Chamber recognizes community service

By Matt Jachman
Staff Writer

The Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce took time out to honor its own Tuesday.

The chamber's inaugural business awards dinner at Karl's Cabin recognized volunteer efforts — donations of time, talent and resources — on behalf of the chamber and the community, by member businesses and individuals.

Jim Vermeulen accepted the award for the medium-sized business of the year on behalf of Vermuelen-Sajewski Funeral Home, of which he is president. He said he learned from his father, who is also named Jim, to stay involved. "My father, who founded the business, taught me to always give back to your community, your church, your family and it just seemed like a natural thing to do," Vermeulen said.

The elder Vermeulen is still works in the business and is still involved in the community.

"Just sort of trying to follow the example that he taught me," his son said.

The younger Vermeulen is a past chamber board president (the position is now called chairman), a member of the Kiwanis Club of Colonial Plymouth, the Plymouth Historical Museum board and the Community Foundation of Plymouth advisory board.

"Plymouth is just a great place to live and work," Vermeulen said, adding that he wants to help keep it that way.

Greg Blackwood, president of Fraza Forklifts, was given the evening's legacy award, intended to honor an individual whose contributions over time have helped chamber efforts.

Multimedia works by a Detroit-area artist and photographs by her son complement each other in a new show at the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

"In Focus," the PCAC's March exhibit, puts collages and paintings by Edee Joppich together with photos by son Dan Joppich in what is the first public showing of his work.

Dan Joppich of Canton Township is a certified public accountant for whom photography became more than a hobby, while his mother, who lives in West Bloomfield, is a longtime multimedia and experimental artist and art instructor with her own gallery and about 50 exhibits to her credit.

Her contributions to "In Focus" center on the shapes, textures and repeating patterns, some found in nature and some in the man-made environment, to which she is drawn.

The collages combine painting, photographs, handmade paper and "found" objects, from newspaper clippings to metal bits to barn shingles, that suit her compositional vision. Some of the smaller collages are built around encaustic painting, a technique that uses hot colored wax.

Joppich describes her approach to collage as going beyond a palette of paint.

Police warn against bogus IRS calls

By Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

Police say scam artists posing as Internal Revenue Service agents are phoning residents and threatening to have them arrested unless they pay money that they supposedly owe to the federal government.

Canton Special Services Lt. Craig Wilsher said other tricksters are trying to defraud victims by claiming to represent the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Don't fall for it. Some swindlers are demanding money by prodding victims to wire it to them, transfer money from bank accounts or buy a prepaid card and reveal by phone the pertinent information on it.

"They are threatening that they need a certain amount of money or (the victim) will be arrested," Wilsher said. "They continue to bully their way through the conversation."

Sadly, the ongoing scams have sometimes worked. In one incident, a 66-year-old Canton woman last year lost $4,900 after a fake IRS caller said she had been audited and faced arrest unless she paid $4,900.

She paid it. She even went to a store and bought a prepaid PayPal MoneyPak card while the caller waited on the line.

Catholic church hopes to raise money to fight hunger with St. Patrick's celebration

By Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

A Canton church has a message that St. Patrick's Day isn't just a time to drink green beer and party, but an opportunity to show compassion.

St. Thomas a'Becket Church, remembering Irish ancestors who died in a mid-1800s famine and those who escaped to America, will fight hunger by hosting a St. Patrick's celebration to help a Detroit-based food pantry.

The church has assembled a lineup including the Kish Celtic Band playing traditional Irish music and leading a sing-along, the O'Hare Irish Dancers, an Irish trivia contest and, to capture the camaraderie, a selfie photo station.

The annual event comes three days before the official

St. Patrick's Day and starts at 5:30 p.m. Saturday, March 14, at the church, 555 S. Lilley, south of Cherry Hill. It benefits the St. Patrick Food Pantry in Detroit, which feeds more than 600 families and individuals every month in Detroit's Cass Corridor.

It is sponsored by two Irish fraternal charity organiza-

Canton defendant charged with stabbing his sister

By Darrell Clem

McCauley

A Canton man has been charged following allegations he stabbed his younger sister after an argument escalated inside a mobile home in Sherwood Village, a neighborhood on Canton's southeast side, police said.

Michael Wayne McCauley, 48, was arrested after police say he was accused of wounding his 43-year-old sister during a dispute that occurred Saturday, leading to a 9-1-1 call for help. "Her hand was slashed," Canton Detective Sgt. Dan Traylor said. Canton paramedics rushed the victim to a hospital for treatment. Police hadn't disclosed the reason for the dispute that led to McCauley being arraigned Monday in 35th District Court on felony charges of assault with intent to do great bodily harm (less than murder) and assault with a dangerous weapon. McCauley also has a misdemeanor charge of domestic violence arising from the same incident.

If convicted as charged, he could face penalties ranging up to 10 years in prison. A not-guilty plea has been placed in his court file. McCauley was jailed Monday on a $50,000 bond during his arraignment by 35th District Judge James Plakas. He is expected back in court March 27 for a preliminary examination that will determine whether he should stand trial in Wayne County Circuit Court.

a while," Wilsher said. "It dies down for a little while and then pops back up." At least one local woman last year received a call from someone posing as Canton

Deputy Police Chief Scott Hilden, threatening an arrest unless money was paid for taxes. "She was smart enough not to fall for it," Hilden said. Some Canton residents also are finding when they try to file their income tax returns that swindlers already have collected money using their name and personal information. Local authorities warn residents to protect their information such as Social Security numbers, bank accounts and credit card numbers. Wilsher said no employee from the IRS or any other government agency is going to call and immediately demand money over the phone. He said potential victims who receive such calls should "end the call if someone is demanding money." Anyone who believes that a call from a government agency may be legitimate should hang up and call back to the agency, bank or other entity - using a credible phone number. Moreover, police urge residents to beware of calls demanding money even if the caller indicates it is the IRS, a bank or other institution. Some swindlers have become savvy enough to program false caller ID information. Anyone who has been the victim of a phone scam should call the Canton Police Department at 734-394-5400. Anyone who has had a fraudulent income tax return filed in their name should call the IRS at 800-829-1040.

Canton fire chief says smoke detectors can help save lives

By Darrell Clem
Staff Writer

The last time Canton firefighters pulled the charred remains of a woman from a mobile home fire, they learned the residence had no working smoke detectors.

Meier

The woman's death at the Wagon Wheel mobile home community on Canton's west side occurred Jan. 28, mere weeks after Fire Chief Joshua Meier, as the new year dawned, warned residents and businesses to check their smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors.

And while it's impossible to know if the woman could have escaped if smoke detectors had been working, one statistic from the National Fire Protection Association seems pertinent: Almost two-thirds of home fire deaths occurred in residences without working smoke alarms.

After clocks sprung forward at 2 a.m. Sunday for daylight saving time, Meier repeated his warning for residents and businesses to check their smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors.

Meier has said smoke and carbon monoxide, or CO, alarms can give residents time to escape a fire or poisoning incident, but only if batteries are working. He said they should be replaced at least once a year.

Across the United States, an estimated 2,500 deaths, on average, occur each year. With that as a backdrop, Meier this week recommended the following:

» Test smoke and carbon monoxide alarms every month to make sure they are working.

» Install smoke alarms on every level of the home and inside each bedroom.

» Install carbon monoxide alarms should on every level of the home and outside each sleeping area.

» Replace alarms that are older than seven years.

Walmart reports robbery

A Walmart customer accused of emptying a $2.98 bottle of pain reliever into her purse fled, along with a male companion, after a confrontation unfolded inside the store on Michigan Avenue, west of Belleville Road, a police report said.

Canton police went to Walmart amid reports of a strong-arm robbery happening shortly before 7 p.m. Friday. Employees had been conducting surveillance by store video and saw the female suspect select a bottle of pain reliever, empty the contents into her purse and leave the packaging behind, the report said.

The woman and her male companion started to leave the store when employees confronted them. The police report said the woman admitted putting the pills in her purse.

A loss prevention employee convinced the pair to step into an office, then grabbed the woman as she tried to flee. Her male companion then separated them as the woman escaped and ran to the parking lot and toward Michigan Avenue, the report said.

The male suspect stayed behind to talk with the employee, then also fled after he realized that police were being called to the scene. He, too, escaped.

Worrisome texts

A 30-year-old Canton man told police he received a text message from a woman – the mother of his children – claiming she was being held against her will by another man – her husband – inside a Roseville hotel.

The Canton man told police the woman is married, but had been living with him. He said she sent a text to him shortly before 1 p.m. Sunday saying her husband refused to let her leave the Roseville hotel room and had threatened to take her clothes from her.

The Canton man notified police to report he was concerned for her safety. Canton police notified Roseville authorities, who went to the hotel to check on the woman's well-being and were told there wasn't a problem.

Police advised the Canton man to stay away from the hotel where the woman and her husband were staying to avoid any escalation of the incident.

Driving while drugged

Police arrested a 49-year-old Canton woman who was ticketed for operating a vehicle while under the influence of drugs, a police report said.

Police stopped the woman as she drove a black Chrysler 300 eastbound on Michigan Avenue, near Canton Center. She was pulled over after police say she was seen weaving across lanes before she finally struck a snow bank alongside the road.

The incident happened shortly after 8:30 p.m. Saturday. Police indicated the woman, after she got out of her car, was unsteady on her feet and failed some of the field sobriety tests administered to her.

The woman's husband made it to the scene and told police the suspect had recently gotten out of a hospital and shouldn't have been driving. He said she takes prescription medication such as Oxycodone, Xanax and Cymbalta.

Police learned the woman had no driver's license; she was placed under arrest for driving while taking drugs. The vehicle was turned over to her husband.

Theft reported

A Canton man who lives in the Village Squire apartments near Ford and Lotz roads told police he believes his ex-girlfriend stole $400 from him, along with his Social Security information and his W-2 employee wage statement.

He reported asking the 30-year-old woman to leave his apartment because of her drug abuse and instability, a police report said. He said he had lived with the woman off and on since last May. He also has another roommate.

The man told police his ex-girlfriend had moved out Saturday, then he noticed the money missing from a Bible in his bedroom dresser. He said the suspect is the only other person who knew he kept money there.

Police advised the man to check on his credit status and to contact a Social Security office to report his information had been stolen.

PLYMOUTH CRIME WATCH

Traffic stops, pot busts

Traffic stops in Plymouth Township led to marijuana-possession charges against three people in recent weeks, police report.

The most recent incident was just before 10 p.m. March 3 in the area of Ann Arbor Road and Ridge. According to a Plymouth Township Police Department report, an officer patrolling in the area spotted a Dodge Dakota with a malfunctioning brake light and stopped the driver, an 18-year-old woman.

Upon speaking to the woman, the report said, the officer noticed the odor of marijuana and asked her where the marijuana was. She took a plastic bag of suspected marijuana from the center console of the Dakota and handed it over, along with a pipe and a marijuana grinder, police said.

She was later ticketed for possession of marijuana and released. The substance, weighed at six ounces, tested positive for marijuana.

An earlier incident occurred just after 11 p.m. Feb. 28 in the area of Lilley and Joy Road. An officer spotted a GMC Envoy with its license plate light out and pulled over the driver, a 39-year-old woman, police said. Her husband, 46, was a passenger.

The officer noticed the smell of marijuana upon speaking with the woman and asked the couple whether they had any, police said. The man replied that he did and handed over a plastic bag of it, saying it belonged to him, police said.

The marijuana weighed in at just over five ounces and tested positive, police said. Both the man and the woman were later ticketed and released.

Stolen identity

A township woman reported a case of identity theft to police March 4, saying someone had used her husband's name and Social Security number to file a 2014 income tax return.

The woman said they were informed of the fraud by a letter from the Internal Revenue Service and told to contact police, a credit reporting agency and the Federal Trade Commission. The couple had yet to file their return, police said.

REMARKABLE MEDICINE. REMARKABLE CARE.

Retired Plymouth Township woman gives back to community in many ways

By Pamela A. Zinkosky
Correspondent

Debbie Cortellini, 63, was born to teach and read.

"I lined my dolls up and pretended to be giving them lessons," she said. "I was an avid reader and I read in my closet, under my bed, anywhere I could read. Reading was an avenue to everything; you can go anywhere, be anyone, imagine anything, while reading a book. I earned a scholarship and was the first one in my family to go to college and I owe it all to reading."

Cortellini retired after teaching for 13 years in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools and many more before that in Indianapolis. And what is she doing with her time now? Well, among other things, she's reading and teaching.

As president of the Plymouth-Canton Community Literacy Council, a local nonprofit that promotes literacy among adults reading below a ninth-grade level, Cortellini leads a weekly conversation group for adults learning English as a second language.

