business and a ton of referral business. We're a President's Award Winner – that's the highest honor Ford Motor can bestow on a dealership for service and customer satisfaction."

"But most of all, we have a real family environment here, and everyone who comes here is treated like family."

Detroit Lions' Joique Bell wows the fans at auto show

By Jay Grossman
Staff Writer

With apologies to Joe Biden, it was Detroit Lions running back Joique Bell who stole the spotlight at the North American International Auto Show on Thursday.

Appearing at a Comcast business reception, Bell signed autographs for a crowd of fans, took photographs and talked about his future with the team.

"I'm a hometown guy and I love playing in Detroit. I think we have the best fans around in the league," said Bell, who played his college ball at Wayne State University and bounced around the NFL for several years before joining the Lions in 2012.

He's now one of the top production players on the team. Heading into restricted free agency, Bell said it's his desire to stay with the Lions.

"We really have some talent on the roster. I think we can go a long way," he said, adding the team needs to cut down on penalties if it wants to take that next step into the playoffs.

Bell, 27, who was born in Benton Harbor, was signed by the Buffalo Bills as an undrafted free agent in 2010. While in college, he earned extra money working as a security guard for the Lions.

"I'd watch the other players coming into practice and told myself one day that's going to be me," he said. "And here I am."

That rags-to-football story had a positive impact on Bell. He's a hard-nosed player on the field, but a regular guy when the game is over. On Thursday, he was joking with the fans and practically begging them to ask him more questions.

He's looking forward to the upcoming season and is familiar with new Lions coach Jim Caldwell, having played for him in Indianapolis.

His least favorite place to play is Green Bay, and he's picking Seattle over Denver to win the Super Bowl this year.

He thinks the team's secondary will play much better next year, providing the players can stay healthy. His all-time favorite running back is the legendary Walter Payton.

Bell said he'll always appreciate former coach Jim Schwartz for believing in him and giving him a chance to run the ball.

"It's an emotional time seeing him go because he's the one who brought me in," he said. "But he wished us the best and said he'll be cheering for us – unless he's across the sidelines."

Time-traveling DeLorean on display at auto show

Film buffs heading to the North American International Auto Show will want to check out the iconic 1981 DeLorean DMC-12 that was used in the movies Back to the Future and Russell Brand's Arthur.

The car is completely restored and on loan from Universal Studios.

It's making a first appearance at an auto show and is located at the Covisat display along the front lobby of Cobo Hall.

"Back to the Future" is here at the auto show.

Fans will want look for the famous "flux capacitor" on the car, which we now know is the key to time travel.

Comcast connects to industry

By Jay Grossman
Staff Writer

Mobility is king when it comes to communications, and nobody knows that better than Comcast.

"We're growing tremendously and we're really expanding the product set, both from a voice perspective and from a data perspective," said Jim Tyrrell, executive director of voice product management for Comcast. "We're building out a complete Wi-Fi network – having fast Internet speed in an office is great, but again a lot of people are going to be mobile."

Comcast hosted several receptions at the North American International Auto Show throughout Industry Week to tout its ever-growing presence in the business community. Comcast Business reported about $2.4 billion in revenue last year, up from $256 million in 2006.

"Comcast Business has over 5,000 employees today. We grew in seven years from nothing to 5,000 workers – that's a pretty big commitment to the business segment," said Tyrrell, who flew in Thursday from Philadelphia to spend the day at the auto show and meet with customers.

Faster speeds, more data

Tim Collins is the senior vice president of the company's Heartland Region that serves 1.7 million customers in Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky and Arkansas. The headquarters are in Plymouth.

"Comcast Business is the focal point of our presence here at the auto show," said Collins, a former Northville resident who now lives in Birmingham. "It's the fastest-growing party of Comcast, yet most people just consider us a residential TV company. We're so much more than that."

Jim Tyrrell, executive director of Voice Product Management for Comcast, talks about the cable industry at the Detroit auto show.

Consider these three markets that Comcast is targeting:

» The automotive industry, which Collins describes as incredibly "data-centric" in how it operates. "The industry is a very complex network of manufacturers, designers, vendors and dealerships – there's a lot of linkage together and data is what links it all together. That's really the key."

» Governmental, universities and colleges: "Again, generally far-flung facilities that they need to stitch together with data pipes and video services."

» The medical industry: "Every hospital has doctor offices all over," said Collins. "And now they're getting into remote medicine where an X-ray diagnostic technician might be sitting in New York somewhere. You have an intense image that you need to send."

Along those same lines, there's the Affordable Care Act which has a mountain of requirements for doctors in terms of record-keeping.

The Plymouth headquarters has around 550 employees and another 200 technicians that are staged out of the building. Comcast also recently opened a retail store in Plymouth where customers can check out the latest gadgets.

"This gives our customers a hands-on experience with our latest products," said Collins. "These are things people want to see and feel – they're not going to make a decision over the phone."

The future is here

"By the end of the year there are going to be more mobile devices than there are people in the world," said Tyrrell. "I've heard from some analysts there are actually more mobile devices connected to the Internet than there are toothbrushes in the world."

As for the future, Tyrrell believes the data bandwidth is "going to continue to explode." He anticipates there will be a lot more connectivity from machine-to-machine, especially with cars.

He also believes there will be much more targeted advertising in the future, where customers will walk into stores and products will "recognize" them based on their mobile device.

Collins said the company sees itself as "standing between the intersection of media and technology ... and it's dramatically changing the way we communicate and relate to each other."

He also said companies need to understand the difference between one generation and the next.

"Consider the Millennial generation," he said. "Ten years ago if you saw someone in an office wearing headphones and listening to music while they were working, you'd throw them out of the office. You try doing that today and you're going to lose every Millennial you have in the building."

Denso plans $10M expansion to Southfield headquarters

By Nathan Mueller
Staff Writer

Japanese automotive supplier Denso confirmed its commitment to North America with the announcement Tuesday at the North American International Auto Show of a $10 million expansion to its North American headquarters in Southfield.

The investment, which also calls for the creation of 176 new jobs, includes the purchase of an 81,000-square-foot office building on its current campus that will increase the company's research and development operations.

It was just last year that Denso used the North American International Auto Show to announce plans to invest more than $150 million in facilities and add more than 400 new jobs to the state.

"As you can see, we are committed to the North American market, the most competitive and challenging market in the world," said Terry Helgesen, senior vice president of industry and government affairs for Denso. "No one would have said this five years ago, but it is a great time to be in the automotive industry."

It is apparently a great time to be Denso as well, as they are exceeding expectations when it comes to the four-year plan of investing $1 billion and creating 2,000 jobs in North America, including 1,200 in the United States.

In fact, they have already created more than 1,100 of the 1,200 jobs with 425 of them in Michigan.

The Southfield expansion will help with the development of next-generation technologies focused on improving fuel economy and safety, and will also support the development of components for electric hybrid vehicles, gasoline direct injection systems, high output alternators and infotainment and connectivity products.

"The city of Southfield has gone through some difficult economic times in the last five years, however, we are beginning to see some positive indicators of a strong economic comeback," said Mayor Brenda Lawrence.

"We are so pleased that Denso has their North American headquarters in Southfield, as they continue to grow with a $10 million investment and expansion in the city.

"As we celebrate the auto industry resurgence and the 2014 North American International Auto Show, I am so very proud, excited and energized by Denso's continued growth which will help to fuel the economic comeback of the entire region."

Making cars safer

The company also has formed the Advanced Human Factors Evaluator for Automotive Distraction consortium with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology

AgeLab and Touchstone Evaluations to "develop new perspectives and methodologies for a holistic approach to measure driver demand," said Justin McBride, senior manager of body control systems.

Initial partners include Honda and Subaru research and development, and Jaguar Land Rover.

Addressing safety issues as it pertains to teenage drivers is one of Denso's top priorities.

And instead of just asking drivers, they are studying them.

"We watch their eyes, we measure their heart rate, we measure their skin conductance and then we build a model around that understanding," he said.

The ultimate goal is to create a Human Machine Interface that will "manage and connect all the sensors and hardware in the vehicle while know what impacts the driver inside and outside the vehicle."

Bells and whistles: Luxury rides rule at the Detroit auto show

Most people go to auto shows to look at vehicles they might be inclined to buy one day.

Not me. I like to sit in cars I can't afford. And that's exactly what I did Wednesday while walking around the North American International Auto Show. Pass on the Civic, show me the Bentley.

Jay Grossman

I started with the 2014 Lincoln MKS, which tops out at around $55,000. It boasts a great stereo, quiet interior, all the latest technology, a terrific suspension system and a relatively new featured called the Lincoln Drive Control.

If the MKS is true luxury, the Ford F-350 King Ranch is all muscle and leather. The pickup truck offers plenty of leg room, second-row seating for three people and a stampede of amenities. It sells for around $65,000. I don't need a pickup to cart my laptop, but I'll gladly cruise Woodward in the King Ranch.

From there, I bopped over to the 2014 Mazda 6 Grand Touring sedan that sells for around $33,000. Very expensive looking, lots of detail, a very fine ride.

"It has all the bells and whistles of a luxury car," a company spokesman said. "The only thing it doesn't have is a luxury price."

Well, too bad, mister. I'm looking for a luxury price. I kept moving.

Then I came upon Jaguar. They know what I'm talking about when I say "luxury equals big price tag." I was shown the Jaguar XJR, the company's flagship sedan that sells for around $116,000.