As many as 40 or 50 people show up each Friday morning at the Canton Public Library to speak English and absorb all the knowledge they can from Cortellini.

Often, Cortellini finds herself teaching grammar, much like she did as a fifth-grade teacher. For example, she recently taught the group the difference between "advice," a noun and "advise," a verb.

She loves this word work and so do the group members. "They're like sponges," she said. "They write everything down."

Beyond the joy of teaching, Cortellini has found many friendships in the group, as have the group members. "These people are now friends," she said.

They also foster one another's learning, she said: "If they can't think of a word, between all of them they can come up with the word."

In the classroom

Cortellini originally hails from Indiana, where she did her undergraduate work at Ball State University and received her master's degree with a major in reading from Indiana University. In 1991, she moved to Plymouth because her husband transferred jobs, then started selling Discovery Toys from her home.

Since then, Cortellini said, Plymouth Township has been home to her.

When her youngest son was in sixth grade, she wanted to get back into the classroom, so she started substitute teaching in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

"Allen Elementary always seemed like home to me when I was subbing there and I was thrilled to be given an interview and hired by Marcia Moore, the principal, in July of 2000," she said. "I loved every day teaching at Allen. The students, parents and staff at Allen are special. It was my home away from home and I thought long and hard about retiring in 2013. My knee was giving me trouble and, when my sister and step-father became ill, I knew it was time to walk away from the classroom."

Retirement

Cortellini had a knee replacement in January and says she's "almost back." But based on her many activities in the community, she never really left.

In addition to keeping in touch with former students – she has a pool in her backyard and likes to have them over in the summertime – Cortellini has a heavy hand in four local charities. She's president of the local Literacy Council, is an emeritus board member for Giving Hope Women's Giving Circle and is involved with Chicks 4 Charity and Delta Kappa Gamma.

Giving Hope helps fund the needs of women and children in the Plymouth and Canton areas. The organization's upcoming Give the Kids a Bed event 6:30-9 p.m. April 1 at Canton's Summit on the Park will raise money for beds at First Step Temporary Emergency Housing, which provides short-term housing for victims of domestic or sexual violence and their children. The event is a night out with food, shopping and silent auction items and costs $35 per ticket. Register at www.cantonfoundation.org.

Chicks 4 Charity is a local Women's Life Insurance Society that conducts fundraising and service projects in the community. The group hosts monthly charity events. Cortellini recently chaired a Trivia Night, which raised $2,890 for the Literacy Council.

Cortellini is also involved with Delta Kappa Gamma, an international society for women educators. She's the recruit for the organization's October craft show at West Middle School in Plymouth, which raises money for students studying education. So far, the organization has raised $100,000 in scholarships for educational degrees.

Cortellini has also started a free book exchange in front of her house.

"I loved reading with my kids," she said. "I made my husband promise when I retired that he'd help put up a free library."

People can give or take a book from the weather-proofed box – built by Cortellini's husband Doug – that sits in front of her house. It's one of many free book exchanges encouraged by the Little Free Library, a national nonprofit organization. Cortellini encourages those interested to go to www.littlefreelibrary.org.

The retiree is also looking toward creating a book club in her neighborhood and putting her new golden retriever, Gracie, into a therapy dog program.

LITERACY COUNCIL PROVIDES VALUABLE SERVICES

The Plymouth-Canton Community Literacy Council started in 1985 with the goal of improving literacy among adults. Originally, the Literacy Council hoped to reach illiterate English-speaking adults, but from the start, the nonprofit organization found itself teaching those learning English as a second language. Cortellini says it's difficult to find and advertise services to illiterate adults in the community, whereas immigrants are often active in the school district and learn about the Literacy Council there.

Today, the Literacy Council provides free tutoring, conversation groups, a book club, writing workshops and assistance for those interested in becoming U.S. citizens. More than 80 volunteer tutors provide a variety of educational services. Many of them tutor adults taking English as a second language courses at Starkweather Alternative High School. Others provide one-on-one tutoring in basic reading, writing and speech or lead one of two conversational groups at the Canton Public Library. Each volunteer receives comprehensive 12-hour instruction before tutoring students.

The Literacy Council has one paid employee that performs all administrative tasks and evaluates students to determine what level of tutoring they need. All board members and tutors are volunteers and the Literacy Council is always looking for more community members to help. Currently, the demand for tutors outpaces the need.

The Literacy Council hosts two annual spelling bees that serve as fundraisers for the organization. The youth spelling bee features competing students from local elementary schools, while the adult spelling bee – to be held at 7 p.m. March 25 at Discovery Middle School in Canton – features teams of competing adults. Local businesses sponsor the event and donate raffle prizes. Last year's events raised more than $5,000.

To become a tutor, volunteer at the spelling bee or for more information, go to www.plymouthcantonliteracy.org or call 734-589-0011.

The gift of time

It may sound like Cortellini has no time to relax, but that's not true, she said. She may have commitments, but her schedule is more flexible: "It's such a gift to be in my PJ's at 10 a.m. I love it. I really was concerned when I retired that I would be bored. I'm not one to sit. I knew I wouldn't be."

"I truly do not want to come off as someone special. I'm not. I have been blessed and feel very lucky to have such wonderful sons and husband and I just want to make a difference. We are not given an unlimited time here and I want to make what time I have matter. I want to give back and help, in any way I can, for as long as I am able."

One of the ways she's giving back is by expanding the Literacy Council. Cortellini hopes to partner with Plymouth-Canton Community Schools to launch a conversational group for parents learning English as a second language, since there are so many immigrants in the area.

Cortellini envisions the Literacy Council advertising its services at school open houses and she hopes the district will offer free transportation to the library, as many immigrants do not have the use of a car during the work day.

In her spare time, Cortellini enjoys spending time with family and going to sporting events like University of Michigan football games and Tigers games.

She has three grown sons who visit her Plymouth home often. "We have a pool and a man cave," she said.

And even though, as Cortellini puts it, "there are kids over all the time," she hopes to one day have grandkids who'll visit often.

Board declares Liberty at new middle school

By Matt Jachman
Staff Writer

The new school going up at Cherry Hill and Canton Center roads in Canton Township now has a name: Liberty Middle School.

The Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education voted unanimously Tuesday to adopt the name Liberty for the 134,500-square-foot school being built to replace the aging Central Middle School in Plymouth.

The name is in keeping with the district's policy of naming middle schools after either a philosophy (like Pioneer or Discovery) or a direction (East, Central).

"I think 'Liberty' captures an open and dynamic new school," school board President John Barrett said in a press release. "Like Discovery and Pioneer, the name focuses on the spirit that this community and the country are all about."

Superintendent Michael Meissen said construction at Liberty is on track and the school should open with the arrival of the new school year late this summer. The school's price tag of about $29.2 million is being funded through a bond issue voters approved in 2013.

'On schedule'

"We're on schedule to accept students and there is a high level of excitement," Meissen said. "To have Liberty as a guiding principle reflects the values of this community, its current students, and generations to come."

District spokesman

Nick Brandon said construction at Liberty is on time and under budget at this point and that the school should be ready for staff to move into during the month of August. The district has a

24-hour webcam that can be used to view the progress at Liberty, available at www.truelook.com/clients/mccarthysmith-webcam/.

Other names suggested for the new middle school included Freedom, Voyager, Renaissance, Centennial and Odyssey.

A mascot name for the new Liberty Middle School has yet to be chosen. Suggestions from staff members have included Huskies, Vikings, Phoenix, Knights, Stallions and Falcons, plus the current nickname at Central, Chargers.

Central, the former Plymouth High School, will close as a school at the end of the current term. The site is being purchased by Plymouth resident Mark Malcolm for about $3.2 million on behalf of a group called Plymouth Arts and Recreation Complex, which plans to remodel parts of it into a community center for the many groups that already use Central for athletic and educational purposes, plus others groups that would become part of such a center.

PARC organizers are working to create a local taxing authority that would raise money for restoring and refurbishing Central and run a community center.

'A lot of discovery'

"There's a lot of discovery in this kind of work," she said, referring to the small details that she includes. "People find things. It's not instant gratification all the time."

She likes using objects that other might overlook. "You see the possibilities in just all kinds of ordinary things," she said Monday during a tour of the show.

The subjects of Dan Joppich's photographs are mostly heavy machinery, like century-old locomotives, in close-up; birds in their environment; and Detroit scenes that are way off the beaten path.

Dan Joppich is intrigued by the complex lines of the machines, their size and weight and the work that went into making them.

"It's the weight of these things and all the parts," he said. "It's just amazing, the craftsmanship and everything that pops out at you."

He likes to highlight details in his industrial works, he said, instead of shooting, for example, an entire locomotive.

Composition is key

His industrial photographs, like "Heavy Machinery," a detail from a locomotive at Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry, and his urban photographs, like lone house in a field of tall grass, most closely echo his mother's collages in composition and the shapes depicted.

But his bird photos can also resemble the watercolor-painting components in his mother's works, in the wash of colors - leaves, grass, sky - in their backgrounds. Dan Joppich said he starts by looking for the background when photographing birds.

Unlike many photographers of Detroit, Dan Joppich isn't just depicting ruined buildings.

"I'm not trying to show the decay of Detroit, I'm trying to show the beauty of it," he said.

Composition is what the collages are about for Edee Joppich, who earned a bachelor's degree in fine art at Marygrove College and did graduate work at Wayne State University. "It isn't just a random happening that makes it art," she said.

In graduate school, Edee Joppich said, she concentrated on figurative painting, but afterward found herself influenced by painters like Robert Rauschenberg and Jasper Johns and the conceptual artist Louise Nevelson. Some of her collages are tributes to those influences and several are included in the current show.

"On Track II" is by Edee Joppich.

BILL BRESLER | STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Edee Joppich teaches art at locations around the state and has a gallery in Northport, on the Leelanau Peninsula, that she opened in 1980.

Artistic hobby

Dan Joppich started getting serious about photography on the sidelines at his daughters' soccer games, taking pictures of the players in action. When they stopped playing, he said, he turned to his current subjects.

For his bird and animal photos, he often heads to the Howell Nature Center - and even to the back yard of his home in Canton.

"It was time to share what he does in a more public way," his mother said.

"In Focus" is at the PCAC's Joanne Winkleman Hulce Center for the Arts, 774 N. Sheldon (at Junction), Plymouth, through Saturday, March 28. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday, during public events and by appointment. The website is www.plymoutharts.com.

Home Expo a sure sign of spring, sprucing up

By Julie Brown
Staff Writer

Susie and Rick Pidosny of Canton were glad to get out of the house Saturday. The occasion was the Canton Home Improvement Expo at the Summit on the Park.

"Nice day," Susie Pidosny said of their attendance. "Looking for some landscaping ideas and insulation."

The couple's Canton home is 38 years old. "We've pretty much done everything that needs to be done," she said. "Just want to freshen up the landscaping."

Also attending were Renee and Corey Hill of Canton, who brought kids Kayla, 8, and Cameron, 11, to the Summit. "We bought a house almost two years ago," Renee Hill said. "We need some ideas on things."

Their Canton home is about 20 years old; the Hills got a couple of quotes on jobs Saturday. "Absolutely. Very convenient," she said of the nearby expo. The kids weren't super-enthused, but liked the treats once they got there.

"It keeps them interested," she said, noting the Home Depot workshops for children. "They're happy now."

Rob Creamer, Canton's building official, was pleased Saturday afternoon. "It's going good so far," Creamer said of his first expo. He's relocating to Canton after starting his township job last May.

There were about 90 vendors at the expo, sponsored by Canton Township, the Canton Chamber of Commerce and O&E Media. Some 120 vendors were in the show last year, Creamer said, adding changes were made to accommodate Summit recreational users and other visitors. "The vendors that are here are very happy," Creamer said. "We're always looking to improve."

This is the 15th year for the expo and, of vendors, Creamer said, "They really want to have it next year." The show will be analyzed and visitor comments studied for improvements.

"It's been a long couple of winters," said Creamer, who like many expo visitors has been eager to do work around the house.

He said about 10 years ago Canton had a big building spike and those homes now need some renovation. "White is back in the kitchens," Creamer said of model homes he's seen. "And there's always new technology coming out."

A hallway booth for Canton Newcomers & Neighbors was popular, with Kristina Wittner of Canton, a co-vice president, noting the group has been around for more than 40 years with around 125 people involved, mostly women.

"We're a social and charitable organization," said Wittner, who also works for the Canton

Chamber of Commerce. The Newcomers & Neighbors have supported Camp A.B.L.E. for disabled kids and helped with a recent benefit for WSDP-FM (88.1), the student radio station at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

"I just recently joined," Beth Marshall said. "I've been in Canton 10 years. I just discovered it. I love it, it's a ball."

Also at their booth was member Kristy Wilson of Livonia, who works in Canton and noted Canton residency isn't required to join.

"We usually get a number of members after this event," Wittner said of the expo. Canton Newcomers & Neighbors is online at CantonWomen.com.

Make Internet safety a priority at all times

The Internet seems to routinely turn valuable resources into cause for concern. Email, for instance, brought us a quicker, easier way to communicate, but also brought us the risk of hacks, spam and viruses.

Online banking became mainstream, saving consumers countless trips to the bank, but added the burden of data breaches and financial scams.

The worst offender may be social media. It's transformed the way we interact, keep in touch with family, plan events and document our lives. But ease at which we can share our private information has left us vulnerable for data thieves who are waiting for consumers to make a mistake.

Facebook, the largest social network, has a built-in event application. It's a seamless way to invite Facebookers to your next get-together. The security settings also defaults to showing profile visitors what upcoming events you are attending. If you don't make your settings private, all of your "friends" can see upcoming events you plan on attending.

I use the term "friends" loosely, as everyone knows Facebook has grown from a place where friends connect to a place where everyone you have ever come in contact with tries to "friend" you.

I don't know about you, but I prefer to not tell large groups of strangers on the Internet my social plans or

when my home will be empty

Another tactic to prevent people knowing when you aren't home is to block friends from "tagging you" at locations when you are together. You can also make your profiles private on Instagram and Twitter to prevent the public from seeing your geo-located photos or tweets.

While Facebook's privacy settings can be easily changed to prevent the spread of personal life details, the same can't be said for networks that exist for the purpose of telling people who you are.

One of the most popular social networks is the six-year-old mobile-based app named Foursquare. It does nothing besides allow you to "check in" to places that aren't home, thus telling all your connections you aren't home.

Not using Foursquare is a no-brainer. But what about sites that aren't so obviously dangerous? Take theknot.com, for instance, where tens of thousands of engaged couples flock each year to create custom wedding websites. Often times, those sites sell your personal information to vendors so they can send you information on tuxedo discounts and limousine rentals. The real danger, however, lies in the wedding site creation where couples post their wedding dates and honeymoon plans.

Unless a website is password protected, anyone can find it, even if they don't have the URL, as the site will come up in search engine results.

Additionally, more seasoned Internet users could just scour wedding sites for local weddings.

There is good news. By making profiles private, checking security settings regularly and not offering up personal information like vacation plans or where your hide-a-key is located, predators may focus on taking advantage of someone else who isn't so careful.

When perception 'is' reality, problems begin

What did you see? Clearly, the colors are white and gold. How could anyone see even a tinge of black or blue? I'm referring, of course, to a photo posted on social media last week by a young woman in Scotland asking the world, quite literally, to identify the color of a dress worn by a guest at a wedding. The question – and ensuing answers – elicited such passion and consternation that a war of words broke out online before the scientists explained how two people, looking at the same image, may perceive color differently depending on our interpretation of ambient light cues. To those who saw white and gold, the dress is, in fact, black and blue – though no explanation will suffice. What they perceive is absolute.

A silly Internet moment, perhaps, but for business owners it's a lesson in marketing: perception, like it or not, is reality.

Even isolated incidents hurt

A friend of a friend had his car stolen recently in one of Detroit's hip neighborhoods. His was one of five vehicles missing when their owners returned from dinner. Is there a more surreal sight than seeing that empty parking space? Bar and restaurant owners, as well as city officials, talk about safety and isolated incidents and how they'll address this problem. Duly noted, but my friend shared with me a few days ago that he's taking a pass on downtown excursions for the short term.

An "incident" like that

Ed Nakfoor

can bedevil even the most successful entertainment or retail venue. "Incident," by the way, is public relations-speak for a crime, the news of which can be hard to contain, what with word of what happened, along with photos – cellphone cameras captured every detail – trending online before the police arrive.

Close behind an "incident" in terms of PR fires to extinguish are filing bankruptcy, losing a major tenant or being the victim of a boycott. Once the smoke clears, though, it's time to assess the damage. What is difficult to put a price tag on, though, is the psychological cost such events have to the reputation of a business. The matter at hand includes soothing the jitters of now-wary customers and employees that it's safe to visit and that a bankruptcy doesn't necessarily mean a business will soon go bust.

The power to change perception, then, is solely in the hands of a business.

Changing the conversation

"Business owners have an obligation to shape how their businesses and products are perceived, as well as the perceptions of where they're located," said Daniel Cherrin, a crisis communication expert and partner in Birmingham-based M10 Integrated Marketing and Communications.

He added, "If you aren't defining the perception you want (customers) to have, then (the customers) are defining you based on their perception ... even if they're wrong, they're still right."

If the perception is defined by crime, for example, Cherrin suggested any message should focus on how people can be safe: "Determine if it was an isolated incident, was it unrelated to the business ... crime does happen ... look at how it happened and then say what steps you're taking to prevent it from happening in future."

Businesses can do this on their own via social media, Cherrin said, but a more productive approach is to create a larger campaign by partnering with neighboring merchants or business associations.

Finally, Cherrin recommended tapping into a social capital account to draw patrons. That is, the investment of time and money a business has given to the community.

"Proactively investing in goodwill means people get to know you as a person and not only an owner," he said. "And if something does happen to your business, people will be more bothered that it happened to you ... and they'll be supportive and want to continue doing supporting you."

The fight to change perception might leave some black and blue marks, but it's one too important to ignore.

Don't be a victim and fall prey to IRS tax scams

Every year during tax season, the IRS comes up with its dirty dozen tax scams. It is important to be aware of these scams because, if you are subject to one, it could be costly.

One of the scams listed by the IRS includes taking advantage of tax credits to which you are not entitled. You will be denied the credit, have to repay the money with interest and be subject to severe penalties.

We are responsible for our own tax returns and, therefore, it is important that we be aware of the scams that are out there. Although I would love to discuss all of the tax scams, space doesn't allow. Therefore, I will highlight a few tax scams that affect many in southeast Michigan.

Rick Bloom

The first scam – and one that is claiming more and more victims – is where someone calls you and tells you he or she is from the Internal Revenue Service. These scam artists are targeting vulnerable people such as the elderly and threatening them with arrest and other action unless money is paid.

These scam artists sound official and are even able to alter caller ID numbers to appear that they are the IRS. As I've said many times in the past, the IRS does not call taxpayers demanding immediate payment. In addition, the IRS does not threaten arrest by local police or other law enforcement groups. If you receive a call or text from someone claiming to be with the IRS, hang up.

What happens to all that information that identity thieves steal? Sometimes these scam artists use that information to file false tax returns on your behalf, claiming a refund. Although there is very little you can do to protect yourself from this, the key is to protect your Social Security number as much as possible. Just because someone asks for your Social Security number doesn't mean you have to give it to them. Protect your personal information at all times.

Another scam that is growing is bogus charities. Following a natural disaster, scam artists come out in droves. Taxpayers should be wary of charities with names similar to nationally known organizations.

One thing I do to make sure of when it comes to charities is to go to websites like www.charitynavigator.org to check out the charity before I give money. In addition, don't give sensitive information over the phone to charities soliciting contributions. I don't respond to any phone solicitation by a charity.

Dishonest tax preparers also have made the IRS dirty dozen list. Taxpayers must be cautious as to who prepares their returns. If you are hiring someone, make sure they have an IRS preparer tax identification number. Also, look at their qualifications.

It is also important that if you are receiving a refund that the money is directly deposited into your account, not the tax preparer's account. In addition, never sign your blank tax return. And before you sign, review the return and ask questions about anything that is not clear.

Lastly, the IRS does not send out unsolicited emails. Numerous taxpayers have received unsolicited emails that they've clicked on that have allowed identity thieves to steal their valuable personal and financial information. If you receive an email that looks like it's from the IRS and looks official, delete it.

Tax scam artists are out in force. It is up to us to protect ourselves. If you get caught up in a tax scam, the worst thing you can do is to ignore it. Good luck.

Vigil held for Westland woman killed in Wayne Road pedestrian accident

By LeAnne Rogers
Staff Writer

A candlelight vigil to remember Marcia Japowicz, who was killed crossing Wayne Road, was held Tuesday at the Westland Taco Bell where she worked.

Japowicz, 53, had worked at the Taco Bell on Wayne Road, south of Palmer, for about nine years and more than 20 years for different locations of the fast food chain. She was walking to work Monday night from her home on Schley when she was hit by what police report was likely multiple vehicles.

"She was a little on the delayed side. She was very sweet, she never missed work or was late — usually she was early," her niece Stephanie London said. "She always had a smile on her face. She was always happy."

Single without children, Japowicz had lived with another niece, Phyllis McLeod, for nearly 10 years. They shared a home on Schley directly across Wayne Road from the Taco Bell where Japowicz worked.

"She was always so dependable. We just finally got her to take a vacation," London said. "We went up to Tip Up Town (in Houghton Lake). I'm so grateful that we went."

Westland Police are continuing to investigate, but report that Japowicz was crossing Wayne Road about 8:15 p.m. when she stopped in the left turn lane. An 83-year-old woman, heading for the Kentucky Fried Chicken immediately south of Taco Bell, pulled into the turn lane, knocking Japowicz into oncoming traffic in the northbound lanes.

Noting this was the fourth pedestrian fatality in Westland during the past year — all crossing at night, not using crosswalks and wearing dark clothing — Westland Police urged residents to follow traffic laws and use the crosswalks.

"The nearest crosswalk is either at Palmer or Glenwood, so that's why she wasn't using one. I know people have asked," London said.

The 83-year-old woman stopped at the accident scene, but Westland Police are looking for information on the drivers of northbound vehicles that struck Japowicz.

"How do you not know you hit someone? It's not that they could have done anything to not hit her," London said. "But how do you not stop? That's what makes us angry. It wasn't their fault, there was no reason not to stop, but they could have some human dignity."

London has organized a Go Fund Me page to help pay for funeral and other expenses for her aunt. Arrangements are still pending. For more information, go to www.gofundme.com/oerlx8.

Anyone with information about the accident is asked to call the Westland Police Traffic Bureau at 734-722-9600.

Brother releases heartfelt music to benefit cancer research

By Robin D'Angelo
Correspondent

"Not all of us can do great things. But we can do small things with great love." — Mother Teresa

One year ago, 17-year-old Salem High School senior Sidarth Raghunathan wasn't aware of the lack of funding for certain types of cancers nor the impact of the disease when it strikes a young person unexpectedly. That is, until his 23-year-old brother Rohit was diagnosed with stage 3 testicular cancer.

"He was having back pain, but none of us expected it was cancer because it is so uncommon for his age," Raghunathan said. "As a result, he didn't get diagnosed until it was very advanced."

A Seattle resident at the time, Rohit moved back to Michigan with his family and quickly began chemotherapy at the University of Michigan.

"He lived with us for a few months and it really made me more aware of the struggles he was facing," Raghunathan said. "As I became more involved, I also became aware of how underfunded some aspects of cancer research are."

A flutist since the sixth grade, Raghunathan was already volunteering his musical talent at the same hospital, so when his brother began treatment, he decided to take it a step further and raise money for cancer research by recording a CD of his music.

"Rohit actually used to play flute a long time ago, so he thought it was a very interesting endeavor. He helped me pick out my music," Raghunathan said.

Musician and flute teacher Lauren Erickson said she was introduced to Raghunathan when he came looking for flute lessons in eighth grade and has been teaching him ever since.

"What's been really cool is I've been able to watch him grow from an unsure young boy into a very confident young man," she said. "He's committed — when he makes a decision to do something, he sees it through and he really cares about people a great deal."

"Was I surprised that he wanted to use his gift of flute to benefit others after his brother got cancer? Not one bit. That is Sidarth. I was more than happy to work with him and see the project through to completion."

Creating the CD was both challenging and time-consuming, Erickson said, but Raghunathan was entirely committed.

"First he had to learn the music and some of his song choices were challenging for him, so it took him a while to get some of the songs under his fingers," she said.

"Secondly, we had to get together and rehearse with other musicians. Along with me, he also had a pianist and a harpist that were involved. We not only had to rehearse, but schedule an actual recording session. So he was coor-inating with all of us and a recording engineer and we had to contact two of the composers to get their permission for their music to be on his CD."

Raghunathan's Flute Journey consists of 11 songs and includes Bach's Siciliano and Polo-naise, Debussy's Deuxieme Arabesque, as well as Danse de la Chevre, Istanbul and Capriccio.

"The CD represents a lot of different time periods and different styles, some Baroque, some classical, some modern. I like all of them in different ways," he said.

The CDs are $10 each, tax-deductible, and all proceeds go to benefit Indiana University Cancer Research, where Rohit underwent several operations.

Raghunathan said his brother had his final surgery several months ago and is now back at work in Seattle, where he plans to enter graduate school for a degree in biostatistics.