The Jaguar spokeswoman started naming all the features, from supercharged engines to really nice tires. I felt like I had been there/done that - until she spoke two magic words: massage seats.

Yes, the seats give you a massage while you're driving. Or just sitting in your driveway, alone and happy. The family can wait, I need a massage first.

I left the XJR promising to return one day. Fickle me, I never gave Jaguar another thought as I came upon the 2014 Corvette Stingray, a.k.a. the North American Car of the Year.

It sells loaded for around $74,000. Instead of me describing the car, here's what a woman standing nearby had to say about the Stingray: "People smile when they sit in that car. They feel hot. Their testosterone is going."

You want to feel hot?

Everybody loves a Bentley.

You want your testosterone to get going? Keep your massage seats, friend. I want the Corvette.

A rare Lexus LFA was on display nearby. The car sells for $375,000 and only 500 were made. Jay Leno has the only convertible Lexus LFA ever built, while Paris Hilton owns a pink one.

I asked who owned the Lexus LFA on display, but they wouldn't give me a name. I asked if this unknown person would mind if I sat in their car and they said yes, the person would mind. I moved on.

I saw (but couldn't touch) the Porsche Panamera Turbo S executive series that sells for $229,610. Same for the new Mercedes S Class

Coupe that sells for around $220,000 and the Bentley Mulsanne that sells for a smooth $300,000 - look but don't touch. I checked out the Chrysler 300C John Varvatos Luxury Edition that starts at $41,415 and was impressed with the "dark mocha wood interior accents." Actually, anything that makes me think of hot chocolate is impressive.

I wanted to end the day in old-school style and I found it in the all-new 2015 Escalade that comes out in October and will sell for upward of $65,000.

Painted black, the Escalade felt fabulous in every way possible. All the gears are easily adjustable; the console doesn't overwhelm you with gadgets and the digital dashboard can bring up a 3-D GPS navigation system.

It's a four-wheeled cruise ship for the rich and famous. I just want to come along for the ride.

DIA director talks bankruptcy, museum changes at Town Hall

By David Veselenak
Staff Writer

Detroit Institute of Arts Director Graham W.J. Beal told Livonia Town Hall members Wednesday morning of a story of a famous painting that was taken down for examination last year. It appeared workers picked the wrong day to take it down.

Beal said the painting was to be examined with some new technology the museum had. The only problem was, it was the same day it was determined the DIA could be forced to sell some of its collection to help pay Detroit's debt as a result of the city's bankruptcy filing.

"The day that it was announced that the collection was under threat because of the bankruptcy, we had some new digital photography and some new equipment," he said. "People said, 'Oh my goodness, they're already selling (the art).'"

Beal spoke to several hundred people as a part of the Livonia Town Hall series at St. Mary's Orthodox Church. It was the third forum for the series, which brings in prominent speakers to talk about issues.

In addition to touching on the issues the DIA has had with the bankruptcy case, Beal spoke about the efforts the museum has made to make the facility more friendly to those who are not as well-versed in art.

One effort, Beal said he employed, was to get more than just the curators involved in placing artwork around the museum to provide a different perspective.

"Rather than opening doors for people, we were actually putting up a screen for most people," he said. "I put together teams, drawn from across the whole staff and for 18 months, in addition to their day jobs, people from PR development worked with curators and educators to learn about each collection and to draw out the stories of interest to them, not what was interesting to the curator."

Hearing more about the museum re-inforced Pat Gransee's feelings that the DIA is a very important part of southeast Michigan and should be kept around no matter what happens with the bankruptcy case in Detroit.

The Novi resident said she had confidence area residents will rally behind the museum and do what they can to protect it.

"I think people will be in uproar," she said. "I think people will come back to support it."

The museum began looking at alternate ways of funding its projects several years ago after much of its state aid was cut. It was decided to ask metro Detroit voters for a millage to support the DIA. The millage was approved in 2012 by citizens in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties. That millage provides roughly $23 million a year to the institution for operational costs.

"That makes us stable," Beal said. "Most American museums get that much from their own unrestricted endowment and that's what we're aiming for."

Beal, who came to the DIA in 1999 after serving at other museum in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Omaha, said he wanted to get patrons out of the habit of something he calls "gliding," something museum visitors do that gets them through the museum but only touches on the artwork's surface.

"After 45 minutes, you basically have 'done' the DIA," he said. "You haven't actually seen anything. You haven't actually likely experienced any sort of important feeling."

Livonia resident Helen Galindo said she could identify with Beal's description of how patrons walk through the facility. The most recent time she visited the museum, however, she was unable to walk as much, allowing her to take in more of the artwork on a detailed level that she hadn't before.

"I was laughing at his description of the museum shuffle, because that's always been the way it's been for me," she said. "For the first time, I was just able to sit and enjoy certain things that I hadn't had time to focus on while I was there."

"It was a wonderful experience."

Livonia library to show film on human trafficking

The Michigan Abolitionist Project will sponsor the free showing of a short movie Thursday at the Livonia Public Library to help teach youth and adults about the tactics of human traffickers and how to protect themselves.

The 20-minute film Chosen, by Shared Hope International, is appropriate for those age 13 years and up. It will be shown at 7 p.m. in Room A of the Civic Center Library, 32777 Five Mile Road.

Chosen tells the story of two teenage girls deceived into trafficking. Eighteen-year-old Brianna was an honor-roll student and cheerleader and worked at a local café. Thirteen-year-old Lacy was a member of her youth group and a volunteer in her community.

Both were manipulated. Both were exploited. Both were chosen.

January is National Slavery & Human Trafficking Prevention Month.

Each year in the United States, more than 100,000 children are exploited in the commercial sex industry (National Center For Missing and Exploited Children). Because sex trafficking is an issue rarely discussed at home, in school or in church, parents and children are often unaware of the dangers that face America's youth.

MAP invites the community to learn what they can do to protect youth and to prevent human trafficking.

To learn more about MAP and find additional venues for the film screenings, visit the MAP website at <http://www.michiganabolitionistproject.org/>.

'Camp Rock' eyed as another local hit for area kids

By Joanne Maliszewski
Staff Writer

On the heels of last fall's TARZAN The Stage Musical — drawing young cast members from 31 schools who performed to sold-out audiences — the Farmington Hills Youth Theatre is counting on another Broadway favorite to continue riding the wave of success.

Auditions for Camp Rock are coming up and Mel Sheatzley, youth theater director, urges kids throughout the area to jump on the bandwagon — as they did for TARZAN.

Auditions are scheduled for noon to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 25-26, at the Costick Center, 28600 11 Mile, in Farmington Hills.

"The auditions are very comfortable and easy," said Nancy Coumounduros, Farmington Hills Cultural Arts Division supervisor. "We were so proud of the kids' performances in TARZAN. The feeling of camaraderie with the kids was exceptional."

And she wants kids to know they don't have to have previous theatrical experience. The youth theater program is designed to be fun. "We have had kids who never had any experience for TARZAN and we had some who had," Coumounduros said.

No doubt about it, Sheatzley said, auditions are not high pressure: "We try to make it fun. We play with the kids before they audition. If they are not ready at a certain moment to audition, we tell them to take their time."

All audition materials are available online at www.fhgov.com/youththeatre.

Not that anyone interested in auditioning has to practice in advance. "They can come in blind. There are people who will be there to help the kids," Sheatzley said.

A fun show

Camp Rock, a Disney production, is about the adventures of a group of talented kids who had planned to spend the summer jamming at the camp. Then they find out there is actually a newer and flashier camp in town. The focus of the musical is how the kids fight to keep their Camp Rock open.

Performances of Camp Rock will be at 7 p.m. Friday, April 25, 2 p.m. Saturday, April 26, and 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. Sunday, April 27. The show will run again the following weekend: 7 p.m. Saturday, May 3, and 2 p.m. Sunday, May 4. The show will be at the Costick Center Stage.

To give as many kids as possible stage time, Sheatzley will have two casts for Camp Rock. She plans to cast 60 kids for each group.

"In this show, which is not normal, we have 22 speaking parts," Sheatzley said. "But that's what makes Camp Rock so much fun."

Kids will have the

opportunity to sing, act and dance. There are also some roles, such as camp counselors, for adults.

Unlike TARZAN, which was filled with life messages, Camp Rock offers contemporary music and dance and is more about just having fun. The set and scenery, meanwhile, will also be what Sheatzley called "upscale" with bleachers and the whole area painted in white. The stage for Camp Rock also will be extended some six feet.

Costumes will be made by Rachele Willnus, who also worked on the TARZAN attire. She measures the kids for the costumes so they fit.

As a mom whose two daughters grew up in youth theater, Sheatzley encourages parents to let their kids give theater a try. It's fun and helps kids form long-lasting friendships while learning an art form, she said.

"From my perspective as a mom, it really helps build their confidence and self-esteem and their ability to talk to anyone. It's also a fun experience to meet all kinds of kids in all age groups. It is neat to see the older kids mentoring the younger kids and the younger kids working to be like the older kids."

Factor in goals, risk when investing money for short term

Q: Dear Rick: I just sold my condominium and, after everything, I have about $100,000. I will need the money in about five or six months. I don't want to put it into the bank, because the bank isn't paying anything. I was thinking of buying some dividend-paying stocks and holding them for the next five or six months. The other alternative would be to buy an S&P 500 Fund like the Vanguard Index 500. I know you like that fund because you've recommended it in the past. What do you think - the dividend stock or the Vanguard Index 500?