Raghunathan has collected more than $500 in sales so far, through his high school, his mother's pediatric office and Erickson's music studio.

"I don't know that I have a monetary goal right now. I just want to raise as much money and awareness as I can," he said. "There are many surgical operations that are underfunded and underdeveloped and this is going to fund the research of very specific developments in testicular cancer, so it certainly has a focus."

According to the American Cancer Society, about 8,430 new cases of testicular cancer will be diagnosed in 2015 and approximately 380 men will die of the disease. The cancer is rare — one in 263 men will develop testicular cancer in his life. The average age at diagnosis is 33.

Raghunathan said while he's not sure if he plans to record additional CDs, he would like to participate in more charity concerts and recitals to continue to raise awareness for cancer research.

"This CD was a year-long endeavor and I don't know if I'll have time to do another one, but we'll see," he said.

Erickson said when she received the final cut of the CD, she wept for joy.

"Sidarth surprised me by showing up to his flute lesson with the final product and I just gave him a big high-five. We were all giggles," she said.

In addition to benefiting cancer research, Erickson said, she has noticed a growing trend among those who have purchased the CDs at her studio.

"I had a flute student's mom tell me she would like to purchase a CD to donate to a cancer patient, and that concept is beginning to take hold. I've already had three more orders from my friends who are ordering for themselves as well as additional copies to donate to cancer patients, so we can certainly make that happen if people would like to donate the music to someone with cancer," she said.

Erickson added that she is incredibly proud of Sidarth for taking the lead on his project from the very beginning.

"I see Sidarth making significant contributions in whatever endeavors he chooses," she said.

"He's a fabulous young man with high aspirations."

To purchase a copy of Sidarth Raghunathan's "Flute Journeys", email sidarth515@yahoo.com or lauren@ericksonflute.com.

Sidarth Raghunathan worked on the CD with his music teacher Lauren Erickson.

Legally blind in one eye, WWII vet still served country

World War II veteran Bruno Douglas "Doug" Williams of Novi was honored as the March "Veteran of the Month" by the Sons of the American Legion Squadron of the Myron H. Beals American Legion Post 32 in Livonia.

Williams served in the Army from 1942-46. He was drafted in 1942 at 21 year, but a childhood injury left him legally blind in his right eye so he was assigned to the U.S. Army Special Forces.

Williams is a member of the American Legion Post 32-Livonia and VFW Post 6695, Plymouth. His current passion is singing karaoke, and he can be seen every Friday night at either the American Legion or the VFW enjoying a song or two. He was interviewed by members of the S.A.L. Veteran of the Month committee at his home in Novi, and a video was made of the interview.

A 94th birthday party was held Feb. 22 at the American Legion Hall in Livonia by his seven children and was attended by a multitude of family and friends. S.A.L. members were in attendance to present his plaque, show the video and introduce him as the March "Veteran of the Month."

Lessons learned from Mr. Spock can apply to anyone

I'm a Trekkie and proud of it. Even as a judge, author and informal educator, I continue to learn from Mr. Spock. In the wake of actor Leonard Nimoy's untimely demise, I feel compelled – however emotional it might be – to share that wisdom. Logical, is it not?

1. Logic prevails: As Mr. Spock was fond of noting, humans are intensely emotional and, at times, irrational. Dispassionate, objective reasoning was Spock's core. Honing our skills to think, as opposed to emote, is crucial to good decision-making.

2. Ponder before you act: Mr. Spock almost always thought before

Michael Warren
GUEST COLUMNIST

he acted. He evaluated the situation, examined the options and determined the course of conduct most likely to succeed. Sometimes the heat of the moment will provoke words, actions or omissions that we later regret. I know I have been there. This is a tough lesson to learn, but tougher to ignore. Taking time to survey the context, reflect on others' viewpoints and perspectives and evaluate the circumstances creates the best opportunity for positive outcomes.

3. Loyalty is key: Although not always associated with logic, Mr. Spock was intensely loyal – to his family, his friends, his federation. Even when he disagreed with the illogical actions of his captain or doctor, he remained doggedly loyal. No span of space, time or dimension could stop his assistance. Loyalty, scarce today, is a key trait that we should embrace.

4. A nerve pinch comes in handy: Spock was an idealist, but knew when – and how – to fight. In battle, there was no one Capt. Kirk would rather have on his side. When the chips are down, sometimes we (individually or as a nation) must engage in physical force to protect our friends, ship, civilization and planet. Indeed, we fought our revolution and many subsequent wars to defend the first principles of the rule of law, unalienable rights, limited government, the social compact, equality and the right to alter or abolish an oppressive government.

5. Diversity is king: The federation is perhaps the most diverse union ever. With more than 150 species, including Andorians, Tellarites, Ithenites, De-nobulans, Rigelians, Coridanites, humans and Vulcans, the federation's combination of intellect, technology and resources is unparalleled. Spock himself was the son of a Vulcan father and human mother. On the bridge of the U.S.S. Enterprise, he served with an American, Scot, Japanese, African and Russian. They were unbeatable because they drew on their strengths. America is the federation of today. We would do well to emulate it.

6. Mind melding is power: Spock's ability to meld minds was a powerful technique to gain invaluable insight and make crucial decisions. Although we humans lack this uncanny power, we can put our heads together to obtain new and broader perspectives that lead to better decision-making.

We have lost an irreplaceable actor with the passing of Nimoy, but Mr. Spock's lessons can guide for our lives and the next generations. Live long and prosper.

Survey asks for citizen views on funding state's transportation system

SEMCOG, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, and its partner organization MAC, the Metropolitan Affairs Coalition, have launched a survey to gather residents' perceptions and attitudes on current road conditions and the May 5, 2015 special election, which will primarily increase funding for Michigan's roads.

Citizens are asked to take a quick survey to provide their view on road conditions and the ballot proposal.

"Funding for Michigan roads is a very important issue," said Kathleen Lomako, SEMCOG executive director and

MAC president. "We are interested to see the results of this survey."

Residents can go to SEMCOG's website at www.semco.org for more information related to road funding and the May 5 election.

This survey is powered by Cobalt Community Research, a Michigan-based 501(c)3 nonprofit research coalition with a mission to provide research and educational tools that help schools, local governments and other nonprofit member organizations thrive as changes emerge in the economic, demographic and social landscape.

SEMCOG is the only organization in southeast Michigan that brings together all governments to solve regional challenges and enhance the quality of life for the region.

The Metropolitan Affairs Coalition, a nonprofit public/private partnership, is the only group that brings business, labor, government and education leaders together to build consensus and seek solutions to regional issues. It promotes regional cooperation and dialogue, and it advances policies and programs that enhance Southeast Michigan's economic vitality and quality of life.

OUR VIEWS

A promise to our readers

We deliver accuracy, truth, service in our news gathering efforts

Recent coverage regarding the ethics of several nationally known journalists has prompted questions and comments about the veracity and credibility of all journalists. All Observer & Eccentric journalists, as part of Gannett, embrace the following "Principles of Ethical Conduct." We want readers to know that as local journalists we are expected to: seek and report the truth in a truthful way, serve the public interest, exercise fair play, maintain independence and act with integrity.

It is important that you – our readers – understand that we hold ourselves to a very high standard. We are accurate journalists and caring citizens of the communities we serve. Here are the principles in depth that we are committed to:

Seeking and reporting the truth

- » We will dedicate ourselves to reporting the news accurately, thoroughly and in context.
- » We will be honest in the way we gather, report and present news.

- » We will be persistent in the pursuit of the whole story.
- » We will keep our word.

- » We will hold factual information in editorials and other opinion pieces to the same standards of accuracy as news stories.

- » We will seek to gain sufficient understanding of the communities, individuals and stories we cover to provide an informed account of activities.

- » We will use content created by others in ways that adhere to the guidelines for protecting the Principles.

Serving the public interest

- » We will uphold First Amendment principles to serve the democratic process.

- » We will be vigilant watchdogs of government and institutions that affect the public, fighting to ensure that the public's business is conducted in public.

- » We will seek solutions as well as expose problems and wrongdoing in order to effect change for the good in the communities we serve.

- » We will provide a public forum for diverse people and views.

- » We will reflect and encourage understanding of the diverse segments of our community.

- » We will provide editorial and community leadership.

- » We will seek to promote understanding of complex issues.

Exercising fair play

- » We will treat people with dignity, respect and compassion.

- » We will correct errors promptly.

- » We will strive to include all sides relevant to a story.

- » We will explain to readers our journalistic processes.

- » We will give particular attention to fairness in relations with people unaccustomed to dealing with the media.

- » We will use unnamed sources as the sole basis for published information only as a last resort and under specific procedures that best serve the public's right to know.

Maintaining independence

- » We will remain free of outside interests, investments or business relationships that may compromise the credibility of our news report.

- » We will maintain an impartial, arm's length relationship with anyone seeking to influence the news.

- » We will avoid potential conflicts of interest and eliminate inappropriate influence on content.

- » We will be free of improper obligations to news sources, news makers and advertisers.
- » We will differentiate advertising from news.

- » When sponsorships of news are appropriate, we will not allow them to determine, change or restrict content.

Acting with integrity

- » We will act honorably and ethically in dealing with news sources, the public and our colleagues.

- » We will obey the law.

- » We will observe common standards of decency.

- » We will take responsibility for our decisions and consider the possible consequences of our actions.

- » We will be conscientious in observing these Principles.

- » We will use technological tools with skill and thoughtfulness, avoiding approaches that skew facts, distort reality or sensationalize events.

- » We will use news gathering techniques such as hidden cameras or microphones only if there is no other way to tell a significant story effectively and only with management approval.

- » We will not plagiarize.

- » We will not manipulate images or sound in misleading ways. We will not present images that are re-enacted without informing the audience.

- » We will always try to do the right thing.

We are proud of these standards and welcome a community conversation (in print and online via guest columns and letters to the editor and on our Facebook page and Twitter) about how we are doing. We strive to uphold these standards in every report we publish across all platforms.

Coffee drinkers have new reason to rejoice

The folks promoting March as Caffeine Awareness Month are doing so in the hopes that millions of Americans will forgo a cup of Joe for something more healthy, like a fruit smoothy.

The timing couldn't be worse.

According to The Department of Health and Human Services report on dietary guidelines for 2015, caffeine as dispensed in coffee is good for you. And were not talking good in moderation – like an apple a day keeps the doctor away – we're talking three to five cups per day, according to the website health.gov.

The average American now drinks one or two cups per day, but scientists say upping the intake could reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease and Type 2 diabetes while increasing the "protective association between coffee/caffeine intake and risk of Parkinson's disease."

The report indicated that adding extras like cream and sugar is not recommended and that pregnant women should drink less coffee than other adults. Other than that, government scientists urged us all to drink up, early and often.

It must be said that dietary guidelines change often and the average person has a hard time keeping up.

Are we supposed to eat eggs these days? Are the kind you get at the grocery store good enough or will only free-range do?

Is margarine the killer – or was it butter?

For the time being, coffee drinkers should rejoice, head to a local shop and down a few cups. Naysayers will have to find something else to worry about. Overly processed foods, hormones added to meat, we all know that stuff is big trouble – at least until the 2016 dietary guidelines are published.

Fix our roads

Last summer, as I drove along Warren Road between Canton Center and Beck, I noticed the roads' lines had been repainted. Immediately, I knew that we Canton/Sunflower Subdivision residents would be dealing with this washboard, potholed-infested road for another winter.

Tonda Elementary is located within this stretch of Warren, so it is particularly dangerous to residents and teachers, not to mention the hundreds of students driven to school each day. Merely painting the lines on this stretch of Warren truly brought to mind the phrase "lipstick on a pig."

I realize this is only one of hundreds, maybe thousands, of similar dilapidated road situations throughout our crumbling state. Surely, something more than "lipstick" paint must be available. Otherwise, save the paint money.

Support affordable care

"Obamacare is a job killer!" Did you notice that you don't hear that anymore? The reason is that it is not true. It never was.

During the Obama presidency, jobs have been created. The unemployment rate has been cut in half. The stock market has doubled.

Now conservatives are trying to kill the Affordable Care Act in the Supreme Court on a technicality. The ACA has resulted in 7 million Americans having health insurance who could not afford it before. The conservatives have no alternative plan to offer. Please support our president in defending the Affordable Care Act.

Convert all lights to LED

"Livonia receives grant for new LED lights along Five Mile." Livonia could get into a program to convert all street lights and municipal building lights by self-financing through savings in electrical charges.

Keep the same budget for electricity through the years of the program. Use the savings each month to convert more lights to LEDs. The rate of conversion should accelerate until all lights are converted. Then the budget can finally be reduced.

Why not join SMART?