Rick Bloom
MONEY MATTERS

A: I would not recommend either a dividend-paying stock or the Vanguard Index 500 Fund. Although I like the Vanguard Fund, it is not appropriate based upon your goals and objectives.

I recommend either a money-market fund or a short-term CD. Although the returns are not very favorable, it is the appropriate investment for you.

I've always been a believer that a good investor is one who focuses on their individual goals and objectives. Your goal is five to six months down the road. When someone has a short-term goal, stocks or stock-based mutual funds like the Vanguard Index 500 are inappropriate. My reasoning is that markets are volatile and anything can happen over a short time frame. Keep in mind we have not had a 10-percent correction for nearly two years and it would not be surprising if we had one this year.

Since you need your money over a short period of time, if the market did turn south, you may not have time to recoup your losses.

Although rates of return are low, I believe with a five- or six-month time frame, you need to consider CDs, money market accounts and saving accounts. Shop around to get a little higher rate of return. Look at using Internet banks or out-of-state banks. In addition, don't forget to check out a credit union. Many credit unions pay rates substantially higher than banks.

In shopping around for CDs and money market accounts, the key is to make sure that they are federally insured. Under no circumstances do you want to buy a CD from a non-federally insured institution. One very good website to shop rates is www.bankrate.com. All the rates it quotes are from federally insured institutions.

In today's world of low interest rates, many investors have gotten greedy and have chased higher return investments without factoring in risk.

Every investment has risks, however, the key is to manage that risk. If someone was investing for 10 years down the road, I would not recommend CDs.

After all, they're too aggressive when you factor in they will not keep up with the increased cost-of-living and taxes. On the other hand, if - as in your case - the money is needed five or six months down the road, investing in any investment that has principal fluctuation, such as a stock, is too aggressive.

That is why it is always important that before you invest, you understand and factor in the risk of that investment.

Good luck.

Local actor takes canoe trip down memory lane in movie

By Beth Jachman
Staff Writer

It was a joyous trip down memory lane for actor Robert Cicchini. That's how the Redford native describes his work on WaterWalk, a movie with a distinct Michigan and Midwest flavor.

Soon to be released to video, the movie was made by actors and crew mostly from Michigan ranging from Cicchini, who grew up in Redford, to his friend cinematographer Bruce Schermer, who graduated from nearby Redford High School in Detroit, to Michigan natives producer Roger Rapoport and actor Chase Maser.

"For that reason all the players took a lot of pride and joy in shooting this movie," Cicchini said. "For me personally, it was just kind of a joyous trip down memory lane."

Cicchini, who attended St. Hilary Elementary and graduated from Redford Bishop Borgess, now lives in Los Angeles pursuing his acting career. Cicchini has appeared in starring, co-starring, or supporting roles in more than 25 feature films. He also appeared in more than 50 guest-starring or recurring performances on television series programs CSI, CSI NY, Desperate Housewives, NCIS, 24, The Closer, Without a Trace and Coldcase.

His longtime friend Schermer, whom he met while both were attending Wayne State, recommended him for the part of laid-off newspaper editor Steve Faulkner. Cicchini also ended up directing the film, which tells the true story of Faulkner, who after he loses his job, goes on a 1,000-mile-canoe trip with his 17-year-old son Justin. Based on a book by Faulkner, the father and son reconnect during the journey.

Rowing on the river

Together they travel along Lake Michigan's

Robert Cicchini and Chase Maser on location for the film "WaterWalk."

northern shore, through Green Bay, up the Fox River, down the Wisconsin River and finally to the Mississippi River.

The total shooting was around 30 days, but was split up over two summers, Cicchini said.

"The film was very, very difficult physically," Cicchini said. "We had a skeleton crew so everyone had to wear more than one hat."

"It was a difficult process," said Schermer, who was in town this week shooting a commercial for Detroit Mayor Mike Duggan and was on his way to the North American International Auto Show. "I had done some work on the water before and anything done on the water is difficult to do," Schermer said.

They would get the canoes in the water on location, shoot, come back to shore and then move on to the next location, he said.

And Cicchini and his co-star Maser, who played Justin, had very little experience in a canoe before filming.

The crew went on location in the Upper and Lower Peninsula, Wisconsin and Iowa. "We were on the water everywhere we went," he said, including Lake Michigan, Lake Muskegon, the Huron River, Fox River, the Mississippi River and Lake Winnebago.

"Shooting on water in and of itself is very difficult," Cicchini said. "The whole thing was on water."

It was a low-budget film, so it was very taxing, he said.

"The shoot was a lot of fun," Cicchini said.

Robert Cicchini and Chase Maser play a father and son in "WaterWalk."

Memory lane

The places he went reminded him of childhood trips up north to "areas so dear to my heart."

"It was a mix of love and joy," he said, of working in Michigan.

Cicchini's parents now live in Bloomfield Hills and his wife is from Dearborn, so he returns home twice a year and brings his 10-year-old daughter, who also loves Michigan, he said. He even maintains a close bond with about a dozen friends from the now-closed Bishop Borgess High School. "There's a main crew of guys I hung out with," he said. They got together over the holidays.

Also, during that time WaterWalk was featured at a special showing at the Redford Theater, which brought out about 400 people, Cicchini said.

On Feb. 4, the film will be released nationally in video stores and other retailers for purchase and rental.

It will also be available on Amazon and on demand via YouTube and Vudu, according to producer Rapoport.

Waterwalk is currently available from waterwalkthemovie.com. It has just been released through the end of January via video On Demand on 17 cable channels across the country, including Comcast, Cox, Time-Warner and Charter.

A complete list is at www.indemand.com on the ordering information screen.

"We continue to screen the film in theaters and there will be more showings this spring across the Midwest," Rapoport said.

Talent, depth, continuing to spark Wildcats

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

Whoever Kenn Forbes inserts into his lineup is capable of scoring points for Plymouth's varsity boys swimming and diving team, which is pretty much what happened Thursday night against Canton.

The Wildcats rolled to a 120-63 victory in the KLAA South Division match-up at Canton High School's natatorium.

"We had a lot of fun," Forbes said. "We swam a lot of off-events, didn't really load a lot up, we just wanted to see what kind of depth we had."

"It turns out we had some pretty good times, too."

Examples of Plymouth's supreme depth were all over the score sheet. In the 100-yard butterfly, for example, junior Ben Yang won with a time of 58.74 seconds. But right behind in second and third places, respectively, were teammates Brandon Burger (1:04.47) and freshman Michael Wischer (1:04.69).

The Wildcats went 1-2 in the 100 backstroke (sophomores Garrett Beauprez and Keegan Kendall with times of 1:00.61 and 1:05.23) and in the 200 IM, with sophomore Aniketh Visai topping the field (2:17.22) followed by sophomore teammate Bronson Knowles (2:18.50).

In the 200 free relay, the quartet of Wischer, Visai, junior Burger and senior captain Alex Johnson won in 1:39.15.

Plymouth also came in second (1:39.20) for another four points, with the tandem of junior Ryan Heinze, Knowles, freshman Matt Weiner and junior Ben Yang.

"Beauprez, he's solid, Heinze, Ben Yang," Forbes said, listing Thursday's standouts. "Alex Johnson, our senior captain. He comes out of nowhere all the time. He's the one that won our 'B' 200 relay for us (as anchor).

Canton sophomore Cole Malhoit keeps pushing to shave seconds off his time in the 200 free. BILL BRESLER | STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

"And then Matt Weiner and Michael Wischer are freshmen, they're really picking it up. All the freshmen are doing really well, actually."

Beauprez was stellar throughout, winning the 200 free with a time of 1:55.65, edging Canton sophomore Gerard Niermann (1:55.79).

In the 100 backstroke, Beauprez got off to a fast start against the competition and cruised to a first-place finish.

Other Plymouth victors included Heinze (50 free, 24.21), junior Thomas Huang (diving, 114.25 points) and the 400 free relay team of Johnson, Bur-

Rocks power past Chiefs

Salem's Jason Newel scores late to spark 4-3 victory

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

Power finally was restored for Salem's varsity boys hockey team Friday night.

In the nick of time, too. The Rocks scored two goals with the extra skater — including the winner by senior forward Jason Newel with 1:53 remaining — to nip Canton 4-3 at Arctic Edge Arena.

Newel, parked in front of Chiefs' junior goalie Nick Borg, one-timed a centering pass from senior forward Jake Sealy inside the left post for the KLAA South Division win.

"Our power play's been struggling lately, we haven't scored a lot," said Newel, referring to the Rocks going 0-12 combined in recent losses to Livonia Stevenson and Orchard Lake St. Mary's. "We were trying to stay high in the slot. It worked out for us."

"It was a perfect pass and the goalie was over just enough to slide it by."

Newel had two goals and an assist for Salem (6-7 overall, 5-3 in the division). His younger brother, sophomore forward Evan Newel, also scored a goal.

Salem's power play goal came after the Chiefs were unable to cash in on an extended 5-on-3 power play.

"It was a chance to take the game, definitely take the lead with a few minutes to go in the third period," Canton head coach Brad Barath said. "But we weren't able to get it set up the way we wanted to and get the shot that we wanted. Salem did a good job of killing it."

Canton's biggest chance during the 49-second 5-on-3 was a booming slap shot from the left point by senior defenseman Colin Smith that Salem junior goalie Dillon Phillips smothered.