Why doesn't Livonia join other metro Detroit communities and have SMART bus service? Wouldn't it be convenient and inexpensive to be able to take a bus downtown to the DIA, Tigers or Lions games, the Fox, Cobo Center, etc.? Driving around metro Detroit is tedious and expensive. Wouldn't it even be nice to take a bus to Livonia's Civic Center attractions – the library and senior center? Why do Livonians have to drive everywhere?

Livonia City Council stated that by not being a part of SMART, Livonians are saving tax dollars – but driving and parking a car in the metro area is also expensive for an individual. Just driving to a few downtown events can cost more than $100 in parking and fuel. Plus, there's wear and tear on one's car (remember, metro Detroit is the pothole capital of the USA). Finally, having a decent bus system may allow one to only own one car!

What was the actual motivation that caused Livonia City Council opted out of SMART? Saving money for Livonians doesn't seem to be a real reason.

School food dictator not needed

Everyone knew that the first lady got involved in school lunches, even disapproving of some dishes served. But I didn't know that she could dictate to the schools as to what would be allowed in bake sales. Am I oversimplifying the fact that schools can no longer decide what can be sold? If it isn't on the federally approved "smart snack" list, it will not be in a bake sale.

In discussing this with a few younger mothers – I'm 80 years old with no children in school – I was told that children brown bagging their lunches sometimes have items removed from them not on the approved list.

This is outrageous. Why have we let this happen? A dictator of school food is not needed. Thank you, state Sen. Patrick Colbeck, for bringing this to our attention. Good luck with Senate Bill 139 and House Bill 4202.

Who is watching the first family to make sure they are abiding by the law set down by Mrs. Obama?

Letter writers right on

The three letters written by Ann Abdo, A. Allie and Alfred Brock – headlined "Save our children," "Award is positive" and "Public transportation" – are on subjects we must face and need attention now by our city council members and lawmakers.

It seems that you have become a forgotten citizen in Livonia when you can no longer drive due to poor eyesight or aging, but we still need to get to the stores for food, clothing, medications, etc. There is a small bus that is available if you have to go to the doctor, etc. but you have to telephone two days before your appointment. Taxis do not want to do short drives – they want riders who are going to the airport or Detroit. When you can no longer drive, you are really in a bad predicament. Hurray for Alfred Brock and his letter.

The letter by Ann Abdo is well written and so truthful about what happens to so many young boys. We need to really educate young girls so that they are not having babies. These girls don't usually know who the father is and have no plans. These babies are brought up in terrible conditions often by a grandmother if they are lucky but usually by a too-young and often absentee mother. The children are often beaten and starved by their so-called caregivers so they grow up to steal food, cars and things to sell to get money for drugs.

I know this to be true as I did voluntary work for 20 years at Interim House, run by the YMCA of Detroit. It is a shelter for abused women and their children.

These children do not grow up to know how to live, learn, eat reasonably well and end up beaten or worse. Schools are either too busy or too afraid to report suspected cases of abuse or report to the authorities when children don't turn up for school. Rarely does someone follow up these cases as they did many years ago. We keep hearing there is no money but money is spent wrongly on things that are wasteful.

On the letter by A. Allie: If many people in the United States were not so pious and believe that if you are not white and Christian that you are a lower class and not acceptable, there would not be so many stories spun that are utter untruths about the Quran and their beliefs, etc. I do believe that when someone comes to the United States to live permanently they should do their best to merge in and perhaps dress more like Americans.

We should accept our neighbors, workmates, etc. as good people. There is good and bad in every nationality, religion and family, but if you don't like someone, just accept them as they are. You don't have to be friends with everyone.

The TV does report more about the incredibly wicked, evil people who will always be with us. That makes "breaking news."

Protect endangered rufa

After reading the recently released Fermi 3 Supplemental Biological Assessment (February 2015) done by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service who had notified the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that an endangered species, the rufa red knot, was known to use the shoreline as a stop-over resting, feeding spot on their 19,000-mile migration, DTE first said none had been spotted since 1973, then changed that stating a rufa was seen on the property in 2000.

According to a citizens' bird watchers group (www.eBird.org) multiple sightings were reported in 2014 at the Pointe Mouillee State Game Area, which borders Fermi on the north, and at Sterling State Park, which borders on the south. Sightings have also been reported from Estral Beach, bordering the Fermi site on the east.

The Atlantic seacoast is the main route for many migrating birds, likely because of more abundant food supply. However, a lot of birds take the less traveled inland route, and the Great Lakes are on the flight plan for these.

After flying a few thousand miles, the rufas rest on the western basin of Lake Erie, and feed for a couple of weeks. Then they resume their long journey, doing so twice a year. Many other species of birds do this same migration pattern, but the rufa is the endangered one – this year at least.

Wouldn't it be a terrible thing for their stop-over to be further destroyed by building another nuclear reactor? People, don't let this happen. Now is the time to speak out against it, instead of lamenting that the rufa has become extinct.

Williams sparks Chiefs' rally, 60-57 triumph

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

Novi found out the hard way Monday night that it's tough to keep Greg Williams and Canton down for a full 32 minutes.

Fueled by a 28-point third quarter — with senior guard Williams accounting for half of those points — the Chiefs roared back from a 27-15 halftime deficit to claim a 60-57 win in a boys basketball Class A district match-up at Novi.

"We came in at halftime and obviously we weren't doing the right things," Williams said. "We weren't sprinting back on (defense), we were letting them get easy buckets. We weren't executing on offense. So we kept preaching, 'Keep playing, keep fighting, shots will fall, but we definitely got to get back on (defense) and play a lot harder.'"

Canton coach Jimmy Reddy recalled a halftime chat with Williams, who had only managed two points in the first 16 minutes.

"He wasn't great in the first half and I told him at halftime

"It's go time, buddy," Reddy said. "He responded to the challenge just like the other nine guys did."

The Chiefs improved to 16-5 were scheduled Wednesday to play a district semifinal against host Plymouth.

On the flip side, the Wildcats (12-9) let a potential upset victory slip away, to the dismay of coach Brandon Sinawi.

"We executed our game plan really, really well (early), but I told the guys they're going to make a run, they always do," he said. "They're a great team,

Salem takes another step

Rocks defeat Fenton in semifinals, now just one victory from elite eight

By Tim Smith

Whenever the Salem Rocks needed a little extra oomph to overtake Fenton in Tuesday's girls basketball Class A regional semifinal, it wasn't Shara Long coming up huge.

It wasn't Jamyra Wilson, either. But not to worry.

Although Long and Wilson dealt with early foul trouble against the host Tigers, the Rocks still had clutch shooters such as seniors Hayley Rogers, Katie Latack and freshman Lasha Petree, who knocked down plenty of their chances.

And the Rocks (20-4) overcame an early bump in the road (leading just 10-8 after the first quarter) to ultimately cruise to a 50-33 victory. Salem now moves on to the regional final against Hartland at 7 p.m. Thursday (today).

"They kind of just moved the ball. I was open," said Petree, who led the Rocks with 17 points. "They passed and I just shot."

With a smile, she added that it's "amazing" to be a freshman playing on the floor with four outstanding seniors such as Long, Wilson, Rogers and Latack — not to mention Maranda

Defending champ Chiefs win regional, ready for chance to repeat

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

It's been an injury-filled season for defending state champion Canton, but the Chiefs demonstrated again Saturday that nothing seems to deter them.

Canton won the MHSAA regional gymnastics team championship at Plymouth High School with a 146.5 score and look to make it two state titles Friday in Rockford.

Also qualifying with a school-record total of 143.5 was the Wildcats, who finished third. In second with 144.375 points was Grosse Pointe United. Just missing the cut despite a 141.2 tally was fourth-place Livonia Blue.

"It was just a tremendous team effort. We had to pull together," veteran Canton head coach John Cunningham said. "We were shooting for 147 and (just) missed it."

In order to win states, the Chiefs will need to clean up some of the falls and mishaps that kept them from reaching that 147 mark.

"Friday night, we got a shot," Cunningham said. "We're up at the 146, 147, 148 range and that was not our best score that we could have had. We counted falls.

"And so we can get better. We'll need it to beat Rockford/Sparta."

Canton easily topped the field on balance beam (36.775) and floor exercise (37.1) and held off Grosse Pointe United to win uneven parallel bars by a 35.975 to 35.475 score.

Only on vault did the Chiefs not prevail, finishing second with 36.650.

Talented influx

"To say the least," Cunningham said, jokingly, when asked about whether his 2015 team had plenty of adversity to deal with. "Before the season, I had Ellie Bachman leave for soccer and practically the first meet we had a broken leg from poor Jocelyn (Moraw)."

The Chiefs also felt the loss of standouts Erica Lucas and Melissa Green to graduation.

But there were reinforcements, led by senior newcomer Allison Kunz, who joined the Chiefs from Eurostars Gymnastics in Plymouth, where she was a Level 10 gymnast.

In Saturday's individual results, Kunz was the first-place finisher in Division 1 on

RACE FOR OHL PLAYOFFS

Whalers can't thwart Oshawa attack

Great effort by Plymouth goalie Nedeljkovic still not enough

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

Compuware Arena resembled a shooting gallery Saturday night, as the Oshawa Generals kept firing pucks at Plymouth Whalers goalie Alec Nedeljkovic.

In the first period alone, the Ontario Hockey League Eastern Conference leaders sent 28 shots at Nedeljkovic and the Carolina Hurricanes prospect turned aside all of them.

Eventually, however, Oshawa would find a way to get a few pucks past Nedeljkovic in a 3-0 victory before nearly 3,000 fans at Compuware. The Plymouth goaltender stopped 57 of the Generals' 60 shots and was the game's No. 1 star despite the loss.

"You just saw one of the top two or three teams in all of junior hockey and you could see why," Plymouth head coach Don Elland said. "From one through 12 up front and one through six on the back end, they're as good a team as you're going to find."

"Ned was great to keep it at the score it was, but I thought we played hard. That's a good team, we didn't quit. Yeah, we were overmatched, yeah, we're fighting injuries again. But we played hard and I was proud of how hard the guys fought."

Nedeljkovic wasn't sure if the 28 shots in the first was the highest shot total he'd ever faced in a period. Ottawa held a 28-4 edge after the first and finished the night with a 60-29 advantage.

"But we did a pretty good job of keeping most of those shots on the perimeter," Nedeljkovic said. "It was 28 shots, but a lot of them were from the outside, so it was a pretty good defensive effort."

Constant pressure

He added that the only way to game plan for such a high-octane team as the Generals (47-9-2-3, 99 points) is to be "prepared for anything. You know they've got three No. 1 lines ... they're just going to come after you wave after wave after wave."

In the final minute of the first, Oshawa winger Michael McCarron's one-timer was kicked out by Nedeljkovic. He then blocked and covered a blast by former Whaler Matt Mistele from the left circle.

Plymouth went on the offensive during the first part of the second period, testing Oshawa goalie Ken Appleby with the first 10 shots of the period. Defenseman Sean Callaghan's stretch pass found center Mathew Campagna, who barreled in on Appleby, only to be denied.

The Generals, however, cracked the code with 5:49 to play in the second when forward Tobias Lindberg — one of seven 20-goal scorers on the team — blocked a shot at the Oshawa blue line and broke in on Nedeljkovic. Lindberg slipped a low backhand between the goalie's pads for the goal.

Right off the ensuing faceoff, the Whalers made a bid for the equalizer. Forward Connor Sills' drive hit the left post, however.

"We struggle scoring goals; that's our big thing and that shows," Elland said. "They score and we come right back 10 seconds later and hit the post. If we score there, it's 1-1 and we're energized and the crowd's into it."

"But we just have a hard time scoring right now."

Mistele strikes

And with the way this season has gone for Plymouth, it wouldn't be long before it was a two-goal deficit.

Mistele, traded in January by the Whalers, stuffed a wrap-around past Nedeljkovic at the right post for his 34th goal of the season (and 10th in 19 games with Oshawa).

"I'm buddies with (Nedeljkovic) and obviously he wants to stop me from scoring and I want to score on him for a little competition," Mistele said. "But, yeah, he's a great goalie and he played a great game."

He added that the Generals weren't discouraged about not getting any of those 28 first-period shots past Nedeljkovic.

"Just keep getting pucks on net," said Mistele, drafted last June by the Los Angeles Kings. "You get that many shots, a few are going to go in. Again, he played great, but we figured it out."

About Mistele getting one past him, Nedeljkovic shrugged it off.

"He's a good player, he's a great goal scorer," Nedeljkovic said. "It's hard to keep a lot of those guys off the score sheet."

"Good for him coming back here and putting one in. It wasn't the prettiest of goals that I've seen him score, but he found a way to get one in."