Momentum swing

"Anytime you're able to kill off a 5-on-3 like that, especially in that situation within the game really has the tendency to swing the momentum your way," Salem head coach Ryan Ossensmacker said. "That's a tribute to our killers doing a nice job and Dillon standing tall in net."

"Once we killed it off, we went back to work, got the power play, and that's something that's been letting us down a little bit."

Jason Newel opened the night's scoring with an unassisted tally just six minutes into the contest and that was the score entering the second.

Seniors key Plymouth shutout, set record

Rocks closing in on KLAA Central title

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

Plymouth's varsity wrestling team had a perfect night Wednesday.

The Wildcats routed visiting Livonia Churchill 72-0 in a KLAA South Division dual meet and, as a bonus, the record-breaking careers of seven standout seniors were honored.

Head coach Quinn Guernsey said seniors Daniel Ahearn, Sam Campbell, Jon Conn, Sofus Nielson, Joey Shaver, Tarek Tamimi and Mohamad Youssef will finish their prep careers having helped the Wildcats (26-2 overall, 3-0 in the KLAA South) set a school record for dual meet wins by a graduating class. As of Wednesday, that number was 76.

All but Campbell got into the dual meet over the Chargers.

Ahearn won by a 7-1 decision over James Kelly at 135, with Nielson, Shaver and Youssef all pinning their opponents.

Nielson needed 5:56 to bring down Chase Gardner in a hard-fought bout at 152 to open the meet. In the second bout of the day, Shaver needed just 36 seconds to pin Ryan Delp.

Mohamad Youssef's pin over Spencer Blanchard at 119 required 1:26 to complete.

Meteyer to head athletics at Plymouth

District recasting duties to include all co-curriculars

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

Kyle Meteyer formerly was Salem's varsity boys track and field coach.

Now he is a Wildcat, being officially hired Tuesday by the school board to the newly created position of Plymouth

High School athletic director. He begins the job in late January.

Meteyer

Officially, the district is calling the position "assistant principal for activities and athletics."

Most basically anything involving students after 2:10 p.m. is included in our responsibilities," Meteyer wrote in an email to the Observer.

Meteyer, who this year has been teaching at Salem, added that the job's duties also include music, drama and other student clubs.

"I was a soccer coach at Plymouth from 2005-11, so I am familiar with the black and silver," Meteyer said. "Plymouth has an amazing coaching and advising staff, with plenty of success in co-curricular athletics and activities in just its 12 years of existence."

"So I'm thrilled to be able to work with the students and staff at Plymouth to take our activities to the next level. Plus, a lot of the initiatives I'll be working on will positively impact activities campus-wide."

With Meteyer's hiring, all three high schools at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park will have an administrator in charge of all activities. Longtime co-athletic directors Sue Heinzman and Tom Willette will now take over as assistant principals for activities and athletics at Canton and Salem, respectively.

Meteyer, Heinzman and Willette will report to Beth Savalox, the newly hired director of activities and athletics for the entire district. Savalox formerly directed the National Honor Society at the Park and was a history teacher at Plymouth.

"The district re-investing in co-curriculars is absolutely invigorating for me," Meteyer wrote.

"Students and staff have so much enthusiasm regarding activities and athletics, it just makes sense to harness that energy and see how far we can take it."

"The goal is to provide 'best-in-class' programming for activities and athletics. We already have great participation rates in these areas, but our goal is to find a place for every student in the district."

Canton gymnasts record top score

Chiefs remian undefeated

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

Like a locomotive gathering speed, the Canton varsity gymnastics team is on the fast track to what could be a very memorable season.

Consider Tuesday's 145.975-132.025 victory over KLAAs Kensington Division rival Livonia Red. It was the Chiefs' top team score of the year and the highest reported team score in the entire state, head coach John Cunningham noted.

Making that accomplishment more noteworthy was Jocelyn Moraw missing the dual meet due to illness, "so the score was even more impressive. The best way to describe the meet is solid, stuck routines on all events," Cunningham said.

There were 12 scores of 9.0 or better and five all-around scores above 35.475, led by Maddie Toal's 37.2.

Also having excellent days in all events were Erica Lucas (36.3), Melissa Green (35.875) and Stephanie Cox and Hailey Hodgson (35.475 each).

Individual firsts were scored by Toal (9.0 on uneven parallel bars, 9.75 on balance beam, 9.65 on floor exercise) and Lucas (9.1 on vault).

Lucas (9.55 on floor), Hodgson (9.05 on vault) and Cox (9.475 on beam in her best meet) all helped Canton's cause with second-place finishes.

Then Thursday, the host Chiefs improved to 8-0 overall with a 141.05-124.675 victory over Grosse Pointe United.

Cunningham said Canton enters this weekend's Caruss Invitational at White Lake-Lakeland as the team favorite.

Against Grosse Pointe, Lucas took firsts on vault (9.1) and balance beam (9.275), with other firsts scored by Green on floor exercise (9.15) and Toal on uneven parallel bars (9.1) and all-around (35.45).

Hodgson came in second on vault (9.1) and floor (9.075) and Cox tied for second on bars with Green (8.675).

ger, Weiner and Beauprez (3:37.99).

Progress counts

Despite his team losing by a wide margin, Canton head coach Dave Le also was relatively pleased with what transpired in the dual meet for his team (1-5, 1-1).

"We talked all week long about focusing on being competitive and racing the guy next to us and that's exactly what we did," Le said. "Almost everyone on the team that swam tonight had a best time, either a best time for the season or a lifetime best.

"To be in the middle of the season putting in the amount of work that we're doing and seeing those types of times makes you very excited for the end of the season."

Le emphasized that it's not necessarily about winning dual meets for his team, but making sure his athletes improve and are peaking when tournament time rolls around.

"Dual meets are tough. We don't have any divers this year, so we start dual meets 13 points down," Le said. "Which is a very tough thing to overcome against a team like Plymouth."

"So we focused on our individual races, working on the relays, and even though we lost by 60, that final score does not necessarily reflect where we are or what we did tonight."

Niermann and senior Jack Chaney won back-to-back events for the Chiefs.

In the former, Niermann finished first with a time of 53.10 to edge Plymouth's Heinze (53.91). Chaney's time of 6:07.26 in the 500 free was only challenged by second-place finisher Jack Boczar, a freshman who came in at 6:11.43.

Canton senior Alex Bourdreau was victorious in the 100 breaststroke, with a time of 1:07.72. He finished ahead of two Wildcats — Knowles (1:11.93) and sophomore Andrew Liakos (1:14.68).

Balancing act

According to Forbes, it is rewarding to see a grueling training regimen pay off.

"We train pretty hard, we keep the yardage up, we do a lot of strength training and keep it balanced," Forbes said. "I just mix everybody up, they all swim together, I don't necessarily have a fast lane."

"So it brings all the young guys up with them. And they show it, they've got a lot of heart."

with 11:43 left in the stanza, making it a 2-0 game. Driscoll, stationed near the right post, slammed in a cross-crease pass.

The Chiefs sliced that margin to 2-1 with just over 10 minutes to go in the frame.

Senior forward Christian Flack won a face-off and dropped the pass back to Smith at the left point. His screen shot beat Phillips (14 saves).

Salem went back to work to regain the two-goal edge and finally managed to do so with 4:47 left in the second, striking on the power play.

Evan Newel took a shot from the left circle that Borg stopped but could not corral. Newel followed his shot and jammed in the rebound.

Earning helpers on the goal were senior defenseman Cam Clark and junior forward Rich Corso.

Canton, however, rallied to knot the game on back-to-back goals by junior forward Connor Wherrett (from Smith and junior defenseman Hunter Schlapp on the power play) and junior forward Cooper Rice (assisted by Smith and freshman forward Matt Eastman).

Salem's Noah Willer (No. 19) gets a step on Canton's Cooper Rice (No. 20). BRIAN QUINTOS

The equalizer came with 2:16 remaining in the period. Salem failed to clear the zone and the puck found its way in front of Phillips, where Rice found the mark.

In the third, the Rocks went on the offensive but had trouble beating Borg, outstanding with 30 stops.

"He's a workhorse," said Barath, about Borg. "He holds us in games and he wants to win. That's what you need in a goalie."

Ossenmacher said he hoped the two goals on the power play would help his team relax down the stretch on offense.

Fowler pursues Olympic gold

Ducks defenseman to play for Team USA in Sochi Games

By Dan O'Meara
Staff Writer

A veteran of three-plus NHL seasons at age 22, Cam Fowler's still-burgeoning hockey career has already produced its share of highlights, with the promise of many more to come.

The latest was his selection earlier this month for a spot on the U.S. Olympic hockey team that will compete in the 2014 Winter Games Feb. 6-24 in Sochi, Russia.

It will be the eighth international competition for Fowler, who was raised in Farmington Hills and is now a stellar defenseman for the high-flying Anaheim Ducks.

"I wasn't sure how everything was going to shake out," Fowler said of his Olympic chances. "I knew I had a pretty good season so far and had put my name on the radar."

"While sitting there watching TV, I was very anxious to see what the decision was going to be. Once I heard my name called, it was just pure joy. I'm excited and very honored to be selected."

"I was aware that I was right on the bubble. I knew a few guys were locks to make the team and I was competing with a few others for the last spots. I knew I had played well and done pretty much all I could to make the team. At that point, it was a waiting game."

Fowler, who spent his last two years of high school in the USA Hockey Development Program in Ann Arbor, won a gold medal in the International Ice Hockey Federation World Junior and U18 World championships in 2010 and 2009, respectively.

With that background, it seems Fowler was almost destined to end up on the Olympic team eventually as the next step in his progression.

"I've been fortunate to represent my country on the big stage as an amateur," he said. "To be able to do that gave me a lot of good experience."

"Once you've played with USA Hockey, you've worn the jersey and you've represented your country, it goes a long way in the selection process."

"I think I represented my country well and played well in international tournaments and I'd like to think that helped me in the end."

Fellow Olympians

Fowler is one of seven Ducks players to be named to an Olympic team, but he'll be the lone Anaheim representative on the U.S. squad.

"It's pretty cool to have a few guys on the team be able to represent their countries," he said. "We're all very happy for each other."

"I think, maybe as it gets closer, there might be some friendly jabs thrown at each other. Right now, we're just focused on our season and the Ducks. Obviously, when it gets closer, our attention will be shifted."

Fowler, who will be joined on the U.S. team by Red Wings goalie Jimmy Howard and Livonia native Ryan Kesler of the Vancouver Canucks, thinks Team USA general manager David Poile has put together a solid team.

"I know the type of players they are and their backgrounds and I think we have a really, really good group," Fowler said. "We have guys who can do it all - a lot of skill guys, guys who can kill penalties and shut down the opponent's offense."

"I'm really excited about the group we have and expecting some big things. Hopefully, we can come together as group and get everything we want accomplished over there."

Short time to prepare

The Americans won't have an opportunity to practice until they get to Russia and they'll be limited to two or three sessions at that.

"Then we jump right into the games," Fowler said. "That's what makes this experience really unique."

"You need to have those practices to jell with each other and get a chemistry going. Once you do that, the tournament starts and you have to figure things out quickly."

The 6-foot-1, 207-pound Fowler isn't entirely sure what his full role will be on the team, but he has a pretty good idea. Besides his overseas experience, he thinks his style of play (speed and passing) helped put him on the team.

"I'd like to think they selected me to be an offensive defenseman and contribute that way," he said. "I know they selected a lot of 'D' men who can really skate and jump in with the play, who can make a good first pass to get the puck out of our zone."

"Whether it's two minutes a night or 20, I'll be happy to do it. I'll be happy to be there and be a part of the experience."

The U.S. was the runner-up to Canada and won the silver medal at the 2010 Games in Vancouver and Fowler expects the Americans to be in contention for the gold medal again this time.

"Anything short of that would be a disappointment," he said. "We've talked about it already and we expect good things from this group. With high expectations comes a lot of responsibility, but we think we have the team to do it."

NHL powerhouse

Fowler and the Ducks are enjoying a great season in the NHL. They lead the Western Conference's Pacific Division with a league-leading 35-8-5 record, which includes an incredible 19-0-2 performance on home ice at Honda Center.

"When you're winning games like we are, it makes it very fun to play," Fowler said. "We know every time we come to the rink, we have a good chance of winning. That translates through the whole locker room. Everybody has a lot of confidence."

"We've won in a variety of ways, too. We've come back quite a few times. We showed last night we can win 1-0 (Sunday against the Red Wings). We still have a lot of work to do; we're only halfway through the season, but we're happy with where we are now.

"As for my role, the coaches have put a lot more responsibility on me this year. I've been able to step up and play well for the team, especially when we had some key injuries early in the year. Now, we're all healthy and it's only going to make us better."

Career advancement

Fowler, who was the No. 1 draft pick of the Ducks (12th overall) in the 2010 NHL Entry Draft, has four goals and 22 assists this season. In 256 professional games, including seven in the playoffs, his career totals are 21 and 92, respectively.

"Stepping in at such a young age and playing right away at 18, there's definitely a learning curve you go through," Fowler said. "You're always continuing to learn and improve as a player and I think you have to do that to be an effective player in this league."

Fowler added this has been a breakout year for him in terms of playing a greater role for the team and having the confidence of his coaches and teammates.

"The biggest thing is the amount of time on the ice," he said. "I played a good number (of minutes) when I was younger. Still, it got bumped up a bit."

"The other big thing is me and (fellow defenseman Ben Lovejoy) have been matched up against some of the other teams' top players and been relied upon to shut them down."

"The other thing is the coaches have used me a lot more on the penalty kill. That's something I did a little when I was younger but definitely a lot more this year."

California dreamin'

Fowler, who also played one season with the Windsor Spitfires and helped them win the 2010 OHL championship and Memorial Cup, will be staying in Anaheim for the foreseeable future. He's signed through the 2017-18 season.

"I love everything about playing in Anaheim," he said. "Getting to live in California certainly has its perks. The team we have and the core group of players we have makes it fun to come to the rink every day."

"Everyone wants to be on a team with a chance to win every year and we think we have it here. Hopefully, I'll be here longer after that."

Fowler still wears No. 4 on his jersey - the same as famed Boston Bruins defenseman Bobby Orr. Fowler grew up hearing stories about Orr from his father Perry.

When he's not playing hockey, Fowler loves to play golf in his free time. The warm California climate lends itself well to that pursuit.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Balanced attack leads Rocks

Salem stays perfect in KLAA Central with 73-59 win

Ten players scored Friday night to spark host Salem to a 73-59 KLAA Central Division varsity boys basketball win over Novi.

The Rocks, 8-2 overall and 4-0 in the division, led 31-27 at halftime and took control with a 21-point third. Sparking that frame with two triples off the bench was junior guard Jake Stropes.

"We were pretty balanced tonight," Salem coach Bob Brodie said. "There wasn't any one player that caught fire for us."

"We just did a nice job overall. Jake Stropes came off the bench and hit two threes for us in that quarter (third) which was pretty good."

Leading Salem with 12 points each were junior forward Allante Wheeler and senior guard Connor Cole.

Also helping the cause were junior forward Tyler Brooks (10 points) and senior forwards Alec Winfrey and Michael Hoover (eight and seven points, respectively).

Junior forward Jake Lenders was the top rebounder for Salem, with eight.

"It was pretty much a barn-burner the entire game, it was close," Brodie said. "They (Wildcats) didn't give up, they just kept pressuring us full-court and getting after us playing zone, switching their defenses."

Novi dropped to 2-6 overall and 1-3 in the KLAA Central.

Canton falls, 56-44

Livonia Churchill made a strong statement in Friday's 56-44 boys basketball win over Canton.

Senior guard Donte Jackson scored 14 points and sophomore forward Joan Andoni added 13 as the Chargers put themselves right in the thick of the KLAA South Division race by upending the Chiefs.

Churchill, now 4-5 overall and 3-1 in the division, roared out to a 20-9 first quarter lead before Canton cut the deficit to 20-20 at halftime.

But the Chargers took control with an 18-7 run and never looked back as junior guard Brett Bonarek came through with all 12 of his points, to go along with five rebounds, in the second half.

Davon Taylor and Jordan Nobles scored 20 and 13 points, respectively, for the Chiefs (7-2, 2-2) who made 7-of-9 free throws.

"Canton's good and they're going to be there at the end of the year," Solak said. "This is a huge win for us. All six of our guards stepped up tonight and just got it done. It was a lot of fun to watch."

Salem will look to keep rolling with Tuesday's 7 p.m. contest at South Lyon.

PLYMOUTH 60, WAYNE 55: On Friday, the host Wildcats (5-4, 2-2) rallied from a 42-35 third-quarter deficit to beat Wayne Memorial (2-7, 1-3) in a KLAA South Division encounter.

Deji Adebisi, who scored 21 points and grabbed eight rebounds, helped orchestrate the fourth-quarter 25-13 comeback by going 8-for-8 from the foul line.

Three other Plymouth players scored in double figures, including Randall Aikins (15), Brent Davis (11) and Josh Reynolds (10), the latter who made a pair of triples to help spark the fourth-quarter rally.

Wayne got a team-high 16 points from Brian Williams, while DeAndre Carter and Jackie Muhammad added 11 and 10, respectively.

Wayne made 8-of-12 free throws, while Plymouth was 18-of-26.

Rocks win first for Klemmer

Big nights on offense for Plymouth, Canton girls basketball teams

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

One day after the emotional tribute game to the late coach Fred Thomann, Salem's interim coach had a chat with her varsity girls basketball team.

"We had a very long talk Wednesday night and all agreed that this Novi game (Friday) was the start of a new season for us," said interim coach Lindsay Klemmer.

The Rocks did turn the page with a 39-32 win over host Novi, to give Klemmer her first win in four tries since taking over from Thomann (who passed away Dec. 27).

"I'm very proud of the way that everyone stepped up tonight," Klemmer said. "Our defense was very solid, and we were finally hitting some shots. But I'm more proud of the heart and effort we showed here tonight."

Salem (6-4, 1-3 in the KLAA Central) opened the night scoring on three successive field goals and cranked it up on defense to lead 11-6 after the first. It was 16-14 Salem at the break before the Wildcats rallied to make it 24-all entering the fourth.

A big swing took place early in the fourth when Shara Long grabbed two offensive rebounds off missed free throws and converted putbacks. Kayla Kavulich's steal with seven seconds left sealed the win.

Jamyra Wilson scored 19 points, while Long tallied nine rebounds.

PLYMOUTH WINS ROUT: The visiting Plymouth Wildcats scored at least 25 points in each of the first three quarters Friday to trounce Wayne Memorial, 87-31.