The lone goal of the third came with 16:08 remaining, when forward Joe Manchurek deflected a shot into the Whalers' net.

Despite the loss, Plymouth remains in the hunt for the eighth and final playoff spot in the OHL Western Conference. Eighth-place Saginaw (53 points) also lost Saturday.

"We're two points back, we play (Saginaw) twice," Elland said. "Windsor's in the mix, too. We're watching what they're doing just like they're watching what we're doing."

"But if we have the effort the last remaining games like we had tonight, we'll be fine."

Shamrocks ickers continue mastery over St. Mary's

By Brad Emons
Staff Writer

Four meetings this season, four surprising blowouts.

That was the verdict Saturday as defending Division 1 state champion Novi Detroit Catholic Central routed Orchard Lake St. Mary's at Compuware Arena, 8-0.

CC, which had won the three previous meetings with the Eaglets by scores of 9-5, 5-1 and 7-1, ended the game with 8:32 left in the final period on Ryan Burnett's goal.

The Shamrocks (21-5-1) were scheduled to play Troy in a quarterfinal game Wednesday.

"In all the years I've been in this program, it's never been like this," CC interim coach Danny Veri said. "It's a good program, a lot of pride down there. Never would have expected it."

"What's really ironic is most teams, when they play us, bring their 'A' game. With this group, every time we've played them, we've brought our best."

"With the state tournament involvement, I think that's what it was."

In the first period, the Shamrocks buzzed around St. Mary's goaltender Brendan Earls like vultures with a 14-6 shot advantage as CC put two on the board with a pair of power-play goals.

Catholic Central's JoJo Mancinelli (left) tallies his second goal on the power play in Saturday's 8-0 win over St. Mary Prep.

Alex Kreuzer scored the first on tip-in at 8:34 from Andrew Lane and Evan Rochowiak, followed by JoJo Mancinelli's goal from Burnett and Kreuzer at 15:09.

With 8:08 left in the second period, the Shamrocks had a goal waved off, but still made it 3-0 with 7:02 left on Mancinelli's unassisted goal.

"He's just got really great speed, really good hockey sense," Veri said. "It would be great if he was 6-foot, but he uses what he has really well."

Kreuzer popped home a rebound assist from Mitch Ossowski and Andrew Spiegel for a 4-0 cushion. Lane, Luc Krasicky and Brian Kearns scored the other goals.

The Shamrocks outshot the Eaglets, 29-8; senior goalie Spencer Wright got the shut-out.

"They're a good team; they know how to get the puck in the zone, and they know how to work on it," Eaglets coach Brian Klanow said. "They outworked us every shift that we played this year."

St. Mary's, a perennial state contender, ended the season an uncharacteristic 9-14.

"This season has been a struggle for us," Klanow said. "Right from the get-go, we had a lot of injuries and just never seemed to recover from it."

Meanwhile, CC seems to be peaking at the right time.

"This team plays with a lot of enthusiasm and they really like being together," Veri said. "That's a great component right there."

DETROIT CC 3, NORTH-HARRISON 0: Catholic Central (20-5-1) opened defense of its state title March 4 with a victory over North Farmington-Harrison (13-14) in a pre-regional at Plymouth's Compuware Arena.

The Shamrocks peppered 45 shots at Flyers goaltender Brendan Dilloway and came up with three goals.

Owen Kipke opened the scoring at 11:40 of the first period on a power-play goal from Evan Rochowiak and Blake Veri.

The Shamrocks added a pair of even-strength goals during the second period, with Andrew Spiegel making it 2-0 at 1:31 off assists from Luc Krasicky and JoJo Mancinelli, followed by Mancinelli's goal at 4:16 from Mitch Ossowski.

well-coached and they got a couple players that can really fill it up.

"We didn't have an answer for Logan (Ryan) and he took advantage of his frame and made it very difficult for us to defend."

Both Williams and Ryan led the Chiefs with 20 points.

Freshman guard Noah Brown also made a big contribution with 12 points.

For the Wildcats, senior guard Max Yanke tallied 18 points, while junior guard Nick Hankerson and junior forward Kam Hankerson, who are cousins, added 13 apiece.

Yet even with the Canton explosion in the third, there were some tense moments on the Chiefs' sideline as Novi regained the lead 53-49 after enjoying a 9-0 run in the fourth.

Canton got it back at 55-53, however, following a layup by Brown and a trey from the right corner with two minutes left by junior forward Ryan, who grabbed 11 rebounds along with his 20 points.

A baseline floater by Yanke sliced the Chiefs' tenuous lead to 57-55 with 1:09 remaining.

The drama ensued. It was a 60-57 game with 14 seconds left when Novi got the ball with one more chance to at least force overtime.

Instead of a potential game-tying attempt, however, the Novi player threw the ball down low and it was stolen to seal the victory for Canton.

Sinawi said that crucial sequence did not go according to plan.

"We talked about being down three and needing a three, setting up screens," Sinawi said. "Create a shot if you need to, but we need a three. ... And he threw it inside.

"Down late in the game, we needed a three and we passed it up."

Closing out the first half strong, Yanke scooped and scored and tacked on a foul shot with 3.8 seconds left in the second quarter, opening up a 27-15 lead.

Novi then scored the first field goal of the second half for a 14-point edge.

But the Chiefs made a big comeback, taking a 43-39 lead going into the fourth.

The Wildcats responded with a 9-0 surge, capped off by a Yanke layup, to regain the lead at 53-49.

Unfortunately for Novi, it wouldn't be long before Williams, Ryan and company took control of the game for good.

"I feel for my seniors, Max and all my guys, that they won't get a chance to play on Wednesday," Sinawi said. "It's a shame, it's a great group of seniors that we've got. But again, Canton earned it tonight and we weren't able to respond."

BOYS BOWLING FINALS

Canton's championship quest stopped by Zebras

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

Canton's varsity boys bowling team just ran out of steam at the wrong moment.

The Chiefs walked Friday into Sunnybrook Lanes in Sterling Heights full of confidence after winning their first Division 1 team regional the previous Saturday. But Canton couldn't get past Wayne Memorial, losing 1,370 to 1,277 in a quarterfinal match-up.

Wayne then went on to defeat Saginaw Heritage in the D1 final.

"We lost to them (Zebras) earlier in the season; we won one and they won one," Canton head coach Karl Brubaker said. "They have a good team. ... You got to be on top of things to make it that far."

Canton did prevail in the opening match-up against Macomb L'Anse Creuse North, 1,456 to 1,383.

"It was a great season," Brubaker said. "To win as many tournaments as we did and to get that far, that's a special team just to get there."

With Friday's disappointment behind them, several Canton bowlers still had business to attend to at Saturday's D1 boys and girls individual finals, also at Sunnybrook.

The most successful of any Plymouth-Canton Educational Park bowler was Canton sophomore Meghan Macunovich, who entered afternoon match play in 15th place following the morning qualifying block (where she tallied 1,184 pins).

Macunovich, in her second trip to the girls individual finals in two years, bested three opponents to make it all the way to the final before losing 512-470 to Ann Arbor Huron senior Allison Morris.

"Meghan qualified 15th, so to be able to get through the field that was a good thing," Brubaker said.

There were four Park participants in the boys individual final, but only Canton senior Jacob Peltz made it through the qualifying block into the final 16.

Peltz rolled 248 and 242 games during the six-game qualifying block Friday morning, placing fourth (1,331).

"He won his first match (406-377 over Walled Lake Central's Philip Bugelli) and got to the round of eight," Brubaker said. "And he then eventually lost to a kid from L'Anse Creuse North (Kyle Hayes)."

Canton senior co-captain Aaron Madsen totaled 1,185 (27th place) and failed to qualify for afternoon match play.

Also competing but not qualifying were Canton senior Josh Criscenti and Salem sophomore Mitchell Rusinek.

Fifth place is best Park wrestlers can muster at ultra-competitive Division 1 state finals

By Tim Smith

Three of the six wrestlers from Plymouth-Canton Educational Park got to stand on the podium Saturday at The Palace of Auburn Hills.

And the other three made gallant efforts to join them during the three-day MHSAA Division 1 individual finals.

Both Canton senior Ty Jasman and Plymouth junior Dylan Dwyer won bouts for fifth place in the 140- and 135-pound divisions to garner all-state honors.

Also an all-stater with his seventh-place showing at 189 was Salem senior Mitchell Gross (44-11).

Salem junior 189-pounder Roy Foster (45-14) finished one point away from joining Gross on the podium, while Plymouth seniors Hussein Youssef and Brandon Harris were unable to shake off early struggles at 189 and 119, respectively.

"The finals didn't go exactly as planned, but 189 pounds was a very tough weight class," Salem co-coach Jeremy Henderson said. "Roy Foster came within one point of placing on the podium. He won 45 matches this year and will be a force next year as a senior."

Henderson said Gross was very disappointed not to close out his stellar prep career as an individual champion, but it was still a noteworthy achievement for him to finish seventh.

"It was not in the cards for him," Henderson said. "He lost early in the tournament and had to fight his way back just to place."

"It (seventh) was not what Mitchell wanted, but it was still a very successful career for Mitchell. He has close to 130 wins and is on our wall of champs three times, which is almost unheard of."

Jasman also was looking to cap his prep career with a state title, but was unable to get on a Palace hot streak. Still, Chiefs head coach Cory Mancuso labeled Jasman's all-state finish as a "great accomplishment."

In the match for fifth, Jasman knocked off Monroe's Logan DiCarlo, 10-1, to finish at 39-8.

"Ty had a remarkable career as a Canton Chief wrestler," Mancuso said. "The gains he made from when he started to where he ended as an all-state wrestler is a compliment to his work ethic."

Plymouth brought the largest Park contingent to the finals, but only Dwyer (52-5) placed.

After winning in the blood round, Dwyer defeated quality opponents Saturday before dropping a close 4-2 match to Wyandotte's Collin Vargo.

Dwyer went on to edge Anchor Bay's Joey Dombrowski, 5-4, to place fifth.

"Dylan wrestled very well all weekend," Plymouth head coach Quinn Guernsey said. "Even in his losses, he was competitive and wrestled with poise beyond his experience."

Youssef (43-11) "got caught" in his opening match against Davison's Turner and could not climb back into the podium picture.

"He also had a great career and has a lot to be proud of from his time as a Plymouth wrestler," Guernsey said.

Harris (34-7) came in "dinged up" from the regional and wasn't at 100 percent, which was trouble in a deep and balanced weight class.

Still, Guernsey said, Harris "had a great career at Plymouth and it was unfortunate to see him fall short of his goal of being a two-time all-stater."

Going head to head in a 140-pound consolation bout Saturday are Canton's Ty Jasman (right) and Utica Eisenhower's Connor McDill.

Armstead.

"They all play a huge role in our program," Petree said. "They help us learn more about the game and they're amazing. I'm going to miss them next year."

Petree, who also grabbed seven rebounds, is described by Salem head coach Lindsay Klemmer as a "pure baller" and that was on display at Fenton High School.

"She doesn't care how big the games are, she's just out there having fun," Klemmer said. "And that's the blessing when you're young. You're not nervous, you're excited. She's always been very calm."

Another key performer Tuesday was Rogers, who hit a couple of important triples to help push Salem's lead to double digits in the third quarter.

According to Rogers, it was essential that the Rocks were on target from the perimeter to counter strong inside defenders for the Tigers.

"We knew they have two really good post players and we knew we had to make our shots today," Rogers said. "We moved the ball around a lot, which helped make those shots open."

Latack also was in double figures with 10 points, helping pick up the slack on a night when Wilson and Long tallied four and two points, respectively.

Early in the second quarter, with Fenton trailing just 10-8, Latack connected on a jumper. On the next play, she stole the ball.

Latack was in the middle of things during Salem's 9-0 surge that opened the third quarter, helping the Rocks take a 31-18 lead.

After Armstead opened the third with a hard-earned put-back, Rogers canned a trey from the left wing (off a sweet pass from Wilson). Latack then buried a jumper from the corner and followed with a deft finger roll.

"She gives us everything she's got. Her intensity never goes down," Klemmer said about Latack. "She's a communicator; she's a leader on the floor."

"She hits shots when she needs to, she can get to the basket and she takes care of the ball." Rogers, meanwhile, said Klemmer and the rest of the Salem coaching staff deserved a big assist for the victory, the Rocks' 20th in a row.

"They're always saying, 'Come on, you can do it, you still have more in you, you can get to that next energy level,'" Rogers said. "It's really them that's pushing us forward in these games."

And now, the Rocks are just one victory away from reaching the state quarterfinals. Rogers said she isn't looking past the Hartland game.

"It's going to be another tough grind," Rogers said. "We're going to have to make our shots, we're going to get inside. But we're ready for it."

Klemmer said Hartland is a tough, physical team, but she is confident the Rocks will be fine.