Everybody played for head coach Nick Brandon and all but one made the scoresheet.

Leading the charge was senior point guard Kylie Robb, with 13 points (nine in the first). But she had plenty of help.

Senior post Shelby Cheston and senior wing Jada Woody each scored 12 points, senior wing Brooke Senkbeil contributed 10, junior post Patti Begoske added 10 and junior point guard Courtney LaVallee added seven.

"It felt good to get out and compete after a tough loss earlier in the week (to Canton)," Brandon said. "We shared the ball and got everyone involved offensively tonight, and I really like how unselfish the girls played."

"It was excellent to see a few of our key players, particularly Brooke Senkbeil, hit some shots in the second half and gain some confidence for the season moving forward."

Plymouth improved to 8-2 overall and 3-1 in the KLAA South Division while the Zebras fell to 0-8, 0-4.

CHIEFS DOMINATE: Host Canton completely handled Livonia Churchill Friday, outscoring the Chargers 35-4 in the first half en route to a 54-9 KLAA South Division victory.

Nataie Winters led the Chiefs with 15 points, creating plenty of her own offense with nine steals.

Paige Aresco (12 points, six rebounds) and Taylor Hunley (10 points, nine boards) also had productive nights for Canton (7-3, 4-0).

"The girls had a solid defensive effort tonight," Canton coach Brian Samulski said. "I thought they did a great job of getting out in the passing lanes and getting steals."

PCA WINS BY 30: Just like the P-CEP teams, Plymouth Christian Academy enjoyed success Friday night with a 47-17 victory over Allen Park Inter-City Baptist.

Senior Jen Malcolm was a force in the paint scoring 13 points and registering 11 rebounds for the 5-4 Eagles.

Rachel Fuller (seven points, seven boards) and Rachel Smith (21 points, seven boards) "played great shutdown defense on Inter-City's scorers tonight," PCA coach Rod Windle said. "... Our team is working really hard to get better each day."

On Tuesday, PCA won 54-25 over Oakland Christian. Smith scored 28.

Whalers' offense stymied by Sudbury goalie

Nicholas Baptiste's goal at 7:01 of the first period was enough for the Sudbury Whalers to defeat the Plymouth Whalers, 1-0, in an Ontario Hockey League game played Friday evening before 2,596 at Compuware Arena.

Sudbury goaltender Franky Palazzese stopped all 34 shots he faced to record his fifth shutout of the season for the Whalers (25-10-3-4). Nearly as good at the other end was Plymouth goalie Alex Nedeljkovic, stopping 34-of-35 shots.

The Whalers (16-22-0-5) - celebrating Military Appreciation Weekend - wore specially designed camouflage jerseys.

The last 1-0 game played at Compuware Arena came on Oct. 25, 2008 when the Windsor Spitfires defeated Plymouth, 1-0 on a Taylor Hall goal at 13:10 of the second period.

Plymouth was slated to continue with the Military Appreciation Weekend Saturday against Windsor, with 91-year-old World War II Veteran Frank Rogers of Westland dropping the puck in a ceremonial face-off before the game.

The Whalers also host Saginaw 2 p.m. Monday afternoon (CN-900).

Meanwhile, Conn (145) won by forfeit and Tamimi (189) earned a 14-11 decision over Nathan Dedrek.

Guernsey said the bout that the Chargers had the best chance of winning was at 125. Josh Perez, ranked at 119, faced Plymouth sophomore Spencer Schiffrer. The young Wildcat prevailed, 4-1.

"A few teams have chosen to bump up to wrestle him instead of wrestling Mo (Youssef) and for the most part Spencer has responded with some of his best matches," Guernsey said. "In the last few weeks, he's beaten three ranked wrestlers who have chosen to face him instead of staying at 119; he's a very dangerous wrestler."

Winning by a technical fall for Plymouth was 171-pound Hussein Youssef, who defeated Colin Englehart in 5:39 (16-1).

"Also, Collin Reed had some scary moments in his 103-pound match against Josh Massan when he had to fight off his back in the second period, but he recovered nicely and won 11-6," Guernsey said.

Other Wildcats to prevail were Ricky Burke at 215 (pin in 1:52 over Joshua Walker), heavyweight Michael Jordan (by forfeit), Brandon Harris at 112 (15-5 major decision over Ethan Englehart), Dylan Dwyer at 130 (pin in 1:30 over Zachary Smith) and 140-pounder Thomas Eschelbach (by forfeit).

"We made a few mistakes in some of the individual matches, but our guys continued to wrestle well through them and came back to win," Guernsey said. "This team is very focused, we have some specific goals in mind and they continue to do the things that we need in order to reach those goals."

Jaimes Memorial Tournament in Tecumseh before finishing the divisional portion of the KLAAs next week against Canton and Livonia Franklin.

The Wildcats and Patriots remain undefeated in KLAAs South matches.

Rocks first in Central
Salem continued to have an outstanding season, winning 69-4 over South Lyon East and 31-28 over South Lyon on Wednesday. The Rocks improved to 17-6 overall and 4-0 in the KLAAs Central, good for first place.

Against the shorthanded Cougars, the Rocks won six matches by forfeit. But Salem had to come up clutch to get past the Lions, who entered the dual meet with a 2-0 mark in the division.

Salem head coach Pete Israel said Akash Rai (103), Andrew Lindsay (112) and Cameron Shaughnessy (119) "started things off positive with wins." Peter Bushaw (152) also came up with a good win, as well as captain Connor Thornbury (160, a pin in 2:58 over Nick Stewart).

Others with crucial victories included Roy Foster at 171 (8-7 decision over Justin Mielke) and Mitchell Gross at 215 (10-6 decision over Jameson Donahue. "(Donahue) was one of South Lyon's better wrestlers and Mitchell came up strong," Israel said.

The Rocks will look to capture the KLAAs Central championship when they host Northville at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Chiefs fall short

Canton dropped two dual meets Wednesday, falling 43-27 to Wayne Memorial and 43-32 to Westland John Glenn.

In the Canton-Wayne match-up, the Chiefs built an early 21-10 lead, but could not hold off the Zebras.

Canton (9-6 overall, 0-2 in the KLAAs South) started the meet with an overtime win at 140 by Grant Trotman, who earned an 11-9 decision over Jordan Mills.

Ty Jasman and Alec Pantaleo followed up with wins at 145 and 152 to put the Chiefs up 12-0, but that lead soon withered away. Jasman earned an 11-3 major decision over Tim Nicholson, while Pantaleo scored a technical fall over Jamon Higgins (18-3).

At 171, the Chiefs' Nicholas Durocher won by a 10-5 decision over Damirius Fullilove, which gave Canton a 15-4 lead at that point.

It was mostly all Zebras the rest of the way, except for pins by Canton's K.J. Wooley and Ben Griffin, at 215 and 135, respectively.

Wooley pinned Sam Moody in 3:20, while Griffin tallied a pin against Bradley Bowles, needing just 38 seconds to complete.

Details of the Canton-John Glenn match were not available as of press time.

Mann's double-double sparks Lady Ocelots

Ulyssia Richmond was on the mark Wednesday night.

The 5-foot-9 senior guard poured in a game-high 37 points Wednesday night as Indiana Tech out-gunned Madonna University, 94-93, in a Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference women's basketball game.

Richmond had 20 of her 37 points during the first half as the Warriors trailed by a point, 52-51. The Temple Hills, Md., native connected on 13-of-16 shots from the floor, including 7-of-9 from 3-point range.

Senior forward Chelsea Carradine (Redford Thurston) also did her part with 23 points and 12 boards. The 5-9 Carradine was 9-of-14 from the field and 5-of-6 from the foul line as Indiana Tech improved to 10-9 overall and 7-4 in the WHAC.

Madonna (7-11, 5-6) got a team-high 27 points from Chelsea Williams (Livonia Franklin). The junior also grabbed nine rebounds.

Lizzy Otten added 25 points, including 6-of-7 from beyond the arc, while Tori Duffey contributed 18 points.

Rachel Melcher, despite foul issues, finished with eight points, 13 rebounds and seven assists.

MU played for the final shot and the win, but Molly Knoph (Livonia Stevenson) couldn't convert with only four seconds remaining.

Schoolcraft rolls host Schoolcraft College (6-8, 2-2) to an MCCAAs Eastern Conference victory, 76-52, over Alpena CC (4-7, 1-3).

Tabitha Mann (Salem) contributed a double-double with 13 points and 11 rebounds. Jessica Parry added 10 points and dished out six assists along with teammate Sara Gammons.

Schoolcraft led 38-29 at halftime and out-rebounded the Lady Lumberjacks, 46-31.

Whitney Frazier paced Alpena with 17 points and 10 rebounds.

Naubert, MU fend off Indiana Tech

It wasn't easy, but the Madonna University men's basketball team chalked up another Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference victory Wednesday night with a hard-fought 78-73 win over visiting Indiana Tech.

Senior NAIA All-America point guard Bobby Naubert (Livonia Stevenson) once again led the Crusaders with 27 points and nine assists.

The 5-foot-10 Naubert made 9-of-12 shots from the floor and 8-of-10 free throws as MU improved to 13-6 overall and 9-2 in the WHAC.

FROM PLAY TO FILM

David MacGregor on the set of Vino Veritas at the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea.