"I think we match up real well with them," she said. "It's going to be a battle. It's going to be one of those games where every possession counts."

BOYS BASKETBALL DISTRICT

Rocks capture opening game against Shamrocks

By Brad Emons
Staff Writer

The Salem boys basketball team may have forgotten for a half that daylight saving time had already gone into effect in Monday's Class A district opener.

But the host Rocks were able to fast forward their internal clocks during the third and fourth quarters and rallied from a 28-25 halftime deficit to eliminate Novi Detroit Catholic Central, 60-51.

Salem, which moved into Wednesday's district semifinal at Plymouth against Northville, improved to 16-5.

The Rocks began to assert themselves on the boards and took advantage of CC foul trouble to outscore the Shamrocks 17-11 in the third quarter.

The pivotal play came with 2:11 remaining in the quarter, when 6-foot-1 senior point guard Jon Swift made a step-back move and got fouled while draining an off-balance 3-pointer as he crashed to the floor.

Swift, who finished with 10 points, made the subsequent free throw for the four-point play, pushing the Salem advantage from 36-35 to 40-35.

CC (10-10) never got closer than three the rest of the way as Salem, despite 19-of-28 free-throw shooting (67.8 percent), made six in a row during the final 1:25 to ice the victory.

"That helped and we were kind of on a run right there," Salem coach Bob Brodie said of the four-point swing. "(Swift) came off a steal and knocked that three down, got fouled and made the shot. That's momentum. It's a game of momentum like that and we took advantage of it and held on."

Salem senior forward Allante Wheeler led all scorers with 15 points, while Swift and senior forward Jakob Lenders added 11 apiece.

Kenny Topolovec, a 6-6 junior, also contributed 10 points, but more importantly grabbed 15 rebounds as the Rocks enjoyed a commanding 39-19 margin on the glass. "We upped our defensive intensity a little bit, put more pressure on them - number one," Brodie said. "And then number two, we rebounded the basketball very well. It was like two different halves. The first half was a very slow pace; we weren't playing very good defense whatsoever. They were doing whatever they had to do, controlling the whole tempo the first half. I told the kids at halftime, 'It's our house, we've got to control the tempo. We've got to control the game. We've got to step up the pressure the next half.'"

The Shamrocks had chances to extend their three-point halftime lead, but made only 7-of-20 first-quarter shots and 5-of-12 in the second (37.5 percent for the half).

"First half was great," CC coach Bill Dyer said. "We were up three and we shot the ball terribly. We missed every open shot it seemed like and we were still up three. I thought if we put a couple of jump shots down, fine, but we continued to miss free throws and shots tonight. And they were rough misses. They were one-and-one misses down four, misses down three, two shot fouls. Split pairs of two shot fouls. Same thing that happened to us last year in the tournament."

After Champ Kozlowski made a layup with 3:27 left in the final quarter to cut the deficit to 51-48, senior center Ike Marchie fouled out.

At one point during the third quarter, the Shamrocks had racked up eight fouls to Salem's two. The Rocks got into the double bonus early in the fourth.

"We haven't been in foul trouble like that the entire year where we put somebody at the foul line like that in the third quarter," Dyer said.

Junior guard Tyler Laurentius paced CC with 13 points, while sophomore forward C.J. Baird and Kozlowski, a senior guard, chipped in 11 and nine, respectively.

GYMNASTICS REGIONAL

Wildcats enjoy record-setting day

Plymouth finishes third to qualify for team finals, sets team marks in the process

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer

Spearheaded by the determined Molly McSween, Plymouth's varsity gymnastics team enjoyed a record-smashing day Saturday at the Division 1 regional.

The Wildcats qualified for Friday's team finals in Rockford by finishing third with a team-record all-around total of 143.5 and also established a team mark on uneven parallel bars (35.375).

Integral to that success was McSween, a fourth-year senior who has made impressive strides since ninth grade.

She won the Division 2 championship on uneven parallel bars with a 9.150 score and was one of 14 Wildcats competing in the event (including Division 1 performers), demonstrating Plymouth's incredible depth.

"Molly McSween started out, she didn't even qualify for Division 3 her first year," Wildcats head coach Pam Yockey said. "Barely could do a bar routine. She took first place (Saturday) in Division 2 on bars, actually blew everyone away."

"She's worked really hard for four years to get there... She has just been amazing."

Among other Wildcats who were outstanding Saturday at Plymouth High School were juniors Rebeca Simu and Haley Metz, who both qualified for individual states (which take place Saturday in Rockford) in all Division 1 categories.

To qualify for the individual final, gymnasts must finish in the top eight in vault, bars, beam and floor; the top six in all-around qualify.

Simu tied for second in D1 on balance beam (9.3) and placed third on vault (9.2) and seventh on bars (8.8) and floor exercise (9.075). She came in fifth in the all-around, with a total of 36.375.

"Rebeca has been through a lot of setbacks this year," Yockey said, listing a knee injury and infected wisdom tooth. "She has come back completely."

Metz was Plymouth's top finisher in D1 all-around with a third-place tally of 36.95. She also took second on bars (9.425), fifth on vault (9.1) and beam (9.25) and sixth on floor (9.175).

"Haley is our strongest all-arounder and she's so consistent, we can always guarantee what score she's going to get," Yockey said. "Her smile, attitude and work ethic is so strong. She is just so reliable with whatever she does."

Yockey emphasized that the team success has a lot to do with unwavering work ethic and determination.

"There's 14 all-arounders and equal competition time for each gymnast," she said. "They got a lot of competition time and we were able to qualify quite a number of kids."

Other Plymouth individual state qualifiers included Samantha Fontana (seventh, D1 vault, 9.0), Lindsay Badger and Kayla Janevski (tied for seventh, D2 vault, 9.1) and Emily Welch (sixth, D2 beam, 8.625).

According to Simu, team camaraderie and support continues to pay off at such major events as the regional.

"I'm really proud of our team for making it to states for the third time (in her three years on varsity)," Simu said. "I feel like we're really close and everyone's motivating each other."

Also thrilled about the accomplishment is sophomore Natalie Janke.

"I am very, very excited for team states," Janke said. "We worked really hard this year. We had some rough patches, but that's OK. We made it and that's all that counts."

Climbing Rocks

Meanwhile, although Salem finished ninth out of 10 teams, with 131.850 points, head coach

Mallory Hudak said the regional experience is something her young team can grow from.

"They did very well," Hudak said. "There were some wobbles on beam that we could have done without. But other than that, they had pretty much their best meet."

Two members of Hudak's team qualified for Saturday's individual finals, Jordyn Williams and Camille Burt. Both are freshmen, lending credence to the notion the Rocks have a strong future.

"Having freshmen coming in with such strong backgrounds and then being able to build on it is very good," Hudak said.

Williams was the individual regional champion in D1 floor with 9.7, edging Canton senior Allison Kunz (9.65).

"It's fun. You just go out there and do your best," Williams said about the regional. "I like it a lot. It's competition, but it's good."

Williams also qualified for states on beam, placing eighth (9.0).

Burt will compete in Rockford in two events, namely bars (eighth, 8.725) and floor (8.875).

Hudak, who performed for Canton's varsity gymnastics team before graduating in 2010 — and who has a sister (Janelle Hudak) on the Chiefs' current coaching staff — said the two campus rivals are working together at practices and training sessions better than ever.

That is something the Rocks could definitely benefit from.

"I hope so," Mallory Hudak said, "because we actually work closely with Canton, more now because my sister is the assistant coach on Canton."

uneven parallel bars (9.625) and posted 37.175 all-around (second place).

She nearly won on floor with 9.65, trailing only Salem freshman Jordyn Williams (9.7).

"Allison is my senior and she carries the team," Cunningham said. "For her to come in as a senior and carry us like this has been fantastic."

According to Kunz, her lone high school season has been a real treat.

"I wanted to help the team out a little bit," Kunz said, smiling. "I was a Level 10 at Eurostars and I was struggling as a Level 10, a lot of head injuries and back injuries."

"So I just thought maybe to take it easy and join the high school team. (My teammates) welcomed me with open arms."

Kunz said "it feels great" to not only be part of a regional champion, but to qualify for individual finals (Saturday in Rockford). The top eight per event qualified, as did the top six in all-around scoring.

"I'm really excited for next weekend," she said. "I want our team to win. We can do it if we have the best day."

"And, hopefully, for individual states, I can take at least one win. I want to be state champion; I'm a senior."

Nearly a sweep

Another gymnast integral to Canton's success Saturday was junior Hailey Hodgson, who captured Division 2 firsts on vault (9.3), beam (9.05), floor (9.2) and all-around (36.0).

"(Hodgson) had a very good day and actually, if Allison (Kunz) would not have fallen (on her vault landing), she would have run the table, too, but these things happen," Cunningham said. "That gives her a little motivation for state meet, I'm thinking."

"But in general, we had a really good group. (Sophomore) Jana Hilditch missed being one of the top (all-around) qualifiers by .025; that's the kind of thing where all the girls had a pretty decent day."

Hodgson said "it was nice" to finish on top in almost all D2 events.

"I've been going through the seasons just doing my best," Hodgson said, "seeing what I can do and performing what I think I can do at the meets and I've been doing successfully."

"I've been building each year, adding new skills, and it's been paying off."

That the Chiefs have annually been a gymnastics juggernaut with numerous stand-out performers has helped to soothe any frayed nerves, she added.

"It's easier to work and relax when you have people behind you," Hodgson said. "And you know that you can fall back on them if you mess up something. It's good to have that."

The Chiefs also had a first-place performer in freshman Katie Dickson, whose 9.6 score on beam won the D1 event. Junior Stephanie Cox qualified both on D1 vault (sixth, 9.05) and beam (seventh, 9.05).

"I have a lot of young ones," Cunningham said. "Katie Dickson's a freshman; she qualified all-around. Jana is a sophomore and just missed, but she's in two or three events."

"Kelsea Kernosek's a sophomore and qualified. Hailey's only a junior and kicked butt, qualified in everything."

Schoolcraft teams both advance to nationals

For second time, men and women squads capture NJCAA district titles in same season

By Tim Smith

Two national qualifiers are better than one.

Schoolcraft College, for the first time since 2001, did just that Saturday at Delta College. The men's basketball team — ranked No. 1 in NJCAA Division II — routed the host Pioneers, 79-55, at University Center to win the NJCAA District 10 championship.

Earlier at the same venue, the Lady Ocelots were victorious, 68-58, over St. Clair County Community College to win the women's District H title.

Schoolcraft's MCCA champion men's cagers (29-3) advanced to the NJCAA Division II national tournament in Danville, Ill. Games begin Tuesday, March 17.

Likewise getting underway in nationals the same day are the Schoolcraft women (21-9), who will compete in Overland Park, Kan.

Seedings and the schedule for both tournaments will be announced this week.

In addition to the district team trophies, Schoolcraft coaches and athletes came away with some hardware.

For the men, head coach Abe Mashhour was named NJCAA District 10 Coach of the Year, while guard Ronald "Lito" Booth was tourney MVP. In addition, forward Javan Thomas earned a spot on the all-tournament team.

Similarly, Schoolcraft women's coach Kara Kinzer earned NJCAA District H Coach of the Year, guard Ashley Bland (Wayne Memorial) was tournament MVP and guard T'era Nesbitt made the all-tourney squad.

Men's recap

In the men's district final, the Ocelots got off to a big early lead and enjoyed a 48-20 halftime edge.

There was little the Pioneers could do after that to try to thwart Schoolcraft, led by Booth's 26 points.

Also solid with a 10-point, nine-rebound effort was Thomas.

Contributing eight points each were Tyler Johnson (Brighton), Dre Black (Westland John Glenn) and Marcus Williams.

Helping the cause with six points and five rebounds was Anthony Wartley-Fritz, while Canton alum Davon Taylor chipped in with six points.

Women's recap

In the women's district final, Schoolcraft had a bit of a tougher go of it early before busting things open in the second half.

The Lady Ocelots were up just 25-24 at halftime, but then took control after intermission.

Bland was stellar, registering 19 points and hitting 3-of-7 from behind the 3-point arc. She also grabbed five rebounds.

Schoolcraft's top scorer was Elise Tolbert (Birmingham Seaholm), with 20 points. She also hauled down nine rebounds and blocked three shots.

Meanwhile, Nesbitt tallied 13 points and grabbed six boards.

Home, landscape ideas abound at Home Improvement Expo

John Sarnecky of Canton owns Canton Construction with his wife. "And the show's been good to us every year," he said of the Home Improvement Expo, which they've done from its start.

By Julie Brown
Staff Writer

There were some 90 vendors at the Canton Home Improvement Expo at the Summit on the Park. Among those at the Saturday and Sunday, March 7-8, show was John Mincher, a Plymouth Township resident who's the landscape design manager for Plymouth Nursery.