Livonia native's movie screens at festivals, on-demand

By Sharon Dargay
Staff Writer

David MacGregor steadily built his writing career over 36 years, working his way up from features editor for the Bentley High School newspaper, the Echo, to screenwriter and producer of the 2013 feature film, Vino Veritas.

"Writing is a compulsion. A lot of times people ask me, 'Do you have any advice? I want to be a writer.' I tell them unless it's a compulsion, don't bother because you need something to drive you through, because you'll get a lot of negativity along the way."

"You put in the time and one thing leads to another. It's a domino effect. Writing is a solitary profession and you want the work to stand on its own. But that is only part of the battle. You've got to get it in front of people who want to do it. That's where relationships come in."

The Livonia native, who now lives in Hartland with his family, found his way into the film-making business by way of the stage. MacGregor is the artist in residence at the Purple Rose Theatre in Chelsea, where his play, Vino Veritas, debuted in 2008. The story focuses on two couples who get together for a few drinks before an annual Halloween party. The Peruvian wine they drink is made from the skins of blue dart tree frogs and acts as a kind of truth serum. The couples, dressed in costumes, never make it to the party, but reveal truths as they talk and take photos of each other.

When the Nebraska Repertory Theatre performed the play the following year, it caught the eye of a film director's mother. She sent the script to her daughter, who in turn, contacted MacGregor.

"I talked to the director (Sarah Knight) and we hit it off," MacGregor said. He was charged with adapting the play for film, a challenge because the stage version was set in one room.

"What happens is people look at a play and think this is a good story with good characters and it will be economic to shoot. That's all a plus but the negative is that it's a play and takes place in one location. You want to retain everything that's good as a play, but then there's stuff you have to lose and change to make it more filmic."

He watched movies that were based on plays and asked for photos of the house in Lincoln, Neb., where the film shoot was set.

"I was able to go through the play and think how I could move the characters from room to room, and out to the front porch."

MacGregor

From writer to producer

MacGregor served as a producer on the film, which was shot in 12 days in July 2011.

"When you produce, that puts you in a whole different ballpark. Now you're responsible for the financial side of the film. It's a lot of contracts and accountants, stuff I don't have to deal with (as a writer)," he said. "I would do it again. I know a lot more than what I did before."

Vino Veritas has screened in numerous festivals since its premiere last July in Cape Cod, Mass. Last week, it became available on video-on-demand platforms, including iTunes, Dish Network and Xfinity, among others.

Meanwhile, MacGregor is working on several other projects, including a film adaptation of his recent holiday play, Scrooge Macbeth, and a collaboration with Knight on a romantic drama set in Iceland.

Short stories, plays

MacGregor, who also teaches at Wayne State University, has always juggled work and writing projects.

He graduated from Bentley in 1977 and took film and psychology classes at Michigan State University. After college, he worked at various jobs, including landscaping, jackhammer and computer operator, while also writing short stories for magazines.

"I happened to see an ad for a one-act play festival at the Livonia-Redford Theater Guild. I thought, I could try that. I did, and I kept going from there."

He continued to write plays for festivals and even assembled a book for Arcadia Publishing on a photographic history of Livonia.

"There's not a lot of writing. The books are photogenic. I scoured the planet for photos, posted notices at the senior center, went to city hall, to Greenmead."

The book was published in 2005, a year before the Purple Rose staged his play The Late Great Henry Boyle. Someone at the theater had heard about the play, after it debuted in Sacramento, Calif.

The Purple Rose produced three more of MacGregor's scripts: Vino Veritas in 2008, Gravity in 2010 and Consider the Oyster in 2011. He accepted the artist in residence title in 2010.

MacGregor hopes film goers will see a "part of themselves" in Vino Veritas.

"When people saw the play, and during previews, they said, 'it's like you were listening at the living room window.'"

OUR MENTAL HEALTH

Beware of too much work in the New Year

In Greek mythology, the character Sisyphus was portrayed as having been condemned for eternity to work.

His job was to push a large, heavy ball of clay up a steep hill. No matter how close he came to the top, he would always backslide and have to start over again — forever. In our work lives we may feel like Sisyphus, never "finishing" our work.

In days past, it was different. Our grandfathers generally were employed (except for the farmers) where the "9 to 5" workday was the rule. Now, for us, the rules have changed. Expectations have changed. Taking work home for the evenings and weekends seems to be the status quo.

To some extent, advances in technology share partial blame. It seems that the cell phones, computers, and electronic tablets which partly were intended to let us work faster and less, have bitten us from behind and result in us working faster and more. More has become synonymous with faster. This seems true in most fields of work, including the "farmer's fields" with mechanized technological advancements.

Len

The problem is that all this extra work and pressure to produce causes stress. And stress kills. Whether it is heart attack, stroke, ulcer, broken family, or mental illness, stress is the No. 1 killer.

Rewarding or oppressive?

One way to look at whether one's work is excessive and stress-related or not, is to consider the degree of satisfaction and reward one gets from work vs. finding one's job a necessity and debilitating.

Sigmund Freud said that mental health is the result of successful satisfaction in the worlds of work and love. To work 70 hours per week at a hated job is one thing, at loved work is another. Is what you do the majority of your working hours your "work" or your "job"?

If you think you are a "workaholic" in a way which is detrimental to your personal health, family time, and happiness, then you probably are.

And you are paying a high price, much more than your paycheck and benefits, for this behavioral pattern. Furthermore, as with any "addiction," the primary symptom is typically denial.

Changing behavior

Consider antidotes. Re-evaluate your priorities, reassess financial needs and desires, plan structured mini-breaks into your day, meditate and practice relaxation. Try just a couple minutes per hour of quiet deep breathing. Decide when you can say "no, enough is enough" and devote time to self, family, exercise, proper eating, rest, and vacations. You are not the "Energizer Bunny," and we all need time to recharge. No one is going to relax for us.

These suggestions, I know, are easier said than done, but you have to start somewhere. Think about change, talk about modifications in work time, and when feasible, implement changes.

No one ever put on their tombstone nor muttered on their deathbed words such as "If only I had been able to work a couple more hours." As an easy reading resource, consider, Meditations For Men and Women Who Do Too Much.

Len McCulloch is a diplomate of the American Psychotherapy Association. He is credentialed in mental health, brain injury, traumatic stress, addictions, and social work. Thought hats were just for little pups? Roxie the great dane takes a snooze in her knitted cap.

Sammy, one of Stacy Karafotis' dogs, looks pretty in pink.

Keep your dog's head warm with a crocheted hat

By Sharon Dargay
Staff Writer

Don't be surprised if you notice more than a few fashionable dogs this winter in Garden City.

Stacy Karafotis, owner of Lucky Dog Luxury Daycare and Boarding, began stocking handmade crocheted hats at the "little store" inside her Garden City business last month — and they have been flying off the shelf ever since.

A client, Tracy Milligan of Dearborn Heights, crochets the hats in a variety of colors, topping each with a pom-pom, and adding holes for the dogs' ears.

"We look for locally made products," said Karafotis, a trained veterinary technician who opened her doggy day care last November. "The hats are adorable and handmade. The first lady that bought one came in with a shih tzu that was wearing a pink coat." The woman bought a pink crocheted hat to match.

Karafotis posts photos of dogs wearing the hats on Facebook, which helps spur sales. Hats are available in the day care or by order.

Milligan has crocheted "on and off" since she was a youngster. When one of her friends asked her to make a dog hat, she found a pattern online and then went to work. She ended up making an additional 20 hats for a craft show last month at St. Thomas a'Becket in Canton.

"They sold like hotcakes. Everybody stopped by saying, Oh, those are so cute," Milligan said. "When Lucky Dog opened I told her about the hats and she said to bring them in."

She made one size for the craft show, but has since created hats to fit small, medium and large dogs.

"Each dog is going to be different. She (Karafotis) has called me to say, 'This dog has a flatter head, or the ears on that dog are lower.' She has helped me to tweak them."

The hats cost $10. Visit Lucky Dog at 5921 Middlebelt or call 734-261-PETS.

Check out Lucky Dog's website at luckydoggardencity.com. Karafotis takes pride in her staff as well as her facility that offers more than 10,000 square feet of play room, toys, play equipment, resting areas and access to an outdoor area landscaped with artificial turf.

Annual, online events draw support for Heidelberg Project

By Julie Yolles
Social Scene Columnist

On the night of the Heidelberg Project's fourth annual Fundraiser, "Encore in the D," supporters had already heard the tragic news that a fire had destroyed part of the outdoor art display in Detroit.

The blaze earlier that day had consumed the Penny House, one of several structures in the Project that was started by artist Tyree Guyton 26 years ago.

The fire on Nov. 21, 2013, was one of several last fall that claimed portions of the Project. The OJ House was destroyed in October and House of Soul (aka the Record House) went down in early November. On Thanksgiving morning, fire ravaged the War Room House and Dec. 8, 2013, marked the loss of the Clock House.

"(The Heidelberg Project) is a sacred battleground that must be protected," said Jenne Whitfield, Guyton's wife and Heidelberg Project executive director. "We can't be afraid of defiance or evil."

The fundraiser was held, for the second year, at the Fine Arts Theater in Detroit.

"We need your help and support to believe in the vision of this project. How many of you believe you can change the world?" Guyton asked event attendees. "Damn it, I want to change the world in the city of Detroit."