"It's going good," Mincher said Saturday afternoon. "It was quite busy this morning. We've gotten a lot of compliments on our display."

Many of the visitors at the show, sponsored by Canton Township, the Canton Chamber of Commerce and Observer & Eccentric, were eager to get spring projects started. "Absolutely," said Mincher. "Spring is right around the corner. It's supposed to be in the 50s this week."

"It seems like the economy is getting better," Mincher added of business being on an upswing. "It seems to be the way things are going, the trend."

At Plymouth Nursery, landscape pros handle a variety of jobs, both redo-style and new work. Mincher has some five big jobs already lined up for spring, including patio work.

"It seems a lot of people are wanting to spend more time outside and create more living space outside," he said.

The Expo's being nearby for their business and customers helps. "This is where we like to focus," Mincher said. "We've got a new greenhouse. Our retail store is a lot larger."

Across the room, John Sarnecky, who owns Canton Construction with his wife, was helping a customer. They've been in business 17 years.

"And the show's been good to us every year," said Sarnecky of the 15th annual show, in which they've participated annually.

Canton Construction gets a lot of estimate request forms filled out at the Expo. Sarnecky, a Canton resident, said their work depends on weather.

"This is a real good time for the show," he said of people eager to start sprucing up. Some 60 percent of Canton Construction work is roofing, with the firm also handling kitchens, bathrooms, basements, and siding.

"Fantastic," Sarnecky said of Canton as a community in which to do business. "We couldn't ask for more. The Building Department's A-1."

Downtown San Diego has high living costs

Q: I am considering a move to San Diego in the near future. What can you tell me about the current rental market there?

A: It appears that the rental market is hotter than ever. It is extremely difficult to get a good rental property for a reasonable rental price in downtown San Diego. As a matter of fact, most of the prices of condominiums that were reduced during the recession are now at peak values in terms of sale, which, of course, results in an increase in the rental value, as well, and there are new high rise condominium developments being constructed. You are likely to be better off renting outside of the downtown San Diego area. Those looking for investment property, however, are likely to be able to get a good return on rent from the purchase of a downtown condominium.

Q: A neighbor in my condominium project operates a website that is generally critical of the condominium association. I also have some gripes, should I participate in it?

A: Generally, no. You are usually better served by addressing your concerns in the meetings of the association, if available, or to its management company or to the association's Board of Directors, according to the procedures outlined in the condominium documents, rules and regulations or policies. Websites, especially those critical of the association, may post false and defamatory statements. Once you post a comment on these websites, you cannot retrieve it, and if your comment turns out to be false and defamatory, you could be liable for damages in court even though you may have a qualified privilege under the law.

Robert Meisner

John Mincher of Plymouth Township, landscape design manager at Plymouth Nursery, was glad to share ideas with Expo visitors.

PRICE, ALBERT J. "AL"

Born May 7, 1928 in Hamtramck, MI. Died February 22, 2015 in Clovis, California. Survived by his spouse of 59 years, Colleen; his sister Evelyn; his children and their spouses, Sharyn and Jesse, Catherine and Calvin, Alan and Les, Barbara and Chris, Paul and Barbara, Greg and Kammy, Elizabeth and Amit; 14 grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren, and many nieces and nephews. Al was a Korean War veteran, a member of the VFW, and served proudly with the 388th Evacuation Hospital, Army 28th Infantry Division. Among other pursuits, he worked for Unisys (Burroughs Corp.) at various times over the decades and was an electrical engineer by trade. He loved to tinker, and could fix anything from a car, to a TV, to a computer, to a skinned knee. He was always there to help others in need and had the skills to make that possible. Al and Colleen and their family resided in seven states over the years, primarily in Michigan, St. Louis, Missouri, and California, and he became a "native" wherever he lived. He was active in the many parishes he belonged to, and loved the outdoors, fishing, exercising, bowling, politics, watching professional baseball, and other sports, reading, and keeping up on current events. Al was a kind, gentle person, and in his later years happily took on the nickname "Mr. Nice Guy." Those lucky enough to know him will agree that moniker fit him to a T. He is missed by all those who had the pleasure of knowing him. A private memorial is planned. Donations to the Lewy Body Dementia Association in Al's memory are welcomed at "donate.LBDA.org" or by mail to: Lewy Body Dementia Association, 912 Killian Hill Road, S.W., Lilburn, GA 30047.

She was an avid bridge player and enjoyed being a homemaker and raising her children. On June 29, 1957, she married Donald J. Massnick and he survives her. She also leaves three children: Cathy Massnick LaTulip, Bill (Michelle) Massnick and Jim (Cheri) Massnick, six grandchildren: Steven LaTulip, Scott LaTulip, Sam Massnick, Hannah Laughlin, Brandon Massnick and Ted Kraynak, as well as a sister, Sue (Alan) Williams. Ooky, kooky 'Addams Family' show features talented local actors at Detroit venue

By Sharon Dargay
Staff Writer

The Park Players, billed as Detroit's oldest community theater, has drawn talent from Livonia, Canton, Wayne and Westland for its upcoming production of The Addams Family.

About a third of its cast and key crew members live in western Wayne County, even though the theater is located in the North Rosedale Park Community House, in Detroit.

The fact that show co-producers, Richard Holland and Lisa Brawley, live in Livonia and musical director Rich Alder is from Westland, might explain why the theater has drawn interest from local actors, including Len Fisher, who runs his own community troupe, Inspire Theatre, in Westland.

But Holland has another explanation.

"It is such an exciting play. Everyone loves The Addams Family. Everyone I talk to, I say The Addams Family, and their face just lights up. It's this play, and because Lisa and I are promoting it, but then again, we've promoted every play we've been involved with but not had the same response.

"We grew up on The Addams Family. It's nostalgic. I wouldn't be surprised if someday you see The Munsters or The Brady Bunch on stage some day."

The 1964-66 television show was based on macabre characters created by cartoonist and The New Yorker contributor, Charles Addams. Two animated television series, two theatrical films, a made-for-television movie and an updated television show followed. The stage musical, with book by Marshall Brickman and Rick Elice, and music and lyrics by Andrew Lippa, opened on Broadway in April 2010.

Nutty meets normal

In the stage version, Wednesday Addams has grown up and fallen in love with a "normal" man from a respectable family. Wednesday confides in her father, Gomez, but asks him to keep her secret from Morticia, her mother. Both families eventually meet at a dinner hosted by Wednesday's parents.

Sabrina Hubbard of Wayne plays Morticia in The Park Players' production, which runs March 13, 15, 20-22 and 27-29. It's her first musical and first production with The Park Players.

"I've done a lot of theater work and went to college for theater, but I never thought of myself as a singer. Nothing past karaoke," said Hubbard, who appeared in the Canton One Acts Festival earlier this year at the Village Theater at Cherry Hill. She also has appeared in plays at Schoolcraft College.

"I think it's wonderful. Everything is falling into place," Hubbard said. "It's tons of fun, everything from the costume and the horror alone is an entity in itself. I grew up watching the TV shows. But I didn't want to do 100 percent Morticia. I wanted to bring a little something different to the character. I didn't want the audience to think they were coming to see the TV show."

Hubbard likes the script because it offers a new story about the characters and it spreads the comedy and jokes throughout the entire cast.

"In a lot of shows, usually one person is the comic relief," she said. "Not so with this show. Each character has some good one liners."

Dream role

Playing Uncle Fester is a dream come true for Anthony Petrucci, a Canton resident and Eastern Michigan University graduate student. He worked with The Park Players last year, but performs mostly at EMU where he is working on a master's degree in interpretation and performance studies. He's involved in a children's theater production that tours schools in the Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor areas, and plans to pursue a second master's degree in fine arts, with an eye toward teaching theater at a university.

But playing the oddball

Addams family uncle who can make light bulbs glow in his mouth, has been on Petrucci's radar for a long time.

"I have been a very big Addams Family fan for as long as I can remember. I grew up watching the movies and the old cartoon and as I got older I discovered the TV show," he said. "Fester always was my favorite because of how goofy he was. When I got into theater, that became my dream role. Even before the (stage) role was written, I wanted to play Fester in some way. That was the No. 1 thing on my list."

Petrucci developed his character with inspiration from Jackie Coogan's performance in the original television show and Christopher Lloyd's portrayal in the 1991 and 1993 films. He added a twist of "Curly" from the Three Stooges, a little vaudeville and his own spin.

"Just with any character I do, I base the character in myself. A part of me is in any character I do."

In addition to Hubbard and Cousin Itt, played by Reese Malone of Detroit, sports a sheep dog hairdo.

Petrucci, local actors include Debra Holmes of Canton as an Ancestor; Jeannette Steinhauer of Livonia as Alice Beineke; Mark Steinhauer of Livonia as Lurch's understudy; Mitchell Hardy of Livonia as Pugsley Addams; Rachel Ogger of Livonia as Wednesday Addams; and Len Fisher of Wayne as Mal Beineke.

The troupe offers a dinner theater, 8 p.m. Friday, March 13; a benefit show for the North Rosedale Park Civic Association, 8 p.m. Friday, March 20; and a show with beverages and cheese, 8 p.m. Saturday, March 21. Other shows are 2 p.m. Sunday, March 15 and 22; 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday, March 27-28 and 3 p.m. Sunday, March 29. Tickets for the dinner show are $30, $25 for the Association benefit and beverages with cheese; and $18 for other shows. Seniors and students under 12 pay $16 on March 22. The North Rosedale Park Community House is at 18445 Scarsdale, Detroit.

Holland said the admission price is $10 for guests who bring a nonperishable food donation to the theater. If they purchased their tickets in advance, they'll receive a partial refund at the door. For tickets, call Marcia Closson, 313-835-1103, email parkplayersnrp@gmail.com or visit parkplayers.wordpress.com.

Mick Gavin of Redford will fiddle the night away at Irish Fest, Tuesday, March 17, in Westland.

Celebrate St. Patrick's Day at Irish Fest in Westland

By Sharon Dargay
Staff Writer

Mick Gavin will fiddle the night away on Tuesday, March 17, as he has every St. Patrick's Day for 31 years.

The Redford resident and his fellow Irish musicians will perform at Irish Fest, from 3 p.m. to approximately 11 p.m. at the Hellenic Center, 36375 Joy Road, Westland. Admission is $10. Children under 12 are admitted free with their parents.

The St. Patrick's Day celebration will include dancers from the Ardan School of Irish Dance, Irish balladeer Eddie McGlinchey, Irish champion harpist Siobhán McKinney, members of Gavin's Crossroads Ceili, and bagpipers.

Corned beef and cabbage dinners, Irish stew, hamburgers and hot dogs, beer and wine will be available for purchase.

"We have a huge line up this year. We do traditional songs, like Molly Malone. Since we've got a lot of kids, we do kids' songs. We do Lord of the Dance and Unicorn and Marie's Wedding and The Wind that Shakes the Corn. We do a lot of reels and waltzes that seniors can dance to," Gavin said.

"We have a huge dance floor and the kids like to dance around to the music. It's very rewarding to see the little ones."

Gavin promotes the music fest annually as a family-friendly cultural event that draws 600-700 individuals of all ages.

The dancers will perform at 4:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. and pipers will take the stage at 6 p.m.

"In between we'll have lots of songs and music and we'll try to take requests," Gavin said. "It's hours of continuous entertainment. Whoever wants to come up and sing a song can do that. If they want to come up and wish someone a happy birthday, that's fine, too."

LENTEN DINNER

Add seafood to salad, tacos, pasta

Preparing seafood at home during Lent can be a snap with a little inspiration, from adding new flavors to trying different cooking methods.

Consider grilling. Quick with minimal clean up, grilling seafood that's been rubbed with spices is a perfect Friday night option.

Packets can help lock in flavor and moisture. Wrap pieces of seasoned fish in foil or parchment packets and bake in the oven. For individual servings as beautiful as they are tasty, include colorful chopped vegetables in each packet.

Frying is a quick way to prepare most kinds of white fish. Look for breading and batter mixes to create crispy texture on the outside and a flaky center.

Try herb-crusted fish. Adding a crust to tilapia is a great way to complement its mild flavor. Combine spices like garlic, paprika and black pepper with chopped almonds, bread crumbs and Parmesan cheese for an easy dinner.

Tacos can be a quick and easy way to serve fish. If you're craving tacos but skipping the meat, try substituting your favorite seafood.

Add seafood to pasta dishes to change up a weeknight favorite. Use pantry staples like tomatoes, garlic and crushed red pepper, then simply add shrimp.

Top your favorite salad greens with a flavorful piece of fish. Make an easy fish marinade with some olive oil, vinegar and spices and herbs.