On the night of the annual Fundraiser, Guyton and Whitfield established an emergency fundraiser, "Art from Ashes: Securing a Legacy" to raise money for improved lighting around the remaining Heidelberg Project houses in Detroit, surveillance cameras and nightly security patrols. By Dec. 21, the online fundraising campaign at Indiegogo.com ended, raising $54,280 with matching funds from the Fred A. and Barbara M. Erb Family Foundation.

"We're going to do it bigger and better than before," said Guyton. "Together we will secure, rebuild and take this thing to the moon."

With that, look for the formal announcement of a three-year $3 million capital campaign in the next few months. www.heidelberg.org.

Maintain good vision during National Eye Care Month

By Sharon Dargay
Staff Writer

Toast January, National Eye Care Month, with a glass of carrot-kale juice.

Nutrients found in carrots and green, leafy vegetables are said to enhance eye health and vision. Results from a long-term study by the National Eye Institute also have shown that high levels of antioxidant vitamins and minerals can be effective in slowing the progression of macular degeneration, a condition that creates a blurriness or darkness in the center of vision.

"Beta carotene and lutein are good," said Dr. Michael S. Sherman, D.O., an ophthalmologist at Garden City Hospital and Physician Eye Care Associates in Garden City. "But eat a normal, healthy diet. That applies to everything in your life."

In addition to maintaining a good diet, National Eye Care

Month may be a good time to schedule an eye exam.

"I think if a person has risk factors, such as diabetes or a family history (of eye disease), an annual exam is prudent," Sherman said. "The problem with chronic glaucoma is that there are no signs and symptoms and you start to lose peripheral vision, then it goes into the center. When you finally start to notice, it's too late."

Sherman said an annual exam should always include a check of the fluid pressure inside the eye.

"There are two kinds of checks. The noncontact — you feel a puff of air — is not as accurate. The other actually touches the cornea. We numb the eye and people don't even feel it."

He said a complete eye exam also should include dilation and use of a microscope to observe the structure of the eye, blood vessels and optic nerve, visual field testing, examination of the pupils, and mobility of the eye, in addition to a vision test.

Along with a good diet and eye exam, the National Eye Institute recommends these tips for maintaining good eye health:

» Find out if anyone in your family has been diagnosed with an eye disease. It will help you determine if you are at higher risk for vision problems.

» Maintain a healthy weight to lower your risk of diabetes and other conditions that can lead to vision loss.

» Stop smoking. Research has linked smoking to increased risk of macular degeneration and other diseases.

» Wash hands thoroughly before putting in or taking out contact lenses. Disinfect lenses before wearing.

» Wear sunglasses with UV protection to block the sun's ultraviolet rays. Wear protective eyewear when playing sports or working at tasks that may endanger the eyes.

» Reduce eyestrain at the computer by periodically looking away and focusing your eyes several feet away for 20 seconds.

Sherman said looking too long at a computer screen or working in dim light won't damage eyes but "it's just easier" to see in brighter light or to give eyes a rest occasionally.

All Things Being Equal, ...Women are at greater risk!

Ask A Garden City Hospital Health Expert

Dr. Harber
Cardiology

Cardiovascular disease is the leading cause of death for both men and women. But who is actually at greater risk? And, what role does race play in your chances for heart failure? Cardiologist and GCH Health Expert, Dr. Daniel Harber, explains how this highly preventable disease, affects everyone differently.

Q: How is heart disease in women different than heart disease in men?

A: As much as we strive for equality between men and women, sometimes we can't all be treated the same. In fact, when it comes to cardiovascular health, treating women differently is a positive move which could save lives. For both genders, chest pressure is the most common symptom of heart disease, however women may experience shortness of breath, jaw pain, headaches, nausea, fatigue and upset stomach (which we call atypical symptoms of heart disease), more commonly than men. Men are more likely to show signs of heart disease at a younger age. Yet, women who have a heart attack under the age of 50 are twice as likely to die compared to men who suffer one at a similar age.

Smoking is another factor in heart disease. While bad for both, female smokers are 25% more likely to develop coronary artery disease than male smokers.

Q: What role does diabetes play in heart health?

A: While diabetes is bad for men, it's worse for women. Diabetes can greatly increase anyone's risk of dying from heart disease, but heart problems are more likely to be fatal among diabetic women. In fact, complications due to any other health problems are more common in women. Because women usually develop cardiovascular disease at a later age than men, they may suffer from additional diseases or health issues that interfere with treatment or recovery. This means doctors may need to look beyond treatments they normally prescribe for male patients.

Q: Are certain races more susceptible to heart disease?

A: Heart disease is a hereditary condition therefore family history plays a larger role than race does. If your parents have heart disease, you stand a higher chance of getting it too. Secondary health issues, such as diabetes, can have a significant impact on heart health.

Currently, African Americans have a higher death rate for heart disease than Caucasians. Hawaiians, American Indians and Mexican Americans also have a higher propensity for heart disease. Incidents of obesity and diabetes are also higher in these groups.

Remember heart disease is almost always avoidable. Eat right, stop smoking and get active! Join Dr. Harber for "To the Heart from the Heart" a FREE Lunch and Lecture on Saturday, February 8 at 1 p.m. at Westland Mall. Learn how to take care of your heart for life. Lunch, giveaways and health screenings included.

Are you struggling with your New Year's resolution? Want to learn what you can do to prevent diabetes and keep your heart healthy? We have the program for you! Attend Garden City Hospital's free Diabetes Prevention Orientation Meeting on Tuesday, January 21 at 4:30 p.m. For more information, call 734.458.4330.

Detroit Three Have Lots To Crow About at Motown's Auto Show

By Dale Buss

Detroit Three executives were in high dudgeon at the press preview of the North American International Auto Show at Cobo Hall in Detroit.

And well they should be: General Motors, Ford and Chrysler each made huge impressions on global auto media and their followers, and each in very different ways.

Chevrolet executives were giddy after two of their most important new models swept the industry's coveted North American Car of the Year and Truck/Utility of the Year awards, bestowed by a panel of dozens of automotive journalists who have regular exposure to new vehicles each year. Entries are judged on factors including innovation, design, safety, handling, driver satisfaction and value for the dollar.

The Chevy Corvette Stingray was named Car of the Year, and the Chevrolet Silverado pickup truck copped Truck of the Year honors, the first time Chevy has won both awards in the same year. Silverado was last named Truck of the Year in 2007 and the Corvette was last named Car of the Year in 1998.

Chevrolet's two winners: Silverado and Corvette Stingray.

Silverado outpointed the second-place finisher for Truck/Utility of the Year, the new Jeep Cherokee, with 219 points to 174 points. The third-place finisher, Acura MDX, garnered 97 points. Among cars, the Corvette outpointed the other two finalists with 211 points to Mazda's 185 points and Cadillac CTS' 94 points.

Meanwhile, Ford executives were on the offensive as they introduced the world's most significant aluminium-framed vehicle, the new Ford F-150 pickup truck, and ticked off stat after stat about the company's burgeoning position and success in the U.S. and global automotive markets.

The new aluminium-based Ford F-150.

The new 2015 Ford F-150, to go on sale sometime this year, represents for Ford not only the crucial newest version of America's best-selling vehicle but also the manifestation of a huge technological bet encouraged by CEO Alan Mulally.

When the truck debuts, not only will it be the newest entry among the Detroit Three pickup-truck segment but also, with the aluminium frame, the new F-150 could be perceived by truck buyers as a whole generation ahead of the competition.

Ford executives touted the new F-150 for advances such as a new body and load bed made almost entirely of an aluminium alloy that allowed the vehicle to shed as much as 700 pounds compared with the current version.

The new F-150 also will feature class-exclusive LED headlights and taillights, a class-leading-size moon roof, a 360-degree-view exterior camera and an 8-inch "productivity" screen on the dash for infotainment purposes, among other advancements.

Chrysler was able to count at least two things that augured well for 2014: a robust new version of its Chrysler 200 sedan, and an indication that its charismatic CEO, Sergio Marchionne, will stick around for a while.

Marchionne indicated that he'll stay at least three years with the combined Fiat-Chrysler after serving as the master architect of the company as it has been cobbled together so far after the 2009 bailout. Marchionne's vision and charisma are widely credited as key factors in Chrysler's ability to come back even as Fiat continues to be hampered by the European market.

Meanwhile, the 200 was last fully redesigned when George W. Bush was president. Only the iconic Super Bowl commercial of 2011, starring Eminem, breathed enough life into the vehicle for it to survive this long in a segment that has gotten very competitive in the US market lately.

Chrysler brand president Al Gardner called the new 200 Chrysler's "flagship" sedan at the North American International Auto Show as Marchionne, U.S. Senator Debbie Stabenow (D-Mich.) and other luminaries looked on. He promised the new model "will redefine the brand" as the company beefs up its Chrysler lineup.

"A lot of people won't see this coming," Gardner said, "promising that Chrysler had "designed a car to challenge every other car in its segment" with the aim of trumping the competition in three important ways: "flawless" quality, a "new level of design and elegance" and an "attainable" price that begins at $21,700—or about $95 less than the entry-level price of the 200 model it replaced. Chrysler also has invested more than $1 billion in refurbishing a Michigan plant to build the car.

Now that Marchionne is free to finish molding Fiat-Chrysler after the company recently purchased the final remainder of Chrysler owned by the United Auto Workers, Chrysler is expected to be able to shore up its Chrysler-brand product line. The new 200 should give it a good head start.

Al Gardner introduces new Chrysler 200.
